Where men are well used, they'll frequent there.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 27. (1670)

Where Men are kindly used, they will resort.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5649. (1732)

Wheresoever we live well, that is our Country.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5659.

Where you are welcome, there is your fatherland. (Wo es dir wohlgeht, das ist dein Vaterland.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 351. (1856) A German proverb. The Germans also say, "Es ist überall gut Brod essen" (It is everywhere good to eat bread). Ubi bene est ibi patria. The wonderful kindness I have always received in Japan has made me understand how true the phrase is.

A. LLOYD, Every Day Japan: Preface. (1909)

WHERE LIBERTY IS THERE IS MY COUNTRY, see under LIBERTY.

<sup>2</sup> Every land is his native land to a brave man.
(ἅπαντα δὲ χθὼν ἀνδρὶ γενναίῳ πατρίς.)

DEMOCRITUS, Ethica. Frag. 168. (c. 400 B.C.)

The Latin proverb is, "Fortunato omne solum patria est" (To a lucky man, every land is a fatherland).

To the brave man every land's a home. (Omne solum forti patria est.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. i, l. 493. (c. A.D. 8.)

A brave man's country is wherever he chooses his abode. (Patria est ubicumque vir fortis sedem elegerit.)

QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS, De Rebus Gestis Alexandri Magni. Bk. vi, sec. 4. (c. A.D. 50)

The wise man liueth as wel in a far country as in his owne home. It is not the nature of the place but the disposition of the person, that maketh the lyfe pleasant.

JOHN LYLIV, Euphues (Arber), p. 189 (1579)

To a resolved mind, his home is everywhere.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Knight of the Burning Pestle. Act v. (1609)

<sup>3</sup> He made all countries where he came his own.
JOHN DRYDEN, Astrea Redux, l. 76. (1660)

<sup>4</sup> To finde myself Cosmopolites, a citizen . . . of the one mystical citie universall.

RICHARD HAKLUYT, Voyages, i, 6. (1598)

I came tumbling out into the World a pure cadet, a true Cosmopolite, not born to Land, Lease, House, or Office.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Sec. vi, No 60. (1645)

<sup>5</sup> The Devill . . . hath an Incorporation of Cosmopolites.

THOMAS REEVE, God's Plea for Nineveh, p. 80. (1657)

He who finds out anything conducing to human health is the best Cosmopolite.

WALTER RUMSEY, Organon Salutis: Dedicatio. (1657)

One of those vagabond cosmopolites who shark about the world, as if they had no right or business in it.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Knickerbocker's History of New York, p. 191. (1809)

You have merged the patriot in the cosmopolite
T. MEDWIN, The Angler in Wales, ii, 190 (1834)

I don't set up for being a cosmopolite, which to my mind signifies being polite to every country except your own.

THOMAS HOOD, Up the Rhine. (1840)

That man's the best cosmopolite.

Who loves his native country best.

TENNYSON, Hands All Around. (1852)

To be really cosmopolitan, a man must be at home even in his own country.

T. W. HIGGINSON: Short Studies of American Authors: Henry James, Jr. (1879) Quoted by VAN WYCK BROOKS, New England: Indian Summer, p. 279.

<sup>6</sup> His native land to a wise man is the whole world. (πατρίς ἐστὶν τῷ σοφῷ πάσα πᾶσις.)

HELIODORUS, Aethiopica. Bk. iii, ch. 14. (c. A.D. 350)

He [Plato] noted that every place was a country to a wise man.

JOHN LYLIV, Euphues (Arber), p. 187. (1579)

All places that the eye of heaven visits

Are to a wise man ports and happy havens.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, i, 3, 275. (1595)

A good heart may do well any where.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 121. (1639)

All countries are a wise man's home.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, iii, ii, 1293. (1663)

Go where he will the wise man is at home.

R. W. EMERSON, Woodnotes. Pt. i, sec. 3. (1867)

1 He who dwells everywhere, never dwells anywhere. (Quisquis ubique habitat, nusquam habitat.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vii, epig. 73. (c. A. D. 90)

The proverbe, That he is not any where, who is euerie where.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, fo. 63. (1586) Pet-tie, tr.

He that is every where, is no where.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2176. (1732)

2 I am not an Athenian nor a Greek, but of the world. (οὐκ Ἀθηναῖος οὐδ' Ἕλλην ἀλλὰ κόσμος.)

SOCRATES, on being asked to what country he belonged. (c. 410 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Moralia: Of Banishment. Sec. 600.

I am a citizen of the world. (κοσμοπολίτης.)

DIODEGENES, on being asked what his country was. (c. 350 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Bk. vi, ch. 63. The origin of "cosmopolitan."

Socrates, on being asked to what country he claimed to belong, said, "To the world"; for he regarded himself as a native and citizen of the world. ("Mundanium" inquit; totius enim mundi se incolam et civem arbitrabatur.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. v, ch. 37, sec. 108. (45 B.C.)

When Socrates was asked whence he was, he answered, not of Athens, but of the world. (On demandoit à Socrate d'ou il estoit: il ne respondit pas, d'Athènes; mais, du monde.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 25. (1580)

If a Man be Gracious, and Curteous to Strangers, it shewes he is a Citizen of the World.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Goodnesse. (1597)

I am a citizen of the world.

ERIC AMBLER, A Coffin for Dimitrios, p. 65. (1939) Merely a recent instance of the use of a phrase which has become a cliché.

3 The world is my country. (πατρίδα τὸν κόσμον.)

THEODORUS, Maxim. (c. 312 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristippus. Bk. ii, sec. 99.

STATIUS, Thebaid, viii, 320, has, "The whole world is a man's birthplace."

All the earth's our fatherland, there we are born and buried. (Terra omnis patria est, qua nascimur et tumulamur.)

CATO (?), Dicta Catonis. (c. 175 B.C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 624.

I am not born for one corner; the whole world is my country. (Non sum uni angulo natus, patria mea totus hic mundus est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xxviii, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 65)

Nature hath giuen no man a country, no more then she hath a house or lands, or liuings. Socrates wold neither cal himself an Athenian, neither a Graecian but a citizen of ye world. Plato would neuer accompt him banished yat had ye Sun, Fire, Aire, Water and Earth, that he had before, where he felt the winters blast and the Summers blaze, where ye same Sun, and the same Moone shined, whereby he noted that euerie place was a country to a wise man, and al parts a pallace to a quiet mind.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 187. (1579) My country is the world, and my religion is to do good.

THOMAS PAINE, Rights of Man. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1791)

Our country is the world—our countrymen are all mankind.

WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON, Motto of The Liberator. In his prospectus for the new journal, in 1830. Mr. Garrison had written: "My country is the world; my countrymen are mankind."

4 I look upon all the world as my parish.

JOHN WESLEY, Journal, 11 June 1739.

COST

See also Price, Value

5 Better is cost upon something worth than expense on nothing worth.

ROGER ASCHAM, Toxophilus, p. 122. (1545)

6 There's a daily cost, and all of it lost.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 524. (1855)

7 What costs little is valued less. (Lo que cuesta poco se estima en menos.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 34, 43.

(1605) The Italians say, "Quello che costa poco, si stima meno." SHELTON renders the Spanish, "What costs little is less esteemed."

FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 5485, quotes this as a proverb.

What costs little is worth little. (Poco valle lo que poco cuesta.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 18 (1647)

8 He has it by kind, it costs him nought.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 111. (1639)

It comes by kind: it costs him nothing.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 182. (1670)

All free, gratis, for nothing.

F.E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Chs. 10; 47. (1850)

9 Hee that compts all costes, will never put plough in the eard.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 40. (c. 1595) KELLY (Scottish Proverbs, p. 126)

cites the proverb, and adds, "He that forecasts all difficulties that he may meet with in business, will never set about it."

He sall nevir schaipe to sayle the se,
That for all perrils castis.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERIE, The Cherrie and the Slae, xxxviii, 22. (1597) He that forecasts all perils will never sail the sea. Slae, modern sloe.

He that forecasts all perils will win no worship. Because he will be frightened from any noble attempt.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 167. (1721) He that counts all the pins in the plough, will never yoke her.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 126. So soon as we begin to count the cost, the cost begins.

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 18 Jan., 1841.

1
Worth much costs much. (Lo que mucho vale mucho cuesta.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 57. (1647)

2
At least (by the old proverb) the more cost, the more worship.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Orlando Furioso: To the Reader. (1591)

The mair cost, the mair honour.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 98. (c. 1595) Quoted by WALTER SCOTT, The Pirate, ch. 11. (1821)

According to the old proverb, Most cost, most worship.

GERVASE MARKHAM, The English Hus-wife, p. 163. (1615)

More cost, more worship.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 134. (1639)

More cost than worship.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 73. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3451. (1732)

She was as fine as fi'pence; but, truly, I thought there was more cost than worship.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

"More cost than worship," i.e., more expense and trouble than the acquisition is worth.

WILLIAM CARR, Dialect of Craven, i, 86. (1828)

The more worship, the more cost.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 511. (1855) The French say, "Les honneurs comptent" (Honors cost money); the Spaniards, "Nunca mucho costo poco" (Much never cost little).

"It's mair cost-an-worship," it is more trouble than it is worth.

ROSS, Holderness Glossary, p. 45. (1877)

3
It is easy to cry [y]ule at other mens cost.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

The Latin proverb says, "Facile largiri de alieno" (It is easy to be generous with other people's property), the English form being, "Men are very generous with what costs them nothing."

The wholesomest meat is at another's cost.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 1. (1678) "The best wine is some one else's."

4
The greater the cost, the greater the pleasure. (Magis illa iuvant quae pluris emuntur.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xi, l. 16. (c. A. D. 120) Juvenal is writing of extravagance, and of how Roman gourmets searched the four elements for new relishes.

A man loveth more tenderly

The thing that he hath bought most dere.

(Si aime l'en mieuze le cheté Quant l'en l'a plus chier acheté.)

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose, l. 2738, (c. 1240) CHAUCER (?), tr. l. 2738.

The things are most dear to us which have cost us most. (Les choses nous sont plus chères, qui nous ont plus coûté.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 8. (1580) The Germans say, "Was theuer ist, das hält man werth" (What is costly, that one holds more precious).

Quae rarissima carissima—things hard to come by are much set by.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), ii, 545. (1629) What we obtain too cheaply we esteem too lightly; it is dearness only which gives everything its value.

THOMAS PALNE, The Crisis: Introduction. (1776) FAR-FETCHED AND DEAR-BOUGHT, see under LADY.

5
Regardless of cost. (Impensa cura.)

SENECA (?), Ludus de Morte Claudii. Sec. 12. (c. A. D. 55)

COTTON

6
Now, after nearly a "thirty years' war," we may say emphatically, Cotton is King, and his enemies are vanquished.

DAVID CHRISTY, Cotton is King, p. 11. (1855)

You dare not make war on cotton. . . . Cotton is king.

JAMES H. HAMMOND, Speech, U.S. Senate, 6 March, 1858.

Cotton is king.

GOVERNOR MANNING, of South Carolina. Speech, at Columbia, S. C., 1858.

I say Cotton is King, and that he waves his sceptre not only over these thirty-three States, but over the island of Great Britain, and over Continental Europe.

J. R. GIDDINGS, History of the Rebellion, p. 455. (1864)

7
I'm chewing a little cotton myself.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Ticloq. (1894)

COUGH

8
A cough to cover the blast. (Βήξ ἀπὸ τοῦ πύρου.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, iii. 62. (c. A. D. 125)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vi, 63, (see below), who adds, "that is to say when one is embarrassed by anything, he can pretend it's something else." There is another Greek "cough" proverb. ἀπορία ψαλτοῦ βήξ (A cough shows the singer to be at a loss) Many Greek dictionaries translate πορδή modestly as creplus ventris.

A cough for the thunderclap. (Tussis pro crepitu.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, Chil. i, cent. vi, No. 63. (1508) Translated by Taverner, fo. 59, who renders it, "A cloke for the rayne."

<sup>1</sup> He is a representative of Berkshire.
FRANCIS GROSE, A Provincial Glossary: Berkshire. (1790) Of one who coughs.

<sup>2</sup> Thou canst cough in the aumbry [cupboard],
if neede bee,
Whan I shall cough without bread or broth for thee.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1542)

<sup>3</sup> A dry cough is the trumpeter of death.
JAMES HOWELL, Letters. Bk. iv, Let. 9. (1655)
Quoted as a Turkish proverb.

<sup>4</sup> A convulsion of the lungs, vellicated by some sharp serosity.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Dictionary: Cough. (1755)

<sup>5</sup> My bedfellows are cough and cramp.
CHARLES LAMB: Letter to Edward Moxon, 27
April, 1833.

<sup>6</sup> Cheer one orator and cough down another.
MACAULAY, History of England, v. 44. (c. 1850)

<sup>7</sup> A churchyard cough in the lungs. (La male toux au poulmon.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, Prologue. (1548)

It was Motteux who supplied the "churchyard cough." (1693) A few sentences farther on he has, "Cough with lungs of leather."

I always said by his church-yard cough, you'd bury him.

RICHARD STEELE, The Funeral. Act i, sc. 3. (1702)

He coughed his churchyard cough.
MRS. GASKELL, Sylvia's Lovers. (1863)

I was shaken by an ominous churchyard cough.
E. F. BEADLE, The Undeveloped West, p. 33.
(1873) The French say, "Un toux qui sent le sapin" (A cough which smells of the churchyard).

<sup>8</sup> A cough will stick longer by a horse than a peck of oats.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 117. (1678)

COUNSEL

See also Advice

<sup>9</sup> Do not anything without taking counsel.
(δεν συμβουλήs μη ποιείν τι.)

AESOP, Fables: The Frogs. (c. 570 B.C.) Two frogs, when their lake dried up, went about looking for water, and coming to a deep well, saw the water at the bottom. One was for leaping in straightway, but the other said, "Suppose the well dries up, how shall we get out?"

Do nothing without counsel that thou repent not after thine act. (Sine consilio nihil facias.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxxii, 19. (c. 190 B.C.) Oesterley, tr.

Do naught uncounselled: so are deeds approved.
(Nil sine consilio facias: sic facta probantur.)

COLUMBANUS, Carmen Monostichon, l. 33. (c.
A.D. 600)

To weyven fro the word of Salomon.

This word seyde he un-to us everichon:

"Wirk alle thing by conseil," thus seyde he,

"And thanne shaltow nat repente thec."

CHAUCER, *Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes
Tale*, l. 239 (c. 1388)

For thus seith Salomon, that was ful trewe.

"Werk al by conseil, and thou shalt nat rewe."

CHAUCER, The Milleres Tale, l. 343.

Salomon seith: "Werk alle thy thinges by conseil, and thou shalt never repente."

CHAUCER, The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 7.

<sup>10</sup> Counsels do not lessen evils, but rather increase them. (Concilia enim non minuunt mala, sed augent potius.)

FRANCIS BACON, Advertisement Touching the Controversies of the Church of England.
(1604) Quoted as the words of "a wise father."

While the discreet advise (take counsel), the fool doth his business.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

Take heede Camilla, that seeking al the woode for a streight sticke you chuse not at last a crooked staffe, or prescribing a good counsaile to others, thou thy selfe follow the worst.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 408. (1580)

Too much Consulting confounds.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5261. (1732)

<sup>11</sup> Be in peace with many: nevertheless have but one counsellor of a thousand. (Multi pacifici sint tibi, et consiliarius sit tibi unus de mille.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus),
vi, 6. (c. 190 B.C.)

Let the counsel of thine own heart stand: for there is no man more faithful unto thee than it.
(Cor boni concilii statue tecum: non est enim tibi aliud pluris illo.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xxxvii, 13.

Take sixty counsellors, but the counsel of thine own heart do not abandon.

UNKNOWN, Alphabet of Ben Sira. No. 21. (c.
1000) RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 414, cites this proverb, rendering it, "Though thou hast never so many counsellors, yet do not forsake the counsel of thy own soul."

Take counsel only of your own head. (Ne prendre conseil que de sa tête.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs, i, 59. (1814) A French proverb.

<sup>12</sup> Avysement is good before the nede.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, Bk. ii. l.
343. (c. 1380)

Be not like the Athenians, who never took counsel until after the fact. (Ne semblons es Athenians, qui ne consultoient iamais sinon après le cas fait.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 24. (1532) The Latin proverb is, "Post factum nullum consiliū" (After the deed no counsel avails)

As the proverbe saith, take not counsel in the combat.

DANIEL ROGERS, Matrimonial Honour, p. 199.
(1642) See also LATENESS.

<sup>1</sup> Loke alwey that thy conseeillours have thilke three condicions that I have seyde bifore; that is to seyn, that they be trewe, wyse, and of old experience.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibæus, Sec. 21. (c. 1387)

Three things pertaine vnto a Counsellor, Science, beneuolence, libertie in speech. (Tre cose appartengono a vn Consigliere, Scientia, beneuolentia, & liberta in parlar.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 25. (1578)

<sup>2</sup> Conseilling is no comandement.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 67. (c. 1388)

Counsel breaks not the head.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 445. (1640) The Germans say, "Rathen ist nicht zwingen."

Counsel is no command. That is, I advise you so; but you may do as you please.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 76. (1721)

<sup>3</sup> If so be that thou ne mayst nat thyn owene conseil hyde, how darstou prayen any other wight thy conseil secreely to kepe?

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibæus. Sec. 20. (c. 1387) See also under SILENCE.

Keep your fellows' counsels and your own.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, iii, 3, 91. (1598)

I can keep your counsel and not mine own.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iv, 2, 11. (1600)

The counsell thou wouldest have another keepe, first keepe thy selfe.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 334. (1605)

Keep counsell first thy selfe.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia.

Keep counsel thy self first.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 5. (1670)

I am the best man in the world to keep my own counsel.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 12. (1711)

<sup>4</sup> The book seith: "axe alwey thy conseil of hem that been wyse."

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibæus, Sec. 21. (c. 1387)

Counsel is to be given by the wise, the remedy by the rich.

H.G. BOHM, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 339. (1855)

<sup>5</sup> He that will not be counselled, cannot be helped.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 22. (1639)

RAY, Proverbs, p. 6. (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2350. (1732)

He that won't be counsell'd, can't be help'd.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1747. The Germans say, "Wem nicht zu rathen ist, dem ist auch nicht zu helfen."

<sup>6</sup> Beware lest clamour be taken for counsel. (Cavendum ne fiat pro consilio convicium.)

ERASMUS, Colloquies: Senatus. (c. 1522)

<sup>7</sup> 'Tis well to keep thy foot from trouble's snare By adopting that counsel which the wiser is. (καλὸν δὲ γ' ἔξω πραγμάτων ἔχειν πόδα, εὐβουλίας τυχόντα τῆς ἀμείνωνος.)

EURIPIDES, Heracleidai, l. 109. (c. 430 B.C.)

One wise counsel is victor over many hands. (σοφὸν γὰρ ἐν βούλευμα τὰς πολλὰς χέρας | νικᾷ.)

EURIPIDES, Antiope. Frag. (c. 420 B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 790A.

ARMS OF LITTLE AVAIL WITHOUT GOOD COUNSEL, see under ARMS.

<sup>8</sup> Reason ought to be in the counsel. (Ragione deue esser in consiglio.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33 (1578)

<sup>9</sup> One Nestor is worth two Ajaxes.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758. One wise counsellor is worth two warriors. A Latin proverb says, "Vis consilii expers mole ruit sua" (Force without counsel falls of its own weight).

<sup>10</sup> Counsel is as welcome to him as a Shoulder of Mutton to a sick Horse.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1179. (1732) Counsel is irksome, when the Matter is past Remedy.

Counsel must be follow'd, not praised.

Counsel over cups is crazy.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 1180-1184. (1732) See also under WINE.

It is safer to hear and take Counsel, than to give it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3013.

<sup>11</sup> The most docile animal needs the rod, the most chaste female a husband; the wisest of men counsel.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninin (Choice of Pearls). No. 268. (c. 1050)

<sup>12</sup> It is a common saying, that he doth wel, which counsayleth himselfe wel: For which cause counsel is esteemed for a holy thing.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i. p. 42. (1574) Pettie, tr.

The Emperour Antonius also used to say, It is more meet that I follow the counsaile of so many and such good friends, then to suffer all them to follow the fancie of mee alone.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, ii, 208.

<sup>13</sup> You counsel me to take counsel of my pillow. GABRIEL HARVEY, Letter-Book, p. 21. (1573) See under PILLOW.

<sup>14</sup> Though old and wise, yet still advise.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 139.

(1640) The Spanish is, "Aunque seas prudente viejo, no desdesies e consejo" (Though you are a prudent old man, do not disdain counsel). However there is a Greek proverb, κακὸν λατρεύειν καὶ γέροντα βουλεύειν ταῦτόν (To physic the dead and give counsel to an old man are the same thing).

1 He that is his own Counsellor, knows nothing sure but what he hath laid out.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 999. (1640)

2 Evil counsel is most evil to him who gives it. (ἡ δὲ κακὴ βουλὴ τῷ βουλευσάντι κακίστη.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 266. (c. 800 B.C.) Whosoever giveth bad counsel, it shall turn upon him again. (Facienti nequissimum consilium, super ipsum devolvetur.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxvii, 27. (c. 190 B.C.) The version in the Apocrypha is, "He that worketh mischief, it shall fall upon him, and he shall not know whence it cometh."

Bad counsel is most ruinous to the giver. (Malum consilium consultori pessimum est.)

VERRIUS FLACCUS, Rerum Memoria Dignarum (Things Worth Remembering). Bk. i. (c. 25 B.C.) Flaccus says that the proverb originated with a gang of Roman street boys who chanted it about the city after the punishment of some Etruscan augurs, who had given treacherous advice about the removal of the statue of Horatius Cocles, which had been struck by lightning. But it is evidently merely a translation of the line of Hesiod, given above, and so is of far more ancient origin. See AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae, iv, v, 5.

Euyll counsayle is worst to the counsaylour. (Malum consilium consultori pessimum.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i. cent. ii, No. 14. (1508) Taverner, tr. Erasmus also tells at length the story about Horatius Cocles, as related by Verrius Flaccus and Aulus Gellius.

Ill counsel hurts the counsellor.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 21. (1639)

Bad counsel confounds the adviser.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation. (1841) See also under RETRIBUTION.

3 Three may keep counsel if two be away.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546) See under SECRET.

4 A real counsel of perfection.

JOHN KEBLE, Life of Bishop Wilson, xii, 405. (1863)

A tendency . . . to elevate counsels of perfection into laws of bondage.

EARL SELBORNE, Defence of the Church of England iii, 17. (1886)

5 Counsel will make a man stick his own mare.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 82. (1721) "Spoken when we are over persuaded to do a thing."

Ill counsel will gar [cause] a man stick his ain mare.

ALLAN RAMSAY, Scottish Proverbs. (1737)

6 Slow-footed counsel is much the best, for swift counsel ever drags repentance behind it.

(ἡ βραδύπους βουλὴ μᾶλ' ἀμείνων ἢ δὲ ταχεῖα αὐτὴν ἐφελκομένη τὴν μετάνοιαν ἔχει.)

LUCIAN, Apothegm. (c. A.D. 170) See Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 37.

Overhasty counsels are rarely prosperous. (Præ-propera consilia raro sunt prospera.)

SIR EDWARD COKE, Institutes. (1628) Quoting a Latin proverb.

7 It is an assured signe of a free and freendly minde to give good counsayle.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Germanicus and Agrippina, p. 58. (1576)

Who cannot give good counsel? 'Tis cheap, it costs them nothing.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. ii, mem. 3. (1621)

Good counsels never come too late.

BEN JONSON, A Tale of a Tub, Act iii, sc.4. (1633)

Good counsel does no harm.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 33. (1633)

Good counsel never comes amiss.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 81. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1708. (1732)

Good counsel makes a proud Man and a Fool angry.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1707. (1732)

If the Counsel be good, no matter who gave it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2704.

Altho' thy teacher act not as he preaches,

Yet ne'ertheless, if good, do what he teaches;

Good counsel failing men may give, for why,

He that's aground knows where the shoal doth lie.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

Good counsel has no price.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 363. (1855) Cited as an Italian proverb.

Good counsel is abune a' price.

ALEXANDER HISLOP, The Proverbs of Scotland, p. 108. (1868)

8 A detestable counsel. (Foedum consilium.)

PLINY, Naturalis Historia. Bk. xxvi, sec. 38. (c. A.D. 77)

The book seith: "the counsellings of wikked folk is alwey ful of fraude."

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 23. (c. 1387)

Ill counsel mars all.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 22. (1639)

It is an ill counsel that hath no escape.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 717. (1640)

None goes to the Gallows for giving ill Counsel.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3650. (1732)

9 Counsel shall guard thee. (Consilium custodiet te.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, ii, 11. (c. 400 B.C.) The Vulgate rendering. The King James version is, "Discretion shall preserve thee."

10 In the multitude of counsellors there is safety. (Salus autem, ubi multa consilia.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xi, 14. (c. 400 B.C.) Also xxiv, 6. HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 396, gives it, "Salus, ubi multi consiliarii," quoting Coke.

The counsel of many is better. (πολέων δὲ τε μῆτις ἀπείωρ.)

APOLLONIUS RHODIUS, Argonautica. Bk. iv, l. 1336. (c. 225 B.C.)

Salomon seith: "salvacoun of thinges is wher-as ther been manye conseilours."

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibæus, Sec. 21. (c. 1387)

TWO HEADS ARE BETTER THAN ONE, see under HEAD.

1 We took sweet counsel together. (Qui simul mecum dulces capiebas cibos.)

Old Testament: Psalms, lv, 14. (c. 350 B.C.)

2 Counsel is ever lacking when most needed. (Semper consilium tunc deest cum opus est maxime.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 653. (c. 43 B.C.)
"I see wel," quod this wyse man [Solomon], "that the commune proverbe is sooth; that "good conseil wanteth whan it is most nede."

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibæus. Sec. 12. (1387)

3 Counsel is the prudent man's remedy in a crisis. (Consilium in dubiis remedium prudentis est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 141. (c. 43 B.C.)

4 Yeue not thy conseyl but to him that askith it.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayings of the Philosophers, fo. 86. (1477) Quoting Ptolemy. Come nat to counsaile afore thou be called. (Ad consilium ne accesseris ante quam uoceris.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ii, No. 90. (1508) Taverner, tr., fo. 13. (1550)

Thair is a sentence said be sum,
"Let nane uncalled to counsell cum,
That welcum weins [weens] to be."

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERIE, The Cherrie and the Slae, lxxviii, 42. (c. 1580)

Come not to the counsel uncalled.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 26. (c. 1595)
Come na to the counsel unca'd.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 233. (1670)
Come uncalled, sit unserved.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 232. (1670)
Give neither counsel nor salt till you are asked.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 4. (1670) See also under ADVICE.

5 Schort red [rede, counsel], good red.

ROGER OF WENDOVER, Chronicles, ii, 18. (c. 1233)
Short rede, good rede.

WALTER SCOTT, The Fair Maid of Perth. Ch. 7. (1828)

The proverb is specially associated with the death of Walcher, the first Bishop of Durham, appointed by William the Conqueror. At Gateshead the bishop met the leaders of the people, and on retiring to the church the cry was raised, "Short rede, good rede, slay the bishop." The church was thereupon set on fire and the bishop was slain.

R. O. HESLOP, Northumberland Words, 570. (1892) The event took place in A.D. 1080.

The Denham Tracts (i, 98) give the saying as "Short counsel is good counsel."

6 Before you begin, take counsel, and when you have taken counsel, is full time for action. (Prius quam incipias, consulto, et ubi consulueris, mature facto opus est.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. l. (c. 41 B.C.)
Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iii, 70, and translated by Taverner, fo. 35, who gives the rendering, "Afore thou begyn, it is necessarye for the to take counsaile, and when thou hast taken counsaile, to do the thynges spedely."

7 It is not wrong when things change to change counsel. (Non est turpe cum re mutare consilium.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. iv, ch. 38, sec. 1. (c. A.D. 54)

It is no folie to chaunge conseil whan the thing is chaunged.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibæus. Sec. 15. (c. 1387)

The lawe seith: that "upon thinges that newly bityden bihoveth newe conseil." And Senek seith: "if thy conseil is comen to the eres of thyn enemy, chaunge thy conseil."

CHAUCER, The Tale of Melibæus. Sec. 25.

To a new fact new counsel (À nouveau fait fault nouveau conseil.)

UNKNOWN, Roman de Jovenal, fo. 81. (c. 1450)

8 Friendly counsel cuts off many foes.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI, iii, 1, 185. (1591)

I pray thee, cease thy counsel,
Which falls into mine ears as profitless
As water in a sieve.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, v, 1, 3. (1598)

9 Never is counsel sweeter than when it promises gain. (τὸ μακάριον ὃ | ἡδιστον ἐν λέγοντος, εἰ κέρδος λέγει.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 1031. (c. 441 B.C.)
Teiresias goes on, "Doth any lay to heart how far good counsel is the best of goods?" (ὅσω κράτιστον κημάτων εὐβουλίᾳ)?

10 When you're well, it's easy to give good counsel to a sick man. (Facile omnes quom valemus recta consilia aegrotis damus.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 309. (166 B.C.) See ADVICE

The healthful man can give counsel to the sick

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1128. (1640)

11 The counsel of one who wisheth thee well, write it down, though it seem cross.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 51. (1666)

Write down the advice of him who loves you, though you like it not at present.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 572. (1855)

12 Empty men have empty counsels. (κεροὶ κενὰ βουλευονταί.)

ZENOBIUS, Adagia. (c. A.D. 130) Cited also by ERASMUS.

<sup>1</sup> He that refuseth to buy counsel cheap, shall buy repentance dear.

UNKNOWN, The Country-mans New Commonwealth, 39. (1647)

COUNTENANCE, see Face COUNTERFEIT

<sup>2</sup> Nothing counterfeit can be lasting. (Nec simulatum potest quicquam esse diuturnum.)
CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, ch. 12, sec. 43. (c. 45 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> I had thought the last mask . . . Had . . .
Taught thee S. Martin's stuffe from true gold lace.

EDWARD GUILPIN, Skialetheia, 41. (1598)
These letters may be St. Martin's ware, counterfeit stuffe.

CLEMENT WALKER, The History of Independence, i, 122. (1648)

<sup>4</sup> How coins and counters differ. (Quid distent aera lupinis.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, No. vii, l. 23. (20 B. C.)
That is, real money and the lupine seeds, used for counters in playing games. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iii, 79.

God woot, no lussheburghes [counterfeit coins] payen ye!

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Monk's Prologue, l. 74. (c. 1387)

COUNTRY

See also City: City and Country.

For "My Country" see under Patriotism; for individual countries, see under their names

I—Country: Nation

<sup>5</sup> For-thy men seyn, ech contree hath his lawes.
CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, st. 6. (c. 1380)

Every land hes the lauch, and every corne hes the caffie

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 30. (c. 1595)

So many countries, so many laws.

NICHOLAS LING, comp., Politeuphuia, p. 224. (1669) See also under OPINION.

Every land has its own lauch, and every corn its own caff. Every country hath its own laws, customs, and usages.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 92. (1721)

Aweel, Maggie, ilka land has its ain lauch.

WALTER SCOTT, The Antiquary. Ch. 26. (1816)

<sup>6</sup> Yborn he was in fer countree,
In Flaunders al biyonde the see.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Sir Thopas, l. 7. (c. 1386)

He loves to talk with marineres
That come from a far countree.

COLERIDGE, The Rime of the Ancient Mariner. Pt. vii. (1798)

And some are in a far countree.

BYRON, Siege of Corinth: Introduction. (1816)

<sup>7</sup> The most worthless country is that which, however fertile, affords its inhabitants no safety.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penimim (Choice of Pearls). No. 368. (c. 1050)

<sup>8</sup> I was willing to work hard, if I could only get out of that horrible den, into God's country once more.

R. H. KELLOGG, Rebel Prisons, p. 118. (1865)
The northern United States.

You are about the only man I know in all "God's country," so called.

CHARLES HENRY SMITH (BILL ARP), Bill Arp's Peace Papers. (1872)

They talked about "God's country," whither they were bound, till your heart ached to think how many of them would find "God's acre" before they reached the blessed North.

BAYARD TAYLOR, The World on Wheels, i, 24. (1874)

There may be guns popping before we get back to God's country.

W. M. RAINE, Bucky O'Connor, p. 75. (1910) Civilization.

A bully crowd below, all of 'em from God's own country.

R. D. PAINE, Comrades of the Rolling Ocean p. 171. (1921) The United States.

<sup>9</sup> Oh, my country!! how I leave my country!

WILLIAM PITT, on his deathbed, after the defeat at Austerlitz. (1805) See under PATRIOTISM.

<sup>10</sup> This is a free country. Them as don't like 'em can leave 'em.

WILLIAM WESTALL, Birch Dene, p. 243. (1889)

I can leave off work when I please. . . This is a free country.

The Spectator, London, 2 Sept., 1911, p. 339.

MY COUNTRY IS THE WORLD, see under COSMOPOLITANISM.

II—Country: Rural District

<sup>11</sup> The country for a wounded heart.

A. C. BENSON, From a College Window, p. 107. (1906) Quoted as an old proverb.

<sup>12</sup> Country-folk are best when weeping and worst when rejoicing. (Rustica gens est optima flens et pessima gaudens.)

GABRIEL HARVEY, Letter-Book. (1573) Quoted

<sup>13</sup> Thou wishest to be in the country with thy distaffe, rather then to continue in the court with thy delygths.

JOHN LYLY, Euphuus (Arber), p. 196. (1579)

<sup>14</sup> I desire to live in the light of day. (i.e. in the country, rather than in the city).

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xii, epig. 60. (A. D. 103)
GOD MADE THE COUNTRY, see under CITY.

<sup>1</sup> He tryppeth lyke one of the countraye . . .
comme ung paysant.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoyse, 587/2.
(1530) The Greeks had a proverbial phrase for a countryman, ἀγροῦ πλέως, full of the country, countrified.

<sup>2</sup> Live like clownes in the country by the Plowe taylor.

GEORGE PETTIE, *Petite Pallace: Admetus and
Alcest*, p. 139. (1576)

Fix'd like a plant on his peculiar spot,
To draw nutrition, propagate, and rot.

ALEXANDER POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. ii,
l. 63. (1732)

See dying vegetables life sustain,
See life dissolving vegetate again.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 15.

One really lives nowhere; one does but vegetate and wish it all at an end.

FANNY BURNAY (MADAME D'ARBLEY), Cecilia.
Bk. iv, ch. 7. (1782)

You, who live fourteen miles from a market town, are become a kind of holy vegetable.

SYDNEY SMITH, Peter Plymley Letters. No. 1.
(1807) The French say, "Garder les dindons" (To look after the turkeys).

If you would be known, and not know, vegetate in a village; if you would know, and not be known, live in a city.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon: Reflections. Vol. i, No.
334. (1820)

Life in the country, in a cottage, was the life of a cabbage.

A. FIELDING, The Case of the Missing Diary,
p. 24. (1936)

<sup>3</sup> You must go into the country to hear what news at London.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 345. (1678)

Go into the Country, to hear the News in Town.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1664. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> I have no relish for the country; it is a kind of healthy grave.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letter to Miss Harcourt, 1838.

My living in Yorkshire was so far out of the way, that it was actually twelve miles from a lemon.

SYDNEY SMITH. See LADY HOLLAND, Memoir.
Vol. i, p. 262.

We might be a hundred miles from a lemon for all we can see to the contrary.

LEE THAYER, Persons Unknown, p. 67. (1941)

<sup>5</sup> Happy is he who knows the country divinities,
Pan and old Silvanus and the sister Nymphs!
(Fortunatus et ille, deos qui novit agrestis, |
Panaque Silvanumque senem Nymphasque sorores.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 493. (29 B.C.)

<sup>6</sup> Anybody can be good in the country. There are no temptations there.

OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch.
19. (1891)

COURAGE

See also Boldness, Guts, Valor

I—Courage: What It Is

<sup>7</sup> Courage is that virtue which champions the cause of right. (Fortitudo, eam virtutem pro-pugnantem pro aequitate.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 19, sec. 62. (c. 45
B.C.) Quoted as a Stoic definition.

<sup>8</sup> Courage is generosity of the highest order, for the brave are prodigal of the most precious things.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 299. (1820)

<sup>9</sup> Courage consists in equality to the problem before us. . . . A great part of courage is the courage of having done the thing before. . . .
The charm of the best courages is that they are inventions, inspirations, flashes of genius.

R. W. EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Courage. (1870)

<sup>10</sup> Who is the invincible man? He whom nothing which is outside the sphere of his moral purpose can dismay. (τίς οὖν ὁ ἀνίκητος; ὃν οὐκ ἐξίστησιν οὐδὲν τῶν ἀπροαίρων.)

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. i, ch. 18, sec. 21.
(c. A.D. 100)

Courage consists not in hazarding without fear, but in being resolutely minded in a just cause.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 340. (1855)

<sup>11</sup> Courage is a virtue only so far as it is directed by prudence. (La valeur ne peut être une vertu qu'autant qu'elle est réglée par la prudence.)

FRANÇOIS FÉNELON, Aventures de Télémaque
Bk. x. (1699)

<sup>12</sup> Courage and Resolution are the Spirit and Soul of Virtue.

Courage, Perseverance conquer all before them.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 1186-7.
(1732)

<sup>13</sup> Confidence or courage is conscious ability—the sense of power.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 111
(1821)

<sup>14</sup> True courage is to do without witnesses everything that one is capable of doing before all the world. (La parfaite valeur est de faire sans témoins ce qu'on serait capable de faire devant tout le monde.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 216. (1665)

<sup>15</sup> Courage is like love: it must have hope to nourish it. (Le courage est comme l'amour: il veut de l'espérance pour nourriture.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Epigram. See GUILLON,
Napoléon, p. 280.

<sup>1</sup> Courage exerts itself in difficulties. (Tendit in ardua virtus.)

OID, Ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. ii, l. 111. (c. A. D. 13)

<sup>2</sup> Courage is the knowledge of what ought to be endured. (τὴν ἀνδρείαν . . . τῶν ὑπομενετέων οὖσαν ἐπιστήμην.)

PHILO, De Specialibus Legibus. Bk. iv, sec. 145. (c. A. D. 40) The Stoic definition, expanded in De Virtutibus, 1: "By courage I mean, not what most people understand, namely the rabid war fever which takes anger for its counsellor, but the courage which is knowledge."

<sup>3</sup> Courage comprises all things: a man with courage has every blessing. (Virtus omnia in sese habet, omnia adsunt bona quem penest virtus.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitryon, l. 651. (c. 200 B. C.)

Courage conquers all things: it even gives strength to the body. (Animus tamen omnia vincit: ille etiam vires corpus habere facit.)

OID, Ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. vii, l. 75. (A. D. 13) An expansion, perhaps, of the Latin proverb, "Forti et fideli nihil difficile" (To a brave and faithful man nothing is difficult).

<sup>4</sup> That's courage—to take hard knocks like a man when occasion calls. (Em ista virtus est, quando usust qui malum fert fortiter.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 323. (c. 200 B. C.)

<sup>5</sup> Courage leads starward, fear toward death. (Virtus in astra tendit, in mortem timor.)

SENECA, Hercules Oetaeus, l. 1971. (c. A. D. 60) Now has my courage borne me to the stars and to the gods themselves. (Iam virtus mihi | in astra et ipsos fecit ad superos iter.)

SENECA, Hercules Oetaeus, l. 1943.

Courage is a scorner of things which inspire fear. (Fortitudo contemptrix timendorum est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. 88, sec. 29. (c. A. D. 65)

Courage, the footstool of the Virtues, upon which they stand.

R. L. STEVENSON, The Great North Road. (1892)

II—Courage: Apothegms

<sup>6</sup> There was a time when the Milesians were brave men. (πάλαι καὶ ἦσαν ἀλκιμοὶ Μιλήσιοι.)

ANACREON. Frag. 99. (c. 500 B. C.) Quoted by ZENOBIOUS, Adagia, i, 153. See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, ii, 189. The proverb has also been attributed to Timocreon. The story is that the Carians, when at war with Darius, in obedience to an oracle bidding them take the bravest of men as their allies, went to Branchidae and asked the God there if they should seek alliance with Miletus, whereupon the God replied as above.

<sup>7</sup> The hawk is not frightened by the cries of the crane.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 602. (1817) It is not size that gives courage.

<sup>8</sup> Brave men are brave from the very first. (Les hommes valeureux le sont au premier coup.)

PIERRE CORNEILLE, Le Cid. Act ii, sc. 3. (1636)

<sup>9</sup> Courage scorns the death it cannot shun.

JOHN DRYDEN, The Conquest of Granada. Pt. ii, act iv, sc. 2. (1672)

<sup>10</sup> None but the Brave deserves the Fair.

JOHN DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast. St. 1. (1687)

The brave deserve the lovely—every woman may be won.

CHARLES G. LELAND, The Masher. (1870)

None but the lucky man deserves the fair.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Widow in the Bye Street. Pt. ii, st. 16. (1912)

See also WOOLING: FAINT HEART AND FAIR LADY.

<sup>11</sup> Courage to defy the world.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Love. (1841)

Have the courage not to adopt another's courage.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Courage. (1870)

The courage of the tiger is one, and of the horse another.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Courage.

What a new face courage puts on everything!

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Resources

<sup>12</sup> Here comes Courage! that seized the lion absent, and ran away from the present mouse.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736

<sup>13</sup> Courage ought to have Eyes, as well as Arms.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1188. ARMS WITHOUT COUNSEL OF NO AVAIL, see ARMS

Courage without Fortune, destroys a Man.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1189.

He that has no heart ought to have heels.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2146. A proverb in many languages. The French say, "Qui n'a cœur a jambes"; the Italians, "Chi non ha cuore abba gambe." "Heart" in all these instances means, of course, courage. In fact, there is a variant of Fuller, "Who has not courage should have legs."

Fear can keep a Man out of Danger, but Courage can support him in it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1511.

Put off your Armour, and then shew your Courage.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3985.

<sup>14</sup> Be of good heart [or bear up] (τέρλαθι.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. i, l. 586. (c. 850 B. C.) Frequently repeated.

Quit thee like a man. (ἀλλ' ὅπως ἀνὴρ ἔσει.)

EURIPIDES, Cyclops. l. 595. (c. 440 B. C.)

Take a good courage unto thee, and let us quite oure selues manly.

MILES COVERDALE, Bible: 1 Chronicles, xix, 13. (1535) The King James Version has, "Be of good courage, and let us behave ourselves valiantly." For once Coverdale did the better. The Vulgate follows Coverdale: "Estote viri."

Keep your courage up. (Habe animum bonum.)

PLAUTUS, Casina, l. 387. (c. 200 B. C.)

Live as brave men, and oppose brave hearts to adverse fate. (Vivite fortes, | fortiaque adversis opponite pectora rebus.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 135. (35 B.C.) No steps backward. (Vestigia . . . nulla retrorsum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 74. (20 B.C.) Recall your courage, and lay aside sad fear. (Revocate animos, maestumque timorem | mittite.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 202. (19 B.C.) A slightly variant Latin proverb has "Renovate animos" (Rekindle your minds; renew your courage).

Courage, Father Joseph, Brisach is ours. (Courage, Père Joseph, Brisach est à nous.)

CARDINAL RICHELIEU. Remark, to his dying colleague, Joseph du Tremblay, 1638.

The man so bravely played the man,
He made the fiend to fly.

BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. ii. (1684)

KEEP A STIFF UPPER LIP, see under LIP.

KEEP YOUR PECKER UP, see under PECKER.

<sup>1</sup> The color of the brave man changeth not. (τοῦ δ' ἀγαθοῦ οὐρ' ἄρ' τρέπεται χρῶς.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xiii, l. 284. (c. 850 B.C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 452A.

<sup>2</sup> The brave are born from the brave. (Fortes creantur fortibus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 4, l. 29. (23 B.C.)

See also ANCESTRY: HEREDITY.

<sup>3</sup> Courage without conscience is a wild beast.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Speech, in New York, 29 May, 1882.

<sup>4</sup> Perfect courage and complete cowardice are two extremes which happen rarely. (La parfaite valeur et la poltronnerie complète sont deux extrémités où l'on arrive rarement.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 215. (1665)

One can't answer for one's courage when one has never been in danger. (On ne peut répondre de son courage quand on n'a jamais été dans le péril.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 616.

<sup>5</sup> His courage rose with disaster. (Crevit in adversis virtus.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. iii, l. 614. (c. A. D. 60)

Courage mounteth with occasion.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, ii, 1, 82. (1596)

Fearlessness is an exceptional strength of spirit whereby we rise superior to the distresses, panics and emotions which the prospect of great danger would otherwise excite in us. (L'intrépidité est une force extraordinaire de l'âme, qui l'élève au-dessus des troubles, des désordres et des émotions que la vue des grands périls pourrait exciter en elle.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 217. (1665)

It is in great dangers that we see great courage.

JEAN REGNARD, Le Légataire. (1708) The Germans say, "Mit der Gefahr wächst der Muth" (With the danger rises the courage).

<sup>6</sup> Though thou crake of thine owne courage, thou maist easily lose the conquest.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 92. (1579)

<sup>7</sup> He is one of Swift's Yahoos, with the courage of his opinions.

JOHN MORLEY, Diderot, ii, 12. (1878)

That courage of his opinions which he never failed to display.

JAMES PAYN, Thicker than Water. Ch. 38. (1883)

[He] had the courage of his convictions.

HALL CAINE, Life of Coleridge, i, 21. (1887)

<sup>8</sup> As to moral courage, I have rarely met with the two-o'clock-in-the-morning courage: I mean unprepared courage. (Quant au courage moral, il avait trouvé fort rare, celui de deux heures après minuit; c'est-à-dire le courage de l'improviste.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE. See LAS CASES, Mémorial de Ste.-Hélène, 4 Dec., 1814.

The three-o'clock-in-the-morning courage, which Bonaparte thought was the rarest.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden: Sounds. (1854)

<sup>9</sup> As brave as hell. (Fortis tanquam Orcus.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 62. (c. A. D. 60)

He has courage to grasp the heavens. (Tan ta pao tien.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 181. (1872)

As brave as a barrel full of bears.

OGDEN NASH, Custard the Dragon. (1940)

<sup>10</sup> Verily the foundation of victory is courage (ἀρχὴ γὰρ ὅντως τοῦ νικᾶν τὸ θαρσεῖν.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Themistocles. Ch. viii, sec. 2. (c. 110 A. D.)

Courage wins the victory, not the sword. (Animo vince en guerra, que no arma buena.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 224. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

<sup>11</sup> Courage, like cowardice, is undoubtedly contagious, but some persons are not liable to catch it.

ARCHIBALD PRENTICE, Prenticeana. (1860)

The best way to regain your courage is to try to give some of it to others. (La meilleure façon de reprendre courage, c'est d'essayer d'en donner aux autres.)

JANE ELRIC. Quoted by L'Eclairneur de Nice, June, 1939

<sup>12</sup> Courage knows no yielding to calamity. (Non novit virtus calamitati cedere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 447. (c. 43 B. C.) A similar Latin proverb is, "Fortis cadere, cedere non potest" (A brave man may fall, but he cannot yield).

<sup>13</sup> A wight [courageous] man ne'er wanted a weapon.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 227. (1678)

A Man of Courage never wants Weapons.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 302. (1732)

<sup>1</sup> If my flesh knew how far my courage is soon going to carry it, it would be totally paralyzed. (Si ma chair savoit jusques où mon courage la portera tantost, elle s'en transiroit tout à plat.)

"TREMBLANT" SANCHE, 12th KING OF NAVARRE, when his attendants noticed that he was trembling as they armed him for battle. (c. 1250) See MONTAIGNE, Essays, i, 54. The saying has been attributed to Henry IV (who might well have repeated it after his ancestor), Turenne, and other famous generals. Turenne is supposed to have said, when his attendants noticed his knees were shaking as he mounted his horse to ride into battle, "If my knees knew where I am going to take them, they'd be shaking worse than that." According to EDMOND GUÉRARD, Dictionnaire Encyclopédique d'Anecdotes, i, 262, it belongs to Gaston de Foix, nephew of Louis XII, who said it before the battle of Ravenna, 1512, in which he perished.

<sup>2</sup> No courage is so bold as that forced by utter desperation. (Acerrima virtus est, quam ultima necessitas extundit.)

SENECA, De Clementia. Bk. i, ch. 12, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 55)

<sup>3</sup> Whomever thou shalt see brave, call him not wretched. (Quemcumque fortem videris, miserum neges.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 464. (c. A. D. 60) The braver a man is, the happier he is. (Tanto fortior, tanto felicior!)

SENECA, De Tranquillitate Animi. Ch. 16. (c. A. D. 60)

<sup>4</sup> The brave live on. (Vivunt fortes.)

SENECA, Hercules Oetaeus, l. 1984. (c. A. D. 60) It is the cowards who are slain in battle

FORTUNE FAVORS THE BRAVE, see under FORTUNE.

<sup>5</sup> The palsy, and not fear, provokes me.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iv, 7, 97. (1590) If I tremble from cold, my enemies will say it was from fear.

CHARLES I OF ENGLAND, as he put on two shirts the morning of his execution, 30 Jan., 1649. See LINGARD, History of England, x, 5.

It is only from cold. (C'est de froid.) JEAN SYLVAIN BAILLY, while waiting to be guillotined, 12 Nov., 1793. See CARLYLE, French Revolution.

<sup>6</sup> Screw your courage to the sticking-place. And we'll not fail.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, i, 7, 60. (1606) Gilt Youth, with levelled bayonets, countenances screwed to the sticking-place!

THOMAS CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Vol. iii, bk. vii, ch. 8. (1837)

Screwing my virtue to the sticking point.

FRANK E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 35. (1850) "Sticking point" instead of "sticking-place" is a frequent misquotation.

He screwed himself up to the sticking-point.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 8. (1880) The boy's courage, screwed now to the sticking-point.

LEE THAYER, Guilty, p. 218. (1940)

[She] seemed to screw her courage to the sticking point.

LEE THAYER, Murder Is Out, p. 159. (1942)

<sup>7</sup> Bravery's a treasure in a lonesome place.

JOHN M. SYNGE, The Playboy of the Western World. Act i. (1904)

<sup>8</sup> Bravery never goes out of fashion.

W. M. THACKERAY, The Four Georges: George II. (1860)

<sup>9</sup> Of small number, but their courage quick for war. (Exigui numero, sed bello vivida virtus.) VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. v, l. 754. (19 B. C.)

Courage from hearts, and not from numbers. grows.

JOHN DRYDEN, Annus Mirabilis. St. 76. (1666)

<sup>10</sup> The Dutch their wine, and all their brandy lose,

Disarm'd of that from which their courage grows.

EDMUND WALLER, Instructions to a Painter for a Picture of the Victory over the Dutch, 3 June, 1665.

Not the twentieth part of a drop. No Dutch courage for me.

WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Ch. 16. (1824)

Laying in store of what is called Dutch courage.

WALTER SCOTT, Woodstock. Ch. 12. (1826)

I'm not going to splice the mainbrace, my lads; we must have no Dutch courage.

FREDERICK CHAMIER, Tom Bowling. Ch. 26 (1841)

A dose of brandy, by stimulating the circulation, produces "Dutch courage."

HERBERT SPENCER, The Study of Sociology. Ch. 8. (1873) The French call it, "Du courage arrosé" (sprinkled, wined)

<sup>11</sup> Resist defiantly the need to be brave.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 79. (1940)

COURT

<sup>12</sup> St. Paul hath fought with beasts at Ephesus. and I at Windsor.

RICHARD CORBET, Letter to Lord Mordant, referring to "court-wits," and other antagonists at the court. (a. 1635)

<sup>13</sup> At the Kynges court, my brother, Ech man for hymself.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knight's Tale, l. 1181. (c. 1386)

In court men study only their owne fortunes.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Court. (1611)

At Court, every one for himself.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 796 (1640) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 825. (1732)

1 Near Death he stands, that stands too near a crown.

SAMUEL DANIEL, The Tragedie of Cleopatra, Act iv, sc. 1. (1594)

Nearest the King, nearest the widdie [gallows].

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 82. (c. 1595)

Highest in court, nearest the widdie.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 126. (1721)
The greatest Favourites are in most Danger of Falling.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4572. (1732)

2 Leave the court, or the court leave thee.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 72. (c. 1595)

Leave the Court ere the Court leave thee.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 61. (1710) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 234, with the comment: "A good advice in its literal sense, if courtiers would take it, but it signifies that we should mortify our vicious inclinations, by consideration and religion, before old age make them forsake us."

3 Came you from Court? for in your Mien A self-important air is seen.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1743.

4 So many men in court, and so many strangers.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 873. (1640)

5 The Court hath no Almanack.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 893. (1640)
All Europe has consented to the Proverb, that in a Prince's Court there is no Almanack.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 318. (1710)

6 I was neyther of court nor of counsaile made.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

I am neyther of his counsaile nor court.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 377. (1580)

One of the Court, but none of the Counsell.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 78. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 170. (1670) KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 272. (1721) Kelly explains, "One of the party, but not admitted to their secrets."

7 I have many feyre promessis and holy water of court.

WILLIAM HORMAN, Vulgaris, fo. 231. (1519)

Therefore were we so wone with courtes holy water, that is, fayre and flattring wordes.

RICHARD SHACKLOCK, The Hatchet of Heresies. (1565)

Court holy-water in a dry house is better than this rain-water out o' door.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iii, 2, 10. (1605)

Shee may bee rewarded with some court holy water wordes.

BARNABY RICH, The Honestie of This Age, p. 52. (1614)

Court holy-water. Eau beniste de la cour. Fair words and nothing else.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 236. (1678)

A little court holy water washes off all stains.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Aesop, p. 14. (1692)
Some words slipt, as it were, from his pen, a drop of mere court holy water.

ROGER NORTH, Examen, p. 136. (1740)

Court holy water, fair speeches and promises without performance.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Court. (1785)

Court incense. (Thus aulicum.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 69. (1814)

"The splendid promises of courtiers," Bland comments, "like the vapour of frankincense, please the senses for a time, but soon fleet away."

8 The court does not make us happy; it prevents our being so anywhere else. (La Cour ne rend pas content; elle empêche qu'on ne le soit ailleurs.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: De la Cour. (1688)
The court is like a palace built of marble, made up of very hard but very polished people. (La Cour est comme un édifice bâti de marbre, je veux qu'elle est composée d'hommes fort durs, mais fort polis.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: De la Cour.

Who has seen the court has seen the world. (Qui a vu la Cour, a vu du monde.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: De la Cour.

9 Live in the Countrey, not in the Court: where neither Grasse will growe, nor Mosse cleave to thy heeles.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 230. (1580)

The Court shineth to me that come not there, but singeth those that dwell there.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 351.

10 My dealyns about the Courte shall be fewe. for I love to stande aloofe from Jove and Lyghtning.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 351. (1580)

Procul a Jove, procul a fulmine, was the old saying: Far from Jupiter, far from his thunder.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, iii, 43. (1629)

Far from Court, far from care. (Loin de la cour, loin de souci.)

JAMES CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 205. (1639)

RAY, Proverbs, p. 73. (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1503. (1732)

11 Lo, in this pond be fishe and froggis bothe.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Fortune. St. 32. (c. 1500)
See HILLS, Commonplace-Book, p. 79.

It is in the courte as in all ryuers, some fish some frogges.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 196. (1579)

It is at Courts, as it is in Ponds; some Fish, some Frogs.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2912. (1732)

Whereas it is in Courts, as in a pond, Some fish, some frogs.

JOHN WOLCOT, Works (1795), ii, 434. (1792)

1 I was not born for courts or great affairs;
I pay my debts, believe, and say my prayers.
POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 267. (c. 1733)

2 This is the English, not the Turkish court;
Not Amurath an Amurath succeeds,
But Harry Harry.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, v, 2, 47. (1597)

3 The two maxims of any great man at court are, always to keep his countenance, and never to keep his word.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1714)

4 He that wyll in courte dwell
Must nedes currye favell.

RICHARD TAVERNER, tr., Erasmus' Aphorisms, fo. 47. (1550) Taverner explains that "favell" is an old English word for "favour." "Currye favell" is to solicit favor by flattery.

Hee that will in Court dwell, must speake Fauell.
THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 68. (1616)

Descending is the way to ascend at court. (Descendendo ascendendum est in Aula.)

JAMES HOWELL, Letters. Sec. iii, let. 13. (1622)
Quoting "a true court rule."

He that would rise at Court, must begin by creeping.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1757.

FRIEND AT COURT, see under FRIEND.

II—Court: The Courtier

5 Oft yonge courtiers be beggers in their age.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Egloges, 20. (c. 1510)

He that liueth in the court, dyeth in a straw bed. (Chi vive in corte, muore in pagliaro.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578)

D'ISRAELI, in his Philosophy of Proverbs, gives another form of this Italian proverb,
"Chi serve in corte, muore sul' pagliato"
(Who serves at court dies on straw).

Certes it is an olde saying that who so liveth in the court, shall dye in the strawe.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues to Philautus, p. 185. (1579)

O, when women are young courtiers, They are sure to be old beggars.

CYRIL TOURNEUR, The Revengers Tragedie. Act
iv, sc. 4. (1607)

And than to proue the prouerbe often tolde.

"A careless courtier young, a begger olde."

UNKNOWN, Vncasing of Markhills Instruction to His Sonne, 7. (1613)

An old Courtier, a young Beggar.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 642. (1732)

6 Some of them go so untowardly to woorke, that coveting to be courtlike, they become plaine cartlike.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii,
p. 165. (1574)

Though they take upon them the name of Courtiers, yet in their behaviour they shew themselves little better than Carters.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, ii, 176

Aristippus a Philosopher, yet who more courtly?
Diogenes a Philosopher, yet who more caterly?

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 40. (1579)

Baptista: If either of you both love Katharina,
Leave shall you have to court her at your pleasure.
Gremio [aside]: To cart her rather: she's too rough for me.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, i, 1,
52. (1594)

7 Before their Prince let Courtiers silent be,
Or let their words be saust with pleasaunt glee.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii,
p. 112. (1574) Pettie, tr.

8 Courtiers are shod with watermelon rind.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 107. (1902)

A slippery and uncertain footing. If the proverb were written today, it would probably be, "Courtiers are shod with banana peel."

9 Sir, I have lived a courtier all my days,
And studied men, their manners, and their ways;

And have observed this useful maxim still,

To let my betters always have their will.

POPE, January and May, l. 156. (1709)

10 The caterpillars of the commonwealth,
Which I have sworn to weed and pluck away.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, ii, 3, 166. (1595)

A mere court butterfly.

That flutters in the pageant of a monarch.

BYRON, Sardanapalus. Act v, sc. 1. (1821)

COURTESY

See also Manners, Politeness

11 More of your cost, and less of your counsel.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), ii, 407. (1629)

Less of your courtesie and more of your purse.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 43. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 74. (1670) Ray adds the Latin, "Re opitulandum non verbis."

Less of your Courtship, I pray, and more of your Coin.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3172. (1732)

The Germans say, "Weniger Rath und viele Hände" (Less counsel and more hands).

12 Courtesy is the ornament of a noble man.

BHARTRIHARI, Niti Sataka. No. 82. (c. A. D. 100)

Curtisie, the right ornament of a Gentleman; for of curtisie and gentlenes he is termed a gentleman.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii,
p. 185. (1584) Pettie, tr.

Courtesy is the inseparable Companion of Virtue.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1190. (1732)

13 She is mirour of alle curteisye.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of the Man of Lawe, l. 68. (c. 1386)

The mirror of all courtesy.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, ii, 1, 53. (1612)

<sup>1</sup>
To be rude to him was courtesy. (E cortesia fu in lui esser villano.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxxiii, l. 150. (c. 1300)

<sup>2</sup>
There's a charm in courtesy, and profit, too, at trifling cost. (ἐν δ' εὐπροσγέροισιν ὅστις τις χάρις; | . . . καὶ κέρδος γε σὺν μόχθῳ βραχέει.)

EURIPIDES, Hippolytus, l. 95. (c. 428 B.C.)

Nothing costs less or is cheaper than civility. (No hay cosa que menos cueste ni valga más barata que los buenos comedimientos.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 36. (1915)

"Valga más barata," a redundancy, has been translated "is worth less," but this is opposed to the character of Don Quixote, whom Sancho Panza is quoting in a letter to his wife. The Italians say, "Biretta in mano non fece mai danno" (Cap in hand never did any harm).

Civility costs nothing.

SAMUEL WARREN, Ten Thousand a Year. Ch. 3. (1841)

Civility is a cheap coin what is manufactured for nothing, and among folks in general goes further than dollars and cents.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 9. (1843)

Civility costs nothing, . . . nothing, that is, to him that shows it; but it often costs the world very dear.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Rambles in England and Ireland, i, 207. (1873)

GOOD WORDS COST NOTHING, see under WORD.

<sup>3</sup>
Courtesy is cumbersome to them that knowes it not.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 26. (c. 1595)

Heigh how is heavy some,
An old wife is dowsome [tedious],
And courtesy is cumbersome,
To them that cannot shew it.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 156. (1721)

"Heigh how" (Heigh ho), an expression of sorrow. "The whole," says Kelly, "is for the sake of the last, viz. that people who are not used to good breeding, and mannerly behaviour, perform it very untowardly."

<sup>4</sup>
Kindness may be defined as a disposition to confer benefits, courtesy as a disposition to waive rights.

THOMAS FOWLER, Principles of Morality, ii. 2. (1887)

<sup>5</sup>
A Courtesy much entreated is half recompensed.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 57. (1732)

<sup>6</sup>
All doors open to courtesy.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 512. (1732)

Hearts, like doors, will ope with ease
To very, very little keys,
And don't forget that two of these
Are "I thank you," and "If you please."

UNKNOWN. Old nursery rhyme.

What boots it, thy virtue,
What profit thy parts,
While one thing thou lackest—

The art of all arts,
The only credentials,
Passport to success,
Opens castle and parlor,
Address, man, address?
R. W. EMERSON, Tact. (1867)

<sup>7</sup>
Varnishing hides a crack.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5346. (1732)

<sup>8</sup>
Courtesy is the politic witchery of great personages. (La cortesía es el mayor hechizo político de grandes personajes.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 40. (1647)

<sup>9</sup>
Wee are bound to re-salute those which salute us, bee they our inferiours or equals.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 87. (1574) Pettie, tr.

He that doeth looke to finde curtesie, must like to shewe curtesie.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 157.

He may freely receive courtesies that knows how to requite them.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 22. (1670)

<sup>10</sup>
Courtesy on one side only lasts not long.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 810. (1640) The French say, "Courtoisie qui ne vient d'un côté ne peut longuement durer" (Courtesy which comes from only one side cannot last long).

Courtesy on one Side can never last long.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1191. (1732)

He that asketh a Courtesy, promiseth a Kindness

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2041. (1732)

<sup>11</sup>
Where there is o'er mickle courtesy, there is little kindness.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 350. (1721)
The Japanese say, "Too much courtesy is discourtesy."

So obliging that he ne'er obliged.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 208. (1733)

That's too civil by half.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act iii, sc. 4. (1775)

He was so generally civil that nobody thanked him for it.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, BOSWELL, Life, 1777

None of your dam punctilio.

GEORGE MEREDITH, One of Our Conquerors Ch. 1. (1891)

<sup>12</sup>
Intelligence and courtesy not always are combined;

Often in a wooden house a golden room we find.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, Art and Tact. (1845) From the Sinnegedichte of FRIEDRICH VON LOGAU.

<sup>13</sup>
If you will be cherished when you be olde, be courteous while you be young.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 55. (1579)

1 Without any straying of curtesie.
SIR THOMAS MORE, Heresyes. Ch. 1. (c. 1520)
I pynche courtaysye as one does that is nyce of condyscions.

JEHAN PALSCRAVE, La Langue Françoise, p. 657. (1530)

Modestye caused us to pinch curtesie, who should first come.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 69. (1579)
In such a case as mine, a man may strain courtesy.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 4, 55. (1592)
I must straine cur'sie with you.

JOHN LYLY, Mother Bombe. Act iii, sc. 3. (1594)
Straining courtesie who shall goe first.

JOHN TAYLOR, WATER-POET, Salisbury. (1623)

2 Much companie, much knaverie, as true as that olde adage, Much curtesie, much subtiltie.

NASHE, The Unfortunate Traveller, p. 8. (1594)
The more courtesie the more craft.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 139. (1639)
Full of courtesy, full of craft.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 73. (1670) Ray comments: "Sincere and true hearted persons are least given to compliment and ceremony. It's suspicious he hath some design upon me, who courts and flatters me."
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1635. (1732)
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1735.

We have been finely duped. . . Full of courtesy, full of craft.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Parent's Assistant, p. 392. (1796)

3 It's a rank courtesy when a man is forced to give thanks for his own.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 20. (1670)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2871.

4 Duck with French nods and apish courtesy.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, i, 3, 49. (1592)
Why, what a candy deal of courtesy

This fawning greyhound then did proffer me!
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, i, 3, 251. (1597)

The show Of smooth civility.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 7, 95. (1600)

Dissembling courtesy!
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, i, i, 84. (1609)

Glozing courtesy.
JOHN MILTON, Comus, l. 161. (1634)

5 I am the very pink of courtesy.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 4, 61. (1595)
He is the very pine-apple of politeness!

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act iii, sc. 3. (1775)

6 I am the king of courtesy.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 4, 11. (1597)
Princes of courtesy, merciful, proud and strong.

HENRY NEWBOLT, Craven. (1897)

7 Hail ye small sweet courtesies of life, for smooth do ye make the road of it!
LAURENCE STERNE, A Sentimental Journey: The Pulse. (1768)

8 Nothing is more valuable to a man than courtesy. (Facilitate nil esse homini melius.)
TERENCE, Adelphoe, l. 861. (160 B. C.)

9 Courtesy, like charity, should begin at home.
P. C. WREN, The Uniform of Glory, p. 104. (1941)

COURTSHIP, see Wooing COUSIN

10 Cousin germans, quite removed.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 69. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1193. (1732)

A second Cousin, a Cousin once removed, Cousin issu de germain.

GUY MIEGE, French Dictionary: Cousin. (1688)

11 Call me cousin, but cozen me not.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 118. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1046. (1732)

A trust with your kindness, my good sir. Call me cousin, but cozen me not.

JOHN TRUSLER, Proverbs Exemplified, 20. (1790)

12 I never knew the marriage of second cosens forbidden, but by them who at the same time forbad the marriage of the first.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Ductor Dubitantium, p. 242. (1660)

First cousins may marry, second cousins can't; Third cousins will marry, fourth cousins won't.
W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 132. (1869)

13 Cousinage dangerous vicinage. (Cousinage dangereux voisinage.)

LEO TOLSTOY, War and Peace. Vol. i, pt. i, ch 10. (1865)

14 If he had had the faecte to hold and kepe an empire, . . . he had had no cousin [equal].

NICOLAS UDALL, Apothegms from Erasmus, 220. (1542)

COVENTRY

15 I seem to be the person marked for displeasure, and was almost literally sent to Coventry.

DAVID GARRICK, Correspondence. Vol. ii, p. 237. (1777)

This again sent me to Coventry for the rest of the dinner.

MADAME D'ARBLAY, Diary. Vol. ii, p. 427. (1787)
[He] swore himself to Coventry.

WILLIAM ROBERTS, The Looker-on, i, 34. (1792)
He'd send me to Coventry.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, The Parent's Assistant, iii, 2. (1796)

The oldsters . . . had sent him to the most rigid Coventry.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Frank Mildmay. Ch. 3. (1829)

To exclude and mystify pretenders and send them into everlasting "Coventry," is its [fashion's] delight.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Manners. (1844)

They thwarted him at every turn, out-voted him, snubbed him, and "sent him to Coventry."

SAMUEL SMILES, Lives of the Engineers, ii, 239. (1874)

At Bromicham, a town so generally wicked, that it has risen upon small parties of the king's, and killed or taken them prisoners and sent them to Coventry.

EARL OF CLARENDON, History of the Rebellion.

Bk. vi, par. 83. (1647) Coventry, an old town in Warwickshire, England, was at that time (1642) strongly held for the Parliament.

Thus when I was at Coventry the Religious part of my neighbours at Kidderminster that would fain have lived quietly at home, were . . . forced to be gone, and to Coventry they came.

RICHARD BAXTER, Reliquiae Baxterianae, i, 1, 44. (c. 1688)

It is said that the citizens of Coventry had at one time so great a dislike to soldiers that a woman seen speaking to one was instantly tabooed; hence when a soldier was sent to Coventry he was cut off from all social intercourse.

E. C. BREWER, Dictionary of Phrase and Fable, p. 293. (1870) The O.E.D. says this is only an ingenious conjecture, and favors the explanation in the Clarendon quotation given above as supplying the best clue as to the origin of the phrase.

To send to Coventry; esp. to be sent to Coventry, to be cold-shouldered by one's fellows.

PARTIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Send. (1941) And since 15 Nov., 1940, when Coventry was destroyed by the Germans, "coventrize" has meant to bomb intensively.

COVETOUSNESS

See also Avarice; Gold: The Lust for Gold; Greed, Miser, Money

<sup>1</sup> The boat of the covetous is left in the mud, while the bark of the tranquil sails with the breeze.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. x, l. 10. (c. 700 B.C.) Griffith, tr.

<sup>2</sup> Covet not the property of a dependent, nor hunger for his bread.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. xiv, l. 5. (c. 700 B.C.) Griffith, tr.

Eat thou not the bread of him that hath an evil eye, neither desire thou his dainty meats. (Ne comedas cum homine invido, et ne desideres cibos eius.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiii, 6. (c. 350 B.C.)

<sup>3</sup> The world is his who can rid himself of covetousness.

ASVAGHÓSA (?), Mahāyāna: Anantamukha. (c. A. D. 75)

<sup>4</sup> Covetousness breaks the sack.

FRANCIS BACON, Promus. No. 616. (c. 1594)

Covetousness bursts the bag. (La cudicia rompe el saco.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 20. (1605)

Also pt. ii, chs. 13 and 36. SHELTON has, "As covetousness breaks the sack, so hath it also torn my hopes." RAY, Proverbs, p. 21, renders it, "Too much breaks the bag."

Covetousness breaks the bag.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1069. (1640)

Be not over-greedy. Covetousness bursts the sack and spills the grain.

WALTER SCOTT, Kenilworth. Ch. 4. (1821)

The epitaph of the covetous man, as given in Jeremiah, is, "He is buried with the burial of an ass."

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit, p. 48. (1887) Referring to Jeremiah, xxii, 19, "Drawn and cast forth beyond the gates of Jerusalem."

<sup>5</sup> He that gathereth by miserliness, gathereth for others. (Qui acervat ex animo suo iniuste, aliis congregat.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xiv, 4. (c. 190 B.C.)

A covetous man is a dog in a wheele, that toiles to roast meat for other mens eating.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Newes from the Chimney-Corner. (1613) FULLER, Gnomologia.

No. 52. (1732) RICHARDSON, Clarissa, iv, 120.

Covetous Men are condemn'd to dig in the Mines, for they know not who.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1168.

<sup>6</sup> Covetise is distroyer of hym selfe. (Avarice occist et tue lomme qui est submis a elle.)

SAINT BERNARD, Le Regisme de Mesnaige. (c. 1130)

<sup>7</sup> If a man be covetous, what further vice can he have?

BHARTRIHARI, Niti Sataka. No. 55. (c. A. D. 100)

<sup>8</sup> For ay with gold men may the herte grave Of him that set is up-on coveitise.

CHAUCEUR (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iv, l. 1377. (c. 1380)

Coveitise is for to coveite swiche thinges as thou hast not; and Avarice is for to withholde and kepe swiche thinges as thou hast, with-out rightful nede.

CHAUCEUR, Canterbury Tales: The Persones Tale. Sec. 63. (c. 1386)

<sup>9</sup> Radix malorum est Cupiditas. (The root of evil is cupidity.)

CHAUCEUR, Canterbury Tales: The Prologue of the Pardoner's Tale, l. 6. (c. 1387) See under MONEY: THE LOVE OF MONEY.

Couetousnesse is the roote of all euill: the ground of all vice.

LEONARD WRIGHT, Display of Dutie, p. 10. (1589)

It is an old and true saying, Covetousness is the mother of ruin and mischief.

UNKNOWN, Sir Richard Whittington, p. 26. (c. 1670)

Covetousness is the greatest of Monsters, as well as the Root of all Evil.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. Maxim 88. (1693)

1 He who covets is always poor. (Semper inops quicumque cupit.)

CLAUDIAN, In Rufinum. Bk. i, l. 200. (c. A. D. 395)

He that coveteth is a povre wight,
For he wolde han that is nat in his might.
But he that noght hath, ne coveteth have,
Is riche, al-though ye holde him but a knave.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of the Wyf of Bath, l. 331. (c. 1387)

Covetise is moder of povert.

JOHN DE TREVISA, tr., Polychronicon, iii, 475. (1387)

The covetous spends more than the liberal.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 685. (1640) A rendering of the French proverb, "Autant despent chiche que large." The French also say, "Homme chiche, jamais riche" (Stingy man, never rich).

Covetousness, as well as Prodigality, brings a Man to a Morsel of Bread.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1173. (1732)

2 Ever the covetous loves lies, craft, robbery. (Semper avarus amat mendacia furta rapinas.)

COLUMBANUS, Carmen Monostichon, l. 31. (c. A. D. 600)

3 Neither shalt thou covet . . . any thing that is thy neighbour's. (Universa quae illius sunt.)

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, v, 21. (c. 700 B.C.)

Covet not thy neighbor's goods. (νὺν αὐτὸν μὴ δ' ἔρα τῶν πλησίων.)

EURIPIDES, Hecuba, l. 996. (c. 425 B.C.)

All men should not covet all things. (Non omnia omnibus cupienda esse.)

SALLUST, Bellum Jugurthinum. Ch. 64. (c. 40 B.C.)

Thou shalt not covet. (οὐκ ἐπιθυμήσεις.)

New Testament: Romans, vii, 7. (c. A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Non concupisces."

4 A couetouse man doth no man good but when he dyeth. (Avarus nisi cum moritur, nil recte facit.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iv, cent. v, No. 6.

(1508) Quoting a saying of Terence. TAVERNER, tr., fo. 68. (1550) Taverner adds: "They that giue them selves only to the hourelyng up of money, be profitable to no body whyle they lyue. Only theyr death bryngeth pleasure and profetie to theyr heyres and executors." An early use of the phrase, "heirs and executors."

A covetous Man does nothing well till he dies.

THOMAS WILSON, A Discourse upon Usurye, 230. (1572)

The covetous man is like a two-legged hog: while he lives he is ever rooting in the earth, and never doth good till he is dead.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), i, 482. (1629)

See also under HOG.

A covetous Man does nothing that he should do till he dies.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 51. (1732)

5 Covetous Men are shamefully rich.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1169. (1732)

Covetous Men live Drudges, to die Wretches.

Covetousness is always filling a bottomless Vessel.

Covetousness is generally incurable.

Covetousness often starves other Vices.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 1171-8.

6 The covetous, which possesse treasure, but have it not.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 32. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Covetous Men's Chests are rich, not they.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1170. (1732)

7 When all sins grow old, covetousness is young.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 19. (1640) See under AGE.

8 Woe unto them that join house to house, that lay field to field, till there be no place. (Vae qui coniungitis domum ad domum, et agrum agro copulatis usque ad terminum loci.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, v, 8. (c. 725 B.C.)

9 The couetous man is good to no man, and worst to himselfe.

THOMAS LODGE, tr., Seneca's Works, p. 443. (1614)

A covetous Man is good to none, but worst to himself.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 53. (1732)

10 Excess of wealth is cause of covetousness.

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, The Jew of Malta. Act i, sc. 2. (c. 1592)

11 Poverty wants many things, but covetousness all.

WILLIAM PENN, No Cross, No Crown. Ch. 13. (1669) See under AVARICE: Desunt inopia multa.

12 He justly loses what belongs to himself who covets what belongs to another. (Amittit merito proprium qui alienum appetit.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 4. (c. 25 B.C.)

This is Aesop's fable of the dog who crossed a stream while carrying a piece of meat, and when he tried to grab the meat which he saw reflected in the water, lost the piece which he had.

Out of greediness to get both, he chops at a shadow, and loses the substance. . . . All covet, all lose.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Aesop's Fables, vi. 6. (1692) See also under SHADOW.

The churl that wants another's fare

Deserves at least to lose his share.

CHRISTOPHER SMART, The Dog in the River (1765)

He who covets everything soon loses everything (Qui tot coveite trestot pert.)

RICHART BONIER, De Vilain Qui Donna Son Ame au Deable, l. 234. (c. 1250) See MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, vi, 41 In the fable De III Dames qui Trouverent l

Vit, l. 144, the line is varied slightly: "Cil qui tot covoite, tout pert."

Wo so coueyteth al, al leseth.

ROBERT OF GLOUCESTER, Chronicle, p. 306. (1297)
The proverbe seith, He that to muche embraceth, distreyneth [retaineth] litel.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 24. (c. 1387)

An olde prouerbe hath he sayde . . . who al coveiteth, oft he lesith all.

JOHN LYDGATE, *Isope*s. (c. 1400)

It falleth ofte who that wold haue all leseth alle. Ouer covetous was neuer good.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Reynart the Foxe, xxxiii, 95. (1481)

It is an olde sayenge, He that all coveteth al leseth.

LORD BERNERS, tr., Froissart. Ch. 259. (1523)
He that gripes too much holds fast but little. (Qui trop embrasse, peu étireint.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 46. (1534)

Urquhart, tr. The French also say, "Qui trop empoing rien n'étreind" (Who grasps at too much secures nothing), and the Italians have the same proverb, "Chi troppo abbraccia, nulla stringe." They also say, "Chi tutto vuole, tutto perde" (Who wants everything loses everything). The Spanish form is, "Quien todo lo quiere, todo lo pierde," and the German, "Wer Alles haben will, bekommt am Ende nichts."

Haue ye not heard tell all couet all leese.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

All couet, all loose: this comth oft in vre.

But nought haue, nought loose: this is euer sure.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs and Epigrams, p. 141. (1562)

Who imbraceth much, litle closeth.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 6. (1578)

The common prouerbe, Hee that coueteth all, often-times looseth much.

THOMAS LODGE, Catharos, p. 31. (1591)

Covetousness brings nothing home.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 37. (1639)

All covet, all lose.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1076.

(1640) WILSON, The Cheats. Act iv, sc. 1. (1664)

The more you heap, the worse you cheap. The more you rake and scrape, the worse success you haue.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 102. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6101. (1732)

Grasp no more than thy Hand will hold.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1747. (1732)

He that grasps at too much, holds nothing fast.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2123. (1732)

Grasp all, lose all. The known fable of the Dog and the Shadow is a true emblem of covetousness.

JOHN TRUSLER, Proverbs Exemplified, p. 189. (1790)

1
Beware of the quality of covetousness, which is a grievous inner malady. . . . It sundereth the wife and the husband. It gathered unto itself all evils; it is the girdle of all wickedness.

PTAH-HOTEP, Instruction. No. 19. (c. 3550 B.C.)
Prisse Papyrus. Gunn, tr.

One hath remorse for even a little covetousness when his belly cooleth.

PTAH-HOTEP, Instruction. No. 20.

Swathe not thy heart in thy hoard.

PTAH-HOTEP, Instruction. No. 30.

2
Covetous of others' possessions, he was prodigal of his own. (Alieni appetans, sui profusus.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. 5, sec. 4. (c. 41 B.C.)

II—Covetousness: Much Would Have More

3
To the eye of the covetous his portion is [too] small.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus). xiv, 9. (c. 190 B.C.)

4
To nature very little is sufficient, but to covetousness nothing. (Quod naturae minimum, quod avaritiae nihil satis est.)

BOETHIUS, Philosophiae Consolationis. Bk. iii. ch. 2. (A.D. 524)

5
Ryches encreaseth auaryce in a coutous man
WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Chast Goddes Chylde. p. 69. (1488)

Riches have made more covetous Men, than Covetousness hath made rich Men.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4044. (1732)

6
Who al wil haue, through fransie dyeth. (Chi tutto vuol, di rabbia muore.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578)

7
The Pleasure of what we enjoy, is lost by coveting more.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4709 (1732)

8
Hoards after hoards his rising raptures fill: Yet still he sighs, for hoards are wanting still GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 53. (1764)

9
For Coveityse is ever wood [mad]

To grypen other folkes good

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose. (c. 1240) CHAUCER (?), tr. ! 203 (c. 1365)

10
None says his garner is full

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum (1640)

11
To those who seek for much, much is ever lacking. (Multa petentibus | desunt multa.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode xvi, l. 42. (23 B.C.)

The covetous man always wants. (Semper avarus eget.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 56. (c. 15 B.C.)
The more you have, the more you want. (Quanto plura parasti, tanto plura cupis.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 147 A
A similar proverb. credited to Justinian. is. "Homines quo plura habent, eo cupiunt ampliora" (The more men have, the more they want in consequence) HENDERSON,

Latin Proverbs, p. 378, gives still another form, "Quo plus habent, eo plus cupiunt." Those who possess the most, still crave for more. (Cum possideant plurima, plura petunt.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. i, l. 212. (c. A. D. 8)

Mykulle wulle more.

FÖRSTER, ed., Douce MSS, 52. (c. 1350)

Bot ay mekill wald have mare.

UNKNOWN, Alexander, l. 4398. (c. 1350)

The more a man hath, the more he desirith. (Quanto piu si ha, tanto piu si desidera.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32. (1578)

Poorly rich, so wanteth in his store, That, cloy'd with much, he pineth still for more.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 97. (1594)

And my more-having would be as a sauce

To make me hunger more.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iv, 3, 81. (1605)

The much runs ever to the more.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Poly-olbion, xv, 293. (1613)

Much will have more.

WILLIAM LAWSON, A New Orchard and Garden, p. 5. (1618) EMERSON, Works and Days. (1870)

Mickle would ay have more.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 254. (1721)

Much would have more, but often meets with less.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3487. (1732)

He who has more, wants more. (Quien mas tiene, mas quiere.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 282. (1856) A Spanish proverb. The Germans say, "Jedem das Seine ist nicht zu viel" (No man ever thought his own too much).

The more you get the more you want.

G. H. COXE, The Glass Triangle, p. 127. (1940)

<sup>1</sup> The love of pelf increases with the pelf. (Crescit amor nummi quantum ipsa pecunia crescit.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiv, l. 139. (c. A. D. 120)

COW

<sup>2</sup> Kiss till the cow come home.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Scornful Lady.

Act ii. (1610) See under Kiss.

Drinking, eating, feasting and revelling, till the cow come home, as the saying is.

UNKNOWN, Harleian Miscellany, iv, 125. (1625)

I warrant you lay abed till the cows come home.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ix. (1738)

You may rezolout till the cows come home.

JOHN HAY, Little Breeches. (c. 1873)

Stand by you . . . till the cows come home.

JOAQUIN MILLER, The Danites. Act i. (1877)

I'll make love to you till the Heavenly cows come home.

LANGDON MITCHELL, The New York Idea. Act iii. (1906)

You can keep on guessing till the cows come home.

MARGARET KENNEDY, The Constant Nymph, p. 320. (1924)

He can yowl till the cows come home.

H. S. KEELER, The Book with the Orange Leaves, p. 138. (1942)

<sup>3</sup>

A red cow gives good milk.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 5. "In old medical books, when milk was ordered to be given, it was frequently specified that it should be taken from a red cow." WALTON, in The Compleat Angler, refers to "A draught of red cow's milk."

I never saw a PURPLE COW,

I never HOPE to see one;

But I can tell you, anyhow,

I'd rather SEE than BE one.

GELETT BURGESS, The Purple Cow. Appeared in The Lark, San Francisco, May, 1895, Burgess's first published writing.

They never saw a purple king but always hoped to see one.

VAN WYCK BROOKS, New England: Indian Summer, p. 437. (1940) Of the royalist movement among the Bostonians of the 1890's

<sup>4</sup>

As cows come to town, some good, some bad.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 219. (1639)

<sup>5</sup>

A cow may catch a hare. (Ung vache prent bien ung lievre.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Vache. (1611)

Set a cow to catch a hare.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 342. (1678)

MERITON, Yorkshire Ale, p. 83. (1683)

We don't go by size, or a cow would catch a hare.

BURNE, Shropshire Folk-lore, p. 588. (1883)

<sup>6</sup>

I went on the old saying, of salting the cow to catch the calf.

DAVID CROCKETT, Autobiography, p. 44. (1823)

<sup>7</sup>

The cross cow holds up her milk.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Clubs. (1870)

<sup>8</sup>

Bring a kow to the hall, and she will to the byre again.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 20. (c. 1595)

Drive a cow to the hall and she'll run to the bayer.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 86. (1721)

"Spoken when people of mean breeding . . . do not take to, or become, a more honourable station."

A cow is a very good animal in the field, but we turn her out of a garden.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. See BOSWELL, Life, 1772

<sup>9</sup>

He that ought [owns] the cow goes nearest her tail.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 42. (c. 1595)

Let him that owns the asse take her by the tail

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Queue. (1611)

Let him that owns the cow take her by the tail

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 129. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3185. (1732)

He that owns the cow goes nearest her tail. Every man is busy, and careful, about his proper interest.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 128. (1721)

1
June twenty-ninth will see chum and me at the Shrubberies "if it kills every cow in the barn."

PAUL LEICESTER FORD, The Honorable Peter Stirling, p. 17. (1894)

2
If you sell the Cow, you sell her Milk too.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2786. (1732)

You can't sell the Cow, and have her Milk too.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5885. EAT YOUR CAKE AND HAVE IT, see under CAKE.

3
The cow little giveth That hardly liveth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6325. (1732)

4
Steal my cow and give away the hide.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 343. (1869)

5
God gives short horns to the fierce ox. (Dat Deus immiti cornua curta bovi.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 75.

Quoting a Latin proverb of c. 1000.

God sendeth a shrewd cow a short horne.

BELL, Chaucer, viii, 189; Eight Goodly Questions. (c. 1475)

To a wyld cowe god doth short hornys sende.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, The Shyp of Folys, i, 182. (1509)

How be it lo god sendth the shrewd coow short hornes.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

A curst cow hath oftentimes short hornes, and a willing minde but a weake arme.

ROBERT GREENE, Pandosto. Works (Grosart), iv, 247. (1588)

God, they say, sendeth commonly a curst cow short hornes.

JOHN HARVEY, A Discursive Probleme Concerning Prophecies. (1588)

An ill willy kow should have short hornes.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 10. (c. 1595)

It is said "God sends a curst cow short horns," but to a cow too curst he sends none.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, ii, 1, 25. (1599)

A curst cow hath short hornes.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 533. (1640)

Curst cows have short hornes. . . . Providence so disposes that they who have the will, want power or means to hurt.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 74. (1670) A comfortable theory, but not one to be relied upon.

'Tis well that cussed keows have short hornes, as the proverb saies.

DAVID HUMPHREYS, The Yankey, p. 70. (1815)

6
A poor man's cow dies a rich man's child.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 868. (1640)

7
Margery good coowe (quoth he) gaue a good meelee,

But than she cast it downe again with hir heele.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. II, ch. 7. (1546)

Be not you like the cowe, that gives a good sope of milke, and casts it downe with her beeles.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington. Sc. 11. (1599)

These Italians . . . as at first they gave good milk, so they kicked it down with their heel.

THOMAS FULLER, The Historie of the Holy Warre, v, 22. (1639)

Like a curst cow that gives a paille of milk, and then kicks it down.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 14. (1659)

Madge, good cow, gives a good pail of milk, and then kicks it down with her foot.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 185. (1679)

A cow that gives good milk, but kicks it to the ground.

EDWARD WARD, Female Policy Detected, p. 84. (1716)

You are a pretty cow, my love; you give good store of milk, but you have a very careless heel.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison iv, 148. (1753)

8
It is better to buy a quart of milk by the penny than keep a cow.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters. Vol. ii, p. 666. (1659)

Who'd keep a Cow, when he may have a Quart of Milk for a Penny?

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5697. (1732)

Why buy a cow when milk is so cheap?

STEPHEN ACRE, The Yellow Overcoat, p. 52. (1942)

9
We'll send ashore for a cow for you, . . . one with an iron tail.

J. C. HUTCHESON, Crown and Anchor. Ch 12 (1896) A pump.

The cow with the iron tail is still milked a great deal in London.

All the Year Round, 14 Aug., 1886, p. 33.

10
How now! whose cow has calv'd?

BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act iv, sc. 2. (1596)

His cow has calved, or sow pig'd. He hath got what he sought for, or expected.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 70. (1678)

What's the matter? . . . Whose cow has calved?

SCOTT, The Fair Maid of Perth. Ch. 22. (1828)

HE THAT BULLS THE COW MUST KEEP THE CALF, see under BASTARD.

11
It is a shame to eat the cow, and worry on the tail.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 190. (1721)

"It is a shame to perform a great task all but a little and then give it over."

If you buy the Cow, take the Tail into the Bargain.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2743. (1732)

[He] did not like half-measures, such as swallowing the sheep and worrying on the tail.

D. M. MOIR, Manie Wauch. Ch. 22. (1824)

12
I was like a cow in an uncouth loan [strange milking-place]. That is, everybody looked strange to me.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 233. (1721)

Preach his first sermon in the town of Ayr, like a cow in a fremd loaning.

WALTER SCOTT, Letter, 11 June, 1821. See LOCKHART, Life, iii, 452.

He's like a cow in a fremit loaning.

ALEXANDER HISLOP, The Proverbs of Scotland, p. 136. Hislop says "a fremit loaning" means a strange lane.

<sup>1</sup> I'll make him . . . stand like the dum cow, till thou may'st milk him.

THOMAS KILLIGREW, The Parson's Wedding. Act ii, sc. 6. (1663) "The dun cow" or "brown cow," a humorous name for a barrel of beer.

The auld anes think it best

With the brown cow to clear their een.

ALLAN RAMSAY, The Gentle Shepherd. Act iii, sc. 2. Prologue.

<sup>2</sup> As be-cometh a kow to hoppe in a cage!

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Richard the Redeles, iii, 262. (1399)

As mete to be a great mans keever as a kowe to bear a saddle.

JEHAN PALSCRAVE, La Langue Françoise, 427. (1530)

She is in this mariage

As comely as is a cowe in a cage.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1546)

As seemely as a cowe in a cage.

JOHN GRANGE, Golden Aphroditis, sig.F1. (1577)

He becomes it as well as a cow does a cart-saddle.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 5. (1639)

RAY, Proverbs, p. 203. (1670)

As nimble as a cow in a cage.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 287. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 718. (1732)

As nimble as cows in a cage.

LORD LYTTON, Pelham. Ch. 77. (1828)

<sup>3</sup> It's the opinion of the old cow that she was never a calf. (Il est avis à vielle vache qu'elle ne fût oncques veau.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français. Vol. i, p. 204. Quoting a proverb of c. 1450. The French also say, "Il a pris la vache et le veau" (He has caught the cow and the calf), of a man who marries a pregnant girl.

DON'T EAT THE CALF IN THE COW'S BELLY, see under CHICKEN.

<sup>4</sup> The cow is of the bovine ilk;

One end is moo, the other milk.

OGDEN NASH, The Cow. (1930)

<sup>5</sup> This town goes downhill like the calf's tail. (Haec colonia retroversus crescit tanquam coda vituli.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 44. (c. A. D. 60)

Like cows' tails, downwards. (Comme les queues des vaches, contre bas.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 27. (1532)

To grow like a cow's tail.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 249. (1678)

You're growing downwards now,
Like tail of heifer or of cow.

EDWARD WARD, Nuptial Dialogues. Pt. ii, l. 76. (1710)

You breed of the cow's tail, you grow backward.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 361. (1721)

"Spoken to boys who do not improve at school."

Grew?—if she did, it's like the cow's tail, downwards.

GERALD GRIFFIN, The Collegians. Ch. 12. (1829)

The cow may want her own tail yet. You may want my kindness hereafter, though you deny me yours now.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 321. (1721)

There are several other proverbs about the cow's tail. The French say, "D'une vache perdue c'est quelque chose de recouvrer la queue" (Of a lost cow it is something to recover the tail), and "Il ne faut qu'une queue de vache pour atteindre le ciel, mais il fut qu'elle soit bien longue" (Only one cow's tail is needed to reach the sky, but it must be a very long one). "A cow doesn't know what her tail is worth till she's lost it" will be found under WORTH.

<sup>6</sup> A collier's cow and an ale-wife's sow are always well fed.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 119. (1678)

<sup>7</sup> An heard of bulles, whom kindly rage doth sting,

Doe for the milky mothers want complaine.

SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto viii, st. 11. (1590)

As when the long-ear'd milky mothers wait
At some sick miser's triple-bolted gate.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. ii, l. 247. (1728)

I am she, O most bucolic juvenal, under whose charge are placed the milky mothers of the herd.

WALTER SCOTT, The Monastery. Ch. 28. (1825)

<sup>8</sup> Milk the cow that is near. Why pursue the one that runs away? (τὰν παρειόσαν ἀμελεγε-τι τὸν φεύγοντα διώκεις;)

THEOCRITUS, Idylls. No. xi, l. 75. (c. 270 B. C.)

Milk the standing cowe. Why follow you the flying?

FRANCIS BACON, Promus. No. 553. (c. 1594)

The proverb is a country-proverb, but significative, Milk the cow that standeth still; why follow you her that flyeth away?

UNKNOWN, Gesta Grayorum, p. 38. (1688)

<sup>9</sup> It is comenly sayd: many a good kowe bryngeth forthe a sory calfe.

ROBERT WHITINTON, Vulgaria, p. 72. (1520)

Many a good coowe hath an euill caulfe.

I speak this doughter in thy mothers behalfe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

The Germans say, "Manche gute Kuh hat ein übel Kalb."

Thou art not the first good cow hast had an ill calf.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Eastward Hoe. Act iv, sc. 1. (1605)

Good wombs have borne bad sons.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, i, 2, 120. (1611)
Many a good cow hath but a bad calf, ἀνδρῶν ἡρώων τέκνα πῆματα. Heroum filii noxii. . .
Men famous for learning, virtue, valour, success, have for the most part either left behind them no children, or such as that it had been more for their honour and the interest of humane affairs, that they had died childless.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 74. (1670)

ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 404.

(1681) FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 3337. (1732)

An ill cow may have a good calf. Bad people may have good children.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 7. (1721)
There'll come a good cock out of a ragged bag.

BURNE, Shropshire Folk-lore, p. 590. (1883)

A good cock may come out of a bad bag.

BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 3. (1917)

1
Hit nis noht for the calf that kow louweth,
Ac hit is for the grene gras that in the medewe grouweth.

THOMAS WRIGHT, ed., Political Songs, p. 332.
(c. 1330)

Cowe lacking her Caulf, leaueth lowing within three or four daies at the farthest.

THOMAS WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique, p.
77. (1553)

A lowing cow soon forgets her calf.

MRS. CHAMBERLAIN, *West Worcestershire
Words*, p. 39. (1882)

"A bletherin' coo soon forgets her calf," meaning that excessive grief does not last long.

S. O. ADDY, Household Tales, p. 142. (1895)

The kind cow kicks the weaning calf.

ANNE PARISH, Mr. Despondency's Daughter, p. 237. (1938) Quoted as a proverb.

COWARD AND COWARDICE

See also Timidity

2
No exhortation strengthens the cowardly by nature. (τοὺς φύσει δειλοὺς οὐδεμία παραίνεσις ρώννυσιν.)

AESOP, Fables: The Hind. (c. 570 B.C.) The hind says to the stag, "Father, you were born greater and swifter than the dogs, and have immense horns with which to defend yourself. Why then do you fear them?"
"That is true, my child," the stag answered,
"but somehow I have always known that when I hear the bark of a dog I must run away."

3
He threw away his shield. (ἀπέβαλεν τὴν δορὶδα.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Wasps, l. 23. (422 B.C.) A similar proverb is "leaving the ranks" (λείπειν τὴν ταξίν).

4
The mother of the coward does not worry about him.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 110.
(1817) She has no need to, since he is never in danger.

5
For anything I know, I am an arrant coward.
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Little French Lawyer. Act ii, l. 2. (1619)

6
Coward. One who in a perilous emergency thinks with his legs.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary (1906)

7
"Unhardy is unsely," thus men sayth.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Reeve's Tale,

l. 290. (c. 1386) Cowardly is unlucky. THE BRAVE HAVE LUCK, see under COURAGE.

8
To know what is right and not do it is the worst cowardice.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. ii, ch. 24. (c. 500 B.C.)

9
What avails a big body if a man is a coward?
(τί γὰρ δεῖ δειλὸν ὄντ' εὐσωματεῖν;)

EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 766. (c. 430 B.C.)

10
God Almighty hates a quitter.

GENERAL SAMUEL FESSENDEN, of Connecticut, at Republican National Convention, St.
Louis, June, 1896, referring to Joseph Manley. See ROBINSON, Life of T. B. Reed.

The blues of mental and physical wear and tear are not as devastating as the yellows of the quit-ter.

JAMES J. WALKER, Interview, 20 Sept., 1931

11
Cowards are made to be trampled on, unless their Wit cover them.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1195. (1732)

Cowardice is afraid to be known or seen.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1197.

12
It is a base cowardliness . . . to thinke of running away.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Recollection of Treatises,
p. 1011. (1614)

Some have been thought brave because they were afraid to run away.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4214. (1732)

There is no such depth of poltroonery as that of the man who does not dare to run.

BENJAMIN TUCKER, Instead of a Book. (1893)

But there is nothing like flight: it is easy and speedy, and more a courage than a cowardice.

M. F. TUPPER, My Life as Author, p. 92. (1836)

The Irish say, "It is better to be a coward for a minute than dead for the rest of your life"; the Jamaicans. "Coward may keep sound bone."

HE WHO FIGHTS AND RUNS AWAY, see under FIGHT-ING.

13
The color of the coward changeth ever to another hue. (τοῦ μὲν γὰρ τε κακοῦ τρέπεται χρῶς ἀλλυθὺς ἀλλῇ.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xiii, l. 279. (c. 850 B.C.)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ii, 89, with the Latin, "Ignavi vertitur color."

From his blank visage flees the coward blood.

POPE, tr., Odyssey. Bk. xviii, l. 88. (1725)

1 A cowardly dog when facing wolves. (Canis ignavus adversum lupos.)

HORACE, Epodes. No. vi, l. 2. (c. 20 B. C.)

2 A coward is much more exposed to quarrels than a man of spirit.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to James Monroe, 1785.

3 An earthly Coward is an odious Name,
A Ghostly Coward an eternal Shame.

RISHOP THOMAS KEN, Edmund. (c. 1700)

4 There are few cowards who always realize the full extent of their fears. (Il n'y a guère de poltrons qui connaissent toujours toute leur peur.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 370. (1665)

5 More cowardly than hares. (δειλότεροι δὲ τῶν λαγῶν.)

LUCIAN, Piscator. Sec. 34. (c. A. D. 180) The hare has always been the symbol of timidity. Posidippus has, ἐστὶν λαγῶς (He is a hare—a coward). In fact, "Coward" was an old appellation of the hare. CAXTON, in Reynart the Fox, refers to "Cuwaert the hare," and in the Huntynge of the Hare, in the Book of St. Albans, is the line, "La cowarde ou la court cove" (The coward with the short tail).

A sheep's courage. (Courage de brebis.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 6. (1534)

There is no coward upon earth, I see,
Who cannot find a bigger coward than he.
(Il n'est, je le vois bien, si poltron sur la terre Qui ne puisse trouver un plus poltron que soi.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Lièvre et les Grenouilles. Bk. ii, fab. 14. (1668) The hares, running to the pond to drown themselves because they are frightened of everything, terrify the frogs, who jump hastily into the water.

6 Euphues is content to bee crauen and crye creak, though Curio be olde huddle and twang.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 106 (1579)

7 Euer wylle a coward shewe no mercy.

SIR THOMAS MALORY, Le Morte Darthur. Bk. xviii, ch. 24. (1485)

I have often heard it said that cowardice is the mother of cruelty. (J'ay souvent ouï dire que la couardise est mère de la cruauté.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 27. (1580)

Cruelty ever proceeds . . . from a cowardly heart.

SIR JOHN HARINGTON, tr., Orlando Furioso. Bk. xxxvi. Notes. (1591)

Cowardize is the mother of cruelty.

KING JAMES I OF ENGLAND. (c. 1610) See SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Crumms from King James's Table. No. 70.

Cruell people are fearfull.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 36. (1616)

Cowards are cruel.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. i, fab. i, l. 33. (1727)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1194. (1732)

Like all cowards, show a tendency to be cruel.

CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Shirley. Ch. 21. (1727)

The proverb was right, cruelty was coupled with cowardice.

R. L. STEVENSON, The Wrecker. Ch. 22. (1891)

8 A good man is never in daunger but when he is in the daunger of a coward.

SIR THOMAS MALORY, Le Morte Darthur. Bk. xix, ch. 4. (1485)

If he is a coward he is a murderer.

WILLIAM COVELL, Polimanteia, sig. N1. (1595)

9 He will no ly quhair he is slaine,
That douttis befoir he dies.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERIE, The Cherrie and the Slae, l. 24. (c. 1580)

He will not lye where he's slain. Spoken of timorous people, as if their corpse would flee from the place where they should be kill'd.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 135. (1721)

10 To fazarts [cowards], hard hazarts
Is deid or they cum thair.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERIE, The Cherrie and the Slae, l. 377. (c. 1580) KELLY (Scottish Proverbs, (332) cites this saying and explains, "Cowardly people are almost kill'd at the sight of danger."

Cowards die many times before their deaths;
The valiant never taste of death but once.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, ii, 2, 32. (1601)

A hundred times in life a coward dies.

JOHN MARSTON, The Insatiate Countess. (1613)

Cowards may fear to die, but courage stout,
Rather than live in snuff, will be put out.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, On the Snuff of a Candle. Written the night before his death, 29 Oct., 1618. See BAYLEY, Life of Raleigh, p. 157

11 The coward blames his weapon.

P. PERCIVAL, Tamil Proverbs. No. 690. (1842)

COURAGE NEVER WANTS WEAPONS, see COURAGE.

12 The coward's flesh creeps. (τοῦ κακοῦ τρέπεται χόως.)

PLUTARCH, (c. A. D. 100) The ascription is by Erasmus. There are a number of Greek proverbial phrases for cowardice: "White-livered" (λευκῆπαρτος); "Doe-hearted" (ἐλάφειος); "As cowardly as Pisander, or as Epeius" (SUIDAS, vi, 37); "As cowardly as a Rhegian" (ZENOBIUS, v, 83).

13 Better it were not to live than to live a coward.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, Instruction to His Son. Sec. iv. (1616)

14 He who can be coerced knows not how to die.
(Cui qui potest nescit mori.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 426. (c. A. D. 60)

The coward is foiled by his faint heart. (Piger ipse sibi opstat.)

SENECA, Ad Lucillum. Epis. xciv, sec. 28. (a. A. D. 64)

1 I know them to be as true-bred cowards as ever turned back.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, i, 2, 202. (1597) See also under DISCRETION.

A coward, a most devout coward, religious in it.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, iii, 4, 427. (1599)

2 So cowards fight when they can fly no further.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, i, 4, 40. (1591)

A coward's fear can make a coward valiant.

OWEN FELTHAM, Resolves: Of Cowardice. (1623) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 58. (1732)

Despaire takes heart, when ther's no hope to speed:

The Coward then takes Armes, and do's the deed.

ROBERT HERRICK, Fearse Gets Force. (1648)

Make a coward fight and he will kill the devil.

UNKNOWN, Help to Discourse, p. 151. (1669)

Put a coward to his metal, and he'll fight the Deel.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 281. (1721)

Courage is often caused by fear.

GURNEY BENHAM, Proverbs. No. 7496. (1907)

Quoting a French proverb, "Le courage est souvent un effet de la peur."

3 He was a coward to the strong:

He was a tyrant to the weak.

SHELLEY, Rosalind and Helen, l. 254. (1818)

4 It is the misfortune of worthy people that they are cowards. (Un des plus grands malheurs des honnêtes gens c'est qu'ils sont des lâches.)

VOLTAIRE. (c. 1756) As quoted by EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

5 All men would be cowards if they durst.

JOHN WILMOT, EARL OF ROCHESTER, A Satire Against Mankind, l. 157. (c. 1670) Quoted by SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets, i, 224.

Many would be Cowards, if they had Courage enough.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3366. (1732)

That all men would be cowards if they dare, Some men we know have courage to declare.

GEORGE CRABBE, Tales in Verse. Tale iii, l. 11. (1812)

6 Among alle cowardisis, cowardise of riches is the moste.

JOHN WYCLIF, Sermons, i, 372. (c. 1380)

7 It is folly for men who desire to win a battle to turn their backs and offer to the enemy the side of their body that is without eyes or hands or weapons; and anyone who wishes to live would be a fool if he tried to run away, when he knows that it is the victors who save their lives. (οὐ μὲν νικῶντες σώζονται.)

XENOPHON, Cyropaedia. Bk. iii, ch. iii, sec. 45. (c. 370 B. C.)

It is not seemly to turn towards the enemy the defenseless and blind part of his body. (Nudum et caecum corpus ad hostis vortere.)

SALLUST, Bellum Iugurthinum. Ch. 107. (c. 40 B. C.)

The soldiers saw that those who ran away were either captured or slain, while the bravest were the safest. (Milites . . . videre fugientis capi aut occidi, fortissimum quemque tutissimum.)

SALLUST, Bellum Iugurthinum. Ch. 87.

Cowards run the greatest Danger of any Man in a Battle.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1196. (1732)

CRADLE

8 Foul in the cradle, proveth fair in the saddle.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains Concerning Britain (1870), p. 322. (1605)

Fair in the cradle and foul in the saddle.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 83. (1639)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 87. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6119. (1732)

Shod i' the cradle, an' barefoot on the stibble.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 255. (1678)

9 Empty is the cradle, Baby's gone.

HARRY KENNEDY, "Cradle's Empty, Baby's Gone." (1880)

The cradle empty blesses us more than the cradle full.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit, p. 88. (1887)

10 Cradle of American liberty.

JAMES OTIS, referring to Faneuil Hall, Boston. (c. 1778) See WINSOR, Memorial History of Boston, ii, 524.

Whose hall has been called "the cradle of the Revolution."

WILLIAM TUDOR, Letters on the Eastern States, p. 307. (1820)

Faneuil Hall, the "cradle of liberty."

Niles' Register. Vol. xlv, p. 223/2. (1833)

I shall defer my visit to Faneuil Hall, the cradle of American liberty, until its doors shall fly open upon golden hinges to lovers of Union as well as lovers of liberty.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Letter, April, 1851, in reply to an invitation to speak in Boston extended by his friends, who reported, however, that they had been refused the use of Faneuil Hall by the mayor and aldermen. This was just after Massachusetts had been exasperated by Webster's 7th of March speech, supporting the fugitive slave bill.

11 To rock the cradle in spectacles.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 69. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5220. (1732)

If you rock the cradle empty, Then you'll have babies plenty.

WILLIAM HENDERSON, Notes on the Folk Lore of the Northern Counties, p. 19. (1879)

THE HAND THAT ROCKS THE CRADLE, see under HAND.

12 Cast not thy cradle over thy head.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 347. (1678)

CRAFT

See also CUNNING

- <sup>1</sup> The lyf so short, the craft so longe to lerne.
CHAUCER, The Parlement of Foules, l. 1. (1382)
"Craft" in the sense of skill. See under ART.
Craft is al, who-so that do it can.
CHAUCER, The Marchantes Tale, l. 772. (c. 1388)
No man is his craft's master the first day.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 35. (1639)
All the craft is in the catching.
JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina, p. 163. (1631)
All the craft is not in the catching (as the proverb says) but the better half at least is being caught.
SAMUEL BUTLER, Remains, ii, 279. (c. 1675)
I told them the craft was in catching it.
WILLIAM DAMPIER, Voyages, ii, ii, 37. (1699)
- <sup>2</sup> A crafty Fellow never has any Peace.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 59. (1732)
Craft borders upon Knavery; Wisdom never uses nor wants it.
Craft counting all things, brings nothing Home.
Craft must have Clothes, but Truth loves to go naked.
Crafty Men deal in Generals.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 1198-1202. (1732)
- <sup>3</sup> There is gode craftre in dawbyng [flattering].
GARDNER, ed., Paston Letters, i, 269. (1454)
There is craft in daubing: I can look in a man's face and pick his purse.
HAZLITT, ed., Old Playe, i, 159: Hyckescorner. (c. 1530) CAMDEN, Remains, p. 332. (1605)
There is more craft in daubing than in throwing dirt on the wall.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 120. (1678)
- <sup>4</sup> Craft against craft, makes no living.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 889. (1640)
- <sup>5</sup> That Crooked Wisdom, which is called Craft.
JOHN HOBBS, Leviathan, i, viii, 34. (1651)
- <sup>6</sup> He taketh the wise in their own craftiness.
(Apprehendit sapientes in astutia eorum.)
Old Testament: Job, v, 13. (c. 350 B.C.)
To a crafty man, a crafty and a half.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 797. (1640) The French say, "A menteur, menteur et demi" (To a liar, a liar and a half), or "A trompeur [cheat], trompeur et demi," or "A fripon [rogue], fripon et demi."
PRACTICE CRAFT WITH THE CRAFTY, see under RETRIBUTION.
- <sup>7</sup> Clever people spend their whole lives pretending to despise craft, in order to avail themselves of it on some great occasion. (Les plus habiles affectent toute leur vie de blâmer les finesses, pour s'en servir en quelque grande occasion.)
LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 124. (1665)
- <sup>8</sup> We accompt them as wise that keepe their owne lands with credite, as you those that get others liuings by craft.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 196 (1579)

<sup>9</sup> Craft lies in clouted shoone.

UNKNOWN, Roxburghe Ballads, ii, 574. (c. 1600)
I heare some say, and some believe it too,
That craft is found ev'n in the clouted shoo.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Epigrams. Bk. i, No. 11. (1618) Patched shoe: poverty, rusticity.

CRAZY, see MAD

CREAM

<sup>10</sup> A new class finds itself at the top, as certainly as cream rises in a bowl of milk.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Manners. (1841)
Receiving the cream of society, but never returning visits.

G. A. SALA, The Seven Sons of Mammon, i, iv, 65. (1862) "Crème de la crème" is the French phrase.

You'd be a bit astray if you looked for her amongst the skim de la skim.

J. J. CONNINGTON, No Past is Dead, p. 128. (1942)

<sup>11</sup> Gentlemen, which be the cream of the common.

RICHARD MULCASTER, Positions. Ch. 39. (1581)
I say of our Melancholy man, he is the cream of humane adversity.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy, i, iv, 1. (1621)

The cream o' the market.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The City-Madame. Act i, sc. 1. (1632) The French say, "La crème des honnêtes gens" (The best of honest people).

<sup>12</sup> That's the cream of the jest.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 69. (1678)

The Cream of the Jest.

JAMES BRANCH CABELL, Title of novel. (1917)

CREDIT

See also DEBT

<sup>13</sup> The wine belongs to the master, but the butler gets the credit.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Kamma, fo. 92b. (c. 450)

The soldiers do the fighting, but the generals get the credit.

Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 53b.

<sup>14</sup> He who sells on credit, makes many sales, but loses his friends, and his money never has again. (Chi vende a credenza, spaccia assai: | Perde l' amico, e 'l danaro non ha mai.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes p. 215. (1856) An Italian proverb.

Credit cuts off customers.

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 254. (1875)

<sup>1</sup>
If you have cash today, you have credit to-morrow.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. (c. 500 B. C.) See TEHYI HSIEH, Confucius Said It First, p. 86.

Just as much cash as a man has in his chest, so much credit he has. (Quantum quisque sua nummorum servat in arca, | tantum habet et fidei.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 143. (c. A. D. 120)

A poor man has no credit. (Nulla fides inopi.)

AUSONIUS, Epigrams. No. 23. (c. A. D. 370)

Take the cash and let the credit go.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, tr., Omar Khayyám. St. 13. (1859)

No man's credit is as good as his money.

E. W. HOWE, Sinner Sermons. (1926) The Germans, however, say, "Kredit ist besser, als bar Geld" (Credit is better than cash).

<sup>2</sup>
Who buyeth deere, and taketh of credit, consumeth the body, and looseth the seede. (Chi compra caro e toglie á credenza, consum'il corpo, e perde la semenza.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 28. (1578)

<sup>3</sup>
Private credit is wealth: public honour is security. The feather that adorns the royal bird supports his flight. Strip him of his plumage, and you fix him to the earth.

JUNIUS, Letters. No. 42, 30 Jan., 1771.

<sup>4</sup>
To keep one's credit, one must conceal one's losses. (Pour sauver son crédit, il faut cacher sa perte.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. xii, fab. 7. (1694)

<sup>5</sup>
If a good face is a letter of recommendation, a good heart is a letter of credit.

LORD LYTTON, What Will He Do with It? Bk. ii, ch. 11. (1858) See also under APPEARANCE.

Every innocent man has in his countenance a promise to pay, and hence credit.

R. W. EMERSON, Social Aims. (1875)

<sup>6</sup>
Credit is undone in whispers. The tradesman's wound is received from one who is more private and more cruel than the ruffian with the lantern and dagger.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. 9 Nov., 1711.

<sup>7</sup>
He that has lost his credit, what has he left to live on? (Fidem qui perdit quo rem servat relicuam?)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 196. (c. 43 B. C.) Quoted by FRANCIS BACON, Ornamenta Rationalia. No. 11. "Fides" is sometimes rendered "faith," but "credit" seems the better word.

He who loses his credit, has nothing left to lose (Fidem qui perdit nihil pote ultra perdere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 209. (c. 43 B. C.)

Yf a man haue lost his credence, he is halfe undon. WILLIAM HORMAN, Vulgaria, fo. 77. (1519)

He that has crack'd his credit is half hang'd.

ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart), viii, 154. (1590)

To lose a mans credit is the greatest losse.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 87. (1639)

He that hath lost his credit, is dead to the world.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 359. (1640) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2142. (1732)

Credit lost is like a Venice-glass broken.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1670)

He found the truth of the proverb, "that credit lost is like a Venice glass broken—it can't be mended again."

MARIA EDGEWORTH, The Parent's Assistant, p. 411. (1796) Sometimes quoted as a jingle, "Credit, like a looking-glass. Broken once, is gone, alas!"

<sup>8</sup>
No man ever lost his credit, but he who had it not.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1670)

<sup>9</sup>
It did him credit in the presence of his lady.

FRANCES SHERIDAN, Memoirs of Miss Sidney Bidulph, ii, 172. (1761)

God grant that I may do credit to it.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, The Children of the New Forest. Ch. 21. (1847)

Your grandson should . . . do you credit.

LORD LYTTON, My Novel. Bk. iv, ch. 13. (1853)

CREDULITY

<sup>10</sup>
The characteristic of the present age is craving credulity.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, Oxford. 25 Nov. 1864.

<sup>11</sup>
There are a set of heads that can credit the relations of Mariners.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 21. (1643) See also under TRAVEL.

<sup>12</sup>
I had rather wrong my selfe by credulity than others by unjust censures.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Meditations and Vowes. Ch. 1, sec. 82. (1605)

Better be too credulous than too skeptical.

H. B. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 640. (1937)

<sup>13</sup>
Credulity is not a crime.

THOMAS PAINE, Age of Reason. Ch. 1. (1794)

<sup>14</sup>
The incredulous are the most credulous. They believe the miracles of Vespasian that they may not believe those of Moses. (Incrédules les plus crédules. Ils croient les miracles de Vespasien, pour ne pas croire ceux de Moïse.)

BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. ii, Art. xviii, No. 120. (c. 1660)

<sup>15</sup>
He will never do well who easily believes (Nunquam autem recte faciet, qui cito credit.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 43. (c. A. D. 60)

He who easily believes is easily deceived. (Qui facilis credit, facilis quoque fallitur idem.)

PALINGENTIUS, Zodiacus Vitae, iii, 149. (1537)

1
Credulity the child of good-nature.
SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison,
iv, 18. (1754)

2
That only disadvantage of honest hearts,
credulity.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk. ii. (c. 1580)
The credulity which comes from the heart does no harm to the intellect. (La crédulité qui vient du cœur ne fait aucun mal à l'esprit.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 160. (1810)

CREED

3
Men's . . . creeds [are] a disease of the intellect.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Self-Reliance. (1841)

4
I love him not, nor fear him; there's my creed.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, ii, 2, 51. (1612)

My creed is, he is safe that does his best.

WILLIAM COWPER, Hope, l. 395. (1781)

5
The dust of creeds outworn.

SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act i, l. 697.

Creeds for the credulous; but not for me.

FRANK DEMPSTER SHERMAN, The Goal. (1897)

CRICHTON

6
The admirable Crichton did . . . present himself.

SIR THOMAS URQUHART, The Discoverie of a Most Exquisite Jewell, p. 112. (1652) The first appearance of the phrase "admirable
Crichton," although in JOHNSTONE'S Heroes Scoti (1603) Crichton had been referred to as "admirabilis." The person in question was James Crichton of Clunie, "a Scottish prodigy of intellectual and knightly accomplishments. Now used allusively for any man who excels in all kinds of studies and pursuits."—
O.E.D. ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clickés, defines a Crichton as "a particularly fine all-rounder," and quotes, "Julius Caesar, Michelangelo, and Napoleon are the admirable Crichtons, par excellence, of history."

[Windham] was the admirable Crichton of his age and country.

THOMAS AMYOT, Some Account of the Life of William Windham, i, 139. (1812)

The Admirable Crichton.

J. M. BARRIE. Title of play, where the butler turns out to be the "fine all-rounder." (1902)

CRIME

7
You but increase your fear if you cloak crime with crime. (Quod metuis cumulas, si velas crimine crimen.)

CATO (?), Dicta Catonis. (c. 175 B.C.) See
Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 626.

Crime must be safeguarded by crime. (Scelera enim sceleribus tuenda sunt.)

SENECA, De Clementia. Bk. i, ch. 13, sec. 2. (c.
A.D. 55)

It is unlawful to overcome crime by crime.
(Nunquam scelus scelere vincendum est.)

SENECA, De Moribus. Sec. 139. (c. A.D. 55)

Crime must be concealed by crime. (Scelere velandum est scelus.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 721. (c. A.D. 60)

What man have you seen who is contented with one crime only? (Quisnam hominum est quem tu contentum videris uno flagitio?)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 243. (c. A.D. 120)

One crime leads to another. (Noxa item noxam parit.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. viii, No. 99.
(1523)

No one lives [who is] without crime. (Nemo sine crimine vivit.)

CATO, Dicta Catonis. Bk. i, No. 5. (c. 175 B.C.)

No man may lyve withoute cryme.

UNKNOWN, Gesta Romanorum. Tale 22. (c. 1440)

8
His own crime besets each man. (Suum quemque scelus agitat.)

CICERO, Pro Roscio Amerino. Ch. 24, sec. 67
(80 B.C.)

9
A man may thrive on crime, but not for long. (Felix criminibus non erit hoc diu.)

CLEOBULUS, Maxim. (c. 550 B.C.) See AU-
SONIUS, Septem Sapientum Sententiae, l. 17.

Cleobulus was one of the Seven Wise Men of Greece.

10
It is the crime which makes the shame, and not the scaffold. (C'est le crime qui fait la honte, et non pas l'échafaud.)

CORNEILLE, Comte d'Essex. Act iv, sc. 3. (c.
1650) Echoed by VOLTAIRE, Artemire, act iv (1720), "The shame is in the crime, not in the punishment"; and quoted by Charlotte Corday in a letter to her father, after she had killed Marat.

11
Commit a crime, and the earth is made of glass. Commit a crime, and it seems as if a coat of snow fell on the ground, such as reveals in the woods the track of every partridge and fox and squirrel and mole. . . . Some damning circumstance always transpires.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation. (1841)

Wherever a man commits a crime, God finds a witness. . . . Every secret crime has its reporter.

EMERSON, Essays: Natural Religion. (c. 1875)

To say that every crime brings its own punishment is by way of being a platitude, and yet in my opinion nothing can be truer.

AGATHA CHRISTIE, The Tuesday Club Murders.
Ch. 9. (1933)

Crime never pays, not even life insurance benefits.

ZELDA POPKIN, No Crime for a Lady, p. 167.
(1942)

12
Crimes, like virtues, are their own rewards.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, The Inconstant. Act iv, sc.
2. (1702)

1 He that carries a small Crime easily, will carry it on when it comes to be an Ox.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758

2 The Number of the Malefactors, authorizes not the Crime.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4687. (1732)

3 Every crime destroys more Edens than our own.

HAWTHORNE, The Marble Faun. Bk. i, ch. 23. (1860)

4 The greatest crime in the eyes of the world is to endeavor to instruct or amend it.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Commonplaces. No. 43. (1821)

5 Mankind rushes on through every crime. (Gens humana ruit per vetitum nefas.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 3, l. 25. (23 B. C.)

If you wish to be anybody nowadays, you must dare some crime that merits banishment or imprisonment. (Aude aliquid brevisius Gyaris et carcere dignum, | si vis esse aliquid.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. i, l. 73. (c. A. D. 120)

Gyara was a small island in the Aegean, on which criminals were confined.

With a differing fate, men commit the same crimes: one man gets a cross as a reward of villainy, another a crown. (Committunt eadem diverso crimina fato: | ille crucem sceleris pretium tulit, hic diadema.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 104.

6 He who within his breast meditates a crime has all the guilt of the deed. (Nam scelus intra se tacitum qui cogitat ullum, | facti crimen habet.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 209. (c. A. D. 120)

The guilty is he who meditates a crime; the punishment is his who lays the plot. (Il reo | D'un delitto è chi'l pensa: a chi l' ordisce | La pena spetta.)

ALFIERI, Antigone. Act ii, sc. 2. (1794) There is a law proverb, "Pari sorte scelus et sceleris voluntas" (Crime and intention of crime are equal).

7 We easily forget crimes that are known only to ourselves. (Nous oublions aisément nos fautes lorsqu'elles ne sont sues que de nous.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 196. (1665)

Those who are incapable of great crime do not readily suspect it in others. (Ceux qui sont incapables de commettre de grands crimes n'en soupçonnent pas facilement les autres.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 611.

8 No crime is founded upon reason. (Nullum scelus rationem habet.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxviii, sec. 28. (c. 10 B. C.)

9 Crime leveis those whom it pollutes. (Faci-nus, quos inquinat, aequat.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. v, l. 290. (c. A. D. 60)

10 Where crime is taught from early years, it becomes a part of nature. (Ars fit ubi a teneris crimen condiscitur annis.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. iv, l. 25. (c. 10 B. C.)

11 In flagrante delicto. Caught unmistakably in the crime—"in flagrant delight," as Mr. A. P. Herbert phrased it in Unholy Matrimony. The Latin original seems to have been flagrante delicto ("while the crime was blazing").

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

A proverbial phrase which Partridge thinks has become banal. The Justinian Code, ix, 13, 1 (A. D. 529), has, "Adhuc flagranti crimine comprehensi," i. e. in the very act, from which, perhaps, the shorter phrase derives.

12 If you did not punish crimes you would help wickedness. (Nisi vindices delicta, improbitatem adiuvēs.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 439. (c. 43 B. C.)

Nowhere is crime more easily hidden than in a crowd. (Nusquam facilius culpa quam in turba latet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 480.

He who helps the guilty shares the crime. (Socius fit culpae qui nocentem sublevat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 677.

RECEIVER AS BAD AS THE THIEF, see under THIEF.

13 Prosperous and successful crime goes by the name of virtue. (Prosperum ac felix scelus | virtus vocatur.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 251. (c. A. D. 60)

Quoted by LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: De l'Homme. The Germans say, "Ein Verbrechen mit glücklichem Erfolg heisst Tugend" (A crime with happy results is virtue).

Success makes some crimes honorable. (Honesta quaedam scelera successus facit.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 598. (c. A. D. 60)

Successful crimes alone are justified.

JOHN DRYDEN, The Medall, l. 208. (1682)

14 No crime has been without a precedent. (Nul-lum caruit exemplo nefas.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 554. (c. A. D. 60)

He who profits by a crime commits it. (Cui prodest scelus is fecit.)

SENECA, Medea, l. 500. (c. A. D. 60)

Every man enjoys his own crimes. (Omnibus crimen suum voluptati est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xcvi, sec. 11. (a. A. D. 65)

15 Crimes may be safe [from discovery], but cannot be secure [from anxiety]. (Tuta scelera esse possunt: securae esse non pos-sunt.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xcvi, sec. 13. (c. A. D. 65)

Tremble, thou wretch,

That hast within thee undivulged crimes.

Unwhipp'd of justice.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iii, 2, 52. (1605)

CRIPPLE

<sup>1</sup> It is ful hard to halten unespyed
Bifore a crepul, for he can the craft.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, Bk. iv, l. 1457, (c. 1380) It is hard to deceive an expert. It is harde haltyng before a creepke, ye wot.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546) It had beene in vaine for them to have haulted before a creepke.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 207. (1576) Thou must halt cunningly if thou beguile a cripple.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 318. (1580)

Wee have a proverbe—it is ill haultyng before a creepke.

BARNABY RICH, Farewell to the Militarie Profession. (Sh. Soc), p. 44. (1581) DAY, The English Secretorie. Ch. 2. (1586) JONSON, New Inn. Act iii, sc. 1. (1630)

He must halt cunningly that will deceive a cripple.

JOHN LYLY, Gallathea. Act iv, sc. 1. (1592) A cripple soon can find a halt.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets to Sundry Notes of Music. No. 4, l. 10. (1599)

Halt not before the lame.

URQUHART, tr., Rabelais. Bk. i, ch. 20. (1653) Hard it is to halt before a cripple, and dissemble before King Richard.

THOMAS FULLER, The Church-History of Britain. Bk. iv, ch. 4. (1655) Referring to the Duke of Buckingham's attempt to hide his feelings from the wily King. See TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 72.

Halt not before a Cripple.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1784. (1732) In the house of a Moor do not speak Arabic. ('En casa del Moro no hables algarabia.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 20. (1814) A Spanish proverb, also cited by TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 50. (1853) In other words, don't expose your ignorance before an expert. The French say, "Il ne faut parler Latin devant les cordeliers" (You should not speak Latin before Franciscan friars).

CRISIS

<sup>2</sup> The crisis of his sickness was past.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, p. 80. (1548) Then shall the sick, . . . by the virtue and power of a happy Crisis, saile forth into the haven of health.

JAMES HART, Anatomie of Urines, i, 2, 21. (1625) With mortal crisis doth portend
My days to appropinquie an end.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto iii, l. 589. (1663)

<sup>3</sup> The affair has come to the reserves. (Res ad triarios rediit.)

LIVY, History. Bk. viii, ch. 8, sec. 11. (c. 10 B.C.) The triarii were the oldest and most experienced Roman soldiers, who formed the third rank from the front, and who were called upon only when the battle had reached a crisis. Napoleon had a counterpart of them in his Old Guard, which he used in the same way, and every general, of course, has his reserves to be used only when needed. "Up, guards, and at 'em," as Wellington denied he ever said. The proverb is cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 23. A similar Latin proverb is "Res in cardine est" (The affair is hanging on the hinge).

<sup>4</sup> Move the king. (κινεῖς λθον.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. vi, l. 18. (c. 270 B.C.) The last resort in the game.

<sup>5</sup> The crisis had not only cum itself, but it had brought all its relations.

ARTEMUS WARD, The Draft in Baldinsville. (1862)

<sup>6</sup> The crisis of yesterday is the joke of tomorrow.

H. G. WELLS, You Can't Be too Careful, p. 165. (1942)

CRITIC

I—Critic: Definitions

<sup>7</sup> All enmity, all envy, they disclaim,
Disinterested thieves of our good name:
Cool, sober murderers of their neighbors' fame.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Modern Critics. (1817)

<sup>8</sup> Critics in general are venomous serpents that delight in hissing.

W. B. DANIEL, Rural Sports. (1801)

<sup>9</sup> The good critic is he who relates the adventures of his soul among masterpieces. (Le bon critique est celui qui raconte les aventures se son âme au milieu des chefs-d'œuvre.)

ANATOLE FRANCE (JACQUES THIBAUT), La Vie Littéraire: Preface. (1883) Sainte-Beuve's definition was, "A critic is a man whose watch is five minutes ahead of other people's." See GIESE, Sainte-Beuve.

<sup>10</sup> A critic is a man who expects miracles.

JAMES HUNEKER, Iconoclasts, p. 139. (1905) Channing Pollock, while dramatic critic of The Green Book (1918) invented another definition: "A critic is a legless man who teaches running."

<sup>11</sup> Since we cannot equal it, let us avenge ourselves by abusing it. (Puisque nous ne le pouvons aveindre, vengeons nous à en mesdire.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 7. (1595)

Reviewers, with some rare exceptions, are a most stupid and malignant race. As a bankrupt thief turns thief-taker in despair, so an unsuccessful author turns critic.

P. B. SHELLEY, Adonais: Preface. (1821) Shelley cancelled this passage before publication.

The severest critics are always those who have either never attempted, or who have failed in, original composition.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 270. (1821)

He who would write and can't write, can surely review.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, 1.1785. (1848)

You know who the critics are? The men who have failed in Literature and Art.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Lothair. Ch. 35. (1870)

Good critic—bad worker.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 439. (1938) A Korean proverb.

Burton was a firm believer in the adage "those who can't, criticize."

MARION RANDOLPH, Grim Grow the Lilacs, p. 18. (1941)

1 Critics, as they are birds of prey, have ever a natural inclination to carrion.

ALEXANDER POPE, Letter to William Wycherley, 26 Dec., 1704.

2 Critics are like brushers of noblemen's clothes.

SIR HENRY WOTTON, Reliquiae. (c. 1610)

Quoted by BACON, Apophthegms. No. 64. (1625) GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1148. (1640)

II—Critic: Apothegms

3 Critiques that spend their eyes to find a haire upon an egge.

LODOVICK BRYSKETT, A Discourse of Civil Life, p. 5. (1606)

4 A man must serve his time to ev'ry trade
Save censure—critics all are ready made.

LORD BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, l. 63. (1809)

5 There is no one who does not eat and drink, but few there are who can distinguish flavors.

CONFUCIUS. Quoted by TSE-TZŪ, The Doctrine of the Mean (Chungyung). Ch. iv, sec. 2. (c. 450 B.C.)

How many people have a good ear for literature but sing out of tune! (Que de gens, en littérature, ont l'oreille juste et chantent faux!)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 367. (1810)

6 Take heed of criticks: they bite, like fish, at anything, especially at bookes.

THOMAS DEKKER, Newes from Hell. (1606)

7 I would inscribe these volumes to . . . the most severe of critics, but—a perfect wife.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Sybil: Dedication. (1845)

My dearest friend and severest critic.

H. L. WILSON, Merton of the Movies. (1922)

8 Critic, spare thy vanity,
Nor show thy pompous parts,
To vex with odious subtlety
The cheerer of men's hearts.

R. W. EMERSON, Saadi. (1842)

9 The Stones that Critics hurl with Harsh Intent

A Man may use to build his Monument.

ARTHUR GUITERMAN, A Poet's Proverbs, p. 41. (1924)

10 The Dramatic Critic is asleep. The play does not interest him. He will give it thunder in the paper.

EUGENE FIELD, The Tribune Primer. (1882)

11 An acute and experienced critic of antiques.
(Subtilis veterum iudex et callidus.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 7, l. 101. (30 B.C.)

Critics in rust.

JOSEPH ADDISON, Essays: Ancient Medals. (1702)

12 No critic has ever settled anything.

JAMES HUNEKER, The Pathos of Distance, p. 281. (1913)

13 You may abuse a tragedy, though you cannot write one. You may scold a carpenter who has made you a bad table, though you cannot make a table. It is not your trade to make tables.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 25 June, 1763. "One doesn't have to be a cook to criticize the cooking."

Can't a critic give his opinion of an omelette without being asked to lay an egg?

CLAYTON RAWSON, No Coffin for the Corpse, p. 250. (1942)

14 Our critic absolves the crow and passes judgment on the pigeon. (Dat veniam corvis, vexat censura columbas.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 63. (c. A.D. 120)

15 Established fame is not enough;
Not all the new is wretched stuff.

The wise approve where'er they may;
The fools repeat what critics say.

KALIDASA, Malavika. (c. A.D. 450) Ryder, tr.

16 For critics I care the five hundred thousandth part of the tythe of a half-farthing.

CHARLES LAMB, Letter to Bernard Barton, 30 Aug., 1830.

17 You are over-anxious to appear a man with a nose. (Nasutus nimium cupis videri.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xii, No. 37. (A.D. 103)

"A man with a nose" was a critic. Martial uses the phrase several times.

18 Insects sting, not in malice, but because they want to live. It is the same with critics: they desire our blood, not our pain.

F. W. NIETZSCHE, Human All-too-Human. Ch. 2. (1878)

19 It's a bad business that of critic, for he is sure to gain the hatred of those he reproves, and nobody is made any better. (Le mauvais métier que celui de censeur; on ne gagne à l'exercer que la haine de ceux qu'on reprend, et on ne corrige personne.)

GUY PATIN, Letters. (c. 1660) Quoted by BLAND, Proverbs, i, 59.

1 Every good poet includes a critic, but the reverse will not hold.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, On Writing and Books. (1764)

2 Did some more sober Critic come abroad;
If wrong, I smil'd; if right, I kiss'd the rod.
POPE, Prologue to the Satires, l. 158. (1735)

3 A forward Critick often dupes us
With sham Quotations Peri Hupsous:
And if we have not read Longinus,
Will magisterially out-shine us.
SWIFT, On Poetry, l. 255. (1733)

4 The public is the only critic whose opinion is worth anything at all.

MARK TWAIN, A General Reply. (1870)

5 The first duty of an art critic is to hold his tongue at all times, and upon all subjects.

OSCAR WILDE, The English Renaissance of Art. (1882) Lecture in New York, Jan. 9.

CRITICISM

See also Censure

6 I read Glenarvon too by Caro Lamb—
God damn!

LORD BYRON, his comment on the novel in which Lady Caroline Lamb, in 1816, exposed the details of her passion for the poet.

7 You please nobody when you condemn everybody. (Ne nulli placeas, dum vis contemnere multos.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. ii, No. 29. (c. 175 B.C.)

Blame-all and praise-all are two blockheads.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

Blame where you must, be candid where you can,
And be each critic the Good-natured Man.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man: Epilogue. (1768)

Blame is safer than praise.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Compensation. (1841)

8 Another's word or deed ne'er criticise,
Lest others mock at you in selfsame wise. (Alterius dictum aut factum ne carperis umquam, | exemplo simili ne te derideat alter.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. iii, No. 7. (c. 175 B.C.)

9 He wreathed the rod of criticism with roses.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Miscellanies of Literature. (1796) Referring to Pierre Bayle.

10 Don't play the uncle with me. (Ne sis patruus mihi.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. iii, l. 88. (35 B.C.)
Don't criticize too severely, as uncles are apt to do with nephews. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iv, 39. A similar proverb is "To play or savor of an uncle" (Sapere patruus).

11 Criticism is a study by which men grow important and formidable at very small expense.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler, 9 June, 1759.

Criticism is above all a gift, an intuition, a matter of tact and flair; it cannot be taught or demonstrated—it is an art. (La critique . . . est surtout un don, un tact, un flair, une intuition, un instinct, et dans ce sens, elle ne s'enseigne pas et ne se démontre pas, elle est un art.)

HENRI AMIEL, Journal Intime, 19 Mai, 1878.

12 Blown about with every wind of criticism.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 1784.

13 A hundred hisses outweigh a thousand claps. The former come more directly from the heart.

CHARLES LAMB, Letter to William Wordsworth. 11 Dec., 1806.

14 There is more ado to interpret interpretations than to interpret things. (Il y a plus affaire à interpreter les interpretations, qu'à interpreter les choses.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 13. (1595)

15 To break one's jaw-tooth on a person. (Genuinum frangere in aliquo.)

PERSIUS, Satires. No. i, l. 115. (c. A.D. 58) To criticize severely. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, ii, 59, who gives the proverb as "To bite with the jaw-tooth" (Genuino mordere)

16 I much prefer a compliment, insincere or not, to sincere criticism. (Equidem pol vel falso tamen laudari multo malo.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 179. (c. 200 B.C.)

17 In every work regard the writer's end.

POPE, An Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 55. (1709) Some judge of authors' names, not works, and then Nor praise nor blame the writings, but the men.

POPE, An Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 212.

Willing to wound, and yet afraid to strike,
Just hint a fault, and hesitate dislike.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 203. (1733)

18 Criticism makes things worse when there is need of help. (Damnare est obiurgare cum auxilio est opus.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 147. (c. 43 B.C.)

19 If I find a hole in his coat, I will tell him my mind.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iii, 6, 89. (1599)

It's easie to pick a hole in another man's coat, if he be disposed.

JOHN CLARKE, Paraemologia, p. 80. (1639)

"Any little silly soul Easily can pick a hole." Every ambitious popular person would be ready to pick holes in their Coates.

MARCHAMONT NEEDHAM, Plea for King, p. 21. (1648)

Nor is it hard for Satan to pick some hole in the saint's coat.

WILLIAM GURNALL, The Christian in Compleat Armour, i, 85. (1655)

1 I am nothing, if not critical.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, ii, 1, 120. (1605)

What! art thou critical? Eschew that heart's disease.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Brough Bells. (1828)

It is much easier to be critical than to be correct.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 24 Jan., 1860.

2 Most men endure criticism with commendable fortitude, just as most criminals when under the drop conduct themselves with calmness. They bleed, but they bleed inwardly.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp. Ch. 7. (1863)

3 You do not get a man's most effective criticism until you provoke him. Severe truth is expressed with some bitterness.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 15 March, 1854.

4 One mustn't criticize other people on grounds where he can't stand perpendicular himself.

MARK TWAIN, A Connecticut Yankee, p. 260. (1889) See also under PRUDENCE.

5 Criticism carried to the height worthy of it, is a majestic office, perhaps an art, perhaps even a church.

WALT WHITMAN, Criticism. (c. 1870)

6 It is easier to criticize than to imitate. (μωμῆσται τις μάλλον ἢ μιμήσεται.)

ZEUXIS, Inscription, below the picture of an athlete which he had painted, and with which some one had found fault. (c.475 B. C.) See PLINY, Naturalis Historia, xxxv, 9, 62. Sometimes more freely rendered, "Criticism comes easier than craftsmanship." Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 346A.

It is a true say of olde, Facilius est destruere quam construere, We may quicker pull downe with one hande, than wee can easilie builde againe with both.

JOHN BRIDGES, A Defence of the Government Established in the Church of Englande, p. 518. (1587)

It is easier to pull down than build.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 88. (1670)

It is easier to pull down than build up.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2930. (1732) Criticism is easy, and art is difficult. (La critique est aisée, et l'art est difficile.)

DESTOUCHES, Le Glorieux. Act ii, sc. 5. (c.1730)

It is easy to criticize an author, but difficult to appreciate him. (Il est aisé de critiquer un auteur, mais il est difficile de l'apprécier.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 264. (1764)

When you hark to the voice of the Knocker.

As you list to his hammer fall,

Remember the fact that the knocking act Requires no brains at all.

UNKNOWN, The Quarrelsome Trio. (c. 1930)

CROOKEDNESS

7 The crook in the lot is the special trial appointed for every one.

THOMAS BOSTON, The Crook in the Lot, p. 14. (a. 1732)

I trust to bear even this crook in my lot with submission.

SCOTT, Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 12. (1818)

In every man's lot must be some crook, since this crooked world turned round.

W. D. BLACKMORE, Mary Anerley. Ch.11. (1880)

8 Crooked logs make straight fires.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Busche. (1611)

The French is, "Bûche tortue fait bon feu."

A crooked log makes a straight fire.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 48.

(1640) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1670)

Crooked logs make good fires.

THOMAS D'URFEY, Don Quixote. Pt. i, act i. sec. 2. (1694)

9 They are a perverse and crooked generation. (Generatio prava atque perversa.)

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xxxii, 5. (c. 700 B. C.)

Krokid of herte.

RICHARD ROLLE OF HAMPOLE, The Palter, xxxi, 14. (c. 1335)

All that I saw of any interest in me was crooked HUTCHINS HAPGOOD, Autobiography of a Thief, p. 28. (1903)

10 That which is crooked cannot be made straight. (Perversi difficile corriguntur.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, i, 15. (c. 250 B. C.)

A rendering of an old Greek proverb, often cited, σκαμπὸν ξύλον οὐδέποτε ὀρθόν (No straightening a crooked billet.)

Who can make that straight which he [God] hath made crooked? (Nemo possit corrigere quem ille despexit.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vii, 13. (c. 250 B. C.)

11 A crooked Stick will have a crooked Shadow.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 61. (1732) See under SHADOW.

So, ez I ain't a crooked stick, . . . I'll go back to my plough.

J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers. Ser. i, No. 9

The widow R— must have been dreadfully put to it for a husband, to take up with such a crooked stick.

UNKNOWN, Major Downing. (c. 1855)

12 The cheaper the crook, the gaudier the patter.

DASHIELL HAMMETT, The Maltese Falcon. Ch. 12. (1930)

13 The crooked shall be made straight. (Erunt prava in directa.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xl, 4. (c. 725 B. C.) Repeated in New Testament: Luke, iii, 5.

The crooked will be made straight. (Ch'ü tseh ch'üen.

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 22. (c. 550 B.C.) Carus, tr. Referred to as "a saying of the ancients."

By promoting the straight and degrading the crooked, you can make even the crooked straight.

CONFUCIUS, Analects, Bk. xii, ch. 22. (c. 500 B.C.) Legge, tr.

<sup>1</sup> Crokyd as a camoke [cambrel].

JOHN SKELTON, Works, i, 117. (c. 1525)

As crooked as a cammocke.

JOHN LYL, Mother Bombie. Act i, sc.3. (1592) More crooked than a ram's horn.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. ii, No. 130. (1820)

So crooked's a dog's hind leg.

F. T. ELWORTHY, West Somerset Word-book, p. 170. (1886)

As crooked as a dog's elbow.

ROBERT HOLLAND, Cheshire Glossary, p. 146. (1886)

He is straight as a dog's hind leg.

CARL SANDBURG, Smoke and Steel, p. 90. (1920)

You're as crooked as a corkscrew.

KAUFMAN AND HART, George Washington Slept Here. Act ii, sc. 2. (1940)

So crooked he could hide behind a cork-screw.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 494. (1940)

CROSS

<sup>2</sup> After all his losses and crosses.

JOHN ARBUTHNOT, John Bull, iii, 10. (1712)

After crosses and losses, men grow humbler and wiser.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737.

<sup>3</sup> In the ende thei go home . . . by weeping cross.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, A Dialogue Against the Fever Pestilence, p. 78. (1564) "Weeping cross": repentance.

They retorne home by weeping Crosse, and fewe of them come to an honest ende.

STEPHEN GOSSON, The Schoole of Abuse, p. 46. (1579)

Few men have wedded their . . . mistresses, but have come home by weeping Crosse.

JOHN FLORIO, tr., Montaigne. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1603) "Qui ne s'en soyent repentis" is Montaigne's phrase.

In the end they come home by weeping crosse, and crie Peccauit.

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, Martin Mark-all, p. 29. (1610)

He that goeth out with often loss,

At last comes home by weeping cross.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 28. (1670)

He'll pish i' the wisp . . . answers to the English, He'll come home by weeping Cross.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 175. (1721)

The way to Heaven is by Weeping Cross.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Way. (1736)

We must needs go to glory by the way of Weeping Cross.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 5. (1869)

<sup>4</sup> I shall not help crucify mankind upon a cross of gold. I shall not aid in pressing down upon the bleeding brow of labor this crown of thorns.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN, Speech, House of Representatives, 22 Dec., 1894.

You shall not press down upon the brow of labor this crown of thorns; you shall not crucify mankind upon a cross of gold.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN, Speech, before National Democratic Convention, Chicago. 10 July, 1896. Concluding sentence.

"Ye shall not, Billy O'Brien," he says, "crucify th' voters iv th' Sixth Ward on th' double cross."

F. P. DUNNE, Oratory in Politics. (1896)

<sup>5</sup> Every cross has its own inscription.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 16. (1639)

Each cross hath its inscription.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 75. (1670)

"Crosses and afflictions come not by chance," Ray points out, "but are laid upon men for some just reason. . . . Many times we may read the sin in the punishment."

Every cross hath its inscription; the name inscribed upon it of the person for whom it was shaped.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 6. (1853)

<sup>6</sup> [He] hath neuer a crosse left him to blesse him with.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Acolastus, sig. T4. (1540) "Cross": coin, penny.

Not a cross of money to bless me have I.

ULPIAN FULWELL, Like Will to Like. (1568)

I will not leave my selfe one Crosse to blesse me

THOMAS HEYWOOD, The Wise Woman. (1638)

He hath never a cross to bless himself withal.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 170. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1893. (1732) SCOTT, Bride of Lammermoor. Ch. 4. (1819)

To come and take up an honest house, without cross or coin to bless yourself with.

GOLDSMITH, Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 21. (1766)

"I've neither cross nor coin," that is, no money at all.

CARR, The Dialect of Craven, i, 94. (1828)

<sup>7</sup> The Crosse is the ladder of heaven.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 36. (1633)

Crosses are ladders than do lead to heaven.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1208. (1732) SMILES, Self-Help, p. 341. (1859)

<sup>8</sup> Crosses, tho' they be not pleasant, yet are wholesome.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1209. (1732)

<sup>9</sup> God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ. (ἐμοὶ δὲ μὴ γένοιτο καυχᾶσθαι εἰ μὴ ἐν τῷ σταυρῷ τοῦ κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ.)

New Testament: Galatians, vi, 14. (c. A. D. 60)

The Vulgate is, "Mihi autem absit gloriari, nisi in cruce Domini nostri Iesu Christi." "Nil nisi cruce" (Nothing except the cross), is a Latin proverb founded upon this text. Others are, "Ubi crux, ibi lux" (Where the Cross is, there is light), and "Cruci dum spiro fido" (While I breathe I trust in the Cross); "Via crucis, via lucis" (The way of the Cross is the way of light). F. Marion Crawford used the first phrase, "Via Crucis," as the title of a novel. (1899)

<sup>1</sup> By this sign shall ye conquer. (In hoc signo vinces.)

EUSEBIUS, Life of Constantine, i, 28. According to Eusebius, Constantine the Great, during his march on Rome (Oct., 312), saw a luminous cross in the sky, with the Greek words, ἐν τούτῳ νικά (By this conquer), and he did conquer, defeating Maxentius at Saxa Rubra, near Rome, 27 Oct. The omen is said to have converted him to Christianity, and he caused it to be placed upon the laburnum, or Roman standard. The early Latin form was "Hoc vince," and the more familiar form dates from the time of his death, twenty-five years later.

In the cross there is safety. (In cruce salus.)

THOMAS A KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. ii, ch. 12. (c. 1420)

<sup>2</sup> Whos tung neither pyl ne crouche mai hyre.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. ii, l. 390. (c. 1390) "Cross or pile," "Croix ou pile," the obverse or reverse of a coin; head or tail.

Crosse and pyle standen in balaunce.

UNKNOWN, Political Poems, ii, 240 (c. 1450) Cast lots or crosse and pyle.

RICHARD HULOET, Abecedarium Anglico Latino, sig. E2. (1552)

How to know whether one cast crosse or pile. R. SCOT, The Discoverie of Witchcraft. (1584)

Compel'd with crosse and pile to run of errands. JOHN FLETCHER, The Chances. Act v, sc. 2. (1618)

What, did you think I knew not Cross from Pile? ABRAHAM COWLEY, Cutter of Coleman-street. Act v. (1663)

I'll throw up cross or pile who shall ask her.

WYCHERLEY, Love in a Wood, iii, 2. (1672)

I knew from her looks it would be a cross and pile chance.

ANNE ROYALL, Letters from Alabama, p. 36. (1817) See also HEADS OR TAILS.

<sup>3</sup> It is her part to beare all the crosse her selfe.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 30. (1574) Pettie, tr. The French say, "Chacun porte sa croix" (Each one carries his cross), or, "Every man must carry his own cross."

<sup>4</sup> Hearts and crosses—to love and to suffer.

O. HENRY, Hearts and Crosses. (1907)

<sup>5</sup> E'en crosses from his sov'reign hand
Are blessings in disguise.

JAMES HERVEY, On a Flower-Garden. (1746)

<sup>6</sup> And now will I make a crosse on this gate.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

To make a cross on anything is to mark with a white stone, as specially happy.

<sup>7</sup> Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me. (εἰ τις θέλει ὀπίσω μου ἰλθεῖν, ἀπαρνησάσθω ἑαυτὸν καὶ ἀράτω τὸν σταυρὸν αὐτοῦ καὶ ἀκολουθεῖτω μοι.)

New Testament: Mark, viii, 34. (c. A. D. 55)

See also Mark, x, 21; Matthew, xvi, 24; Luke, ix, 23. The Vulgate is, "Si quis vult me sequi, deneget semetipsum: et tollat crucem suam, et sequatur me."

He that taketh not his cross, and followeth after me, is not worthy of me. (ὅστις οὐ λαμβάνει τὸν σταυρὸν αὐτοῦ καὶ ἀκολουθεῖ ὀπίσω μου, οὐκ ἔστιν μου ἄξιος.)

New Testament: Matthew, x, 38. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Qui non accipit crucem suam, et sequitur me, non est me dignus."

<sup>8</sup> Take up the cross if thou wouldst gain the crown. (Tolle crucem, qui vis auferre coronam.)

ST. PAULINUS, BISHOP OF NOLA, attr. (c. 420)

He deserueth not to have the crowne of victorie, which hath not abide the brunt of the bataille.

ROBERT GREENE, Works, iv, 48. (1587)

The way to Blisse lyes not on beds of Downe, And he that had no Crosse, deserues no Crown.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Hadassa. Med. ix. (1621)

No Cross no Crown; a Discourse shewing . . . that the daily bearing of Christ's Cross, is the alone way to the rest and kingdom of God

WILLIAM PENN. Title of book. (1669)

No pain, no palm; no thorns, no throne; no gall, no glory; no cross, no crown.

WILLIAM PENN, No Cross, No Crown. (1669)

"No cross, no crown," cited by Dykes, Trench, and others.

There are no crown-wearers in heaven who were not cross-bearers here below.

C. H. SPURGEON, Gleanings Among the Sheaves: Cross-Bearers. (c. 1880)

Without tasting the bitterest we never reach the highest.

GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 351. (1938) Chinese proverb.

Our crosses are hewn from different trees, But we all must have our Calvaries.

FREDERIC LAWRENCE KNOWLES, Golgotha.

<sup>9</sup> I know the cross will be my tomb. (Scio crucem futuram mihi sepulcrum.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 372. (c. 200 B. C.)

You'll hang on a cross to feed the crows. (Pasces in cruce corvos.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 16, l. 48. (20 B. C.)

The Germans say, "Du kommst gewiss noch an den Galgen" (You'll certainly hang some day).

You chip of the cross, you crow's meat. (Crucis offla, corvorum cibaria.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 58. (c. A.D. 60) Or, in modern phrase, gallows-bird.

1 It can be no counsell that is cryed at the cross.

JOHN SKELTON, Dyvers Balettyes, p. 36. (c. 1320) The market-cross, at which public announcements were made.

We need not cry sic things at the Cross.

JOHN GALT, The Entail. Ch. 21. (1823)

2 If you cheerfully bear your Cross, it will bear you. (Si libenter Crucem portas, portabit te.)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. ii, ch. 12, sec. 5. (c. 1420) "Make a crutch of your cross."

"The cross, if rightly borne, shall be No burden, but support to thee";

So, moved of old time for our sake, The holy monk of Kempen spake.

J. G. WHITTIER, The Cross. (c. 1870)

3 I know enough about him to nail him to the cross.

STEWART STERLING, Five Alarm Funeral, p. 113. (1942)

4 Dishonest practices in general are called the cross, in opposition to the square.

J. H. VAUX, Flash Dictionary: Cross. (1812)

Hence, "on the cross," and "on the square."

Hence also "double-cross," a betrayal or act of double-dealing.

The fight between the Butcher and the Pet, and the probabilities that it was a cross.

THACKERAY, Vanity Fair. Ch. 55. (1848)

The young woman . . . may be on the cross.

HENRY KINGSLEY, Ravenshoe. Ch. 60. (1861)

Shake the cross and live on the square.

MARK TWAIN, Life on the Mississippi. Ch. 52.

(1883) "To shake the cross" was slang for giving up an unlawful way of life.

CROSSNESS

5 As cross as nine highways.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 316. (1855)

6 The captain was as savage as a bear with a sore head.

MARRYAT, The King's Own. Ch. 26. (1830)

He's like a bear with a sore head.

STANLEY WEYMAN, Ovington's Bank. Ch. 5.

(1922) The usual form is "As cross as a bear with a sore head."

7 As cross as two sticks.

WALTER SCOTT, Journal, 2 Nov., 1831.

The renowned O'Grady was . . . as cross as two sticks.

SAMUEL LOVER, Handy Andy. Ch. 2. (1842)

She scolded her maid and was as cross as two sticks.

THACKERAY, The Newcomes. Ch. 33. (1854)

8

CROTCHET

A wild head ful of . . . a thousande crotchets.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works, i, 189. (1592)

To have many . . . crotchets in the head. (Avoir des mouchérons en teste.)

RANDOLPH COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Moucheron.

(1611) "Moucheron," literally, means midge or gnat.

A crotchet has got once into his noddle.

JAMES HOWELL, Parley of Beasts, p. 49. (1660)

Crotchets in the crown, whimsies, maggots.

B.E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew, sig. D3. (1690)

With fifty crochets in his head.

EDWARD WARD, Don Quixote, i, 37. (1711)

Gloomy crotchets fill'd his wandering head.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Parish Register, iii, 930. (1807)

CROW

9

No carrion kills a kite.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Wit at Several Weapons. Act iii, sc. 1. (1614)

No carrion will kill a crow.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 76. (1670)

No Carrion will poison a Crow.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3553. (1732)

10

As fruitful a place as any the crow flies over.

BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. ii. (1684)

11

Ful prively a finch eek coude he pulle.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 654. (c. 1386)

Na, na, abide, we haue a crow to pull.

UNKNOWN, The Towneley Mysteries, xviii, 311. (c. 1460)

A wrathfull woman. . . . He that hath wedded her hath a crowe to pull.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Skyp of Folyes, 91. (1509)

If he leaue it not, we haue a crow to pul.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

Philip, King of Macedon, who had so many bobbins to unravel with the Roman people. (Philippus, roy de Macedoine, celuy qui eut tant de fusees à desmesler avecques le peuple romain.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 27. (1580) A proverbial phrase, "So many crows to pick."

If I thought thou meanest so . . . thou shouldst have a crow to pull.

LYLY, Mother Bombe. Act ii, sc. 1. (1592)

Ant. E.: Well, I'll break in. Go borrow me a crow [i.e. a bar of iron]. Dro. E.: If a crow help us in, sirrah, we'll pluck a crow together.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, iii, 1, 83. (1593)

I every day expect to pull a crow with him about our lodgings.

SAMUEL PEPPYS, Diary, 18 Nov., 1662.

I've a crow to pluck w'ye.

JOHN WILSON, The Projectors. Act v. (1665)

You and I must pull a crow.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto ii, l. 499. (1665)

We have a Crow to pluck with these fellows.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Quevedo's Visions, p. 159. (1668)

Tell him that . . . I have a crow to pluck with him.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 13. (1841) To have a crow to pluck or pull with anyone is to have something disagreeable or awkward to settle with him, or something requiring explanation to clear up, or to have some fault to find with him. (O.E.D.) The whole proverb is sometimes given as, "I've a crow to pluck with you, and a poke to put the feathers in," the poke being an important part of the threat. See Notes and Queries, 3rd ser., vii, 104.

1 Just as if they saw a white crow. (Quasi avem albam videtur.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. vii, epis. xxviii, sec. 2. (c. 50 B.C.) Something strange and rare, like Juvenal's black swan. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, ii, 50. The Greek phrase is λευκὸν ἰδεῖν κόρακα. THEOPHRASTUS, frag. 6.39, has χελιδὼν λευκή, a white swallow.

Whyt was this crowe, as is a snow-whyt swan. CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Maunciple's Tale, l. 29. (c. 1389)

He that would say the crowe were white.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Works (1557), p. 207/1. (1528)

As good than to say, the crow is whight.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

2 He put out the eyes of the crows. (Cornicum oculos confixerit.)

CICERO, Pro Murena, xi, 25. (63 B.C.) Quoted by QUINTILIAN, viii, iii, 22. A proverbial expression implying unusual activity, "Catch a weasel asleep."

3 The devill . . . sends his black Crowe, Anger, to plucke out his ey.

JOHN DAY, Peregrinatio Scholastica. (c. 1635) Works (1881), p. 57.

4 The blak crow thinkis his awin byrdis quhite. GAVIN DOUGLAS, Aeneis. Bk. ix, Prologue, l. 78. (1513)

The crow thinkth hir owne birdes fairest in the wood.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546) Not vnlike the crow, who alwaies thinkes her owne byrdes sayrest.

HUMFREY GIFFORD, A Posie of Gilloflowers, p. 32. (1580)

The crow thinks her fowls the fairest.

ROBERT GREENE, Never Too Late. (1590)

I . . . like the foolish crow,

Believe my black brood swans.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Unnaturall Combat. Act iii, sc. 2. (1639)

Another great tye or cause of love is consanguinity. . . . Every crow thinks her own bird fairest.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy, iii, i, H, 3. (1621)

The crow thinks her own bird fairest. . . . So the Ethiopians are said to paint the devil white. Every one is partial to . . . his own compositions, his own children, his own country.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 76. (1670)

PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. Maxim 415. (1693)

The crow thinks its ain bird the whitest.

JOHN GALT, The Entail. Ch. 29. (1823)

You think I'm an old woman whose . . . own crow is the whitest ever seen.

ELIZABETH GASKELL, North and South. Ch. 15. (1855)

What bird so white as mine? says the crow.

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 28. (1869) See also under POSSESSIONS.

5 One Crow wil neuer pul out an other Crowes eyes. (Corbi con corbi, non cauano mai gli ochi.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578) The Scots say, "Corbies dinna pick oot corbies' een." See also under WOLF.

One Crow will not peck out another Crow's Eyes.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3744. (1732)

Hawks shouldna pike out hawks' een.

WALTER SCOTT, Guy Mannering. Ch. 40. (1815)

6 It's God that feeds the Crows,

That neither tills, harrows, nor sows.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6436. (1732)

7 To shoot at crows is powder flung away.

JOHN GAY, Epistles. No. 4, last line. (1720)

8 Crow en corn can't grow in de same fiel'.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Uncle Remus: Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

9 The crow bewails the sheep, and then eats it.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 460. (1640)

Carriion crows bewail the dead sheep, and then eat them.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1211. (1732)

10 The little crow, stripped of his stolen colors, excites our ridicule. (Moveat cornicula risum | furtivis nudata coloribus.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 3, l. 19. (20 B.C.) Stripped of his borrowed plumes.

11 If the crow could feed in silence, he would have more meat. (Tacitus pasci si possit corvus, haberet | plus dapis.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 17, l. 50. (20 B.C.)

STILL SWINE, see under SWINE.

A Passage may be found, I've heard,
In some old Greek or Latian Bard,
Which says, wou'd Crows in Silence eat . . .

They might, unhurt by Envy's Claws,
Live on, and Stuff, to Boot, their Maws.

SWIFT, An Epistle Upon an Epistle, l. 119. (1730)

12 An evil crow an evil egg.

HUGH LATIMER, Sermons, p. 42. (1536) Referred to as "a proverb much used."

As the Greek proverb saith, Like crow, like egg.
THOMAS MOFFETT, Health's Improvement, p. 135. (1655) See also under HEREDITY.

1
Go feed the crows! Go join the dead and howl! (οὐκ εἰς κόρακας. οὐ μὴ εἰς μακρά.)

MENANDER, The Arbitrants, l. 24. (c. 300 B.C.)
The first phrase repeated in l. 732; in The Girl from Samos, l. 158; in The Girl Who Gets Her Hair Cut, l. 276; in The Hero, fr. 15, and elsewhere. See also under CROSS.

2
It is ill killing a crow with an empty sling.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 120. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2960. (1732)

3
Crows are never the whiter for washing themselves.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 121. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1210. (1732) The Scottish form is, "A crow's nae whiter for being washed."

A whitewashed crow will not remain white long.
H. B. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 213. (1937)

4
When the crow flees, her tail follows.
JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 262. (1678)

5
So suart so eni crowe.
ROBERT OF GLOUCESTER, Metrical Chronicle, 490. (1297) BLACK AS A CROW, see under BLACKNESS.

Crows are black all the world over. (Ch'u ch'u lao ya pan 'hei.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 151. (1875)
Even the blackest of them all, the crow,
Renders good service as your man-at-arms,
Crushing the beetle in his coat of mail,
And crying havoc on the slug and snail.

LONGFELLOW, The Birds of Killingworth. St. 19. (1863) An elaboration of the proverb, "Report makes the crows blacker than they are."

6
By my troth, he'll yield the crow a pudding one of these days.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, ii, 1, 91. (1598) "Yield the crow a pudding": to die.

Plucke up a good heart woman, let no man . . . say thou gauest the crow a pudding, because loue would let thee liue no longer.

THOMAS DELONEY, The Gentle Craft. Pt. ii, ch. 3. (c. 1598)

You look as if you would make the crow a pudding.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 237. (1678)
He owes a pudding to the glade [kite].

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 167. (1721)
"Spoken of a poor weak beast which we suspect to be dying."

But if she drops him, down he goes,
And makes a pudding for the crows.

JOHN HALL-STEVENSON, Works, i, 208. (1767)

7
He is come to me and bid me eat my leek.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, v, 1, 10. (1599) To humiliate oneself; to "eat dirt."

The Welshmen very humbly ate their leek.
UNKNOWN, All the Year Round. No. 29. p. 61. (1859)

To cook crow for his own party.
UNKNOWN, A Word on Politics. (1880) See Scribner's Magazine, Feb., 1880, p. 622/1.

Norris has explained our mistake and eaten crow for all of us.

R. D. PAINE, Brand Blotters, p. 128. (1912)
You ate grass: I have eaten crow.

CARL SANDBURG, The Losers. (1920) Of Nebuchadnezzar.

I shall have to eat crow.
HULBERT FOOTNER, Who Killed the Husband? p. 231. (1941)

It's not easy for me to eat crow, but I'm doing it.
M. S. MICHEL, Sweet Murder, p. 157. (1943)

8
About fifteen miles, the crow's road.
ROBERT SOUTHEY, Letters, i, 110. (1800)

We cut over the fields, straight as the crow flies.
DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 25. (1838)

9
The good-for-nothing crow, with deep voice, invites the rain. (Cornix plena pluvium vocat improba voce.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. i, l. 388, (37 B.C.) Quoted by QUINTILIAN, Inst. Orat., v, ix, 15.

The crow with voics of care.
CHAUCER (?), The Parlement of Foules, l. 363. (c. 1382)

Rain-crow don't sing no chune, but youk'n 'pen' on 'im.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Uncle Remus: Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

10
One crow does not make a winter. (Eine Krähe macht keinen Winter.)

UNKNOWN, A German proverb. See also under SWALLOW.

CROWD

See also Mob, Multitude, People

11
A crowd is not company; and faces are but a gallery of pictures; . . . where there is no love.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Friendship. (1625)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 62. (1732)

TWO COMPANY, THREE A CROWD, see under COMPANY. Coke is responsible for the dictum, "Multitudinem decem faciunt" (Ten constitute a crowd).

12
Nothing moderate is pleasing to the crowd.
FRANCIS BACON, Of the Advancement of Learning. Pt. i, bk. 6. (1605)

13
To meet in a crowd is to do business in secret.
GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 354 (1938) The Spaniards say, "Quien no va á carava, no sabe nada" (He who does not mix with a crowd knows nothing). Another variant is, "Those who follow the crowd are quickly lost in it."

1 Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard, l. 73. (1750)

Far from the Madding Crowd.

THOMAS HARDY, Title of novel. (1874)

Far from the clank of crowds.

WALT WHITMAN, Starting from Paumanok. (1860)

2 A crowd is another name for everything that is disorderly, indecorous, discordant, and culpable. (ἀτακτον, ἀκοσμον, πλημμελές, ὑπαίτιον, τοῦτο ὄχλος ἐστίν.)

PHILO, De Praemiis et Poenis. Sec. 20. (c. A. D. 40)

There is scarce a worse guide than the Crowde.

THOMAS TRYON, The Way to Health, p. 630. (1683)

Individuals are occasionally guided by reason, crowds never.

DEAN W. R. INGE. (c. 1930) See MARCHANT, Wit and Wisdom of Dean Inge. No. 229.

3 Among the crowd i' th' Abbey, where a finger Could not be wedg'd in more.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, iv, 1, 57. (1613)

They lay like pears in a work-basket. (Venian, como peras en tabaque.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43. (1615)

i. e. very carefully packed.

The hall of justice was small . . . and there were fifty or sixty people packed into it like herrings in a barrel.

D. C. MURRAY, Joseph's Coat. Ch. 12. (1881)

4 Will she pass in a crowd?

SWIFT, Letter to Stella, 9 Feb., 1911.

CROWN

See also King

5 A crown, if it hurt us, is hardly worth wearing.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Large Party. (1839)

6 Many a crown Covers bald foreheads.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. i, l. 756. (1856)

7 Two coronas han we,
Snow-whyte and rose-reed.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Second Nonnes Tale, l. 253 (c. 1389)

8 The most glorious crown is set with false diamonds. (La plus belle couronne | N'a que de faux brillants dont l'éclat l'environne.)

PIERRE CORNEILLE, Héraclius. Act i, l. 1. (1647)

9 Yet could not that misbegotten crown of his keep his head always from aching.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Contemplations, xviii, 4. (1612)

The Royal Crown cures not the head-ache.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 578. (1640) FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1757.

10 When they had platted a crown of thorns, they put it upon his head. (πλέξαντες στέφανον ἐξ ἀκανθῶν ἐπέθηκαν ἐπὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς αὐτοῦ.)

New Testament: Matthew, xxvii, 29. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Plectentes coronam de spinas, posuerunt super caput eius."

A Crown,

Golden in shew, is but a wreath of thorns.

MILTON, Paradise Regain'd. Bk. ii, l. 458. (1671)

Every noble crown is, and on Earth will forever be, a crown of thorns.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. iii, ch. 8. (1843)

11 A crown is a big bribe. (Une couronne est un gros appât.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Sayings. (1817) GOURGAUD, Mémoires, i, 444.

12 Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, iii, 1, 31. (1598)

Frequently quoted, for example by OWEN

DAVIS, in Icebound, act iii. (1923)

Why doth the crown lie there upon his pillow,
Being so troublesome a bedfellow?

O polish'd perturbation! golden care!

That keep'st the ports of slumber open wide.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, iv, 5, 21. (1598)

13 Fearless minds climb soonest unto crowns.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, iv, 7, 62. (1591)

14 Cleave to the crown though it hang on a bush.

AGNES STRICKLAND, Lives of the Queens of England, ii, 419. (1851) A proverb deriving perhaps from the story that the crown of Richard III was hidden by a soldier in a hawthorn-bush.

15 They that wait too long win no crown. (οἱ δὲ γε ἐγκαταλείπόμενοι οὐ στεφανοῦνται.)

THEMISTOCLES, to the other Greek admirals, before the battle of Salamis. (480 B. C.) As told by HERODOTUS, viii, 59.

No cross, no crown, see under CROSS.

CRUELTY

16 A Man of Cruelty is God's Enemy.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 303. (1732)

Cruelty deserves no Mercy.

Cruelty is a Tyrant, that is always attended with Fear.

Cruelty is the first Attribute of the Devil.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 1212-4.

Envy hath a Leer of her Father the Devil, but Cruelty his very Face.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1377.

17 Cruelty ever proceeds from a vile mind, and often from a cowardly heart.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, tr., Orlando Furioso. Bk. xxxvi. Notes. (1591)

A cruel heart ill suits a manly mind.

POPE, tr., Homer's Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 619. (1715)

18 Cruelty is more cruel, if we defer the pain.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1108. (1650)

1 Against rebels it is cruelty to be humane, and humanity to be cruel. (Contre les rebelles c'est cruauté que d'être humain, et humanité d'être cruel.)

BISHOP CORNEILLE MUIS, Sermon. (c. 1550)
See FOURNIER, L'Esprit dans L'Histoire. This sentence was quoted by Catherine de' Medici, to quiet the scruples of her son, Charles IX, on the eve of the Massacre of St. Bartholomew, 24 Aug., 1572.

Sometimes clemency is cruelty, and cruelty clemency.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 2. (1853) Trench calls this "one of the most convenient maxims for tyrants that was ever framed." PHAEDRUS in his Fables has a line, "Atrocitas mansuetudo est remedium" (Clemency is the remedy of cruelty).

2 Cruelty is fed, not weakened by tears. (Crudelis lacrimis pascitur non frangitur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 128. (c. 43 B.C.)

3 All forms of cruelty are for me the sin against the Holy Ghost, for which there is no forgiveness.

WILLIAM ROUGHEAD, The Art of Murder, p. 13. (1943)

4 Man is little inferior to the tiger and hyena in cruelty and savagery.

ARTHUR SCHOPENHAUER, Parerga und Paralipomena. Ch. 2. (1851)

5 'Tis a cruelty To load a falling man.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, v, 3, 76. (1613)

'Tis cruelty to beat a cripple with his own crutches.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Jestings. (1642)

6 You prove most cruel, meaning to be kind. (δταν | θέλῃς γενέσθαι χρηστός, δοθήσει κακός.)

SOPHOCLES, Trachiniae, l. 452. (c. 409 B.C.)

I must be cruel, only to be kind.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 4, 178. (1600)

7 Your cruelty is our glory. (Crudelitas vestra gloria est nostra.)

TERTULLIAN, Ad Scapulam. Sec. 4. (c. A. D. 195)

CRUMB

8 [Not] one crumb of merit.

BISHOP JOHN FISHER, Works (1876), p. 408. (c. 1530)

Some crome of charity within them.

ROBERT BARNES, Works (1573), p. 225. (1541)

Their clock gathering up the least crume of time.

FULLER, Worthies of England: Berks. (1662)

Beg some Crumbs of Comfort.

THOMAS D'URFEY, Pills to Purge Melancholy, v, 76. (1719)

I could give you some crumbs of information.

WALTER SCOTT, Letter to G. Ellis, 11 May, 1801.

9 Where there is a perpetual fast there are very few crumbs on the floor.

HENRY JAMES, The Aspern Papers. Ch. 4. (1888)

10 And there was a certain beggar named Lazarus . . . desiring to be fed with the crumbs which fell from the rich man's table. (ἐπιθυμῶν χορτασθῆναι ἀπὸ τῶν πιπτόντων ἀπὸ τῆς τραπέζης τοῦ πλουσίου.)

New Testament: Luke, xvi, 21. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Cupiens saturari de micis, quae cadebant de mensa divitis."

Crumbs from the rich man's table. Trifles given to the poor by the rich; a slight consideration shown by the fortunate to the unfortunate.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Crumbs. (1941)

To feed him on the crumbs from her table when he was threatened by actual want.

McKNIGHT MALMAR, Never Say Die, p. 167. (1943)

11 What with hir merry sporting, and good nourishing, I began to gather vp my crumbes.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 302. (1579) Meaning to put on weight after an illness, to be convalescent.

Our men beganne to gather vp their crums, and to recover some better strength.

RICHARD HAKLUYT, Voyages, ii, 2, 130. (1588) Thank God, I . . . am recovering and picking up my crums apace.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters, 2 Feb., 1621.

[He] had 'picked up his crumbs' . . . and was getting strength and confidence daily.

R. H. DANA, Two Years Before the Mast. Ch. 27. (1840)

12 The dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from their masters' table. (Catelli edunt de micis, quae cadunt de mensa dominorum suorum.)

New Testament: Matthew, xv, 27. (c. A. D. 70)

13 He that keeps nor crust nor crum.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, i, 4, 217. (1605) The crumb was the inside or soft part of the loaf, as distinguished from the crust, or hard part.

Make them thin, that they may have the more Crust and less Crum.

JAMES LEONI, tr., The Architecture of Alberti, i, 32a. (1726)

"Too much crumb, you know," said Mr. Bailey; "too fat."

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 29. (1844)

CRY

14 The man that sherid his hogge, moch crye and litil woll.

JOHN FORTESCUE, The Governance of England. Ch. 10, p. 132. (c. 1460) Originally the proverb ran, "Great cry and little wool, as the devil said when he sheared the hogs," and so is one of the earliest Wellerisms. It appears in this form in an old mystery play, David and Abigail, based on I Samuel, xxv, in which Nabal, the churlish Carmelite, is represented as shearing his sheep, with the devil beside him, imitating him by shearing a hog, which is protesting at the top of its lungs. Much chaff, but little grain. (E multis paleis, paulum fructus collegi.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ii, No. 75. (1508) "That is," says Erasmus, "much labor but small reward; many words, but little sense."

As one said at the shearing of hogs, great cry and little wool, much adoe and smal help.

GOSSEN, The Schoole of Abuse, p. 28. (1579) A great cry and little wool, quoth the Devil when he sheard the hog.

HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1659)

Thou wilt at best but suck a bull,

Or shear swine, all cry and no wool.

BUTLER, Hudibras, i, i, 852. (1663)

Here's a great cry and but little wool (as the fellow said when he shear'd his hogs).

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 237. (1678) Ray gives the Italian, "Assai rumore & poco lana."

The proverb is common to all European languages. The Germans say, "Viel Geschrei und wenig Wolle," the Dutch, "Veel geschreeuws, en luttel wol." German variants are, "Viel Geschrei und wenig Milch" (Much noise and little milk), "Viel Geschrei und wenig Ei" (Much noise and few eggs), and "Viel Lärmen um Nichts" (Much noise for nothing).

When there is a great cry, there is not always the more wool.

THOMAS GODDARD, Plato's Demon, p. 301. (1684)

There's a great Cry, but little Wooll.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 304.

(1709) "The Mountain in Labour, and brought to Bed of a Mouse, without the Help of a Midwife, according to the Fable." says Dykes, "is an exact Emblem of this comical Adage. . . . What a great Cry was there, and how little Wooll." See under MOUNTAIN.

Those . . . make the most noise who have the least to sell. . . . to whom I cannot but apply that old proverb of "Much cry, but little wool."

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 251 (1711)

Humph, quoth the Dee'l, when he clip'd the Sow, A great Cry, and little Woo.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 165. (1721)

"Spoken of great pretences and small performances," Kelly explains.

More squeak than wool.

ROGER NORTH, Lives of the Norths, i, 220. (1740)

Exclaim, "great cry, and little wool!"

As Satan holla'd, when he shaved the pig.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Lyric Odes. No. iii. (1804)

For "great cry and little wool" rustics say, "the goat bleated all night and produced only a kid,"—two being the usual number.

J. L. KIPLING, Beast and Man, p. 93. (1891)

There are many other variants. The French say, "Beaucoup de bruit, peu de fruit" (Much noise and little fruit); RAY has,

"Much bran and little meal"; HERBERT, "The noise is greater than the nuts"; and "There is more talk than trouble"; and there is a Hebrew proverb, "Thou hast dived deep and brought up a potsherd." See under LABOR LOST. The dispute about the ass's shadow will be found under ASS, and MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING, under ADO.

<sup>1</sup> You are like the eels of Melun; you cry out before you are hurt. (Vous semblez les anguilles de Melun; vous criez devant qu'on vous escorche.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, Ch. 9. (1534)

I cry not before I am pricked.

UNKNOWN, Reliquiae Antiquae, ii, 16. (1548)

Such as crie before their paine approach them.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Anguille. (1611)

You cry out before you're hurt.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 237. (1678)

It is time enough to cry Oh, when you are hurt.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 204. (1721)

They will not cry out before they're hurt.

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 207. (1818)

Don't sing out afore you're hurt

DICKENS, Dombey and Son. Ch. 25. (1848)

This coward cried out before he was hurt.

THACKERAY, Pendennis. Ch. 69. (1850)

<sup>2</sup> It is a far cry to Lochow.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 29. (1918) In

The Legend of Montrose, ch. 12, Scott writes,

"This menace was received with a scornful laugh, while one of the Campbells replied, 'It is a far cry to Lochow'; a proverbial expression of the tribe, meaning that their ancient hereditary domains lay beyond the reach of an invading army." Lochow and the adjacent districts formed the original seat of the Campbells.

Because it was "a far cry to Lochow," or, in other words, a long way from Oxley to Pekin, no protest on the part of his Celestial Highness reached us.

ROLF BOLDREWOOD (T. A. BROWNE), The Miner's Right. Ch. 23. (1890)

CRYING

See also Tears, Weeping

<sup>3</sup> Aw, for cryin' out loud, so what?

JULE BROUSSEAU, Episode on 8th Street, p. 11. (1941)

<sup>4</sup> I could cry my eyes out.

COLLEY CIBBER, The Careless Husband. Act i, sc. 1. (1705) SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

When she had cried her heart out.

MRS. OLIPHANT, Joyce, i, 169. (1882)

<sup>5</sup> "It opens the lungs, washes the countenance, exercises the eyes, and softens down the temper," said Mr. Bumble. "So cry away."

DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 37. (1837)

- 1 I am sorry for thee, but I cannot weep.
HAZLITT, ed., Old Plays, vi, 319: Three Ladies of London. (1584)
Beshrew me, sir, I'm sorry for your losses,
But, as the proverb says, I cannot cry.
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Knight of the Burning Pestle. Act i, sc. 2. (1609)
He was very very sorry, but could not cry.
CHARLES HINDLEY, ed., The Old Book Collector's Miscellany. Ch. 3. (1641)
Sorry for it, but I can't cry.
WALTER SCOTT, Journal, 4 June, 1827.
- 2 She would have made a splendid wife, for crying only made her eyes more bright and tender.
O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), No Story. (1909)
- 3 A good cry is half the battle.
BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iii. (1903)
- 4 Crying is the refuge of plain women, but the ruin of pretty ones.
OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act i. (1892)

CUCKOLD

See also Horns

- 5 The Cuckold is the last that knowes of it.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 332. (1636)
Cuckolds hear the last.
DRYDEN, tr., Juvenal. Sat. x, l. 528. (1693)
It is a true saying, that the last man of the parish that knows of his cuckoldom is himself.
JOHN ARBUTHNOT, John Bull, i, 8. (1712)
It is with love as with cuckoldom, the suffering party is . . . generally the last in the house who knows anything about the matter.
STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. viii, ch. 4. (1758)
My husband was not jealous although my lover came to search for me with a candle.
J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 317. (1817) On the blindness of cuckolds.
- 6 Who hath no wyf, he is no cokewold.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Miller's Prologue, l. 44. (c. 1386)
- 7 She spins crooked spindles for her husband, and sends him into Cornwall without ship or boate.
JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, fo. 143. (1591)
He doth sail into Cornwall without a bark.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 223. (1670)
"This is an Italian proverb," Ray explains, "where it passeth for a description (or derision rather) of such a man as is wronged by his wife's disloyalty."
A woman who cuckolds her husband was said to send him into Cornwall without a boat.
J. O. HALLIWELL, Archaic Words. (1847)
- 8 Two or three frolicks abroad in sweet May,
Two or three civil things said by the way,

- Two or three languishes, two or three sighs,
Two or three bless me's and let me die's;
Two or three squeezes, and two or three towses,
With two or three hundred pound spent at their houses,
Can never fail cuckolding two or three spouses.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, The Two or Three Necessaries. (Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735.)
- 9 Let every cuckold wear his own horns.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 3. (1659)
RAY, Proverbs, p. 6. (1670)
Growling within himself, that thenceforward he should let every cuckold wear his own horns.
TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Sir Launcelot Greaves. Ch. 13. (1762) See also under HORNS.
  - 10 In rain and sunshine cuckolds go to heaven.
JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 12. (1659)
All cuckolds go to Heaven, that's most certain.
THOMAS OTWAY, The Souldier's Fortune. Act iv, sc. 1. (1681)
In the West of England it was in my childhood, and probably is still, a saying, when the sun shines and it rains at the same time . . . that "The Cuckolds are going to heaven."
Notes and Queries, Ser. iv, v, 366. (1870)
  - 11 Who is a cuckold and conceals it, carries coals in his bosom.
JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Spanish-English, p. 14. (1659) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1670)
He that thinks himself a Cuckold, carries live Coals in his Heart.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2332 (1732) An interesting example of the way in which Fuller polished and improved old sayings.
  - 12 Better be a cuckold and none know it, then to be none, and yet to be thought so.
JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Spanish-English, p. 14. (1659)
Better be a Cuckold and not know it, than be none, and every body say so.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 871. (1732)
  - 13 If a cuckold come he'll take away the meat.
viz. If there be no salt on the table.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 69. (1678)
Here's no salt; cuckolds will run away with the meat.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial ii. (1738)
  - 14 Cuckolds are Christians all the world over.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 69. (1670)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1215. (1732)
Better be a-cold than a cuckold.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 69.
  - 15 I hope better, quoth Benson, when his wife bade him, Come in, cuckold.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 86. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2608. (1732)

Call your husband cuckold in jest, and he'll never suspect you.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 335. (1855)

1 He that ears my land spares my team; . . . if I be his cuckold, he's my drudge.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, i, 3, 47. (1602)

2 Cuckolds are kinde men.

UNKNOWN, Westward for Smelts, p. 40. (1620)
Vain hopes of having the proverb of your side,
That cuckolds are kind to those who make them so.

MRS. MARY MANLEY, The Lost Lover. Act v, sc. 1. (1696)

CUCKOO

3 Whan Phebus wyf had sent for hir lemman,
Anon they wroghten al hir lust volage.

The whyte crowe, that heng ay in the cage,
Biheld hir werk, and seyde never a word.
And whan that hoom was come Phebus, the lord,

This crowe sang "cokkow! cokkow! cokkow!"
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Maunciple's Tale, l. 134. (c. 1389)

All be it that few men doo him hear,
The cucko singeth all the yeer.

W. C. HAZLITT, ed., Early Popular Poetry: Schole House of Women, l. 321. (1541)
Cuckoldom continues throughout the year.

Cuckoo, cuckoo: O word of fear,
Unpleasing to a married ear!

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 910. (1595)

What Cuckoe laid his egge within your nest?

UNKNOWN, Pasquil's Night-Cap, p. 75. (1612)

4 The first cock of hay frights the cuckoo away.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 52. (1846)

5 Turn your money when you hear the cuckoo, and you'll have money in your purse till the cuckoo come again.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 441. (1869)

6 When the cuckoo begins to cry "Cuckoo."
(ἦμος κόκκυξ κοκκύζει.)

HESED, Works and Days, l. 486. (c. 800 B.C.)

In March, the beginning of spring.

Cuckoo! To the fields, ye lechers! (κόκκυ ψωλοῖ πεδιόρδα.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Birds, l. 507. (414 B.C.)
ψωλοῖ also means "circumcised ones," and the proverb probably means, "The cuckoo (spring) is here. Leave off loving and get to work."

7 The cuckoo comes in April,
Sings a song in May;
Then in June another tune,
And then she flies away.

DYER, English Folk-Lore, p. 56. (1878) There are a number of similar jingles about the cuckoo, most of which may be found in Ap-

PERSON'S English Proverbs and Proverbial Phrases.

8 Thy Sound is like the cuckowe, the Welch Ambassador.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, A Tricke to Catch the Old-One. Act iv. (1608)

The Welsh Ambassador . . . is the general Cheshire name for the cuckoo, which is heard first from the Welsh quarter.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 121. (1917)

9 The cuckoo builds not for himself.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, ii, 6, 28. (1606)

10 When the Cuckow comes he eats up all the dirt.

UNKNOWN, Yea and Nay Almanack, April, 1680. In the spring the mire of winter dries up.

The cuckoo—to use a village phrase—had "eaten up the mud"; and the town was alive with holiday-makers.

MRS. LINNAEUS BANKS, Manchester Man. Ch. 8. (1876)

CUCUMBER

11 A scarecrow in a garden of cucumbers keepeth nothing.

APOCRYPHA: Baruch, vi, 70. (c. 320 B.C.)

12 As a lodge in a garden of cucumbers. (Sicut tугurium in cucumerario.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, i, 8. (c. 725 B.C.)

O for a lodge in a garden of cucumbers!

ROSSITER JOHNSON, Ninety-Nine in the Shade (c. 1890)

COOL AS A CUCUMBER, see under COLDNESS.

13 A cucumber should be well sliced, and dressed with pepper and vinegar, and then thrown out, as good for nothing.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Tour to the Hebrides, 5 Oct., 1773. Quoted as "a common saying of physicians in England"

14 He had been eight years upon a project for extracting sunbeams out of cucumbers, which were to be put into phials hermetically sealed, and let out to warm the air in raw inclement summers.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Gulliver's Travels: Voyage to Laputa. (1726)

CUD

15 Thei chewiden cud vpon whete, and wyne, and departiden fro me.

JOHN WYCLIF, Bible: Hosea, vii, 14. (1382)
The Authorized Version is, "They assemble themselves for corn and wine."

Let us ruminate, and as it were, chewe the cudde that wee maye haue the sweete icwse.

HOMILIES: Exhort. Holy Scriptures, ii, 15. (1547)

Chawing the cud of grieve and inward paine.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. v, canto vi, st. 19. (1596)

Revenge is now the cud That I do chew.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Queen of Corinth. Act iv, sc. 1. (c. 1617)

How he mumbles to himself! sure he does chew the cud of some set speech.

ROBERT HOWARD, The Surprisal. Act i. (1665)

Having left her a little while to chew the cud, if I may use that expression, on these first tidings.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. xviii, ch. 3. (1749)

People are forever chewing the cud and ruminating on the unsuccessful passages of their lives.

GARRICK Correspondence, ii, 33. (1774)

As that abominable tittle-tattle,

Which is the cud eschewed by human cattle.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xii, st. 43. (1823)

And in all outward patience chew the while

The cud of bitter thoughts.

ROBERT SOUTHBY, Oliver Newman, vii. (1829)

She is dismally chewing the cud of sour reflection.

RHODA BROUGHTON, Second Thoughts, i, i, 12. (1880)

CULTURE

1 To be happily at home with your own mind.
(Tuam mentem suaviter habitare.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Epistles. Epis. x, sec. 1. (A. D. 389)

2 Culture, the acquainting ourselves with the best that has been known and said in the world.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Literature and Dogma, xiii, (1876) It was to Matthew Arnold that the phrase "Apostle of culture" was first applied.

Culture is a passion for sweetness and light.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Literature and Dogma: Preface. (1873) See under SWEETNESS.

Culture with us ends in a headache.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Experience. (1844)

Culture is one thing and varnish another.

R. W. EMERSON, Journals, 1868.

Culture is not in the job; it is in the attitude to the job.

C. ALPHONSO SMITH, O. Henry, p. 225. (1916)

Culture is what your butcher would have if he were a surgeon.

MARY P. POOLE, A Glass Eye at the Keyhole.

(1938) "Culture," says George Santayana,

"Is on the horns of this dilemma: if profound and noble it must remain rare, if common it must become mean."

3 Hoist all sail, my dear boy, and steer clear of culture. (φείγε τὰ κάρτιον ἀπάμεινος.)

EPICURUS, Letter to Pythocles. (c. 300 B. C.)

See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Epicurus. Sec. 6.

Rather than by your culture spoiled,

Desist, and give us nature wild.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 248. (1737)

4 As culture comes in, faith goes out.

J. G. HOLLAND, Everyday Topics. (1876)

5 Intellectual refinement consists in having sincere and tender thoughts. (La politesse de l'esprit consiste à penser des choses honnêtes et délicates.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 99. (1665)

CUNNING

See also Craft, Deceit, Hypocrisy

6 We take Cunning for a Sinister or Crooked Wisdom.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Cunning. (1597)

This is the modern meaning. Originally it had no bad sense, meaning merely learning, skill, or cleverness.

Cunning borders upon ill Craft.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1217. (1732)

Cunning Craft is but the Ape of Wisdom.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1218. (1732)

7 Nothing doth more hurt in a State, then that Cunning Men passe for Wise.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Cunning. (1597)

8 The weak in courage is strong in cunning.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

Cunning is natural to mankind. It is the sense of our weakness.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 220. (1821)

9 Cunning baffles cunning. (Ars deluditur arte.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. i, No. 26. (c. 175 B. C.)

PLAY THE FOX IN PRESENCE OF A FOX, see FOX.

Don't think so much of your own Cunning, as to forget other Men's: A Cunning Man is over-matched by a cunning Man and a Half.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1754.

10 Dumb's a sly dog.

COLLEY CIBBER, Love Makes the Man. Act iv, sc. 1. (1701)

A sly old fish, too cunning for the hook.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Parish Register. Pt. ii (1807)

He's tough, ma'am, tough is J. B. Tough and devilish sly.

DICKENS, Dombey and Son. Bk. i, ch. 7. (1848)

11 There is a simplicity of cunning no less than a simplicity of innocence.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 11. Repeated in ch. 27. (1843)

12 Wiles help weak folk.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 108. (c. 1595)

Wily as a fox.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 285. (1639)

13 Cold and cunning come from the north:

But cunning sans wisdom is nothing worth.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1743

One Man may be more cunning than another, but not more cunning than everybody else.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1745

Cunning proceeds from want of capacity.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1751.

<sup>1</sup> You are so cunning, you know not what Weather 'tis when it rains.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5859. (1732)

<sup>2</sup> Cunning is the art of concealing our own defects and discovering other people's weaknesses.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 101. (1821)

<sup>3</sup> There dwelt Sisyphus, craftiest of men. (ἔνθα δὲ Σίσυφος ἔσκεν ὁ κέρδιστος γένος ἀνδρῶν.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. vi, l. 153. (c. 850 B.C.) Sisyphus, a legendary king of Corinth, reputed the most cunning of mankind, for his misdeeds on earth was condemned in Hades to roll to the top of a hill a large stone, which immediately rolled down again, so that his punishment was eternal.

Sisyphus tricks. (Σίσυφον μηχανάει.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Acharnians, l. 391. (425 B.C.) In post-Homeric legend, Sisyphus was the father of Odysseus, the most cunning of the Greeks, and from this arose another proverb, "An Odysseus trick" (Ὀδυσσεύς μηχανή), cited by SUIDAS, Lexicon, x, 71.

A man of twelve tricks. (δωδεκαμήχανος.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Frogs, l. 1327. (405 B.C.) Or of as many tricks as the courtesan Cyrene practises.

That's a Thessalian dodge. (Θεσσαλὸν σόφισμα.)

EURIPIDES, The Phoenician Maidens, l. 1407. (c. 420 B.C.)

<sup>4</sup> By cunning is a man far better than by strength. (μήτι τοι δρυτόμος μεγ' ἀμείνων ἢ βίηφι.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxiii, l. 315. (c. 850 B.C.)

Machination is worth more than force. (Engin mieulx vault que force.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 37. (1545)

The Germans say, "List geht über Gewalt" (Cunning surpasses strength). "Contrivance is better than force" is an English variant.

Wiles often do what force can't accomplish.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Wile. (1736)

<sup>5</sup> Every man wishes to be wise, and they who cannot be wise are almost always cunning.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 92. (1758)

<sup>6</sup> Well skilled in cunning wiles, he could make white of black and black of white. (Candida de negris et de candentibus atra.)

OVID, Metamorphoses, xi, 313. (A.D. 7) See under BLACKNESS.

<sup>7</sup> By being too subtle one misleads oneself. (Chi troppo s'assottiglia, si scavezza.)

PETRARCH, Canzoniere. Bk. xi, st. 48. (c. 1350)

A Tuscan proverb, quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 12: "Par trop subtiliser, on s'égare soi-même." An English variant is, "People who are too sharp cut their own fingers."

Too many expedients may spoil an affair. (Le trop d'expédients peut gâter une affaire.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. ix, fab. 14. (1665)

Too much cunning undoes.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 3. (1659)

<sup>8</sup> Men, like bullets, go farthest when they are smoothest. (Die Menschen gehen wie Schiesskugeln weiter, wenn sie abgeglättet sind.)

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Titan. Zykel 26. (1800)

You can't chop a thing as round as you can pare it. (K'an ti mu tê ch'e ti yüan.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 99. (1875)

<sup>9</sup> She's as cunning as a dead pig, but not half so honest.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, 1185, has, "He's as subtle as a dead pig; Non plus sapit, quam sus mactata." There are other proverbial comparisons, "As cunning as a crafty Craddock" (from crafty John Craddock, vicar of Gainford, 1594); "As cunning as Crowder" (Crowder being a fiddler); and so on.

He's certainly as cunning as an old fox.

JAMES HILTON, Was It Murder? Ch. 13. (1933)

<sup>10</sup> Cunnyng (they say) is no burthen.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Proverbs, fo. 22. (1539)

Cunnyng is no burden. (Scientia non è peso.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 34. (1578)

Cunning is no burthen to carry, as paying neither portage by land, nor poundage by sea.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: The True Gentleman. (1642) "Cunning" in its original sense of skill or knowledge. A variant of the saying that the skilled man is at home anywhere, because he can find a living in any country.

Skill is no Burthen.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4182. (1732)

CUP

<sup>11</sup> Cup-rowers. (κυλίκων ἐπίται.)

ATHENAEUS, Deipnosophistae. Sec. 443D. (c. A.D. 200) Quoting Dionysius.

<sup>12</sup> A cup in the pate is a mile in the gate.

MOTTEUX, tr., Rabelais. Bk. iv, ch. 65. (1694)

A cup in the pate is a mile in the gate; and a spur in the head is worth two in the heel.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

A pot in the pate is a mile in the gate.

SAMUEL PEGGE, Derbicisms, p. 135. (c. 1791)

<sup>13</sup> Over their cups. (Inter pocula.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. i, l. 30. (c. A.D. 58)

<sup>14</sup> He has a cup too much.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 87. (1678)

A cup too low, when any of the Company are mute or pensive.

UNKNOWN, Dictionary Canting Crew. (1690)

You're a cup too low. A glass of claret will make you feel more cheerful.

AINSWORTH, John Law: Prologue. (1864)

<sup>1</sup> My cup runneth over. (Calix meus inebrians quam praeclarus est!)

Old Testament: Psalms, xxiii, 5. (c. 550 B.C.)

<sup>2</sup> A cup in the hand is worth all besides.

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2716. (1875) BIRD IN THE HAND, see under BIRD.

<sup>3</sup> You and he are Cup and Cann.

SWIFT, Libel on Dr. Delaney. (1729)

AS GREAT AS CUP AND CAN, see under FRIEND.

MERRY AS CUP AND CAN, see under MERRIMENT.

<sup>4</sup> When the coppe is follest, thenne ben hir feyrest.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Hendyng, 16. (c. 1300)

When the cup's full carry it even.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 346. (1721)

"When you have arrived at power and wealth, take care of insolence, pride and oppression."

A full Cup must be carried steadily.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 122. (1732)

"It is difficult," saith the proverb, "to carry a full cup without spilling."

WALTER SCOTT, The Monastery: Intro. (1820)

CUPS THAT CHEER BUT NOT INEBRIATE, see under TEA.

TO KISS THE CUP, see under KISS.

CUPID

<sup>5</sup> Biforn hir [Venus] stood hir sone Cupido . . .

And blind he was, as it is ofte sene;

A bowe he bar and arwes brighte and kene.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knight's Tale, l. 1105. (c. 1386)

Young Adam Cupid, he that shot so trim,

When King Cophetua lov'd the beggar-maid.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 1, 13. (1594) Borrowed, perhaps, from a ballad, King Cophetua and the Beggar-Maid, of which the first line is, "The blinded boy, that shoots so trim." See PERCY, Reliques. Ser. i, bk. ii, No. 6.

This wimpled, whining, purblind, wayward boy: This senior-junior, giant-dwarf, Dan Cupid.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iii, 1, 181. (1595)

Cupid is a blind gunner.

WILLIAM FARQUHAR, Love and a Bottle. Act i, sc. 1. (1699)

Cupid "the little greatest god."

ROBERT SOUTHHEY, Commonplace Book. Ser. iv, p. 462 (c. 1840)

Cupid "the little greatest enemy."

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. (1860)

<sup>6</sup> For she is modir of Cupyde,

The God of Love, blinde as stoon,

That helphith lovers many oon.

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose, (c. 1240) CHAUCER (?), tr., l. 3702. (c. 1365)

<sup>7</sup> To Chloe's breast young Cupid slyly stole,
But he crept in at Myra's pocket-hole.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Couplets and Fragments. No. 4. (1808)

<sup>8</sup> Who drinks of Cupid's nectar cup
Loveth downward, and not up.

R. W. EMERSON, To Rhea. (1867)

<sup>9</sup> Whoe'er thou art, thy Lord and Master see!
Thou wast my Slave, thou art, or thou shalt be!

GEORGE GRANVILLE, Inscription for a Figure Representing the God of Love. (1712) A paraphrase of an epigram in the Greek Anthology, of which Voltaire also made a rendering:

Qui que tu sois, voici ton maître;

Il l'est—le fut—ou le doit être.

<sup>10</sup> Cupide is a craftie childe, following those at an ynch that studie pleasure, and flying those swiftly that take paines.

JOHN LYLX, Euphuus (Arber), p. 112. (1579)

<sup>11</sup> His body is naked, but his mind is covered. (γυμνὸς ὁλος τὸ γε σῶμα, νύος δὲ οἱ εὖ πεπύκασται.)

MOSCHUS, Runaway Love, l. 15. (c. 150 B.C.)

<sup>12</sup> O Cupid, a tiny fellow you may be, yet much too mighty. (Cupido, cum sis tam pauxillus, nimis multum vales!)

NAEVIUS, Gymnasticus. Frag. 60, Loeb. (c. 220 B.C.)

O Cupid, how mighty is thy sway! (O Cupido. quantus es.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 854. (c. 200 B.C.)

My heart has been transfixt by Cupid's shaft. (Sagitta Cupido cor meum transfixit.)

PLAUTUS, Persa. l. 25. (c. 200 B.C.)

<sup>13</sup> Cupid's butt-shaft is too hard for Hercules' club.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, i, 2, 181. (1595)

Loving goes by haps:

Some Cupid kills with arrows, some with traps.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, iii, 1, 105. (1598)

CUPIDITY, see Covetousness

CURE, see Remedy

CURIOSITY

<sup>14</sup> He fashioned hell for the inquisitive. (Scrutantibus gehennas parabat.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Confessions. Bk. xi, ch. 12.

(A.D. 397) Quoting an unnamed author, who made this reply when asked what God was doing before he made heaven and earth. Milton quotes this, Works, i, 362, and Southey, in his Commonplace Book, ser. iv, p. 591, opines that other answers are possible.

<sup>1</sup> This disease of curiosity. (Hoc morbo cupiditatis.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Confessions. Bk. x, ch. 35. (A. D. 397)

<sup>2</sup> Too much curiosity lost Paradise.

APHRA BEHN, Lucky Chance. Act iii, sc. 3. (1686)

<sup>3</sup> Seek not out the things that are too hard for thee, neither search the things that are above thy strength.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), iii, 21. (c. 190 B.C.)

Be not curious in unnecessary matters.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, iii, 23. The Koran, ch. 49, has, "Inquire not too curiously."

Winnow not with every wind and walk not in every path.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, vi, 9.

Strive not in a matter that concerneth thee not. (Ἐπὶ πράγματος οὐ οὐκ ἔστιν σοὶ χρεὶα μὴ ἐπιψέ.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xi, 9. Quoted in Midrash Tanhuma, 73a.

Seek not out the things that are too hard for thee, and into the things that are hidden from thee inquire not.

Babylonian Talmud: Chagigah, fo. 13a. (c. 450)

The thynges that be aboute us, belonge nothyng unto us. (Quae supra nos, nihil ad nos.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. vi, No. 69.

(1508) Taverner, tr., fo. 20. (1550) Taverner adds: "This was the sayenge of Socrates. But we maye also turne it the contrarye way: The thynges that be underneth us, per- teyne nothyng unto us."

If curiositie bee blameable in worldly affaires, it is detestable in matters of religion: and therefore wee are admonished not to seeke to knowe thynges which belonge not to us to knowe.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 98. (1574) Pettie, tr.

<sup>4</sup> I loathe that low vice curiosity.

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 23. (1818)

<sup>5</sup> Of a brave man and of good wine. ask not whence they came. (Den tapfern Mann und den guten Wein, soll man nicht nach seinem Herkommen fragen.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 313. (1856) A German proverb.

<sup>6</sup> He that pryeth into every cloud, may be struck with a thunderbolt.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 31. (1639)

He that pryeth into the clouds may be struck with a thunderbolt.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 134. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2255. (1732)

Where the apple reddens, Never pry—
Lest we lose our Edens, Eve and I.

BROWNING, A Woman's Last Word. (1855)

<sup>7</sup> Curiosity has a spiteful way of turning back on the curious.

DOROTHY DISNEY, Crimson Friday, p. 20. (1943)

<sup>8</sup> Curiosity is endless, restless, and useless.

Curiosity is ill Manners in another's House.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 1219–20. (1732)

Envy and Idleness married together, begot Curiosity.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1376.

<sup>9</sup> Curiosity can do more things than kill a cat.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Schools and Schools.

(1909) A reference to the saying, "Curiosity killed a cat," or "Curiosity killed a monkey."

"Curiosity is a valuable trait," says Clarence Day, in This Simian World, ch. 9, "but the curiosity of a simian is as excessive as the toil of an ant."

Curiosity may have killed the cat, but it has never been detrimental to the doctor.

P. J. STEINCHROHN, More Years for the Asking, p. 17. (1940)

Curiosity it was that killed the cat. And curiosity it was that had killed more women, or, at least, wrecked their amours, than women knew or even dreamt of.

PETER CHENEY, Dark Duet, p. 204. (1943)

Curiosity killed the cat, to say nothing of Bluebeard's wives.

VIRGINIA PERDUE, He Fell Down Dead, p. 10. (1943)

<sup>10</sup> Talk to him of Jacob's ladder, and he would ask the number of the steps.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Wit and Opinions: A Mutter-of-fact Man. (c. 1850)

<sup>11</sup> Keek [peep] in the stoup was ne'er a good fellow.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 226. (1721)

Keek in my kail pot, glower [stare] in my ambry [food cupboard].

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 228. (1721)

Enquire not what boils in another's Pot.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1373. (1732)

<sup>12</sup> Remember Lot's wife. (μνημονεύετε τῆς γυναίκος Λώτ.)

New Testament: Luke, xvii, 32. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Memores estote uxoris Lot."

Who was turned into a pillar of salt for looking back.

Curiosity will always hurt women.

JOHN NORTHBROOKE, Against Dicing. (1577)

You know what a woman's curiosity is. Almost as great as a man's!

OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband. Act i. (1895)

<sup>13</sup> I neuer mean to put my hand betweene the barke and the tree, or in matters which are not for me to be ouer curious.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 264. (1580) See HUSBAND AND WIFE.

<sup>14</sup> Curiosity is an evil natural and original with man. (La curiosité est un mal naturel et original en l'homme.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580)

The first and simplest emotion which we discover in the human mind is curiosity.

EDMUND BURKE, The Sublime and Beautiful. Sec. 2. (1756)

<sup>1</sup> Curiosity is the direct incontinency of the spirit.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living, p. 129. (1650) Curiosity is born of jealousy. (La curiosité naît de la jalousie.)

MOLIÈRE, Dom Garcie de Navarre. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 22. (1661)

Curiosity is the spiritual adultery of the soul. Curiosity is spiritual drunkenness.

THOMAS BROOKS, A Golden Key to Open Hidden Treasures. (1675) Works (1867), v, 142.

Curiosity is little more than another name for hope.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth. (1827)

<sup>2</sup> He who says "[Tell me,] I pray," is like the man who tries to break a cudgel with a twig.

TUAAF, Teaching. No. xxi. (c. 2500 B.C.) Budge, tr. The last phrase is a proverb which Tuaf repeats in No. xxv

<sup>3</sup> Now you're fishing. (Proinde expiscare.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 382. (161 B.C.)

CURSE

For Cursing in the Sense of Swearing, see Swearing

<sup>4</sup> Let not the curse of the ordinary man have little value in thine eyes.

Babylonian Talmud: Megillah, fo. 15. (c. 450)

The curse of a wise man is fulfilled, even when undeserved.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 90b. Yalkut to Samuel, 142, has, "One should take grave notice of his master's curse, even when undeserved."

Be the cursed and not the curser.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 49a.

For curs wol slee, right as assoiling saveth.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 663. (c. 1386)

<sup>5</sup> Let him be Anathema. (ἀνάθεμα.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, xvi, 22. (A.D. 57) Anathema, excommunicated, accursed, assigned to damnation. The full sentence is,

"If any man love not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be Anathema Maranatha," and this is the way it is usually quoted, but according to modern criticism, "Maranatha," meaning "The Lord hath come," is a distinct sentence having no connection with "Anathema." However, "Anathema Maranatha" is generally supposed to be a portentously intensified form of "Anathema."

He would wish to be an Anathema from Christ.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Goodness. (c. 1612)

The divine thunders out his anathemas.

EDMUND BURKE, A Vindication of Natural Society. (1756) Works, i, 64.

I don't see the sense of such an anathema maranatha as we got today.

HARRIET B. STOWE, Dred. Bk. ii, ch. 2. (1856)

<sup>6</sup> May he be cursed wherever he may be; in the house or in the field; in the road or in the footpath, in the wood, in the water, or in the church; may he be cursed living, dying, eating, drinking, hungry, thirsty, sleeping, waking, standing, sitting, working, resting; May he be cursed in every part of his body, inward and outward; . . . may there be no health in him

ERNULF, BISHOP OF ROCHESTER, ed., Textus Roffensis. (c. 1100) The book, preserved in Rochester Cathedral, is a collection of laws and papal decrees, and the celebrated curse was not, therefore, the invention of Bishop Ernulf, but of some unknown medieval Mark Twain. "Os orare, vale, communio, mensa negatur" (Speech, prayer, greeting, intercourse, food are denied) is a metrical version. For a longer one see BARHAM, The Jackdaw of Rheims.

<sup>7</sup> I do not conceive that any thing can happen . . . which you would give a curse to know.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter. (1763) Writings (1892), i, 346.

Never care one curse about them!

MOORE, Intercepted Letters, ii, 93. (1813)

He will not care a curse.

WALTER SCOTT, Journal, ii, 43. (1827)

<sup>8</sup> Curse God, and die.

Old Testament: Job, ii, 9. (c. 350 B.C.) The Vulgate rendering of this phrase is "Benedic Deo et morere" (Bless God and die).

<sup>9</sup> Mark, where she stands! around her form I draw

The awful circle of our solemn Church!

Set but a foot within that holy ground,

And on thy head—yea, though it wore a crown—

I launch the curse of Rome!

LORD LYTTON, Richelieu. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 121. (1838)

<sup>10</sup> As the bird by wandering, as the swallow by flying, so the curse causeless shall not come (Sicut avis ad alia transvolans, et passer quo libet vadens: sic maledictum frustra prolatum in quempiam superveniet.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvi, 2. (c. 350 B.C.)

<sup>11</sup> As he loveth cursing, so let it come to him. (Et dilexit maledictionem, et veniet ei.)

Old Testament: Psalms, cix, 17. (c. 250 B.C.)

And ofte tyme swich cursinge wrongfully retorneth agayn to him that curseth, as a brid that retorneth agayn to his owene nest.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Personnes Tale. Sec. 41. (c. 1386)

For curses are like arrowes shot upright,

Which falling down light on the shuter's head.

SHAKESPEARE (?), Arden of Feversham. Act

iv, sc. 4, l. 40. (1592) One of the apocryphal plays.

Curse and be cursed! it is the fruit of cursing. FLETCHER, Bloody Brother. Act. iii, sc. 1. (1616) Curses prove choke-pears to those that plant them.

ROBERT CODRINGTON, Proverbs. (c. 1660) Choke-pear, literally, is a name given to harsh and unpalatable varieties of pear, figuratively to anything difficult or impossible to swallow. The French call it "poire d'angoisse."

Curses are like young chickens; they always come home to roost.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Curse of Kehama: Motto. (1809)

I have heard a good man say, that a curse was like a stone flung up to the heavens, and maist like to return on the head that sent it.

WALTER SCOTT, Old Mortality. Ch. 42. (1816) Curse away!

And let me tell thee, Beauseant, a wise proverb The Arabs have,—"Curses are like young chickens,

And still come home to roost."

LORD LYTON, The Lady of Lyons. Act v, sc. 2. (1838) TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs, p. 124, quotes this as a Turkish proverb.

Their injustice will return upon them. "Curses, like chickens, come home to roost."

SAMUEL SMILES, Duty, p. 89. (1880) The Italians say, "Le bestemmie fanno come le processioni, ritornano donde partirono" (Curses are like processions, they return whence they started). See also under RETRIBUTION.

<sup>1</sup> The ill-grounded curse is a malignant lie. (Falsum maledictum malevolum mendacium est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 216. (c. 43 B. C.)

<sup>2</sup> The curse of Cromwell go wi' ye.

WALTER SCOTT, The Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 8. (1818) Also Rob Roy, ch. 34.

The curse of Cromwell on your proud Scots stomach.

WALTER SCOTT, The Two Drovers. Ch. 2. (1827) Such is what the Irish common people still call the "Curse of Cromwell"; this is the summary of his work in that country.

CARLYLE, Cromwell's Letters and Speeches. Letter 85. (1845) It is interesting to note that at cards the nine of diamonds is called "the curse of Scotland," probably because it resembles the armorial bearings of Dalrymple, Lord Stair, who sanctioned the massacre of Glencoe in 1692.

<sup>3</sup> Curses, not loud but deep.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, v, 3, 27. (1606)

<sup>4</sup> Curced in kirc than sal thai be wid candil, boke, and bell.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 17110. (c. 1300) A form of excommunication closed with the words, "Doe to the book, quench the candle, ring the bell."

Thou shalt be cursed with booke and bell.

THOMAS WRIGHT, ed., Political Poems, i, 341. (c. 1394)

I shall curse you wyth book and belle and candell SIR THOMAS MALORY, Le Morte Darthur. Bk. xxi, ch. 1. (1485)

For as moch as Kyng Johan doth Holy Church so handle,

Here I do curse hym wyth crosse, boke, bell and candle.

JOHN BALE, Kynge Johan, l. 1033. (c. 1548)

We shalbe curst with bell, booke, and candle.

MARLOWE, Doctor Faustus, l. 886. (1792)

The blind vicar would needs . . . curse me with bel, book and candle.

THOMAS NASHE, Strange Newes. (1593)

Bell, book, and candle shall not drive me back.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, iii, 3, 12. (1596)

Hold thy hand, on pain of bell, book, and candle.

SCOTT, The Fair Maid of Perth, i, 155. (1828)

CUSHION

<sup>5</sup> Thou leanest beside the cushing.

ABRAHAM FLEMING, A Panoplie of Epistles. (1576) Beside the mark, wide of the argument.

He raungeth abroad . . . altogether besides the cushian.

JAMES BELL, tr., Haddon against Osorius, 78. (1581)

Thou art beside the cushion.

RICHARD BERNARD, tr., Terence, p. 230. (1598) His rendering of erras.

He is wide of the cushion.

WILLIAM WALKER, Idiomatologia Anglo-Latina, p. 517. (1690)

<sup>6</sup> I may set you besyde the cushyn yit.

And make you wype your nose vpon your sleeue.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546) To depose or set aside; to turn out of a place or position.

To put enimitie betweene the king and hir; and to set hir besides the cushion.

ABRAHAM FLEMING, Continuation of Holinshed's Chronicle, iii, 1305/1. (1587)

Sometimes putting them besides the cushion, and placing others in their roome.

MILES SMITH, Sermons, p. 188. (c. 1620)

He let fly at the Biscaine . . . and as we say in our poor English proverb, put him clean beside the cushion.

EDMUND GAYTON, Pleasant Notes upon Don Quixot, p. 36. (1654)

<sup>7</sup> His pregnant motives are at last prov'd nothing but . . . a Queen Maries Cushion.

JOHN MILTON, Eikonoklastes, iii, 356. (1649)

A proverbial phrase derived from the fact that Queen Mary Tudor is said to have used a cushion under her gown to simulate pregnancy.

His Queen . . . was brought to bed of a cushion. Letter from the Pope, in Harleian Miscellany, i, 370. (1689)

His wife went forty weeks with a Cushion.

REV. SAMUEL JOHNSON, Notes upon the Pastoral Letter of Bishop Burnet, i, 37. (1694)

1 And whan he weneth to syt,
Yet may he mysse the quytshyon.

JOHN SKELTON, Colyn Cloute, l. 988. (c. 1525)
Miss the mark.

Yet hath he missed the kushen in many placis.
GEORGE JOYE, Apology to Tindale, p. 48. (1535)

Thy Wits doe erre and misse the Cushion quite.
MICHAEL DRAYTON, Eclogues, viii, 80. (1593)

He hath missed the cushen and sitteth bare.

SAMUEL HIERON, A Defence of the Ministers, ii, 157. (1608)

CUSTOM

See also Habit, Use

2 Custom reconciles us to everything.

EDMUND BURKE, On the Sublime and Beautiful. Pt. iv, sec. 18. (1756)

3 Custom doth make dotards of us all.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. iii, ch. 8. (1836)

Custom makes monsters of us all.

NGAIO MARSH, Death in Ecstasy, p. 234. (1941)

4 Different customs belong to different pursuits.
(Disparis mores disparia studia sequuntur.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. xx, sec. 74. (44 B.C.)
A similar Latin proverb is, "Quot regiones, tot mores" (As many regions, so many customs); and another, "Ubi homines sunt, modi sunt" (Where there are men, there are customs).

Different ways for different occasions. (ἄλλος βίος, ἄλλη διαίτα.)

ZENOBIUS, Adagia. (c. A.D. 130) A Greek proverb.

Efen-fela bega, theoda and theawa [An equal number both of countries and customs].

GREIN, ed., Anglo-Saxon Gnomie Verses, l. 17. (c. 1100)

Ase fele thedes, ase fele thewes [So many countries, so many customs].

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Hendyng. (c. 1300)
Reliquiae Antiquae, i, 109.

In sondry londes, sondry ben usages.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 28. (c. 1374)

So many lands, so many fashions.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Alphonsus, Act iii, sc. 1. (1634)

So many countreys, so many customes. (Tant de gens tant de guises.)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 73. (1670) Another form of the French proverb is, "En tant de pays tant de guises." The Spanish form is, "En cada tierra su uso" (In every country its own custom); the German, "So mancher Mensch, so manche Sitte"; the Italian, "Tanti paesi, tante usanze."

DIFFERENT TIMES, DIFFERENT MANNERS, see under MANNERS.

5 A bad custom is like a good cake, better broken than kept.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Gasteau. (1611)
The proverb which Cotgrave is translating is usually given in French as "Gâteau et mauvaise coutume se doivent rompre" (A cake and a bad custom ought to be broken).

A cask and an ill custom must be broken.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 28. (1640) "Cask," perhaps a misprint for "cake."

Cut off the leg of an ill custom.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Spanish-English, p. 8. (1659)

Bad customs are better broken than kept up.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 832. (1732)
The law proverb is, "Malus usus est abolendus."

Break the legs of an evil custom.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 333 (1855) But in Spain they say, "Mudar costumbre a par de muerte" (To change a custom is as bad as death).

6 The favorite phrase of the English law is, "a custom whereof the memory of man runneth not back to the contrary."

R. W. EMERSON, English Traits. Ch. 6. (1856)

7 A good custom is surer than law. (τὸ πῶς γὰρ χρηστός ἀσφαλέστερος νόμος.)

EURIPIDES, Pirithoüs. Frag. (c. 420 B.C.) There are a number of Latin variants, "Consuetudo est altera lex" (Custom is another law); "Mos regit legem" (Custom rules the law); "Mos pro lege" (Custom in place of law); "Vetustas pro lege semper habetur" (Ancient custom has the force of law); "Consuetudo pro lege servatur" (Custom may serve in place of law); "Consuetudo est optima legum interpretis" (Custom is the best interpreter of law).

Laws are slaves of custom. (Leges mori serviunt.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 1043. (c. 194 B.C.)

With customs we live well, but laws undo us.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)
Custom, that unwritten law.

By which the people keep even kings in awe.

W. DAVENANT, Circe. Act ii, sc. 3. (c. 1660)

Custom has the force of law. (Costumbre haze ley.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 236. (1814)
A Spanish proverb.

Society has only one law, and that is custom.

P. G. HAMERTON, The Intellectual Life. Pt. vi, let. 1. (1873)

8 Custom in the end becomes men's nature. (ταῦτην ἀνθρώποισι τελευτᾶσαν φύσιν εἶναι.)

EVENUS, Epigram. (c. 540 B.C.) Quoted by ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics, vii, 10, 4

An ancient custom obtains the force of nature (Vetus consuetudo naturae vim obtinet.)

CICERO, De Inventione. (c. 80 B.C.)

Custom produces a kind of second nature. (Consuetudine quasi alteram quandam naturam efficit.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. v, ch. 25. (c. 45 B.C.)

Custom is stronger than nature. (Consuetudo natura potentior est.)

QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS, De Rebus Alexandri Magni. Bk. v, sec. 5, l. 21. (c. A. D. 50)

Custom is another nature. (Consuetudo est altera natura.)

GALEN, De Tuenda Valetudine. Ch. 1. (c. A. D. 180)

PLUTARCH, in his essay On Keeping Well, 123C, emphasizes the importance of custom, or fixed habits, to the preservation of health and it was from this source perhaps that Galen derived his epigram, which was afterwards quoted by St. Augustine.

For as Ypcras sayth, "costome is the seconde nature or kynde."

JAMES YONGE, tr., The Gouvernauce of Prynces, p. 238. (1422)

Custom is like unto another nature.

WILLIAM BULLKIN, The Government of Health, fo. 98. (1558)

Custom is a second nature, and no less powerful. (L'accoutumance est une seconde nature, et non moins puissante.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 10. (1595)

Custom is a second nature.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 84. (1670)

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 447. (1712) etc.

Custom is a fifth nature.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 133. (1817)

Habit has become a second nature.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 10. (1817)

Custom in infancy becomes nature in old age.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 341. (1855)

Habit and use, as we read, are second nature.

Mrs. HENRY WOOD, Trevlyn Hold. Ch. 24. (1864): "Habit is ten times nature" is attributed to the Duke of Wellington.

1 Ill Customs and bad Advice are seldom forgotten.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742

2 Custom is generally too hard for Conscience. Custom is the Guide of the Ignorant.

Custom without Reason, is but an ancient Error.

FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 1222-26. (1732)

Old Custom, without Truth, is but an old Error.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3710.

Once in Use, and ever after a Custom.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3733.

3 This your rule is rather prayesd than practised.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 24. (1574) Pettie, tr.

It is a custom

More honour'd in the breach than the observance.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 4, 15. (1601)

4 As the custom is. (Ut mos est.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 392. (c. A. D. 120)

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iv, 5, 80.

5 Nature runs back to its customs. (Ad mores natura recurrit.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 239. (c. A. D. 120)

6 Last night I thought over a thousand plans, but in the morning I went my old way.

ARTHUR E. MOULE, Proverbs from Ningpo. (DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 330.)

7 Custom, lord of all mortals and immortals. (νόμος ὁ πάντων βασιλεὺς θνητῶν τε καὶ ἀθανάτων.)

PINDAR, Fragments. Frag. 169, Bergk. (c. 475 B. C.) A fragment from an unknown poem, quoted by PLATO, Gorgias, 484B, and by HERODOTUS, iii, 38.

Great is the force of custom. (Consuetudinis magna vis est.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. ii, sec. 17. (45 B. C.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 22. (1580) PLINY THE YOUNGER, Letters, i, 20, has "Usus magister egregius," which may be rendered "Custom, superlative master," but usus is usually translated "experience," and these quotations will be found under that head.

There is nothing greater than custom. (Nil ad-suetudine maius.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. ii, l. 345. (c. 1 B. C.)

Custom is stronger than all things and master of everything else. (πάντων επικρατεὶ καὶ λαχυνότερόν ἐστιν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Garrulity. Sec. 515A. (c. A. D. 95)

Custom governs all things.

SALOMON IBN GABRIOL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 480. (c. 1050)

Custom is a strong thing. (Fort chose est d'accoutumance.)

MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux: De L'Aveine pour Morel, l. 217. (c. 1250)

Pindar, as I have heard say, called custom the Queen and Empress of the world. (Pindarus, à ce qu'on m'a dict, l'appelle "la royne et emperiere du monde.")

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 22. (1580)

The command of custom is great.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

8 The customs of today are different. (Alii nunc sunt mores.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 437. (c. 190 B. C.)

9 We are more sensible of what is done against custom than against Nature.

PLUTARCH, Of Eating of Flesh. Ch. 1. (c. A. D. 60)

Custom is harder to breke than nature.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophers, fo. 111. (1477) Quoting Pythagoras.

10 Custom, the world's great idol.

JOHN POMFRET, Reason, l. 99. (c. 1700)

Custom is the Plague of wise Men, and the Idol of Fools.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1224. (1732)

11 Most tyrannous is the authority of custom. (Gravissimum est imperium consuetudinis.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 236. (c. 43 B. C.) More briefly, "Usus est tyrannus" (Custom is a tyrant).

Custom is a great Tyrant.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 62. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Conform to tyrant custom.

JOSHUA SYLVESTER, tr., Devine Weekes and Workes. Week ii, day 3. (1591)

The tyrant custom.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, i, 3, 230. (1605)

When tyrant Custom had not shackled man.

JAMES THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 222. (1730)

1 Choose what is best; custom will make it agreeable and easy. (Optimum elige; suave et facile illud faciet consuetudo.)

PYTHAGORAS. (c. 525 B.C.) STOBAEUS, Ethical Sentences. Latinized by Bacon.

That monster, custom, who all sense doth eat,
Of habits devil, is angel yet in this,
That to the use of actions fair and good
He likewise gives a frock or livery
That aptly is put on.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 4, 161. (1600)

Hamlet: Has this fellow no feeling of his business, that he sings at grave-making?

Horatio: Custom hath made it in him a property of easiness.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 1, 75. (1600)

There is nothing so hard, but custom makes it ease.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Seneca's Epistles, 10. (c. 1680)

Custom . . . makes every thing familiar.

THOMAS BAKER, Tunbridge Walks, ii. (1703)

Custom makes all Things easy.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1225. (1732)

JEAN INGELOW, Dreams that Came True. Ch. 7. (1867)

2 'Twas then the custom of the country.
(Comme lors estoit la coustume du pays.)

RAHELAI, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 52. (1548)

The custom of the country. (L'vsage du pays.)

RAHELAI, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 16. (1552)

Wee must have regarde for the Custome of the Countrie.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 190. (1574) Pettie, tr.

The Custom of the Country.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER. Title of play. (c. 1613)

3 A deep meaning often lies in old customs.
(Ein tiefer Sinn wohnt in den alten Bräuchen.)

SCHILLER, Marie Stuart. Act i, sc. 7. l. 131. (1800)

The French say, "Les vieilles coutumes sont les bonnes coutumes" (The old customs are good customs), and "Une fois n'est pas coutume" (Once does not make a custom). The Germans say, "Einmal ist keinmal" (One time is no time).

4 Nice customs curtesy to great kings.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, v, 2, 293. (1599)

5 Custom kills with feeble dint,
More by use than strength prevailing.

ROBERT SOUTHWELL, Loss in Delay. (c. 1595)

6 All men are partially buried in the grave of custom, and of some we see only the crown of the head above ground.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Monday. (1849)

CUSTOMER

7 Queer customers, these monks.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 2. (1837)

Rather a tough customer.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 1. (1841)

John was a pretty hard customer.

P. T. BARNUM, Life, p. 14. (1855)

A bull elk is an awkward customer.

H. W. WHEELWRIGHT, Spring and Summer in Lapland, p. 185. (1863)

You are a funny customer.

CARL SANDBURG, Cornhuskers, p. 89. (1918)

8 As thou meetest with ugly customers o' the road.

SCOTT, Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 28. (1818)

You will find him, my young sir, an Ugly Customer.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 43. (1844)

It was evident that he was a very ugly customer.

EDMUND YATES, Recollections, ii, 207. (1884)

9 In all minor discussions between Statler employes and Statler guests, the employé is dead wrong.

E. M. STATLER, Statler Hotel Service Code. (1921)

The customer is always right.

DAVID DODGE, Death and Taxes, p. 17. (1941)

The customer's always right if he pays for it.

STEPHEN ACRE, The Yellow Overcoat, p. 56. (1942)

The customer is always right in these resort towns.

CHRISTOPHER HALE, Murder in Tow, p. 22. (1943)

CUT

10 Cut, or give me the Bill.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1228. (1732)

Cutting out well, is better than sewing up well.

THOMAS FULLER. Gnomologia. No. 1230.

11 It'll all be cut and dried.

C. W. GRAFTON, The Rat Began to Gnaw the Rope, p. 147. (1943)

12 Hauing the winde fauourable, [he] made a short cut.

ROBERT GREENE, Menaphon, p. 70. (1589)

He . . . leades them the nearest cut to Jericho.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Recollection of Treatises, 1115. (1614)

The way is not always by the shortest cut.

WILLIAM BURTON, A Commentary on Antoninus His Itinerary, p. 114. (1658)

The Latin proverb is, "Compendia dispendia" (A short cut is a loss of time). See also under SHORT.

There is a near cut to heaven from every place.

AINSWORTH, Latin Dictionary: Anaxagoras. (1783)

There are no short cuts in Nature.

G.D.CAMPBELL, The Reign of Law. Ch.7. (1866)

1 Here is a boy that loves to . . . "cut behind" anything on runners.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 8. (1860) To hang on behind.

2 Now cut out this nonsense.

ROBERT A. WASON, Happy Hawkins, p. 198. (1909)

You've got to cut 'em out.

O. HENRY, Rolling Stones, p. 193. (1911)

"Oh, cut it out!" cried Edward.

UPTON SINCLAIR, King Coal, p. 320. (1917)

You better cut it out.

SINCLAIR LEWIS, Main Street, p. 395. (1920)

3 You cut such high shines, that I thought I'd like to back you out.

A. B. LONGSTREET, Georgia Scenes, p. 27. (1835)

He vas cutting up all kinds of extra shines.

D. CORCORAN, Pickings, p. 28. (1846)

[They] let their members cut up all sorts.

MARY J. HOLMES, Meadow-Brook. Ch.5. (1857)

I believe I never did cut up so bad any one week as I did that week.

BEECHER, Notes from Plymouth Pulpit. (1859)

She had been cutting up one of the greatest pranks you ever heard of.

P. T. BARNUM, Struggles and Triumphs, p. 598. (1869)

No business to have married her to her great-grandfather if they didn't want her to cut up.

PHILANDER DEMING, Adirondack Stories, p. 44. (1880)

4 Why shud a Souldier . . . Be cut thus by a Courtier?

SAMUEL ROWLEY, The Noble Souldier. Act ii, sc. 1. (1634)

He had cut me ever since my marriage.

JANE AUSTEN, Sense and Sensibility. Ch. 44. (1796)

That look which London calls a cut,
Our Traveller on his cousin put.

ALLAN CUNNINGHAM, ed., Anniversary: The Travelled Monkey. (1829)

We met and gave each other the cut direct.

THACKERAY, Book of Snobs. Ch. 2. (1848)

The Cut, the last resource of sullenness and shyness, is, I believe, a strictly English institution.

CHARLES MERIVALE, The Conversion of the Roman Empire. Vol. v, ch. 44, p. 268. (1862)

5 Robertson is rather a cut abune me.

SCOTT, The Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 16. (1818)

She was . . . a cut above the housekeeper.

MARRYAT, Percival Keene. Ch. 1. (1842)

6 Those Book-Sellers Apprentices . . . which are to be cut of the simples.

SIMPSON, ed., Documents of St. Paul's, p. 148. (1650) A play upon words, "simples" being medicinal herbs.

He must be cut of the simples. Care must be taken to cure him of his folly.

B.E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew, sig. L2. (1690)

You should be cut for the simples.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

"Wants cutting for the simples," . . . applied to one who has been guilty of some foolish act.

WILLIAM CARR, The Dialect of Craven. (1828)

7 Their likeability . . . depends something upon the cut of their jib.

SOUTHEY, Life and Correspondence, v, 144. (1823)

I see you're a sailor by the cut of your jib.

MARRYAT, Peter Simple. Ch. 2. (1833)

I like the cut of your jib less than ever.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, God and Man, ii, 3. (1881)

8 How he was a strutting up the side-walk—didn't he cut a swath!

ANN S. STEPHENS, High Life in New York, i, 136. (1843)

The old chap that has been cutting such a swarth.

SOL. SMITH, Theatre Apprenticeship, p. 176. (1845)

The Miss A—s cut a tall swathe. . . . Their relations in England are some punks too.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Nature and Human Nature. (1855)

You folks been cuttin' a pretty wide swath here in New York.

H. L. WILSON, The Spenders, p. 348. (1902)

9 I vow, 'tis a noble sirloin.—Ay; here's cut and come again.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

Give me a slice of good English sirloin; cut and come again.

GARRICK, The Irish Widow. Act i, sc. 1. (1772)

A ham . . . is a cut-and-come-again dish, ready at hand.

WILLIAM HONE, Every-day Book, ii, 54. (1827)

Always happy to see a friend in our plain way—pale sherry, old port, and cut and come again.

THACKERAY, The Great Hoggarty Diamond. Ch. 4.

[His money] being all in the funds . . . enables him to "cut and come again."

R. S. SURTEES, Mr. Sponge's Sporting Tour. Ch. 5. (1853)

TAG, RAG, CUT AND LONG TAIL, see TAG.

CYNIC

10 The royal cynic. (βασιλικὸν κύνα.)

DIOGENES, of Aristippus (c. 350 B.C.), because of his attendance upon Dionysius, a sneering phrase which Rogers (Loeb) translates, "The king's poodle," since κύων means dog as well as cynic, and indicates how the Cynics delighted in snarling and biting. See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristippus. Bk. ii, sec. 66.

11 Cynics are only happy in making the world as barren to others as they have made it for themselves.

GEORGE MEREDITH, The Egoist. Ch. 7. (1879)

Cynicism is intellectual dandyism without the coxcomb's feathers.

GEORGE MEREDITH, The Egoist. Ch. 7.

<sup>1</sup> I hate cynicism a great deal worse than I do the devil; unless, perhaps, the two were the same thing?

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON, An Inland Voyage.

Ch. 5. (1878)

<sup>2</sup> What is a cynic?—A person who knows the price of everything and the value of nothing.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act iii.

(1892) In The Picture of Dorian Gray, ch.

4. (1891), Wilde had written, "Nowadays people know the price of everything and the value of nothing."

Cynic. A blackguard whose faulty vision sees things as they are, not as they ought to be.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary.

(1906) Another definition is, "A cynic is one who is married to his first love."

D

DAGGER

<sup>3</sup> Looking daggers. (πυρρίχην βλέπων.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Birds, l. 1169. (414 B.C.)

Literally a "war-dance look" or "the look of a dancer of the sword dance."

I will speak daggers to her, but use none.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 2, 414. (1600)

There's daggers in men's smiles.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, ii, 3, 146 (1605)

Thine eyes shoot daggers at that man.

MASSINGER AND DEKKER, The Virgin Martir.

Act iv, sc. 1. (1622)

This was to me daggers.

STEELE, The Lying Lover. Act ii. (1704)

Every word she spoke was a dagger in her heart.

MRS. HARVEY, The Mourtray Family, iii, 240. (1800)

Nor shall it be your excuse, that, murderer as you are, you have spoken daggers, but used none.

SHELLEY, Adonais: Preface. (1821)

[He] looked daggers at me.

MARRYAT, Peter Simple. Ch. 52. (1833)

A glance . . . which was meant to speak daggers.

W. H. AINSWORTH, Jack Sheppard. Ch. 4. (1839)

It is a very true and expressive phrase, "He looked daggers at me," for the first pattern and prototype of all daggers must have been a glance of the eye.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Sunday. (1849)

<sup>4</sup> What a dagger of lead! (O plumbeum pugnionem!)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. iv, ch. xviii, sec. 48. (c. 45 B.C.)

A wooden dagger in a painted sheath.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 6. (1639)

I'll not wear the wooden dagger.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 198. (1679)

<sup>5</sup> He beareth a dagger in his sleue, trust mee, To kyll all that he meeteth prouder than hee.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

It be ill playyng with short daggers.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 12

<sup>6</sup> We neuer mete togyther, but we be at daggers drawynge.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, Acolastus, sig. F1. (1540)

Among themselves [they] are wont to bee at daggers drawing.

NICHOLAS GRIMALDE, tr., Cicero's Offices, fo. 12a. (1553)

From spitefull words they fell to daggers drawing.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Epigrams. Bk. i, epig. 91. (1618)

Upon this point they were at Daggers-drawn

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., The Visions of Quevedo Villegas, p. 214. (1668)

Have always been at daggers-drawing.

And one another clapper-clawing.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto ii. l. 79. (1678)

A quarrel in a tavern, where all were at daggers-drawing.

SWIFT, Drapier's Letters. No. 7. (c. 1730)

Lady Delacour and she are at daggers-drawing.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Belinda. Ch. 16. (1801)

The old man and I will remain at daggers-drawn to the end of our lives.

DICKENS, Old Curiosity Shop. Ch. 7. (1840)

We should be at daggers drawn.

MRS. HENRY WOOD, Life's Secret. Pt. i, ch. 2. (1867)

<sup>7</sup> To take a dagger and drown one's self.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 238. (1678)

DAINTY

<sup>8</sup> Too much plenty makes mouth dainty.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749.

<sup>9</sup> Dainty, they say, maketh derth.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto ii, l. 248. (1590)

<sup>10</sup> Who dainties loue, a begger shall proue.

THOMAS TUSSER, Five Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie (1878), p. 72. (1573)

Who dainties love shall beggars prove.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749.

DAN TO BEERSHEBA

<sup>11</sup> The congregation was gathered together as one man, from Dan even to Beer-sheba. (De Dan, usque Bersabee.)

Old Testament: Judges, xx, 1. (c. 700 B.C.)

From north to south. Dan was the most northerly, Beersheba the most southerly city of the Holy Land. The phrase is repeated in I Samuel, iii, 20, and in II Samuel, iii, 10. The English equivalent is "From John o' Groat's to Land's End"; the American, "From Maine to California."

You had been with her from Dan to Beersheba.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

I pity the man who can travel from Dan to Beersheba, and cry, "Tis all barren!"

STERNE, A Sentimental Journey: Calais. (1768)

I had been travelling from Dan to Beersheba.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Letter, 8 Sept., 1811.

We have a journey to perform from Dan to Beersheba.

SOUTHEY, The Doctor. Interch. 1. (1812)

DANCING

<sup>1</sup> With gentle tread, trip ye light steps. (Modico gradu, iacite nisus levis.)

ACCUS, Bacchae. Frag. 209, Loeb. (c. 140 B. C.)

Come, and trip it as ye go,

On the light fantastick toe.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 33. (1632)

Tripping the light fantastic

On the sidewalks of New York.

JAMES W. BLAKE, The Sidewalks of New York. (1894)

<sup>2</sup> He dances like an angel.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 475. (1712)

<sup>3</sup> Since you piped during the summer, now dance during the winter. (ἀλλ', εἰ θέρουσ' ὤραις ἤϋλει, χειμῶνος ὄρχου.)

AESOP, Fables: The Cicala and the Ants. (c. 570 B. C.) In the winter the ants had an abundance of food which they had stored up during the summer, but the cicala, or tree-cricket (usually translated into English as "grasshopper"), had none, and was forced to beg of the ants. "But why didn't you store up food during the summer?" they asked. "I was too busy," answered the cricket; "I was piping musically all day long." "Well," retorted the ants, "if you piped during the summer, now dance during the winter." A derivative is "They who dance must pay the piper." The Greek proverb is, "The cicala's way" (τέτιγος τρόπος), a synonym for improvidence.

You sang! ah, well! now you can dance. (Vous chantiez! . . . Eh bien! dansez maintenant.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: La Cigale et la Fourmi. Bk. i, fab. 1. (1668) La Fontaine's rendering of Aesop's fable, which was used also by Phaedrus and the story-tellers of the Middle Ages. Its morality has often been criticized, but, as one of La Fontaine's editors, M. Molland, points out, the ant is not presented as a model to be followed in every way. She is industrious and economical, but she is not charitable. La Noble, to explain the hard-heartedness of the ant, relates how the grasshopper, during the summer, mocked her for working so hard; Sadi, in his fable of The Nightingale and Ant, has the ant, instead of refusing help, say only, "You should have reflected, young idiot, that summer is followed by autumn." But La Fontaine's ant, with its thin lips and hard features, cares nothing for another's suffering, and answers the plea of the starving grasshopper with a bitter pleasantry. As M. Molland remarks, the other fabulists are more humane, but La Fontaine is undoubtedly the truer artist. Admirers of Walt Disney will remember that in his rendering of the fable, he has the ants finally take the grasshopper in and put his feet in a mustard bath—the traditional movie happy ending.

They must hunger in frost that will not work in heat.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 333. (1605)

Do not sing and dance away either the Spring, or the Summer of your Lives, like the lazy Grasshopper.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 190. (1709) He who crosses his arms in summer will clack his teeth in winter. (Qui se croise les bras un été, claquera des dents en hiver.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbs, p. 405. (1856)

<sup>4</sup> The better dancer the worse man.

BACON, Apothegms. No. 266. (1625) "Diogenes said of a young man that danced daintily, and was much commended, 'The better the worse.'"

She could dance more skillfully than an honest woman need. (Saltare elegantius, quam necesse est probae.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. 25, sec. 2. (c. 41 B. C.) Of Sempronius, one of Catiline's supporters.

I think of lovers as Diogenes did of dancers, who, being asked how he liked them, answered, The better the worse.

ROBERT GREENE, Mirror of Modestie. (1584) Good Dancers have mostly better Heels than Heads.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1709. (1732)

The greater the fool, the better the dancer.

THEODORE EDWARD HOOK, Epigram. (c. 1835)

See BARHAM, Life and Reminiscences, p. 91.

<sup>5</sup> On with the dance! let joy be unconfin'd; No sleep till morn, when Youth and Pleasure meet.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto. iii, st. 22. (1812)

<sup>6</sup> Daunceth he mury that is mirtheles?

CHAUCER (?), The Parlement of Foules, l. 592. (c. 1382)

All bee not mery that men see daunce.

LYDGATE, Daunce of Mochabree, l. 392. (c. 1425)

Every one is not merry that dances. (Chacun n'est pas aise que danse.)

RANDLE COTORAVE, Dictionary: Aise. (1611)

All are not merry that dance lightly.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 809. (1640)

I never saw such sad faces or such gay behinds.

MARSHAL FOCH, after his first visit to the Follies. (1919) See EASTMAN, Enjoyment of Laughter.

Did you ever hear of the old Frenchman who gave modern dancing the once-over and said he'd never seen such sad faces and such gay behinds?

H.C. BAILEY, Nobody's Vineyard, p. 34. (1942)

1 When you goe to dance, take heed whom you take by the hand.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 24. (1639)

The next time you dance, know whom you take by the hand.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 320. (1721)

When thou dancest, take heed, whom thou takest by the Hand.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5614. (1732)

2 Bounce cries the Port-hole, out they fly
And make the world dance Barnaby.

CHARLES COTTON, Scarronides. Bk. I, l. 189.

(1664) "To dance Barnaby" is to dance to a quick movement, to move quickly.

Widow, here is music; send for a parson, and we will dance Barnaby.

SIR GEORGE ETHEREDGE, The Comical Revenge.

Act v, sc. 2. (1664)

Speak, and we'll let your thunder fly,
And make the world dance Barnaby.

The Roxburghe Ballads, viii, 270. (1727)

3 To dance out of time. (Extra chorum saltare.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, vi, 67. (1523) A thing out of place, or out of turn.

4 'Twas surely the Devil, that taught Women to dance, and Asses to bray.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5319. (1732)

5 If he can wel foote and daunce,
It may him greetly do avaunce.

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose. (c. 1240) CHAUCER (?), tr., l. 2323. (c. 1365)

To sing well and dance well are accomplishments which advance one very little in the world. (Qui bien chante et bien danse, fait un métier qui peu avance.)

J.-J. ROUSSEAU, Confessions. Bk. v, par. 20.

(a. 1778) Quoted as a "proverbe de province."

6 She knew al the olde daunce.

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose. (c. 1240) Chaucer (?), tr., l. 4300. (c. 1365)

She coude of that art the olde daunce.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 478. (c. 1386)

And knowen wel y-nough the olde daunce.

CHAUCER, The Phisiciens Tale, l. 79.

7 Nimble of foot, peerless at beating the floor in the dance. (ἀρχηστὰς τε, χοροεικτικῶν ἀριστοί.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxiv, l. 261. (c. 850 B.C.)

A resounding thud of feet rose up. (νοῦθος δὲ ποδῶν ὑπὸ δόδιππος ὄρουει.)

HERODIAN, Third Catalogue of Women. No. 35. (c. 750 B.C.) HERODIAN, On Peculiar Diction, p. 42.

Let wantons, light of heart,
Tickle the senseless rushes with their heels.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 4, 35. (1595)

8 They smote the dancing floor with their feet.
And Odysseus gazed at the twinklings of their feet and marvelled in spirit. (μαρμαρυγὰς ποδῶν.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. viii, l. 265. (c. 850 B.C.)

To brisk notes in cadence beating,
Glance their many-twinkling feet.

THOMAS GRAY, Progress of Poesy. l. 34. (1754)

Muse of the many-twinkling feet.

LORD BYRON, Waltz, l. 1. (1813)

9 Our dancers ennobled what is coarse, but they degrade what is heroic. (Nos danseurs ennoblissent ce qui est grossier; mais ils dégradent ce qui est héroïque.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 283. (1810)

10 You will neither dance, nor hold the candle.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 367. (1721)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6013. (1732)

11 The Congress does not march, but it dances. (Le Congrès ne marche pas, mais il danse.)

PRINCE DE LIGNE, referring to the Congress of Vienna, assembled in 1814, after Napoleon's exile to Elba. There is an untranslatable pun, for marcher means not only to walk or march, but to progress, and its sting lay in its truth. The Edinburgh Review, July, 1890, p. 244, commented, "One of the Prince de Ligne's epigrams that will live forever."

12 I go so bare dawnsyng naked in a net.

SIR THOMAS MORE, The Confutacyon of Tyndale. Sec. 127. (1532)

Now you have gotten a fine net to dance naked in, that no ignorant blind buzzard can see you.

WILLIAM FULKE, A Defense of the True Translations of the Scriptures. Ch. 6. (1583)

At last being Venus scholar, and therefore darning with hir to dance in a net.

ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart), vi, 181.

(1587) The reference is, of course, to the net which Vulcan cast over Venus and Mars when he caught them in bed together.

Think not you dance in nets.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, All Fools. Act ii. (1605)

Think not you are undetected.

You dance in a nett, and you think no body sees you.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1659)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1670)

Thou canst not dance in a net, and they not see thee.

WALTER SCOTT, Kenilworth. Ch. 4. (1821)

13 Through dancing many maidens have been unmaidened, whereby I may say it is the storehouse and nursery of bastardy.

JOHN NORTHBROOKE, Against Dicing. (1577)

Refraine from dauncing which was the meanes that lost John Baptists heade.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 152. (1579)

<sup>1</sup> To dance in the dark. (ἐν τῷ σκότῳ ὀρχεῖσθαι.)
 PLATO, The Republic. Bk. viii. (c. 375 B.C.)
 Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ix, 40, with the Latin, "In tenebris saltare." An old proverb, also quoted by Lucian, "Let us dance, as they say, in the dark."

<sup>2</sup> Those move easiest who have learn'd to dance.
 POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 163. (1709)
 Also Imitations of Horace: Epistles, ii, 2, 178.

<sup>3</sup> They love dancing well, that dance among thorns.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 77. (1670)
 They love dancing well, that dance barefoot upon Thorns.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4966. (1732)
<sup>4</sup> He's able to lead her a coranto.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, ii, 3, 49. (1602)

That's the dance her husband means to lead her.
 THOMAS HEYWOOD, A Woman Killed with Kindness, sig. A3. (1607)

You know . . . what a dance she has led me.
 ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 89. (1711)

<sup>5</sup> You and I are past our dancing days.
 SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 5, 33. (1592)

My dancing days are done.
 BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Scornful Lady. Act v, sc. 3. (1610)

My dancing days are past.
 MASSINGER, The Picture. Act ii, sc. 2. (1629)
 His dancing dayes are never done.

RICHARD FLECKNOE, Enigmatical Characters, p. 60. (1658)

Your dancing and your vaulting days are done.
 SIR SAMUEL Tuke, tr., The Adventures of Five Hours. Act v, sc. 3. (1663)

When a beauteous Nymph decays
 We say, she's past her Dancing Days.

SWIFT, Stella's Birthday, l. 1. (1724)
 I doubt her dancing days are over.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1728)
 My dancing days are over.
 JANE AUSTEN, Emma. Ch. 38. (1816) BOWERS, Fear and Miss Betony, p. 246. (1942)

<sup>6</sup> You are walking upon the slippery verge.
 (ἐπειπερ ἐν ἑσχατά βαλεις.)
 SOPHOCLES, Oedipus at Colonus, l. 217. (c. 408 B.C.)

You are tripping along over fires hidden beneath treacherous ashes. (Tractas et incendis per ignes | suppositos cineri doloso.)

HORACE, Odes, Bk. ii, ode 1, l. 7. (23 B.C.)
 ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, x, 94, cites the proverb, "Per ignem incendis" (You are treading on hot ashes), meaning "You are engaged in a dangerous business, so take care you do not burn yourself." Dr. Johnson uses the phrase at the beginning of his Lives of the Poets, who were his contemporaries, or nearly so. Conversely there is a proverb, "Non incendis per ignem" (You are not walking over hot ashes), used to persons walking with unnecessary haste.

Dancing on the edge of the pit. (τὴν περὶ τὸ φρέαρ ὀρχήσθαι ἀνεχρῶς ὀρχούμενοι.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: How to Tell a Flatterer, 68B. (c. A.D. 95) Quoted as a proverb.

We are dancing on a volcano. (Nous dansons sur un volcan.)

M. LE COMTE DE SALVANDY, at a fête given to the King of Naples just before the revolution of 1830, with a side glance at Vesuvius, which was also active.

Young man, you are standing on the brink of an abscess.

ANDREW FREEDMAN, owner of the New York baseball team, the "Giants," in 1898, to Charles Dryden, a sports writer who had criticized his management of the team. See STANLEY WALKER, City Editor, p. 118.

<sup>7</sup> I must dance barefoot on her wedding day.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, ii, 1, 33. (1594) Said of an elder sister when a younger one was married before her. See also under APE: LEAD APES IN HELL.

The eldest daughter was much disappointed that she dance barefoot, and desired her father to find out a match for her.

MRS. MARY DELANEY, Life and Correspondence, ii, 188. (1742)

<sup>8</sup> And syr ye must daunce attendance,
 . . . for my Lords Grace
 Hath now no time nor space,
 To speke with you as yet.

JOHN SKELTON, Why Come Ye Not to Court? l. 626. (1522)

Last time I danc'd attendance on his will Till Paris was besieg'd, famish'd, and lost.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, i, 3, 174. (1590)
 Welcome, my lord, I dance attendance here.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iii, 7, 56. (1592)
 Going one morning to speak with the Duke, and having danc'd attendance a long time.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters. Bk. i, sec. 3. No. 13. (1622)

The man hath danced attendance for about a month.

FIELDING, Joseph Andrews. Bk. ii, ch. 16. (1742)
 The young men . . . were dancing attendance upon creatures more capricious.

E. V. LUCAS, Advisory Ben. Sec. 6, p. 24. (1923)

<sup>9</sup> Did ever one yet dance the Tyburn Jigg
 With a free Air, or a well-pawder'd Wigg?

SIR JOHN VANBRUGH, The Relapse: Epilogue. (1697)

It is sweet to dance to violins
 When Love and Life are fair:

To dance to flutes, to dance to lutes
 Is delicate and rare:

But it is not sweet with nimble feet
 To dance upon the air!

OSCAR WILDE, The Ballad of Reading Gaol. (1898)

TO DANCE UPON NOTHING, see under HANGING.

<sup>1</sup> This dance of death, which sounds so musically,

Was sure intended for the corpse de ballet.

UNKNOWN, On the Danse Macabre of Saint-Saëns. Quoted by Brander Matthews, Recreations of an Anthologist, p. 108, as by "an American rhymester."

II—Dancing: The Piper

<sup>2</sup> No longer Pipe, no longer Dance. No longer play the Fool, no longer please some People.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 197. (1709) PAY THE PIPER, see under PAYMENT.

<sup>3</sup> Here's that will make 'em dance without a fiddle.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Chances. Act i, sc. 7. (c. 1620)

I'll make him dance without a pipe.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 71. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2639. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> He'll dance to nothing but his own Pipe.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2423. (1732)

<sup>5</sup> In a Fidler's House, all are Dancers.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2809. (1732)

So long as you'll crowdy (fiddle) they'll dance.
A. T. QUILLER-COUCH, East Cornwall Words. p. 82. (1880)

<sup>6</sup> At my wil I weend she should haue wrought like wax,

But I fynde . . . she hath found suche knax
In her bouget, and suche toies in her hed,
That to daunce after her pipe, I am ny led.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 6. (1546)

Ignorant people, which are ready . . . to dance after his pipe.

GEORGE GIFFORD, A Dialogue Concerning Witches, p. 65. (1593)

All inferior ones dance after their pipe.

DANIEL ROGERS, Matrimonial Honour, p. 357. (1642)

<sup>7</sup> Whan fooles pype, by auctoritee he maie daunce.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 11. (1546)

I will not dance to every fool's pipe.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2644. (1732)

If we dance to every fiddle we shall soon be lame in both legs.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 25. (1880)

<sup>8</sup> We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced. (ἡλλήσαμεν ὑμῖν καὶ οὐκ ὤρχησασθε.)

New Testament: Matthew, xi, 17. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Cecinimus vobis, et non saltastis." Repeated in Luke, vii, 32.

<sup>9</sup> Hee daunceth well inough, to whom Fortune pipeth.

JAMES SANFORD, tr., Houres of Recreation, p. 206. (1572)

He daunseth wel, vnto whom fortune pipeth. (Assai ben balla, á chi fortuna sona.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 27. (1578) The Germans say, "Wem das Glück pfeifet, der tanzet wohl."

He dances well to whom Fortune pipes.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 84. (1678)

He dances merrily, whom Fortune pipes to.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1832. (1732)

He always dances well to whom fortune pipes.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, The Parent's Assistant, p. 410. (1796)

<sup>10</sup> Jack shall pipe and Jill shall dance.

GEORGE WITHER, Poem on Christmas. (1620)

DANGER

<sup>11</sup> If the danger seems slight, then truly it is not slight. (Non iam leve est periculum, si leve videatur.)

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum: Principiis Obstaré. (1605)

<sup>12</sup> He that loveth danger shall perish therein. (Qui amat periculum, in illo peribit.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), iii, 26. (c. 190 B. C.)

No one, with safety, can long expose himself to danger. Whom disaster often passes by, she finds at last. (Nemo se tuto diu | periculis offerre tam crebris potest. | quem saepe transit casus, aliquando invenit.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 326. (c. A. D. 60)

Salomon seith: "he that loveth peril shal falle in peril."

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 53. (c. 1387)

He that loveth peril shall perish in it.

CHRISTOPHER SAINT-GERMAN, Dialogue Betwyxt Doctoure and Student. Dial. ii, ch. 53. (1531)

He who seeks danger perishes in it. (Quien busca el peligro perece en él.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 20. (1605)

<sup>13</sup> Where there lyeth grete paretles [perils] there lieth grete honour.

BERNERS, Huon of Burdeux, p. 56. (c. 1530)

I remembered your old Roman axiom,

The more the danger, still the more the honour.

JOHN FLETCHER, Rule a Wife and Have a Wife. Act iv, sc. 1. (1624)

Where the most danger is, there's the most honour.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Women Pleas'd. Act iii, sc. 2. (c. 1624)

The more danger, the more honour.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 117. (1670)

HOWARD, Six Days Adventure. Act. i. (1671)

The post of honour is the post of danger.

HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 32. (1832)

<sup>14</sup> Danger, the spur of all great minds.

CHAPMAN, Bussy d'Ambois. Act v, sc. 1. (1607)

<sup>15</sup> He that fears danger in time seldom feels it.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Asseur. (1611)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1232. (1732)

Dangers foreseen are the sooner prevented.

RICHARD FRANCK, Northern Memoirs, p. 95. (1658) A variant is, "A danger foreseen is half avoided."

<sup>1</sup> All is not lost that in some danger is.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Perdu. (1611)

All is not lost that is in danger.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 117. (1670)

"As for instance, he whose sheep die of the rot, saves the skins and the wool."

All is not lost that is in hazard, as the saying is.

DAVID CRAUFURD, Courtship à-la-Mode. Act iv, sc. 2. (1700)

All is not tint [lost] that's in peril. Our affairs may come to a better effect than is now expected.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs. (1721)

<sup>2</sup> As soon as there is life there is danger.

R. W. EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Public and Private Education. (1870)

<sup>3</sup> He that bringeth himself into needless dangers, dieth the devil's martyr.

FULLER, The Holy Warre. Bk. ii, ch. 29. (1639)

Who perisheth in needless danger is the devil's martyr.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 15. (1678)

<sup>4</sup> Danger is next Neighbour to Security.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1233. (1732)

Secure, remember danger.

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2043. (1875)

<sup>5</sup> He that is not in the wars, is not out of danger.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 997. (1640)

<sup>6</sup> On the razor's edge. (ἐπὶ ῥυπόῳ εἶναι.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. x, l. 173. (c. 850 B.C.) See under RAZOR.

With a halter round his neck. (ἐν βρόχῳ τὸν τράχηλον ἔχων.)

DEMOSTHENES, Against Timocrates. Sec. 744.7. (c. 340 B.C.)

To be in the trench. (ἐπὶ σκάμματος εἶναι.)

POLYBIUS, History. Bk. xl, ch. 5, sec. 5. (c. 140 B.C.) The last ditch.

All the affairs of men hang by a slender thread. (Omnia sunt hominum tenui pendencia filo.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. iv, epis. iii, l. 35. (c. A.D.

15) Another Latin proverbial phrase is "Tabula in naufragio" (A plank in shipwreck). Bacon uses it in speaking of "Remnants of history, which are, as was said, tanquam tabula naufragii; as it were, a board from a shipwreck."

<sup>7</sup> Sweet is danger. (Dulce periculum est.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 25, l. 18. (23 B.C.)

Sweeter is the fruit won after many perils. (Dulcior est fructus post multa pericula ductus.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 41. (1545)

Danger and delight grow on one stalk.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 226. (1579)

Without danger the game grows cold. (Sine periculo friget lusus.)

GEORGE CHAPMAN, All Fools. Act iii. (1608)

Danger is sauce for Prayers.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1753.

Everything is sweetened by risk.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: On Death and the Fear of Dying. (1863)

Sure, 'tis danger gives the spice to our pleasures—next to their bein' forbidden.

O. HENRY, The Door of Unrest. (1911)

<sup>8</sup> Danger well past remember'd works delight.

HENRY HOWARD, EARL OF SURREY, Bonum est

Mihi Quod Humilliasti Me. (c. 1540)

So—now, the danger dared at last,

Look back, and smile at perils past!

WALTER SCOTT, The Bridal of Triermain: Intro. St. 2. (1813) See REMEMBRANCE.

<sup>9</sup> He who stands still will never meet danger. (Chih tzü pu tai.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue).

Sec. 44. (c. 550 B.C.) Old, tr.

A hole in the ice is dangerous only to those who go skating.

REX STOUT, Too Many Cooks, p. 200. (1940)

Quoting a Chinese proverb.

<sup>10</sup> The mere apprehension of a coming danger has put many into a situation of the utmost danger. (Multos in summa pericula misit | venturi timor ipse mali.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. vii, l. 104. (c. A.D. 60)

For, nece myn, thus wryten clerkes wyse,

That peril is with dreeching [dreading] in y-drawe.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, l. 852. (c. 1380)

All perils that fall maie, who fearth they fall shall.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 4. (1546)

There is nothing which more quickly throws us into dangers than an inconsiderate hunger to avoid them. (Il n'est rien qui nous jecte tant aux dangiers, qu'une faim inconsiderée de nous en mettre hors.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 6. (1595)

Dangers bring fears, and fears more dangers bring.

RICHARD BAXTER, Love Breathing Thanks. (c. 1660)

Too much attention to danger makes one often fall into it. (Le trop d'attention qu'on a pour le danger | Fait le plus souvent qu'on y tombe.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. xii, fab. 18. (1694)

He that always fears Danger, always feels it

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2039. (1732)

Everything is dangerous to him that is afraid of it.

BENJ. WHICHCOTE, Moral Aphorisms. (1753)

In this world there is always danger for those who are afraid of it.

BERNARD SHAW, Devil's Disciple. Act ii. (1897)

<sup>11</sup> Ye see our danger on the utmost edge Of hazard.

MILTON, Paradise Regain'd. Bk. i, l. 94. (1671)

<sup>12</sup> Blind are the dangers both by land and sea. (Et maris et terrae caeca pericula viae.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 27, l. 6. (c. 24 B.C.)

1 Danger comes more quickly when despised.
(Citius venit periculum cum contemnitur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 107. (c. 43 B. C.)
Dangers by being despised grow great.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, House of Commons,
11 May, 1792.

2 It is very dangerous to guard what pleases many.
(Maximo periculo custoditur quod multis placet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 367. (c. 43 B. C.)

3 A danger is never overcome without danger.
(Numquam periculum sine periculo vincitur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 428. (c. 43 B. C.)
Without danger we cannot get beyond danger.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1008. (1640)
Danger itself is the best remedy for danger.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1052. (1651)
One danger is not overcome without another.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 202. (1666)

Dangers are overcome with Dangers.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1232. (1732)

4 O worst of dangers that lurks unseen. (O pessimum periculum quod opertum latet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 494. (c. 43 B. C.)

5 He who dares dangers overcomes them before he incurs them. (Pericla qui audet ante vincit quam accipit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 547. (c. 43 B. C.)
The only way to escape a danger is to show that one has no fear of it. (La seule façon d'éviter un danger, c'est de prouver qu'on n'en a pas peur.)

ANDRÉ TARDIEU, Maxim. (c. 1929) As recorded by L'Eclaireur de Nice, July, 1939.

6 The danger past, the saint forgotten. (Passato il periculo, gabato il santo.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 24. (1548)
Quoted as "le prouerbe Lombardique." A similar one is, "Passato il rio, gabbato il santo" (The river past, the saint forgotten).
The French say "La fête passée, adieu le saint" (The saint's day over, farewell the saint).

The danger past, our vows are soon forgotten.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Sainct. (1611)

The river past, and God forgotten.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 209. (1640)
God and the Doctor we alike adore

But only when in danger, not before;
The danger o'er, both are alike requited,
God is forgotten, and the Doctor slighted.

JOHN OWEN, Epigram. (c. 1665)

The danger past and God forgotten.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1670)

Oh! how much danger would enrich the gods
Did we fulfill the vows it drives us to!

(Oh! combien le péril enrichiroit les dieux

Si nous nous souvenions des vœux qu'il nous fait faire!)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Jupiter et le Passager.
Bk. ix, fab. 13. (1678)

Danger past and God forgotten. In time of danger and affliction men will address themselves earnestly to God for relief; but too often when relieved forget to be thankful.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 88. (1721)
Bread eaten is soon forgotten. (Il pane mangiato, è presto dimenticato.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes,
p. 187. The French say, "Pain mangé est vite oublié."

Cross a bridge, [then] throw away the staff.
(‘Chiao kuo tiu ‘kuai.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 186. (1872)

The vow made in the storm is forgotten in the calm.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 135. (1902)

When the voyage is over the saint is forgot.

ALEXINA OGILVIE, Profitable Proverbs, p. 135.
(1923) THE DEVIL WAS SICK, see under DEVIL.

7 Better pass a danger once than be always in fear.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1670)

8 Constant exposure to dangers breeds contempt for them. (Contemptum periculorum adsiduitas periclitandi dabit.)

SENECA, De Providentia. Ch. 4, sec. 13. (c. A. D. 45)

9 We usually dread least the danger nearest at hand. (Levius solet timere, qui propius timet.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 515. (c. A. D. 60)

10 Danger deviseth shifts; wit waits on fear.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 690. (1593)

11 Don't sail to Abydos for nothing. (μὴ εἰκῇ τὴν
"Αβυδὸν.)

SUIDAS, Lexicon. (c. 950) A dangerous voyage to be undertaken only for some worthwhile purpose. A similar proverb was "He is sailing the Aegean" (τὸν Αἰγαῖον πλεῖ), i. e., taking a great risk in the hope of gain.

12 When you can guard against a danger, it is stupid to let it come near you. (Tu quod cavere possis, stultum admittere est.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 761. (161 B. C.)

13 Through various chances and so many dangers. (Per varios casus, per tot discrimina rerum.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 204. (19 B. C.)

14 Nothing is more delightful than to look upon danger from a place of perfect safety.

PATRICIA WENTWORTH, Pursuit of a Parcel, p.
214. (1942) See also under MISFORTUNE.

DANIEL

15 He delivered Daniel unto them, who cast him into the lions' den: where he was six days.

Apocrypha: Bel and the Dragon, 30-31. (c. 170
B. C.)

16 From that day forth was Daniel had in great reputation in the sight of the people.

Apocrypha: The History of Susannah. (c. 170

B. C.) Perhaps the first detective story, where Daniel separates the witnesses, and thus convicts them of perjury.

A Daniel come to judgement! yea, a Daniel!
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, iv, 1, 223. (1597)

DARING

See also Boldness, Rashness

1 He most prevails who nobly dares.

WILLIAM BROOME, Courage in Love. (c. 1725)
Dare, will, keep silence. (Oser, vouloir, se taire.)

ALESSANDRO CAGLIOSTRO (GIUSEPPE BALSAMO),
Motto. (c. 1785) "The inscription over the little side door where Cagliostro dangled the key."—BOLITHO, Twelve Against the Gods, p. 190.

2 God be thanked, I dar make avaunt,
I fele my limes stark and suffisaunt
To do al that a man bilongeth to.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale, l. 213. (c. 1388)

I dare do all that may become a man;
Who dares do more is none.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, i, 7, 46. (1606)

What man dare, I dare.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iii, 4, 99.

3 Over-daring is as great a vice As over-fearing.
BEN JONSON, The New Inn. Act iv, sc. 3. (1629)

4 An English man . . . [cannot] suffer to be dared by any.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 316. (1580)

With haughty menaces to dare me out.

ROBERT GREENE, Orlando Furioso, p. 92. (1590)

A gyant tall, who darr'd him to his face.

ZACHARY BOYD, Zion's Flowers, p. 138. (c. 1620)

As children dare one another into the dirt.

RICHARD BAXTER, Bagshaw's Scandals, p. 11. (1672)

You wish to dare me to it—well, I won't be dared to anything.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, The Children of the New Forest. Ch. 17. (1847)

Anybody that will take a dare will suck eggs.

MARK TWAIN, Tom Sawyer. Ch. 1. (1876) A page farther on is the sentence, "Anybody that'll take a dare will steal sheep."

I didn't suppose you'd take a dare like that

R. H. DAVIS, Van Bibber, p. 87. (1892)

"I never take a dare, never," he laughed.

C. E. MULFORD, Hopalong Cassidy, p. 107. (1910)

5 Daring leads a man to heaven and to hell.
(τόλμα καὶ εἰς οὐρανὸν καὶ εἰς σπέραν ἀνδρᾶ κομίζει.)

NICANDER OF COLOPHON, Epitaph. (c. 150 B. C.)

See Greek Anthology, vii, 529.

6 And though he greatly failed, more greatly dared. (Quem si non tenuit magnis tamen ex-cidit ausis.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. ii, l. 328. (A. D. 7)

The epitaph of Phaëton.

7 The yonger not daring for their ears to break into their fathers lands.

EDWARD TOPSELL, The Historie of Serpents, p. 640. (1607)

He dares not for his ears.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 240. (1678)

DARKNESS

See also Night

8 Do you know the proverb: "The darkest place is just beneath the candlestick?"

BELASCO AND LONG, The Darling of the Gods. Act iii. (1902)

The darkest spot is directly under the candle.
LEE THAYER, Persons Unknown, p. 83. (1941)

9 Darkness which may be felt. (Densae ut pal-pari queant.)

Old Testament: Exodus, x, 21. (c. 800 B. C.)

10 No wonder if he break his Shins, that walks in the Dark.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3640. (1732)

11 Darkness was upon the face of the deep. (Tenebrae erant super faciem abyssi.)

Old Testament: Genesis, i, 2. (c. 800 B. C.)

12 Even the smallest spark shines brightly in darkness. (Scintilla etiam exigua in tenebris micat.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 400. (1869)

13 He sees enough who doth his darkness see.

LORD HERBERT OF CHERBURY, To His Mistress for Her True Picture. (c. 1640)

No light, but rather darkness visible.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 63. (1667)

Of darkness visible so much be lent.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iv, l. 3. (1728)

14 Dark with excessive bright thy skirts appear.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 380. (1667)

Often misquoted "dark with excessive light."

'Twas a light which made

Darkness itself appear a thing of comfort.

SOUTHEY, Curse of Kehama. Pt. xxiii, l. 28. (1809)

15 The land and city of the Cimmerians, wrapped in mist and cloud. Never does the bright sun look down upon them, . . . but baneful night is spread over wretched mortals. (ἀλλ' ἐπὶ νύξ ὅλη τέταται δειλοῖσι βροτοῖσι.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xi, l. 19. (c. 850 B. C.)

Phoebus can never enter there with his rising, noontide, or setting rays. (Numquam radiis oriens mediusve cadensve | Phoebus adire potest.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xi, l. 594. (A. D. 7.)

Cimmerian darkness. (Cimmeriae tenebrae.)

LACTANTIUS, Institutiones Divinae, Bk. iv. (c. A. D. 300) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, vi, 34.

1 He that gropes in the dark finds that he would not.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1659)

RAY, Proverbs, p. 12. (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2124. (1732)

2 Men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil. (οἱ ἄνθρωποι μᾶλλον τὸ σκότος ἢ τὸ φῶς, ἦν γὰρ αὐτῶν πονηρὰ τὰ ἔργα.)

New Testament: John, iii, 19. (c. A. D. 95) The Vulgate is, "Dilexerunt homines magis tenebras, quam lucem: erant enim eorum mala opera."

3 To give light to them that sit in darkness. (ἐπιφάναι τοῖς ἐν σκότει . . . καθημένοις.)

New Testament: Luke, i, 79. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Illuminare his, qui in tenebris . . . sedent."

They That Walk in Darkness.

ISRAEL ZANGWILL. Title of novel. (1899)

4 We can't keep it dark any longer. (Occultatum est usque adhuc, nunc non potest.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 277. (c. 210 B. C.)

Till then I'll keep him dark.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, iv, i, 106. (1601)

By your passions I read all your natures, Though you at other times can keep 'em dark.

JOHN CROWNE, Henry VI. Act ii. (1681)

She kept it dark about the young lady.

JAMES PAYN, The Mystery of Mirbridge. Ch. 23. (1888)

5 It's as good to be in the dark, as without a light.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 77. (1670)

6 It was so dark, Hal, that thou couldst not see thy hand.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 4, 247. (1597)

He couldn't see . . . his own hand before his face.

PATRICIA WENTWORTH, In the Balance, p. 239. (1941)

7 I'm afraid to go home in the dark.

HARRY H. WILLIAMS. Title and refrain of popular song. (1907)

Turn up the lights; I don't want to go home in the dark.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER). His last words just before he died, 5 June, 1910. He was, of course, parodying the song just then very popular, but there is some difference of opinion as to the exact words. The version given above is that of C. ALPHONSO SMITH, O. Henry, p. 250. A nurse who was with him reported next day that he had said, "Put up the shades. I don't want to go home in the dark." Still another is, "Don't turn out the light. I don't want to go home in the dark."

IT IS ALWAYS DARKEST JUST BEFORE THE DAWN, see under DAWN.

II—Proverbial Comparisons

8 [Dark] as a wolf's mouth. (Como boca de lobo.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 48. (1615)

Dark as the devil's mouth.

WALTER SCOTT, Woodstock. Ch. 12. (1826)

PHILLPOTTS, Peacock House, p. 222. (1926)

9 Dark As helle pit.

CHAUCER (?), The Book of the Duchesse, l. 170. (c. 1369)

10 Dark as black hogs.

FITZGERALD, Sea Words and Phrases, p. 2.

(1869) Ray cites a proverb, "It is ill to drive black hogs in the dark," which is repeated by FRANKLIN in Poor Richard's Almanack for 1748.

11 Darker than night. (Nocte nigriorem.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, No. 115. (c. A. D. 85)

12 As dark as pitch.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 18 Jan., 1666. See BLACKNESS: BLACK AS PITCH.

Pitchy dark.

J. C. WILCOCKS, Sea Fisherman, p. 190. (1875)

13 Dark as sin.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 9. (1884)

As dark as the inside of a cow.

MARK TWAIN, Life on the Mississippi. Ch. 10. (1874) OFFORD, Clues to Burn, p. 48. (1942)

III—All Cats are Gray in the Dark

14 In darkness there is no choice.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth. (1827)

15 When all candels be out, all cats be grey.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1546)

All cats are grey in the dark.

THOMAS LODGE, A Marguerite of America, l. 56. (1597)

At night all cats are gray. (De noche todos los gatos son pardos.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 33. (1615)

CHAPMAN, Alphonsus. Act iii, sc. 1. (c. 1630)

DUBOIS, Death is Late to Lunch, p. 10. (1941)

The French say, "La nuit tous les chats sont gris," and there is a similar African (Oji) proverb, "In the evening a red man is black."

In the night, Sure ev'ry cat is grey.

GEORGE LILLO, Silvia. Act i, sc. 9. (1730)

As the saying is, all cats in the dark are grey.

SMOLLETT, Humphry Clinker, 7 Sept., 1771.

When it is dark the handsomest cats are gray. (Quand il fait sombre, | Les plus beaux chats sont gris.)

BEAUMARCHAIS, Le Barbier de Seville. Act iii, sc. 5. (1775)

The grimy cynical night that makes all cats grey.

STEVENSON AND HENLEY, Deacon Brodie. Act i, tab. i, sc. 8. (1880)

In the dark all cats are gray.

MABEL SERLEY, The Chuckling Fingers, p. 38. (1941)

1 When all candels be out . . . All thingis are then of one colour, as who sey.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1546)
All Colours will agree in the Darke.

BACON, Essays: Of Unity in Religion. (1597)
All shapes, all colours, are alike in night.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, A Wife. St. 17. (a. 1613)

2 In the dark all blemishes are hid and every fault overlooked; that hour makes any woman fair. (Nocte latent mendae, vitioque ignoscitur omni, | horaque formosam quamlibet illa facit.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 249. (c. 1 B. C.)
All women are the same in the dark. (πάσα γυνή τοῦ λύχου ἀθέητος ἢ αὐτῇ ἐστι.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Conjugal Precepts. Sec. 144F. (c. A. D. 64) The remark of a woman to Philip of Macedon when he was trying to force her against her will. The proverbial form is usually, λύχου ἀθέητος, γυνή πάσα ἢ αὐτῇ (When the light is removed, all women are the same).

Under the Blanket, the black one is as good as the white.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5396. (1732)
Regarding only what is below the girdle, it is impossible of two Women to know an old one from a young one. In the dark all Cats are grey.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter. (25 June, 1745)
The identity of the young man to whom Franklin wrote has never been established. He had asked Franklin his advice about sexual intercourse. Franklin urged him to get married, but, if he would not take this counsel, to choose an old woman for his paramour, rather than a young one, as safer and more satisfactory in every way, and as more grateful for his ministrations.

3 Joan is as good as my lady in the dark.

DUCHESS OF NEWCASTLE, Sociable Letters, ii, 4. (1664) See under JOAN.

DAUGHTER

See also Son and Daughter

4 The daughters of Israel are handsome, but poverty makes them look ugly.

Babylonian Talmud: Nedarim, fo. 66b. (c. 450)
He who marries his daughter to an old man makes her a prostitute.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin. fo. 76b.

5 Hast thou daughters? keep their bodies [pure]. (Filiae tibi sunt? serva corpora illarum.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), vii, 24. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

6 'Tis good to get them husbands betimes . . . ; they perchance will marry themselves else, or do worse.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. ii, mem. vi, subs. 5. (1621)

Marry your daughters betimes, lest they marry themselves.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1162.

(1640) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 47. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3373. (1732)

If thy daughter be marriageable, set thy servant free, and give her to him in marriage.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 409. (1678)

MARRY YOUR SON WHEN YOU WILL, YOUR DAUGHTER WHEN YOU CAN, see under SON AND DAUGHTER.

7 Betweene promising, and giving, the maid ought to be married. (Entre promettre et donner doit on la fille marier.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Donner. (1611)
Between promising and performing a man may marry his daughter.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 22. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 974. (1732)

8 An undutiful Daughter will prove an unmanageable Wife.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1752.
Dawted [petted] daughters mak daidling [slovenly] wives.

HISLOP, Proverbs of Scotland, p. 77. (1862)

9 A daughter of the Duke of Exeter invented a . . . cruel rack . . . often used, in the Tower of London, and commonly called . . . "the Duke of Exeter's daughter."

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. iv, ch.

13. (1642) It was the Duke and not his daughter who invented the rack in the reign of Henry VI.

They threatened to make me hug the Duke of Exeter's daughter.

SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 35. (1822)
A prisoner in the Tower, in the severe embrace of "the Duke of Exeter's daughter."

GAIRDNER, Richard the Third, iv, 125. (1878)

An instrument devised by Mr. Skevington, sometime Lieutenant of the Tower, called Skevington's Daughters, or Little Ease.

Journals of the House of Commons, i, 209/1.

(1604) The "instrument" brought the head to the knees and so compressed the body that blood was forced from the nose and ears. One of the instruments of torture, called the Scavenger's daughter, employed in the Tower on Catholics.

W. E. ANDREWS, Critical Review of Foxe's Book of Martyrs, ii, 369. (1826)

Married to the gunner's daughter.

LORD BYRON, in MOORE, Letters, iii, 139. (1821)

A jocular name for the gun to which sailors were lashed, before they were whipped.

I was . . . made to kiss the gunner's daughter.

WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Ch. 14. (1824)

I'll marry some of you young gentlemen to the gunner's daughter.

MARRYAT, Peter Simple. Ch. 32. (1833)

10 It is harder to marry a Daughter well, than to bring her up well.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2956. 1732.

<sup>1</sup> The younger your daughter, the more apt she is to love you.

E. W. HOWE, Country Town Sayings. (1911)

<sup>2</sup> Daughters and dead fish are no keeping wares.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 86. (1721)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1235. (1732) The Dutch say, "Dochters zijn broze waren" (Daughters are fragile ware). HISLOP (Proverbs of Scotland, p. 76), adds, "A suggestion that daughters should be married, and dead fish eaten, otherwise they will both spoil on the hands of their possessors."

Marry your daughter and eat fresh fish betimes.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.

Too oft, alas! a daughter's charms

Increase a parent's cares;

For daughters and dead fish, we find,

Were never keeping wares.

JOHN WOLCOTT, Orson and Ellen. (1783)

<sup>3</sup> If you take my fair daughter, take her foul tail.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 185. (1721)

"If you get some great advantage, take some small inconveniences that may attend it."

<sup>4</sup> A daughter is a troublesome possession to her father. (ἀλλὰ θυγάτηρ κτῆμ' ἐστὶν ἐργῶδες πατρί.)

MENANDER, The Cousins Frag. 60K. (c. 300 B. C.)

A daughter is to a father a deceptive treasure and the care of her putteth away sleep.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xlii, 9. (c. 190 B. C.)

There is no thief like a family of five daughters.

GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 379. (1938)

<sup>5</sup> I've cur'd her from lying i' th' hedge, quoth the goodman, when he had wed his daughter.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 56. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2604. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> I am all the daughters of my father's house, And all the brothers too.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, ii, 4, 123. (1599)

<sup>7</sup> A stubborn daughter of a stubborn sire. (δηλοὶ τὸ γέννημ' ὡμὸν ἐξ ὡμοῦ πατρὸς ἢ τῆς παιδός.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 471. (c. 441 B. C.)

<sup>8</sup> Neverout: Pray, Mrs. Betty, are you not Tom Johnson's daughter?

Betty: So my mother tells me, sir.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>9</sup> A woman of good family always bears a girl as her first child. (La donna di buona razza fa sempre la prima figliata femina.)

UNKNOWN. An Italian proverb, probably intended to comfort, rather than to embody a real superstition. The Spanish form is, "To the lucky man a daughter is first born" (Al hombre venturero la hija le nace primero).

AS MOTHER, SO DAUGHTER, see under MOTHER.

DAWN

See also Morning, Sunrise

<sup>10</sup> That single hour of the twenty-four, when crime ceases, debauchery is exhausted, and even desolation finds a shelter.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Sybil. Ch. 21. (1845)

Dawn. The time when men of reason go to bed.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

<sup>11</sup> Rosy-fingered Dawn. (ροδοδάκτυλος Ἥως.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. i, l. 477. (c. 850 B. C.) Repeated frequently, in both Iliad and Odyssey, in the latter for example in iii. 404, 491.

Fair-tressed Dawn. (εὐπλόκαμος Ἥως.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. v, l. 390. (c. 850 B. C.)

Repeated several times. Other phrases are

"fair-throned Dawn" (Ἥως εὐθρόνος), Odyssey, vi, 48, xv, 495, etc.; "golden-throned Dawn" (χρυσόθρονος Ἥως), Odyssey, x, 541;

xii, 142; xiv, 502, etc.

An angel, robed in spotless white,
Bent down and kissed the sleeping Night.

Night woke to blush; the sprite was gone.

Men saw the blush and called it Dawn.

P. L. DUNBAR, The Birth of Dawn. (1895)

<sup>12</sup> The Dawn uplifts her eyelids white. ("Ἔως γὰρ λευκὸν ὄμμα' ἀναίφεται.)

EURIPIDES, Electra, l. 102. (c. 413 B. C.)

<sup>13</sup> The hour that the joyous Aurora with rosy fingers drives away the shades of night. (L'heure que la joyeuse Aurore aux doigtz rosatz dechassera les ténèbres nocturnes.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 13. (1545)

<sup>14</sup> Dawn that sets folk to work was quickly coming on. (τάχα δ' ὄρθρος ἐγγίγντο δημοεργός.)

UNKNOWN, Homeric Hymns: To Hermes, l.

98. (c. 600 B. C.)

Meanwhile Dawn had uplifted her kindly light for weary men, recalling them to task and toil. (Aurora interea miseris mortalibus aliam | extulerat lucem, referens opera atque labores.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xi, l. 182. (19 B. C.)

II—Darkest Before the Dawn

<sup>15</sup> Nay, misery's blackest night may chance,
By Fortune's turn, to show a happy dawn.

(ἀλλ' ἐστὶν ἔστιν ἢ λίαν δυσπραγία λίαν διδοῦσα μεταβολάς, ὅταν τύχη.)

EURIPIDES, Iphigenia in Tauris, l. 721. (c. 414 B. C.)

Perhaps on the unhappy happier days may wait. (Forsan miseros meliora sequentur.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xii, l. 153. (19 B. C.)

<sup>16</sup> It is always darkest just before the day dawneth.

THOMAS FULLER, A Pisgah-Sight of Palestine.

Bk. ii, ch. 11. (1650)

This is a terrible hour, but it is often that darkest point which precedes the rise of day.

CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Shirley. Ch. 20. (1849)

The darkest hour precedes the dawn.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 5. (1880)
It is always darkest before dawn.

R. L. STEVENSON, Letters, iii, 245. (1889)

As so often happens in the story of England's struggles in India, the darkest hour proved to be that just before the dawn.

JUSTIN MCCARTHY, History of Our Own Times, v, 41. (1900)

The darkest hour is that before the dawn.

ALEXANDER MACLAREN, Exposition of Deuteronomy, p. 270. (1906) FREEMAN, Unconscious Witness, p. 58. (1942)

Things look blackest before the dawn.

E. V. LUCAS, London Lavender. Ch. 16. (1912)

Was it not that lovable old cynic, La Rochefoucauld, who said that it is always darkest before the deluge?

DOROTHY PARKER, The Little Hours. (1930)

It's always darkest before the dawn.

OGDEN NASH, Lucy Lake. (1933)

It's not only darkest before dawn, it's coldest.

R. G. DEAN, Layoff, p. 56. (1942)

WHEN NEED HIGHEST, HELP NIGHTEST, see NEED.
WHEN BALE IS NEXT BOOT IS NEXT, see under EVIL.

DAY

See also Night and Day

<sup>1</sup> Living halcyon days. (ἀλκυονίδας ἡμέρας ἀλειν.)
ARISTOPHANES, The Birds, l. 1594. (c. 414 B. C.)
Literally, "kingfishers' days," (alcyonei dies), the fourteen days of calm weather commemorated in classical mythology. So "halcyon days" are days of calm and quiet.

<sup>2</sup> The long days are no happier than the short ones.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Village Feast: Evening. (1839)

<sup>3</sup> Some ne'er-do-well who had defrauded the State and other creditors by departing between two days.

J. H. BEADLE, Western Wilds, p. 406. (1878)

He left town 'tween two days.

A. D. McFAUL, Ike Glidden, p. 12. (1902)

<sup>4</sup> Why doth one day excel another, when as all the light of every day in the year is from the sun? (Διὰ τὴν ἡμέραν ἡμέρας ὑπερέχει, καὶ πᾶν φῶς ἡμέρας ἐκ αὐτοῦ ἀφ' ἡλίου.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxxiii, 7. (c. 190 B. C.) Paraphrased in the Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 65b

<sup>5</sup> Do not reckon as part of thy life a day that is not thine own.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 754. (1817)

<sup>6</sup> Since our frail life through dangers sure must run,

Count every day that comes as something won.
(Cum dubia in certis versetur vita periculis. pro lucro tibi pone diem quicumque sequetur.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. i, No. 33. (c. 175 B. C.)

Write it on your heart that every day is the best day in the year.

R. W. EMERSON, Works and Days. (1870)

<sup>7</sup> "Welawey! the day that I was born!"

CHAUCER (?), Troilus. Bk. iii, l. 304. (c. 1380)

"Allas," quod John, "the day that I was born!"

CHAUCER, The Reves Tale, l. 189. (c. 1386)

<sup>8</sup> One day well spent is to be preferred to an eternity of error. (Unus dies bene . . . actus peccanti immortalitate anteponendus.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. v, ch. 2, sec. 5. (45 B. C.)

<sup>9</sup> 'Tis day still while the sun shines.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 294. (1639)

RAY, Proverbs, p. 77. (1670)

<sup>10</sup> Feasts last not alwayes. . . . Every day is not Sunday (say we).

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Feste. (1611)

Every day is not yesterday.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 124. (1639)

Every day is not holy day.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 88. (1666)

Every day's no Yule-day.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 62. (1846)

<sup>11</sup> One of these dayes shal I fall into the handes of Saul.

MILES COVERDALE, Bible: 1 Samuel, xxvii, 1. (1535)

You will tell me a different tale one of these days.

DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 36. (1838)

One of these days is none of these days.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 470. (1855)

<sup>12</sup> Monday is Sunday's brother;
Tuesday is such another.

Wednesday you must go to church and pray;
Thursday is half-holiday.

On Friday it is too late to begin to spin;

The Saturday is half-holiday agen.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 15. (1846)

Monday is a Saint's day;

Tuesday's just another such a day;

Wednesday's the middle pin;

Thursday's too late to begin;

Friday we must fast and pray;

Saturday never was but half a day.

UNKNOWN, The Cobbler's Creed. See ROBERTSON, Gloucestershire Glossary, p. 187

<sup>13</sup> Come day, goe day, the day is long enough.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 194. (1616)

Come day, go day, God send Sunday.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 77. (1721)

DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 15. (1846) "The sluggard's daily prayer."

<sup>14</sup> He is only rich who owns the day.

R. W. EMERSON, Works and Days. (1870)

<sup>15</sup> A Day to come shews longer than a Year that's gone.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 68. (1732)

Every Day brings a new Light.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1413.

1 What one day gives us, another takes away from us.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1109. (1650)

What a Day may bring, a Day may take away.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5475. (1732)

A good example of the way in which Fuller polished up his proverbs.

2 No day so clear, but hath dark clouds.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1121. (1650)

No day passeth without some grief.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1670)

3 Praise day at night and life at end.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

See under DEATH: COUNT NO MAN HAPPY.

4 Never a day of complete evil. (καὶ οὐποτε πᾶν κακὸν ἦμαρ.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 813. (c. 800 B. C.)

Erasmus puts it into Latin, "Nullus dies omnino malus."

5 I can see daie at this little hole.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. I, ch. 10. (1546)

I can see day at a little hole.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 318. (1580)

[She] spied where the hare was by the hounds, and could see day at a little hole.

THOMAS LODGE, Works (1883), I, 68. (1590)

I have seen the day of wrong through the little hole of discretion.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 732. (1594)

I perceiue you can spie day at a little hole.

THOMAS DELONEY, The Gentle Craft. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (c. 1598)

One may see day at a little hole.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 329. (1605)

Men of my station can see day at a little hole—letters make words, and circumstances things.

JOHN WILSON, Belphegor. Act v, sc. 2. (1691)

I love, everything speaks, and in this case day-light is to be spy'd thro' a little hole.

JOHN OZELL, tr., Molière, v, 153. (1714)

As daylight can be seen through very small holes, so little things will illustrate a person's character.

SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help, p. 391. (1859)

6 Farewell my good daies, they wyll be soone gon.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1546)

7 Marked with chalk or with charcoal. (Creta an carbone notati.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. iii, l. 246. (30 B. C.)

White for good luck, black for bad. "Dies fasti et nefasti" (Days lucky and unlucky) is the Latin proverb. There are other Latin phrases. COXE, On Littleton, declares "Dies naturalis" is a day of twenty-four hours, and that "Dies artificialis" is a day consisting of the time between sunrise and sunset. "Dies non" is a day not reckoned.

This happy day to be enrolled
In rubric letters and in gold.

APHRA BEHN, City Heiress. Act v, sc. 3. (1682)

The red-letter days now become, to all intents and purposes, dead-letter days.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: Oxford in the Vacation. (1823) Holidays are printed in red on calendars.

A DAY TO BE MARKED WITH A WHITE STONE, see under STONE.

8 Wold he haue me kepe nothyng agaynst a raynye day?

J. JEFFERIES, tr., The Bugbears. Act iii, sc. 2. (c. 1580)

Wise men say Keepe somewhat till a rayny day.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works (Grosart), i, a 29. (1582)

Is it not good to lay up something against a stormie day?

PHILIP STUBBES, The Anatomie of Abuses, p. 115. (1583)

I sought to hoard up some [money] against a rainie day.

JOHN FLORIO, Montaigne, i, 40. (1603) An interpolation by Florio.

Lay up for a rainie day.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 93. (1639)

The Scots say, "Keep something for a sair fit." The Greeks call it, "Laying up money for a black day," instead of "rainy day." The French say, "Garder une poire pour la soif" (To keep a pear for the thirst).

To a fair day, open the window, but make you ready as to a foul.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 124. (1640)

I had the wit to cozen my husband of somewhat against a rainy day.

RICHARD BROME, City Wit. Act iv, sc. 1. (1653)

Provide for it by laying by something against a rainy day.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 31 Oct., 1666.

In the Time of Plenty, then lay up for a Rainy-day.

ANDREW YARRANTON, England's Improvement by Sea and Land, p. 115. (1677)

The business of a poor waiting-woman, here upon earth, is to be scraping up something against a rainy day, called the day of marriage.

JOHN DRYDEN, Amphitryon. Act i, sc. 2. (1690)

I have got some money that I put by for a rainy day.

CHAMIER, Tom Bowling. Ch. 39. (1841)

She . . . laid by for the rainy day she saw was coming.

CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth. Ch. 52. (1860)

When the old rainy day comes along I'll have a little change to buy myself an umbrella.

EUGENE WALTER, The Easiest Way. Act ii. (1909)

I want to cravenette myself for plenty of rainy days in the future.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Strictly Business. (1910)

Louis was saving for a rainy day and his wife had long ago given up praying for rain.

RING LARDNER, Anniversary. (1926)

The day may come, complete with rain.

MARGARET FISHBACK, Claustrophobia on the Home Grounds (1940)

<sup>1</sup> My days are swifter than a weaver's shuttle.
(Dies mei velocius transierunt quam a texente tela succiditur.)

Old Testament: Job, vii, 6. (c. 400 B.C.)

Now are my days swifter than a post. (Dies mei velociore fuerunt cursore.)

Old Testament: Job, ix, 25. (c. 400 B.C.)

Our days on earth are as a shadow. (Dies nostri quasi umbra super terram.)

Old Testament: I Chronicles, xxix, 15. (c. 400 B.C.)

The day is melting away like snow. (Quasi nix tabescit dies.)

PLAUTUS, Stichus, l. 648. (c. 200 B.C.)

Day is pushed out by day. (Truditur dies die.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 18, l. 15. (23 B.C.)

Though the days are long, they are short.

Babylonian Talmud: Erubin, fo. 65a. (c. 450)

The days [fly] like a weaver's shuttle. (Jib tzu ju so.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 184. (1872)

See also under TIME: ITS FLIGHT.

<sup>2</sup> Every day in thy life is a leaf in thy history.
V. S. LEAN, Collectanea, iii, 455. (1902)

<sup>3</sup> Better the day, better the deede.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, Michaelmas Terme. Act iii, sc. 1. (1607)

They say, the better day, the better deede.

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, Knave of Hearts, 46. (1612)

Upon Christmas-day (the better day the better deed!) he excommunicated Robert de Broc.

THOMAS FULLER, Church History, iii, 1. (1655)

I think the better day the better deed.

CHIEF JUSTICE SIR JOHN HOLT, Judgment, in Sir W. Moore's case. (1703) See 2 Raym., 1028.

The better day, the worse deed.

MATTHEW HENRY, Commentaries: Genesis, iii (1710)

That won't be proper; you know tomorrow's Sunday.—What then, Madam! they say, the better day, the better deed.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Ask Mr. Landless to dinner on Christmas Eve (the better the day the better the deed!)

DICKENS, Edwin Drood. Ch. 10. (1870)

The better the day, the better the deed. . . . It is only the Pharisees who objected to any necessary work being done on the Sabbath.

J. C. HUTCHESON, Crown and Anchor. Ch. 13. (1896) The French form is, "A bon jour bonne œuvre"; the Spanish, "En buen día buenas obras."

<sup>4</sup> Golden days, fruitful of golden deeds.

JOHN MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 337. (1667)

Days of old and days of gold,

And the days of forty-nine.

UNKNOWN, The Days of Forty-Nine. (c. 1860)

<sup>5</sup> When one has much to put into them, a day has a hundred pockets.

F. W. NIETZSCHE, Human All-too-Human. Ch. 1. (1878)

<sup>6</sup> On a good day good words must be spoken.
(Dicenda bona sunt bona verba die.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. i, l. 72. (c. A. D. 8.)

<sup>7</sup> This has certainly been a perverse and adverse day. (Edepol ne hic dies pervorsus atque advorsus.)

PLAUTUS, Menaechmi, l. 899. (c. 200 B.C.)

So foul and fair a day I have not seen.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, i, 3, 38. (1606)

Come what come may,

Time and the hour runs through the roughest day.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, i, 3, 146.

Dullest of dull-hued days.

THOMAS HARDY, A Commonplace Day. (1898)

<sup>8</sup> This is our busy day. (Rem negotiosam.)

PLAUTUS, Stichus, l. 356. (c. 200 B.C.)

Make it short, for this is my busy day. (Id promissit die.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 279. (c. 195 B.C.) Plautus also has, "In foribus scribat, occupatum se esse" (Let him write on the doors that he is busy).

This is my busy day.

EUGENE FIELD, Notice, above the desk in the Denver Tribune office, 1882.

This is my busy night.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Complete Life of John Hopkins. (1903)

<sup>9</sup> No day without its line. (Nulla dies sine linea.)

PLINY THE ELDER, Naturalis Historia. Bk. xxxv, ch. 10, sec. 84. (A. D. 77) This is a condensation of Pliny's statement that "It was Apelles' constant habit never to allow a day to be so fully occupied that he had not time for the exercise of his art, if only to the extent of one stroke of the brush."

I have drawn no line today. (Nullam hodie lineam duxi.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. iv, No. 12. (1508) With the Greek τῆμερον οὐδεμίαν γραμμὴν ἤγαγον.

Follow Apelles that cunning and wise Painter, which would lette no day passe over his head, without a lyne, without some labour.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 153. (1579)

Who will make a door of gold, must knock a nail every day.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1002. (1640)

The great Apelles, how assiduous was he! who thought his Time lost, without some excellent Line to crown his daily Labour!

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 189. (1709)

Add a line every hour, and between times add a line.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Experience. (1844)

Goethe's motto was "Ohne Hast, aber ohne Rast" (Without haste, without rest).

<sup>1</sup> Make each day a critique on the last.
POPE, An Essay on Criticism. Pt. iii, l. 12. (1709)

<sup>2</sup> A good day will not mend him, nor a bad day impair him.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 71. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 143. (1732)

<sup>3</sup> Sad days pass slowly; glad days pass quickly.
(K'u jih nan ao; 'huan shih i kuo.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 827. (1875)

<sup>4</sup> Each day is a little life; every waking and rising a little birth, every fresh morning a little youth, every going to rest and sleep a little death.

ARTHUR SCHOPENHAUER, Our Relation to Ourselves. (1851)

<sup>5</sup> A day differs not a whit from eternity. (Nihil interesse inter diem et saeculum.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. ci, sec. 9. (c. A. D. 65)

A day is a miniature eternity.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. iv, p. 26. (c. 1845)

The poorest day that passes over us is the conflux of two eternities; it is made up of currents that issue from the remotest Past, and flow onwards to the remotest Future.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Signs of the Times. (1829)

Is not every Meanest day the confluence of two eternities?

CARLYLE, The French Revolution, i, vi, 1. (1837)

<sup>6</sup> We have seen better days.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, iv, 2, 27. (1608)

We shall shortly see better days.

APHRA BEHN, The Roundheads. Act i, sc. 1. (1681)

His wither'd cheek and tresses grey
Seem'd to have known a better day.

WALTER SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel: Introduction. (1805)

She may have seen better days,
When she was in her prime.

JAMES THORNTON, She May Have Seen Better Days. (1894)

<sup>7</sup> Until the day break. (Donec aspireset dies.)

Old Testament: Song of Solomon, ii, 17. (c. 900 B. C.) Repeated in iv, 6.

Phosphor, bring back the day. (Phosphore, redde diem.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. viii, epig. 21. (A. D. 93)

Sweet Phosphor, bring the day.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. i, emb. 14. (1635)

The day, for the most part, is heroic only when it breaks.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 26 Sept., 1840.

<sup>8</sup> A day can prostrate and a day upraise
All mortal greatness.

(ὡς ἡμέρα, κλίνει τε κἀνάγει πάλιν ἅπαντα τάνθρώπεια.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 131. (c. 409 B. C.)

One day, as the poet says, brings one man down and lifts another up. (ἡ μὲν γὰρ, ὡς ἔφη τις, ἡμέρα τὸν μὲν καθέλκειν ὑπόβειν, τὸν δὲ ἤγειν ἄνω.)

PHILO, De Somniis. Bk. i, sec. 154. (c. A. D. 40)
Philo is paraphrasing EURIPIDES, Ion. Repeated in De Vita Mosis, i, 31.

Fear what a day gives: soon it comes to rob.
(Dies quod donat timeas: cito raptum venit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 160. (c. 43 B. C.)

<sup>9</sup> Man hath a weary pilgrimage

As through the world he wends,
On every stage, from youth to age,

Still discontent attends;

With heaviness he casts his eye

Upon the road before,

And still remembers with a sigh

The days that are no more.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Remembrance. (1798)

In the good old days.

LORD LYTTON, Harold. Bk. i, ch. 1. (1848) See also under ANTIQUITY.

The horse-and-buggy days.

F. D. ROOSEVELT, at press conference, 31 May, 1935.

The good old chaw-and-spit days.

RAYMOND CHANDLER, Farewell, My Lovely, p. 206. (1940)

<sup>10</sup> This day the sunne is in his chiefest hight,
With Barnaby the bright.

EDMUND SPENSER, Epithalamion, l. 265. (1595)

St. Barnabas' Day, the 11th of June, in Old Style reckoned the longest day. So the proverb is an old one.

Barnaby bright, the longest day and the shortest night;

Lucy light, the shortest day and the longest night.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 52. (1678) St. Lucy's day, Old Style, was the 13th of December, the winter solstice. There are many variations of this jingle. A proverb also in French and German. The German saying, "Sankt Luzen macht den Tag stutzen" (St. Lucy's makes the days stop getting shorter), must have originated about 1350 under the Julian calendar. Flemish tradition remedied the error by substituting St. Thomas' Day, Dec. 21, "Op St. Thomas lengen de dagen." There is a rhymed version of the Lucy proverb which is widely used in France:

On the festival of St. Lucy

The day grows by the leap of a flea.

(À la feste de Sainte Luce

Le jour croist du saut d'une puce.)

A Dutch version is: "On Epiphany the days lengthen by a cock's crow." TAYLOR, The Proverb, p. 117, says that one argument advanced against the introduction in 1581-82 of the Gregorian calendar was that the weather proverbs based on saints' days would no longer guide the husbandman. One of the important early sources of calendar proverbs, Johann Rasch's New Lösstag (1590) met this difficulty by altering the proverbs, where necessary, by the addition of ten days

1 The supreme (or decisive) day has come. (Venit summa dies.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 324. (19 B.C.) Also LUCAN, De Bello Civili, vii, 197.

The longed for day is at hand. (Expectata dies aderat.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. v, l. 104. (19 B.C.)

A day long to be remembered! (O longum memoria Dies!)

STATIUS, Sylvae. Bk. i, l. 13. (c. A.D. 90)

2 Live out inglorious days. (Ignobilis aevum exgeret.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vii, l. 776. (19 B.C.)

3 Friends, I have lost a day! (Amici, diem perdidit!)

EMPEROR TITUS VESPASIANUS. His customary self-reproach when a day passed without his benefiting some one. (C. A.D. 75) See Suetonius, Lives of the Caesars: Titus, ch. 8, sec. 1 He whose virtue sighed to lose a day.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 148. (1732) Referring to Titus.

"I've lost a day,"—the prince who nobly cried. Had been an emperor without his crown.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Nt. ii, l. 99. (1742)

Undoubtedly he saved his life, but fell into the other inconvenience of losing the day. (Il sauva bien sans doute sa vie, mais aussi il en cuida encourir l'autre inconvenient de perdre la journée.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 37. (1580)

Think that day lost whose low descending sun Views from thy hand no worthy action done.

JAMES BOBART, Virtus Sui Gloria. (1697) This is the earliest known use of this couplet. It was written by Bobart in the autograph album of David Krieg, now in the British Museum, and dated 8 Dec., 1697. It is in quote marks, thus indicating that it was not original with Bobart. It is included in STANFORD, Art of Reading, 3rd ed., p. 27, 1803, with "count" instead of "think" for the first word, and it is so given in a sampler in the Wadsworth-Longfellow house at Portland, Me., made by Longfellow's sister, Mary Longfellow, in 1824, when she was eight years old.

I look upon every day to be lost in which I do not make a new acquaintance.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, Aug., 1784

4 My days are gone a-wandering. (Mes jours s'en sont allez errant.)

FRANÇOIS VILLON, Le Grand Testament, l. 217. (c. 1460)

5 On dai bringd, thet al ier ne mai. [One day may bring what all the year can not.] Quod donare mora nequit annua, dat brevis hora. [What a year cannot give, a brief hour gives.]

UNKNOWN, Rawlinson MS., C, 641, f. 13c (c. 1270) See English Studies, xxxi, 16.

Often one day gives what a whole year denies. (Saepe una dies quod totus denegat annus.)

WRIGHT, ed., Political Songs, p. 176. (c. 1290)

Of bryngeth on day, that all the yere not may. FÖRSTER, ed., Douce MS, 52. (c. 1350)

Yet somtyme it shal fallen on a day

That falleth nat eft with-inne a thousand yere.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knight's Tale, l. 810. (c. 1386)

Oftymes one day is better than somtyme an hole yere.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Reynart the Foxe, xxvii, 66. (1481)

Hit fallith in a dai, that fallith not all the iere after.

RICHARD HILLS, Common-place Book, p. 128. (a. 1500) See also under HOUR.

6 The day is short and the work long.

UNKNOWN, The Tale of Beryn, l. 3631. (c. 1400) See under ART.

7 When the daies begin to lengthen the cold begins to strengthen.

UNKNOWN, Berkeley MSS, iii, 30. (1639)

We observe the cold to augment, when the daies begin to increase.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Pseudodoxia Epidemica Bk. iv, ch. 13. (1646)

As the days lengthen, so the cold strengthens.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 43. (1670)

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 52. (1721)

"February and March are much more cold and piercing than December or January."

As the days grow longer, the storms grow stronger,

As the days lengthen, so the storms strengthen. J. O. HALLIWELL, ed., Nature Songs. (1849)

II—Day: Its End

See also Night and Day; Evening

8 Well, this is the end of a perfect day.

CARRIE JACOBS BOND, A Perfect Day. (1920)

9 Beware of desp'rate steps. The darkest day (Live till to-morrow) will have pass'd away.

COWPER, The Needleless Alarm: Moral. (1782)

10 Bot hou so that the dai be long. The derke nyht comth ate laste.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis Bk. vi, l. 578. (c. 1390)

O mortall folke! you may beholde and se Howe I lye here, sometime a myghty knyght; The end of joye and all prosperite

Is deth at last, through his course and myght;

After the day there cometh the derke night;

For though the day be never so longe,

At last the belles ringeth to evensong.

STEPHEN HAWES, The Pastime of Pleasure (Percy Society), p. 207. (1509) "We owe to him [Stephen Hawes] one of the oldest forms, if not the oldest form, of the beautiful saying."—GEORGE SAINTSBURY, A Short History of English Literature, p. 165. See also JOHN FOXE, Book of Martyrs, vii, 346.

Yet is he sure, be the daie neuer so long,

Euermore at laste they ryng to euensong.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

Be the day never so long, yet at last comes evening-song.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, i, 313. (1629)
Be the day never so long, at length cometh evensong.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 77. (1670)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6132. (1732)

Every day cometh night.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578)
The morning sun never lasts a day.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 14. (1678)
Every day has its night, and every weel its woe.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs. (1846) The French say, "Nul jour n'est sans vèpre" (No day without Vespers). And there is a similar inscription in French on the tomb of Jean d'Orbesan in the cemetery at Padua; "Il n'est si beau jour qui n'amène pas sa nuit" (There is no day however beautiful which has not its night).

Be the day weary, or be the day long,

At length it draweth to evensong.

GEORGE SAINTSBURY, A Short History of English Literature, p. 165. (1898)

1 The curfew tolls the knell of parting day.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard, l. 1. (1750)

Curfew Must Not Ring To-night.

ROSE HARTWICK THORPE. Title of poem. (1867)
The refrain is occasionally varied to "Curfew shall not ring to-night," which is the way it is usually quoted.

2 The longest day soon comes to an end. (Longissimus dies cito conditur.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. ix, epis. 36. (c. A. D. 100)

The longest summers day hath his evening.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 250. (1580)
The longest day must have his evening.

JOSEPH HALL, Contemplations, ii, 33. (1612)
The longest day hath his end.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 333. (1605)

The longest day hath his evening; and thou shalt enjoy it but once, for it never returns again.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, Instructions to His Son. Sec. ii. (1616)

The longest day must have an end.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 77. (1670)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4633. (1732)

The longest day will have an end.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 337. (1721)
"Spoken when men now in power oppress us, signifying that there may be a turn."

The longest day will have an end, and though it's cloudy in the morning, the sun may shine bright enough at noon.

FREDERICK CHAMIER, Tom Bowling. Ch. 2. (841)

III—The Day of Judgment

3 But mercy, lady, at the grete assyse,
Whan we shul come before the hye justyse!

CHAUCER (?), An A.B.C., l. 36. (c. 1369)
As seint Jerome seith: "at every tyme that me remembreth of the day of dome, I quake; for whan I ete or drinke, or what-so that I do, evere semeth me that the trompe sowneth in myn ere: riseth up, ye that been dede, and cometh to the jugement."

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Persones Tale. Sec. 10. (c. 1389)

4 All's alike at the latter day,
A bag of gold and a wisp of hay.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 215. (1639)

A thousand pounds and a bottle of hay
Is all one thing at Doomsday.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1678)

Fient de chien & marc d'argent,
Seront tout un au jour de jugement.

(Dog's dung and silver marks
Will be all one at Judgment Day.)

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742.

5 There will be a day of reckoning sooner or later.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 20. (1838)

The day of reckoning was at hand.

H. T. BUCKLE, History of Civilization. Vol. iii, ch. 3. (1861)

6 Than sal thai come til the last iugement.

RICHARD ROLLE OF HAMPOLE, The Pricke of Conscience, l. 2802. (1340)

In the Resurrection and Day of Judgment.

H. H. MILMAN, History of Latin Christianity Bk. iv, ch. 1. (1855)

7 Gabriel had played his trump, and those of us who could not follow suit were arraigned for examination.

O. HENRY, An Unfinished Story. (1906)

8 God will not look you over for medals, degrees or diplomas, but for scars.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Roycroft Book of Epigrams (c. 1910)

9 Euery ones deathes daye is his doomes daye.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 181. (1579)

Death's Day is Doom's Day.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1255. (1732)

10 In the day of judgment. (ἐν ἡμέρᾳ κρίσεως.)

New Testament: Matthew, x, 15. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "In die iudicii," often rendered "doomsday."

Day of wrath, that day, the world shall dissolve in ashes. (Dies irae, dies illa, saeculum solvet in favilla.)

THOMMASO DI CELANO (?), Dies Irae. (c. 1240)

Monastic chant for the Office of the Dead. Called the greatest of all hymns; attributed also to St. Gregory and St. Bernard.

He myght last till Domesday.

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, Langtoft's Chronicle, l. 8734. (c. 1330) That is, till the end of the world.

The dredeful day of dome.

UNKNOWN, First English Book on America: Introduction. (c. 1511)

The dreadful judgement-day.

SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry VI, i, 1, 29. (1591)

That day of wrath, that dreadful day,
When heaven and earth shall pass away,
What power shall be the sinner's stay?
How shall he meet that dreadful day?

O, on that day, that wrathful day,
When man to judgment wakes from clay,
Be THOU the trembling sinner's stay,
Though heaven and earth shall pass away.

WALTER SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel.
Canto vi, l. 542. (1805)

1
To preche the . . . daye of retribucyon.

WYNKYN DE WORDE, ed., The Pilgrimage of Perfection, fo. 200b. (1526)

The day of retribution will come in thunder and in vengeance.

ZEBULON PIKE, An Account of Expeditions to the Sources of the Mississippi, iii, app. 13. (1808)

The day of retribution rarely fails to come at last.

SIR BENJAMIN BRODIE, Psychological Inquiries.
Vol. ii, ch. 4. (1856)

DAYLIGHT

2
That'll shake the daylights out of us.

EMERSON BENNETT, Mike Fink. Ch. 1. (1852)

"Daylights" were the most vital organs.

The driver bangs the mule, that is ostensibly pulling his daylights out.

BILL NYE, Baled Hay, p. 79. (1884)

I'll shoot the everlasting daylights out of you.

E. S. FIELD, The Sapphire Bracelet, p. 149. (1910)

They shot the daylights out of me.

R. D. PAINE, Comrades of the Rolling Ocean,
p. 22. (1921)

3
Tyme rouleth on, I doe but daylight burne.

THOMAS CHURCHYARD, The Worthies of Wales,
84. (1587)

Wee burne time.

JOHN LYLY, Mother Bombie. Act ii, sc. 1. (1592)

Come, we burn daylight, ho! . . . I mean, sir, in delay

We waste our lights in vain, like lamps by day.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 4, 43. (1595)

We burn daylight.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, ii, 1, 54. (1601) DRYDEN, Secret Love. Act
ii, sc. 1. (1668)

Talk does but burn daylight.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Aesop, 298. (1692)

We burn day-light, lose time, and love.

COLLEY CIBBER, The Comical Lovers. Act ii.
(1707)

No candles yet, I beseech you; don't let us burn daylight.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

Burn not daylight about it; we have short time to spare.

WALTER SCOTT, Ivanhoe. Ch. 43. (1820)

Burn daylight, To light candles before dark.

WILLIAM CARR, Dialect of Craven, i, 58. (1828)

But the meaning also is to waste daylight,
i. e., to waste time.

DEAFNESS

4
Deaf Men are quick-ey'd and distrustful.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1242. (1732)
To a deaf man, the eye serves for an ear. (Al sordo, l'occhio serve di orecchio.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes,
p. 200. (1856) An Italian proverb.

5
The deaf gains the injury.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 926. (1640)

Deaf men go away with the injury.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1670)

Deaf Men go away with the Blame.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1243. (1732)

6
Who is so deafe, or so blynde as is hee,
That wilfully will nother hear nor see?

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)
None is so deaf as who will not hear.

THOMAS INGELAND, Disobedient Child. (c. 1560)
No man's worse deafe than he that will not heare

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Sourd. (1611)
Who is so deaf as he that will not hear?

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 84. (1640)
'Tis a true saying, that none are so deaf as those that won't hear.

JOHN OZELL, tr., Molière, iii, 91. (1714)
None are so completely deaf as those who will not hear.

JEREMY BENTHAM, Book of Fallacies. (1824)
See also HAYDEN, Travels Round Our Village, p. 268. (1905) CHRISTIE, Easy to Kill,
p. 131. (1939) WENTWORTH, *The Chinese
Shawl*, p. 124. (1943)

There is no worse deafness than that which doesn't wish to hear. (No hay peor sordo, que el que no quiere oir.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes,
p. 266. (1856) A Spanish proverb. The French say, "Il n'est si mauvais sourd que celui qui ne veut oir"; the Italians, "Non ci è più cattivo sordo di quel che non vuol udire"; the Danes, "Ingen er mere döv end den som ikke vil høre."

When the eye will not see, neither light nor glasses help. (Wenn das Aug nicht sehen will,
So helfen weder Licht, noch Brill.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 303.

7
Deafness is better than the hearing of idle words.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. iv, Apol. 16. (c. 1257)

8
The deaf man is bold in battle.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 71.
(c. 900)

9
In the kingdom of the deaf, the one-eared is king.

BERNARD SHAW, as quoted by PEARSON, G.B.S.,
p. 110. See under BLINDNESS.

10
He thinks himself deaf, because he no longer hears himself talked of.

TALLEYRAND, referring to Chateaubriand in his old age. (c. 1835)

<sup>1</sup> He tells his story to a deaf ear. (Surdo narret fabulam.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 222. (163 B. C.)

Make deaf ere to hem as though thou herde hem not.

WALTER HYLTON, Scala Perfectionis, ii, 22. (c. 1440)

What man can belieue, that man can do well
Who of no man will counsell take or here tell?
Whiche to you, whan any man any way tryde,
Than were ye deafe, ye could not here on that syde.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)
The kyng was required to purchase his deliverance, . . . but he could not heare on that side.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle: Henry IV, fo. 16b. (1548)

He hears not at that ear.

FEROUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 46. (c. 1595)
I feare we are deafe on that side.

JOHN CHAMBERLAIN, Letters, p. 12. (1598)
If he have no mind to perform it, we say, hee cannot heare on that side.

PAUL BAYNE, Commentarie upon Ephesians. Ch. 1. (c. 1600)

He will not hear of it.—Not of that ear.

BEN JONSON, Magnetick Lady. Act i. (1632)
The Don hearing but of one eare.

EDMUND GAYTON, Pleasant Notes upon Don Quixot, p. 141. (1654)

He cannot hear on that ear.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 180. (1670)
He is deaf on that side of his head. Spoken to those who like not, and therefore take no notice of, your proposals.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 150. (1721)
They never would hear, But turn the deaf ear,
As a matter they had no concern in.

SWIFT, Dingley and Brent. (c. 1724)

For foolish talk a deaf ear. (A palabras necias, orejas sordos.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 266. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

<sup>2</sup> Were you born in a mill, curtolt? you prate so hye.

GEORGE WHETSTONE, Promos and Cassandra, sig. B3. (1578) Deaf people raise their voices.
He was born in a mill [i. e. deaf].

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 76. (1678)

II—Proverbial Comparisons

<sup>3</sup> Hee is as deafe as a door.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works, ii, c. 49. (1599)
The usurer is as deafe as a doore nayle.

THOMAS WILSON, A Discourse upon Usurye, p. 224. (1572)

<sup>4</sup> I thereat seemde dumme and deaffe as post.

THOMAS CHURCHYARD, Chippes, 136. (1575)
I'm dull as any post.

JOHN GAY, Poems (Underhill), ii, 280. (1720)
As deaf as a post.

R. B. SHERIDAN, The School for Scandal. Act 1, sc. 1. (1777)

She's as deaf as a post.

JOHN RHODE, Signal for Death, p. 29. (1941)
Anybody would think you were as deaf as a post.

MATTHEW HEAD, The Smell of Money, p. 158. (1943)

<sup>5</sup> There is the shad, I believe they have no ears, for they don't mind noises a bit; and when a feller is hard a-hearing, we say he is as deaf as a shad.

T. C. HALIBURTON, Wise Saws. Ch. 7. (1843)

<sup>6</sup> As deaf as nuts.

ROBERT HERRICK, Hesperides. No. 670. (1648)
"Deaf nuts" are nuts without kernels.

<sup>7</sup> She was deaf as a stone.

THOMAS HOOD, A Tale of a Trumpet. (1841)

<sup>8</sup> That there horse is as deaf as a beetle.

LEVESON-GOWER, Surrey Provincialisms, p. 86. (1876) Parish and Shaw, in their Dictionary of the Kentish Dialect, explain that "beetle" does not refer to the insect, but to a wooden mallet used for driving wedges and pegs, ramming down paving-stones, and so on, and that it is equivalent to "as deaf as a post."

<sup>9</sup> They are like the deaf adder that stoppeth her ear; which will not hearken to the voice of charmers, charming never so wisely. (Sicut aspidis surdae, et obturantis aures suas, Quae non exaudiet vocem incantantium: et venefici incantantis sapienter.)

Old Testament: Psalms, lviii, 4, 5. (c. 350 B. C.)

Ears more deaf than adders.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, ii, 2, 172. (1602)

I will be deaf as an adder.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Eastward Hoe. Act v, sc. 2. (1605)

I would rather chuse to be as deaf as an adder.
THOMAS BROWN, Works (1760), ii, 246. (1702)
Ye are as deaf as adders upon that side of the head.

WALTER SCOTT, Waverley. Ch. 36. (1814)

As deaf as the adder to the voice of the charmer.

WALTER SCOTT, The Pirate. Ch. 28. (1821) The proverbial phrase "Deaf as an adder," arose from the old superstition that snakes are deaf. Notes and Queries, ser. ii, i, 401, in 1856, published an old jingle, "If the adder could hear and the blindworm could see, No poor man's children could go their way free," probably for the reason they have to walk, or go barefoot, while rich men's children can ride or go shod. It also mentions a Kentish proverb (ii, i, 331), "If I could hear as well as see, No man nor beast should pass by me," the adder speaking. Parish in his Sussex Dictionary, p. 14, says that Sussex people assert that these words can be found on the adder's belly. The idea that it is deaf arose, of course, from the passage from the Psalms, quoted above.

TO SING TO DEAF EARS, see under LABOR LOST.

<sup>1</sup> She's as deaf as Corra-linn—we canna mak her hear day nor door.

WALTER SCOTT, Old Mortality. Ch. 8. (1816)
Not to hear anything distinctly.

<sup>2</sup> Deafer than a thrush. (αυφότερος κίχλης.)

ZENOBIUS, Adagia, iv, 66. A Greek proverb, cited also by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, ix, 9, "Surdior turdo." A similar proverb (ERASMUS, ii, ix, 8) is "Deafer than Torona's harbor" (Surdior Toronaei portu), because this port of Thrace was so remote from the sea that the breakers could not be heard there. "Deafer than a thrush" was used of persons so garrulous that they never listened for an answer.

DEAL

<sup>3</sup> Give us the cards for awhile. . . . Hurrah for a new deal.

CHARLES LEVER, Roland Cashel. Ch. 13. (1849)
The war is prolonged, and but little chance of its ending until we have a new deal.

JOHN SHERMAN, Letters, p. 205. (1863)

I pledge you—I pledge myself—to a new deal for the American people.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, Speech of Acceptance, to Democratic National Convention, Chicago, 2 July, 1932, which had just nominated him as the Democratic candidate for the Presidency. See New York Times, 3 July, sec. i, p. 8/7; LINDLEY, The Roosevelt Revolution. Ch. 1. In 1944 Mr. Roosevelt suggested that the phrase be dropped.

The phrase "a New Deal," which was publicly introduced in the speech of acceptance, I first used in the general philosophical statement which prefaced this series of memoranda.

RAYMOND MOLEY, Mr. Roosevelt Sets His Cap. In Saturday Evening Post, 24 June, 1939, p. 94.

<sup>4</sup> Persuaded to reënter the proposed political deal.

FRANK NORRIS, The Octopus, p. 163. (1901)

I'm going to swing this deal right over into July.

FRANK NORRIS, The Pit. Ch. 9. (1902)

The political deal means that the heads of rival parties agree each to support some of the candidates of the other's ticket, thus rendering the election of the least desirable men almost a certainty.

ALBERT BUSHNELL HART, Actual Government, p. 100 (1903)

<sup>5</sup> Thought I'd better give him a square deal.

MARK TWAIN, Life on the Mississippi. Ch. 52. (1883)

It was a square deal, and you all saw it.

H. S. CANFIELD, A Maid of the Frontier, p. 88. (1898)

If elected, I shall see to it that every man has a square deal, no less and no more.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Campaign Speech, 4 Nov., 1904.

We demand that big business give people a square deal.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Letter, when suit was brought to dissolve the Steel Trust. (1904)
I stand for the square deal.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, Osawatomie, Kansas, 31 Aug., 1910.

DEATH

See also Fame and Death; Life and Death; Love and Death

I—Death: Definitions

<sup>6</sup> Death were great joy. (θανεῖν πολλή χάρις.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 550. (458 B.C.)

<sup>7</sup> We all labour against our own cure, for death is the cure of all diseases.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 9. (1643) The Germans say, "Death is the poor man's doctor."

<sup>8</sup> Death at last is the Inne where our lyfe doth take vp his lodgyng. (Morte al fine è l'hosteria doue piglia alloggiamento la nostra vita.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 98. (1578)
Quoting Antonio Guevara.

<sup>9</sup> To die is landing on some silent shore,
Where billows never break, nor tempests roar.
GARTH, The Dispensary. Canto iii, l. 225. (1699)

<sup>10</sup> Death's but a path that must be trod,
If man would ever pass to God.

THOMAS PARNELL, A Night-Piece on Death. l. 67. (c. 1710)

I think of death as some delightful journey
That I shall take when all my tasks are done.
ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, The Journey. (1901)

<sup>11</sup> Death is but a fleeting from one life into another.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 144. (1576)
Death is the beginning of another life. (La mort est origine d'une aultre vie.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 19. (1580)

<sup>12</sup> Death is but crossing the World, as Friends do the Seas.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. Pt. ii, No. 131. (1718)

<sup>13</sup> Death is the separation of the soul from the body. (*Αρα μὴ ἄλλο τι ἢ τὴν τῆς ψυχῆς ἀπὸ τοῦ σώματος ἀπαλλαγὴν;)

PLATO, Phaedo. Sec. 64C. (c. 375 B.C.) Quoted by PHILO, Legum Allegoria, 106. He goes on to quote Plato further (Gorgias, 493A; Cratylus, 400B), by adding that at death "the soul is released from the body, the baneful corpse to which it was tied." GUAZZO (ii, 128) paraphrases it: "Plato was wont to say, that during this present life, we are as dead men, and that our bodies are our own sepulchres, meaning to inferre thereby, that we begin to live, when we dye."

1 Death is sometimes a punishment, often a gift; to many it has been a favor. (Interim poena est mori, | sed saepe donum; pluribus veniae fuit.)

SENECA, Hercules Oetaeus, l. 930. (c. A. D. 60)

2 Death is a black camel, which kneels at every man's gate.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 50. (1853) Quoting a Turkish proverb, sometimes attributed to Abd-el-Kader. Trench explains that the camel kneels in order to take up the burden of a dead body. The Black Camel was used by Earl Derr Biggers as the title of a novel. (1929)

Arise, O Soul, and gird thee up anew,
Though the black camel, Death, kneel at thy gate.
J. B. KENYON, The Black Camel. (c. 1900)

3 Dying is ceasing to be afraid.

WILLIAM WYCHERLEY, The Plain-Dealer. Act i. (c. 1674)

II—Death: Apothegms

4 Death cometh but once to mortals, and no man ever saw it come twice. (μόνον ἀπαξ θνητοῖς παραγίνεται.)

AGATHIAS, Epigram. (c. 575) See Greek Anthology, x, 69.

A man can die but once.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, iii, 2, 250. (1598)

Death of one person can be paid but once.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, iv, 14, 27. (1606)

It is the lot of man but once to die.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. v, emb. 7. (1635)

With great submission I pronounce,
That people die no more than once.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Turtle and Sparrow. (1708)

Men die but once.

CHARLES LAMB, John Woodvil. Act ii, sc. 2. (1802)

"A man cannot die more than once" is an old apophthegm.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Olla Podrida. Ch. 12. (1840)

The crash of the whole solar and stellar systems could only kill you once.

CARLYLE, Letter to John Carlyle. (c. 1866)

I can only die once and then it'll be over.

PATRICIA WENTWORTH, Pursuit of a Parcel, p. 94. (1942)

5 To die a dog's death. (θάνατος κύνελος.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Wasps, l. 898. (422 B. C.)

With the Greeks the phrase had a much worse significance than merely to die as a dumb brute; it refers to the dread of being left unburied after death—a dread referred to by Homer many times.

He lyved lyke a lyon, and dyed lyke a dogge.

JOHN RASTELL, The Pastyme of People, 57. (1529)

Thou shalt famish a dog's death.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, ii, 2, 91. (1608)

Die like a rat.

B. E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew: Die. (c. 1695) To be poisoned.

He dies like a beast.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 370. (1855)

To die this dog's death, out here under these mountains.

G. M. FENN, In an Alpine Valley, i, 22, (1894)

6 Death foreseen is the hatefulest death to man. (ὁ γὰρ προφανὴς θανατοῖσιν ἐχθιστος φόνων.)

BACCHYLIDES, For Hiero of Syracuse, l. 51. (468 B. C.)

To know the hour of doom is continual death. (Pereundi scire tempus adsidue est mori.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 530. (c. 43 B. C.)

Get the coffin ready and the man won't die. (Pan tao kuan ts'ai jên pu ssü.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 931. (1875)

No man is dead till he is dead.

FRANCIS BEEDING, The Twelve Disguises, p. 265. (1942)

7 All flesh weareth out as a garment: for the covenant from the beginning is, Thou shalt die the death. (ὅτι οὐκ ἔστιν ἐν ἄδου ζητῆσαι τρυφήν, ἡ γὰρ διαθήκη ἀπ' αἰῶνος θανάτου ἀποθνήσκει.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xiv, 17. (c. 190 B. C.) Quoted in Babylonian Talmud: Erubin, fo. 54a.

We must dye the death, because we haue sene God.

MILES COVERDALE, Bible: Judges, xiii, 22.

(1535) The King James Version says simply, "We shall surely die." As Dr. Johnson points out, "Die the death" seems to be a solemn phrase for death inflicted by law.

He that blasphemeth the name of the Lorde, shall dye the death.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 164. (1579)

He shall die the death.

WILLIAM LAMBARDE, Eirenarcha, ii, 7. (1581)

Either to die the death, or to abjure

For ever the society of men.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, i, 1, 65. (1590)

8 Drive your cart and your plow over the bones of the dead.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

9 The dede hath few frendys.

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, Handlyng Synne, l. 6302. (1303)

Frendles ys the dede, quoth Hendyng.

Proverbs of Hendyng, l. 37. (c. 1310)

The dead haue no frends, the sicke but faint ones.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Ami. (1611)

Justice has bid the world adieu,

And dead men haue no frends.

SIR CHARLES SEDLEY, Ballad. (c. 1695)

Dead Men are of no Family, and are akin to none.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1240. (1732)

10 The dead ride fast. (Die Todten reiten schnell.)

GOTTFRIED BÜRGER, Lenore. (1772)

- <sup>1</sup> Death is deaf. (La muerte es sorda.)
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1615)
- <sup>2</sup> The life of the dead is placed in the memory of the living. (Vita enim mortuorum in memoria est posita vivorum.)
CICERO, Philippicae. No. ix, sec. 5. (44 B.C.)
To live in hearts we leave behind Is not to die.
THOMAS CAMPBELL, Hallowed Ground. (1825)
- <sup>3</sup> The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death. (ἔσχατος ἐχθρὸς καταργεῖται ὁ θάνατος.)
New Testament: I Corinthians, xv, 26. (57 A.D.) The Vulgate is, "Novissima autem inimica destruetur mors."
- <sup>4</sup> To bring unto death's door.
MILES COVERDALE, A Spyrytuall Pearle. Ch. 18. (1550)
Nature brought him to the door of death.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, iii, 3, 105. (1591)
When death comes to our dores, and we are at deaths-dore.
PETER BULKELEY, The Gospel Covenant: To the Reader. (1646)
Poor Mrs. Crawley had been at death's door.
TROLLOPE, Framley Parsonage. Ch. 43. (1860)
- <sup>5</sup> These have not the hope of death. (Questi non hanno speranza di morte.)
DANTE, Inferno. Canto iii, l. 46. (c. 1300)
- <sup>6</sup> Never say die!
DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 2. (1837) Repeated in ch. 40. Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 6. (1840) BARHAM, The Merchant of Venice. (1840) SMITH, Christopher Tadpole. Ch. 1. (1848) SHAW, Major Barbara. Act ii. (1905) etc., etc.
Never say die while there's a shot in the locker.
JOHN M. WILSON, Tales of the Borders, iv, 142. (a. 1835)
A strong determination never to "say die."
F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 2. (1850)
- <sup>7</sup> The dead are dead. (νεκροὶ οἱ θάνατοι.)
EURIPIDES, Alcestis, l. 541. (c. 438 B.C.)
Man lieth down, and riseth not: till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep. (Sic homo cum dormierit, non resurget, donec atteratur caelum, non evigilabit, nec consurget de somno suo.)
Old Testament: Job, xiv, 12. (c. 350 B.C.)
Ay me! when the mallows and the fresh green parsley and the springing crumpled anise perish in the garden, they live yet again and grow another year; but we men that are so tall and strong and wise, soon as ever we be dead, unhearing there in a hole of the earth sleep we both sound and long a sleep that is without end.
MOSCHUS, Lament for Bion, l. 98. (c. 150 B.C.)
Alas, for us no second spring.
Like mallows in the garden bed.
ANDREW LANG, Triolets after Moschus. (1884)
Death is end for all. (Mors est finita omnibus.)
CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iii, ch. xxv, sec. 59. (45 B.C.) Quoting Euripides.

- When once a man's dead,
There's no more to be said.
R. H. BARHAM, A Lay of St. Dunstan. (a. 1845)
When you're dead, you stay a long time dead.
RING LARDNER, Zone of Quiet. (1926) The French say, "Quand on est mort c'est pour longtemps."
- <sup>8</sup> To die ignobly is a coward's part. (ὡς ἀνδρὸν ἀκλεῶς καταβαίνειν.)
EURIPIDES, Orestes, l. 786. (c. 410 B.C.)
Not death is dreadful, but a shameful death. (οὐ καταβαίνειν γὰρ δεινόν, ἀλλ' ἀσχηρῶς βαίνειν.)
MENANDER, Monostikoi. No. 504. (c. 300 B.C.)
A dishonorable death is an insult of fate. (Mala mors necessitatis contumelia est.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 415. (c. 43 B.C.)
- <sup>9</sup> When death puts out our flame, the snuff will tell
If we are wax or tallow, by the smell.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739.
Take Courage, Mortal; Death can't banish thee out of the Universe.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1746
- <sup>10</sup> Dead Folk are past fooling.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1238. (1732)
Death is bitter to the Man in Prosperity.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1249.
He is miserable, that dyeth not before he desires to die.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1924.
The Dead, and only they, should do nothing.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4469.
- <sup>11</sup> He that dies half a year ago is as dead as Adam.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2079. (1732)
He that died o' Wednesday.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 1, l. 137. (1597)
The wight that died o' Wednesday,
Just laid the light below,
Is dead as the varlet turned to clay
A score of years ago.
EDMUND CLARENCE STEDMAN, Falstaff's Song. (1873)
- <sup>12</sup> Ye honest poor rogues, who die in your shoes.
JOHN GAY, Newgate's Garland, l. 4. (1725)
To be hanged.
I sentence them to die with their boots on.
JOAQUIN MILLER, The Danites. Act iv. (1877)
- <sup>13</sup> Sally was death on lace.
T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Nature and Human Nature, p. 225. (1855)
To be death on anything, is to be . . . a capital hand at it, like the quack doctor who could not manage the whooping-cough, but was, as he expressed it, "death on fits."
JOHN BARTLETT, Dictionary of Americanisms: Death. (1860)
She was always death on you English chaps.
EDGAR FAWCETT, Gentleman of Leisure, i, 9. (1884) Very fond of.

<sup>1</sup> The dead are the best counsellors. (Optimi consilarii mortui.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 311.
(1869) See also under BOOKS.

<sup>2</sup> He pulls with a long rope, that waits for another's death.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 26.
(1640) From the French, "A longue corde tire qui d'autrui mort désire."

TO WAIT FOR DEAD MEN'S SHOES, see under SHOE.

<sup>3</sup> After Death the Doctor.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1035.
(1640) See under LATE.

<sup>4</sup> The Father lifted on high the golden scales, and set therein two fates of grievous death. (και τότε δὴ χρύσεια πατὴρ ἐτίθεινε τάλαντα, | ἐν δ' ἐτίθει δύο κῆρε ταηλεγέος θανάτοιο.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxii, l. 209. (c. 850 B.C.)

Jupiter himself upholds two scales in even balance, and lays therein the diverse destinies of both, whom the strife dooms, and with whose weight death sinks down.

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xii, l. 725. (19 B.C.) The sinking scale means death.

<sup>5</sup> Death has slain the best, the shameful are all left me. (τοὺς μὲν ἀπώλεσ' Ἀρης, τὰ δ' ἐλέγχεα πάντα λείπειται.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxiv, l. 260. (c. 850 B.C.)

Death takes the best, and leaves the worst. (Mors optima rapit, deterrima relinquit.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, ix, 43. (1523) Citing the line from Homer. Another form of the proverb is "Optima citissime pereunt" (The best most quickly perish).

Death ever loves to pluck the fairest flower of an armed host. ("Ἀρης φιλεῖ | δεῖ τὰ λῶστα πάντ' ἀπανθίζειν στρατοῦ.)

AESCHYLUS, Europe. Frag. 51, Smyth. (c. 458 B.C.)

There are so many thousand beauties among the dead. (Sunt apud infernos tot milia formosarum.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. xxviii, l. 49.
(c. 24. B.C.)

Death aims with fouler spite at fairer marks.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Divine Poems. (1632)

Death loves a shining mark, a signal blow.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 1010. (1742)

<sup>6</sup> Cruell death spareth not those, which we our selves living cannot spare.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England: Euphues Glasse for Europe, p. 451. (1580)

The best die first.

EBENEZER ELLIOTT, The Village Patriarch. Bk. iv, pt. 4. (1831)

The best go first, the bad remain to mend.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 498. (1855)

The best go first, that is an old saying.

CHARLES READE, Love Me Little, Love Me Long. Ch. 21. (1859)

THE GOOD DIE FIRST, see under GOODNESS.

<sup>7</sup> Death overtakes the man who flees. (Mors et fugacem persequitur virum.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 2, l. 14. (23 B.C.)

The coward flees in vain; death follows close behind;

It is in defying it that the brave escapes it.

(La lâche fuit en vain; la mort vole à sa suite; C'est en la défiant que le brave l'évite.)

VOLTAIRE, Le Triumvirat. Act iv, sc. 7. (1764)

He fled from death and fell into it.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 491.
(1817) See also under COWARDICE.

<sup>8</sup> Death is the only master who takes his servants without a character.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 136. (1902)

<sup>9</sup> The king of terrors.

Old Testament: Job, xviii, 14. (c. 350 B.C.)

The Vulgate has merely, "Quasi rex."

The grieslie terror.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 704. (1667)

This king of terrors is the prince of peace.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Nt. iii, l. 535. (1742)

There is no king more terrible than death.

AUSTIN DOBSON, The Dance of Death. (1877)

<sup>10</sup> You will not dye this year.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 394. (1721)

"Spoken when they come in of whom we are speaking."

I know of no Body, that has a mind to die this Year.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2614. (1732)

<sup>11</sup> Most men die because they cannot help dying. (La plupart des hommes meurent parce qu'on ne peut s'empêcher de mourir.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 23. (1665)

<sup>12</sup> The dead are always wrong. (Les morts ont toujours tort.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbs Français, ii, 333.

(1859) An old French proverb echoed in the German, "Die Toten haben immer Unrecht." THE ABSENT ARE ALWAYS WRONG, see under ABSENCE.

The dead have no rights. They are nothing; and nothing cannot own something.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Samuel Kerchival, 1816.

<sup>13</sup> Death itself has often fled from a man. (Mors ipsa refugit saepe virum.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ii, l. 75. (c. A. D. 60)

<sup>14</sup> The gate of death. (Ianua leti.)

LUCRETIVS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. i, l. 1112.
(c. 45 B.C.)

Death the gate of life. (Mors ianua vitae.)

ST. BERNARD, In Transitu S. Malachi. Sermon 1, sec. 4. (c. 1150)

To the faithful, Death the Gate of Life.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xii, l. 571. (1667)

Death is for many of us the gate of hell; but we are inside on the way out, not outside on the way in.

BERNARD SHAW, Parents and Children. (1914)
Preface to Misalliance.

Death is only an old door, Set in a garden wall.
NANCY BYRD TURNER, Death Is a Door. (1925)

1
To day thawgh thou be stowt and gay,
A-morow thou lyyest by the walle.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems, p. 230. (c. 1430)
"He is laid by the wall" a proverbial phrase for the interval between death and burial, while the corpse is lying in the house.

2 Nicanor lay dead in his harness. (Cum armis suis.)

Apocrypha: II Maccabees, xv, 28. (c. 200 B.C.)
At least we'll die with harness on our back.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, v, 5, 52. (1606)

I am like an old horse . . . I will die in harness.
MARRYAT, Jacob Faithful. Ch. 40. (1834)
Like most medieval workers they all died in harness.

BISHOP WILLIAM STUBBS, Constitutional History of England. Bk. iii, ch. 21. (1875)

It is a man dying with his harness on that angels love to escort upward.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit, p. 28. (1887)

3
The act of dying is also one of the acts of life.
(μία γὰρ τῶν βιωτικῶν πράξεων καὶ αὕτη ἐστὶ, καθ' ἣν ἀποθνήσκομεν.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. vi, sec. 2.
(c. A. D. 174)

4
Hanging they thought better than dying by inches from starvation.

MARRYAT, Midshipman Easy. Ch. 16. (1836)

5
Grim death.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Roman Actor. Act iv,
sc. 2. (1626)

Before mine eyes in opposition sits Grim Death.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 803. (1667)

Holding on, like grim death.

THEODORE HOOK, Jack Brag. Ch. 20. (1837)

He would . . . hold on like grim death.

CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth.
Ch. 4. (1861)

Stick to him like grim death.

DALY, Murders in Volume Two, p. 216. (1941)

6
Let the dead bury their dead. (ἀφες τοὺς νεκροὺς θάψαι τοὺς θαντῶν νεκρούς.)

New Testament: Matthew, viii, 22. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Dimitte mortuos sepelire mortuos suos."

7
Death's wing. (φόνου πτερόν.)

MENANDER, Fragments. (c. 300 B.C.) Attribution by ZENOBIUS, vi, 31. Cited by ERASMUS,
Adagia, iii, ii, 34, with the Latin, "Occisionis ala." Sometimes given in English as "Murder's wing."

The Angel of Death has been abroad throughout the land: you may almost hear the beating of his wings.

JOHN BRIGHT, *Speech Against the Crimean
War*, House of Commons, 23 Feb., 1855.

The wind of Death's imperishable wing.

D.G.ROSSETTI, House of Life: Lovesight. (1870)

8
The old devourer . . . death, had made our landlord dance after his pipe.

MIDDLETON, Father Hubberds Tales. (1640)

9
Today if death did not exist, it would be necessary to invent it. (Aujourd'hui si la mort n'existait pas, il faudrait l'inventer.)

JEAN BAPTISTE MILHAUD, when voting for the death of Louis XVI, 19 Jan., 1793. See Le Moniteur, 20 Jan., 1793.

10
Death is easier to bear without thinking of it, than the thought of death without danger.
(La mort est plus aisée à supporter sans y penser, que la pensée de la mort sans peril.)

BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. i, art. ix, No. 61.
(c. 1660)

One will die alone. (On mourra seul.)

BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées, i, iii, 211.

11
You give the finishing stroke. (κολοφῶνα ἐπιτίθης.)

PLATO, Euthydemus. Sec. 301E. (c. 375 B.C.)

The cup of death already drained. (Iam exhausto illo poculo mortis.)

CICERO, Pro Cluentio. Ch. xi, sec. 31. (66 B.C.)

At the point of death. (ἐσχάτως ἔχει.)

New Testament: Mark, v, 23. (c. A. D. 70) The Vulgate is "In extremis," but the better known phrase is "In articulo morte" (In the moment of death).

12
Do not turn back on reaching the boundaries.
(μὴ ἐπιστρέφεισθαι ἐπὶ τοὺς ὅρους ἐλθόντας.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Education of Children,
12F. (c. A. D. 95) Plutarch is quoting a proverb, which he explains means that "when people are about to die and see the boundary of their life close at hand, they should bear it with serenity." Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 2, as a saying of Pythagoras, and with the Latin, "Ad finem ubi perveneris, ne velis reverti."

Not to retire when we are come to the end of our race: that is, when we are at the poynt of death we should not be oppressed with griefe, but willingly yeeld to Nature.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 148. (1579)

13
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil. (Nam. et si ambulavero in medio umbrae mortis, non timebo mala.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xxiii, 4. (c. 350 B.C.)

The Greek phrase is σκιά θανάτου.

The land of darkness and the shadow of death.
(Terram tenebrosam, et opertam mortis caligine.)

Old Testament: Job, x, 21. (c. 350 B.C.)

The lond of mise and of derknesse, where-as is the shadwe of deeth.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Persones Tale. Sec. 10. (c. 1389)

At the end of this Valley, was another, called the Valley of the Shadow of Death.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress, i, 58. (1678)

The valley of the shadow of death. . . . An almost fatal illness; experience thereof.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Valley. (1941)

1 He dies twice who dies at the will of another. (Bis emori est alterius arbitrio mori.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 63. (c. 43 B. C.) He whose death his friends await lives a life his fellows hate. (Cuius mortem amici expectant vitam cives oderunt.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 105. Ah, how formidable is he who thinks it safe to die! (Heu quam est timendus qui mori tutum putat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 242. A man dies as often as he loses his loved ones (Homo totiens moritur quotiens amittit suos.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 252. Lucky to die before you implore death to come. (Mori est felicitas antequam mortem invocet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 354. Death is fortunate for the child, bitter for the youth, too late for the old. (Mors infanti felix, iuveni acerba, nimis sera est seni.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 401. Nobody dies prematurely who dies in misery. (Nemo immature moritur qui moritur miser.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 465. How wretched to long for death yet fail to die. (Quam miserum est mortem cupere nec posse emori.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 556. Happy enough is he who can die when he wills! (Satis est beatus qui potest cum vult mori.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 675.

2 Death squares all accounts.

CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth. Ch. 92. (1861)

3 And I looked, and behold a pale horse: and his name that sat on him was Death. (καὶ εἶδον καὶ ἰδοὺ ἵππος χλωρὸς, καὶ ὁ καθήμενος ἐπάνω αὐτοῦ] θάνατος αὐτῷ [ὁ] Θάνατος.)

New Testament: Revelation, vi, 8. (c. A. D. 90) The Vulgate is, "Ecce equus pallidus: et qui sedebat super eum, nomen illi Mors."

Behind her Death, . . . On his pale Horse.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. x, l. 588. (1667) At my door the Pale Horse stands.

JOHN HAY, The Stirrup Cup. (1871)

4 Who shall deliver me from the body of this death? (τίς με λύσειται ἐκ τοῦ σώματος τοῦ θανάτου τούτου;)

New Testament: Romans, vii, 24. (c. A. D. 57) The Vulgate is, "Quis me liberabit de corpore mortis huius?"

5 Death is an ill; the Gods at least think so, Or else themselves had perished long ago.

(το θάνατον κάκον· οἱ θεοὶ γὰρ οὕτω κεκρίκασι· θάνατον κε γάρ.)

SAPPHO. Frag. 91. (c. 610 B. C.) Quoted by ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric, ii, 23, 12. See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, i, 251.

Death is an evil only because of what comes after it. (Malam mortem non facit, nisi quod sequitur mortem.)

SAINT AUGUSTINE, De Civitate Dei. Bk. i, ch. 11. (c. A. D. 425) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 40.

The worst is death, and death will have his day. SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, iii, 2, 103. (1595)

Death is the greatest evil, because it cuts off hope. HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 35. (1821)

6 Death is everywhere. To it a thousand doors lie open. (Ubique mors est . . . mille ad hanc aditus patent.)

SENECA, Phoenissae, l. 151. (c. A. D. 60) The best thing which eternal law ever ordained was that it allowed us but one entrance into life and many exits. (Nil melius aeterna lex fecit, quam quod unum introitum nobis ad vitam dedit, exitus multos.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx, sec. 14. (c. A. D. 65) She [Nature] hath appointed but one entrance into life, but a hundred thousand ways out. (Elle n'a ordonné qu'une entrée à la vie, et cent mille issues.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 3. (1580) I know death hath ten thousand severall doores For men, to take their Exits.

JOHN WEBSTER, The Dutchesse of Malfy. Act iv, sc. 2. (1614)

Death with his thousand doors.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Loyal Subject. Act i, sc. 2. (1618)

Death hath so many doors to let out life.

FLETCHER AND MASSINGER, The Custom of the Country. Act ii, sc. 2. (c. 1620)

There are a thousand doors to let out life.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Parliament of Love. Act iv, sc. 2. (1624)

Death hath a thousand doors to let out life.

PHILIP MASSINGER, A Very Woman. Act v, sc. 4. (c. 1630) It will be noted that this phrase became almost a cliché with Massinger.

The thousand doors that lead to death.

BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 51. (1643) The doors of death are ever open.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Contemplation on the State of Man. Bk. i, ch. 7. (c. 1660)

Death's thousand doors stand open.

ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave, l. 394. (1743)

Every door may be shut but death's door.

R. C. TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs, p. 25. (1852)

7 It was the death of him.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 1, 14. (1596)

These . . . magistrates will be the death of us. EDWARD MIALI, Nonconformist, ii, 49. (1842)

8 Dead, for a ducat, dead!

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 4, 23. (1600)

<sup>1</sup> Death without phrases. (La mort sans phrase.)

JOSEPH SIEYÈS, when voting for the death of Louis XVI, 20 Jan., 1793. It is probable that Sieyès said simply, "La mort," and the reporter added in parenthesis, "sans phrase," but it became historic in the above form. See Le Moniteur, 20 Jan., 1793. Most of the other members had been laboring to compose telling "phrases," some of which, as given by Le Moniteur, were, "The blood of a king is not the blood of a man," by Bernardin de Saint-Pierre; "I will not commit a murder that Rome may make a saint," by Chaillou; "Seclusion; to make a Charles I. is to make a Cromwell," by Gentil—a prophecy, for Napoleon was the Cromwell; "No people free without a tyrant dead," by Saint-André; and "Death: while the tyrant breathes, liberty stifles," by Lavicomterie.

<sup>2</sup> Though they died, they are not dead, for their valor brings them back in glory from the world below. (οὐδὲ τεθνήσκει θανόντες.)

SIMONIDES, Fragments. Frag. 126. (c. 475 B. C.) Palatine Anthology, vii, 251.

Death's a pleasant road that leads to fame.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, Verses, l. 48. (1712)

Death opens the gate of Fame and shuts the gate of Envy after it.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. v, ch. 3. (1759)

<sup>3</sup> A living dead man. (ἐμψυχος νεκρός.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 1167. (c. 441 B. C.)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iv, 3, with the Latin, "Vivum cadaver," or "Vivum sepulchrum."

I am a living corpse among the living. (Egomet inter vivos vivo mortuus.)

CARCILIUS STATIUS, Plocium. Frag. 140. Loeb. (c. 175 B. C.)

My being hath been but a living death.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Guardian. Act ii, sc. 4. (1633)

<sup>4</sup> He's dead and in his grave. (ἐνελ νῦν θάνατος ἐν τάφοις ἔχει.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus the King, l. 942. (c. 409 B. C.)

He fownde me ded and gone.

UNKNOWN, Monk of Evesham, 62. (1482)

He is dead and gone, lady, He is dead and gone.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iv, 5, 29. (1600)

Advocates for folly dead and gone.

POPE, Horace's Epistles, ii, 1, 34. (1737)

When she was dead and gone, perhaps they would be sorry.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 19. (1840)

<sup>5</sup> Nothing like stark dead.

JAMES STEWART, referring to the Earl of Mortton. (1581) See KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 262. Afterwards applied to Strafford and Laud.

Stone-dead hath no fellow.

EARL OF ESSEX. (1641) See MACAULAY, Essays: Hallam.

Stark dead be thy comfort.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1659)

<sup>6</sup> If he be dead, he'll eat no more bread.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

THE LIVING TO THE BREAD, see under LIFE AND DEATH.

<sup>7</sup> I shall be like that tree—I shall die at the top.

JONATHAN SWIFT. (c. 1740) See SCOTT, Life of Swift.

<sup>8</sup> In the jaws of death.

JOSHUA SYLVESTER, tr., Devine Weekes and Workes. Week iv, day 1. (1591)

Snatch'd . . . out of the jaws of death.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, iii, 4, 394. (1599)

Many patients might thereby be rescued from the jaws of death.

BISHOP GEORGE BERKELEY, Tar-Water. Let. ii, sec. 12. (1746) Bishop Berkeley was an ardent crusader for the drinking of tar-water.

Into the jaws of death Rode the six hundred.

TENNYSON, The Charge of the Light Brigade. (1854)

<sup>9</sup> The dead don't bite. (οἱ κεκμηκότες οὐ δάκνουσιν.)

THEODORUS CHIUS, teacher of rhetoric to King Ptolemy of Egypt. (31 B. C.) The ascription is by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, vi, 41, who says it was the advice given Ptolemy with reference to Mark Antony. The Latin is, "Mortui non mordent." See also PLUTARCH, Lives: Pompey. Sec. 77, who gives the Greek as νεκρὸς οὐ δάκει.

A prouerbe, whiche saith, a dead man doth no harm.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, p. 128. (1548)

Death biteth not. (La mort ny mord.)

EDMUND SPENSER, The Shepheardes Calender: November: Colins Embleme. (1579)

I care not, seeing thou art dead, Mortui non mordent.

SIR JOHN HARINGTON, Metamorphoses of Ajax, p. 64. (1596)

He's quiet, where I hope He will not bite again.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Knight of the Burning Pestle. Act iv, sc. 1. (1611)

Knock out her brains! And then she'll never bite.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Coxcomb. Act ii, sc. 2. (1613)

A dog that's dead,

The Spanish proverb says, will never bite.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Custom of the Country. Act iv, sc. 1. (1619) L'ESTRANGE, tr., Quarvedo's Visions, 252 (1667) has, "A dead dog will never bite." The Germans have the same proverb, "Todte Hunde beißen nicht." The French say, "Morte la bête, mort le venin" (The beast dead, the venom dead), or "Chien mort ne mord pas" (A dead dog doesn't bite).

The dead do not bite; and, being dispatched out of the way, are forgotten.

THOMAS FULLER, Church History, ix, iv, 3. (1655)

Why then the Proverb is not right,
Since you teach dead Dogs to bite.

SWIFT, Upon the Horrid Plot Discovered by Harlequin, l. 39. (1722)

Dead folks can't bite.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1239. (1732)

It is only the dead who do not return. (Il n'y a que les morts qui ne reviennent pas.)

BERTRAND BARÈRE, Speech, in the Convention, 1794. He was punning on the double meaning of revenir, to return or to haunt, with the sarcastic meaning, "It is only dead men's ghosts that do not haunt us." See CARLYLE, French Revolution, iii, vi, 3. Napoleon applied the phrase to himself on 17 July and 12 Dec., 1816, meaning that he would certainly come back, but he was mistaken, for he was dead long before he returned to Paris. See O'MEARA, Napoleon in Exile.

A dead body revenges not injuries.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

Take him [a dead man] away now, . . . and see that he does not bite you, to put an old proverb to shame.

WALTER SCOTT, Old Mortality. Ch. 34. (1816)

The story that Gray "whispered in Elizabeth's ear, The dead don't bite," is found in Camden.

ANDREW LANG, History of Scotland, ii, 327. (1902)

1 None can pierce the vast black veil uncertain
Because there is no light behind the curtain.

THOMSON, City of Dreadful Night, xxi. (1874)

2 When a man is dying his words are worth listening to.

TSENG Tzū, a disciple of Confucius, when ill. (c. 500 B.C.) See CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. viii, ch. 4.

No man deceives while in his death agony.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Bathra, fo. 175a. (c. 450)

3 How difficult it is to make up one's mind to die! (Oh! qu'il est difficile de se résoudre à mourir!)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 700. (1746)
Death is never wholly a welcome guest. (Und doch ist nie der Tod ein ganz willkommen Gast.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 4. (1806)

To have to die is a distinction of which no man is proud.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: On the Writing of Essays. (1863)

4 Death and vulgarity are the only two facts in the Nineteenth Century that one cannot explain away.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. (1891)
Ah, well, then, I suppose I shall have to die beyond my means.

OSCAR WILDE, when a huge fee was demanded for an operation during his last illness. (1905)
See SHERRARD, Life of Oscar Wilde, p. 421.

5 The dead can tell no tales.

JOHN WILSON, Andronicus Comnenius. Act i, sc. 4. (1664)

Dead men tell no tales.

JOHN DRYDEN, The Spanish Friar. Act iv, sc. 1. (1681) FARQUHAR, The Inconstant. Act v.

(1703) PAULDING, The Bucktails. Act 4, sc.

3. (1815) JAMES, The Robber. Ch. 6. (1838)

KINGSLEY, Alton Locke. Ch. 4. (1850) WIL-

LIAM JAMES, Letters, ii, 154. (1901) WAG-

NER, The Major Has Seven Guests, p. 252.

(1940) etc., etc.

Dead men never bring awkward stories to light.

DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 9. (1838)

Only the dead are silent.

G. H. COXE, Silent Are the Dead, p. 252. (1941)

Dead men rarely tell you anything you want to know.

C. F. ADAMS, Up Jumped the Devil, p. 115. (1943)

6 The empty fame of being in at the death.

WILLIAM WINDHAM, Speeches, i, 337. (1800)

A skilful huntsman . . . who generally contrived to be in at the death.

LORD LYTTON, Night and Morning, v, 9. (1841)

7 Death observes no ceremony.

JOHN WISE, A Vindication of the Government of New England Churches. Ch. 2. (1717)

8 Such a sweet husband have I lost. . . . If, Blessed be the corse the rain rains upon, he had it pouring down.

UNKNOWN, The Puritaine, or the Widow of Walling-Street. Act i, sc. 1. (1607)

Blessed is the corpse that the rain falls on.

WILLIAM HONE, Table-Book, ii, 667. (1827)

E. Peacock in Notes and Queries, 2nd ser., viii, 319, says, "A superstition prevalent in many parts of Britain, . . . Sad is the burying in the sun shine, But blessed is the corpse that goeth home in rain."

"Happy," said some foolish proverbialist, "are the dead that the rain rains on."

E. V. LUCAS, Genevra's Money, p. 4. (1922)

III—Death: Euphemisms

9 Death had already laid his icy fingers upon her brow.

TIMOTHY SHAY ARTHUR, Ten Nights in a Bar-room. Night iv, p. 64. (1854)

10 [Lord Suffolk] at last paid his tribute to the common treasury to which we all must be taxed.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, House of Commons, 11 Feb., 1780.

11 He drives a fairy chariot on a long journey.

S.G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 353. (1938)

12 "Do the dead of the savages ever walk?" demanded Cap.

"Ay, and run too, in their happy hunting grounds."

J. F. COOPER, The Pathfinder, i, 105. (1840)

His foes he sent to the "happy hunting grounds."

J. H. TICE, Over the Plains, p. 211. (1872)

The departed in the happy hunting grounds.
P.H.SHERIDAN, Personal Memoirs, i, 102. (1888)
The white man's road . . . leads to happy hunting grounds both here and in that eternity in which reds and whites are found alike.
J. H. COOK, On the Old Frontier, p. 194. (1923)
1
Praematura mors, vntymely death.
SIR THOMAS ELYOT, Dictionary. (1548)
Infants . . . snatched away by untimely Ends.
JOSEPH ADDISON, The Tatler. No. 154. (1709)
Heaven . . . bringing them all to an untimely end.
W.H.PRESCOTT, Conquest of Peru, i, 452. (1847)
To come to an untimely end. To die prematurely.
ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)
2
Her candle was put out.
THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. i, ch. 1. (1642)
3
Then Abraham . . . was gathered to his people. (Congregatusque est ad populum suum.)
Old Testament: Genesis, xxv, 8. (c. 550 B.C.)
So he blessed them, and was gathered to his fathers. (Et benedixit eos, et appositus est ad patres suos.)
Apocrypha: I Maccabees, ii, 69. (c. 100 B.C.)
4
To kick the bucket, to die.
FRANCIS GROSE, A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Bucket. (1785) See KICK.
He is gone to kingdom come.
GROSE, Dictionary of Vulgar Tongue: Kingdom.
5
"Passing away" is written on the world.
FELICIA HEMANS, Passing Away. (c. 1826)
Ay, dead!—stepped out.
T. A. BURKE, Polly Peablossom, p. 177. (1851)
6
Terrible though they were, black death seized them. and they left the bright light of the sun. (θάνατος δὲ καὶ ἐκπάγλους περ ἔοντας | εἶλε μέλας, λαμπρὸν δ' ἔλιπον φάος ἡλίου.)
HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 154. (c. 800 B.C.)
7
Don a coat of stone. (λάϊνον ἔσσο χιτῶνα.)
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. iii, l. 57. (c. 850 B.C.) A euphemism for death by stoning. Aeschylus repeats the phrase in Agamemnon, l. 872, and Lucian quotes it in The Dead Come to Life, sec. 5. "To get a wooden suit" is a Staffordshire proverb, noted in Folk-Lore, vii, 377.
In the end, he will be clad in a vesture of clay. (καὶ τελευτᾶν ἀπάντων γὰρ ἐπιεσόμενος.)
PINDAR, Nemean Odes. No. xi, l. 16. (c. 446 B.C.)
The foot of his existence went down into the clay of death.
SADI, Gulistan. Ch. v, Apologue 9. (c. 1258) HE HAS TURNED UP HIS HEELS, see under HEEL.
8
Darkness enfolded his eyes. (τὸν δὲ σκότος ὅσσε κάλυψεν.)
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. vi, l. 11. (c. 850 B.C.) Frequently repeated.
His eyes close in everlasting night. (In aeternam clauduntur lumina noctem.)
VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xii, l. 310. (19 B.C.)

His spirit has left his body; night seals his eyes. (Destituit animus membra, nox oculos premit.)
SENECA, Hercules Oetaeus, l. 841. (c. A.D. 60)
9
He bowed his head to one side like a poppy that in a garden is laden with the rains of spring.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. viii, l. 306. (c. 850 B.C.)
I have settled them all [in their funeral urns].
HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 9, l. 28. (35 B.C.)
I HAVE SETTLED THEIR HASH, see under HASH.
10
When a man dies, and his kin are glad of it, they say, "He is better off."
E. W. HOWE, Country Town Sayings. (1911)
11
You who went West . . . shall take your rest.
FORD MADOX HUEFFER, One Day's List. (1918)
GONE WEST, see under WEST.
12
He shall return no more to his house, neither shall his place know him any more. (Nec revertetur ultra in domum suam, neque cognoscet eum amplius locus eius.)
Old Testament: Job, vii, 10; xvi, 22. (c. 350 B.C.)
He seemed to depart not from life, but from one home to another. (Ut non ex vita, sed ex domo in domum videretur migrare.)
CORNELIUS NEPOS, Lives: Atticus. (c. 40 B.C.)
Home art gone and ta'en thy wages.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, iv, 2, 261. (1609)
Look upon death as a going home.
H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 309. (1937)
To depart this life corresponds to L. decedere de vita, itself a euphemism for mori, 'to die.' The English phrase began as a euphemism, became a genteelism, and is now a stupidity.
PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)
13
Man giveth up the ghost.
Old Testament: Job, xiv, 10. (c. 400 B.C.) See under GHOST.
14
Death's pale flag advanced in his cheeks.
RICHARD JOHNSON, The Seven Champions of Cristendome. Pt. iii, ch. 11. (1596)
Beauty's ensign yet Is crimson . . . in thy cheeks, And death's pale flag is not advanced there.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, v, 3, 94. (1595)
15
He had closed his game and handed in his checks several years since.
J. H. B. NOWLAND, Early Reminiscences of Indianapolis, p. 164. (1870)
Jimmy Bludso passed in his checks, The night of the Prairie Belle.
JOHN HAY, Jim Bludso of the Prairie Belle. (1871) "He cashed in his chips" is a variation, also from poker. See under CHIP.
One of the boys had passed in his checks.
MARK TWAIN, Roughing It, p. 332. (1872)
16
He went round land at las', and was foun' dead in his bed.
QUILLER-COUCH, Troy Town. Ch. 11. (1888)

1 He is burnt to the socket.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 57. (1813) At his last gasp.

2 [He] kept his bed three days, and hopped the twig on the fourth.

MARY ROBINSON, Walsingham. iv, 280. (1797)
If old Campbell hops the twig.

MARY BRIDGMAN, Robert Lynne, ii, 4, 289. (1870) The French say, "Casser sa pipe" (To break his pipe).

3 They reddened the earth and gladdened the ravens.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Reginsmol. St. 26. (c. A. D. 900)

4 Perhaps, if only the tale told by the wise men is true and there is a bourne to welcome us, then he whom we think we have lost has only been sent on ahead. (Quem putamus perisse, praemissus est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxiii, sec. 16. (c. A. D. 64)

He whom you think to have passed away, has simply posted on ahead. (Quem putas perisse, praemissus est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xcix, sec. 7.
They are not amissi, but praemissi, Not lost, but gone before.

PHILIP HENRY, (c. 1680) See MATTHEW HENRY, Life of Philip Henry. Ch. 5. On tomb of Mary Angell, Stepney, d. 1693.

Not dead, but gone before.

MATTHEW HENRY, Commentaries: Matthew ii. (1710) ROGERS, Human Life, l. 747. (1819)

Weep not, ye mourners, for the dead,
But in this hope your spirits soar,
That ye can say of those ye mourn,
They are not lost, but gone before.

ALEXANDER POPE, Epitaph for Elijah Fenton. (c. 1731)

Gone before To that unknown and silent shore.

CHARLES LAMB, Hester. (c. 1830)

The buried are not lost, but gone before.

EBENEZER ELLIOTT, The Excursion. (1831)

CAROLINE NORTON, Not Lost, But Gone Before. (1862)

Oh, write of me, not "Died in bitter pains,"
But "Emigrated to another star."

HELEN HUNT JACKSON, Emigravit. (1870)

Out of the hitherwhere into the yon.

J. W. RILEY, Out of the Hitherwhere. (1892)

5 Montague hath breath'd his last.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, v, 2, 40. (1591)

6 Sent to my account.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 5, 76. (1600)

7 Now our sands are almost run.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles, v, 2, 1. (1608)

Thou must away, thy sand is run. (Fort musst du, deine Uhr ist abgelaufen.)

SCHILLER, Wilhelm Tell. Act iv, sc. 3. (1804)

Death has shaken out the sands of my glass.

J.G.C.BRAINARD, Lament for Long Tom. (1825)

8 Once for all he has bitten the dust. (Humum semel ore momordit.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xi, l. 418. (19 B. C.) See under DUST.

9 Reported to have climbed the golden stairs.

J. R. WARE, Passing English of the Victorian Era, p. 79. (1883) "Climbing up the Golden Stairs" was the title of a popular song of the period.

To JOIN THE MAJORITY, see under MAJORITY.

IV—Proverbial Comparisons

10 As dead as mutton.

ISAAC BICKERSTAFF, The Spoiled Child. Act ii, sc. 2. (c. 1770) READE, Cloister and the Hearth. Ch. 24. (1860) BERNARD SHAW, Parents and Children, (preface to Misalliance). (1914) J. D. CARR, Death Turns the Tables, p. 50. (1941)

11 As dead as a nit.

BURNE, Shropshire Folk-Lore, p. 594. (1883)

12 "The Grecian Daughter" being as dead as dish-water after the first act.

DAVID GARRICE, Correspondence, i, 465. (a. 1770)

13 He was as dead as a dead mackerel.

C. W. GRAFTON, The Rat Began to Gnaw the Rope, p. 97. (1943)

14 He's as dead as Queen Anne the day after she dy'd.

LADY PENNYMAN, Miscellanies, p. 97. (1722)
Mrs. Winifred Pryce was as dead as Queen Anne!
R. H. BARHAM, Look at the Clock. (1840)

15 By gar, de herring is no dead so as I vill kill him.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, ii, 3, 12. (1601)

Is shee quite dead?—Dead as a herring, sir.

THOMAS NABBES, Totenham-Court. Act i, sc. 5. (1638)

Hudibras, to all appearing,

Believ'd him to be dead as herring.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, ii, iii, 1148. (1664)

Dead as a Herring, Stock-fish, or Door-nail.

THOMAS OTWAY, Caius Marius. (1680)

I'll warrant him as dead as a herring.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Roderick Random. Ch. 4. (1748) See also, READE, It Is Never too Late to Mend. Ch. 60. (1856) STEVENSON AND HENLEY, Deacon Brodie, iv, vii, (1880), etc., etc. The phrase is supposed to have originated from the fact that the herring dies very quickly when taken out of the water

16 He's dead now as Job's turkey.

W. G. SIMMS, Sword and Distaff, p. 130. (1853)

17 I am ded as dorenail.

UNKNOWN, William of Palerne, l. 628. (c. 1350)
The doornails were the nails with which medieval doors were studded, but nobody understands how this proverbial comparison originated.

As' ded as a dore-tre.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Text B, passus i, l. 185. (1362) The door-tree is the door-post, once part of a living tree, but now dead, so this comparison is understandable.

Dom as a dorenayle & defe was he bathe.

UNKNOWN, Alexander, l. 4747. (c. 1400)

If I do not leave you all as dead as a door-nail.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iv, 10, 42. (1590)

What, is the old King dead?—As nail in door.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, v, 3, 126. (1598)

Wee'l strike it as dead as a doore-naile.

THOMAS NASHE, Works (Grosart), iii, 182. (1596)

I can't tell whether he be dead in law: but he's dead as a door-nail.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, A Constant Couple. Act iv, sc. 2. (1700) See also LAMB, Letters, i, 223.

(1801) DICKENS, Christmas Carol. Stave i.

(1843) DE MORGAN, Alice-for-Short. Ch. 12.

(1907) COHAN, Seven Keys to Baldpate. Act i. (1913) WENTWORTH, Week-end with Death, p. 33. (1941) WHEATLEY, Scarlet Impostor, p. 257. (1942) etc., etc.

1 He fel dun ded as ston.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 12028. (a. 1300)

Therwith he wex as deed as stoon.

CHAUCER (?), The Book of the Duchesse, l. 1300. (c. 1369)

Adoun I fel . . . Deed as a stoon.

CHAUCER (?), The Complaynte unto Pite, l. 15.

To grounde deed she falleth as a stoon.

CHAUCER (?), Anelida and Arcite, l. 170.

A hand him smoot upon the nekke-boon,

That doun he fil atones as a stoon.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of the Man of Lawe, l. 571. (c. 1386)

She . . . lyth . . . deed, and lyk a stoon.

CHAUCER, The Squires Tale, l. 465.

V—Death: a Debt

2 Death, they say, acquits us of all our obligations. (La mort, dict on, nous acquitte de toutes nos obligations.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 7. (1580)

Death and marriage make term-day.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 28. (c. 1595) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 84. (1721), with the comment, "Marriage frees a man from his service in Scotland, and death in all countries." Quoted by WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Let. 11. (1824)

The end of life cancels all bands.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, iii, 2, 157. (1597)

He that dies this year is quit for the next.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, iii, 2, 254. (1598)

Are you ready for death? . . . You shall be called to no more payments.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, v, 4, 152. (1609)

He that dies pays all debts.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, iii, 2, 141. (1611)

Death quits all scores.

JAMES SHIRLEY, Cupid and Death. (1653)

Death settles all things.

JOHN OZELL, tr., Molière, iii, 87. (1714)

The laird's dead—awee!, death pays a' scores.

WALTER SCOTT, Guy Mannering. Ch. 23. (1815)

The debt which cancels all others.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. ii, No. 49. (1820)

Death pays all debts; it will pay that too.

WALTER SCOTT, Two Drovers. (1827)

Death squares all accounts.

CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth. Ch. 92. (1860)

3 He paid the debt of nature. (Naturae concessit.)

SALLUST, Bellum Iugurthinum. Ch. xiv, sec. 15. (c. 40 B. C.)

He paid the debt of nature. (Debitum naturae statim exsolvit.)

UNKNOWN, Chronicon de Lanercost, p. 131. (c. 1220)

Fynally he payde the dette of nature.

ROBERT FABYAN, Chronicles, ii, xii, 28. (1494)

When he was an hundred yeare olde, he payed nature her dutye.

THOMAS BECON, Reliques of Rome, fo. 51. (1563)

Your son, my lord, has paid a soldier's debt.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, v, 8, 39. (1606)

The slender debt to Nature's quickly paid.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. ii, emb. 13. (1635)

To die, is the great debt and tribute due unto nature.

LAURENCE STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. v, ch. 3. (1765)

Mrs. Williams, from mere inanition, has at length paid the great debt to nature.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letters, ii, 331. (1783)

In peace to pass with Jason, all her days,

Till he or she the debt o' natur' pays.

J. R. PLANCHÉ, Extravaganzas, iii, 26. (1845)

4 Thou owest God a death.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, v, i, 127. (1597)

A man can die but once: we owe God a death.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, iii, 2, 250. (1598)

He owed a death, and he hath paid that debt.

HEYWOOD AND ROWLEY, Fortune by Land and Sea. Act i, sc. 1. (1655)

I've paid as many debts as any man who dies.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Tale of a Tainted Tenner. (1907)

5 We are all debts due to death. (θανάτῳ πάντες ὀφειλόμεθα.)

SIMONIDES, Inscriptions. Frag. 150. (c. 475 B. C.) See Palatine Anthology, x, 105.

All of us to death a debt must pay. (ὡς πάντων ἡμῖν καθαρὰν ὀφείλεται.)

EURIPIDES, Alcestis, l. 419. (c. 438 B. C.)

From all mankind the debt of death is due. (βροτοῖς ἀπασι καθαρὰν ὀφείλεται.)

EURIPIDES, Alcestis, l. 782. (c. 438 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 107C.

Unto all men is this lot ordained of heaven:

All must pay their debt to death.

(πάσιν γὰρ ἀνθρώποισιν ἥδε πρὸς θεῶν ψῆφος κέκρανται καθανεῖν τ' ὀφείλεται.)

EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 1271. (c. 430 B.C.)
Death is a debt which all of us must pay. (πάσιν γὰρ ἡμῖν τοῦτ' ὀφείλεται παθεῖν.)

SOPHOCLES, Electra, l. 1173. (c. 409 B.C.)
We and our works are a debt due to death.
(Debemur morti nos nostraque.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 63. (c. 20 B.C.)
Death is a debt due by all men. (πάσι θανεῖν μερόμεσσιν ὀφείλεται.)

PALLADAS, Epigram. (c. A.D. 450) Greek Anthology, xi, 62.

VI—Death: Its Immanence

1
Wherever you go, Death dogs you like your shadow. (Quocumque incedis, sequitur Mors corporis umbra.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. iv, No. 37. (c. 175 B.C.)
Death, like the rock of Tantalus, ever hangs over our heads. (Mors, quae quasi saxum Tantalo semper impendet.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. i, ch. 18, sec. 60. (B.C. 44) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 19.

In the midst of life we are in death. (Media vita in morte sumus.)

Book of Common Prayer: Burial of the Dead: At the Grave. (1541) A phrase of uncertain origin, but it dates from the Middle Ages, and occurs in the choirbook of the Monks of St. Gall. Frequently quoted, recently by PETER CHENEY, A Trap for Bellamy, p. 95. (1941)

2
Each hour slowly steers us nearer death. (Omnis paulatim leto nos applicat hora.)

COLUMBANUS, Carmen Monostichon, l. 21. (c. A.D. 600)

Toward my death with wind in stere I sayle.
CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. v, l. 641. (c. 1380)

Every day marches toward death: the last arrives there. (Tous les jours vont à la mort: le dernier y arrive.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 19. (1580)
At every hour death is near. (À toute heure la mort est preste.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, ii, 231. (1859)

3
Death surprizes us in the midst of our Hopes.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1254. (1732)

4
Death is still working like a mole,
And digs my grave at each remove.
GEORGE HERBERT, Grace. (c. 1630)

5
Death keeps no Calendar.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 907. (1640) RAY, Proverbs, p. 6. (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1251. (1732)

6
The life of day before yesterday today is departed.

LANGDON, Babylonian Proverbs: Babylonian Tablets, K 4347. (c. 2300 B.C.)

7
Wheresoever I look, there is nothing but the shape of death. (Quocumque aspexi, nihil est nisi mortis imago.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. xi, l. 23. (c. A.D. 9.)

Death meets us every where.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1252. (1732)

8
Live mindful of death. (Vive memor leti.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. v, l. 153. (c. A.D. 58)
"Memento mori" (Remember you must die) was the motto of the Order of the Death's Head. "Respite post te; hominem memento te" (Look behind you; remember you are a man) was the warning whispered into the ear of the Roman general in his triumphal chariot, by a slave stationed there for the purpose.

Man, remember thy end, And thou shalt never be shend [disgraced].

UNKNOWN, Reliquiae Antiquae, i, 316. (c. 1450) See also under END.

9
It all comes to this, while we scurry and worry, up creeps death upon us. (Hoc evenit | in labore atque in dolore, ut mors obrepat interim.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 684. (c. 195 B.C.)

10
It is uncertain where death may await thee, therefore expect it everywhere. (Incertum est, quo loco te mors expectet; itaque tu illam omni loco expecta.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xxvi, 7. (c. A.D. 65)

11
He that would die well must always look for death, every day knocking at the gates of the grave.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Dying. Ch. ii, sec. 1. (1651)

VII—Death, The Inevitable

See also Mortality

12
The shore invisible, the bourn of all. (τὰν ἀνάλιον | πάνδοκον εἰς ἀφανὴ τε χέρσον.)

AESCHYLUS, Seven Against Thebes, l. 859. (467 B.C.)

13
Alone among the gods Death loves not gifts. (μόνος θεῶν γὰρ θάνατος οὐ δῶρων ἐράει.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Frogs, l. 1392. (405 B.C.)
"Neither sacrifice nor libation avail with him," Aristophanes adds. "From him, alone of gods, Persuasion stands aloof."

Death takes no bribes.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742

14
Death comes even to the monumental stones and the names inscribed thereon. (Mors etiam saxis nominibusque venit.)

AUSONIUS, Epitaphs. No. xxxii. (c. A.D. 370)

15
His Martinmas comes to every pig. (A cada puerco viene su San Martin.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 62. (1615)
St. Martin's Day, November 11, being the usual time in Spain for killing pigs.

1 And al so certein as we knowe echoon
That we shul deye, as uncerteyn we alle
Been of that day when deeth shal on us falle.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Clerkes Tale,
l. 68. (c. 1386)

We schal dye, we note, how sone.

SCHLEICH, ed., Proverbs of Wisdom. (c. 1450)
Wee haue nothing more certaine than to dye, nor nothing more vncertaine than the houre of death.

ROBERT GREENE, Never too Late. (1590) Works
(Grosart), viii, 125.

That we shall die, we know; 'tis but the time
And drawing days out, that men stand upon

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, iii, 1, 99. (1599)
I wonder what day of the week,
I wonder what month of the year.

T. B. ALDRICH, An Untimely Thought. (c. 1880)

2 He moot ben deed, the king as shal a page;
Som in his bed, som in the depe see,
Som in the large feeld, as men may see;
Their helpeth noght, al goth that ilke weye.

CHAUCER, *Canterbury Tales: The Knightes
Tale*, l. 2172. (c. 1386)

Deeth is the ende of every man as in this present lyf.

CHAUCER, The Tale of Melibeus, l. 2803.

Bothe hyghe and loughes shal go on dethis daunce.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems (Percy Soc.), p.
77. (c. 1430)

3 Nothing so sure as death.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 214. (1639)
See also under TAXES.

The best of men cannot suspend their fate;
The good die early, and the bad die late.

DEFOE, Character of Dr. Annesley. (1696) THE GOOD DIE YOUNG, see DEATH AND YOUTH

4 The goal of life for every man is death. (πέρας ὡς γὰρ ἀπασιν ἀνθρώποις ἐστὶ τοῦ βίου θάνατος.)

DEMOSTHENES, De Corona. Sec. 97. (330 B.C.)
Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 166F, 333C.

Death is the line that marks the end of all. (Mors ultima linea rerum est.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. xvi, l. 79. (B.C.
20) A reference to the chalk-line which marked the goal in the race-course.

We hasten to a common goal. (Metam properamus ad unum.)

OVID, Consolatio ad Liviam, l. 359. (9 B.C.)

5 One event happeneth to chem all. (Unus utriusque esset interitus.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, ii, 14. (c. 250 B.C.)

Death which is common to all. (θάνατον μὲν ὅμοιον.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. iii, l. 236. (c. 850 B.C.)

All men, soon or late, are doomed that path to tread. (ἅλλοι ἀπ᾿ ἀπ᾿ ὁρῶσιν ἀνθρώποις.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xii, l. 22. Pope, tr.

One night awaits all, and the downward path must be trodden once. (Omnes una manet nox, | et calcanda semel via leti.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 28, l. 15. (23 B.C.)

We are all gathered to the same fold. (Omnes eodem cogimur.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 3, l. 25. The Germans say, "Man trägt Eins nach dem Andern hin" (One after another, man is gathered in).

6 There is no discharge in that war [against death]. (Nec sinitur quiescere ingruiiente bello.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, viii, 8. (c. 250 B.C.)
No one can obtain from the Pope a dispensation for never dying. (Nemo impetrare potest a papa bullam nunquam moriendi.)

THOMAS A KEMPIS. (c. 1470) Attr. by Denham.
Rome can give no dispensation from death. (On n'a point pour la mort de dispense de Rome.)

MOLIÈRE, L'Étourdi. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 6. (1653)

A paraphrase of a medieval proverb, "The Pope can issue no bull against death."

7 Death takes no denial. (θάνατος ἀποφάσιτος.)

EURIPIDES, Bacchae, l. 1002. (c. 410 B.C.)

Death cannot be denied (Mortem non posse negari.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, epig. 42. (c. A. D. 85)
Death admits no appeals. (Contre la mort n'y a point d'appel.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Appel. (1611)
Death when it comes will have no denial.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis,
p. 432. (1681)

8 Death is a fisherman; the world we see
His fish-pond is, and we the fishes be;
His net some general sickness; howe'er he
Is not so kind as other fishers be;
For if they take one of the smaller fry,
They throw him in again, he shall not die:
But death is sure to kill all he can get,
And all is fish with him that comes to net.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733.

A sure scythe will mow them down some day.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Let Me Feel Your Pulse. (1911)

9 Old age and death, which are the lot of mortals. (γῆρας καὶ θάνατος, τὰ τ' ἐπ' ἀνθρώποις πέλονται.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xiii, l. 59. (c. 850 B.C.)

10 We have made a covenant with death. (Percussimus foedus cum morte.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxviii, 15; 18. (c. 725 B.C.)
Thou shalt see me at Philippi.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, iv, 3, 284. (1599)

The appointment made with Brutus by the ghost of Caesar. It was at Philippi that both Brutus and Cassius met their deaths.

I have a rendezvous with death.

ALAN SEECER. Title of poem. (1918)

I [Death] was astonished to see him in Bagdad, for I had an appointment with him tonight in Samarra.

W. SOMERSET MAUGHAM, Sheppey. (1934) Relating the apologue of the servant who met Death in the market place in Bagdad, and fled to Samarra, only to learn that it was there Death had an appointment with him. Appointment in Samarra was used as the title of a novel by John O'Hara. (1934)

1 This day I am going the way of all the earth.
Old Testament: Joshua, xxiii, 14. (c. 550 B.C.)
See under WAY.

2 All who live must die, and none who die can renew their life on earth.

KAIBARA EKKEN, Ten Kun (Ten Precepts). Bk. i. (1710) Ken Hoshino, tr.

3 Live as many generations as you will, nevertheless eternal death will still be waiting. (Licet quot vis vivendo condere saecula; mors aeterna tamen nilo minus illa manebit.)

LUCRETIVS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iii, l. 1090. (c. B.C. 45) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 19.

4 Agens death is worth no medicine.

JOHN LYDGATE, The Daunce of Machabree, l. 432. (c. 1430) "Contra vim mortis non est medicamen in hortis" (Against the strength of death there is no medicine in the garden), is a medieval jingle, sometimes credited to Regimen Sanitatis Salernitanum. There is a German form, "Gegen den Tod ist kein Kraut gewachsen." See also under REMEDY.

There is a remedy for everything but death. (Para todo hay remedio, si no es para la muerte.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43, 64. (1615)

5 Every soul must needs taste of death.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, xxi, 35. (c. 622)

6 We are all kept and fed for death. (πάντες τῷ θανάτῳ τηρούμεθα.)

PALLADAS, Epigram. (c. A.D. 425) Greek Anthology, x, 85.

7 We die all alike, albeit our doom is diverse. (θάσκομεν γὰρ ὁμῶς πάντες | δαίμων δ' ἕσος.)

PINDAR, Isthmian Odes. No. vii, l. 42. (c. 456 B.C.)

8 All men must die. (θανεῖν δ' οἷσιν ἀνάγκη.)

PINDAR, Olympian Odes. No. i, l. 82. (476 B.C.)

All men are fated to die. (πᾶσι θνατοῖς ἔφυ μόρος.)

SOPHOCLES, Electra, l. 860. (c. 409 B.C.)

Everything must have its day. (πάντα γὰρ καιρῷ καλᾷ.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus Tyrannus, l. 1516. (c. 409 B.C.)

9 Death is prepared for everyone. (Mors omnibus parata.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, D. 125 (1778) Quoting Ausonius.

10 All that wear feathers first or last

Must one day perch on Charon's mast.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Turtle and Sparrow. (1708) Charon waits for all.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1089. (1732)

11 Sooner or later death awaiteth all. (Longius aut propius mors sua quemque manet.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, No. 28, l. 58. (c. 24 B.C.) Slow or swift, we make for one abode. (Seriuss aut citius sedem properamus ad unam.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. x, l. 33. (c. A.D. 7)

To every man upon this earth

Death cometh soon or late.

T. B. MACAULAY, Horatius. St. 27. (1842)

12 Though a man wall himself with iron and brass, yet death shall drag forth his head from its place of shelter. (Ille licet ferro cautus se condet et aere, mors tamen inclusum protrahit inde caput.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, No. 18, l. 25. (c. B.C. 22) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 19.

Death will overtake you, even though you were in strongly built towers.

MOHAMMED, Koran, iv, 80. (c. 622) Bell, tr

13 I have said, Ye are gods. But ye shall die like men. (Ego dixi: Dii estis. . . . Vos autem sicut homines moriemini.)

Old Testament: Psalms, lxxxii, 6-7. (c. 250 B.C.)

Death drags down all creatures, even the gods.

UNKNOWN, Mahabharata. Sec. 8. (c. 500 B.C.)

To the gods alone

Is given immunity from age and death.

(μόροις οὐ γίγνεται θεοῖσι γῆρας οὐδὲ καθαρεῖν ποτε.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus at Colonus, l. 607. (c. 408 B.C.)

14 You see what we must all come to if we live.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 65. (1678)

15 You needs must die, but not as often as you have supposed. (Mori necesse est, sed non quotiens volueris.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 360. (c. 43 B.C.)

No one can escape either death or love. (Nec mortem effugere quisquam nec amorem potest.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 478.

16 Death tracketh everything living and catcheth it in the end. (οὕτως Ἀἰδᾶς πᾶν πεδέρπων ζῶον ἕμως ἔμαρψε.)

SAPPHO, To Her Pupils. Frag. 118. (c. 610 B.C.)

See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, i, 437.

17 There is no man who does not die his own death. . . . No one dies except upon his own day. (Nemo moritur nisi sua morte; . . . nemo nisi suo die moritur.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxix, sec. 6. (c. A.D. 65)

Death visits each and all; the slayer soon follows the slain. (Mors per omnes it; qui occidit, consequitur occisum.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xciii, sec. 12.

The last hour reaches, but every hour approaches, death. Death wears us away, but does not whirl us away. (Ad mortem dies extremus pervenit, accedit omnis. Carpit nos illa, non corripit.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cxx, sec. 18.

<sup>1</sup> By medicine life may be prolong'd, yet death
Will seize the doctor too.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, v, 5, 29. (1609)

Death defies the doctor.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 89. (1721)

<sup>2</sup> To this favour she must come.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 1, 213. (1600)

To this complexion thou must come at last.

DAVID GARRICK, Epitaph on James Quinn.

(1766) In the abbey church at Bath, England. See MURPHY, Life of Garrick, ii, 38.

Often attributed to Shakespeare, perhaps in confused remembrance of the line from Hamlet quoted above.

<sup>3</sup> If it be now, 'tis not to come; if it be not to come, it will be now; if it be not now, yet it will come: the readiness is all.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 2, 232. (1600)

<sup>4</sup> This fell sergeant, death, Is strict in his arrest.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 2, 347. (1600)

That fell arrest, Without all bail.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. lxxiv. (1609)

When Death makes his arrest we have to go.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Widow in the Bye Street.

Pt. ii. (1912)

<sup>5</sup> Live we how we can, yet die we must.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, v, 2, 28. (1591)

Well, we were born to die.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iii, 4, 4. (1595)

Death will have his day.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, iii, 2, 103. (1595)

Death, as the Psalmist saith, is certain to all; all shall die.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, iii, 2, 41. (1598)

All that lives must die,

Passing through nature to eternity.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 2, 73. (1600)

<sup>6</sup> Death's like the best bower anchor, as the saying is, it will bring us all up.

SMOLLETT, Roderick Random. Ch. 24. (1748)

<sup>7</sup> Each has his appointed day. (Stat sua cuique dies.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. x, l. 467. (19 B. C.)

Comes the supreme day and the inevitable hour.
(Venit summa dies et ineluctabile tempus.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 324. (19 B. C.) Vergil is speaking of Troy. LUCAN (De Bello Civili, vii, 195), uses the same phrase, "Venit summa dies," with reference to the battle of Phar-salia.

The inevitable hour.

THOMAS GRAY, *Elegy Written in a Country
Church-yard*. (1750)

Some day or other the last hour will strike also for me. (Quandoque enim fatalis et meus dies | veniet.)

TACITUS, Dialogus de Oratoribus. Sec. 13. (c.
A. D. 85) Quoting an unknown author.

Die we must, every mother's son of us.

THOMAS WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique, p.
72. (1560)

Every wight has his weird, and we maun a' dee when our day comes.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 34. (1818)

<sup>8</sup> Tarrying in Egypt does not happen; i. e.
everyone must die.

UNKNOWN. This proverb occurs twice, in a poem in praise of death, of the Eighteenth Dynasty (1580 B. C.), published by Gardiner (Proc. Soc. Bibl. Arch., xxxv, 165 fo.) and again in a Nineteenth Dynasty inscription.
See SHARPE, Egyptian Inscriptions, i, 97, 12.

VIII—Death: The Bourn from Which No Traveler Returns

<sup>9</sup> Dire is the dark hold of death and grievous the way thither; and more, 'tis sure that, once down, there is no coming up. (καὶ γὰρ ἐτοίμον καταβάντι μὴ 'ναρῆναι.)

ANACREON. Bk. iii, frag. 69. (c. 500 B. C.)

See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, ii, 173.

Before I go whence I shall not return, even to the land of darkness. (Antequam vadam, et non revertar, ad terram tenebrosam.)

Old Testament: Job, x, 21. (c. 400 B. C.)

I shall go the way whence I shall not return.
(Per quam non revertar, ambulo.)

Old Testament: Job, xvi, 22. (400 B. C.)

The mist from which there is nevermore return.
(ὁθὺν πάλιν οὐκέτι νόστος.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xvii, l. 120. (c. 270 B. C.)

Now he goes along the dark road thither, whence they say no one returns. (Qui nunc it per iter tenebricosum illuc, unde negant redire quemquam.)

CATULLUS, Odes. No. iii, l. 11. (c. 57 B. C.)

Quoted by SENECA (?), *Ludus de Morte
Claudii*, sec. 11. (c. A. D. 55)

The wave from which there is no return. (Inremeabilis undae.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 425. (19 B. C.) The Styx.
Nobody has ever come back to tell us about it.
(Toutesfois ils ne sont pas revenus nous en dire les nouvelles.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 6. (1580)

The undiscover'd country, from whose bourn
No traveller returns.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 1, 79. (1600)

The greedy Acheron does not relinquish his prey.
(L'avare Achéron ne lâche pas sa proie.)

RACINE, Phèdre. Act ii, sc. 5. (1677)

Back from the tomb No step has come.

GEORGE CROLY, The Genius of Death. (1830)

Gone to that what's-his-name from which no thingumbob comes back.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 4. (1843)

I may precede you to that bourne from which no traveler returns.

LEE THAYER, Persons Unknown, p. 134. (1941)

<sup>10</sup> "What is it like down there, Charides?" "Very dark."

"And what about return?" "All lies." (Αἱ δ' ἀνοδοὶ τί; ψεῦδος.)

CALLIMACHUS, On Charides. (c. 250 B. C.) See
Greek Anthology, vii, 524.

<sup>1</sup> Of the dead, who hath returned from Hades?
(καὶ τίς θανάτων ἦλθεν ἐξ Ἅιδου πάλιν;)

EURIPIDES, Hercules Furens, l. 297. (c. 420 B. C.)

<sup>2</sup> No one ever awakens whom the cold stoppage of life has once overtaken. (Nemo expergitus exstat, frigida quem semel est vitai pausa secuta.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iii, l. 929. (c. B. C. 45) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 6, the French being, "On ne se réveille jamais, dès qu'une fois on a senti le froid repos de la mort."

<sup>3</sup> No prayers can open the gates of darkness. (Panditur ad nullas ianua nigra preces.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iv, No. xi, l. 2. (c. 26 B. C.) The Germans say, "Wer einmal in der Hölle ist, kommt nie wieder heraus," (Whoever is in Hell, never gets out).

IX—Death: The Leveler

See also Grave: Its Democracy

<sup>4</sup> Death levels all things. (Omnia mors aequat.)
CLAUDIAN, De Raptu Proserpinae. Bk. ii, l. 302. (c. A. D. 395)

Death makes equal the high and low.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Be Merry, Friends. (c. 1546)

Death is an equall doome To good and bad
EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto ii, st. 59. (1590)

The end makes all men equal. (Il fine fa tutti equali.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 31. (1578)

The end makes all equal.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 332.

(1605) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4496. (1732)

Death is the grand Leveller.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1250. (1732)

Death and dice level all distinction.

FOOTE, The Minor. Act i, sc. 1. (1760)

Life levels all men: death reveals the eminent.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

<sup>5</sup> Death levels master and slave, the sceptre and the spade. (Mors dominos servis et scepra ligonibus aequat.)

WALTER COLMAN, La Danse Machabre. (c. 1633) The phrase "Mors scepra ligonibus aequat" occurs in Vers Sur la Mort of the 12th century, and has been used as a motto and inscription. See Notes and Queries, May, 1917, p. 134. It is cited by HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 228, with a variant, "The greatest king must at last go to bed with a shovel."

Sceptre and Crown Must tumble down,

And in the dust be equal made

With the poor crooked scythe and spade.

JAMES SHIRLEY, Death's Final Conquest. (c. 1633) From The Contention of Ajax and Ulysses. See PERCY, Reliques of Ancient English Poetry. Ser. i, bk. iii, No. 2.

<sup>6</sup> Cruel death seizes the weak and the strong. (La dure mort saisit le faible et fort.)

GRUTHER, Recueil de Proverbes. (c. 1560)

Death takes both the weak and the strong.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737.

<sup>7</sup> Death cometh alike to the idle man and the worker. (κάθ' ἄν' ὁμῶς δ' τ' ἀεργὸς ἀνὴρ δ' τε πολλὰ ἐοργῶς.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 320. (c. 850 B. C.)

All things come at last to the same horrible Charybdis, great achievements, and riches too. (πάντα γὰρ μίαν ἱκνεῖται δασυλήϊτα Χάρυβδιν, αἱ μεγάλαί τ' ἀρεταὶ καὶ ὁ πλοῦτος.)

SIMONIDES, Dirges. Frag. 28. (c. 475 B. C.)

Quoted by STOBÆUS, Florilegium, cxviii, 5.

Death waits for the just no less than the unjust. (ἐπεὶ θανάτος γε καὶ εὐορκὸν μένει ἄνδρα.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. vi, ch. 86. (c. 445 B. C.) The Delphian oracle to Glaucus.

Rich and poor alike wend their way together to the bourn of death. (ἀφ' ἑοὺς πενιχρὸς τε θανάτου πέρας ἅμα νέονται.)

PINDAR, Nemean Odes. No. vii, l. 19. (c. 485 B. C.)

Equal are beggar and lofty plutocrat when we go dead to Acheron. (Aequo mendicis atque ille opulentissimus | censetur censu ad Acheruntem mortuos.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 493. (c. 194 B. C.)

For neither great nor small is there escape from death. (Neque ulla est | aut magno aut parvo leti fuga.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 6, l. 94. (35 B. C.)

Pale Death, with impartial step, knocks at the poor man's cottage and at the palaces of kings (Pallida Mors aequo pulsat pede pauperum tabernas | regumque turres.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 4, l. 13. (23 B. C.)

We are all being gathered to the same fold; the lot of every one of us is tossing about in the urn, destined, sooner or later, to come forth and place us in Charon's skiff for the everlasting exile.

(Omnes eodem cogimur, omnium versatur urna serius ocios sors exitura et nos in aeternum exsilium impositura cumbae.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode. 3, l. 25. (23 B. C.)

For all alike doth Earth unlock her bosom,— for the poor man and for princes' sons. (Aequa tellus | pauperi recluditur | regumque pueris.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode xviii, l. 32. (23 B. C.)

Death reaps great and small, not to be won with gold. (Metit Orcus | grandia cum parvis, non exorabilis auro.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. ii, l. 178. (c. 15 B. C.)

Every sacred thing rude death profanes; on all he lays his shadowy hand. (Scilicet omne sacrum mors inopportuna profanat, | omnibus obscuras incit illa manus!)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 9, l. 19. (c. 13 B. C.)

O that death were the reward of the brave only, and would refuse to release the coward from life! (Mors, utinam pavidus vitae subducere nolles, | sed virtus te sola daret!)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. iv, l. 580. (c. A. D.

60) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 40.

The timid and the brave alike must die. (Pavido fortique cadendum est.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili, ix, 583.

Death, which spares neither king, duke, nor count. (Li Mors, qui roi, duc ne conte n'es-pargne.)

JACQUES DE BAISIAUX, Li Did de la Vescie à Prestre, l. 12. (c. 1250) MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, iii, 106.

Deeth, that taketh of heigh and low his rente.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of the Man of Lawe, l. 1044. (c. 1386)

The same deeth that taketh the cherl, swich deeth taketh the lord.

CHAUCER, The Persones Tale. Sec. 66. (c. 1389)
Mean and mighty, rotting

Together, have one dust.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, iv, 2, 246. (1609)

When we leave this world and are laid in the earth the prince walks as narrow a path as the day labourer. (Al dejar este mundo y meternos la tierra adentro por tan estrecha senda va el principe como el jornalero.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 33. (1615)

Both rich and poor are equal in the grave.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Job, vi, 39. (1624) See under GRAVE.

Inexorable death, who was never known to respect merit.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733

In the grave there is no mark by which we may distinguish the dust of the king from that of the clown.

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs, i, 161. (1814)

There all are equal; side by side

The poor man and the son of pride

Lie calm and still.

LONGFELLOW, tr., Coplas de Manrique. (1833)

1
Nay, the brotherhood of Helicon cease to live, and Homer, their prince, sleeps in the same forgotten grave. (Adde Heliconiadum comites, quorum unus Homerus | scepra potitus eadem aliis sopitu' quietest.)

LUCRETIVS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iii, l. 1037. (c. 45 B.C.)

Death reduced to the same condition: Alexander the Macedonian and his muleteer. (Ἀλέξανδρος ὁ Μακεδὼν καὶ ὁ ὄρεωκόμος αὐτοῦ ἀποθανόντες.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. vi, No 24. (c. A.D. 174) Aurelius does not say what this condition is, for he adds, "Either they were taken back into the same Seminal Source of the Universe or scattered alike among the atoms," putting the two alternatives, Stoic and Epicurean, though he himself does not admit the second.

The corpse of the Pope takes no more ground than that of the sacristan. (No ocupa más pies de tierra el cuerpo del papa que el del sacristán.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 33. (1615)
Thersites' body is as good as Ajax',
When neither are alive.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, iv, 2, 252. (1609)

Great cab and little cab go down to the grave.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 399. (1678)

A cab, or kab, is a Hebrew dry measure

Xerxes the great did die; And so must you and I.
BENJAMIN HARRIS (?), The New England Primer. (1683)

The tall, the wise, the reverend head

Must be as low as ours.

ISAAC WATTS, Hymns. Bk. ii, No. 63. (1707)

At the end of the game, the king and the pawn go into the same bag.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 145. (1902)

2

Here lies Tibullus: of all that he was scarcely enough remains to fill a small urn. (Iacet, ecce, Tibullus: | vix manet e toto, parva quod urna capit!)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 9, l. 39. (c. 13 B.C.)

Put Hannibal in the scales; how many pounds in that greatest of commanders do you find? (Expende Hannibalem; quot libras in duce summo | invenies?)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 147. (c. A.D. 120)

A heap of dust alone remains of thee.

POPE, Elegy to the Memory of an Unfortunate Lady, l. 73. (1717)

3

O eloquent, just and mighty Death! . . . thou hast drawn together all the far-stretched greatness . . . of man, and covered it over with these two narrow words, Hic jacet!

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, History of the World. Bk. v, pt. i, ch. 6. Conclusion. (1614)

Earth's highest station ends in "Here he lies."

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Nt. iv, l. 99. (1742)

4

When a man dies, his glory among men dies also. (θανόντος ἀνδρὸς πᾶς ἀπόλλυθ' ἡ ποτ' ἀνθρώπων χάρις.)

STESICHORUS, Fragments. Frag 54. (c. 575 B.C.) Quoted by STOBÆUS, Florilegium, cxxvi, 5, That the Memory of Most Men Perishes Quickly. See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, ii, 61.

A man may fish with the worm that hath eat of a king, and eat of the fish that hath fed of that worm.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iv, 3, 28. (1600)

To what base uses we may return, Horatio! Why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander, till he find it stopping a bung-hole?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 1, 222. (1600)

Imperious Caesar, dead and turn'd to clay,
Might stop a hole to keep the wind away:

O, that that earth, which kept the world in awe,
Should patch a wall to expel the winter's flaw!

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 1, 234. (1600)

Dead Caesar who "stops bungholes" in the cask.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. iii, l. 556. (1856)

When he is gone, the world's gone with him

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, A Strappado for the Divell, 225. (1615)

When I dye the world dies with me.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 264. (1639)

Arthur himself had but his time.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 35. (1659)

Arthur was not, but whilst he was.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England, iii, 519.

(1662) "It is sad to say," Fuller adds, "Nos fuimus Trojes. The greatest eminency when not extant is extinct."

<sup>1</sup> The whole earth is the sepulchre of famous men. (ἀνδρῶν γὰρ ἐπιφανῶν πᾶσα γῆ τάφος.)

THUCYDIDES, History. Bk. ii, ch. 43, sec. 3. (c. 400 B. C.)

All our pomp the earth covers.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 718. (1640)

X—Death: The Fear of Death

<sup>2</sup> Verily I fear the stupid death of the moth. (δέδοικα μῶρον κάρτα πυραύστου μύρον.)

AESCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 156, Smyth. (c. 458 B. C.) ZENOBIUS, Proverbs, v, 79; AELIAN, On Animals, xii, 8; SUIDAS, Lexicon, πυραύστου μύρον, a proverbial expression for the brevity of life. See EUSTATHIUS, on Iliad, 1304:8.

'Tis not to die we fear, but to die poorly.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Humorous Lieutenant. Act ii, sc. 2. (1619)

<sup>3</sup> Men feare death as Children feare to goe in the darke.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Death (1607) Cited by Howell and Ray.

Men fear Death, as Children fear going in the Dark.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3392. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> A man always dies of the thing he fears.

FRANCIS REEDING, Heads off at Midnight. Ch. 7. (1938) A Castilian proverb. See under FEAR

<sup>5</sup> He fears not death who knows how to scorn life. (Non metuit mortem qui scit contemnere vitam.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. iv, No. 22. (c. 175 B. C.)

<sup>6</sup> Fear not death; for the sooner we die, the longer shall we be immortal.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1740

<sup>7</sup> The ancients dreaded death: the Christian can only fear dying.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth. (1827)

<sup>8</sup> The better a man is, the more afraid he is of death.

SAMUEL JOHNSON BOSWELL, Life, 16 Sept., 1777.

<sup>9</sup> Neither the sun nor death can be regarded without flinching. (Le soleil ni la mort ne se peuvent regarder fixement.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 26. (1665)

Death and the Sun are two things not to be look'd on with a steady Eye.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1244. (1732)

<sup>10</sup> How can he who does not fear death be frightened by death? (Mín pu wéi' ssü, nai' ho 'i szü chü' tzü?)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 74. (c. 550 B. C.) Carus, tr.

What man who dreads not death can be a slave? (τίς δ' ἐστὶ δούλος τοῦ θανεῖν ἀφροντίς ὢν;)

EURIPIDES, Fragment. No. 958. (c. 440 B. C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 34B, 106D.

Paraphrased by CICERO, Ad Atticum, ix, 2.

Despise death and you have conquered every fear. (Mortem ubi contemnas viceris omnes metus.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 405. (c. 43 B. C.)

How can a man live free? By despising death. (Mesprisant le mourir.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 3. (1580) Quoting a saying of Agis. (c. 240 B. C.)

What can they suffer who have no fear of death? (Que peuvent souffrir ceulx qui ne craignent point la mort?)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 3. (1580) Quoting a saying of Damidas.

<sup>11</sup> What deaths we suffer ere we die!

JOHN LOGAN, On the Death of a Young Lady. (c. 1780)

So many are the deaths we die
Before we can be dead indeed.

W. E. HENLEY, Rhymes and Rhythms. No. 15.

(a. 1898) See also WILDE, under LIFE AND DEATH

<sup>12</sup> Often for fear of death men are seized by a hatred of life, forgetting that this fear is the fountain of all care. (Saepe usque adeo, mortis formidine, vitae percipit humanos odium . . . oblití fontem curarum hunc esse timorem.)

LUCRETIIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iii, l. 79
(c. 45 B. C.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 3

<sup>13</sup> Death is less to be feared than nothing, if there can be anything less than what we see to be nothing. (Multo igitur mortem minus ad nos esse putandumst. | si minus esse potest quam quod nil esse videmus.)

LUCRETIIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iii, l. 926.
(c. 45 B. C.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 19, who translates it thus: "La mort est moins à craindre que rien, s'il y avoit quelque chose de moins que rien."

Let none fear death, which is release from toil (μηδεὶς φοβείσθω θάνατον ἀπόλυσιν πόνων.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: To Apollonius, 108E. (c. A. D. 95) Quoted from an unknown author

Of all things that are feared, the least is death.

SIR WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Doomesday: The Second Hour. St. 73. (1614)

<sup>14</sup> Of all the benefits of virtue, the contempt of death is the greatest. (Or des principaulx bien-faits de la vertu est le mespris de la mort.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 19. (1580)

All the wisdom and discourse of the world turns in the end upon this point, to teach us not to fear to die. (Toute la sagesse et discours du monde se resoult enfin à ce point, de nous apprendre à ne craindre point à mourir.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 19.

1 Neither dread your last day nor desire it.
(Summum nec metuas diem nec optes.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, epig. 47. (A.D. 93)

2 Let us try to persuade him not to fear death as if it were a hobgoblin. (μὴ δεδίειν τὸν θάνατον ὥσπερ τὰ μορμολύκεια.)

PLATO, Phaedo. Sec. 77E. (c. 385 B.C.) Socrates is saying, "You have a childish fear that when the soul goes out from the body, the wind will blow it away and scatter it," and that all such fears should be treated as hobgoblins, imaginary beings invoked to frighten children.

He who fears death, though living, loses life itself. (Qui mortem metuit, quod vivit, perdit id ipsum.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. i, No. 22. (c. 175 B.C.)
Cease fearing death: 'tis folly day by day,
For fear of death, to cast life's joys away.
(Linque metum leti; nam stultum est tempore in omni, dum mortem metuas, amittere gaudia vitae.)

CATO, Disticha, ii, 3.

To fear death is more cruel than to die. (Mortem timere crudelius est, quam mori.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 427. (c. 43
B.C.) The more usual form of the saying is, "Timor mortis morte peior" (The fear of death is worse than death itself). Quoted by BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, as a "true saying."

Death is less cruel than the expectation of death.
(Morsque minus poenae, quam mora mortis, habet.)

OVIN, Heroides. Epis. x, l. 82. (c. 10 B.C.)

Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 40. The French is,
"La mort est moins cruelle que l'attente de la mort."

It is folly to die through fear of dying. (Stultitia est timore mortis mori.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx, sec. 8. (c. A.D.
60) Bacon quotes a saying which he attributes to Seneca, but which is not found in his works: "Pompa mortis magis terret quam mors ipsa" (The pomp of death alarms us more than death itself). Perhaps it was the sentence given below that he had in mind.

Often the cause of death is the fear of dying.
(Saepe causa moriendi est timide mori.)

SENECA, De Tranquillitate Animi. Ch. 11, sec.
5. (c. A.D. 60)

What is death? A hobgoblin. (θάνατος τί ἐστίν; μορμολύκειον.)

EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 1, sec. 17.

(c. A.D. 100) Epictetus has just said that "Socrates did well to call all such things hobgoblins. For just as masks appear frightful and terrible to children because of inexperience, in some such manner we also are affected by events, and this for the same reason that children are affected by bugbears"—a hobgoblin in the shape of a bear supposed to devour naughty children. Some readings of the text have πόρος (hardship) instead of θάνατος.

Look upon death with indifference, for its bitterness is commensurate with your fear of it.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penanim
(Choice of Pearls). No. 515. (c. 1050)

The sense of death is most in apprehension.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, iii, 1, 78.
(1604)

He that fears death, lives not.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 782. (1640)

Man . . . feels a thousand deaths, in fearing one
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Nt. iv, l. 15. (1742)

COWARDS DIE MANY TIMES BEFORE THEIR DEATHS.
see under COWARDICE.

Far happier are the dead, methinks, than they
Who look for death, and fear it every day.

WILLIAM COWPER, On Invalids. (1782)

3 Death is not bitter, but the approach to death.
(Mors misera non est, aditus ad mortem est miser.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. viii, ch. v, sec. 5. (c. A.D. 80) Quoting an unknown author.

The mode of death is sadder than death itself
(Tristius est leto, leti genus.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xi, epig. 91. (A.D. 93)
More cruel than death itself was the moment of death. (O morte ipsa mortis tempus indignius!)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. v, epis. 16
(c. A.D. 98)

It hath often been said that it is not death, but dying, which is terrible.

HENRY FIELDING, Amelia. Bk. iii, ch. 4. (1751)

Death hath not so ghastly a Face at a Distance, as it hath at hand.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1247. (1732)

It is not death that matters, but the fear of death.
SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iii. (1903)

4 What hiding-place is there where the fear of death does not enter? (Quae latebra est, in quam non intret metus mortis?)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxii, sec. 4. (c.
A.D. 64)

5 It is a desirable death to die without the fear of death. (Optanda mors est sine metu mortis mori.)

SENECA, Trouades, l. 869. (c. A.D. 60)

There is no difference whether death comes to us or whether we go to death. (Interest nihil, illa ad nos veniat an ad illam nos.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxix, sec. 6. Seneca is arguing that one should ponder and practise, not only how to welcome death, but also how to invite it.

It is a beautiful thing to die one's own death.
(Bella res est mori sua morte.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxx, sec. 6. (c. A.D.
64) Quoting a sentiment which he declares to be wrong, adding, "There is no man who does not die his own death." The complement of "To live one's own life."

6 Ah, what a sign it is of evil life
Where death's approach is seen so terrible!
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iii, 3, 5. (1590)

'Tis a vile thing to die, my gracious lord,
When men are unprepared and look not for it.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iii, 2, 64. (1592)
Cut off even in the blossoms of my sin,
Unhousel'd, disappointed, unaneled.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 5, 76. (1600)

XI—Death: The Comforter

<sup>1</sup>
O death, the healer, reject me not, but come!
Thou alone art the mediciner of ills incurable,
And on the dead no pain layeth hold.
(ὦ θάνατε παῖάν, μή μ' ἀτιμάσῃς μολεῖν μόνος γὰρ εἰ σὺ τῶν ἀνηκέστων κακῶν ἰατρός, ἄλλος δ' οὐδὲν ἄπτεται νεκροῦ.)

AESCHYLUS, Philoctetes. Frag. 141. Smyth. (c. 458 B.C.) Attributed to this play by MAXIMUS OF TYRE, Dissertations, vii, 5. Cited by STOBAEUS, iv, 52, 32.

O Death, healing physician, come. (ὦ θάνατε, παῖάν ἰατρός μόλοις.)

EURIPIDES, Fragments. Frag. 958, Nauck. (c. 440 B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 106D.

The sure physician, death.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, v, 4, 6. (1609)

<sup>2</sup>
Men are wrong in hating death, which is
The greatest succour from our many ills.
(ὡς οὐ δικαίως θάνατον ἐχθροῖσιν βροτοί, ὅσπερ μέγιστον ῥῆμα τῶν πολλῶν κακῶν.)

AESCHYLUS, Fragments. No. 353, Nauck. (c. 475 B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 106C.

If not a blessing, at least it's an end to our troubles. (Quae bona si non est, finis tamen illa malorum est.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. iii, No. 22. (c. 175 B.C.)
Death is the remedy for all evils. (La mort est la recepte à tous maux.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 3. (1580)

Death is the cure of all diseases.
SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt ii, sec. 10. (1643)

Death is a certain Remedy for the Injuries of Fortune and the Vexations of Life.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1248. (1732)
Death rather frees us from Ills, than robs us of our Goods.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1253.

<sup>3</sup>
No suffering affects the dead. (ἄλλος δ' οὐδὲν ἄπτεται νεκροῦ.)

AESCHYLUS, Philoctetes. Fr. 255, Nauck. (c. 475 B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 109F.

With the dead there can be no more suffering. (τοῖς γὰρ θανοῦσι μᾶχθος οὐ προσγίγνεται.)

SOPHOCLES, Trachiniae, l. 1173. (c. 409 B.C.)
A dead mouse feels no cold.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 123. (1678)

Dead Mice feel no cold.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1241. (1732)

<sup>4</sup>
To be dead is to be freed from sorrow and sighing. (τὸ γὰρ θανεῖν ἐλευθεροῦται φιλαίκτηων κακῶν.)

AESCHYLUS, Suppliants, l. 802. (c. 485 B.C.)
The dead have rest from pain. (τοὺς γὰρ θανόντας οὐχ ὀρῶ λυπουμενούς.)

SOPHOCLES, Electra, l. 1170. (c. 409 B.C.)
Why fear death, the mother of rest? (τὸν θάνατον τί φοβείσθε, τὸν ἡσυχίης γενετήρα.)

AGATHIAS, On Death. (c. 560) Greek Anthology, x, 69.

Death is rest from labor and misery. (Aut laborem ac miseriarum quietam.)

CICERO, In Catilinam. No. iv, ch. 4, sec. 7. (63 B.C.)
They rest from their labours.

Book of Common Prayer: Burial of the Dead. (1541)

Death is . . . the end of labour, entry into rest.
WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Tragedie of Darius. (1603)

<sup>5</sup>
The kiss of death is like taking a hair out of milk.

Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 8a. (c. 450) A metaphor to describe an easy process.

His Maker kissed his soul away.

ISAAC WATTS, The Presence of God. (1707)

Died of the kisses of the lips of God.

F. W. H. MYERS, St. Paul. (1870) Of Moses.

<sup>6</sup>
Death is a friend of ours.

FRANCIS BACON, Remains: An Essay on Death. (c. 1597)

O Death! the poor man's dearest friend.

ROBERT BURNS, Man Was Made to Mourn (1788)

Death! . . . thou true comforter! the friend of all

Who have no friend beside!

SOUTHEY, Joan of Arc. Bk. i, l. 315. (1795)

My name is Death: the last best friend am I

SOUTHEY, Carmen Nuptiale. St. 87. (1816)

The friend of those who have no friend but me.

FLORENCE EARLE COATES, Death. (c. 1900)

<sup>7</sup>
Hail, Death, how welcome is thy decree to a luckless man.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xli, 2. (c. 190 B.C.) Oesterley, tr.

<sup>8</sup>
O death, where is thy sting? (ποῦ σοῦ, θάνατε, τὸ κέντρον;) )

New Testament: I Corinthians, xv, 55. (c. A. D. 60) The Vulgate is. "Ubi est mors stimulus tuus?"

Death's sting is swallowed up in victory.

SWIFT, Ode to Dr. Sancroft, l. 201. (1690)

<sup>9</sup>
Death, the great reconciler.

GEORGE ELIOT, Adam Bede. Ch. 4. (1859)

<sup>10</sup>
Turn the key and bolt the door,
Sweet is death forevermore.

R. W. EMERSON, The Past. (1867)

<sup>11</sup>
Death hath nothing terrible in it, but what Life hath made so.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1246. (1732)

<sup>1</sup> Life is so sorry a thing that death is a delightful refuge for weary men. (οὐτω δ' μὲν θάνατος μοχθηρῆς ἐούσης τῆς ζοῆς καταφυγὴ ἀπερωτάρη τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ γέγονε.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. vii, sec.46. (c.445 B. C.)

<sup>2</sup> There the wicked cease from troubling; and there the weary be at rest. (Ibi impii cessaverunt a tumultu, et ibi requieverunt fessi robore.)

Old Testament: Job, iii, 17. (c. 400 B. C.)

And the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest.

TENNYSON, The May Queen. Last line. (1832)

<sup>3</sup> Death is too much a boon when it has no bane. (Nimium boni est in morte cum nihil est mali.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 475. (c.43 B. C.)

Death is good for man when it ends life's miseries. (Bona mors est homini vitae quae exstinguit mala.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 67.

<sup>4</sup> Happier he whom death from bonds sets free,
Than great men, hurried to captivity.

SADI, Gulistan, vii, 17. (c. 1258) Eastwick, tr.

<sup>5</sup> Is death all so sad? (Usque adeone mori miserum est?)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xii, l. 646. (19 B. C.) La Fontaine puts the line into French, "Est-ce si grand malheur que de perdre la vie?"

<sup>6</sup> Nothing can happen more beautiful than death.

WALT WHITMAN, Starting from Paumanok. Sec. 12. (1860)

To die would be an awfully big adventure.

J. M. BARRIE, Peter Pan. Act iii. (1904)

Death is only an incident in life.

WILLIAM DE MORGAN, Joseph Vance. Ch. 11. (1906) Given as a message from Voltaire's ghost.

Why fear death? It is the most beautiful adventure in life.

CHARLES FROHMAN. Said to be his last words before going down on the Lusitania, torpedoed by the Germans, 7 May, 1915. Mr. Frohman had produced Barrie's Peter Pan, and so was familiar with the quotation given above. See MARCOSSON AND FROHMAN, Charles Frohman. Ch. 19.

XII—Death: The Last Sleep

See also Sleep: Brother to Death

<sup>7</sup> What's dying but a kind of gilded sleep?

S. V. BENÉT, Western Star, p. 41. (1943)

<sup>8</sup> He but sleeps the holy sleep. (ἐρὸν ὕπνον κοιμᾶται.)

CALLIMACHUS, Epigrams. No. 11. (c. 250 B. C.) She is not dead, but sleepeth. (οὐ γὰρ ἀπέθανεν ἀλλὰ καθεύδει.)

New Testament: Luke, viii, 52. (c. A. D. 65)

Also Matthew, ix, 24. The Vulgate is, "Non est mortua puella, sed dormit."

When we say of the martyr St. Stephen that "he fell asleep," instead of "he died," the euphemism partakes of the nature of a metaphor, intimating a resemblance between a sleep and the death of such a person.

JAMES BEATTIE, Elements of Moral Science. Sec. 866. (1790)

God's finger touched him, and he slept.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. lxxv, st. 5. (1850)

<sup>9</sup> The eternal sleep. (Perpetuus sopor.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode xxiv, l. 5. (23 B. C.)

Death is nought els but an eternal sleepe. (La Morte altro non è, che un eterno sonno.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Frutes, fo. 94. (1578)

Who sleeps the longest is the happiest;

Death is the longest sleep.

THOMAS SOUTHERNE, The Fatal Marriage. Act v, sc. 2. (1694)

Death is an eternal sleep. (La mort est un sommeil éternel.)

JOSEPH FOUCHÉ, Inscription, which, as Minister of Police under the Directory in 1794, he ordered placed on the gates of all French cemeteries.

Death is a dreamless sleep. (La mort est un sommeil sans rêve.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Epigram. (c. 1810) See GUILLON, Napoléon, p. 297.

<sup>10</sup> He sleeps and life's poor play is over.

ALEXANDER POPE, Eloisa to Abelard. (1717)

<sup>11</sup> Yet a little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to sleep. (Paululum dormies, paululum dormitabis, paululum conseres manus ut dormias.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, vi, 10; xxiv, 33. (c. 400 B. C.)

<sup>12</sup> He giveth his beloved sleep. (Dederit dilectis suis somnum.)

Old Testament: Psalms, cxxvii, 2. (c. 400 B. C.)

MRS. BROWNING, The Sleep. St. 1. (1850)

<sup>13</sup> She slept the sleep of the just. (Elle s'endormit du sommeil des justes.)

RACINE, Histoire de Port Royal. Vol. iv, l. 517. (1695)

<sup>14</sup> I think I'll make a long sleep of it. (Ich denke einen langen Schlaf zu thun.)

SCHILLER, Wallenstein's Tod. Act 5. (1799)

<sup>15</sup> Death rock me asleep, abridge my doleful days!

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, ii, 4, 211. (1597)

This sleep is sound indeed; this is a sleep

That from this golden rigol hath divorced

So many English kings.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, iv, 5, 35. (1597)

In that sleep of death what dreams may come

When we have shuffled off this mortal coll.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 1, 66. (1600)

<sup>1</sup> There is no god found stronger than death, and death is a sleep.

A. C. SWINBURNE, Hymn to Proserpine. (1866)
Only the sleep eternal, In an eternal night.
SWINBURNE, The Garden of Proserpine. (1866)

<sup>2</sup> We fall asleep and never wake again.
JAMES THOMSON, The City of Dreadful Night.
Pt. xiv. (1874)

XIII—Death: The Good Death

<sup>3</sup> Surely to die nobly is a boon for mortals. (ἀλλ' εὐκλεῖς τοι κατθανεῖν χάρις βροτῶ.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 1304. (458 B.C.)
To die nobly were better than to save one's life. (καλῶς τεθνάναι κάλλιον ἢ μᾶλλον ἢ σῃσώσθαι.)

AESCHYLUS (?), Fragments. No. 235, Loeb.
(c. 450 B.C.)

<sup>4</sup> To die happy. (τὸ εὐτυχοῦντα ἀποθανεῖν.)
ANTISTHENES, when asked what was the height of human bliss. (c. 375 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Antisthenes, vi, 5.

<sup>5</sup> She [St. Bona] died in 673, leaving behind her a sweet odour of her sanctity and virtues to all France.

ALBAN BUTLER, Lives of the Saints, ii, 169.
(1756) The odor of sanctity (French, odeur de sainteté, 17th century in Littré): a sweet or balsamic odor supposed to have been ex-haled by the bodies of eminent saints at their death, or on subsequent disinterment.
Sometimes used ironically. See O.E.D., vii, 64/1.

My respected grandmother . . . who died in the odour of sanctity.

WALTER SCOTT, Ivanhoe. Ch. 4. (1819)

<sup>6</sup> Sudden and unexpected. (Repentinum inop-inatumque.)

JULIUS CAESAR, when asked what kind of death he thought the best, the day before his murder while dining with Marcus Lepi-dus. (44 B.C.) Suetonius tells the story in his Life of Caesar, ch. 87. See also PLUTARCH, Life of Caesar, ch. 63, and his Moralia, 206F;
and APPIAN'S Civil Wars, ii, 115. Plutarch gives the Greek, "ὁ ἀπροσδόκητος," which Caesar probably used. Suetonius remarks that he got his wish.

That death is best which comes apace when we have had our joy of life. (Optima mors, carpta quae venit acta dei.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. v, l. 18 (c.
22 B.C.)

Lesse paine is felt by quick and hastie death,
Then by delays, if lost be vitall breath. .
It is of mercie and a gentill deede,
Without delaies to hasten death with speede.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv,
p. 129. (1574)

To die quickly is a privilege; you will die by inches. (S'en aller tout d'une fois est un privilège; tu périras par morceaux.)

HENRI AMIEL, Journal Intime, 1 Sept., 1874.

Amiel is referring to himself.

People who make me very, very sick

Are those who say,

In that superior way,

"Don't care if I die, if I go quick."

PETER J. STEINCROHN, More Years for the Asking, p. 8. (1940)

<sup>7</sup> Death slew not him, but he made death his ladder to the skies.

FULKE GREVILLE (?), *An Epitaph Upon Sir
Philip Sidney*, l. 20. (1593) This elegy, and two others epitaphs on Sidney, appeared originally in a miscellany, The Phoenix Nest, in 1593. With six other poetical tributes to Sidney by various hands, it was included in the same volume with Spenser's Colin Clout's Come Home Again, in 1595, and is sometimes erroneously attributed to Spenser. See Dictionary of National Biography:
Royden.

<sup>8</sup> Those who have endeavoured to teach us to die well, have taught few to die willingly.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, June, 1861

<sup>9</sup> A good death does honor to a whole life. (Un bel morir tutta la vita onora.)

PETRARCH, *Rime in Vita e Morte di Madonna
Laura*. Canz. xvi, st. 5. (c. 1348) Widely used in Italian literature. Quoted by GUAZZO.
Civile Conversation, ii, 182. (1574) FLORIO.
Firste Fruites, fo. 34. (1578) Florio has it,
"Un bel morire, tutta una vita honora."

Nothing in his life

Became him like the leaving it.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, i, 4, 7. (1606)

A fair death honours the whole life.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum No. 524. (1640)

<sup>10</sup> I hope so to die that I won't have to blush when I'm dead. (Spero, sic moriar, ut mortuus non erubescam.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 57. (c. A. D. 60)

<sup>11</sup> That man will live ill who does not know how to die well. (Male vivet quisquis nesciet bene mori.)

SENECA, De Tranquillitate Animi. Ch. 11, sec. 4.
(c. A. D. 60)

He hath lived ill, that knows not how to die well.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1890. (1732)

<sup>12</sup> A' made a finer end and went away an it had been any christom child.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, ii, 3, 12. (1599) A
"chrisom child" is a child newly baptized, still wearing the christening robe. Children dying within a month of birth were called
"chrisoms."

<sup>13</sup> They say he made a good end.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iv, 5, 186. (1600)

Dieth quietly, without ravings or cursings, much like a chrysom child, as the saying is.

ALEXANDER COOKE. (c. 1620) See HUNTER, New Illustrations of the Life of Shakespeare, ii, 60. Mr. Badman died like a lamb; or as they call it, like a chrisom-child, quietly and without fear.

JOHN BUNYAN, Life and Death of Mr. Badman, p. 566. (1680)

<sup>1</sup> To die well is the chief part of virtue. (τὸ καλῶς θηΐσκειν ἀρετῆς μέρος ἐστὶ μέγιστον.)

SIMONIDES, Inscriptions. Frag. 127. (c. 475 B.C.) Palatine Anthology, vii, 253.

It is not a question of dying earlier or later, but of dying well or ill. (Citius mori aut tardius ad rem non pertinet. bene mori aut male ad rem pertinet.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx. sec. 6. (C. A. D. 65)

<sup>2</sup> How glorious it is to die in arms. (Pulchrum-que mori succurrit in armis.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 317. (19 B.C.)

Dead on the field of honor. (Mort au champ d'honneur.)

Response to the roll-call for Théophile Malo Corret de la Tour d'Auvergne, after his death at Oberhausen, 27 June, 1800. Commander of a division of 8000 grenadiers, d'Auvergne had so distinguished himself that Napoleon presented him with a sabre inscribed "To the First Grenadier of France." and after his death issued an order that the above response was to be made whenever his name was called. The order is still in force, and the same custom was afterwards instituted in other regiments in memory of other gallant soldiers.

My forefathers . . . died on the field of honor. IRVING, Tales of a Traveller, i, 52 (1824)

<sup>3</sup> An emperor should die standing. (Imperatorem ait stantem mori oportere.)

EMPEROR VESPASIAN. His last words as he attempted to rise from his close-stool. (A.D. 79) See Suetonius, Vespasian, ch. 24, who says, "Taken on a sudden with such an attack of diarrhoea that he all but swooned, he said, 'An emperor ought to die standing,' and whilst he was struggling to get on his feet, he died in the arms of those who tried to help him." Another form is, "Decet imperatorem stantem mori." The phrase has been put into the mouths of many other rulers.

An Emperour should die standing upright. (Il faut qu'un empereur meure debout.) Lo here a notable saying fitting my humour, and worthy a great Prince. Adrian the Emperour used the same afterward to like purpose, and Kings ought often to be put in mind of it.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 21. (1580)

It becomes not a valiant man to die like a beast.

SIWARD, EARL OF NORTHUMBERLAND, arising from bed and donning his armor, as he felt death approaching. (1055) See CAMDEN, Remains Concerning Britain, p. 261. Camden comments, "As valiantly spoken as it was by Vespasian."

A bishop should die preaching.

JOHN JEWEL, Bishop of Salisbury. (1571)

A bishop ought to die on his legs.

JOHN WOOLTON, Bishop of Exeter. (1594)

Vespasian [died] in a Jest; Sitting upon the Stool, Ut puto Deus fio.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Death. (1612)

XIV—Death: De Mortuis

<sup>4</sup> It is not good to revile dead men. (οὐ γὰρ ἐσβλά κατθανοῦσι κερτομεῖν ἐπ' ἀνδράσιν.)

ARCHILOCHUS, Apothegm. (c. 650 B.C.) See STOBÆUS, Florilegium, 125, 5.

<sup>5</sup> Say of the dead what is creditable to the dead. Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 36. (c. 450)

Don't malign a dead lion. Babylonian Talmud: Gittin, fo. 85a.

<sup>6</sup> Speak only what is true of the living and what is honorable of the dead. (Non dir che il vero de vivi, e non parlar che bene de morti.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 48. (1814) An Italian proverb.

<sup>7</sup> Speak not evil of the dead. (τὸν τεθνηκότα μὴ κακολογεῖν.)

CHILON, Maxim. (c. 560 B.C.) See STOBÆUS, Florilegium, cxxv, 15; DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Chilon, i, 70. The Latin form is the well known, "De mortuis nil nisi bonum" (Of the dead nothing but good).

Speak no ill of the dead. (τὸν τεθνηκότα κακῶς ἀγορεύειν.)

SOLON. One of his laws (c. 594 B.C.) PLUTARCH, Lives, Solon, sec. 21, says, "Praise is given also to that law of Solon which forbids speaking ill of the dead. For it is piety to regard the deceased as sacred, justice to spare the absent, and good policy to rob hatred of its perpetuity."

Reproach we may the living; not the dead:

'Tis cowardice to bite the buried.

ROBERT HERRICK, No Despight to the Dead (1648)

Chilon would say . . . Speak well of the dead.

WILLIAM PENN, No Cross, No Crown. Ch. 19. (1669) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 78. (1670)

De mortuis nil nisi bonum.

BERNARD SHAW, The Doctor's Dilemma. Act iv. (1906) CHRISTIE, Evil Under the Sun, p. 137. (1941) HEBERDEN, Lobster Pick Murders, p. 73. (1941) etc., etc.

Nil nisi bonum does not hold in that circle

J. J. CONNINGTON, Four Defences, p. 119. (1940)

It is part of the code of vulgar persons not to speak ill of the dead.

VIRGINIA PERDUE, Singing Clock. Ch. 2. (1941)

De mortuis nil nisi bunkum.

GILBERT FRANKAU, Air Ministry, Room 28, p. 22. (1942) ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés, opines this parody deserves immortality.

Only good of the dear departed.

ZELDA POPKIN, No Crime for a Lady, p. 115. (1942)

1 Abuse not any that are departed; for to wrong their memories is to robbe their ghosts of their winding-sheets.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy State: Jestings. (1642)
If you slander a dead Man, you stab him in the Grave.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2789. (1732)

2 An unholy thing it is to boast over slain men.
(οὐχ δόλη καμμένοισιν ἐπ' ἀνδράσιν εὐχετάσθαι.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xxii, l. 412. (c. 850 B.C.)
Quoted by CICERO, Ad Atticum, iv, 7, where Winstedt (Loeb) translates it, "De mortuis nil nisi bonum," and by John Bright in his speech on America, 29 June, 1867.

Brave men ne'er warred with the dead and vanquished. (Nullum cum victis certamen et aethere cassis.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xi, l. 104. (19 B.C.)
I have nothing further to do with Luther. (Nihil mihi ultra cum Luthero.)

EMPEROR CHARLES V, when he entered Wittenberg, in 1547. He had been an implacable enemy of Luther, but when pressed by the Spaniards to destroy the monument erected there to Luther, forbade them to do so, adding, "I have nothing further to do with Luther; it is not my custom to war with the dead, but with those that are living and appear in arms against me."

Similar to this was the conduct of Louis XI, of France. When he was urged to deface the monument of John, Duke of Bedford, who had been Regent of France in the time of Henry VI, he refused, saying, "I will not disturb the ashes of the man whom all France could not repel when living."

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs, i, 255. (1814)

3 There ought to be little condonation of the foibles, and none at all of the moral obliquities of the dead.

JOHN MORLEY, Voltaire. Ch. 3. (1872)

4 It is fit to be silent, because we should not speak ill of the dead.

ROGER NORTH, Lives of the Norths, i, 149. (1740)

5 Why bear the dead a grudge? Envy cannot fasten on the departed. (τί καὶ νεκρῷ μνησικακοῦμεν; πρὸς τοὺς ἐκποδῶν φθόνος οὐδεὶς φύεται.)

PHILO, De Iosepho. Sec. 17. (c. A. D. 40)

6 When a man's alive you know him; when he's dead, let him rest in peace. (Dum vivit, hominem noveris; ubi mortuost, quiescat.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus, l. 164. (c. 200 B.C.)

7 Therbe fewe folkis enuios of a dede man, but therbe many that wol lye vpon them.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictees and Sayenges of the Philosophirs, fo. 17. (1477)

8 Destroy not the good name of the dead, that thy good name too may endure.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. i, Apol. 41. (c. 1258)

9 Beat not the bones of the buried.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 666. (1595)

Speak me fair in death.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, iv, 1, 275. (1597)

He doth sin that doth belie the dead.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, i, 1, 98. (1598)

10

All men are wont
To flout the prostrate dead, once they lie low.
(τοῖς θανοῦσι τοι φιλοῦσι πάντες κειμένοις ἐπεγγελάειν.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 988. (c. 409 B.C.)

How wrong it is to insult
A brave man dead, ev'n though he be thy foe.
(ἄνδρα δ' οὐ δίκαιον, εἰ θάνει βλάπτειν τὸν ἐσθλόν, οὐδ' ἐὰν μισῶν κυρῆς.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 1345. (c. 409 B.C.)

War not with the dead nor wound the fallen.
(ἀλλ' εἴκε τῷ θανόντι μὴδ' ὀλωλότα κένται.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 1029. (c. 441 B.C.)

11

The dead are always praised. (τὸν γὰρ οὐκ ὄντα ἀπας εἴωθεν ἐπαινεῖν.)

THUCYDIDES, History. Bk. ii, ch. 45, sec. 1.
(c. 400 B.C.)

Death softens all resentments.

J. C. WHITTIER, Ichabod: Note. (1852) Of Daniel Webster.

XV—Death: Rest Lightly, Earth

12

Peace to your steadfast heart, good Master
Hunt,

And may the wild Virginia earth lie lightly

Upon the pure devotion of your name.

S. V. BENÉT, Western Star, p. 55. (1943)

13

Death was not sufficient punishment, so the tomb pressed upon him.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 629.
(1817) Mohammedans believe that the tomb presses upon the body deposited therein either lightly or heavily, according to the sins or merits of the deceased.

14

May his body rest free from evil. (Corpus requiescat malis.)

ENNIUS, Thyestes. (c. 180 B.C.) As quoted by CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum, i, 44,
107. The well known, "Requiescat in pace"
(May he rest in peace), is from the Order of the Mass, and other forms are "Dona eis requiem sempiternam" (Give them eternal rest), and "Requiem aeternam dona eis, Domine" (Give them eternal rest, O Lord).

May his bones rest gently. (Molliter ossa cubent.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. vii, l. 162. (c. 10 B.C.)

Soft may the bones of Naso lie. (Nasonis molliter ossa cubent.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. iii, epis. 3, l. 76. (c. A. D. 10)

15

Green be the turf above thee,

Friend of my better days!

None knew thee but to love thee,
Nor named thee but to praise.

FITZ-GREENE HALLECK, On the Death of Joseph Rodman Drake. (1820)

1
Will not the gravestone press more lightly upon his bones? Will not violets spring up from the tomb and its thrice-blessed ashes?
(Non levior cippus nunc inprimit ossa? . . .
non e tumulo fortunataque favilla nascentur violae?)

PERSIUS, Satires. No. i, l. 37. (c. A. D. 58)
Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 16.

2
Warm summer sun, shine friendly here;
Warm western wind, blow kindly here;
Green sod above, rest light, rest light—
Good night, Annette! Sweetheart, good night.
ROBERT RICHARDSON, Requiem. (c. 1900) A variation of these lines by S. L. Clemens (Mark Twain) was inscribed upon the tombstone of his daughter Susan.

3
Heavy may the soil lie on her unholy head!
(Gravisque tellus impio capiti incubet!)
SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 1280. (c. A. D. 60) The proverbial form is, "Sit tibi terra gravis"
(May the earth be heavy upon thee!)

Under this stone, reader, survey
Dead Sir John Vanbrugh's house of clay.
Lie heavy on him, earth! for he Laid many heavy loads on thee.
ABEL EVANS, On Sir John Vanbrugh. (1726)
Vanbrugh was the architect of Blenheim
Palace and other massive piles.

Lie light upon him, earth, tho' he Laid many a heavy load on thee.
SNUFFLING, Epitaphia: Architects. A gentler rendering of the Vanbrugh epitaph.

4
Above thy untroubled bones may the earth be light! (Terraque securae sit super ossa levis.)

TIBULLUS, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 4, l. 50. (c. 19 B. C.)
May the earth weigh light upon your ashes!
(Sit humus cineri non onerosa tuo!)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 9, l. 68. (c. 13 B. C.)
Earth of Tarentum, keep gently the body of this good man. Lie not heavy upon the stranger
(κείρω μὴ βαρὺς ἕσσο τάφος.)

LOLLIUS BASSUS, Epitaph. (A. D. 20) See Greek Anthology, vii, 372. The usual form of the Greek epitaph was κούφη γῆ τοῦτον καλύπτει
(May the earth be light upon him).

Be not heavy upon her, O earth: she was not so to thee. (Nec illi, | terra, gravis fueris: non fuit illa tibi.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, epig. 34. (c. A. D. 90)
May the earth lie light upon you. (Sit tibi terra levis.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ix, epig. 29. (A. D. 93)
The simple, oft-repeated prayer for the dead, frequently used on Roman tombstones, usually indicated by the letters S. T. L. So used on the tomb of Claudia Homonoeca, and translated into French by La Fontaine, "Que la terre te soit légère. "Requiescat in pace" was also often used, not only in Italy but in England, represented by R. I. P.

Upon my buried body lie lightly, gentle earth.
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Maid's Tragedy. Act ii, sc. 1. (1611)
Lie lightly on my ashes, gentle earth.
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Bonduca. Act iv, sc.
3. (1614)
The green turf lie lightly on thy breast.
POPE, *Elegy to the Memory of an Unfortunate
Lady*. (1717)

XVI—Death—Weep Not the Dead

5
Weep gently for the dead, for he hath found rest. (Modicum plora supra mortuum.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxii, 11. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.
Find joy in life, grieve for the death of none.
Why grieve for him from whom all grief has gone?

(Laetandum est vita, nullius morte dolendum; cur etenim doleas a quo dolor ipse recessit.)
CATO (?), Disticha. Codicum Turicensis, 1.
(c. 175 B. C.)

Weep not for him who departs from life, for there is no suffering beyond death. (οὐδὲν γὰρ θανάτου δευτέρου ἐστὶ πάθος.)

PALLADAS, Epigram. (c. A. D. 425) See Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 59

6
Him who is dead and gone, honour with remembrance, not with tears. (τὸν δὲ ἀποχόμενον μνήμη τιμάτε, μὴ δάκρυσιν.)

ST. CHRYSOSTOM, Commentaries. (c. A. D. 395)

7
Shear not for me the tresses of thine hair,
Neither in sable stole array thy form.
(μὴτ' οὖν σὺ τὸν σὸν πλόκαμον ἐκτέμης τριχός, μὴτ' ἀμφὶ σάμα μέλανας ἀμπισχῇ πέπλους.)

EURIPIDES, Iphigeneia at Aulis, l. 1437. (c. 410
B. C.) Way, tr.

Let none embellish me with tears, nor make a funeral with wailing. (Nemo me lacrimis decorat nec funera fletu | faxit.)

ENNIUS, Sotas Frag. 9, Loeb. (c. 180 B. C.)
Part of his epitaph. Quoted by CICERO
Tusculanarum Disputationum, i, 15, 34

Make short work of weeping and wailing. (Lamentas fletus facere compendi.)

PACUVIUS, Hermione Frag. 173, Loeb. (c. 160 B. C.)
No chorus of loud dirges, no hysteria (μὴ συνεπιθρηνεῖν, μὴ σφύζειν.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. vii, sec
43. (c. A. D. 174)

No funeral gloom, my dears, when I am gone.
Corpse gazings, tears, black raiment, graveyard
grimness;

Think of me as withdrawn into the dimness.
Yours still, you mine; remember all the best
Of our past moments, and forget the rest;
And so, to where I wait, come gently on.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, No Funeral Gloom
(1857) Ellen Terry copied these lines on the flyleaf of her copy of The Imitation of Christ, and wrote under them, "I should wish my children, relatives and friends to observe this when I die." Her wish was carried out.

<sup>1</sup> 'Tis vain to repine, Tho' a learned Divine,
Will die at nine.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1743.

<sup>2</sup> Thou hast death in thy house, and dost bewail another's.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 378. (1640)

<sup>3</sup> Weep ye not for the dead, neither bemoan him. (Nolite flere mortuum, neque lugeatis super eum fletu.)

Old Testament: Jeremiah, xxii, 10. (c. 700 B. C.)

<sup>4</sup> No house that serves the Muse hath room for grief. (οὐ γὰρ θέμις ἐν μοισσπόλῳ οἰκίᾳ | θρήνον θίμεν.)

SAPPHO, To Her Daughter. Frag. 108. (c. 610
B. C.) Quoted by MAXIMUS OF TYRE, Dissertations, xviii, 9. He is considering the nature of Socrates' love-affairs, and remarks that, just as Socrates chided Xantippe for weeping when he was about to die, so does Sappho chide her daughter. See EDMONDS,
Lyra Graeca, i, 259.

<sup>5</sup> Let not the eyes be dry when we have lost a friend, nor let them overflow. We may weep, but we must not wail. (Nec sicci sint oculi amisso amico nec fluant. Lacrimandum est, non plorandum.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxiii, sec. 1. (a. A. D. 65)
Measure of weeping sholde be considered, after the lore that techeth us Senek. "Whan that thy freend is deed," quod he, "lat nat thyne eyen to moyste been of teres, ne to muche drye; althogh the teres come to thyne eyen, lat hem nat falle."

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus, Sec. 6. (c. 1387)
Moderate lamentation is the right of the dead, excessive grief the enemy to the living.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well Act i, sc. 1, l. 64.

<sup>6</sup> 'Tis a vain and impotent thing to bewail the dead. (ἀτέλεστά τε γὰρ καὶ ἀμάχαρα τοὺς θανόντας | κλαίειν.)

STESICHORUS, Fragments. Frag. 53. (c. 575 B. C.)

Cited by STOBÆUS, Florilegium, cxxiv, 15.
See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, ii, 61.

XVII—Death and Birth

See also Birth; Life and Death

<sup>7</sup> It is as Natural to die, as to be borne.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Death. (1597)

Dying is as natural as living.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1348. (1732)

<sup>8</sup> One cometh to an end and another is born.
(ἡ μὲν τελευτᾷ, ἕτέρα δὲ γαυνάται.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xiv, 18. (c. 190 B. C.) Quoted in *Babylonian
Talmud: Erubin*, fo. 54a.

Born from nothingness, man goes back to nothingness. (In nihilum recidere de nihilo natos.)

SENECA, De Tranquillitate Animi. Ch. 15, sec.
5. (c. A. D. 60)

<sup>9</sup> A time to be born, and a time to die. (Tempus nascendi, et tempus moriendi.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, iii, 2. (c. 250 B. C.)

There is a day to be born and a day to die.
(Shèng yu jih ssü yu shih.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No.
934. (1875)

<sup>10</sup> Our Birth made us Mortal, our Death will make us Immortal.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3818. (1732)

<sup>11</sup> A man is not completely born until he is dead.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to Miss Hubbard,
23 Feb., 1756.

<sup>12</sup> Death borders upon our birth, and our cradle stands in the grave.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Epistles. Epis. ii. (1608)

<sup>13</sup> He that is once born, once must die.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1085. (1650)

<sup>14</sup> When a child is born, the kinsfolk sit round and lament for all the tale of ills that it must endure from its birth onward, recounting all the sorrows of men; but the dead they bury with jollity and gladness, for the reason that he is quit of so many ills.

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. v, sec. 4. (c. 445 B. C.)

Describing the customs of the Trausi.

No night ever followed day, or dawn followed night, but has heard mingled with the sickly wailings [of new-born children] the lamentations which attend upon death and the black funeral.
(Nec nox ulla diem neque noctem aurora secutast quae non audierit mixtos vagitibus aegris ploratus mortis comites et funeris atri.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. ii, l. 578.

(c. B. C. 45) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 19.

When summoned hence to thine eternal sleep,
Oh, may'st thou smile while all around thee weep.

CHARLES WESLEY, On an Infant. (c. 1746)

On parent knees, a naked new-born child,
Weeping thou sat'st while all around thee smiled:
So live that, sinking to thy life's last sleep,
Calm thou may'st smile, while all around thee weep.

SIR WILLIAM JONES, On Parent Knees. (1772)

From *Enchanted Fruit: Six Hymns to Hindu
Deities*. See his Life, p. 110.

We weep when we are born, Not when we die!

T. B. ALDRICH, Metempsychosis. (c. 1880)

Why is it that we rejoice at a birth and grieve at a funeral? It is because we are not the person involved.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar.
(1893)

<sup>15</sup> Men, who are born to die. (κηριτρεφέων ἀνθρώπων.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 418. (c. 800 B. C.)

Wee are born to die, and even in our swathe cloutes death may aske his due.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 49. (1576)
For what remains but that we still should cry
For being born, or, being born, to die?

FRANCIS BACON, The World. (1624)

I, when I was born, was born to die.

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, Poems. Sonnet xxxii. (1656); HENRY KING, Poems, p. 145. (1657)

We are born, we die. (Orimur, morimur.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 312. (1869)

1 Death, like birth, is a secret of Nature. ( $\delta$  θάνατος τοιούτος, ὅλον γένεσις, φύσεως μυστήριον.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iv, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 174)

2 Hatch, match, and dispatch.

JAMES PAYN, By Proxy, Ch. 19. (1878) "First came the Births, Deaths, and Marriages."

The female mind . . . takes an interest in the 'Hatch, Match, and Dispatch' of its fellow-creatures."

3 Birth is the beacon of death. (γένους θανάτη-φύρον.)

PLATO, Republic. Bk. x, sec. 617E. (c. 375 B. C.)

4 It is a universal law that ordains birth and death. (Lex universa est quae iubet nasci et mori.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 336. (c. 43 B. C.) The Germans say, "Geboren werden und sterben ist Weltordnung" (To be born and to die is the world order.)

There is no cure for birth and death save to enjoy the interval.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Soliloquies in England: War Shrines.

5 Every minute dies a man,
Every minute one is born.

TENNYSON, The Vision of Sin. Pt. iv, st. 9. (1842) "Moment" in later editions.

6 We in like manner, as soon as we were born, began to draw to our end. (Sic et nos nati continuo desivimus esse.)

APOCRYPHA: Wisdom of Solomon, v, 13. (c. 100 B. C.)

To be born is to begin to die; the end is linked to the beginning. (Nascentes morimur; finisque ab origine pendet.)

MANILIUS, Astronomica. Bk. iv, ch. 16. (c. 25 B. C.)

The hour which first gave life is plucking it away. (Prima quae vitam dedit hora, carpit.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 874. (c. A. D. 60)

Immediately a man is born he starts toward death.

Midrash: Samuel Rabbah, 23. (c. A. D. 600)

For, from the instant we begin to live,
We do pursue and hunt the time to die.

UNKNOWN, Edward III. Act iv, sc. 4. (1596)

As soon as we are born, we begin to draw to our end.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, i, 292. (1629)

He that begins to live begins to die.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Hieroglyphics. Epig. 1. (a. 1644)
Man begins to die before he is born.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3330. (1732)
The first Breath is the beginning of Death.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4524.

Our birth is nothing but our death begun.

EDWARD YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Nt. v, l. 717 (1742) See also LIFE AND DEATH.

7 All men have one entrance into life, and the like going out. (Unus ergo introitus est omnibus ad vitam, et similis exitus.)

APOCRYPHA: Wisdom of Solomon, vii, 6. (c. 100 B. C.)

8 According to the old proverb, The child was born, and cried, Became a man, after fell sick, and died.

UNKNOWN, The London Prodigall. Act i, sc. 1. (1605) Shakespeare Apocrypha.

We are born, then cry, We know not for why,
And all our lives long Still but the same song.

NATHANIEL CROUCH, attr., Life. Appeared originally in Bristol Drollery, 1674.

We are born crying, live complaining, and die disappointed.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5427. (1732)
When we first see the Light, we weep; and when we leave it, we groan.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5621.
There are for a man only three events: birth, life, and death: he does not feel his birth, he suffers when he dies, and he forgets to live. (Il n'y a pour l'homme que trois événements, naître, vivre, et mourir: il ne sent pas naître, il souffre à mourir, et il oublie de vivre.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: De l'Homme. (1688)

That he was born, it cannot be denied,
He ate, drank, slept, talked politics, and died.

JOHN CUNNINGHAM, On an Alderman. (1766)

We come, we cry, and that is life;

We yawn, we go, and that is death.

(On entre, on crie, et c'est la vie!

On bâille, on sort, et c'est la mort!)

AUSONZ DE CHANCEL, Lines in an Album. (1836)

There is a Latin epitaph which runs, "Natus sum; esuriebam; quarebam; nunc repletus requiesco" (I was born, I was hungry. I sought for food, now, satisfied, I rest).

XVIII—Death and Youth

9 Say not, "I am too young for thee to snatch me away." Death bears away the child from its mother's breast, as well as the man who has reached old age.

ANI, Teaching. No. 15. (c. 2000 B. C.) BUDOR, Teaching of Amen-em-apt, p. 239.

10 One of the fathers saith, "That there is but this difference between the death of old men and young men; that old men go to death, and death comes to young men."

FRANCIS BACON, Apophthegms. No. 119. (1625)

Old men go to death; death comes to young men.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3719. (1732)

Of young people, many dye, of the old none escapes.

GIOVANNI TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 105. (1666)

Of young men die many; of old escape not any.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 127. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6379. (1732) The Italians have the same proverb, "De giovanni ne muojono dei molti; di vecchi ne scampa nessuno."

1
For as we well wot, that a young man may dye soone: so be we very sure that an olde man cannot liue long.

SIR THOMAS MORE, A Dialoge of Comforte. (1534)

May not young men die as well as old?

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, ii, 1, 393. (1594)

Young men may die, but old must die.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 346. (1605)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6039. (1732)

Old Men have one Foot in the Grave, and many young Men too.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3720. (1732)

Read, ye that run, the awful truth,

With which I charge my page;

A worm is in the bud of youth,

And at the root of age.

WILLIAM COWPER, Stanzas Subjoined to the Yearly Bill of Mortality of the Parish of All Saints, Northampton, A. D. 1787

2
Death is at an old mans dore, . . . and death is at a young mans backe.

JOHN DONNE, Devotions: Socios Sibi Iungier Instat. (1624)

3
The god showed by these youths how much better it is for a man to die than to live. (δεδεξέ τε ἐν τούτοις ὁ θεὸς ὡς ἀμεινον εἶη ἀνθρώπων τεθνάναι μᾶλλον ἢ ζῶειν.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. i, ch. 31. (c. 445 B. C.)

Herodotus is telling the story of Solon and Croesus, and Solon relates the history of Cleobis and Biton, two youths whom he accounted specially blest, for, after having yoked themselves in the place of two missing oxen and drawn their mother to the temple so that she might celebrate the festival of Here, and after their mother had prayed the goddess to give them the greatest boon a man may receive, they lay down to rest and never rose again. The story is the origin of the proverb.

Whom the gods love dies young. (ὃν οἱ θεοὶ φιλοῦσιν ἀποθνήσκει νέος.)

MENANDER, The Double Deceiver. Fr. 125, Kock. Loeb, p. 345. (c. 300 B. C.) STOBÆUS (Florilegium, cxx, 13) quotes this in a slightly different form, νέος δ' ἀπόλλυθ', θνητα φίλε θεός, and credits it to Hypsæus. See also DIO CHRYSOSTOM, Discourses. No. 28.

The fact that those who excel in virtues pass on to their fate while young, as though beloved of the gods, I have already called to your attention.

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Consolatio ad Apollonium, 119E. (c. A. D. 95)

Whom the gods love dies young, while he has his strength and senses and wits. (Quem di diligunt | adulescens moritur, dum valet sentit sapit.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 816. (190 B. C.)

But among all others, saith the Greek poet, Menander, most happy are they, and best beloved of God, that die when they are young.

WILLIAM HUGH, The Troubled Man's Medicine. Pt. ii, p. 46. (1546)

Whom God loueth best, those he taketh soonest.

WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique, p. 73. (1553)

Those that God loves, do not live long.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1092. (1650)

"Whom the gods love dies young," was said of yore.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 12. (1821)

I was meant to die young, and the gods do not love me.

R. L. STEVENSON, Letters, v, 125. (1894)

Whom the gods love die young, no matter how long they live.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams. (1907) The Philistine, vol. xxiv, cover.

It has never been satisfactorily determined whether the saying about the darlings of the gods dying young means young in years or young in heart.

E. V. LUCAS, Advisory Ben. Sec. 10, p. 48. (1923)

4
The funerals of old and young mingle thickly together. (Mixta senum ac iuvenum densentur funera.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, No. xxviii, l. 19. (23 B. C.)

The Germans say, "Der Tod nimmt alt und jung" (Death takes old and young).

Many old camels carry the hides of young ones to market.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 52a. (c. 450) A similar Hebrew saying is: "Many young asses die and their skins serve as trappings for their mothers." (Leviticus Rabbah, xx, 10; Genesis Rabbah, lxxvii, 8.)

5
He that is wise attains not to old age.

LANGDON, Babylonian Proverbs: Babylonian Tablet K 4347. (c. 2300 B. C.)

It is a matter of common observation that those who ripen early die young. (Celerius occidere festinatam maturitatem.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. vi, sec. 10. (c. A. D. 80)

Precocious youth is a sign of premature death (Senilem iuventam praematurae mortis esse signum.)

PLINY, Naturalis Historia. Bk. vii, sec. 51. (A. D. 77)

So wise so young, they say, do never live long.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iii, 1, 79. (1595)

A little too wise they say do ne'er live long.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, The Phoenix. Act i, sc. 1. (1607)

1 Weep not for Callimachus: if few
The days I lived, few were my sorrows too.
(ἀλλὰ με μὴ κλαίεις· καὶ γὰρ βίότοιο μετέσχον παύρου, καὶ παύρων τῶν βίότοιο κακῶν.)

LUCIAN, Epigram. (c. A. D. 170) See Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, epig. 308.

2 Death spareth neither ye golden locks nor the hoary head.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 184 (1579)

3 Who dies in youth and vigour, dies the best.
POPE, tr., Iliad. Bk. xxii, l. 100. (1715)

4 Death comes early to all, for few are the years of the longest-lived compared to eternity.

PHILO, De Iosepho. Sec. 24. (c. A. D. 40)

5 The good die first,
And they whose hearts are dry as summer dust
Burn to the socket.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. i, l. 500.
(1814)

The good die young, so men have sadly sung
Who do not know the happier reason why
Is never that they die while they are young,
But that the good are young until they die.
ARTHUR GUITERMAN, Thus Spake Theodore Roosevelt. c. 1924.

6 Also sone deyeth the yong as the olde.

UNKNOWN, Gesta Romanorum (E.E.T.S.), p. 364. (c. 1440)

As soon goeth to market the lamb's fell as the sheep's.

UNKNOWN, Calisto and Meliboea. (c. 1520) See
HAZLITT, Old Plays, i, 78.

As soon goth the yonge lamskyn to the market
As th'olde yewes.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. ii. ch. 4.
(1546)

As soone comes the lambeskin to the market, as the old sheeps.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 8. (c. 1595)

As soon goes the young sheep to the pot as the old.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington. Act ii, sc. 1. (1599)

As soon goes the young lamb to the spit as the old wether. (Tan presto se va el cordero como el carnero.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1615)
Motteux, tr.

There is no trusting in the Raw-bones, I mean
Death, that devours lambs as well as sheep.

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Bk. ii. ch. 20. (1620)

As soon dies the young lambe as the old sheep.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina (T.T.), p. 86.
(1631) The French say, "Aussitôt meurt veau que vache" (As soon dies the calf as the cow); the Italians, "Così tosto muore il capretto come capra" (As soon dies the kid as the goat).

Death devours Lambs, as well as Sheep.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1245. (1732)

As soon comes the lamb's skin to market as the suld tip's.

WALTER SCOTT, The Bride of Lammermoor. Ch. 4. (1819)

XIX—Death: Count No Man Happy

7 Call me not olive, till thou seest me gathered.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 303.
(1640) TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, ch. 4, says, "This is a Spanish proverb, being nearly parallel to our own 'Praise a fair day at night.'"

Praise not the Ford, till you are safe over.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3920. (1732)

8 Our love is like our life;
There's no man blest in either till his end.

SHACKERLEY MARMION, A Fine Companion.
Act i, sc. 1. (1632)

9 Give praise to a day at evening, to a woman on her pyre, to a weapon which is tried, to a maid at wedlock, to ice when it is crossed, to ale that is drunk.

SAEMUND (?), The Poetic Edda: Hovamol.
St. 81. (c. 1100) An elaboration of the Latin proverb, "Laus in fine cantatur, et vespere laudatur dies" (Praise should be sung at the end, and the day should be praised in the evening). There are many variations. A medieval monkish jingle runs, "Vespere lux lau-datur, hospes mane probatur" (The day is praised in the evening, the host in the morning). The Germans say, "Schöne Tage soll man abends loben, schöne Frauen morgens" (Praise beautiful days in the evening, beautiful women in the morning), and they also have the regular proverb, "Schönen Tag soll man loben, wann es Nacht ist." The French say, "Attendez à la nuit pour dire que le jour a été beau" (Wait till night before saying the day has been fine); the Italians, "La vita il fine, e l' di loda sera" (The end commends the life, the evening the day), while the Spanish form is, "Al fin loa la vida, y a noche loa el dia."

At euen prayse the fayre day.

FÖRSTER, ed., Douce MS, 52. (c. 1350)

The faire day men do praise at eue.

JOHN LYDGATE, Fall of Princes. Bk. iv, l. 2024.
(c. 1440)

We ought not preyse to moche the daye tyl euen be come.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Reynart the Foxe, xxix,
75. (1481)

Praise a fair day at night.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 330. (1605)

Praise day at night, and life at end.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 102. (1640)

Ruse [Praise] the fair day at night.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 282. (1721)

Praise not the Day before Night.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3919. (1732)

Praise the day when it is over.

WRIGHT, Essays on the Middle Ages, i, 148.
(1846)

Don't praise the day until the evening.

LEE THAYER, Guilty, p. 232. (1940)

1

We must wait till he be dead, and call him not yet-blest, but fortunate. (πρὶν δ' ἂν τελευτήσῃ, ἀλλ' εὐτυχία.)

SOLON, to Croesus, who had asked him whether the philosopher did not consider him blest. (c. 575 B.C.) Or "ὄρα τέλος μακροῦ βίου" (I bid all men watch life's end), which Ausonius puts into Latin, "Spectare vitae iubeo cunctos terminum." (Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 87.) See also under END. To Croesus' question Solon had answered, "He who is very rich is not more blest than he who has but enough for the day, unless fortune so attends him that he ends his life well. . . . There are many to whom heaven has given a vision of blessedness, and yet afterwards brought them to utter ruin"; but Croesus paid no attention to this warning till he was conquered by Cyrus and lay bound upon the pyre, waiting for the torch to be applied. Then he remembered Solon, and called his name three times. Cyrus heard him, and sent to inquire the reason for the cry. When Croesus told the story, Cyrus had him brought down from the pyre, and kept him afterwards by his side as a trusted counselor. "Thus," adds Plutarch, "Solon saved one king and instructed another by a single saying." See PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Sec. 27. Also HERODOTUS, History, i, 30ff., where the story is told in great detail. The heading of ch. 18, bk. i, of MONTAIGNE'S Essays is, "Qu'il ne fault juger de nostre heur qu'aprez la mort" (That we cannot judge of our luck until after death), and he also retells Plutarch's story of Croesus and Solon at some length.

2

Only when a man's life comes to its end in prosperity dare we pronounce him happy. (ὀλβίους δὲ χρὴ βίον τελευτήσαντ' ἐν εὐεστοῖς ἰλῆν.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 928. (458 B.C.)

Never mayst thou call any mortal blest,
Or ever thou hast seen his dying day,
Seen how he passed therethrough and came on death.

(χρὴ δ' οὐ ποτ' εἰπεῖν οὐδέν' ὀλβιον βροτῶν, πρὶν ἂν θανόντος τὴν τελευταίαν ἰδῇς ὅπως περάσας ἡμέραν ἔξει κάτω.)

EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 100. (c. 430 B.C.)

Way, tr.

Count no man happy until he die. (μηδένα νομίζετ' εὐτυχεῖν πρὶν ἂν θάῃ.)

EURIPIDES, The Daughters of Troy, l. 510. (c. 415 B.C.)

Therefore wait to see life's ending ere thou count one mortal blest;

Wait till, free from pain and sorrow, he has gained his final rest.

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus the King, l. 1528. (c. 409 B.C.)

There is an old world saying, current still,
"Of no man canst thou judge the destiny

To call it good or evil, till he die."

SOPHOCLES, Trachiniae, l. 1. (c. 409 B.C.)

Praise no man much until thou see his death. (μήπω μέγ' εἴπῃς πρὶν τελευτήσαντ' ἰδῇς.)

SOPHOCLES, Fragment. No. 520. (c. 400 B.C.)

Call no man happy before his death, for by his end shall a man be known. (πρὸ τελευτῆς μὴ μακάριζε μηδένα, καὶ ἐν τέκνοις αὐτοῦ γνωσθήσεται ἀνὴρ.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xi, 28. (c. 190 B.C.) Also Seadyah, p. 178, l. 6.

The Vulgate version is, "Ante mortem ne laudes hominem quemquam." No maxim was more widely quoted among the Greeks and its occurrence in Ecclesiasticus is an interesting illustration of the cosmopolitan aspect of Hebrew Wisdom.

None must be counted happy till his death, till his last funeral rites are paid. (Dicique beatus ante obitum nemo supremae funera debet.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. iii, l. 136. (A.D. 7)

Montaigne quotes this, bk. i, ch. 18, and the French edition gives the translation of Saint-Ange: "Nul homme certain d'un bonheur sans retour, Ne peut se croire heureux avant son dernier jour" (No man is certain of good-fortune that never wanes, nor can he think himself happy before his last day).

He [Solon] considered that no one ought to be called happy as long as he was alive. (Neminem, dum adhuc viveret, beatum dici debere arbitrabatur.)

VALERIUS MAXIMUS, Facta et Dicta Memorabilia. Bk. vii, sec. 2. (c. A.D. 15)

Croesus, who was bidden by the wise and eloquent Solon to look to the last lap of a long life. (Respiciere ad longae iussit spatia ultima vitae.)

JUVENAL, Satires. No. x, l. 275. (c. A.D. 120)

I call a life happy only after its fated course is run. (Tunc beatum dico vitam, cum peracta fata sunt.)

AUSONIUS (?), Septem Sapientum Sententiae, l. 29. (c. A.D. 380)

Before the day of death no one stands out as praiseworthy. (Ante diem mortis nullus laudabilis exstat.)

COLUMBANUS, Carmen Monostichon, l. 22. (c. A.D. 600)

Marke the ende of lyfe. (Finem vitae specta.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, Chil. i, cent. iii, No. 37. (1508) Taverner, tr., fo. 53. (1550) Taverner adds, "This prouerbe also is confirmed by our englyshe prouerbe, whiche sayethe: At euen men shulde the fayre daye preisen." See also under END.

Not before his death can any man be called happy. (Nul avant mourir ne peult estre dict heureux.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 3. (1580) Quoted as "le mot de Solon." Montaigne's comment is, "Man is never happy, then, since he never is so until after he is no more" (Jamais homme n'est donc heureux, puisqu'il ne l'est qu'après qu'il n'est plus). Florio renders it, "We must expect of man the latest day, Nor e'er he die, he's happy, can we say."

No one is happy before his death. (Nemo est ante obitum beatus.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 124. (1778)

Don't call me happy until you have seen me buried. (No me llames bien hadada, | Hasta que me veas enterrada.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 257. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

Let no one till his death

Be called unhappy. Measure not the work Until the day's out and the labour done.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. v, l. 76. (1856)

Long since Solon said: Before saying of a man that he is happy or wise, one must await his death. (Il y a longtemps que Solon l'a dit: Avant de prononcer d'un homme qu'il est heureux ou sage, il faut attendre sa mort.)

C. A. DE SAINTE-BEUVE, Les Cahiers, p. 78. (a. 1869)

Praise no man until he is dead.

R. L. STEVENSON, The Hanging Judge. Act iii, sc. 6. (1887)

Count no man successful until he is dead.

ALLAN UPDEGRAFF, The Hills Look Down, p. 291. (1941)

DEBATE

See also Argument

1 Debate destroys despatch.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, Of Prudence, l. 63. (c. 1650)

2 The noble Lord is the Rupert of parliamentary discussion.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 24 April, 1844. Disraeli was referring to Edward George Geoffrey Smith, Lord Stanley, who afterwards became the fourteenth Earl of Derby. "Rupert" was Prince Rupert of Bavaria, nephew of Charles I, who, in 1642, had been appointed by Charles general of the horse. He had fought brilliantly against the Parliamentarians until the battle of Naseby, June, 1645, where his rash pursuit of part of Cromwell's army resulted in a royalist defeat. As Disraeli pointed out, "His charge is resistless; but when he returns from the pursuit, he always finds his camp in possession of the enemy."

The brilliant chief, irregularly great, Frank, haughty, rash,—the Rupert of Debate.

LORD LYTON, The New Timon. Pt. i, sch 6, l. 144. (1846)

3 The daughter of debate, That discord aye doth sow.

QUEEN ELIZABETH, A Sonnet. (c. 1585) The reference is to Mary Queen of Scots. See PERCY, Reliques. Ser. ii, bk. ii, No. 15.

It is better to debate a question without settling it, than to settle it without debate. (Il vaut mieux remuer une question sans la décider que la décider sans la remuer.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 115. (1810)

DEBT

DEBT

See also Borrowing

4 Better old debts than old grudges.

ALDRITH, KING OF NORTHUMBRIA (attr.), Maxim. (685) Attributed also to Fithal, law-giver to King Cormac MacArt. (c. 250)

Old debts are better than old sores.

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 274. (1721)

5 I have lifted sand and carried salt, and there is nothing which is heavier than debt.

AHIKAR, Teachings. Col. viii, l. 111. (c. 550 B.C.)

6 If thou find a large debt against a poor man, make it into three parts; forgive two. let one remain; thou wilt find it a path of life.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. xvi, l. 5. (c. 700 B.C.) Griffith, tr.

7 From thy debtor accept even bran in payment. Babylonian Talmud: Baba Kamma, fo. 46b. (c. 450) Repeated in Baba Metzia, 118a; Baba Bathra, 92b.

I will holde mee contented where the Haruest is harde, too take Otes of yl debtors in parte of payment.

STEPHEN GOSSON, The Schoole of Abuse, p. 63. (1579)

Of ill debtours, men take eattes [oats].

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 84. (c. 1595) It is wise to take what one can get in settlement of a bad debt.

Take from the bad debtor were it but a stone.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 235. (1817) Iron or brass, let nothing pass.

(Shih t'ung shih t'ieh, yao li yi p'ieh.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 252. (1875) Take whatever can be got out of a debt. The Danes say, "Man maa tage suur Sild af onde Geldinger" (You may take spoilt herrings of bad debtors).

8 Be not made a beggar by banqueting upon borrowing.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xviii, 33. (c. 190 B.C.)

Sleep without supping, and wake without owing.

GEORGE HERRERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 98. (1640) FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1757.

'Tis wholesomer to go to bed without supper, then rise in debt.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Span.-Eng., p. 6. (1659)

Better go to bed supperless than rise in debt.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 5. (1678)

Rather go to bed supperless than run in debt for a breakfast.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739. "An honest darn is better than a debt." The Italians say, "Better be without food than without honor."

9 A man in debt is stoned every year.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 294. (1855) A variant is, "A man in debt is caught in a net."

- <sup>1</sup> Debts cause both the cheeks to become black.
J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 127.
(1817) In Egypt, black is the color of shame.
The father says to his son, "Do not blacken my face."
Shame fades in the morning, but debts remain from day to day.
GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 376.
(1938) A Chinese proverb.
- <sup>2</sup> He who pays his debts increases his capital.
(Chi paga debito, fa capitale.)
CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes,
p. 186. (1856) An Italian proverb. The French say, "Qui s'acquitte, s'enrichit," the Spaniards, "Quien paga deudas, haze caudal."
- <sup>3</sup> If you owe a dog anything, call him "Sir."
GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 518.
(1938) An Egyptian proverb.
- <sup>4</sup> Suffyceth me, as I were deed,
That no wight have my name in honde.
I woot my-self best how I stonde.
CHAUCER (?), The Hous of Fame, Bk. iii, l.
786. (1383)
Pay what you owe, and you'll know what is your own.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739.
Pay what you owe, and what you're worth you'll know.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1750
- <sup>5</sup> A debt and gratitude are different things.
(Quamquam dissimilis est pecuniae debitio et gratiæ.)
CICERO, Pro Plancio. Ch. 28, sec. 68. (54 B.C.)
- <sup>6</sup> I owe you one.
GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, The Poor Gentleman. Act i, sc. 2. (1802)
- <sup>7</sup> A pound of care pays not a dram of debt.
THOMAS DEKKER, The Shoemaker's Holiday.
Act iii, sc. 5. (1600)
A hundred load of thought will not pay one of debts.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 416. (1640)
A pound of care will not pay an ounce of debt.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 76. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 361. (1732) The Italians say, "Cento carri di pensieri non pagaranno un' oncia di debito" (A hundred cart loads of anxiety will not pay an ounce of debt), or "Cent' ore di malinconia non pagano un quattrino di debito" (A hundred hours of worry will not pay a farthingsworth of debt).
- <sup>8</sup> At the end of every seven years thou shalt make a release. . . . It is called the Lord's release. (Quia annus remissionis est Domini.)
Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xv, 1, 2. (c. 650
B.C.)
- <sup>9</sup> Debt is a prolific mother of folly and of crime.
BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Henrietta Temple. Bk. ii,
ch. 1. (1836)
Debts are the sour sediment in the lemonade of human existence.
HERMANN SUDERMANN, The Song of Songs. Ch.
10. (1908)
- <sup>10</sup> We went across, but they won't come across.
A. VICTOR (Vic) DONAHEY, U.S. Senator from Ohio, referring to American participation in the World War and the refusal of the Allies to pay their debts to the United States as the reason for his vote against American adherence to the World Court, 30 Jan., 1935.
To "come across" in American slang is to pay up.
- <sup>11</sup> In owing money, a great king. ('Chien 'chien ta wang.)
DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 189 (1872)
- <sup>12</sup> Debt is a preceptor whose lessons are needed most by those who suffer from it most.
R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Nature. (1836)
- <sup>13</sup> Blessed is he that oweth nought. (εὐδαίμων ὁ μηδὲν ὀφείλων.)
ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. vii, No. 98.
(1508) Taverner, tr., fo. 46. The Latin is,
"Felix, qui nihil debet."
- <sup>14</sup> Out of debt, out of deadly sinne.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 330. (1605)
Out of debt and deadly danger.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 82. (1639)
How bold, confident, merry, lively, and ever in humour are Moneyed Men. For being out of debt, they are out of danger.
HENRY PEACHEM, The Worth of a Penny. (1641)
Out of debt out of danger.
NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Debt. (1730)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3832. (1732)
A family out of debt is out of danger.
P. PERCIVAL, Tamil Proverbs. No. 1126. (1842)
- <sup>15</sup> He may whet his knife on the threshold of the Fleet.
THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, ii, 348. (1662) The Fleet prison: said of persons who are not in debt, and therefore not in danger of arrest.
He who owes nothing fears not the sheriff's officers. (Qui nihil debet, lictores non timet.)
HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 361. (1869)
- <sup>16</sup> A Poor Man's Debt makes a great Noise.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 355. (1732)
The Spanish form is, "Debts are like children: the smaller they are the more noise they make."
A Thrush paid for is better than a Turkey owed for.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 439.
Confess Debt, and beg Days.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1139.

Debt is a heavy Burden to an honest Mind, but thievish Borrowers make light of it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1256.

1 Debt is an evil conscience.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1257. A Spanish proverb says, "Let him that sleeps too sound borrow the debtor's pillow."

2 Debt is the worst Poverty.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1258. (1732) Too often debt is the worst kind of poverty because it breeds deceit.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 19. (1880)

3 He that has an Hundred and One, and owes an Hundred and Two, the Lord have Mercy upon him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2132.

He who owes an Hundred, and has an Hundred and One, fears no Body.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2397.

He who oweth, is all [in] the Wrong.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2398.

Living upon Trust, is the way to pay double.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3265.

4 Sins and Debts are always more than we think them to be.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4179. (1732)

BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 294. (1855)

The Persians say, "Four things every one has more of than he knows—sins, debts, years, and foes."

5 Till Davie Debet in thy parler stand.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Posies. (1575) "Davie Debet," debt personified, a bailiff or constable.

Davie debte stoode watching with a mace at the doore.

MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. Q3. (1583)

6 A National debt, if it is not excessive, will be to us a national blessing.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON, Letter to Robert Morris, 30 April, 1813.

We heard much about "a public debt being a public blessing."

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to John W. Epps, 6 Nov., 1813.

The doctrine that a national debt is a national blessing.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Second Speech on Founte's Resolution, 26 Jan., 1830.

If a national debt is considered a national blessing then we can get on by borrowing. But as I believe it is a national curse, my vow shall be to pay the national debt.

ANDREW JACKSON, Letter, July 4, 1824.

7 He that gets out of debt, grows rich.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 10. (1640) The French say, "Il est assez riche qui ne doit rien" (He is rich enough who owes nothing)

As he who has health is young, so he that owes nothing is rich.

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs, i, 77. (1814)

8 He that owes nothing, if he makes not mouths at us, is courteous.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 364. (1640)

9 Speak not of my debts, unless you mean to pay them.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 996. (1640)

Don't talk of my debts unless you mean to pay them.

CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 88. (1875) Never speak of my debts unless you mean to pay them.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 57. (1902)

10 They [the Persians] hold lying to be the foulest of all, and next to that debt, for which they have many other reasons, but this in especial, that the debtor must needs (so they say) speak some falsehood.

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. i, sec. 138. (c. 445 B.C.)

The Persians regard lying as the second among wrong-doings, and being in debt as the first.

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Borrowing. Sec. 829C

(A.D. 97) Differing from Herodotus.

The Persians erred not when they said, That the second vice was to lie: the first being that of owing money. (Ne erroient les Perses, estimens le second vice estre mentir: le premier estre de buoir.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 4. (1545)

Debts and lies are generally mixed together. (Debtes et mensonges sont ordinairement ensemble ralliés.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1545)

Debtors are liars.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 171. (1640)

The second vice is Lying, the first being that of owing Money.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4753. (1732)

Lying rides upon debt's back.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1741. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 447. (1855)

The second vice is lying, the first is running in debt.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1748

Debtors can hardly help being liars.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 12. (1869) "First comes owing, then lying."

11 I am poor in my own money. (Meo sum pauper in aere.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 12. (20 B.C.) Meaning "I am not in debt."

12 Creditors have better memories than debtors.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Span.-Eng., p. 8. (1659) FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1736

SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 18 (1880)

13 Debt is better than death.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1659)

- 1 A mortgage casts a shadow on the sunniest field.
R. G. INGERSOLL, Farming in Illinois. (1877)
- 2 Tride the use of his legs to out-run the constable.
WILLIAM KEMP, Nine Daies Wonder, p. 15. (1600)
Thou hast Outrun the constable at last.
SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, i, iii, 1367. (1663)
To outrun the constable. To spend more than one's allowance or income.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 169. (1670)
How far have you out-run the constable? I told him that the debt amounted to eleven pounds.
SMOLLETT, Roderick Random. Ch. 23. (1748)
"He run a match agin the constable, and vun it" [said Sam].—"In other words, I suppose," said Mr. Pickwick, "he got into debt."
DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 41. (1837)
Outran the constable; lived fast, you know.
J. R. PLANCHÉ, Extravaganzas, ii, 197. (1843)
- 3 The Commonwealth . . . would run over head and ears in debt.
THOMAS MANLEY, tr., De Rebus Belgicis, p. 875. (1665)
He is in debt over head and ears.
WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 434. (1681)
You are over head and ears in debt.
ANTHONY TROLLOPE, The Last Chronicle of Barset. Bk. ii, ch. 53. (1867)
He was head over ears in debt when he married.
CAROLINE FOTHERGILL, The Enthusiast, ii, 95. (1887)
- 4 If you ply a large boat you will owe a large debt.
A. E. MOULÉ, Proverbs from Ningpo. (1872)
- 5 Better a loss at sea than a bad debt at land.
ROGER NORTH, Lives of the Norths, ii, 50. (1742)
Quoted as "The merchants have a proverb."
- 6 May his debts torment him. (Torqueat hunc aeris mutua summa sui.)
OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 562. (c. 1 B. C.)
- 7 Debt is bitter slavery to an honorable man. (Alienum aes homini ingenuo acerba est servitus.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 11. (c. 43 B. C.) A variant of the Greek proverb, τὰ δάεια δούλους τοὺς ἐλευθέρους ποιεῖ (Debts make freemen slaves).
The debtor is a slave to the creditor.
Babylonian Talmud: Baba Bathra, fo. 171a. (c. 450)
A Man in debt is so far a slave.
EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Wealth. (1860)
Under another's eaves one must bow the head. (Ta tē land yen hsia, shui kan ti t'ou.)
WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2568. (1875)
- 8 The debtor loves not his creditor's threshold. (Qui debet limen creditoris non amat.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 585. (c. 43 B. C.)
We ought always to keep in readiness the gifts that have been granted us, and, when called upon, to restore them without complaint. It is a mean debtor that reviles his creditor. (Pessimi debitoris est creditori facere convicium.)
SENECA, Ad Marciam de Consolatione. Ch. 10, sec. 2. (c. A. D. 40)
- 9 He who oweth is all in the wrong.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 15. (1678)
Out of door out of debt.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 354. "Spoken of one that pays not when once gone."
- 10 I pay debts of honour—not honourable debts.
FREDERIC REYNOLDS, The Will. Act iii, sc. 2. (1797)
- 11 Owe no man any thing, but to love one another. (μηδενι μηδεν ὀφείλετε, εἰ μὴ τὸ ἀλλήλους ἐγαπᾶν.)
New Testament: Romans, xiii, 8. (c. A. D. 57)
The Vulgate is, "Nemini quidquam debeatis: nisi ut invicem diligatis."
You shall owe to none (saith the Holy Apostle) any thing save love and mutual benevolence. (Rien, dict le saint Enuoyé, à personne ne doibuez, fors amour & dilection mutuelle.)
RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 4. (1545)
- 12 It is easier to put off the stomach with a promise of food, than to put off the butcher with a promise of payment.
SADI, Gulistan. Ch. iii, Apologue 10. (c. 1258)
- 13 He paid the debt of nature. (Naturae concessit.)
SALLUST, Bellum Iugurthum, xiv, 15. (c. 40 B. C.) See under DEATH: A DEBT.
- 14 Unable to pay, he resembles a tortoise. (Pi tē hsiang wu kuei.)
WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 265. (1875) That is, he draws in his head and hides himself.
If you owe a man anything, there is nothing like seeing him often. (Ch'ien chai pu ju ch'in chien mien.)
SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 274. By seeing him often, keep him in good humor. His lice are too many to itch; his debts are too many to trouble him. (Shih to pu yang; chai to pu ch'ou.)
SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2561.
- 15 A trifling debt makes a man your debtor, a large one makes him your enemy. (Leve aes alienum debitorem facit, grave inimicum.)
SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xix, sec. 12. (c. A. D. 65) See also under BENEFIT.
A little Debt makes a Debtor, but a great one an Enemy.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 245. (1732)

DECEIT

See also Cheating, Cunning, Dissimulation, Hypocrisy, Treachery

<sup>1</sup> From righteous deception God standeth not aloof. (ἀνάρης δικαίως οὐκ ἀποστρεφεί θεός.)

AESCHYLUS, Fragmenta Incerta. No. 162, Smyth. (c. 458 B.C.) STOBÆUS, Anthology, iii, 3, 13.

There are times when God honoreth the season for untruth. (ψευδῶν δὲ καιρὸν ἔσθ' ὅπου τιμᾷ θεός.)

AESCHYLUS, Fragmenta Incerta. No. 163, Smyth. (c. 458 B.C.) Anonymous in ORELLI, Opuscula Graecorum, etc., ii, 222.

<sup>2</sup> Out of the same mouth you blow hot and cold. AÆSOP, Fables: The Man and the Satyr. (c. 570 B.C.) See under HOT.

<sup>3</sup> I am taken by these things, but they do not take me in. (ἔχω, οὐκ ἔχουμαι.)

ARISTIPPUS OF CYRENE, Apothegm. (c. 400 B.C.) See SMITH, Unforgotten Years, p. 163. The Latin is, "Habeo, non habeor."

<sup>4</sup> It is forbidden to deceive even a heathen. Babylonian Talmud: Chullin, fo. 94b. (c. 450)

<sup>5</sup> Children are to be deceived with comforts, and men with oaths.

FRANCIS BACON, Of the Advancement of Learning, ii, xxiii, 246. (1605) Bacon quotes this as a "principle of Lysander," and calls it "evil and corrupt."

<sup>6</sup> In three things a man may be easily deceiv'd, viz. In a man till known, a tree till down, and the day till done.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Three. (1736)

<sup>7</sup> The deceits of the world, the flesh, and the devil.

Book of Common Prayer: Litany. (c. 1541)

<sup>8</sup> The people wish to be deceived; let them be deceived. (Populus vult decipi; decipiatur.)

CARDINAL CARLO CARAFFA, Legate of Pope Paul IV, referring to the Parisians. (c. 1560) See DE THOU, Historia Sui Temporis, i, 17. An adaptation of the old Latin proverb, "Qui vult decipi, decipiatur" (Let him who wishes to be deceived, be deceived). The German proverb, "Die Welt will betrogen sein" also long antedates Caraffa.

If the world will be gulled, let it be gulled.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy, iii, iv, 1, 2. (1621)

The world wishes to be deceived. (Mundus vult decipi.)

SEBASTIAN FRANCK, Paradoxi Ducenta Octoginta. No. 238. (c. 1625)

A certain portion of the human race Has certainly a taste for being diddled.

THOMAS HOOD, A Black Job. (c. 1825)

<sup>9</sup> Dost thou hate to be deceived? Do not deceive another.

ST. JOHN CHRYSOSTOM, Homily, xiii. (c. 383)

<sup>10</sup> Frivolity is a matter of birth, deceit of education. (Ingenita levitas et erudita vanitas.)

CICERO, Pro Flacco. Sec. 6. (58 B.C.) Quoted by ST. JEROME, Galatians, i, 3.

<sup>11</sup> Deceit is the game only of small minds, and so is properly the pursuit of women. (La fourbe n'est le jeu que des petites âmes, | Et c'est là proprement le partage des femmes.)

PIERRE CORNEILLE, Nicomède. Act iv, sc. 2. (1651)

<sup>12</sup> With art and with deceit, halfe the yeere we liue: with deceit and with art, we liue the other part.

JOHN FLORIO, Første Fruites, fo. 28. (1578)

<sup>13</sup> None are deceived, but they that confide.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1740.

Men take more pains to mask than mend.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1757.

<sup>14</sup> Deceit is in Haste; but Honesty can stay a fair Leisure.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1259. (1732)

Fraud and deceit are always in haste.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 358. (1855)

<sup>15</sup> For he may best, in every cost, Disceyve, that men tristen most.

(Car je voi bien e sai de fi Que en meilleur garde pert l'en.)

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose, l.

3614. (c. 1240) CHAUCER (?), tr., l. 3931.

But who may bet bigylen, if him liste, Than he on whom men weneth best to triste?

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. v, l.

1266. (c. 1380)

We are easily deceived by those whom we love. (On est aisément dupé par ce qu'on aime.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Tartuffe. Act iv, sc. 3. (1664)

Deceiving those that trust us, is more than a Sin.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1260. (1732)

<sup>16</sup> He who has once used deception will deceive again. (Aliquando qui lusit, iterum ludet.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 16. (1869)

<sup>17</sup> I fear fals measures, or els I were a chylde, For they that thinke none yll, are soonest begylde.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

<sup>18</sup> Hateful as the gates of Hell is the man that hideth one thing in his mind and sayeth another. (ἐχθρός γὰρ μοι κείνος ὁμῶς Ἀΐδαο πύλῃσιν | ὅς χ' ἕτερον μὲν κεύθῃ ἐνὶ φρεσίν, ἄλλο δὲ εἶπῃ.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 312. (c. 850 B.C.) Pope renders this, "Who dares think one thing and another tell, My heart detests him as the gates of hell."

Hateful to my eyes as the gates of Hades is that man who, yielding to stress of poverty, tells a deceitful tale.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xiv, l. 156. (c. 850 B.C.) Words of his tongue can no man trust, For in his heart there is deceitful thought. (πιστὸν γὰρ οὐδὲν γλώσσα διὰ στόματος λαλεῖ διχόθυμον ἔχουσα κραδίη νόημα.)

PIITACUS, Song. (c. 600 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pittacus, i, 78.

My tongue may swear, but I act as I please. (Meus arbitratust, lingua quod iuret mea.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 1355. (c. 200 B.C.) The soft speeches of the wicked are full of deceit. (Habent insidias hominis blanditiae mali.)

PHAE DRUS, Fables. (c. 25 B.C.) As quoted by HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 146.

A man hideth one thing in his heart and speaketh another. (ἀνὴρ ὃ ἄλλα κέκευθεν ἐνὶ φρεσὶν ἄλλα δὲ βᾶσει.)

THEMESTIUS, *Oration*s, xxi, 258. (c. A.D. 360) Quoting an unknown poet.

I hate the man who is double-minded, kind in words but a foe in his conduct. (μισῶ τὸν ἀνδρα τὸν διπλοῦν πεφυκότα, | χρηστὸν λόγισι, πολέμιον δὲ τοῖς τρόποις.)

PALLADAS, Epigram. (c. A.D. 425) See Greek Anthology, x, 95.

Who paints me before, blackens me behind. (Chi dinanzi mi pingé, di dietro mi tinge.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 84. (1852) An Italian proverb.

LOOK ONE WAY, ROW ANOTHER, see under LOOK.

There is no deceit in a brimmer.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 5. (1659) SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

There's no deceit in a bag pudding.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 193. (1678) Upon the silver mugs of the town of Liskerd it is written, Qui fallit in poculis, fallit in omnibus, there is no deceit in a bumper.

ROBERT HEATH, History of the Islands of Scilly, p. 443. (1750)

My brethren have dealt deceitfully as a brook. (Fratres mei praeterierunt me, sicut torrens.)

Old Testament: Job, vi, 15. (c. 350 B.C.)

He that deceives me once, shame fall him; if he deceives me twice, shame fall me.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 134. (1720) If you deceive me a second time, 'tis my fault.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

One never deceives for a good purpose. (On ne trompe point en bien.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Pt. xi. (1688)

To wish to deceive heaven is the greatest folly in the world. (Vouloir tromper le ciel, c'est folie à la terre.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 19. (1668) You may deceive a man; deceive a god, who can? (Man tē kuo jén, man pu kuo shén.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2348. (1875)

Our distrust justifies deceit in another. (Notre défiance justifie la tromperie d'autrui.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 86. (1665) Human society would not last long if men were not deceived by one another. (Les hommes ne vivraient pas longtemps en société, s'ils n'étaient les dupes les uns des autres.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 87. The surest way to be deceived is to think one's self more clever than others. (Le vrai moyen d'être trompé, c'est de se croire plus fin que les autres.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 127.

One who deceives will always find those who allow themselves to be deceived. (Colui che inganna troverrà sempre chi si lascerà ingannare.)

MACHIAVELLI, Il Principe. Ch. 18. (1513)

I posted myself on the highroad, where the gay deceiver was sure to be intercepted.

B. H. MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas. Bk. vii.ch.1. (1809)

Safe and frequented is the path of deceit under the name of friendship. (Tuta frequensque via est per amici fallere nomen.)

OWID, *Artis Amatoria*e. Bk. i, l. 585. (c. 1 B.C.)

Deceive the deceivers; they are mostly an unrighteous sort. (Fallite fallentes.)

OWID, *Artis Amatoria*e. Bk. i, l. 645. (c. 1 B.C.) See RETRIBUTION: HOIST WITH OWN PETARD.

Whoever has become notorious for fraud, even if he speaks the truth, gains no belief. (Quicumque turpi fraude semel innotuit, | etiam si verum dicit, amittit fidem.)

PHAE DRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 10. (c. 25 B.C.) This is the fable of the boy who cried

"Wolf!" See under WOLF.

He that once deceives, is ever suspected.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 419. (1640)

The man on his guard against being deceived is hardly on his guard even when on his guard; even when he supposed he was on his guard, your guarder has often enough been gulled. (Etiam cum cavissee ratus est, saepe is cautor captus est.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 255. (c. 200 B.C.) Who tries with craft another to deceive, Deceives himself, if he says he's deceived Whom he'd deceive. For if whom you'd deceive Perceives that he's deceived, the deceiver 'tis Who is deceived, the other's not deceived.

(Nam qui lepide postulat alterum frustrari, Quem frustratur, frustra eum dicit frustra esse; Nam si se frustrari quem frustra sentit, Qui frustratur frustrast, si non ille frustra est.)

QUINTUS ENNIUS, Satires. (c. 175 B.C.) See AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae. Bk. xviii, ch. 2.

He who seeks to deceive another is, in time, deceived himself. (Qui cherche à tromper autrui est, avec le temps, trompé lui-même.)

UNKNOWN, Historie Macaronique de Merlin Coccaie. (c. 1300)

Who often seekes others to deceiue, doth rest oppressed and deceyued hym selfe. (Chi cerca spesso inganar altrui, oppresso resta, & inganato lui.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 28. (1578)

We are never so easily deceived as when intent on deceiving others. (L'on n'est jamais si aisément trompé que quand on songe à tromper les autres.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 117. (1665)

You believe him your dupe; but if he is pretending to be so, who is the greater dupe, he or you? (Vous le croyez votre dupe; s'il feint de l'être, qui est plus dupe, de lui ou de vous?)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Pt. v. (1688)

Individuals may deceive and be deceived; but no one ever deceived everybody, nor has everybody ever deceived any one. (Singuli enim decipere et decipi possunt; nemo omnes, neminem omnes fefellunt.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Panegyrics: Trajan. Sec. 62. (c. A. D. 10)

One may be more clever than another, but not more clever than all the others. (On peut être plus fin qu'un autre, mais non pas plus fin que tous les autres.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 394. (1665)

You may be too cunning for one, but not for all.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1750

There is no lie that many men will not believe; there is no man who does not believe many lies; but there is no man who believes only lies.

JOHN STERLING, Essays and Tales: Thoughts. (1848)

You can fool some of the people all of the time, and all of the people some of the time, but you cannot fool all of the people all of the time.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Speech, at Bloomington, Ill., 29 May, 1856. On the authority of William P. Kellogg. The speech was not recorded, and the aphorism does not appear in Lincoln's published writings. ALEXANDER K. McCCLURE, Lincoln's Yarns and Stories,

p. 124, asserts that it was said to a caller at the White House (c. 1863). It was ascribed to P. T. Barnum by AINSWORTH SPOFFORD, Library of Wit and Humor. Frequently quoted.

Bread of deceit is sweet to a man; but afterwards his mouth shall be filled with gravel. (Suavis est homini panis mendacii: et postea implebitur os eius calculo.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xx, 17. (c. 350 B. C.)

A quicksand of deceit.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, v, 4, 26. (1591)

By indirections find directions out.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 1, 66. (1600)

To beguile many and be beguiled by one.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iv, 1, 98. (1605)

Who makes the fairest show means most deceit.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles, i, 4, 75. (1608)

Ever double Both in his words and meaning.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, iv, 2, 38. (1612)

One dupe is as impossible as one twin.

JOHN STERLING, Essays and Tales: Crystals from a Cavern. (c. 1840)

One deceit treads on the heels of another. (Fallacia alia aliam trudit.)

TERENCE, Andria, i. 779. (166 B. C.) The Germans say, "Eine Lüge bringt zehn mit" (One lie brings ten with it).

Oh! what a tangled web we weave

When first we practise to deceive!

WALTER SCOTT, Marmion. Canto vi, l. 532.

(1808) Perhaps the most frequently quoted of anything Scott wrote.

Oh, what a tangled web do parents weave

When they think that their children are naïve

OGDEN NASH, What Makes the Sky Blue? (1938)

When one grasps the hand of deceit one is apt to walk along with it for a long and tortuous journey.

THORNE SMITH, Passionate Witch, p. 69. (1941)

Deceit and treachery skulk with hatred, but an honest spirit flieth with anger.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Hatred and Anger. (1838)

All men are born sincere and die deceivers. (Tous les hommes naissent sincères, et meurent trompeurs.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. Mo. 521. (1746) Or, "All men are born truthful and die liars."

Deceit is the darling of the mind.

BISHOP WILLIAM WARBURTON, The Causes of Prodiges and Miracles. Ch. 1. (1727)

II—Self-Deception

We never are but by ourselves betray'd.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Old Batchelour. Act iii, sc. 1. (1693)

Who has deceived thee so oft as thyself?

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1738

Yet still we hug the dear deceit.

NATHANIEL COTTON, Content. Vision iv. (1751)

We are never deceived; we deceive ourselves. (Man wird nie betrogen, man betrügt sich selbst.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa, iii. (1819)

The easiest thing of all is to deceive one's self. for what a man wishes he generally believes to be true. (διότι πᾶσι ἀπάντων ἐστὶν αὐτὸν ἐξαπατῆσαι· ὁ γὰρ βούλεται. τοῦθ' ἕκαστος καὶ οἶσται.)

DEMOSTHENES, Olynthiacs. No. iii, sec. 19. (349 B. C.)

To deceive oneself is very easy.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 634. (1640)

It's the easiest thing in the World for a Man to deceive himself.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1746

The easiest person to deceive is one's self.

LORD LYTTON, The Disowned. Ch. 42. (1829)

1 While we cannot endure to be deceived by our enemies or betrayed by our friends, we are often content so to serve ourselves. (On ne se peut consoler d'être trompé par ses ennemis et trahi par ses amis, et l'on est souvent satisfait de l'être par soi-même.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 114. (1665) It is as easy to delude ourselves unknowingly, as it is difficult to delude others without their knowing it. (Il est aussi facile de se tromper soi-même sans s'en apercevoir, qu'il est difficile de tromper les autres sans qu'ils s'en aperçoivent.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 115. We deceive and flatter no one by such delicate artifices as we do our own selves. (Wir betrügen und schmeicheln niemanden durch so feine Kunstgriffe als uns selbst.)

SCHOPENHAUER, Die Welt als Wille. Bk. i, p. 350. (1819)

DECISION

2 Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision. (Populi populi in valle concisionis.)

Old Testament: Joel, iii, 14. (c. 500 B.C.) The Valley of Decision is the title of a novel by Edith Wharton. (1902)

3 Swift decisions are not sure. (φρονεῖν γὰρ οὐ ταχεῖς οὐκ ἀσφαλεῖς.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus Tyrannus, l. 617. (c. 409 B.C.) Decide not rashly. The decision made Can never be recalled.

LONGFELLOW, The Masque of Pandora: Tower of Prometheus. (1875)

4 "Settled once, settled forever," as the saying is. ("Actum" aiunt "ne agas.")

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 419. (161 B.C.)

THE DIE IS CAST, see under RUBICON.

DEED

See also Action; Saying and Doing; Word and Deed; Works

5 What we do willingly is easy.

THOMAS ADAMS, Works, p. 422. (1630)

It is eith till, that the awn self will.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 62. (c. 1595) It is easy to do what one's own self wills.

All things are easy, that are done willingly.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 561. (1732)

Nothing is troublesome that we do willingly.

WILLIAM HONE, Year Book. Col. 1612. (1831) What one knows not how to do is difficult; what one knows how to do is easy. (Nan ché pu 'hui; 'hui ché pu nan.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 85. (1875)

6 Of a truth, the doer is bound to suffer. (ἀρσάντι γὰρ τοῖ καὶ παθεῖν ὀφείλεται.)

ÆSCHYLUS (?), Fragments. No. 236, Smyth.

(c. 458 B.C.) STOBÆUS, Anthology, i, 3, 24; THEOPHILUS, To Autolycus, ii, 37, 176.

7 Things that we have to learn to do we learn by doing them. (οὐτὼ δὲ καὶ τὰ μὲν δίκαια πράττοντες δίκαιοι γινόμεθα.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. ii, ch. 1, sec. 4. (c. 335 B.C.)

What should be done must be learned from one who does it. (Quid faciendum sit, a faciente discendum est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xcvi, sec. 17. (a. A. D. 65)

In doing we learn.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 804. (1640) See also under PRACTICE.

8 That is done quickly enough which is done well enough. (Sat celeriter fieri quidquid fiat satis bene.)

EMPEROR AUGUSTUS, his favorite maxim. (c. 27 B.C.) See Suetonius, ii, 25, 4. "Sat cito, si sat bene" is the short proverbial form cited by CATO, Disticha, and by ST. JEROME, Epistles, lxxvi, 9. A variation is "Sat cito si sat tuto" (Quickly enough if safely enough), the favorite maxim of Lord Eldon. See Twiss, Life of Eldon, i, 46.

Thys wyse prouerbe: Sone ynough, if wel ynough. ROGER ASCHAM, Toxophilus, p. 114. (1545)

That thing is quickly [enough] done, that is done wel. (Assai presto si fa, quel che, si fa bene.) JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 27. (1578)

It skilled not how long things were a doing, but how well they were done.

JOHN LVLV, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 387. (1580)

What is well done is done soon enough.

JOSHUA SYLVESTER, tr., Devine Weekes and Works, i, 1. (1592)

Well done, soon done.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 108. (c. 1595) Soone enough done, if well done.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 3. (1633)

We do it soon enough, if that we do it well.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1107. (1640) Early enough if well enough. Quickly done can be quickly undone. (Lo que luégo se hace, luégo se deshace.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Ordculo Manual. Maxim 57. (1647)

That is done soon enough that is well done.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 82. (1666)

A thing is soon enough done, if well done, was one of the antient sage's maxims.

THOMAS SALDKELD, tr., Gracian's Compleat Gentleman, p. 126. (1730)

That which is done well enough is always done soon enough. (Ce qui est assez bien fait est toujours assez tôt fait.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 374. (1856) More shortly, "Assez tôt si assez bien" (Soon enough if well enough).

9 The man who causes the deed is greater than he who does it.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Bathra, fo. 9a. (c. 450)

Qui facit per alium facit per se. He who does a thing by the agency of another, does it himself.

SIR EDWARD COKE, Institutes of the Lawes. Pt. i. (1628) Quoted by BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman: Preface. (1903)

That which a man causes to be done, he does it himself.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Fables. Fab. 167. (1692)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4377. (1732)

What is done through another is done by the man himself.

H. P. LIDDON, Sermons: Old Testament, xv, 217. (1893)

1 Please with thy deeds rather than with thy clothes. (Doibs estre plaisans a dieu par bonnes meurs et vertus. Et non pas par habis riches desordonnes.)

SAINT BERNARD, Le Regime de Mesnaige. (c. 1130)

2 The value of each man consists in what he does well.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 496. (1817)

3 Whatever is worth doing at all, is worth doing well.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 Oct., 1746. The Germans say, "Was du thust, das thue recht" (Whatever you do, do it well). Said to have been the rule of conduct of Nicholas Poussin, and the favorite motto of Charles Dickens. See Letters of Charles Dickens: Preface. So frequently quoted that examples are unnecessary.

If you must fly, fly well.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1019. (1640)

Either dance well or quit the ball-room. (ἢ χορεύετε καλὰ, ἢ ἀφήτε τὸν χορὸν.)

NEGRIS, Modern Greek Proverbs, p. 55. (1831)

There is a Latin proverb, "Ne tentes aut perforce" (Either don't attempt it, or go through with it), and another, "Oportet testudinis carnes, aut edere aut non edere" (You must either eat the flesh of the turtle or not eat it), signifying that a thing must be done thoroughly or not at all, and deriving from the ancient idea that the flesh of the turtle is indigestible in small quantities, but wholesome if freely partaken of.

Save thoroughly, if you will;

Kill thoroughly, if you kill.

(Chiu jên chiu tao 't'ou; sha jên sha tuan 'hou.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 76. (1875)

Do thoroughly aught you set about;

If you kill a pig, kill him out and out.

(Tso shih tso tao 't'ou; sha chu sha tao 'hou.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 78.

If you ferry at all, ferry right over. (Tu jên tu shang an.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 94.

4 The soul ever yearns to be doing something. (Animus agere semper aliquid.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. v. ch. 20, sec. 55. (c. 45 B.C.)

5 Let all things be done decently and in order. (πάντα δὲ εὐσχημόνως καὶ κατὰ τάξιν γινέσθω.)

New Testament: 1 Corinthians, xiv, 40. (A.D. 57) The Vulgate is, "Omnia autem honeste, et secundum ordinem fiant."

6 Long standers are but short doers.

JOHN DAY, The Blind-Beggar. Act iv, sc. 3. (1600) Cited as an old Norfolk saying.

7 A thing once well done is twice done.

JOHN DAY, Ile of Guls. Act v. (1606)

One thing well done is twice done.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1659)

That which is well done is twice done.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 154. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4831. (1732)

Well done, is twice done.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1741. The Italians say, "Cosa ben fatta è fatta due volte."

8 Whatever was required to be done, the Circumlocution Office was beforehand with all the public departments in the art of perceiving—HOW NOT TO DO IT.

DICKENS, Little Dorrit. Bk. i, ch. 10. (1857)

9 What you do in this world is a matter of no consequence. The question is, what can you make people believe that you have done.

A. CONAN DOYLE, A Study in Scarlet. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1887)

10 Once I did ill and I'll never hear the end of it. DANIEL DYKE, Exposition upon Philemon. (1633)

When I did well, I heard it never;

When I did ill, I heard it ever.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6414. (1732)

One can't do a foolish thing once in one's life, but one must hear of it a hundred times.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

One's good deeds are known only at home, one's bad deeds far away. ('Hao shih pu ch'u mên, o shih chuan ch'ien li.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 974. (1875)

11 Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might. (Quodcumque facere potest manus tua, instanter operare.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, ix, 10. (c. 900 B.C.)

Whatever you do, do with all your might. (Quidquid agas agere pro viribus.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. 9, sec. 27. (44 B.C.)

Do earnestly whatever fate hands you to do. (Instanter facias, sors quae tibi tradat agenda.)

COLUMBANUS, Carmen Monostichon, l. 34. (c. A.D. 600)

12 We know better than we do.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: The Over-Soul. (1841)

'Tis not what man Does that exalts him, but what man Would do.

ROBERT BROWNING, Saul. Sec. 18. (1855)

- <sup>1</sup> Counsel that I once heard given to a young person, "Always do what you are afraid to do."
R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Heroism. (1841)
As we are, so we do; and as we do, so it is done to us.
EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship. (1860)
See also under RETRIBUTION.
- <sup>2</sup> A man of deeds they found him. (Navus repertus homo.)
ENNIVS, Annals. Bk. vi, frag. 178, Loeb. (c. 180 B. C.)
- <sup>3</sup> If you want to do something, make a habit of it; if you want not to do something, refrain from doing it. (εἰ τι ποιεῖν θέλῃς, ἐκτικὸν ποιεῖ αὐτό· εἰ τι μὴ ποιεῖν θέλῃς, μὴ ποιεῖ αὐτό.)
EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 18, sec. 4. (C. A. D. 100)
If irked by what you've done, don't do what irks. (Si piget admissi, committere parce pigenda.)
CATO (?), Dicta Catonis. (c. 175 B. C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 626.
Better not do the deed, than weep it done.
MATTHEW PRIOR, Henry and Emma, l. 308. (c. 1718)
- <sup>4</sup> Do the likiest, and God will do the best.
FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 28. (c. 1595)
Do the likeliest, and hope the best.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 90. (1721)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1310. (1732)
- <sup>5</sup> Do or die.
JOHN FLETCHER, The Island Princess. Act ii, sc. 4. (1621)
Y' are i' the right, that he must do, or die.
SIR SAMUEL Tuke, tr., The Adventures of Five Hours. Act v, sc. 3. (1663)
Let us do, or die.
ROBERT BURNS, Scots Wha Hae. (1794)
To-morrow let us do or die.
THOMAS CAMPBELL, Gertrude of Wyoming. Pt. iii, st. 37. (1809)
This expression is a kind of common property, being the motto, we believe, of a Scottish family.
WALTER SCOTT, Miscellanies: Review of Gertrude of Wyoming. Vol. i, p. 133. (1910)
- <sup>6</sup> Every Man living hath something to do.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1432. (1732)
- <sup>7</sup> You never do it, without overdoing it.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5974. (1732)
Overdoing, is doing Nothing to the Purpose.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3814. (1732)
A variant is, "Overdone is worse than underdone."
- <sup>8</sup> I perish if I don't, and if I do I'm flogged. (Peribo, si non fecero, si faxo, vapulabo.)
AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae. Bk. iii, ch. iii, sec. 8. (C. A. D. 150) Quoting a saying of the Arretine oracle, of which nothing is known. The Germans say, "Thue ich's, so bin ich hin; thue ich's nicht, so bekomme ich Schläge" (If I do it I've done it; if I don't do it, I'm in for a flogging).
You'll be damned if you do, and you'll be damned if you don't.
LORENZO DOW, Reflections on the Love of God. (c. 1825) Defining Calvinism. See under RELIGION.
Of all unhappy sinners, I'm the most unhappy one!
The padre said, "Whatever have you been and gone and done?"
W. S. GILBERT, Gentle Alice Brown. (1869)
- <sup>9</sup> Thing don upon the derke nyht
Is after knowe on daies liht.
JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. v, l. 4599. (c. 1390)
Day . . . night's scapes doth open lay.
SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, 1747. (1594)
That which is done in the dark, appears in the sunshine.
TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 263. (1666)
What is done by Night, appears by Day.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5495. (1732)
- <sup>10</sup> They are greatly to blame, which knowing howe to doe well, doe it not.
STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 32. (1574) Pettie, tr.
- <sup>11</sup> For certeynly, withouten drede,
A cherle is demed by his dede,
Of hye or lowe, as ye may see,
Or of what kinrede that he be.
GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose, l. 2199. (c. 1240) CHAUCER (?), tr., l. 2199, (c. 1365)
By his deeds we know a man.
GEORGE HERZOG, Jabo Proverbs, p. 172. (1936)
- <sup>12</sup> He did the right thing in the right way.
EDWARD EVERETT HALE, My Double, and How He Undid Me. (1859)
- <sup>13</sup> There is a way of doin' everything, if you only know how to go about it.
T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 27. (1843)
- <sup>14</sup> [He] did nothing by halves.
JONAS HANWAY, Travels. Bk. ii, ch. 14. (1753)
Never do things by halves.
CHARLES READE, Perilous Secret. Ch. 8. (1883)
A wise man who has seen everything is not the equal of one who has done one thing with his hands.
H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 582. (1937)
- <sup>15</sup> As good do it at first, as at last.
GABRIEL HARVEY, Pierces Supererogation. (1593)
As good at first as last.
BEN JONSON, The Magnetick Lady. Act v, sc. 6. (1632)
- <sup>16</sup> Those who have done nothing, fancy themselves capable of everything: while those who have exerted themselves to the utmost only feel the limitation of their powers.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 70. (1823)

1 We leave more to do when we die, than we have done.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 970. (1640)
It is a mortifying reflection for a man to consider what he has done, compared with what he might have done.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 1770.

So little done, so much to do.

CECIL RHODES. Last words. (1902) See MITCHELL, Life. Vol. ii, ch. 39.

2 Better it be doone than wishe it had been doone.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

Better do it than wish it done.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 890. (1732)

When a thing is done wishes are too late.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Wish. (1736)

3 Who will doo lesse then they that may do moste?

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

4 As good vndoone as doo it to soone.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5.

Done leisurely, done well; done hastily, done ill.
(Ts'ung yung kan hao shih; pan shih t'ai mang chiu yu ts'en ch'a liao.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 90. (1875)

5 A thing there was and done it was, and wise was he that did it.

Let no man know who knows it not, nor do so no more that did it.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 3. (1659)

"Of one who mistook his neighbour's wife for his own."

6 A work ill done must be twice done.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Brit.-Eng., p. 3. (1659)

Do it good, or do it again.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Brit.-Eng., p. 12.
Do it well that thou mayst not do it twice.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1308. (1732)

He doeth much that doeth a thing well.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1839.

That is once well done is done forever.

H. D. THOREAU, Civil Disobedience. (1849)

7 No man is obliged to do as much as he can do. A man is to have part of his life to himself.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 1766. See also under ABILITY.

8 Living requires but little life; doing requires much! (On a besoin pour vivre de peu de vie; il en faut beaucoup pour agir.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 93. (1810)

9 What may be done at any time will be done at no time.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 355. (1721)

10 In your secret chamber even you are judged; See you do nothing to blush for,

Though but the ceiling looks down upon you.

KU HUNG MING, Conduct of Life, p. 59. Book of Songs (Shiking). (c. 600 B.C.)

Do in the hole as thou wouldst do in the hall.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 234. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1307. (1732)

Do not do that which you would not have known.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.

If you don't want it to be known, don't do it.
(Jo yao jên pu chih, ch'u fei chi mo wei.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1925. (1875)

11 He who does something at the head of one Regiment will eclipse him who does nothing at the head of a hundred.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Letter to Major-General David Hunter, 31 Dec., 1861.

12 Each morning sees some task begin,
Each evening sees it close;

Something attempted, something done,

Has earned a night's repose.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, The Village Blacksmith (1839)

He went to bed with the satisfied feeling that something accomplished was something done.

JOHN RHODE, In the Face of the Evidence, p. 141. (1940)

13 Caesar, headlong in all his designs, thought nothing done while anything remained to do. (Nil actum credens, cum quid superesset agendum.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ii, l. 657. (c. A.D. 60) The phrase passed into a proverb

He hath nothing done that doth not all.

SAMUEL DANIEL, The Civile Warres. Bk. iv. st. 14. (1595)

Think nothing done while aught remains to do
SAMUEL ROGERS, Human Life, l. 49. (1819)

14 Go, and do thou likewise. (πορεύου καὶ σὺ ποιεῖς ὁμοίως.)

New Testament: Luke, x, 37. (c. A.D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Vade, et tu fac similiter."

15 Men must be decided on what they will NOT do, and then they are able to act with vigor in what they ought to do.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. iv, pt. ii, ch. 8. (c. 300 B.C.)

There is great danger that he who can do what he wishes may wish what he ought not to do. (μέγας οὖν ὁ κίνδυνος βούλεσθαι ἃ μὴ δεῖ τὸν ἄ βούλεται ποιεῖν δυνάμενον.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: To an Uneducated Ruler. Sec. 782C. (c. A.D. 95)

Yea, (quoth she) who had that he hath not, woulde Doo that he dooth not, as olde men haue tolde.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

Who doth that he ought not, chansest hym he thinks not. (Chi fa qualche non debbe, gli auuien qualche non crede.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 28. (1578)
He that doth what he will doth not what he ought.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 352.

(1640) RICHARDSON, Clarissa (iv, 121), has, "I am sure he has proved the truth a hundred times, That he who does what he will seldom does what he ought." Coke has a proverb, "Quod fieri non debuit, factum valet" (What ought not to be done holds good when it is done).

He that would have what he hath not, should do what he doth not.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 561. (1640)

DO WHAT YOU SHOULD NOT, HEAR WHAT YOU WOULD NOT, see under RETRIBUTION.

1 That may be done in an hour, which we may repent all our life after.

SIR JOHN MENNES, ed., Wit Restor'd, p. 151. (1658) See under HOUR.

2 As the auncient adage is, goodly is he that goodly dooth.

ANTHONY MUNDAY, Sundry Examples, p. 78. (1580)

By my troth, he is a proper man; but he is proper that proper doth.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Shoemaker's Holiday. Act ii, sc. 1. (1600)

He is proper that hath proper conditions.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 17. (1670)

He is handsome that handsome doth.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 99. (1670)

JOHN GAY, Wife of Bath, iii, 1. (1713)

Well is he that well does.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary. Well. (1739)

They are as heaven made them; handsome enough if they be good enough; for handsome is that handsome does.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield.

Ch. 1. (1766) LAMB, Popular Fallacies, x.

(1826) COBBETT, Advice to Young Men. Lett. iii. (1829) etc., etc.

Pretty is as pretty does.

T. C. HALIBURTON, Wise Saws. Ch. 6. (1843)

In the proverb, "Handsome is as handsome does," handsome means neat, with reference to skilfulness of execution.

W. W. SKEAT, A Student's Pastime, p. 79. (1896)

Handsome is as handsome palavers. That's the renovated proverb.

O. HENRY, Next to Reading Matter. (1909)

Dirty is as dirty does.

H. C. BAILEY, The Bishop's Crime, p. 13. (1941)

You English have a proverb: He is the handsome man whose deeds are handsome.

BERDING, Eleven Were Brave, p. 44. (1941)

Lovely is as lovely does and I've done nothing admirable.

SCHLEY, Dr. Tobey Finds Murder, p. 120. (1941)

3 'Tis deeds make old. (Acta senem faciunt.)

OVID, Consolatio ad Liviam, l. 448. (9 B.C.)

That is, a man should be called old, not according to the years he has lived, but to the extent of what he has done.

A life spent worthily should be measured by . . . deeds, not years.

R. B. SHERIDAN, Pizarro. Act iv, sc. 1. (1799)

We live in deeds, not years.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Country Town. (1839)

4 The deed is forgotten, but its results remain. (Factum abiit, monumenta manent.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. iv, l. 709. (c. A. D. 8)

The deeds of men never deceive the gods. (Acta deos numquam mortalia fallunt.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. 2, l. 97. (c. A. D. 9)

5 Different deeds thirst for different rewards. (διψῇ σὲ πρᾶγος ἄλλο μὲν ἄλλου.)

PINDAR, Nemean Odes. No. iii, l. 6. (c. 475 B.C.)

6 Do it if you're going to do it. (Age si quid agis.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 215. (c. 200 B.C.)

Repeated in Persa, l. 659. After the Latin proverb, "Quod instat agamus" (Let us do what is at hand).

Do your deed. (Fay ton faict.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i. ch. 3. (1580)

7 Say not, I will do so to him as he hath done to me. (Ne dicas: quomodo fecit mihi. sic faciam ei.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiv, 29. (c. 350 B.C.)
Refrain from doing ourselves what we blame others for doing. (ἂ τοῖς ἄλλοις ἐπιτιμῶμεν. αὐτοὶ μὴ ποιῶμεν.)

THEOCRITUS OF CHIOS, his prescription for a righteous life. (c. 270 B.C.) See STOBÆUS, Munich Anthology, p. 204.

DO AS YOU WOULD BE DONE BY, see RULE: GOLDEN.

8 That which is easily done is soon believed.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 8. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4379. (1732)

9 Great doings at Gregory's, heat the oven twice for a custard.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 72. (1678)
There's great doings in the North, when they bar their doors with tailors.

GEORGE MERITON, Yorkshire Ale, 83. (1633)
There's great stirring in the North when old wives ride scout.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 524. (1855)

10 Do weel, an' doubt nae man; do ill, and doubt a' men.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 234. (1678)

If thou dost ill, the joy fades, not the pains;
If well, the pain doth fade, the joy remains.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742.

11 You may if you list, but do if you dare.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 350. (1678)

12 Whatever man has done, man may do.

CHARLES READE, Hard Cash. Ch. 29. (1863)

The Germans say, "Was gemacht werden kann, wird gemacht" (What can be done will be done).

<sup>1</sup> Only deeds give strength to life. (Nur Thaten geben dem Leben Stärke.)

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Titan. Zykel 145. (1800)
Deeds are facts, and are forever and ever.

THOMAS B. REED, Speech, Portland, Me., 29 July, 1896.

<sup>2</sup> To know how to do a thing is easier than to do it. (Chih fei nan hsing chih wei nan.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 82. (1875)

Easy to look at, difficult to do. (Chien ché yi, hsió ché nan.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 83.

<sup>3</sup> It is praiseworthy to do what one ought, not what one may. (Id facere laus est quod decet, non quod licet.)

SENECA, Octavia, l. 454. (c. A. D. 60) The only complete Roman historical drama still extant.

Do what thou oughtest, and come what can.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 819. (1640)

HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1659)

Do what you ought, and come what will.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 90. (1721)

The French say, "Fais ce que dois, advienne que pourra," the Italians, "Fa quel che devi, e n'arrivi ciò che potrà."

My principle is to do whatever is right, and leave consequences to him who has the disposal of them.

JEFFERSON, Writings, xiii, 387. (c. 1800)

<sup>4</sup> If it were done when 'tis done, then 'twere well
It were done quickly.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, i, 7, 1. (1606)

What we do, let's do suddenly.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, The Wise-Woman of Hogsdan. Act i. (1638)

<sup>5</sup> O, what men dare do! what men may do! what men daily do, not knowing what they do!

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, iv, 1, 19. (1598)

Now might I do it pat.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 3, 73. (1600)

The attempt and not the deed Confounds us.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, ii, 2, 11. (1606)

Alone I did it.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, v, 6, 117. (1607)

<sup>6</sup> To answer deed with deed. (ἀντιδρᾶν περὶ δόματ.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus at Colonus, l. 959. (c. 408 B. C.)

<sup>7</sup> "The one may and the other may not, do this without harm," the difference lying not in the deed, but in the doer. ("Hoc licet inipune facere huic, illi non licet," | non quo dissimilis res sit sed quo is qui facit.)

TERENCE, Adelphoe, l. 824. (160 B. C.)

<sup>8</sup> We do as we can, since we can't do as we would, as the saying is. (Ut quimus, quando ut volumus non licet, aiunt.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 805. (166 B. C.)

When you can't do as you wish, you must wish to do what you can. (Quando id fieri non potest quod vis, id vells quod possis.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iii, cent. vi, No. 4. (1523) Erasmus cites also Martial's "Quod scis, esse vellis." Included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 48, with the rendering, "When that thyng can not be done that thou woldest, wyll that thou cannest."

They cannot do now what they would, because they did not when they could. (Qui ne l'ont peu quand ilz vouloient: car ne l'auoient faict quand le pouoient.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 27. (1545)

Who that maie not as they wolde, will as they maie.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

I can not do so though I would, neither would I though I could.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 315. (1580)

I, as I may—that which I would I cannot,—
With best advantage will deceive the time.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, v, 3, 91. (1592)

What you cannot as you would achieve,

You must perforce accomplish as you may.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, ii, 1, 106. (1593)

A man must doe as he can, when he can not as he would.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 32. (1633)

He that may not as he would, mon do as he may.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 38. (c. 1595)

Men must do as they may, not as they would.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 129. (1639)

Do as you may if you can't do as you would

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 267.

He that may not as he will, must do as he may.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 169. (1721)

They that cannot do as they would, must do as they can.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4988. (1732)

He who can't do what he wishes must do what he can. (Qui non potest quod vult, velle oportet quod potest.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 363.

(1869) "If the mountain will not go to Mahomet, Mahomet must go to the mountain," "Better play at small game than stand out." The Arabs say, "When what you wish does not happen, wish for what does happen." The Italian form is, "Chi non può fare come voglia, faccia come può."

<sup>9</sup> The more we do, the more we produce, the more we live. (Plus nous agissons, plus nous produisons, plus nous vivons.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 594. (1746)

<sup>10</sup> When in doubt what to do, he is a wise man who does nothing.

WHYTE-MELVILLE, Uncle John. Ch. 20. (1874)

- 1
A deed well done pleaseth the heart.
UNKNOWN, How the Good Wife, l. 110. (1460)
That's as well done as if I had done it myself.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
IF YOU WANT A THING WELL DONE DO IT YOURSELF, see under SELF-HELP.
TAKE THE WILL FOR THE DEED, see under WILL.
BETTER THE DAY, BETTER THE DEED, see under DAY.

II—Deeds: Good Deeds

- 2
A good deed a day Keeps the devil away.
H. W. L. DANA, Letter to Stanley Safian, 14 Oct., 1941. "Do a good deed daily" is a variation of the motto of the Boy Scouts of America. See under TURN.
- 3
It is a far, far better thing that I do than I have ever done.
DICKENS, A Tale of Two Cities. This line, not in the book but in the stage version, was spoken year after year by Martin Harvey, who played practically nothing else during the last ten years of his life. In the book, Carton's last words are "There is no Time there, and no trouble there," and finally "Yes," when the little seamstress asks, "Is the moment come?"
- 4
He that doth well wearieth not himself.
THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 32. (1633)
- 5
Do welle and haue welle.
FÖRSTER, ed., Douce MS., 52. (c. 1350)
Do wel, and haue wel, and god shal haue thi sowle.
WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text B, passus vii, l. 113. (1377)
Who doth well shall well haue.
WILLIAM CAXTON, Dialogues, p. 47. (c. 1483)
Beleue well, and haue well, men saye ye, sais shee;
Doo well, and haue well, men say also, we see.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)
He that does well shall speed well.
RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Bien. (1611)
Do well and haue well. Be a good man, and you will be kindly dealt by.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 90. (1721)
- 6
How far better to do good deeds than evil!
(ὡς κακοπραγίας εὐεργεσίῃ μὲν' ἀμείνων.)
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xxii, l. 374. (c. 850 B. C.)
Verily good deeds blot out evil ones.
MOHAMMED, The Koran, xi, 114. (c. 622)
Good deeds are an enduring heritage.
MOHAMMED, The Koran, xviii, 46. Naish, tr.
One good deed atones for a thousand bad ones.
WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1658. (1875)
To see a man do a good deed is to forget all his faults.
H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 342. (1937)
- 7
The best works are those which last, though they be not of great importance.
MOHAMMED, Hadyth. (c. 620) BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 544.

- A good deed is never lost.
THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 40. (1633)
Good Deeds remain; all things else perish.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1710. (1732)
The French say, "Tout se passe fors que bien fait" (All passes except what is well done); the Germans, "Wohlgethan überlebt den Tod" (Well-done outlives death).
- 8
The gods see the deeds of the righteous. (Dī pia facta vident.)
OVID, Fasti. Bk. ii, l. 117. (c. A. D. 8)
- 9
A good deed done to a good man yields a large return of good. (Quod bonis bene fit beneficium, gratia ea grvida est bonis.)
PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 358. (c. 200 B. C.)
THE REWARD OF A GOOD DEED, see under REWARD
- 10
Let humble Allen. with an awkward shame.
Do good by stealth. and blush to find it fame.
POPE, Epilogue to the Satires. Dial. i, l. 135. (1733)
- 11
How wretched to complain of a good deed you have done! (Quam miserum est bene quod feceris factum queri!)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 598. (c. 43 B. C.)
- 12
Desire rather to haue pouerte in doing good dedes than riches in syn.
EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictees and Sayenges of the Philosophers, fo. 13. (1477)
- 13
Nobody enters his good deeds in his day-book. (Nemo beneficia in calendario scribit.)
SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. i, sec. 2. (c. A. D. 60)
A good man makes no noise over a good deed. (ἀνθρώπος δ' ἐν εὐ ποιήσας οὐκ ἐπιβοᾷται.)
MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. v, sec. 6. (c. A. D. 174)
Better far reveal thy faults than any good deed thou doest.
ABDULLAH ANSARI, The Knower and the Known. (c. 1075)
If you wish to taste the fruit of the tree of gracious deeds do not apply the axe to it by boasting of those deeds.
SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Maxim 2. (c. 1258)
He does well, but none knows but himself.
JOHN CLARKE, Paraemiologia, p. 143. (1639)
To be namelesse in worthy deeds exceeds an infamous history. The Canaanitish woman lives more happily without a name than Herodias with one.
SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Urn Burial. Ch. 5. (1658)
Goethe has, "Die That ist alles, nichts der Ruhm" (The deed is everything, the fame is nothing).
"Hoc age" is the great rule whether you are serious or merry.
SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 1776. "Hoc age": do this, do it and do not talk about it.
- 14
How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, v, 1, 90. (1597)

It's an auld saying and a true,—“Little's the light Will be seen far in a mirk night.”

SCOTT, Bride of Lammermoor. Ch. 26. (1819)
His ruddy face shone like a good deed in a naughty world.

McKNIGHT MALMAR, Never Say Die, p. 103 (1943)

<sup>1</sup> 'Tis to do ill, to do only well.

SIR SAMUEL TUKE, The Adventures of Five Hours: Prologue. (1663)

I am th' oblig'd, if rightly understood,
Being o'er paid by th' joy of doing good.

TUKE, Adventures of Five Hours. Act iv, sc. 1.

<sup>2</sup> Nedes mot it be good that causeth so many good dedes.

THOMAS USK, The Testament of Love. (c. 1378) See SKEAT, Chaucer, vii, 79.

III—Deeds: Great Deeds

<sup>3</sup> Not without great labor can great deeds be done. (Non sine supremo magna labore peti.)

AVIANUS, Fables. No. ii, l. 14. (c. A. D. 400)

<sup>4</sup> Great deeds are reserved for great men. (Las grandes hazañas para los grandes hombres están guardadas.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 23. (1615)

Great things are done when men and mountains meet;

This is not done by jostling in the street.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Gnomic Verses. No. 1. (1808)

<sup>5</sup> Desperate deeds of derring do.

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i. (1887)

<sup>6</sup> There is a saying among men, that it is not meet that a deed nobly done should be buried silently in the ground. (ἔστι δέ τις λόγος ἀνθρώπων, τετελεσμένον ἔσλόν | μη χαμαὶ σιγῇ καλύψαι.)

PINDAR, Nemean Odes. No. ix, l. 6. (c. 474 B. C.)

We participate, in a sense, in noble deeds when we praise them sincerely. (C'est en quelque sorte se donner part aux belles actions que de les louer de bon cœur.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 432. (1665)

<sup>7</sup> It is folly to entrust a great deed to a faint heart, for all things are just as you make them. (Stultitia est facinus magnum timido cordi credere; nam omnes res perinde sunt ut agas.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 577. (c. 195 B. C.)

No great deed is done

By falterers who ask for certainty.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. i. (1868)

FAINT HEART NEVER ERECTED A TROPHY, see under TIMIDITY.

<sup>8</sup> And do we still hesitate to extend our renown by deeds? (Et dubitamus adhuc virtutem extendere factis?)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 806. (19 B. C.)

It is valor's task to extend our fame by deeds.

(Sed famam extendere factis, | hoc virtutis opus.)
VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. x, l. 468. “Famam extendere factis”—To extend fame by deeds—was the motto of Linnaeus.

IV—Deeds: Evil Deeds

<sup>9</sup> When about to commit an evil deed, respect thyself, though there is no witness. (Turpe quid ausurus, te sine teste time.)

ANACHARSIS, Sententiae. (c. 550 B. C.) See AUTONIUS, Sept. Sap. Sententiae, l. 43.

<sup>10</sup> Good deeds ill placed are evil deeds. (Benefacta male locata malefacta.)

ENNIUS, Satires. Frag. 416, Loeb. (c. 180 B. C.)

Quoted by CICERO, De Officiis. bk. ii, sec. 62.

<sup>11</sup> A dreadful deed! A wicked scandalous deed! (ὦ δεινὸν ἔργον καὶ σχέτλιον εἰργασμένος.)

EURIPIDES, Medea, l. 1121. (c. 431 B. C.) As quoted by ARISTOPHANES, The Birds, l. 1175. (414 B. C.)

Deeds to make heaven weep.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iii, 3, 371. (1605)

A deed of dreadful note.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iii, 2, 43. (1606)

A deed without a name.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iv, 1, 49.

Unnatural deeds.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, v, 1, 79.

<sup>12</sup> He may do much ill ere he can do much worse.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)

Fear to do ill, and you need fear nought else.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1740

<sup>13</sup> Our ill deeds do not bring us so much persecution and hatred as our good qualities. (Le mal que nous faisons ne nous attire pas tant de persécution et de haine que nos bonnes qualités.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 29. (1665)

<sup>14</sup> No evil deed has a good reason. (Nullus scelus rationem habet.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxviii, sec. 28. (c. 9 B. C.)

Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 8

<sup>15</sup> Many things, base in the doing, please when done. (Multaque, dum fiunt, turpia, facta placent.)

OVID, Artis Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 218. (c. 1 B. C.)

He that doth amiss may do well.

UNKNOWN, Book of Meery Riddles. Prov 76. (1629)

<sup>16</sup> Mala mens, malus animus, an evil disposition breedeth an evil suspicion.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, ii, 119. (1576)

Ill doers, ill deemers.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 176. (1721)

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Ill doers are ay ill dreaders.

ALLAN RAMSAY, Scottish Proverbs. (1737)

SUSAN FERRIER, The Inheritance, ii, 34. (1824)

Put me not to quote the old saw, that evil doers are evil dreaders.

WALTER SCOTT, Fair Maid of Perth. Ch. 17. (1828) STEVENSON, Kidnapped. Ch. 27. (1886)

<sup>1</sup> The greatest punishment of wrong-doing is the having done it. (Maxima est enim factae iniuriae poena fecisse.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. iii, ch. 26. (c. A. D. 55) See also under SIN.

No deed that sets an example of evil brings joy to the doer. (Exemplo quodcumque malo committitur, ipsi displicet auctori.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 1. (c. A. D. 120)

Evil deeds rebound upon their doers.

Babylonian Talmud: Aichah-Rabbah, fo. 56a. (c. 450)

An ill deed cannot bring honour.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 807. (1640)

An evil deed remains with the evil-doer.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 440. (1938) A Japanese proverb.

<sup>2</sup> How oft the sight of means to do ill deeds
Make deeds ill done!

SHAKESPEARE, King John, iv, 2, 219. (1596)
See also under OPPORTUNITY.

What Shakespeare observes, in his play of King John,

Is undoubtedly right, That "ofttimes the sight
Of means to do ill deeds will make ill deeds done."

R. H. BARHAM, A Lay of St. Dunstan. (a. 1845)

<sup>3</sup> Foul deeds will rise,
Though all the earth o'erwhelm them, to men's eyes.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 2, 257. (1600) The Spaniards say, "Cosa mala nunca muere" (Evil deeds never die). See also under MURDER.

Evil deeds are like perfume, difficult to hide.

GEORGE HERZOG, Jabo Proverbs, p. 144. (1936)

<sup>4</sup> Even dark deeds, if they be done in darkness, bring no blame. (ὡς σκότῳ | κὰν ἀσχερὰ πράσσης, οὐ ποτ' ἀσχύρη πεσεῖ.)

SOPHOCLES, Trachiniae, l. 596. (c. 409 B. C.)

THOU SHALT NOT BE FOUND OUT, see COMMANDMENT, ELEVENTH.

V—Deeds Done and Undone

<sup>5</sup> We have left undone those things which we ought to have done; And we have done those things which we ought not to have done.

Book of Common Prayer: Evening Prayer: A General Confession. (c. 1541)

<sup>6</sup> Deeds let escape are never to be done.

ROBERT BROWNING, Sordello. Bk. iii. (1840) See also under OPPORTUNITY.

<sup>7</sup> But that is doon, nis not to done.

CHAUCER (?), The Hous of Fame. Bk. i, l. 361. (c. 1383)

The thing that's done is na to do.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 257. (1855)

<sup>8</sup> Do and undo, the day is long enough.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 156. (1639)

<sup>9</sup> It's over, and can't be helped, and that's one consolation, as they always say in Turkey.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 23. (1837)

When 'tes over, 'tes over, as Joan said by her weddin'.

A. T. QUILLER-ROUCH, Troy Town. Ch. 3. (1888)

<sup>10</sup> A deed done has an end. (Capo ha cosa fatta.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxviii, l. 107. (c. 1300)

Quoting the phrase uttered by Mosca Lamberti, which gave the signal for the murder of the younger Buondelmonte—the beginning of the strife between the Guelphs and the Ghibellines. Lamberti must have been fond of proverbs, for he is said to have uttered another at the same time, "Those who consider everything will never decide on anything." "Cosa fatto capo ha," was Milton's reply to the warning that if he persisted in writing, blindness might result—as it did.

<sup>11</sup> What's done, unfortunately, is done,
And what's to come will surely come.

(Geschehn ist leider nun geschehn,
Und wie es gehen kann, so wird's gehn.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 19: Nacht. (1806)

What's done is gone! What's gone is done! (Getan, geschehn! Geschehn, getan!)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 21: Walpurgisnacht

<sup>12</sup> I know and knowledge, I haue wrought mine owne peyn,

But thingis past my handis, I can not call again.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

<sup>13</sup> When the ewe is drowned, she's dead.

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 354. (1721)

<sup>14</sup> Even Time, the father of all, cannot undo what has been done, whether right or wrong.
(τῶν δὲ πεπραγμένων | ἐν δίκῃ τε καὶ παρὰ δίκαν.
ἀποίητον οὐδ' ἂν | χρόνος ὁ πάντων πατὴρ δύναται θεμεν ἔργων τέλος.)

PINDAR, Olympian Odes. Ode ii, l. 15. (476 B. C.)

The one thing even a god cannot do

Is to undo a thing that has been done.

(μόνον γὰρ αὐτοῦ καὶ θεὸς στερίσκεται, ἀγένητα ποιεῖν ἄσ' ἂν ἢ πεπραγμένα.)

ACATHON, Apothegm. (c. 415 B. C.) Quoted by ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics, vi, 2, 6.

Not even God can undo what has been done.
(τὸ μὲν γεγενημένον οὐδὲ θεῶ δύνατὸν ἐστὶ ποιῆσαι ἀγένητον.)

PLUTARCH, To Apollonius, 115A. (c. A. D. 95)

But past who can recall, or done undo?

Not God Omnipotent.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 926. (1667)

See also under PAST.

<sup>15</sup> What's done is done, and naught can alter it.
(οὐ γὰρ γένοιτ' ἂν ταῦθ' ὅπως οὐχ ᾧδ' ἔχειν.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 378. (c. 409 B. C.)

Who may undo that which has come to pass? (τὸ γὰρ | φανθὲν τίς ἀν δύναται ἀν ἀγένητον ποιεῖν;) SOPHOCLES, Trachiniae, l. 743. (c. 409 B. C.)

It is done and cannot be undone. (Factum est illud: fieri infectum non potest.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 741. (c. 210 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iii, 72, in the more usual proverbial form, "Quod factum est, infectum fieri non potest" (What is done cannot be undone), with the comment that no proverb is more widely used, and examples from Aristotle, Cicero, and Phocylides.

When dede is doun, hit ys to late.

UNKNOWN, The Gode Wyf Wold a Pylgremage, l. 119. (c. 1450)

Things doone can not be vndoone.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

That which is done cannot be undone. (Ce qui est fait ne se peut desfaire.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 8. (1595) The Italians say, "Il fatto non si può disfare"; the Spaniards, "Lo que hecho es, hecho ha de ser por esta vez" (What is done is done for this time); the Danes, "Giort Gierning staaer ikke til at vende" (A deed that is done cannot be altered).

What is done cannot be now amended.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iv, 4. 291. (1592)

What's done is done.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iii, 2, 12. (1606)

What's done cannot be undone.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, v, 1, 74. (1606) TAVERNER, The Artful Wife. Act iii. (1718) FERRIER, Marriage. Ch. 47. (1818) MARRYAT, Midshipman Easy. Ch. 32. (1836) etc., etc. See also under PROVIDENCE.

W'at's did is did!—an' even a steam-calliope can't whistle stolen cream out of a cat's belly.

H. S. KEELER, The Sharkskin Book, p. 169. (1941)

VI—Deed: Doing Nothing

See also under Idleness

<sup>1</sup> You have nothing to do but suck and wag your tail.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 386. (1721)

Like Lambs, you do nothing but suck, and wag your tails.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3230. (1732)

<sup>2</sup> In attempting everything, doing nothing. (Multa agendo nihil agens.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. (c. 25 B. C.) As quoted by ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 144. "Out of breath to no possible purpose," Henderson adds.

He that doth most at once doth least.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 385. (1855)

<sup>3</sup> To do nothing laboriously. (Operose nihil agant.)

SENECA, De Brevitate Vitae. Ch. 13, sec. 1. (c. A. D. 50)

It is more painful to do nothing than something.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 883.

(1640) HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1659) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2928. (1732)

I have wasted my life laboriously doing nothing. (Vitam perdidit laboriose agendo.)

HUGO GROTIUS (?), on his deathbed. (1645)

Quoted by JOSIAH WOODWARD, Fair Warnings to a Careless World, in the form, "Vitam perdidit operose nihil agendo." (c. 1695)

To do nothing is in every man's power; we can never want an opportunity of omitting duties.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 155. (1750)

Admirals, extoll'd for standing still,

Or doing nothing with a deal of skill.

WILLIAM COWPER, Table Talk, l. 192. (1781)

The House of Peers, throughout the war,

Did nothing in particular, and did it very well.

W. S. GILBERT, Iolanthe. Act ii. (1882)

To do nothing is the most difficult thing in the world.

OSCAR WILDE, The Critic as Artist. (1891) The French say, "On ne peut faire qu'en faisant"

(One can only do by doing), or "You cannot do anything by doing nothing."

He who does nothing can do nothing wrong.

SIMON STONE, Knight Missing, p. 177. (1945)

DEEP

For Deep in the Sense of Ocean

see Sea

<sup>4</sup> Deep as the hell-kettles.

M. A. DENHAM, ed., Denham Tracts, i, 79. (c. 1850) The name of three deep pits near Darlington.

<sup>5</sup> It's too deep for me.

GEOFFREY HOLMES, The Man Who Murdered Himself. Ch. 26. (1936) BUDD SCHULBERG, What Makes Sammy Run, p. 6. (1941)

<sup>6</sup> He's as deep as a well, is my master.

G. J. WHYTE-MELVILLE, Market Harborough Ch. 13. (1860)

"He's as deep as a well," and "He's as deep as Wilkes," are common expressions to indicate subtlety and craft.

EDWARD PEACOCK, Lincolnshire Glossary, North-West: Deep. (1877)

This girl is as deep as a well.

MAX BRAND, Dr. Kildare's Hardest Case, p. 196. (1943)

DEER

<sup>7</sup> Where the deer is slain, some of her blood will lie.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 346. (1721)

Where the Deer is slain, there will some of his Blood lie.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5663. (1732)

<sup>8</sup> The stricken Deare withdrawes himself to die

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, 167. (1583)

Seeking to hide herself, as doth the deer,

That hath received some unrecuring wound.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, iii, 1, 89. (1593)

Let the stricken deer go weep.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 2, 285. (1600)

I was a stricken deer, that left the herd.

WILLIAM COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 108. (1784)

DEFEAT

See also Failure

<sup>1</sup>
In life let men learn not to know defeat.
(Proinde ita parent se in vita, ut vinci nesciant.)

ATREUS, Sententiae. (c. 1275 B. C.) CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum, v, 18.

<sup>2</sup>
There's no defeat, in truth, save from within;
Unless you're beaten there, you're bound to win!

HENRY AUSTIN, Perseverance Conquers All. (c.
1613)

<sup>3</sup>
To come bluely off.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 230. (1678)

He that is thrown, would ever wrestle.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2196. (1732)

The French say, "L'abattu veut toujours lutter" (The defeated always wants to fight).

<sup>4</sup>
Defeat is heaven's success.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn. 25 Sept., 1840.

It is defeat that turns bone to flint; it is defeat that turns gristle to muscle; it is defeat that makes men invincible.

H. W. BEECHER, Royal Truths. (1862)

DEFENSE

<sup>5</sup>
Millions for defense, but not a cent for tribute.

ROBERT GOODLOE HARPER, Toast, at a dinner given by the U.S. Congress at Philadelphia, 18 June, 1798, in honor of John Marshall, upon his return from a diplomatic mission to France. It was the thirteenth toast in a series of sixteen, as published in the American Daily Advertiser, 20 June, 1798. See
BEVERIDGE, Life of John Marshall, ii, 349.
Harper was a member of Congress from South Carolina. Many of the other toasts at the dinner were also defiance of France, the eleventh being, "The American eagle;
may it regard with disdain the crowing of the Gallic cock." "Millions for defense" has often been ascribed to Charles Coates Pinckney, American Ambassador to France, and was supposed to have been used by him when Talleyrand, French Foreign Minister, made through an intermediary named Hottenguer a demand for a bribe of $250,000, 26 Oct., 1797, as compensation for calling off French attacks upon American shipping.
But Pinckney denied it, saying, "No, my answer was not a flourish like that, but simply, 'Not a penny, not a penny.'" The more dramatic saying undoubtedly originated at the dinner for Marshall, who had been in Paris assisting Pinckney, and Harper afterwards explained that what he had in mind was not the demanded bribe, but the idea that it would be better to spend millions for defense than to permit France to plunder
American merchant vessels.

<sup>6</sup>
There is more pleasure in attacking than in defending. (Il y a plus d'alaigresse à assaillir qu'à deffendre.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 47. (1580)

DEFINITION

<sup>7</sup>
I have no great opinion of a definition, the celebrated remedy for the cure of this disorder [uncertainty and confusion].

EDMUND BURKE, On the Sublime and the Beautiful: Pt. i, Introduction. (1756)

A definition is no proof.

WILLIAM PINCKNEY, Speech, U.S. Senate, 15
Feb., 1820.

It is easy for a disputant to evade facts by entrenching himself behind a definition.

A. J. GORDON, Ministry of Healing. (a. 1885)

<sup>8</sup>
I hate definitions.

DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Bk. ii, ch. 6. (1826)

<sup>9</sup>
It is one of the maxims of the civil law that definitions are hazardous.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler, 28 May, 1751.

The Latin proverb is, "Omnis definitio periculosa est."

<sup>10</sup>
Define, define, well-educated infant.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, i, 2, 99.
(1595)

He shall be as a god to me, who can rightly define.

R. W. EMERSON, Representative Men: Plato.
(1850) Quoted.

He that can define . . . is the best man.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Clubs. (1870)

Voltaire is credited with saying, "If you wish to converse with me, define your terms."

DELAY

See also Procrastination

<sup>11</sup>
Nicias-hesitations. (μελλονικίαρ.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Birds, l. 640. (414 B. C.) A word coined by Aristophanes to indicate the dilatatory character of Nicias (cf. THUCYDIDES, vi, 8-25), and also seems to suggest "victory delaying."

One man by his delays restored the state. (Unus homo nobis cunctando restituit rem.)

ENNIUS, Annals. Bk. xii, frag. 360. (c. 180 B. C.)

The reference is to Quintus Fabius Maximus, the opponent of Hannibal, who, by his policy of following and harassing Hannibal's forces after the Roman defeat at Lake Trasimene (217 B. C.), while refusing an engagement, earned the surname "Cunctator." "The De-layer." Hence, "a Fabian policy," one of delay. Quoted by CICERO, De Officiis, i, 24, 84, and De Senectute, iv, 10.

I was as fond of Quintus Fabius Maximus, who recovered Tarentum, as if he had been of my own age, though he was old and I was young.
. . . By his patient endurance, he wore out the boyish impetuosity of Hannibal. (Hannibalem iuveniliter exultantem patientia sua mollebat.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. 4, sec. 10. (44 B. C.)

The Roman wins by sitting still. (Romanus sedendo vincit.)

VARRO, De Re Rustica. Bk. i, ch. ii, sec. 2. (c. 35 B. C.) Quoted as an old proverb. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, x, 29. A reference to Fabius Cunctator.

Whither dost thou hurry my weary steps, O Fabii? Thou art he, the mightiest, who singly, by delaying, restorest our state. (Unus qui nobis cunctando restituit rem.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 846. (19 B. C.) It will be noted that Vergil's line is a close reproduction of that of Ennius, given above.

Fabius ye noble captayn qui cunctando restituit rem.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 254. (1576)

We must do what we can . . . and like Quintus Fabius, who was never defeated, reform the government, not overthrow it. . . . We must take the present social order and build upon it.

WILLIAM MORRIS, defining the policy of the Fabian Society. (1884)

The Fabian is the man who does what he can, and thanks heaven that things are not worse.

ELBERT HUBBARD, in The Philistine, xvii, 4. (1904)

<sup>1</sup> Doubtful delay is worse than any fever.

HENRY CONSTABLE, Sonnets to Diana. (c. 1592)

Delay in vengeance gives a heavier blow.

JOHN FORD, 'Tis Pity She's a Whore. Act iv, sc. 3. (1633)

<sup>2</sup> Delays increase Desires, and sometimes extinguish them.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1265. (1732)

Tarry-long brings little Home.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4320.

We hate Delay; yet it makes us wise.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5441.

After Delay comes a Stay.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6177.

After a delay comes a let.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Delay. (1736)

<sup>3</sup> Delay doth oft times prevent the performance of good things, for the wings of man's life are plumed with the feathers of Death!

SIR HUMPHREY GILBERT, Discourse: How Her Majesty May Annoy the King of Spain. (1577)

<sup>4</sup> In delay there is advantage. (ἐν δὲ τῷ ἐπισχεῖν ἔσται ἀγαθόν.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. vii, ch. 10. (c. 445 B. C.)

Good is the mora [delay] that makes all sure.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 151. (1640)

That delay is good which makes the way the safer.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Span.-Eng., p. 3. (1659)

<sup>5</sup> Tear thyself from delay. (Eripe te morae.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 29, l. 5. (23 B. C.)

Fling off delay! (Praecipitate moras!)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. viii, l. 443. (19 B. C.)

Away with delay! (Tolle moras.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili, i, 281. (c. A. D. 60)

Drive out delay! (Pelle moras.)

SILIUS ITALICUS, Punica, iv, 732. (c. A. D. 75)

Beware of delays.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 109. (1579)

<sup>6</sup> When a man's life is at stake, no delay is too long. (Nulla unquam de morte hominis cunctatio longa est.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 221. (c. A. D. 120)

Why, one that rode to 's execution, man,

Could never go so slow.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, iii, 2, 72. (1609)

<sup>7</sup> There is danger in delay. (In mora periculi.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxxviii, ch. 25, sec. 13. (c. 10 B. C.)

Delay is not safe. (Mora non tuta est.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. ii, l. 731. (c. 1 B. C.)

There are two law proverbs about delay: "Dilationes in lege sunt odiosae" (Delays in law are hateful), and "Res damni infecti celeritatem desiderat, et periculosa est dilatio" (A matter as to an injury not completed requires haste, and delay is dangerous).

One loses much by waiting too long. (Que l'en pert bien par trop attendre.)

UNKNOWN, De III Dames Qui Trouverent I Vit, l. 143. (c. 1250) See MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux.

Dwelling [delay] haueth ofte scathe wrouht.

UNKNOWN, Havelok the Dane, l. 1352. (c. 1300)

Thus wryten clerkes wyse,

That peril is with drecching [delay] in y-drawe.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, l. 852. (c. 1380)

Taryeng drawyth parell.

GAIRDNER, ed., Paston Letters, i, 414. (c. 1457)

Delays breed daungers, nothing so perilous as procrastination.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 66. (1579)

Delayes bring daungers.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 82.

Delayes are perilous.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 388.

Defer no time, delays have dangerous ends.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI, iii, 2, 33. (1591)

The danger is generally in the delay. (En la tardanza suele estar el peligro.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, chs. 29, 46. (1605)

Delay in all things is dangerous.

JOHN PRESTON, New Covenant, p. 435. (1620)

Delays are dangerous.

JAMES SHIRLEY, The Gentleman of Venice. Act

v, sc. 1. (1655) DRYDEN, Tyrannic Love, i,

1. (1669) OTWAY, Friendship in Fashion, p.

39. (1678) etc., etc.

Why not to-day rather than to-morrow, if delays are dangerous?

NATHAN BAILEY, tr., Erasmus' Colloquia, p. 200. (1691)

Delay, they say, begetteth peril.

R. L. STEVENSON, The Black Arrow. Bk. i, ch. 1. (1888)

<sup>8</sup> Delay is always fatal to those who are prepared. (Semper nocuit differre paratis.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. i, l. 281. (c. A. D. 60)

To men prepared delay is always hurtful. (Il fornito sempre con danno l'attender sofferse.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxviii, l. 98. (c. 1300)

- 1 Sweet reluctant amorous delay.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 311. (1667)
With sweet, reluctant, amorous delay.
POPE, tr., Odyssey. Bk. I, l. 22. Undoubtedly borrowed from Milton, but whether by Pope or by Elijah Fenton is uncertain. Fenton translated this book and Pope revised and polished it.
- 2 Delay is a great procuress. (Maxima lena mora est.)
OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 752. (c. 1 B. C.)
- 3 Every delay that postpones our joys is long. (Longa mora est nobis omnis, quae gaudia differt.)
OVID, Heroides. Epis. xix, l. 3. (c. 10 B. C.)
Every delay is long to one who is in haste. (Omnis nimium longa properanti mora est.)
SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 426. (C. A. D. 60)
- 4 To plan carefully is the safest delay. (Deliberare utilia mora tutissima est.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 151. (c. 43 B. C.)
All delay is hateful, but it makes for wisdom. (Mora omnis odio est sed facit sapientiam.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 352.
Delay gives strength, delay matures the tender grapes and ripens grass into lusty crops. (Mora dat vires, teneras mora percoquit uvae, et validas segetes quae fuit herba, facit.)
OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 83. (c. 1 B. C.)
A little delay has great advantage. (Habent parvae commoda magna morae.)
OVID, Fasti. Bk. iii, l. 394. (C. A. D. 8.) The Germans say, "Eil" nicht zu sehr, bedenk dich wohl, Die Zeit gibt Rath, was man thun soll" (Hurry not too much; bethink yourself; Time gives advice what one must do).
What reason could not avoid, delay has often cured. (Quod ratio non quit saepe sanavit mora.)
SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 130. (C. A. D. 60)
'Tis wisdom's use
Still to delay what we dare not refuse.
SCOTT, Harold the Dauntless. Canto. iv, st. 11. (1817)
- 5 Whoever seems to have been released has only been reprieved. (Quisquis videtur dimissus esse, dilatus est.)
SENECA, De Providentia. Ch. 4, sec. 7. (C. A. D. 60) Sometimes quoted, "Quod differtur non auferitur" (What is deferred is not abandoned). The French say, "Ce qu'on diffère n'est pas perdu" (What one postpones is not lost), although Corneille contradicts this with "Ce qu'on diffère est à demi rompu" (What one puts off is half abandoned). The Germans say, "Aufgeschoben ist nicht aufgehoben" (Postponed is not abandoned), or "Verschoben ist nicht aufgehoben" (To put off is not to let off).
The thing that is fristed [delayed, or sold on credit] is not forgiven.
FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 94. (c. 1595)

- What is fristed is not forgiven.
WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Ch. 12. (1824)
Delays are not denials.
W. H. G. THOMAS, Commentary on Genesis i, 25. (1907) Exactly, "God's delays to Abraham were not denials."
- 6 Delay leads impotent and snail-paced beggary
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iv, 3, 53. (1592)
Dull not device by coldness and delay.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello, ii, 3, 394. (1605)

DELIBERATION

- 7 The woman that deliberates is lost.
ADDISON, Cato. Act iv, sc. 1. (1712)
- 8 Be deliberate! Be deliberate! 'Tis worth four hundred Zus.
Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 20a. (c. 450) R. Ida, son of Ahaba, once pulled a head-covering from the head of a woman named Methun, and was fined 400 Zus.
Reflection insures safety, but rashness is followed by regrets.
IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 114. (c. 1050)
To expect, to expect, is worth four hundred drachms.
JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 409. (1678)
"This proverb," Ray explains, "is used to recommend to us the advantage of deliberation in our actions." It is very evidently derived from the Talmudic one.
- 9 It is not at the altar we should deliberate. (Atqui non est apud aram consultandum.)
ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, iv, 28. (1508)
- 10 On a full stomach deliberation is better. (Ventre pleno melior consultatio.)
ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, vii, 44. (1508) Paraphrasing Plutarch. See also under EATING
- 11 Deliberating is not delaying.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1266. (1732)
"You go quicker by taking more time." See also under HASTE.
- 12 Deliberate often: decide once for all. (Deliberandum est saepe: statuendum est semel.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 155. (c. 43 B. C.) Another form is, "Deliberandum est diu, quod statuendum semel" (That should be considered long which can be decided but once).
Deliberate with slowness, execute with speed. (Delibera con tentezza, | Ed eseguisce con prestezza.)
CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 186. (1856) An Italian proverb. The Germans say, "Erst wieg's, dann wag's" (First weigh, then risk).
- 13 Deliberation teaches wisdom. (Deliberando discitur sapientia.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 162. (c. 43 B. C.)

<sup>1</sup> By deliberation opportunity is often lost.
(Deliberando saepe perit occasio.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 163. (c. 43 B.C.) Or, "Deliberat Roma, perit Saguntum" (Rome deliberates, Saguntum perishes), a proverb founded on LIVY, xxi, 7.

One doesn't accomplish many great things by deliberation. (On ne fait pas beaucoup de grandes choses par conseil.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 132. (1746)

<sup>2</sup> Slow deliberation is but prudence. (Mora cogitationis diligentia est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 390. (c. 43 B.C.)

Deliberate long. (Diu delibera.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, ii, 75. (1508) A variation is, "By long deliberation you can go far."

<sup>3</sup> Only in an emergency should audacity replace deliberation. (Solet esse in dubiis pro consilio temeritas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 652. (c. 43 B.C.)

<sup>4</sup> A man ought to do his Werkis by deliberation . . . and not sodaynly.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictees and Sayenges of the Philosophers, fo. 133. (1477)

<sup>5</sup> Who deliberate, revolt. (Qui deliberant, desciverunt.)

TACITUS, History. Bk. ii, sec. 77. (c. A.D. 109)

That is, those who consult together have become disaffected.

DELIGHT

See also Bliss, Joy

<sup>6</sup> A sip is the most that mortals are permitted from any goblet of delight.

A. B. ALCOTT, Table Talk: Habits. (1877)

<sup>7</sup> The soul of sweet delight can never be defil'd.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

<sup>8</sup> Not by appointment do we meet Delight.

GERALD MASSEY, The Bridegroom of Beauty. (c. 1854)

Delight flies because they give her chase.

WILLIAM WATSON, Byron the Voluptuary. (c. 1906)

<sup>9</sup> 'Tis never too late for delight, my dear.

THOMAS MOORE, Young May Moon. (c. 1810)

<sup>10</sup> All delights are vain.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, i, 1, 72. (1594)

Violent delights have violent ends.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 6, 9. (1595)

<sup>11</sup> I am for those who believe in loose delights—I share the midnight orgies of young men; I dance with the dancers, and drink with the drinkers.

WALT WHITMAN, Native Moments. (1860)

DELILAH

<sup>12</sup> And she [Delilah] made him [Samson] sleep upon her knees; and she called for a man, and she caused him to shave off the seven locks of his head; . . . and his strength went from him.

Old Testament: Judges, xvi, 19. (c. 800 B.C.) Hence the proverbial phrase, "The lap of Delilah."

Ease and prosperity slay some fools; wealth and hearts-ease, like Delilah, rock them asleep on her lap.

THOMAS GATACRE, Balm from Gilead, p. 99. (1616)

Who, since the days of Samson, was ever able to keep a secret from a woman resolved to worm it out? As the strong man in Delilah's lap, so was Bill in the boudoir of Mrs. Lushington.

WHYTE-MELVILLE, Satanella. Ch. 18. (1872)

Long sleeps Delilah; but at Gaza still

The shorn deluded Samsons sweat and grind.

J. B. KENYON, Vae Victis. (c. 1910)

DELUGE

<sup>13</sup> After my death let the earth be consumed by fire. (ἐμοὶ θανάτος γαῖα μυχθῆτω πυρ.)

EURIPIDES (?), Bellerophon. Frag. 513, Nauck. (c. 425 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iii, 80, with the Latin, "Me mortuo terra misceatur incendio." Put by Dion Chrysostom into the mouth of Tiberius. SUETONIUS, Lives of the Caesars; Nero, 38, 1, says that when someone repeated the phrase in Nero's presence, he rejoined, "ἐμοὶ ζῶντος" (Nay, rather while I live).

We feel it wicked and inhuman for men to declare (The saying is usually expressed in a familiar Greek line [the one from Euripides given above]) that they care not if, when they themselves are dead, the universal conflagration ensues.

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. iii, ch. 19, sec. 64. (c. 45 B.C.)

The Greek verse, in which a man would have the earth convulsed with flame when once he is dead. (Graecus versus, qui se mortuo terram misceri ignibus iubet.)

SENECA, De Clementia. Bk. ii, ch. 2, sec. 2. (A.D. 55)

The base who've saved their own vile wrappers cry, "What matters though the universe should die?"

SADI, Gulistan, vii, 19. (c. 1258)

<sup>14</sup> After us the deluge. (Après nous le déluge.)

MADAME DE POMPADOUR, to Louis XV, after the French defeat at Rossbach, 5 Nov., 1757. The attribution is by J. B. D. Després, who contributed an essay on Madame de Pompadour to preface the Mémoires de Madame de Hausset, p. xix. La Tour and Sainte-Beuve also attribute the saying to her, but LAROUSSE, Fleurs Historiques, attributes it to the King. It was original with neither, for "Après moi le déluge" is an old French proverb usually applied to spendthrifts, and is cited in many collections

India will last my time . . . and after me the Deluge.

F. C. BURNABY, A Ride to Khiva: Intro. (1876)

DELUSION

1 Wretched delusion, counsellor of ill, primal source of woe. (τάλαινα παρακοπή πρωτοπήμων.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 223. (458 B.C.)

2 She has delusions of grandeur.

ELIZABETH DALY, Deadly Nightshade, p. 49. (1940)

3 A delusion, a mockery, and a snare.

SIR THOMAS DENMAN, Judgment, in O'Connell v. the Queen (11 Clarke and Finnely, 351): "If it is possible that such a practice as that which has taken place in the present instance should be allowed to pass without a remedy, trial by jury itself, instead of being a security to persons who are accused, will be a delusion, a mockery, and a snare." (4 Sept., 1894)

DEMAGOGUE

4 Demagogues are the mob's lacqueys. (τῶν δημαγωγῶν δούλου διακόνους.)

DIOGENES, Aphorism. (c. 350 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Bk. vi, sec. 24.

In every age the vilest specimens of human nature are to be found among demagogues.

MACAULAY, History of England. Ch. 5.

5 Here comes another of the Spell-binders!

WILLIAM CASSIUS GOODLOE, who is said to have coined the word, applying it to the Republican stump-speakers in the Presidential campaign of 1883, who were supposed to hold their audiences spell-bound.

6 In a Democracy, look how many Demagogues . . . there are.

THOMAS HOBBS, Government and Society. Ch. 10, sec. 6. (1651)

DEMOCRACY

See also Republic

7 The declaration that our People are hostile to a government made by themselves, for themselves, and conducted by themselves, is an insult.

JOHN ADAMS, Address, to the citizens of Westmoreland Co., Virginia, 1798.

The government of the Union, then, is emphatically and truly a government of the people. In form and in substance it emanates from them. Its powers are granted by them, and are to be exercised directly on them and for their benefit.

JOHN MARSHALL, Case of McCulloch vs. Maryland, 1819. (WHEATON, iv, 316.)

The people's government made for the people, made by the people, and answerable to the people.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Second Speech on Foote's Resolution, 26 Jan., 1830.

A body . . . representing the people, springing from the people, and sympathising with the people.

LORD JOHN RUSSELL, Speech, introducing the Reform Bill, 1831; referring to the House of Commons.

The American idea . . . demands . . . a democracy,—that is, a government of all the people, by all the people, for all the people.

THEODORE PARKER, Speech, at the Anti-Slavery Convention, Boston, 29 May, 1850.

A democracy, a government of all, for all, by all.

THEODORE PARKER, The State of the Nation. Sermon preached 28 Nov., 1850.

There is the democratic idea: that . . . government is to be of all the people, by all the people, and for all the people.

THEODORE PARKER, Address, before the Anti-Slavery Society, Boston, 13 May, 1854.

Democracy is direct self-government, over all the people, for all the people, by all the people.

THEODORE PARKER, Sermon, delivered at Music Hall, Boston, 4 July, 1858. This sermon was published as a pamphlet, On the Effect of Slavery on the American People, the sentence given above occurring on p. 5. Herndon, in his Life of Lincoln, states that he gave a copy of this pamphlet to Lincoln, and that Lincoln marked this passage. There has been a tradition that "of the people, by the people, for the people" occurred in the introduction to John Wyclif's translation of the Bible, made about 1384, but a careful examination failed to disclose it. It was, of course, Lincoln who popularized it, but it seems to belong to Parker.

We here highly resolve that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom; and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Address, Gettysburg National Cemetery, 19 Nov., 1863.

President Lincoln defined democracy to be 'the government of the people, by the people, for the people.' This is a sufficiently compact statement of it as a political arrangement. Theodore Parker said that "Democracy meant not 'I'm as good as you are,' but 'You're as good as I am.'" And this is the ethical conception of it, necessary as a complement of the other.

J. R. LOWELL, Essays: Democracy. (1884)

Democracy means simply the bludgeoning of the people by the people for the people.

OSCAR WILDE, The Soul of Man Under Socialism. (1895)

The democratic system which we call the government of the people, for the people, by the people, and to hell with the people.

MICHAEL ARLEN, The Flying Dutchman, p. 187 (1939)

Democracy is being able to say no to the boss
ALDOUS HUXLEY, Time Must Have a Stop. Ch. 30. (1944)

8 Democracy is Lovelace and the people is Clarissa.

JOHN ADAMS, Letter to William Cunningham, March, 1804.

1 Democracy arose from men's thinking that if they are equal in any respect, they are equal absolutely. (δῆμος μὲν γὰρ ἐγένετο ἐκ τοῦ ἴσουσ ὁτιοῦν ὄντας οἰεσθαι ἀπλῶς ἴσουσ εἶναι.)

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. v, ch. 1, sec. 2. (c. 330 B.C.)
Humanity is singing everywhere
All men are equal. Dupes of democracy!

DONALD EVANS, Bonfire of Kings. (c. 1920)

2 A democracy is a government in the hands of men of low birth, no property, and vulgar employments. (ἀγένεια πειρία βαναυσία.)

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. vi, ch. 1, sec. 9. (c. 330 B.C.)

What is . . . democracy?—an aristocracy of blackguards.

LORD BYRON, Diary, May, 1821.

Democracy becomes a government of bullies tempered by editors.

R. W. EMERSON, Journals, May, 1846.

To put political power in the hands of men embittered and degraded by poverty is to tie fire-brands to foxes and turn them loose amid the standing corn.

HENRY GEORGE, Progress and Poverty. Ch. 10. (1879)

Democracy substitutes election by the incompetent many for appointment by the corrupt few.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

The final test of democracy is its capacity to breed leaders.

A. E. WIGGAM, New Decalogue of Science, p. 37. (1922)

Democracy means government by the uneducated, while aristocracy means government by the badly educated.

G. K. CHESTERTON. (N. Y. Times, 1 Feb., 1931.)

3 That fatal drollery called a representative government.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Tancred. Bk. ii, ch. 13. (1847)

Democracy, the last refuge of cheap misgovernment.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman: Preface. (1903)

4 Our real disease is democracy.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON, Works (1886), viii, 616. (1804)

5 It is not good that few should be governed by many; let there be one ruler only. (οὐκ ἀγαθὸν πολυκοιρανίῃ· εἰς κοίρανος ἔστω.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ii, l. 204. (c. 850 B.C.)

6 The democracy of the cemetery and the equality of the slaughter-house.

MEYER LONDON, Speech, House of Representatives, 25 April, 1917.

7 Democracy is better than Tyranny. (δημοκρατία κρείττον τυραννίδος.)

PERIANDER, Maxim. (c. 600 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Periander, i, 97.

Democracy, which is more cruel than wars or tyrants. (In libertate bellis ac tyrannis saeviore.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. civ, sec. 27. (a. A.D. 65)
Democ'acy gives every man

The right to be his own oppressor.

LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Scr. ii, No. 7. (1862)

8 Democracy, the most law-abiding and best of constitutions. (εὐνομοτάτη καὶ πολιτειῶν ἀρίστη δημοκρατία.)

PHILO, De Specialibus Legibus. Bk. iv, sec. 237.

(c. A.D. 40) Philo is arguing that "all that goes amiss in our life is the work of inequality, and all that keeps its due order is equality." But his idea of democratic government was probably that expressed by SOCRATES, Menexenus, 238C, referring to the Athenian constitution: "One man calls it a democracy, another by any name which pleases him. In reality it is an aristocracy carried on with the approval of the multitude."

9 Democracy is a state in which the poor, gaining the upper hand, kill some and banish others, and then divide the offices among the remaining citizens equally, usually by lot.

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. viii, ch. 10. (c. 375 B.C.)
If Plato were writing today he would have no occasion to revise his notion of democracy—"a charming form of government, full of variety and disorder, and dispensing equality to equals and unequals alike."

BERT LESTON TAYLOR, The So-Called Human Race, p. 14. (1922)

10 The government is us; we are the government, you and I.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, at Asheville, N.C., 9 Sept., 1902.

11 Democracy reads well, but it doesn't act well.

BERNARD SHAW, Misalliance, p. 27. (1910)

12 The only remedy for democrats is soldiers. (Gegen Demokraten Helfen nur Soldaten.)

WILHELM VON MERCHEL, Die Fünfte Kunst. (1848)

All the ills of democracy can be cured by more democracy.

ALFRED E. SMITH, Speech, at Albany, 27 June, 1933

13 The world must be made safe for democracy.

WOODROW WILSON, War Address to Congress, 2 April, 1917.

My job is to make the underworld safe for democracy.

DR. HUGH YOUNG, when in charge of the venereal disease work in the A.E.F., 1918. See Time, 14 Oct., 1940, p. 94.

The world was never more unsafe for democracy than it is today.

STANLEY BALDWIN, Speech, House of Commons, 12 March, 1935.

What always burned Ed up was "make the world safe for democracy."

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Kitty Foyle, p. 88. (1939)

DEMOCRAT

<sup>1</sup>
The Democratic party is like a man riding backward in a carriage. It never sees a thing until it has gone by.

BENJAMIN F. BUTLER, Epigram. (c. 1870)

The Democratic party is like a man riding backward in a railroad car; it never sees anything until it has got past it.

THOMAS B. REED. (c. 1895) Bringing Butler's witticism up to date. See ROBINSON, Life of Reed. The comparison is to the penguin, which, as Fred Allen explains in The Backward View, "flies backwards because he doesn't care to see where he's going, he wants to see where he's been."

<sup>2</sup>
The Democratic party is the party of the Poor marshalled against the Rich. . . . But it is always officered by a few self-seeking deserters from the rich.

R. W. EMERSON, Journals, 1857.

<sup>3</sup>
I never said all Democrats were saloonkeepers. What I said was that all saloonkeepers were Democrats.

HORACE GREELEY, correcting a misquotation. (c. 1860)

<sup>4</sup>
I am a Democrat still—very still.

DAVID B. HILL, Remark, after the nomination of W. J. Bryan as Democratic candidate for President, in 1896. See NEVINS, Grover Cleveland, p. 705. Four years later Bryan was again nominated, and again Hill made a remark which won publicity in the newspapers, "I am a Democrat, but not a revolutionist."

DENIAL

See also Refusal

<sup>5</sup>
Do not strike him dead with a denial.

JOSEPH ADDISON, Cato. Act iii, sc. 2. (1712)

<sup>6</sup>
A civil Denial is better than a rude Grant.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 38. (1732)

Better be deny'd than deceiv'd.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 874. The Italians say, "Offerir molto è spezie di negare" (To offer much is one way of denying).

<sup>7</sup>
Not by a jug-full.

JOHN NEAL, The Down-Easters, i, 126. (1833)

Did you ever hear of my telling a lie? No, not by a jug-full.

J. G. BALDWIN, The Flush Times of Alabama and Mississippi, p. 149. (1853)

<sup>8</sup>
The lady doth protest too much, methinks.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 2, 240. (1600)

<sup>9</sup>
Never make denial.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, ii, 1, 281. (1594)

'Tis true, nor is it worth denial.

THOMAS BROWN, tr., Persius' Satires. Sat. i, prol. (a. 1704)

DEPARTURE

See also Go

<sup>10</sup>
And he turned away with a heart full sore,
And he never was seen, not none no more.

ROBERT J. BURDETTE, Romance of the Carpet.

A quadruple negative which Max Eastman, Enjoyment of Laughter, p. 139, says is Burdette's "chief surviving claim to immortality."

<sup>11</sup>
Whither away, and whence? (ποῖ δὲ πορεύῃ καὶ πόθεν;)

PLATO, Lysis. Sec. 203B. (c. 380 B. C.)

<sup>12</sup>
To pack up his awls; collidere vasa.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, 971. (1681)

The enemy . . . were already packing up their awls.

PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Rabelais. Bk. iv, prol. (1694)

So pack up your alls, and be trudging away.

ISAAC BICKERSTAFFE, Love in a Village. Act ii, sc. 3. (1762)

To pack up his awls, is spoken of a person departing in haste.

F. T. DINSDALE, Teesdale Glossary, p. 5. (1849)

<sup>13</sup>
It's time we were on the move. (ἐπεὶ ὥρα κ' εἶναι.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xv, l. 26. (c. 270 B. C.)

Out of toun me list to gon.

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose (c. 1240) CHAUCER (?), tr., l. 100. (c. 1365)

Quod Pandarus, "it tyme is that we wende."

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, l. 208. (c. 1380)

Shall we wag? . . . Let us wag, then.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, ii, 1, 238; ii, 3, 101. (1601)

"Well," said Sam, "good bye."

"Tar, tar, Sammy," replied his father.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 27. (1836)

Charley Bates expressed the opinion that it was time to pad the hoof.

DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 9. (1838)

If you find my presence painful, I'll—skiddoo.

LANGDON MITCHELL, The New York Idea. Act iv. (1906)

It might do no harm to hop along.

ALLEN UPDEGRAFF, The Hills Look Down, p. 40. (1941)

Well, I must flit.

ALLAN UPDEGRAFF, The Hills Look Down, p. 74.

I folded my tents like the Arabs and silently slunk away.

MELBA MARLETT, Death Has a Thousand Doors, p. 92. (1941)

Flew the coop. Took a powder.

ZELDA POPKIN, No Crime for a Lady, p. 98. (1942)

DESERVING

See also Merit, Worth

<sup>1</sup> Search all the Legends of times past, . . . and 'twill be hard to find one that deserves to carry the Buckler unto Sampson.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 21. (1643)

<sup>2</sup> First deserve and then desire.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 322. (1605)

<sup>3</sup> What you deserve to suffer try to suffer with patience. (Quod merito pateris patienter ferre memento.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. iii, No. 17. (c. 175 B. C.)

What is deservedly suffered must be borne with calmness. (Leniter, ex merito quidquid patiari, ferendum est.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. v, l. 7. (c. 10 B. C.)

<sup>4</sup> Thirst after desert—not reward.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739.

It is better to deserve without receiving, than to receive without deserving.

R. G. INGERSOLL, The Children of the Stage. (1899)

<sup>5</sup> To deserve any blessing is to set a just value on it.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 37. (1821)

<sup>6</sup> Great deservers grow intolerable presumers.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1158. (1650)

<sup>7</sup> God ne'er afflicts us more than our desert.

ROBERT HERRICK, Affliction. (1647)

<sup>8</sup> Desert and reward be oft tymes thinges far od.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Desert and reward be euer farre od.

JOHN DAVIES, The Scourge of Folly, p. 42. (1611)

Desert and reward seldom keep company.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 7. (1670)

Desert and Rewards very often go not together.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1269.

<sup>9</sup> You would have it so, George Dandin, you would have it so; this suits you very nicely, and you are served right; you have precisely what you deserve. (Vous l'avez voulu, George Dandin, vous l'avez voulu; cela vous sied fort bien, et vous voilà ajusté comme il faut; vous avez justement ce que vous méritez.)

MOLIÈRE, George Dandin. Act i, sc. 7. (1668)

<sup>10</sup> That alone is disgraceful to a man, which he has deserved to suffer. (Id demum est homini turpe, quod meruit pati.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. iii, fable 11. (c. 25 B. C.)

<sup>11</sup> Use every man after his desert, and who should 'scape whipping?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 2, 554. (1600)

<sup>12</sup> The gods deal with you as you deserve. (Di tibi omnes id quod es dignus duint!)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 519. (161 B. C.)

<sup>13</sup> They have ensured remembrance by their deserts. (Quique sui memores aliquos fecere merendo.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 664. (c. 19 B. C.)

<sup>14</sup> Against me—if I deserve it. (Si mereor in me.)

Motto on coin struck at coronation of James I, with representation of hand holding a sword. (1603)

This inscription seemed also to presage the sentence of divine justice upon his son.

MILTON, The Tenure of Kings. Referring to Charles I. (1649)

DESIRE

See also Wants, Wishes

I—Desire: Mental

<sup>15</sup> Remove "A" from "Murad" [desire] it becomes "Murd" [man]. He who renounces desire becomes a man.

ABDULLAH ANSARI, Invocations. (c. 1075)

<sup>16</sup> Justice is noblest, and health is best, But the heart's desire is the pleasantest. (κάλλιστον τὸ δικαιοτάτον, λῡστον δ' ὑγιαίνειν, ἥδιστον δὲ πέφυχ' οὐ τις ἔρα τὸ τυχεῖν.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics, i, 8, 14. (c. 400 B. C.) Quoting an inscription at Delos by an unknown author.

Here I possess . . . all my heart's desire.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Poet's Pilgrimage to Waterloo: Proem. St. 4. (1816)

There are two tragedies in life. One is not to get your heart's desire. The other is to get it.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iv. (1903)

<sup>17</sup> A man is led into the path in which he desires to go.

Babylonian Talmud: Makkoth, fo. 10. (c. 450)

<sup>18</sup> Sooner murder an infant in its cradle than nurse unacted desires.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

He who desires but acts not, breeds pestilence.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

<sup>19</sup> Heaven favors good desires. (Siempre favorece el cielo los buenos deseos.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43. (1615)

<sup>20</sup> He truly begins to dye that quits his chiefe desires.

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Abandonner. (1611)

He begins to die, that quits his desires.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 3. (1640)

<sup>21</sup> If you desire many things, many things will seem but a few.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.

'Tis easier to suppress the first Desire, than to satisfy all that follow it.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1751.

1 Desire suffereth no delay.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Marginalia, p. 201. (c. 1582)

A true saying it is, desire hath no rest.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy.

Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 3, subs. 11. (1621) And to the proverb Burton adds, "It is a perpetual rack, or horsemill, according to Austin, still going round as in a ring."

Desires are nourished by delays.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 41. (1633)

2 Naked I seek the camp of those who desire nothing. (Nil cupientium | nudus castra peto.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode xvi, l. 22. (23 B.C.)

3 We never desire very eagerly that which only our reason desires. (On ne souhaite jamais ardemment ce qu'on ne souhaite que par raison.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 469. (1665)

We are far from comprehending the full extent of our desires. (Il s'en faut bien que nous ne connaissions toutes nos volontés.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 295.

4 He that coueteth little hath not need of much.

THOMAS LODGE, tr., Seneca's Works, p. 443.

(1614) After the Latin proverb, "Non caret is qui non desiderat" (He who desires nothing is not in want).

He that desires but little, had no need of much.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologio. No. 2077. (1732)

5 To nourish the heart there is nothing better than to make the desires few.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. vii, pt. ii, ch. 35 (c. 300 B.C.)

The fewer desires the more peace.

WILSON, Maxims of Piety, p. 27. (c. 1575)

Desires empty the heart, and not to desire refills it.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 355. (1938)

A Chinese proverb, paraphrasing Mencius.

6 The less the hope, the more the desire. (Quoque minor spes est, hoc magis ille cupit.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. ii, l. 766. (c. A.D. 8)

7 Four things, it is said, are most to be desired: a good neighbour; a window to every man's heart; that men's tongues and hearts should go together; and an house upon wheels.

SAMUEL PEGGE, Anonymiana. Cent ix, 45. (1809)

8 Desire accomplished is sweet to the soul. (Desiderium si compleatur, delectat animam.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xiii, 19. (c. 350 B.C.)

9 His own desire leads every man. (Trahit sua quemque voluptas.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. ii, l. 65. (37 B.C.)

Each man has his own desires. (Velle suum cuique est.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. v, l. 53. (c. A.D. 58)

10 We should train our desires to show the way to our dreams.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 103. (1940)

II—Desire: Physical

See also Love and Lust

11 The same desires disturb a gnat and an elephant. (Pareils appetits agitent un ciron et un elephant.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580)

12 Desire a wild beast (θρέμμα ἀγριον), whose manger (φάρνη) is the belly.

PLATO, Timaeus, 70E. (c. 375 B.C.) Paraphrased by PHILO, De Specialibus Legibus, iv, 94.

Desire, they say, was born amid the fields, amid the cattle and the unbridled mares. (Ipse quoque inter agros interque armenta Cupido | natus et indomitas dicitur inter equas.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. i, l. 67. (c. 10 B.C.)

13 Rule your desires lest your desires rule you. (Animo imperato ne tibi animus imperet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 50. (c. 43 B.C.)

Desire finds even quickness slow. (Etiam celeritas in desiderio mora est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 176.

To shun desire is to conquer a kingdom. (Effugere cupiditatem regnum est vincere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 181.

14 Desire attained is not desire, But as the cinders of the fire.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, A Poesy to Prove Affection Is Not Love. (1601)

It is better to desire than to enjoy—to love than to be loved.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 205 (1821)

DESOLATION

15 The abomination that maketh desolate. (Abominationem in desolationem.)

Old Testament: Daniel, xi, 31. (c. 170 B.C.)

The abomination of desolation. (τὸ βδέλυγμα τῆς ἐρημώσεως.)

New Testament: Mark, xiii, 14. (c. A.D. 55)

Quoting Daniel. See also Matthew, xxiv, 15.

DESPAIR

See also Hope and Despair

16 Now there was a castle, called Doubting Castle, the owner whereof was Giant Despair.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i. (1678)

That domestic Irish Giant, named of Despair.

CARYLE, Latter-Day Pamphlets. No. 3. (1850)

17 Black despair succeeds brown study.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, An Impossible Thing. (1720)

- <sup>1</sup> Despair is one of hell's catchpolls.
THOMAS DEKKER, The Honest Whore. Pt. ii, act i. (1630)
- Despair is the Parent of Ruin.
OSWALD DYKES, Proverbs, p. 113. (1709)
- There is no vulture like despair.
GEORGE GRANVILLE, Peleus and Thetis. (1730)
- Despair hath damn'd some, but Presumption Multitudes.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1273. (1732)
- Despair ruins some, Presumption many.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1747.
- <sup>2</sup> Darkness our guide, Despair our leader was.
SIR JOHN DENHAM, tr., Vergil's Aeneid. (1636)
- Night was our friend, our leader was Despair.
JOHN DRYDEN, tr., Aeneid, ii, 487. (1697)
- <sup>3</sup> He is desperate that thinks himself so.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1913. (1732)
- <sup>4</sup> There is nothing to despair about. (Nil desperandum.)
HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 7, l. 27. (23 B.C.) A phrase often used as a motto. Bacon, in his Impetus Philosophii, has "Non desperandum" (It is not a matter for despair).
- Nothing is to be presumed on, or despaired of.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 60. (1640)
- <sup>5</sup> Drencht in deepe dispaire.
GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 31. (1576)
- Grim and comfortless despair.
SHAKESPEARE, Comedy of Errors, v, 1, 80. (1593)
- Grim-visag'd comfortless Despair.
THOMAS GRAY, Ode on a Distant Prospect of Eton College, l. 69. (1742)
- Hollow-ey'd Abstinence, and lean Despair.
WILLIAM COWPER, Hope, l. 58. (1781)
- <sup>6</sup> In despair the naked hand will grasp the point of a sword held by a foe.
SADI, Gulistan. Ch. i, Apologue 1. (c. 1258) Sar, point, is sometimes rendered "edge."
- Like strength is felt from hope, and from despair.
POPE, tr., Iliad, xv, 852. (1715)
- Despair has often gained battles. (Le désespoir a gagné souvent des batailles.)
VOLTAIRE, Henriade. Chant x. (1723)
- Despair gives Courage to a Coward.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1272. (1732)
- A Man in Distress or Despair, does as much as ten.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 282. The French say, "Le désespoir redouble les forces" (Despair doubles our strength).
- Despair alone makes wicked men be bold.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Zapolya. Act i, sc. 1. (1817)
- <sup>7</sup> Despair not only aggravates our misery, but our weakness. (Le désespoir comble non seulement notre misère, mais notre faiblesse.)
VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 252. (1746)
- <sup>8</sup> He soonest loseth that despairs to win.
UNKNOWN, The Play of Stucley, l. 711. (1605)

DESPOTISM

See also Tyranny

- <sup>9</sup> To live by one man's will became the cause of all men's misery.
RICHARD HOOKER, The Laws of Ecclesiastical Polity. Ch. 1. (1594) The French call it, "Un régime du bon plaisir" (A regime of sweet will).
- <sup>10</sup> It is the old practice of despots to use part of the people to keep the rest in order.
JEFFERSON, Letter to John Taylor, 1798.
- <sup>11</sup> Despotism sits nowhere so secure as under the effigy and ensigns of freedom.
W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Gen. Lacy and Cura Merino. (1825)
- <sup>12</sup> Every despot must have one disloyal subject to keep him sane.
BERNARD SHAW, Plays, Pleasant and Unpleasant: Preface. (1898)
- <sup>13</sup> Despotism tempered by assassination, that is our Magna Charta. (Le despotisme tempéré par l'assassinat, c'est notre magna charta.)
UNKNOWN. Said by a Russian nobleman to Count Münster, on the assassination of Paul I, Emperor of Russia, in 1801. Quoted by SHAW, Misalliance, p. 71. (1910)
- France was long a despotism tempered by epigrams.
THOMAS CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Pt. i, bk. ii, ch. 4. (1837)
- A Despotism tempered by Dynamite.
W. S. GILBERT, Utopia, Limited. Act i. (1893)

DESTINY

See also Fate, Providence

- <sup>14</sup> Seek not to find for thyself the will of God, for thy luck and destiny are already decided.
AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. xxi, l. 15. (c. 700 B.C.) "Luck" and "Destiny" are personified by the gods Shai and Renenit.
- <sup>15</sup> He who knoweth each event is preordained plans no more.
ABDULLAH ANSARI, The Knower and the Known. (c. 1075)
- <sup>16</sup> Destiny. A tyrant's authority for crime and a fool's excuse for failure.
AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary. (1906)
- <sup>17</sup> Men heap together the mistakes of their lives and create a monster they call destiny.
RAYMOND CLAPPER. Syndicated newspaper column, 27 Aug., 1937. Quoted.
- <sup>18</sup> A consistent man believes in destiny, a capricious man in chance.
DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Bk. vi, ch. 7. (1826)

1 How easie 'tis, when Destiny proves kind,
With full spread Sails to run before the Wind.
JOHN DRYDEN, Astraea Redux, l. 63. (1660)

2 All things come alike to all. (Omnia in futurum servantur incerta.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, ix, 2. (c. 250 B. C.)
Time and chance happeneth to them all. (Tempus, casumque in omnibus.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, ix, 11.
What can happen to any can happen to all.
(Cunctis potest accidere quod cuivis potest.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 133. (c. 43 B. C.)

3 It does no good to rage at destiny:
Things take their course with no regard for us.
(τοῖς πράγμασι γὰρ οὐχὶ θυμοῦσθαι χρεών.)

EURIPIDES, Bellerophon. Frag. 287 Nauck. (c. 430 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 467A.

'Tis vain to quarrel with our destiny.
THOMAS MIDDLETON, A Trick to Catch the Old One. Act iv, sc. 4. (1607)

4 No man makes his awn hap.
FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 82. (c. 1595)
No man can make his own hap.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 267. (1721)

5 A man's destiny is always dark.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1171. (1650)

6 By Time and Counsell, doe the best we can,
Th' event is never in the power of man.
ROBERT HERRICK, Event of Things Not in Our Power. (1648)

7 No man has ever escaped his destiny. (μοῖραν δ' οὐ τινὰ φημι πεφυγμένον ἔμμεναι ἀνδρῶν.)
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. vi, l. 488. (c. 850 B. C.)
Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 118A.

None may escape his destined lot, not even a god. (τὴν πεφρωμένην μοῖραν ἀδύνατα ἐστὶ ἀποφυγεῖν καὶ θεῶ.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. i, ch. 91. (c. 445 B. C.)
The Delphian oracle to Croesus.
Rarely man escapes his destiny. (Che l'uomo il suo destin fugge di raro.)

ARIOSTO, Orlando Furioso. Pt. xviii, l. 58. (1532)
Shunless destiny.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, ii, 2, 116. (1607)

8 Neither plaint nor fear can change destiny, and the least foreseeing is always the wisest.
(La plainte ni la peur ne changent le destin; |
Et le moins prévoyant est toujours le plus sage.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. viii, fab. 12. (1678)
One often meets his destiny on the very road which he took to escape it. (On rencontre sa destinée | Souvent par des chemins qu'on prend pour l'éviter.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. viii, fab. 16.

9 The destiny allotted to every man is suited to him, and suits him to itself. (ἡ γὰρ ἐκάστῳ νεμομένη μοῖρα συνεφέρεται τε καὶ συνεφέρει.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iii, sec. 4. (c. A. D. 174) Literally, "is swept along with him and sweeps him along with it."

God . . . lets him [every man] fall
Just in the niche he was ordain'd to fill.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 789. (1784)
The current of destiny carries us along. None but a madman would swim against the stream, and none but a fool would exert himself to swim with it.

WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT, Letter to His Mother, June, 1821. Announcing his marriage.

10 The common lot of life for everyone. (κοινόν ἐστι τῷ βίῳ πάντων.)

MENANDER, The Arbitrants. Frag. 173K. (c. 300 B. C.)

Every Man has his Lot.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1425. (1732)
No man can change his common lot to rare.

THOMAS HARDY, To an Unborn Pauper Child. (1898)

The common lot. The inevitable circumstances of life. Lot: "share" (assigned by fate), from the lot (or ticket, etc.) one draws.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

11 We are what we must
And not what we would be.
OWEN MEREDITH (E. R. BULWER-LYTTON).
Lucile. Pt. i, canto iii, sec. 19. (1860)

12 All things moveth toward a determined end.
MOHAMMED, The Koran, xiii, 2. (c. 622) Naish,
tr. The Koran also says, "That which God writes on thy forehead thou wilt come to"

13 Our manifest destiny to overspread the continent allotted by Providence for the free development of our yearly multiplying millions.

JOHN L. O'SULLIVAN, Editorial, in The United States Magazine and Democratic Review,
vol. xvii, p. 5, July-August, 1845. The editorial denounced opposition to the annexation of Texas. The first known published use of the phrase "manifest destiny." See article by J. W. PRATT in The American Historical Review, xxxii, 795.

That new revelation of right which has been designated as the right of our manifest destiny to spread over this whole continent.

ROBERT C. WINTHROP, Speech, House of Representatives, 3 Jan., 1846. Winthrop was arguing that the United States had a right to Oregon.

Buildings of every description bore the marks of inevitable progress, or go-aheadativeness, otherwise called "manifest destiny."

E. L. VIELÉ, Following the Drum, p. 104. (1858)
That word, "manifest destiny," which is pro-fanely used, signifies the sense all men have of the prodigious energy and opportunity lying idle here.

R. W. EMERSON, Journals, 1865.

The incarnation of "Manifest Destiny," in other words, of national recklessness as to right or wrong.

J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers. Ser. ii, p. vii. (1866)

The Universal Yankee Nation, which spreads its Aegis wings over our Manifest Destiny.

OLIVE LOGAN, Before the Footlights and Behind the Scenes, p. 260. (1870)

Manifest destiny.

WILLIAM MCKINLEY, Remark, to his secretary, George Cortelyou, referring to the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands. (1898) See STODDARD, As I Knew Them, p. 251.

Unmanifest Destiny.

RICHARD HOVEY. Title of poem, commenting upon the conquest of the Philippines, and the strange paths into which the phrase "manifest destiny" had led the country. (1900)

On August 12 (1898) the very American flag which Grover Cleveland had caused to be hauled down was raised again [in Hawaii]. "Manifest Destiny" had triumphed at last.

ROBERT MCELROY, Grover Cleveland, ii. 73. (1923)

In the autumn of 1844 the question of annexation [of Texas] was one of the chief issues of the presidential campaign. The Democrats made "Manifest Destiny" the cornerstone of their political philosophy for the moment.

W. E. WOODWARD, Meet General Grant, p. 73 (1928)

Manifest Destiny. The doctrine of the inevitability of Anglo-Saxon supremacy. A phrase used by those who believed it was the destiny of the United States or of the Anglo-Saxon race to govern the entire Western Hemisphere.

Dictionary of American English: Manifest. (1942)

1 What shalbe, shalbe.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 243. (1576)

2 It is natal destiny that rules over every deed. (πότμος δὲ κρύβει σοφγερῆς ἔργων περὶ πάντων.)

PINDAR, Nemean Odes. No. v, l. 40. (c. 485 B. C.)

Various indeed are the fates which fetter mortals in the chain of destiny. (εἴργει δὲ πότμω ζυγένοθ' ἔρερον ἔρερα.)

PINDAR, Nemean Odes. No. vii, l. 6.

3 The will of Him who has no like brings down one man from a royal throne, and preserves another in the belly of a fish.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Maxim 88. (c. 1258)

4 I am hurried I know not whither, but I am hurried on. (Rapior et quo nescio, | sed rapior.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 261. (c. A. D. 60)

How can he who is drawn by the noose of destiny decline to proceed?

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Maxim 91. (c. 1258)

Destiny leads the willing, but drags the unwilling.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1275. (1732)

5

The lottery of my destiny

Bars me the right of voluntary choosing.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, ii, 1, 15. (1597)

A man whom both the waters and the wind, In that vast tennis-court, hath made the ball For them to play upon.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles, ii, 1, 62. (1609)

6

If your lot is certainly decreed, what profit to guard against it? Or if all is uncertain, what is the use of fear? (Certa si decreta sors est, quid cavere proderit? Sive sunt incerta cuncta, quid timere convenit?)

OLON, Maxim. (c. 600 B. C.) See AUSONIUS (?), Septem Sapientum Sententiae, l. 34.

To war with Destiny is vain. (ἀνάγκη δ' οὐχὶ δυσμαχητέον.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 1106. (441 B. C.)

Destiny has four feet, eight hands, and sixteen eyes; how then shall the ill-doer with only two of each hope to escape?

GURNEY CHAMPTION, Racial Proverbs, p. 355. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

7

I can suffer nothing but what is my destiny. (τὸ μὴ παθεῖν ἂν ἄλλο πλὴν τὸ μύριμον.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 236. (c. 441 B. C.)

Each of us suffers his own destiny. (Quisque suos patimur Manis.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 743. (19 B. C.)

Whatever befalls thee was preordained for thee from eternity. (δὲ τι ἂν σοι συμβαίῃ, τοῦτό σοι ἐξ αἰῶνος προκατεσκενάετο.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. x, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 174)

The pestilence lasted for seven years, but not a man died before his time.

Babylonian Talmud: Jebamoth, fo. 114b. (c. 450) Also Sanhedrin, 29a.

Even the appointment of the overseers of wells [an insignificant office] is ordained from heaven.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Bathra, fo. 91b.

Speak to the devil, employ magic, you can turn nobody from his destined end. (Parlez au diable, employez la magie, | Vous ne détournerez nul être de sa fin.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. ix, fab. 7. (1678)

8

Mortals have no escape from destined woe. (ὡς πεπρωμένης | οὐκ ἔστι θνητοῖς συμφορὰς ἀπαλλαγῇ.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 1337. (c. 441 B. C.)

God hath not granted unto man to escape destiny. (μοῖραν δ' οὐ τι φυγεῖν ἔπειρον.)

DEMOSTHENES, On the Crown. Sec. 289. (330 B. C.) Quoting an epitaph for the men who fell at Chaeronea.

9

We, poor slaves, . . . must drag The Car of Destiny where'er she drives, Inexorable and blind!

ROBERT SOUTHBY, Roderick, xxi, 345. (1814)

Ruthless destiny.

WILLIAM COWPER, tr., Iliad, xviii, 678. (1791)

<sup>1</sup> Life and death are decreed; riches and honors depend on the will of heaven.

Tzu Hsia, quoting an old proverb. (CONFUCIUS, Analects, c. 500 B.C. DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 491.)

<sup>2</sup> Enjoy your own lot. (Utere sorte tua.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xii, l. 932. (19 B.C.)

Gnaw the bone which falls to thy lot, whether it be good or bad.

UNKNOWN, Alphabet of Ben Sira. No. 3. (c. 1000)

DESTRUCTION

<sup>3</sup> For, behold, the day cometh that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch. (Quae non derelinquet eis radicem, et germem.)

Old Testament: Malachi, iv, 1. (c. 550 B.C.)
Hence "To destroy root and branch."

<sup>4</sup> Wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction. (πλατεία καὶ εὐρύχωρος ἡ ὁδὸς ἡ ἀπάγουσα εἰς τὴν ἀπώλειαν.)

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 13. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Lata porta, et spatiosa via est, quae ducit ad perditionem."

<sup>5</sup> It is easy, even for the feeble, to shake a city down, but it is a sore task to set it up again. (ῥᾶδιον μὲν γὰρ πόλιν σείσαι καὶ ἀφανιστέροις δ' ἄλλ' ἐπὶ χώρας αὐτῆς ἔσσαι δισπάλεις δὴ γίγνεται.)

PINDAR, Pythian Odes. No. iv, l. 272. (462 B.C.)

To build up cities an age is needed, but an hour destroys them. A forest is long in growing, but in a moment is reduced to ashes. (Urbes constituit aetas: hora dissolvit: momento fit cinis: diu sylva.)

SENECA, Naturales Questiones. Bk. iii, sec. 27. (c. A. D. 60)

One minute gives Invention to destroy, What, to rebuild, will a whole Age employ.

CONGREVE, The Double-Dealer. Act i, sc. 6. (1694)

To complete one thing, a hundred years is not sufficient; to destroy it, one day is more than enough.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 383. (1937)

<sup>6</sup> What is destroyed may be looked for but never recovered. (Quod periit quaeri pote, repreni non potest.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 568. (c. 43 B.C.)

DETAIL

<sup>7</sup> Merely corroborative detail, intended to give artistic verisimilitude to an otherwise bald and unconvincing narrative.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act ii. (1885)

Quoted by J. J. CONNINGTON, No Past is Dead, p. 115. (1942)

<sup>8</sup> One should absorb the colour of life, but one should never remember its details. Details are always vulgar.

OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 8. (1891)

DEVIL

<sup>9</sup> An Englishman Italianate is a devil incarnate. (Inglese italianato è un diavolo incarnato.)

ROGER ASCHAM, The Scholemaster, p. 78. (1570) "That is to say, you remaine men in shape and facion, but becum deuils in life and condition."

A byword unto the Worlde to bee called Deuils incarnate.

JOHN OVERTON, Jacobs Troublesome Journey, p. 8. (1586)

There is an ill-favour'd saying, That . . . an Englishman-Italian is a devil incarnate.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters. Bk. i, sec. 3, letter 2. (1622)

Don't think I am getting 'Italianate,' which according to Ascham is pretty much the same as 'a devil incarnate.'

J. R. GREEN, Letter, 7 Feb., 1873.

<sup>10</sup> The deyvyll and all of soche idolatrouse beggery.

JOHN BALE, Yet a Course at the Romysh Foxe. (1543)

There was the Devil and all to do.

PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Rabelais, v, 3. (1708)

There was the devil and all to do; spoons, plates, and dishes flew about the room like mad.

JOHN ARBUTHNOT, John Bull, iii, 5. (1712)

<sup>11</sup> Every man before he dieth shall see the devil.

THOMAS BECON, Catechism, p. 624. (c. 1560)
Quoted as a saying of the "common people."

<sup>12</sup> He was always pulling the devil by the tail.

JEREMY BENTHAM, Works (1838), x, 25. (c. 1830) Always in difficulties or financial straits. The French is, "Tirer le diable par le queue."

<sup>13</sup> Time enough to bid the Devil good morning when you meet him.

HON. E. BLAKE, Article, in London Daily News, 5 Aug., 1892, p. 3.

<sup>14</sup> The Devil entangles youth with beauty, the miser with gold, the ambitious with power, the learned with false doctrine.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 501. (1855)

<sup>15</sup> Grant that he may have power and strength to have victory, and to triumph, against the devil, the world, and the flesh.

Book of Common Prayer: Baptism of Infants. (1541)

Renounce the devil and all his works.

Book of Common Prayer: Baptism of Infants.

1 It is amended, euen as the deucl mendyd his damys leg (as it is in the prouerbe): whan he shuld haue set it right, he bracke it quyte in pecys!

HENRY BRINKLOW, Complaynt of Roderyck Mors, p. 34. (c. 1542)

2 We soppe of the broth in which the deuell was soden.

HENRY BRINKLOW, The Lamentacyon of a Christen, p. 89. (1545)

Wee must not so much as tast of the devils broth, lest at last hee bring us to eat of his beef.

THOMAS HALL, Funebria Florae, p. 12. (1660)

As good eat the devil as the broth he is boiled in.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 80. (1670)

One had as good eat the devil, as the broth he's boiled in.

THOMAS D'URFEX, The Comical History of Don Quixote. Pt. iii, act i. (1696) SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

3 The devil and ninepence go with her, that's money and company, according to the laudable adage of the sage nobility!

THOMAS BROWN, Works (1760) ,iii,245.(c.1700) The devil go with him and sixpence; and there's money and company too.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

4 To put out the devil's eye.

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, Handlyng Synne, l. 12165. (1303) Telling a long story of the origin of the proverb.

Come, let's be friends and put out the devil's eye. SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 81. (1710)

5 The wind blew as 'twad blawn its last; . . . The Deil had business on his hand.

ROBERT BURNS, Tam O' Shanter. (1790)

As busy as the devil in a gale of wind.

WALTER SCOTT, The Pirate. Ch. 8. (1821)

The devil in a gale of wind is as busy as a bee.

T. L. PEACOCK, A Mood of Mind. (1825)

The parlour chimney-stack had fallen. . . . Miss Rosedew was reading . . . the 107th Psalm, . . . as the devil is ever so busy in a gale of wind.

BLACKMORE, Cradock Nowell. Ch. 31. (1866)

6 The red devils.

W. A. CARUTHERS, The Kentuckians in New York, i, 24. (1834) American Indians.

I always get rid of the red devils.

C. F. HOFFMAN, A Winter in the West, ii, 31. (1835)

Indian insurrection! Red Devils Rising!

MATTHEWS AND BUNNER, In Partnership, p. 27. (1885)

7 One devil is like another. (Un diablo parece a otro.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 31. (1605)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3747. (1732) Another form is, "Hay muchos diablos que parecen unos a otros."

8 Behind the cross there's the devil. (Detrás de la cruz está el diablo.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 6; ii, 33, 47. The context is, "Your honour ought not to eat any of the things that stand here before you, for they were sent in by some of the convents; and it is a common saying, 'The devil lurks behind the cross.'" (Mot-teux's translation.) The French say, "Derrière la croix souvent se tient le diable" (The devil often keeps himself behind the cross). Also in German, Italian, Dutch, and other European languages.

9 The devil is in Cantillana. (El diablo está en Cantaillana.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 49. (1615) Cantillana is a small town on the Guadalquivir, near Seville. The proverb is undoubtedly a historical one, but who the devil was, is a disputed point.

10 A-dieu, the devel spede him that it recche!

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk iv, l. 630. (c. 1380)

11 Go streight to the devel, whan I dye.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale, l. 192. (c. 1388)

Thus goth al to the devel by thy tale.

CHAUCER, Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 262.

You go to the devil. (Vadas ad diabolum.)

JOHN MALVERNE, Continuation of Higden's Polychronicon, ix, 33. (c. 1394)

Lete theym go to a hundred thousand devils!

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., The Foure Sons of Aymon, iii, 102. (c. 1489)

He sent three of them to the devil.

SIR THOMAS HERBERT, Travels, p. 102. (1634) Let him go abroad to a distant country; let him go to some place where he is not known. Don't let him go to the devil where he is known.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 1773.

12 They . . . murmure prively for verray despyte; whiche wordes men clepen the develes Paternoster.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Persones Tale. Sec. 30. (c. 1389)

I murmure, I make a noyse, I bydde the dyuels Pater noster.

PALSCRAVE, La Langue Françoise, p. 642. (1530) Pattryng the diuels Pater noster to his selfe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. (1546) LATIMER, Sermons, p. 350. (1552) JONSON, The Sad Shepherd, iii, 2. (1641) etc., etc.

He is pattring the Devils Pater Noster. When one is grumbling to himself and it may be cursing those that have angered or displeased him.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 264. (1678)

To say the devil's pater-noster, to mutter or grumble.

J. O. HALLIWELL, Dictionary of Archaic Words. (1847)

Whin a bad egg is shut av the army he says the devil's mass . . . an' manes swearin' at ivrything from the commandher-in-chief down to the room-corp'ril.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Soldiers Three, p. 95. (1888)

<sup>1</sup> "Therfor bihoveth him a ful long spoon
That shal ete with a feend," thus herde I seye.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Squires Tale, l. 594. (c. 1388)

He must haue a long spoone, shall eate with the diuell.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

SHAKESPEARE, Comedy of Errors, iv, 3, 62.

(1593) TRENCH, Proverbs. Ch. 6. (1853) etc.

He should have a long shafted spoon that sups kail with the devil.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 42. (c. 1595) SCOTT, Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 45. (1818)

They that suppe keile with the Deuill, haue neede of long spoons.

JAMES I OF ENGLAND, Daemonologie, i, v, 16. (1597)

This is a devil, and no monster; I will leave him; I have no long spoon.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, ii, 2, 102. (1611)

Here's a Latin spoone, and a long one, to feed with the Devill.

JOHN WEBSTER, The Devil's Law-Case. Act iv, sc. 2. (1623)

Who suppes with the Deville sholde have a long spoone!

R. H. BARHAM, Lay of St. Nicholas. (1838)

He had voluntarily supped with the devil, and his spoon had been too short.

MRS. LYNN LINTON, Paston Carew. Ch. 37. (1886)

Behind the scenes there were men who, with defeat in their souls, were reaching for a long spoon with which they were prepared, if necessary, to sup with the devil.

FRANCIS BEEDING, Eleven Were Brave, p. 69. (1941)

<sup>2</sup> Pull Tom, pull Nick, pull baker, and pull devil.

GEORGE COLMAN THE ELDER, The Rolliad. Canto ii. (1759) A proverbial phrase which is supposed to have originated in the old puppet-shows, where a baker, who was never popular because he was supposed to keep up the price of bread, was consigned to the flames by the devil.

A kind of pull-baker, pull-devil contention.

WALTER SCOTT, Letter to Lord Montagu, 4 March, 1819.

Engaged with a game of "pull devil, pull baker," with the hounds for the fox.

R. S. SURTEES, Mr. Sponge's Sporting Tour, p. 1. (1853)

<sup>3</sup> Make we mery as longe as we can,
And drynke a pace: the deuill pay the malt man!

ROBERT COPLAND, The Hye Way to the Spytell Hous, l. 682. (c. 1532)

To drinke them all out, to set cock on the hoop, let the devil pay the maltman.

THOMAS BECON, The Floure of Godly Prayers, p. 282. (1559)

A dogge hath but a day. Let the deuill paie the malt manne.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, A Dialogue Against the Fever Pestilence, p. 123. (1573)

<sup>4</sup> The devil is not always at one door.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Diable. (1611)

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 32. (1640)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4482. (1732) The French say, "Le diable n'est toujours à la porte d'un pauvre homme" (The devil is not always at a poor man's door).

The devil turns his back at a gate shut up.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Ital.-Eng., p. 4. (1659)

The devil turns his back if he finds the door shut upon him.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 67. (1666)

Away goes the devil when he finds the door shut against him.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 323. (1855)

Better keep the devil at the door, than turn him out of the house.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 61. (1721)

"Better to resist the temptations of the Evil One, than to master them when they are complay'd with." FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 907. (1732) A variant is, "Open not the door when the devil knocks," and another has it, "The devil may get in by the keyhole, but the door won't let him out." Another Scottish form is, "Better keek the deil oot than hae to turn him oot."

<sup>5</sup> The meal of the devil turns all to bran.

JOHN DAVIES, The Scourge of Folly. Prov. 222. (1611)

Halfe of the devils meale turns unto branne.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Diable. (1611)

The Devils meal is half branne.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 326. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 80. (1670) Ray gives the French, "La farine du diable n'est que bran," or "s'en va moitié en bran."

The Devil's Flour is half bran.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4487. (1732)

The devil's meal is half bran; or all bran, as the Italians more boldly and more truly proclaim it [La farina del diavolo se ne va in semola]; unrighteous gains are sure to disappoint the getter.

R. C. TRENCH, Proverbs, vi, 151. (1853) Another form of the Italian proverb is, "La farina del diavolo va tutta in crusca" (The devil's flour goes all to chaff).

<sup>6</sup> Where had the devil the friar, but where he was?

ROBERT DAVENPORT, A New Tricke to Cheat the Divell. Act iv, sc. 2. (1639)

Why, where 'twas to be had; where the devil got the friar.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>7</sup> You were worse than the devil els; for they say hee helps his Servants.

JOHN DAY, Ile of Guls. Act iii, sc. 2. (1606)

The devil has a care of his footmen.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, A Trick to Catch the Old One. Act i, sc. 4. (1607)

The Devil is good to some body.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 16. (1659)

RAY (p. 70) has, "The Devil is good to some." Howell also has (p. 3) "Ill doth the devil preserve his servant."

The devil's ever kind to his own.

ALEXANDER BROME, The New Montebank.

(1660) SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

The Dee's ay good to his own.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 310. (1721)

"Spoken when they whom we affect not, thrive and prosper in the world; as if they had their prosperity from the Devil."

Weazel was the only midshipman saved besides myself: the devil always takes care of his own.

CHAMIER, Saucy Arethusa. Ch. 14. (1837)

The devil looks after his own.

R. A. J. WALLING, The Spider and the Fly, p. 208. (1940)

1 It is become a proverb, as great as the devil and Dr. Foster.

DANIEL DEFOE, History of the Devil. Pt. ii, ch. 6. (1726) "As great as," as close together, as intimate with each other.

What the devil and Doctor Faustus! shan't I do what I will with my own daughter?

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. xviii, ch. 8. (1749)

He wants you particklar; and no one else'll do, as the Devil's private secretary said ven he fetched away Doctor Faustus.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. xv. (1836)

You'd beat the divil an' Docthor Foster.

WILLIAM CARLETON, Fardorougha, p. 233. (1848)

2 'Tis no sin to cheat the devil.

DANIEL DEFOE, History of the Devil. Pt. ii, ch.

10. (1726) Quoting "the old Latin proverb, Fallere fallentem non est fraus." See under CHEATING.

3 Better sit still, than rise to meet the devil.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, The Owl. (1604)

4 Go to the devil and bishop you.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 36. (c. 1595)

Gae to the deil, and he'll bishop you. Meaning that the person addressed is able to occupy a high position in the service of the Evil One.

HISLOP, Proverbs of Scotland, p. 101. (1862)

Go to the devil and shake yourself.

THOMAS WILSON, Companion to Ball-room, 86. (c. 1816)

He bade me to go to the Divil and shake myself.

GEORGE BORROW, Wild Wales. Ch. 25. (1862)

5 The Devil and the Dean begins wi' ae letter; When the Devil has the Dean, the Kirk will be the better.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 100. (c. 1595)

6 What a silly fellow must he be who would do the devil's work for nothing!

HENRY FIELDING, Joseph Andrews. Bk. ii, ch.

16. (1742) FORBY, Vocabulary East Anglia, p. 433, says this is "said of a common swearer." The French say, "C'est le valet du diable, il fait plus qu'on ne lui ordonne" (He is like the devil's valet, he does more than he is told).

7

The Devil sweetens Poison with Honey.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1747.

8

If the Devil catch a Man idle, he'll set him at work.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2705. (1732)
See under IDLENESS.

9

The Devil doth not lie dead in a Ditch.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4475. (1732)

You would be little for God, if the Devil were dead.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6016.

10

The Devil hath owed me a Cake of a long Time, and now hath paid me a Loaf.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4477. (1732)

The devil has long, continued he, owed me a shame.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison, i, 320. (1753)

I hope the devil does not owe me such a shame.

WALTER SCOTT. (1823) LOCKHART, Life, v, 259.

11

The devil is an egoist. (Der Teufel ist ein Egoist.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 4. l. 124. (1806)

12

Buying and selling the devil has long been a proverbial expression.

FRANCIS GROSE, ed., Antiquarian Repository, ii, 395. (1775)

Booksellers are like horse-dealers in one respect, and if they buy the devil, they must also sell the devil.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. ii, No. 167. (1820)

There is a saying among horse-dealers . . . namely, 'If we buy the devil, we must sell the devil.'

J. C. APPERLEY, Nimrod's Northern Tour, p. 152. (1838)

13

Hee meant to imitate him which light his candell before the ymage of the Divell.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 106. (1574) Pettie, tr.

HOLD A CANDLE TO THE DEVIL, see under CANDLE.

14

Young men, for lack of years and experience, cannot be wise: and thereof commeth the Proverbe, That the Divell is full of knowledge, because hee is olde.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 169. (1574) Pettie, tr.

The Devil knows a lot because he is old. (El Diablo saba mucho porque es viejo.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 20. (1814)
A Spanish proverb.

The devil knows many things, because he is old.
CHARLES KINGSLEY, At Last. Ch. 7. (1871)

<sup>1</sup> That olde slaunder of early holiness: A young Saint, an olde Devill: sometimes young Devils have proved olde Saints; never the contrary.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Meditations and Vows. Pt. i, sec. 6. (c. 1608) See under SAINT.

<sup>2</sup> Beit wer be at tome for ay,
Than her to serve the devil to pay.

J. O. HALLIWELL, ed., Reliquiae Antiquae, i, 257. (c. 1400) "The devil to pay," a proverbial phrase referring to the alleged bargains made by witches, etc., with Satan, and the inevitable payment to be made at a certain time.

I must be with my wife on Tuesday, or there will be the devil and all to pay.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738) In his Journal to Stella, 28 Sept., 1711, Swift wrote, "The Earl of Strafford is to go soon to Holland, and let them know what we have been doing; and then there will be the devil and all to pay."

If they hurt but one hair of Cleveland's head, there will be the devil to pay and no pitch hot.

WALTER SCOTT, The Pirate. Ch. 36. (1821) The proverb in this form is supposed to refer to the difficulty of "paying" or caulking the seam near a ship's keel, called the "devil."

Her pet dog Snap is in the sand, "with the devil to pay and no pitch hot," if we take long to get him out again.

R. D. BLACKMORE, The Maid of Sker. Ch. 48. (1872)

<sup>3</sup> The Devil never assails a man except he find him either void of knowledge, or of the fear of God.

HERRERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1167. (1650)

<sup>4</sup> The deuel go with the[e] downe the lane.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

Downe the lane to the divell.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Two Wise Men, vii, 3. (1619)

<sup>5</sup> They that deal wi' the deil get a dear penny-worth.

ALEXANDER HISLOP, Proverbs of Scotland, p. 302. (1862)

<sup>6</sup> The feende men seyn may hoppen in a pouche
Whan that no crous there-inne may a-pere.

THOMAS HOCLEVE, De Regimine Principum, 25. (1411) Cross: i. e. coin. Coins bore a cross on the reverse, which the devil avoided.

The deull may daunce in my purse for ony peny.

UNKNOWN, Mankind, l. 474. (c. 1470)

The deuyll myghte daunce therein for any crowche [cross].

JOHN SKELTON, Bowge of Court, 365. (c. 1525)

The deuille may daunce in crosslesse purse.

THOMAS DRANT, tr., Horace, i, 3. (1567)

My Barrel of golde . . . ranne so on the lees.
that the Diuell daunced in the bottome, where he found neuer a crosse.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 238. (1580)

Some wanting money shall both ban and curse
That the devill hath roomme to dance in their purse.

J. O. HALLIWELL, ed., New and Merrie Prognostications, 24. (1623)

The devil sleeps in my pocket: I have no cross
To drive him from it.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Bashful Lover. Act iii, sc. 1. (1636) That is, no money.

Leaving Room in all our Pockets for the Devil to Dance a Saraband, for we have not one Cross to keep him out.

W. R. CHETWOOD, Adventures of Captain Boyle, p. 209. (1726)

No devil so frightful as that which dances in the pocket where there is no cross to keep him out.

WALTER SCOTT, Woodstock. Ch. 3. (1826)

<sup>7</sup> The itch take the hindmost. (Occupet extremum scabies.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 417. (c. 20 B.C.)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, iv, 3. The phrase is an allusion to the game of tag, in which the children cried, "Habeat scabiem quisquis ad me venerit novissimus" (The itch take whoever comes to me last). Horace is saying that people play at poetry, instead of really working at it.

Euery one for him selfe, and the duel for al.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578) See under SELFISHNESS.

What if . . . they run all away, and cry the Devil take the hindmost?

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Philaster. Act v, sc. 1. (1608)

The devil take the hindmost.

JOHN FLETCHER, Bonduca. Act iv, sc. 2. (c. 1618) SIR SAMUEL TUKE, The Adventures of Five Hours. Act v, sc. 3. (1663) DRYDEN, An Evening's Love, iv, 3. (1671) DEFOE, Everybody's Business. (1725) etc., etc.

Bid the Devil take the slowest.

PRIOR, On the Taking of Namur. (c. 1709)

From that moment, not a soldier stayed at his post—it was the devil take the hindmost.

HORATIO NELSON. (c. 1795) See SOUTHEY, Life of Nelson. Ch. 3.

'Tis myself, quoth he, I must mind most;

So the Devil may take the hindmost.

SOUTHEY, The March to Moscow. St. 10. (1813)

Everybody for himself and Devil take the hindmost.

MARK TWAIN, Life on the Mississippi. Ch. 26. (1874)

He starts in life with a plan of absolute and calculated selfishness. . . . His motto is Extremum occupet scabies—the devil take the hindmost.

G. W. E. RUSSELL, Social Silhouettes. Ch. 45. (1906) The Germans say, "Der Letzte muss herhalten" (The last one must look out for himself). Rabelais has, "Dieu garde le demourant" (God guard him that is left).

Devil take the hindmost means the biggest devil of all on top.

MARGARET CARPENTER, Experiment Perilous, p. 89. (1943)

- <sup>1</sup> Some for a tryfull play the deuyll in the orlege.
WILLIAM HORMAN, Vulgaria, fo. 231. (1519)
To play pranks with the works of a clock;
to upset the orderly way of things.
What will he?—Play the devill in the horologe.
NICOLAS UDALL, Ralph Roister Doister. Act iii, sc. 2. (c. 1550)
To play the Devil i' th' bulmong.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 239. (1678)
"Bulmong" is a mingling of peas, tares and oats, sown together for feeding cattle.
- <sup>2</sup> When the devil is blind, i. e. never
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 12. (1659)
See under NEVER.
When the devil is a hog, you shall eat bacon.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 217. (1670)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5578. (1732)
- <sup>3</sup> By the skirts of the Vicar the Devil climbs up to the Steeple.
JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Span.-Eng., p. 20.
(1659)
The Devil gets up to the Belfry by the Vicar's Skirts.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4476. (1732)
It is by the Vicar's skirts that the Devil climbs into the Belfry.
LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act i, sc.
2. (1840) ALEXINA OGILVIE, Profitable Proverbs. (1923)
The devil is in the belfry. (Le diable est au clocher.)
ARTHUR RIMBAUD, Une Saison en Enfer. Ch.
3. (1873)
- <sup>4</sup> Resist the devil, and he will flee from you.
(ἀντιστήτε δὲ τῷ διαβόλῳ, καὶ φεύγει ἀπ' ὑμῶν.)
New Testament: James, iv, 7. (c. A.D. 60)
The Vulgate is, "Resistite autem diabolo, et fugiet a vobis."
- <sup>5</sup> According to the prophet, all the devil's strength is in his loins. (Secundum prophetam omnis diaboli virtus in lumbis est.)
ST. JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Letters. No. vii,
sec. 3. (A.D. 374)
- <sup>6</sup> The Devil is an Ass, I do acknowledge it.
BEN JONSON, The Devil Is an Ass. Act iv, sc.
1. (1616)
The devil's an ass, sir.
THOMAS OTWAY, The Souldier's Fortune. Act
iv, sc. 1. (1681)
She found a trick she thought would pass,
And prove the devil but an ass.
UNKNOWN, Agreeable Companion, p. 304. (1745)
Their best plan . . . is to tell Apollyon that the Devil is an ass.
ANDREW LANG, Essays in Little, p. 186. (1891)
- <sup>7</sup> Beware you do not conjure up a spirit
You cannot lay.
BEN JONSON, The New Inn. Act iii, sc. 2. (1631)
Raise no more spirits than you can conjure down.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 247. (1639)
RAY, Proverbs, p. 135. (1670)

- The boy . . . would not be un-deviled by all their exorcisms; so the priests raised up a spirit which they could not allay.
THOMAS FULLER, Church History, x, 4. (1655)
I'll make such a Noise in your House I'll raise the Devil in't.
VANBRUGH, The Confederacy. Act v, sc. 2. (1705)
Raise no more Dee'ls than you are able to lay.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 282. (1721)
"Do not stir up a strife that you will not afterward be able to appease."
'Tis an old saying and a true, 'Tis an easier matter to raise the devil, that 'tis to lay him.
NATHAN BAILEY, tr., Erasmus' Colloquies, p.
202. (1725)
Alas! the devil's sooner raised than laid.
GARRICK, School for Scandal: Prologue. (1777)
Father, do not raise
The devil you cannot lay between us.
LORD BYRON, Werner, v, 1, 427. (1822)
The Devil, they say,
'Tis easier at all times to raise than to lay.
R. H. BARHAM, St. Dunstan. (1840)
He was going to raise the devil.
CHARLES LEVER, Charles O'Malley. Ch. 63.
(1841) "Raising Cain" is a variation. See
STOWE, Uncle Tom's Cabin. Ch. 20. (1852)
All those fierce spirits, whom you hallooed on
. . . now worry you. . . Did you think when, to serve your turn, you raised the Devil up, that it was as easy to lay him as to raise him?
T. B. MACAULAY, Speech on Maynooth. (1845)
Exorcists of all kinds . . . have ever found the fiend more easy to invoke than to lay.
ROLF BOLDREWOOD (T. A. BROWNE), *The
Miner's Right*, p. 21. (1890)
Raise no more devils than you are able to lay
ALEXINA OGILVIE, Profitable Proverbs. (1923)
- <sup>8</sup> Let one dee'l ding [beat] another.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 234. (1721)
"Spoken when two bad persons quarrel."
One Devil often drubs another.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3748. (1732)
Let ae deil ding anither.
DEAN RAMSAY, Reminiscences, v, 195. (1857)
- <sup>9</sup> Never go to the Dee'l, and a dish-clout in your hand.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 264. (1721)
"If you will be a knave, be not in a trifle, but in something of value."
The Dee'l bides his day.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 303.
The Dee'ls cow calves twice a year.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 310.
"Spoken when they whom we affect not, thrive and prosper in the world; as if they had their prosperity from the Devil."
The Dee'l never sent a wind out of hell, but he would sail with it.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 333.
"Spoken of trimmers and time-servers."
- <sup>10</sup> You are good to fetch the Dee'l a priest.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 379. (1721)
"Spoken to them who tarry long when they are sent on an errand."

You are a fine Fellow, to fetch the Devil a Priest.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5841. (1732)

1 Who is the most diligentist bishop and prelate in all England? I will tel you. It is the devil. He is the most diligent preacher of all other; he is never out of his diocess.

HUGH LATIMER, Sermon on the Ploughers, 70. (1548)

The Devil is a busie Bishop in his awn diocie.
DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 96. (c. 1595) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4479. (1732)

2 The devil, as some people say,
A-nutting goes Holy Rood Day.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea. Vol. ii, pt. i, p. 242. Quoting from Poor Robin's Almanack, 14 Sept., 1693. An allusion to the dangers of the custom of young people going nutting together on Holy-Rood Day, Sept. 14.

3 When the devil preaches, the world's near an end.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Quevedo's Visions, p. 21. (1667)

When the Devil prays, he has a Booty in his Eye.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5576. (1732)
Notes and Queries (ser. iii, iii, 492) gives a variant, "When the devil quotes Latin, the priests go to prayers."

4 Reports are various as to the state of the enemy's camp, but all agree that there is the devil among the tailors.

LORD LONDONDERRY, Letter, 27 May, 1834.
There is a row going on.

5 For John the Baptist came neither eating bread nor drinking wine; and ye say, He hath a devil. (δαίμονιον ἔχει.)

New Testament: Luke, vii, 33. (c. A. D. 65)
The Vulgate is, "Daemonium habet." Taken as a wedding text by Parson William Smith, when he married his daughter Abigail to John Adams, 25 Oct., 1764. See MINNIGERODE, Some American Ladies, p. 56.

6 Hit ys oft seyde by hem that yet lyues,
He must nedys go that the deuell dryues.
JOHN LYDGATE, The Assembly of Gods, l. 20. (c. 1420)

Nedes must he rin that the deuyll dryuith.
JOHN SKELTON, A Garlande of Laurell, l. 1434. (1523)

There is a prouerbe which trewe now preueth,
He must nedes go, that the dyuell dryueth.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Iohan, Tyb and Syr Jhan (Farmer), p. 77. (1533)

He must nedes go, whom the diuel dooth driue.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)
Needs must he go that the devils drive.

THOMAS KYD, The Spanish Tragedie. Act iii, sc. 12. (1592)

He needs muste go that the devil drives.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, i, 3, 32. (1602) Frequently quoted, recently by J. J. CONNINGTON, Four Defences, p. 280.

Needs must they goe whom the diuell driueth.
SAMUEL PURCHAS, Pilgrimage, i, xv, 71. (1613)
Needs must go when the devil drives.

JOHN LACY, The Old Troop. Act ii. (1672)
SOUTHEY, The Doctor. Ch. 83. (1812) SCOTT, Fortunes of Nigel: Introduction. (1822)
MASON, Bucharest Ballerina Murder, p. 114. (1940) etc., etc.

Needs must whom the devil drives.
PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Rabelias. Bk. iv, ch. 57. (1693) Motteux' rendering of "Son mande-mant est nommé faire le fault."

He that the Devil drives, feels no Lead at his Heels.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2331. (1732)
Needs must when a certain old gentleman drives.
R. H. BARHAM, St. Odile. (1840) SURTEES, Mr. Sponge's Sporting Tour. Ch. 25. (1853)

Needs must when the devil drives.
T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 13. (1843) The most widely used modern form. See BURKE, Rip Van Winkle. Act i, sc. 3. (1865) WALLACE, Clue of the Twisted Candle, p. 183. (1916) etc., etc.

7 Where none will, the Diuell himselfe must beare the crosse.

JOHN LYLX, Euphues (Arber), p. 53. (1579)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5652. (1732)

There's a Rank Regiment where the Devil carries the Colours.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Philaster. Act iv, sc. 1. (1608)

Ill's the procession, (and foreruns much losse),
Wherein men say, the Deuill beares the Crosse.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Agincourt, l. 82. (1627)
'Tis an ill company where the devil beares the banner.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 70. (1639)
There is an old saying, There can be no holy procession where the diuel carryes the crosse.

UNKNOWN, Harleian Miscellany, iii, 222. (1641)
It's an ill battel where the Divel carries the colours.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 7. (1670)
It is an ill procession where the devil holds the candle.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 22. (1670)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2902. (1732)

It's an ill procession where the Devil carries the cross.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 192. (1678)
It is an ill Army, where the Devil carries the Colours.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2896. (1732)
When devils go in procession, the devil holds the cross. (Quando i furbi vanno in processione, il diavolo porta la croce.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 3. (1853) "When evil men have all their own way, . . . the foremost in badness is foremost also in such honour as is going."

8 Qwyst, pesse! The deull ys dede!
MANLY, ed., Specimens of Pre-Shakespearean Drama: Mankind, i, 337. (c. 1470)

The deuyll, they say, is dede, The deuyll is dede.

JOHN SKELTON, Colyn Cloute, l. 36. (c. 1520)
The diuell is dead, wife (quothe he) for ye see,
I looke lyke a lambe in all your woordis to mee.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)
In the mouths of the French and Italians, . . .
The Devil is dead [signifies] that a difficulty is almost conquered, a journey almost finished, or as we say, The neck of a business broken.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 80. (1670)
When the devil is dead, he never wants a chief mourner.

R. C. TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 3. (1852) Adding, "There is no evil so great but that the interests or passions of some will be so bound up with its continuance that they will lament its extinction."

<sup>1</sup> Out of whom he had cast seven devils. (παρ' ἧς ἐκβεβλήκει ἐπτά δαιμόνια.)

New Testament: Mark, xvi, 9. (c. A. D. 70) The Vulgate is, "De qua eiecerat septem daemonia."

I charge thee, Satan, housed within this man,
To yield possession to my holy prayers.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, iv, 4, 57. (1593)

Casting out devils is mere juggling; they never cast out any but what they first cast in.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Devils. (c. 1650)

<sup>2</sup> Get thee hence, Satan. (ὄπαγε, Σατανά.)

New Testament: Matthew, iv, 10. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Vade, Satana."

Get thee behind me, Satan. (ὄπαγε ὀπίσω μου, Σατανά.)

New Testament: Matthew, xvi, 23. Christ said this to Peter. The Vulgate is, "Vade post me Satana."

Get thee behind me, ye Satanias.

J. K. PAULDING, The Bucktails. Act ii, sc. 1. (1815)

<sup>3</sup> The devil loves all colliers.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. L1. (1583)
Because they are black.

<sup>4</sup> The devil is the father of lies. (Le diable est le père du mensonge.)

MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences. (c. 1550)

The Devil can equivocate as well as a shopkeeper.

JONSON, Bartholomew Fair. Act i. (1614)

The Devil himself, which is the author of confusion and lies.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. iv, mem. 1, subs. 3. (1621)

<sup>5</sup> The devil never sleeps. (Le diable ne dort jamais.)

GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences. (c. 1550) Another French proverb is, "Le diable était beau quand il était jeune" (The devil was handsome when he was young).

<sup>6</sup> What's got over the devil's back (that's by knavery), must be spent under his belly (that's by lechery).

THOMAS MIDDLETON, Michaelmas Terme. Act iv, sc. 1. (1607)

What is gotten over the Devil's back, is spent under his belly. Male parta male dilabunter. What is got by oppression or extortion is many times spent in riot and luxury.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 80. (1670) The Scots say, "What's fairly gathered is roundly spent."

Isocrates was in the right to insinuate, in his elegant Greek expression, that what is got over the Devil's back is spent under his belly.

SMOLLETT, tr., Gil Blas. Bk. viii, ch. 9. (1749)
What the devil throws over his back has got to come down under his belly.

MARJORIE RAWLINGS, Benny and the Bird-Dogs. (1940)

<sup>7</sup> The devil's at home.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, The World Tost at Tennis. (1620) "Why, will he have it in's house, when the proverb says, The devil's at home?"

The devil's at home, is a phrase; and our modern ladies live as if they thought so.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison, i, 231. (1753)

A foolish proverb says, "the devil's at home"; But he is here and tempts in every room.

CRABBE, The Borough. Letter xix, l. 56. (1810)

<sup>8</sup> Whoever hath Satan as his fellow, hath an evil companion.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, iv, 38. (c. 622)

<sup>9</sup> Betwixt the devil and the deep sea.

ROBERT MONRO, Expedition, ii, 55. (1637) See under DILEMMA.

<sup>10</sup> There will be the Devil upon Dun. This is a worse business than that t'other day.

PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Rabelais. Bk. iv, ch. 33. (1708)

She'd run, As would the Devil upon Dun.

WILLIAM KING, The Art of Love, lii, 82. (c. 1708)

<sup>11</sup> He must rise betimes who would cosen the devil.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Forren Newes: Newes from My Lodging. (1613)

He must rise betimes that will cozen the devil.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 19. (1659)

<sup>12</sup> The devil is the perfectest courtier.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Newes of My Morning Worke. (1613) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4483. (1732)

<sup>13</sup> He did beat the devil round the gooseberry-bush.

W. D. PARISH, Dictionary of the Sussex Dialect. To be wordy, roundabout.

What the Virginians call "whipping the devil round a stump."

UNKNOWN, Belknap Papers, i, 427. (1786) To avoid a difficulty by roundabout means.

I "whipped the devil round the stump" by hiring a white distiller, and calling him "overseer."

J. R. GILMORE (EDMUND KIRKE), My Southern Friends, p. 128. (1863)

This gentleman . . . can show him how "to whip the devil round the stump."

Congressional Globe, 16 Feb., 1871, p. 1311/2.

1 To play the devil for God's sake.

THOMAS PARK, ed., Harleian Miscellany, iv, 155. (c. 1640) "Hath ever been a common proverb, but was never entered for an article in a sober belief."

Which is no more, in short, than playing the devil in God's name.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Dissenters Sayings, p. 50. (1681)

That would be a serving, as they say, the devil for God's sake

WALTER SCOTT, The Abbot. Ch. 24. (1820) See also under GOD AND THE DEVIL.

2 Your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour. (ὁ ἀντίδικος ὑμῶν διάβολος ὡς λέων ὠρυόμενος περιπατεῖ ζητῶν καταπιεῖν.)

New Testament: I Peter, v, 8. (c. A. D. 63) The Vulgate is, "Adversarius vester diabolus tamquam leo rugiens circuit, quaerens quem devoret." Hence the name of Adversary as applied to the devil.

Our adversary the devil goeth about as a roaring lion seeking whom he may devour. (Adversarius noster diabolus tamquam leo rugiens aliquid devorare quaerens circuit.)

ST. JEROME (Hieronymus), Epistles. Epis. xxii, sec. 4. (A. D. 384)

The Adversary of God and Man, Satan.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 629. (1667)

3 Once a devil, always a devil.

A. C. PLOWDEN, Grain or Chaff, ch. 23. (1903)

4 When the devil's dead, there's a wife for Humphrey.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 61. (1678)

When the Devil's dead, there's a Widow for Humphrey.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5580. (1732)

5 He that hath shipt the devil, must make the best of him.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 125. (1678)

He that takes the devil into his boat, must carry him over the sound.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 125. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2326. (1732)

He that is shipped with the devil must sail with the devil.

DANIEL DEFOE, Captain Singleton. Ch. 1. (1720)

He that has purchas'd the Devil, must make the most of him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2152. (1732)

He who has shipped the devil, must carry him over the water.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 143. (1853) The Italians say, "Chi è imbarcato col diavolo, ha da passar in sua compagnia" (He who is embarked with the devil, must make the passage in his company); the Dutch, "Die de duivel op zijn bals haalt, moet hem werk geven" (He who has the devil on his neck must give him work).

6

The Devils child the Devils luck.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 126. (1678)

The dee's bairns have Dee's luck.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 333. (1721)

"Spoken enviously when ill people prosper."

I wish the devil's children devil's luck, that's all.

THOMAS COGAN, John Bunce, Jr., i, 240. (1776)

It is an old saying that the devil's children have the devil's luck.

HORATIO NELSON, Letter. (1798) See SOUTHEY, Life, ch. 5.

The luck of the fellow! . . . not a leg or an arm missing. . . . The devil's children have the devil's luck.

CHAMIER, Tom Bowling. Ch. 30. (1841)

7

If the Devil be a Vicar, thou wilt be his clerk.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 171. (1670)

If the Dee'l be Vicar, you'll be Clerk.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 196. (1721)

"Spoken of trimmers, turn-coats, and time-servers."

8

More like the devil than St. Lawrence.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 256. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3457. (1732)

9

He laid hold on the dragon, that old serpent, which is the Devil. (ἐκράτησεν τὸν δράκοντα, ὁ ὄφης ὁ ἀρχαῖος, ὃς ἐστὶν Διάβολος.)

New Testament: Revelation, xx, 2. (c. A. D. 90)

The Vulgate is, "Serpentem antiquum, qui est diabolus."

They were all sent to Old Nick.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Quevedo's Visions, p. 84. (1668)

He must have sold himself to Old Scratch.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Sir Launcelot Greaves. Bk. ii, ch. 10. (1762) See under SCRATCH.

Old Scratch has got his own at last.

DICKENS, A Christmas Carol, iv. (1843)

10

The divell is seldom outshot in his own bow.

DANIEL ROGERS, Matrimonial Honour, p. 42. (1642)

The divell is never farre off: but presents this butter in so Lordly a dish, that the soul spies not the hammer and naile in his hand.

DANIEL ROGERS, Matrimonial Honour, p. 335.

11

Satan prevails not against the righteous, nor a king against the poor.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Maxim 34. (c. 1258)

12

Better to fleech [flatter] the devil than fight him.

WALTER SCOTT, The Highland Widow. Ch. 2. (1827) Referred to as "the old proverb."

13

Nay, then, let the devil wear black, for I'll have a suit of sables.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 2, 137. (1600)

<sup>1</sup> Heigh, heigh! the devil rides upon a fiddlestick: what's the matter?

SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry IV, ii, 4, 534. (1597)

Here's a fine commotion.

The Fiend rides on a Fiddle-stick.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Humorous Lieutenant. Act iv, sc. 4. (c. 1620)

<sup>2</sup> The devil can cite Scripture for his purpose.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, i, 3, 99. (1596)

The diuell has scripture for his damned ill.

ROBERT ARMIN, Two Maids of More-clacke, sig. E3. (1609)

Let no man henceforth marvel to hear heretics or hypocrites quote Scriptures, when Satan himself hath not spared to cite them.

JOSEPH HALL, Contemplations, ii, 3. (1612)

Devils, to serve their purpose, Scripture quote.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Apology, l. 313. (1761)

A sort of creeping comes over my skin when I hear the devil quote Scripture.

WALTER SCOTT, Kenilworth. Ch. 4. (1821)

Does any one doubt the old saw, that the Devil (being a layman) quotes Scripture for his own ends?

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 11. (1843)

The French say, "Le diable parle toujours en l'Évangile."

<sup>3</sup> Into every shop . . . where he [the devil] comes, he leaves an evil savour behind him.

HENRY SMITH, Sermons, ii, 36. (c. 1585)

Both devils and goats are said to go out in a stink.

THOMAS FULLER, A Pisgah-Sight of Palestine, iv, 7. (1650)

<sup>4</sup> What the deuyl and his dame schall y now doo?

SMITH, ed., York Plays, p. 300. (c. 1440) "The devil's dam," a proverbial phrase applied opprobriously to a woman.

The deuyl or hys dam.

JOHN BALE, Three Lawes, l. 1070. (1538)

But they saye that ye purchase the deuill, his dame, and all.

ROBERT CROWLEY, Works. (E.E.T.S.), p. 49. (1550)

Think on the Devil.—And his dam too.

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, Doctor Faustus. Act ii, sc. 2. (c. 1590)

Devil, or devil's dam, I'll conjure thee.

SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry VI, i, 5, 5. (1591)

It is the devil.—Nay, she is worse, she is the devil's dam.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, iv, 3, 51. (1593)

She's the devil's dam: a joyful issue.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, iv, 2, 65. (1593)

Why, she's a devil, a devil, the devil's dam.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, iii, 2, 159. (1594)

Thou poisonous slave, got by the devil himself Upon thy wicked dam, come forth!

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, i, 2, 319. (1611)

Bring you the devil and I'll bring out his dam.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 209. (1639)

I have heard of the devil's dam before, But never of his child.

WALTER SCOTT, The Doom of Devorgoil, iii, 2. (1830)

<sup>5</sup> They will find that they haue but the Deuill by the foote.

JOSEPH SWETNAM, The Arraignment of Women, p. xvi. (1615)

TO HAVE A BEAR BY THE TAIL, see under BEAR.

<sup>6</sup> The Devil may pipe to his own.

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. i, sec. 1. (1855)

<sup>7</sup> Looks as if the devil was in it. (Nonne hoc monstri similest.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 334. (161 B. C.)

<sup>8</sup> The devil is God's ape. (Diabolus est Dei simia.)

TERTULLIAN, Apologeticus. (A. D. 197)

Observe how the devil is God's ape.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, i, 206. (1629) "He strives to match and parallel him, both in his words and wonders."

The devil is God's ape.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy Warre. Bk. iv, ch. 21. (1639)

"Satan," says Tertullian, "is God's ape"—a term which . . . became very general among Christians.

J. C. WALL, Devils, p. 22. (1904)

"The devil is God's ape." His work is a parody of Christ's.

ALEX. MACLAREN, Matthew, ii, 236. (1905)

<sup>9</sup> The devil corrects sin.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 60. (1666)

How the devil rebukes sin!

APHRA BEHN, The Round-Heads. Act v, sc. 2. (1682) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4485. (1732)

Satan reproves sin.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 287. (1721)

Spoken when we are reproved by wicked men.

I might have thought of the old proverb of Satan reproving sin.

WALTER SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 32. (1822)

Now really, is not this Satan reproving sin?

R. L. STEVENSON, St. Ives. Ch. 10. (1894)

One of the most deplorable examples I have ever known of Satan reproving sin.

RAMSAY MACDONALD, Speech, House of Commons, 23 Nov., 1922.

<sup>10</sup> Where the devil cannot come, he will send.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 130. (1853) Trench cites the German, "Wo der Teufel nicht hin mag kommen, da send er seinen Boten hin," and adds, "sets out to us the penetrative character of temptations, and the certainty that they will follow and find men out in their secretest retreats."

<sup>11</sup> The devil is subtle, yet weaves a coarse web.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 3. (1853)

If you have swallowed the devil, you may swallow his horns.

TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 6.

1 "Better the devil you know than the devil you don't know," is an old saying.

TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers. Ch. 26. (1857)

2 They all devil me with their bosh.

MARK TWAIN, Sketches, p. 178. (1865) To worry, annoy.

I only wanted to "devil" you jest a little.

EDMUND FLAGG, A Good Investment, ii, 52. (1872)

They devilled the poor fellow almost to death.

SWEET AND KNOX, Through Texas, iii, 47. (1884)

You've been deviling him ever since ybu came into this country.

R. CUMMINS, Sky-High Corral, p. 17. (1924)

3 Various evasions. . . . such as are vulgarly called "cheating the Devil."

RICHARD WHATELY, Elements of Rhetoric (7th ed.): Additions, 14. (1846)

4 The deucl him hawe!

UNKNOWN, Havelok the Dane, l. 1188. (c. 1300)

The dewle hym Born [burn].

UNKNOWN, Sir Cleges, l. 515. (c. 1410)

The dwille he hang you highe to dry!

UNKNOWN, The Touneley Mysteries, 175. (c. 1460)

The devil take mocking.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iii, 2, 225. (1600)

The deuce take you.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Take it, and the d—I do you good with it.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii.

If this won't fetch him, the devil fetch him, say I.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii.

5 Seldom lyys the dewyll dede by the gate.

UNKNOWN, Towneley Mysteries: II Shepherd Play, 229. (c. 1460)

"Heir Lyis," quod he, "the devill deid in a dyke. Sic ane selcouth [strange thing] saw I not this sevin yeir."

ROBERT HENRYSON, Moral Fables of Aesope, p. 113. (c. 1470)

Seldome lies the Devil dead by the dyke side.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 88. (c. 1595)

Seldom lies the Devil dead in a ditch. We are not to trust the Devil or his children, though they seem . . . without all power to hurt. . . .

Perchance this Proverb may allude to the fable of the fox, which escaped by feigning himself dead.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 79. (1670)

Long e'er the Dee'l lye dead by the dikeside.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 230. (1721)

Another Scottish form is, "It's lang ere the deil dee by the dyke-side."

Which the devil, who never lies dead in a ditch, had put into her head.

LAURENCE STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. viii. ch. 28. (1767)

6 They dyd flee fro hym, as the deuyll fro holy water.

UNKNOWN, Robert the Deuyll, l. 174. (c. 1500)

See HAZLITT, Early Popular Poetry, i, 226. The olde Proverbe how well the Divell loveth holy water.

WILLIAM LAMBARDE, A Perambulation of Kent, p. 301. (1570)

You wrong Rome's holy water, to think it the devil's drink, when the proverb says, the devil loves no holy water.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, i, 165. (1629)

To love it as the Devill loves holy water.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 287. (1678)

Nothing frights the devil like holy water,—thence comes the proverb, you know.

SUSANNA CENTILVRE, A Wife Well Managed. Sc. 4. (1715)

I love Mr. N.— as the Devil loves holy water.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

"He likes him as the devil likes holy water"; i. e. he mortally hates him.

WILLIAM CARR, The Dialect of Craven, i, 232. (1828)

7 She deuils are hard to turne.

UNKNOWN, Robin Conscience, l. 212. (c. 1550)

See HAZLITT, Early Popular Poetry, iii, 240

8 God made bees, and bees made honey,

God made man, and man made money,

Pride made the devil, and the devil made sin;

So God made a cole-pit to put the devil in.

UNKNOWN. A miner's jingle, transcribed by James Henry Dixon from the flyleaf of an old Bible belonging to a miner living near Hutton-Henry.

II—Give the Devil His Due

9 An apology for the Devil: It must be remembered that we have heard only one side of the case. God has written all the books.

SAMUEL BUTLER: Note-Books. (c. 1890)

10 As a rule the devils have been better friends to man than the gods.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Speech, Boston, 23 April, 1880.

11 Divels are not so blacke as they be painted, . . . nor women so wayward as they seeme.

THOMAS LODGE, A Marguerite of America, 84. (1596)

We paint the devil foul, yet he

Hath some good in him, all agree.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church: Sinne. (1633)

The devil is not so black as he is painted.

JAMES HOWELL, Instructions for Forreine Travell, p. 65. (1642) SCOTT, The Monastery

Ch. 24. (1820) SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iii. (1903) etc., etc. The saying is common to many languages in practically the same form. The Italians say, "Il diavolo non è così brutto come si dipinge"; the Germans, "Der Teufel ist nie so schwarz, als man ihn mahlt"; the French, "Ne faites pas le diable plus noir qu'il n'est" (Don't make the devil blacker than he is).

They use their adversary according to the Proverb, painting the Devil blacker than he is.

RICHARD WHITLOCK, Zoötamia, p. 271. (1654)
The Dee'l is no worse than he's called.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 306. (1721)
"Apply'd to those who speak worse of bad men than they deserve."

The diel's no sae ill as he's ca'd.

WALTER SCOTT, Guy Mannering. Ch. 32. (1815)
As if the devil was not so black as he was painted.

DANIEL DEFOE, History of the Devil. Pt. ii, ch. 6. (1726) In the same chapter, Defoe has, "Every devil has not a cloven foot."

Fear kills more people than yellow fever. . . .
The devil's not half so black as he's painted—nor the yellow fever half so yellow.

MARRYAT, Peter Simple. Ch. 19. (1833)

<sup>1</sup>
Giue them their due though they were diuels.
JOHN LYLE (?), Pappe with an Hatchet, p. 31. (1589)

He was never yet a breaker of proverbs: he will give the devil his due.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, i, 2, 132. (1597)

I will take up that with "Give the devil his due."

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iii, 7, 127. (1599)

The Devil will have his due.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Loyall Subject. Act i, sc. 3. (1618)

Let every man speak as he finds and give the devil his due.

JOHN DRYDEN, The Wild Gallant. Act ii, sc. 2. (1663)

Tho' I give the devil his due, I still defy him.

BERNARD MANDEVILLE, The Virgin Unmask'd, p. 28. (1709)

You have always used me in an officer-like manner, that I must own, to give the devil his due.

SMOLLETT, Peregrine Pickle. Ch. 15. (1751)

You certainly have great merit. I will give the devil his due.

J. R. PLANCHÉ, Extravaganzas, i, 25. (1825)

Being of that honest few

Who give the Fiend himself his due.

TENNYSON, To the Rev. F. D. Maurice. (1855)

We must give even Satan his due.

MARK TWAIN, A Connecticut Yankee, p. 151. (1889)

<sup>2</sup>
It's a sin to belie the devil.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 125. (1678)
See under LYING.

<sup>3</sup>
The prince of darkness is a gentleman.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iii, 4, 148. (1605) STR

JOHN SUCKLING, The Goblins, iii, 2. (1638)

<sup>4</sup>
What, can the devil speak true?

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, i, 3, 106. (1606)

The devil sometimes speaks the truth.

HENRY GLAPTHORNE, The Lady Mother. Act i. sc. 3. (1635)

Truth may sometimes come out of the Devil's Mouth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5308. (1732)

<sup>5</sup>
The devil is a good fellow, if one can him please.

NATHANIEL WOODS, The Conflict of Conscience. Act iii, sc. 3. (1581)

The Devil is good when he is pleased.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 214. (1639)

The devil, they say, is good when he is pleased. But Christ and his saints when displeased.

JOHN BUNYAN, Seasonable Counsell. (1684)

The Deel's good when he's pleas'd. Spoken to people who readily take every thing amiss.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 333. (1721)
He is good as long as he's pleas'd; and so is the Devil.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1916. (1732)
She is very good-humoured.—Ay, my lord; so is the devil when he's pleased.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

They say the devil is amusing when pleased.

LORD BYRON, Letters, ii, 257. (1813)

III—Speak of the Devil

<sup>6</sup>
Speak of the Dee'l, and he'll appear. Spoken when they, of whom we are speaking, come in by chance.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 299. (1721)

It is according to the old proverb, "talk of the devil and he'll appear," for we were just speaking of you.

NATHAN BAILEY, tr., Erasmus' Colloquies: Family Discourse. (1725) This is Bailey's rendering of the Latin, "You appear like the wolf in the fable" (Lupus in fabula), the progenitor of all these variations. See TERENCE, Adelphoe, l. 537, under WOLF. In some form, it is a proverb in many languages.

He's just coming toward us—talk of the devil.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738) See also SCOTT, Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 15. (1822)

MARRYAT, King's Own. Ch. 25. (1830), etc.

Talk of the devil, and he is sure to heave in sight directly.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 1. (1843)

Speak of the devil. We was just talkin' about you.

EUGENE O'NEILL, Anna Christie. Act i. (1921)

<sup>7</sup>
Since therefore 'tis to combat evil,

'Tis lawful to combat the Devil;

Forthwith the Devil did appear,

For name him, and he's always near.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Hans Carvel. (1721)

<sup>8</sup>
The devil is never nearer than when we are talking of him.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 80. (1678)

Talk of the devil, and he'll come or send.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 125.

<sup>9</sup>
Talk of the Devil, and he's presently at your elbow.

GIOVANNI TORRIANO, Piazza Universale di Proverbi Italiani, p. 134. (1666)

Talk of the Devil and he's at your elbow.

VANBRUGH, Aesop. Pt. i, act ii, sc. 1. (1698)

Talk of the Devil, and see his horns.

UNKNOWN, Catalpus, p. 72. (1672)
Speak o' the devil and behold his horns!

THOMAS KNIGHT, The Turnpike Gate. Act ii, sc. 1. (1799)

Talk of the devil and his imps appear.

CHARLES BURKE, Rip Van Winkle. Act i, sc. 1. (1865)

Talk of the angels. Here she is.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 53. (1852)

Talk of an angel and you'll hear his wings.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 106. (1902)

There are many other variants. The Danes say, "Call not the devil: he will come fast enough without"; the Irish, "Evil comes by talking of it"; the Arabs, "Talk of the absent and he will appear," and also, "When the wolf comes into your mind, prepare a stick for him"; the French say, "A force de peindre le diable sur les murs, il finit par apparaître en personne" (By dint of painting the devil on the walls, he ends by appearing in person) and the Germans have the same proverb; the Chinese say, "Speak of Ts'ao Ts'ao and Ts'ao Ts'ao appears in person."

IV—When the Devil Was Sick

1 When the wolf was sick, he wished to be a monk, but when he recovered he was a wolf as before. (Lupus languebat monachus tunc esse volebat, Sed cum convaleuit lupus ut ante fuit.)

WALTER BOWER, Scotichronicon, ii, 292. (c. 1440) Bower, or Bowmaker, was Abbot of Inchcolm, and so most probably a maker as well as collector of these medieval jingles, of which the monks were so fond. One of the variations was, "Cum languebat lupus, agnus ut esse volebat; Postquam convaleuit, talis ut ante fuit" (When the wolf was sick, he wished to be as a lamb; but after he recovered, he was just as before). This is the version used in the Gesta Romanorum, in Tale 63 (c. 1450), and in other old chronicles.

The Devil was sick, then he would be a Monk; The Devil got well, and was a Devil as before (Aegrotat daemon, monachus tunc esse volebat; Daemon convaleuit, daemon ut ante fuit.)

UNKNOWN. A jingle, which has circulated since the early Middle Ages, in French, Italian, English, German, Spanish, and other European languages, as well as in Latin. It was used by Luther and Melancthon, and preserved in Joe Miller's Complete Jest Book. See Notes and Queries, ser. viii, vol. xii, p. 331; TAYLOR, The Proverb, p. 51.

The diuell was sicke and crasie;

Good woulde the monke bee that was lasie.

LEWIS EVANS, Withals' Dictionary Revised, sig. K8. (1586)

God had need to take what devotion he can get at our hands in our misery, for when prosperity returns, we forget our vows. . . . "The devil was sick, the devil a monk would be; The devil was well, the devil of monk was he."

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, i, 111. (1629)

The Dev'l was sick, the Dev'l a Monk would be; The Dev'l was well, the Dev'l a Monk was he.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Fables. No. 111. (1692)

"This applies to those that promise more in their adversity than they either intend, or are able to make good in their prosperity." Interpolated by MOTTEUX in his translation of Rabelais, bk. iv, ch. 24, following Rabelais's citation of the Italian proverb, "Passato el periculo, gabato el santo" (The danger past, the saint forgotten). See under DANGER.

When the Devil was sick, the Devil a Saint would be;

When the Devil was well, the Devil a Saint was he.

SAMUEL SMILES, Thrift, p. 314. (1875) The French say, "Quand le diable devient vieux, il se fait ermite" (When the devil becomes old, he makes himself a hermit), and the Italians have the same proverb, "Il diavolo, quand' è vecchio, si fa romito."

2 We are never so virtuous as when we are ill. (Optimos esse nos, dum infirmi sumus.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Letters. Bk. vii, epis. 26. (c. A. D. 100) Another form is, "Quum infirmi sumus, optimi sumus."

In the hour of distress, a vow; in the hour of release, forgetfulness.

Midrash: Genesis Rabbah, lxxxi, 2. (c. 550)

In the time of affliction, a vow; in the time of prosperity, an inundation: or a greater increase of wickedness. The Devil was sick, the Devil a monk would be; The Devil was well, the Devil a monk was he.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 403. (1678)

3 Eaten bread is forgotten.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs. (1678) See under BREAD. As soon as you have drunk, you turn your Back upon the Spring.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 728. (1732) When times are easy we do not burn incense, but when trouble comes we embrace the feet of Buddha.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 135. (1937) The Chinese also say, "Cross a bridge, then throw away the staff."

After the swallowing the scalding is forgotten.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 445. (1938)

A Japanese proverb.

When the patient is cured he forgets the healing hand.

CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 521. Arabic.

DEVOTION

4 Devotion, mother of obedience.

SAMUEL DANTEL, The Civile Warres. Bk. vi, st. 33. (1609) See also under IGNORANCE.

Devotion! daughter of Astronomy!

YOUNG, Night Thoughts, ix, 769. (1742)

5 Great devotion requires great sacrifice. (Shen ngai' pi' ta' fei.)

LAO-TSE, Tao-tek-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 44. (c. 550 B. C.) Old, tr.

<sup>1</sup>
The image of devotion. (Pietatis imago.)
VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 405. (19 B.C.)

DEW

<sup>2</sup>
They pour sweet dew upon his tongue, and from his lips flow gracious words. (τῷ μὲν ἐπὶ γλῶσση γλυκερὴν χεῖουσιν ἑρσην, | τοῦ δ' ἔπε' ἐκ στόματος ρεῖ μέλιχα.)

HESIOD, Theogony, l. 83. (c. 800 B.C.)
For he on honey-dew hath fed,
And drunk the milk of Paradise.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Kubla Khan, l. 53. (a. 1834)

<sup>3</sup>
Each blade of grass has its drop of dew. (I
'tioa 'tsao i ti lu.)

KANG-HSI, Sacred Edict. Sec. 3. (c. 500 B.C.)
As cited by DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 187. SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs, puts it a little differently, "Yi kên ts'ao yu yi kên ts'ao ti lu shui yang" (Every blade of grass has its share of the dews of heaven).

Ilka blade of grass Keps its ain drap o' dew.
JAMES BALLANTINE, Its Ain Drap o' Dew (c.
1871)

<sup>4</sup>
The night of dew that on my cheeks down flows.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 3, 29.
(1595)

Fetch'd some dews of pity from the eyes.
BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, *Contemplations: Old
Testament*, xx, 3. (1612)

My eyes Have not enough of funeral dew.
SIR WILLIAM DAVENANT, Love and Honour Act
iii. (1649)

Those poor eyes that stream'd with dew.
WALTER SCOTT, Lord of the Isles. Canto iv, st.
16. (1814)

The dew Dwelt in her eyes.
TENNYSON, The Princess, vii, 120. (1847)

<sup>5</sup>
Does she feed on dewdrops, like the cricket?
(μὴ πρῶκας σιτίζεται ὥσπερ ὁ τέττιξ;)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. iv, l. 16. (c. 270 B.C.)
Referring to an emaciated heifer. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, iv, 16, with the Latin,
"Rore ne vivit more cicadae." Said jestingly of persons inordinately fat, especially if they pretend to have slender appetites. "Like a chameleon he feeds on air."

He lived upon dew, after the manner of a grasshopper.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt ii,
sec. 11. (1643)

The cicada which feeds upon dewdrops, though half-starved, does not envy the ant which feeds upon dirt.

KAIBARA EKKEN, Ten Kun (Ten Precepts). Bk
iii, sec. 2. (1710) Ken Hoshino, tr.

<sup>6</sup>
The fat Dew of thy body [runs] down thy sides.

SAMUEL VINCENT, The Young Gallant's Academy, p. 33. (1674)

The dews of death Stood on his livid cheek.
SOUTHEY, Joan of Arc, viii, 211. (1795)
Cold on his brow breaks terror's dew.
WALTER SCOTT, Lord of the Isles. Canto v, st.
26. (1814)

<sup>7</sup>
Sowst in Bacchus dewe.
UNKNOWN, *A Myrroure for Magistrates: Duke
Clarence*, iii. (1559)

Full as a cup with the vine's burning dew.
P. B. SHELLEY, Zucca, ix. (1822)

Whiskey, or mountain dew.
WILLIAM HONE, Every-Day Book, ii, 610. (1826)

Then came the whiskey—the real dew.
EDWARD HOWARD, Rattlin, the Reefer. Ch. 35.
(1836)

He had solaced himself with a few bumpers of the "dew."
Spirit of the Times, 18 April, 1846, p. 92/1.

DIAMOND

<sup>8</sup>
Acres of Diamonds.
RUSSELL HERMAN CONWELL. Title of lecture delivered hundreds of times, 1883-1925.

<sup>9</sup>
She will be hard to cut as a rough diamond.
JOHN FLETCHER, A Wife for a Month. Act iv,
sc. 2. (1624)

Chaucer, I confess, is a rough diamond.
JOHN DRYDEN, Fables: Preface. (1700)

He was a rough-looking man, and somebody called him a rough diamond.

THOMAS KEYWORTH, Cassell's Family Magazine, Dec., 1890, p. 49.

The rough diamond. The self-made man.
CHRISTIE, Evil Under the Sun, p. 180. (1941)

He's . . . a bit of a rough diamond.
G.H.D. AND M. COLE, Toper's End, p. 217. (1942)

<sup>10</sup>
A Diamond is valuable, tho' it lie on a Dung-hill.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 74. (1732)
The Chinese say, "Better a diamond with a flaw than a pebble without."

A fine Diamond may be ill-set.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 97.

<sup>11</sup>
None cuts a diamond but a diamond.
JOHN MARSTON, The Malcontent. Act iv, sc.
3 (1604)

We're caught in our own toils. Diamonds cut diamonds.

JOHN FORD, The Lovers Melancholy. Act i, sc.
3. (1628)

God's diamonds often cut one another.
THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. iv, ch. 11.
(1642)

Wit must be foiled by wit; cut a diamond with a diamond: no other way, I'gad.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Double-Dealer. Act i,
sc. 5. (1694)

<sup>12</sup>
Diamond cut diamond, bite the Biter.
B.E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew.
(c. 1695)

Sharp's the word with her; diamonds cut diamonds.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial iii. (1738)

A file will cut a file, diamonds cut diamonds.

P. PERCIVAL, Tamil Proverbs. No. 285. (1842)

Among such fellows it was diamond cut diamond.

THACKERAY, The Luck of Barry Lyndon. Ch. 10. (1844)

He felt . . . sure that his employer would outwit him if he could; and resolved it should be diamond cut diamond.

CHARLES READE, Hard Cash. Ch. 25. (1863)

He was going on the principle of diamond-cut-diamond.

R. A. J. WALLING, A Corpse by Any Other Name, p. 201. (1943) There is an Arabic proverb, "Iron must be used to fashion iron," and the French say, "Fort contre fort (Strong against strong), or "Fin contre fin" (Sharp against sharp), or "Ruse contre ruse" (Stratagem against stratagem). See also under RETRIBUTION.

1 Fetch a sack of black diamonds from the wharf.

THOMAS MILLER, Gabarni in London, p. 43. (1849)

Coal—we may well call it black diamonds. Every basket is power and civilization. For coal is a portable climate.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Wealth. (1860)

DICE

See also Die

2 The devil invented dicing. (Aleam invenit Daemon.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, De Civitate Dei. Bk. iv: In Praeceptorio. (c. A. D. 395)

Cards and dice . . . the devil's books and the devil's bones.

UNKNOWN, Poor Robin's Almanack, 1676.

The devil is in the dice.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 70. (1678)

The devil goes shares in gaming.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 501. (1855)

Dice are known as the Devil's Bones.

J. C. WALL, Devils, p. 121. (1904)

3 It won't do to throw false dice with me. (A mi no seme ha de echar dado falso.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 47. (1605)

4 He that is afraid to shake the dice will never throw a six.

GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 355. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

5 However for real harmony, the sort that is divine, I'll take the animated dominoes.

STUART M. EMERY, I'll Say It's Music. (c. 1925)

Come on, bones, an' treat me nice,

Roll 'em, soldier, roll dem dice.

H. W. ODUM, Wings on My Feet. Ch. 1. (1929)

Quoting an American Negro song.

6 Death and the dice level all distinctions.

SAMUEL FOOTE, The Minor. Act i, sc. 1. (1760)

7 No dice. Absolutely, positively no dice.

HUGH PENTECOST, The Twenty-fourth Horse, p. 62. (1940)

'Twas no dice for Grandfather.

H. S. KEELER, The Man with the Wooden Spectacles, p. 175. (1941)

No dice. I'll get along in my own piddling fashion.

MARSHALL, Some Like It Hot, p. 175. (1941)

8 The best partner for dice-playing is not a just man but a good dice-player. (ὁ περτευτικός.)

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. i, sec. 333B. (c. 375 B.C.)

9 The gamester wants three sixes, but three aces turn up.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Maxim 97. (c. 1258)

10 The very dice obey him.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, ii, 3, 33. (1606)

11 The best cast at dice is, to cast them quite away.

HENRY SMITH, Sermons, ii, 242. (c. 1585)

The best throw of the dice is to throw them [out of the window]. (El mejor lance de los dados, es no jugarlos.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 241. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

12 Ever the dice of God fall happily. (ἀέλ γὰρ εὖ πίπτουσιν οἱ Διὸς κύβοι.)

SOPHOCLES, Fragments. No. 763. (c. 450 B.C.)

The proverbial form is, οἱ κύβοι Διὸς ἀέλ εὖπίπτουσιν. Usually rendered, "The dice of God are always loaded." In a fragment from Phaedra (Frag. 862), Sophocles has, "A wise player should accept his throws and score them without complaining."

13 They wil make dice of their bones.

ROBERT TURNBULL, Exposition of St. James, p. 103. (1591)

We will not relent till we . . . have made dice of his bones, as they say, see him rot in prison.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, iii, i, 3, 3. (1621)

We say proverbially, "make dice of his bones." the meaning whereof is, that if a prisoner die in execution, after the Crowner has viewed his body, the creditor hath dice delivered to him at the Crowne Office as having all that he is likel to have.

JOHN COOKE, Vindication of the Law, p. 22 (1646)

14 Where the abbot provides the dice, the monastery may play. (Wo der Abt die Würfel auslegt, ist's dem Konvent erlaubt zu spielen.)

UNKNOWN. A German proverb of the time of the Reformation.

DICK

<sup>1</sup> Some mumble-news, some trencher-knight, some Dick.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 464.
(1595)

<sup>2</sup> Desperate Dickes borowes now and then against the owners will all that ever he bath.

THOMAS WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique
(1580), p. 192. (1553)

His rash and desperate dickes the froward Knight did arme.

JOHN STUDLEY, tr., Agamemnon. Act i. (1581)
The desperat Dicks, which you affirm to be good bishops.

"MARTIN MARPRELATE," Epistle to the Priests
of the Convocation. (1589)

<sup>3</sup> Ye're a gone dick.

UNKNOWN, The Watch-house. Act ii, sc.1. (1814)

He's a gone dick, a dead man.

JOHN GALT, Sir Andrew Wylie of that Ilk, ii, viii, 75. (1822)

TOM, DICK AND HARRY, see under TOM.

DICKENS

<sup>4</sup> The dickens take you. (Que le mauubec vous trousque.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua: Prologe de l'Auteur.
(1534) Urquhart, tr.

What the dickens!

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Edward IV. Act iii, sc. 1.
(1599)

I cannot tell what the dickens his name is.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor,
iii, 2, 20. (1601)

What the dickens prevents you?

CHARLES BURKE, Rip Van Winkle. Act ii, sc. 2.
(1865)

What the dickens has happened to you?

BERNARD SHAW, Pygmalion. Act iv. (1912)

DIE

See also Dice, Rubicon

<sup>5</sup> The chaunce is cast upon a dee.

GOWER, Confessio Amantis, ii, 209. (1393)

<sup>6</sup> Now has the die been thrown. (ἔρριπται δὲ ὁ βῆλος.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. i, ch. 62. (c. 445 B. C.)

Let the die be cast. (ἀνεπιφθῶ κύβος.)

MENANDER, The Flute Girl. Fr. 65K. (c. 300
B. C.) The phrase seems to have been proverbial; cf. LEUTSCH AND SCHNEIDWIN, Paroemiographi Graeci, i, 385; ARISTOPHANES, fr. 637K; KOCK, Comic Attic Fragments, i, 557.

The die is cast. (Iacta alea est.)

JULIUS CAESAR, on crossing the Rubicon, after coming from Gaul and advancing into Italy against Pompey. (49 B. C.) The story is told by SUETONIUS, Twelve Caesars: Julius, sec.

32, and this is the form of the phrase which he gives.

Finally, with a sort of passion, as if abandoning calculation and casting himself upon the future, and uttering the phrase with which men usually prelude their plunge into desperate and daring fortunes, "Let the die be cast" (ἀνεπιφθῶ κύβος), he hastened to cross the Rubicon.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Caesar. Ch. 32, sec. 6. (c.
A. D. 110) Plutarch repeats the phrase in his Life of Pompey, sec. 60, and in the Moralia, sec. 206C. Caesar undoubtedly quoted the Greek proverb, and it was his use of it made it famous. Since it employs the imperative, Erasmus was justified in correcting the Latin as given by Suetonius to "Alea iacta esto" (Let the die be cast).

Is the die cast?

SIR THOMAS HERBERT, Travels, A, iii, b. (1634)
I never wished so much as now that I had stayed in Ireland; but the die is cast.

SWIFT, Journal to Stella, 31 May, 1712.

Caesar . . . throws himself into the river, saying, . . . It is done: the Die is thrown.

JOHN OZELL, tr., Vertot's Roman Republic. Vol.
ii, ch. 13. (1720)

The die was now cast.

JOHN ADAMS, Conversation, with Jonathan
Sewall, 1774. See ADAMS, Works, iv, 8

The die is cast—I cannot go back.

GEORGE MEREDITH, The Egoist. Ch. 27. (1879)
The Germans says, "Es sei gewagt" (Let it be risked).

He writes . . . "I should like to cast the die for Love or Death." . . . It was for death that the die was cast.

SIDNEY COLVIN, Keats, p. 181. (1887)

<sup>7</sup> I have set my life upon a cast,
And I will stand the hazard of the die.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, v, 4, 9. (1592)

By the hazard of the spotted die,
Let die the spotted.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, v, 4, 34. (1608)

DIET

<sup>8</sup> Nature delights in the most plain and simple diet. Every animal but man, keeps to one dish.
JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator, 13 Oct., 1711.

<sup>9</sup> A diet including an abundance of milk is most suited to the bodies of children.

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. vii, ch. 15, sec. 1. (c.
330 B. C.) Aristotle was before his time.

<sup>10</sup> A cheerful and good heart will have a care of his meat and diet.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus),
xxix, 25. (c. 190 B. C.)

Hir dyete was accordant to hir cote.
Repleccioun ne made hir never syk;
Attempree dyete was al hir phisyk,
And exerceyse, and hertes suffisaunce.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Nonne Prees-tes Tale, l. 16. (c. 1387)

<sup>1</sup> Diet cures more than the lancet. (Mas cura la dieta, que la lanceta.)

THOMAS FIELDING, Proverbs of All Nations, p. 122. (1824) A Spanish proverb. "With respect to health," says Fielding, "the proverb is a good recipe, but it ought to have included exercise. Diet and exercise are the two physicians of Nature."

Abstinence is the best medicine.

P. PERCIVAL, Tamil Proverbs. No. 1074. (1842) Diet cures more than doctors.

CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 82. (1875)

<sup>2</sup> I cannot perceive that anie kinde of regular diet profiteth the bodie anie thing more, but to abate it, and to debilitate nature.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 135. (1574) Young, tr.

Dieted bodies are but bridges to physicians' mindes.

THOMAS MUFFET, Health's Improvement, p. 8. (1655) Quoted as an "addle proverb." Muffet adds, "More rubard and less diet."

<sup>3</sup> A little in the morning, nothing at noone, And a light supper doth make to live longe.

J. O. HALLIWELL, ed., Reliquiae Antiquae, i, 208. (c. 1550)

A little in the morning is enough, enough at dinner is but a little; a little at night is too much.

UNKNOWN, Helpe to Discourse, p. 125. (1619) A little with quiet is the only diet.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640) See under LITTLE.

<sup>4</sup> Whatsoever was the father of a disease, an ill diet was the mother.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1046. (1650)

<sup>5</sup> First you riot, and then you diet.

LANGDON MITCHELL, The New York Idea. Act i. (1906)

<sup>6</sup> The best doctors in the world are doctor diet, doctor quiet, and doctor Merryman.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738) See under DOCTOR.

DIFFERENCE

<sup>7</sup> There is a difference between Peter and Peter. (Algo va de Pedro á Pedro.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 47. (1605) Know you not, the proverbe tels us: That there is a great deale of difference betwixt Peter and Peter?

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina, p. 130. (1631)

There is some Difference between Peter and Peter.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4937. (1732) Strange! all this difference should be "Twixt Tweedledum and Tweedledee.

JOHN BYROM, On the Feuds between Handel and Bononcini. (c. 1760) Wrongly attributed to Pope and to Swift.

<sup>8</sup> Distinction without a difference.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. vi, ch. 13. (1749)

A true Yankee distinction, egad, without a difference.

ROYALL TYLER, The Contrast. Act ii, sc. 2. (1787) Chaw over a lot of gold-leaf distinctions.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 35. (1884)

<sup>9</sup> There is Difference between living long and suffering long.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4893. (1732)

<sup>10</sup> As different as figs from cress. (ὅσῳ διαφέρει σῦκα καρδάμων.)

HENIOCHUS, Troxilos. Frag. (c. A. D. 350) See KOCK, Comicorum Atticorum Fragmenta, ii, 431.

<sup>11</sup> The difference betwene staryng and starke blynde

The wyse man at all tymes to folow can fynde.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546) Consider with thy selfe, the great difference betwene staryng and starke blynde.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 39. (1579) Hee mought haue spied a difference betweene staryng, and starke-blinde.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works, ii, 235. (1593)

There's difference between staryng and stark mad.

JOHN FORD, The Lovers Melancholy. Act ii, sc. 2. (1629)

There's difference between staryng and stark blind (or mad). . . . If you read it stark mad, it signifies that we ought to distinguish, and not presently pronounce him stark mad that stares a little. . . . If you read it stark blind, then it is a reprehension to those who put no difference between extremes, as perfect blindness and Lynceus his sight.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 79. (1670)

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

There's odds 'twixt staryng and stark mad.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Ode upon Ode. (1787)

<sup>12</sup> He sees the difference between a shirt and a suit. (Videt tunica et toga quid sit.)

LUCILIUS, Satires. Bk. xv, frag. 542, Loeb. (c. 123 B. C.)

There is no more difference betweene them, then betweene a Broome, and a Beesome.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 309. (1580)

There are fagots and fagots. (Il y a fagots et fagots.)

MOLIERE, Le Médecin Malgré Lui. Act i, sc. 5. (1666)

<sup>13</sup> Oh! what a difference in the morning!

FELIX MCGLENNON, Oh! What a Difference in the Morning! (1891)

<sup>14</sup> Differing but in degree, of kind the same.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 490. (1667)

<sup>15</sup> The common course, when parties disagreed, was what the vulgar phrase called "to split the difference."

WILLIAM PITT, Speeches, i, 85. (c. 1775)

My Aunt, coming in, began to split the difference, by seriously advising me to think of neither.

The Generous Attachment, I, 213. (1787)

The result will usually be . . . what is popularly called "splitting the difference."

WHEATELY, Elements of Rhetoric, p. 23. (1846)

The difference is wide that the sheets will not decide.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 201. (1678)

When men come face to face, their differences vanish. (Shih p'a tang mien.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1760. (1875)

O, the difference of man and man!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iv, 2, 26. (1605)

Because it makes no difference. (ὅτι οὐδὲν διαφέρει.)

THALES, when asked why he did not die, after he had declared that there was no difference between life and death. (c. 600 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Thales. Bk. i, sec. 36

Between Trojan and Tyrian I will make no difference. (Tros Tyriusque mihi nullo discrimine agetur.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 574. (c. 19 B. C.)

DIFFICULTY

Difficulty is a severe instructor.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France. (1790)

Difficulty is the nurse of greatness.

W. C. BRYANT, Speech of Welcome to Kossuth, 15 Dec., 1851.

He wolde sowen som difficultee,
Or springen cokkel in our clene corn.

CHAUCER, Shipman's Prologue, l. 20. (c. 1386)

What is difficult? To keep a secret, to employ leisure well, to be able to bear an injury. (τί δύσκολον, τὸ τὰ ἀπόρρητα σιωπῆσαι, καὶ σχολὴν εὖ διαθέσθαι, καὶ ἀδικοῦμενον [δύνασθαι] φέρειν.)

CHILON, Apothegm. (c. 550 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Chilon. Bk. i, sec. 69.

The greater the difficulty, the greater the glory. (Quo difficilior, hoc praeclarior.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, sec. 64. (c. 45 B. C.)

I remember'd your old Roman axiom,
The more the danger, still the more the honour!

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Rule a Wife and Have a Wife. Act iv, sc. 1. (1624) See under DANGER.

The more harde the fight is, the more haughtie is the conquest, and the more doubtfull the battayle, the more doubtie the victory.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Sinorix and Camma, p. 21. (1576) In Germanicus and Agrippina, p. 61, the proverb is repeated in more characteristic form: "Things the more hard the more haughty, high, and heavenly."

The sweetest grapes hang the highest. (Die süssesten Trauben hängen am höchsten.)

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 110. (1902) A German proverb.

It is difficulties which show what men are. (αἱ περιστάσεις εἰσὶν αἱ τοῖς ἀνδράσι δεικνύουσαι.)

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. i, ch. 24. (c. A. D. 100)

A difficulty raiseth the spirits of a great man.

LORD HALIFAX, Maxims. (1693) Works, p. 248.

All Things are difficult before they are easy.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 560. (1732)

Difficulty makes Desire.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1284. See also under PROHIBITION.

Attempt easy tasks as if they were difficult, and difficult tasks as if they were easy. (La fácil se ha de emprender como dificultoso, y lo dificultoso como fácil.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 204. (1647)

Nothing is difficult to mortals. (Nil mortalibus ardui est.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 3, l. 37. (23 B. C.)

Nothing is really difficult which the mind enjoins itself to endure. (Nihil esse difficile cuius sibi ipsa mens patientiam indiceret.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. ii, ch. 12, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 55)

In the world there is nothing difficult; it is men's hearts which lack resolution.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 279. (1872)

It is very rare that you meet with obstacles in this world which the humblest man has not the facilities to surmount.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Tuesday. (1849)

To solve one difficulty by raising another. (Litem quod lite resolvit.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 103. (35 B. C.)

Difficulty is, for the most part, the daughter of idleness.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler No. 129. (1750)

He who accounts all things easy will have many difficulties. (Nan ssü pi' tso' yü i'.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 63. (c. 550 B. C.) Old, tr.

Hard things are compassed oft by easy means.

PHILIP MASSINGER, A New Way to Pay Old Debts. Act v, sc. 1. (1625)

Many things difficult to design prove easy to performance.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas Ch. 13. (1759)

Nothing, unless it is difficult, is worth while. (Nulla nisi ardua, virtus.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. ii, l. 537. (c. 1 B. C.)

Good things are difficult. (χαλὰρὰ τὰ καλὰ.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: The Education of Children. Sec. 6C. (c. A. D. 95) Quoted as a proverb.

For easle things, that may be got at will,
Most sorts of men doe set but little store.
EDMUND SPENSER, Amoretti. Sonnet xxvi. (1594)
Never ought was excellent assayde,
Which was not hard t' achieve and bring to end.
SPENSER, Amoretti. Sonnet li.

1 He who begs for what is difficult says no to himself. (Negat sibi ipse qui quod difficile est petit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 460. (c. 43 B. C.)

2 A hundred paths present a hundred difficulties. (Pai pan tao lu pai pan nan.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 88. (1875)

3 Nothing is so easy but it becomes difficult when done with reluctance. (Nullast tam facilis res quin difficilis siet quam invitus facias.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timoroumenos, l. 805. (163 B. C.) CHOICE OF DIFFICULTIES, see CHOICE.

DIFFIDENCE, see Modesty

DIGESTION

See also Appetite

4 Did but the radish digest its own self!

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 573. (1817) A reference to the Eastern belief that radishes eaten after meals help the digestion of other food, but themselves remain undigested in the stomach. "Could we but rid ourselves of the person we have asked to assist us."

5 Rustics, who have stomachs like ostriches, that can digest hard iron.

THOMAS COGAN, Haven of Health, p. 33. (1584)
My ostrich-like capacity of digestion.

WALTER SCOTT, Letter, 15 April, 1819. See also under OSTRICH.

6 A good eater must be a good man; for a good eater must have a good digestion, and a good digestion depends upon a good conscience.

DISRAELI, The Young Duke. Ch. 12. (1831)

7 Digest me no digestions.

EARL OF ESSEX, to Sir Robert Cecil. (1594)

8 A good digestion turneth all to health.

HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 60. (1630)

To eat is human, to digest divine.

CHARLES T. COPELAND, Epigram. (c. 1925)

9 So soon vpon supper (saide he) no question,
Sleepe maketh yll and vnwholsome digestion.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1546)

10 Meats of contrary qualities digest not well in the stomacke.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 211. (1576)

A man has often more trouble to digest meat than to get it.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 294. (1855)

11 Now, good digestion wait on appetite,
And health on both!

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iii, 4, 38. (1606)

A good digestion to you all.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, i, 4, 62. (1612)

Keen appetite and quick digestion wait on you and yours.

JOHN DRYDEN, Cleomenes. Act iv, sc. 1. (1692)

12 Things sweet to taste prove in digestion sour.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, i, 3, 236. (1595)

13 Heaviness and care hinder digestion.

THOMAS WILSON, The Arte of Rhetoric, p. 37 (1553)

Unquiet meals make ill digestions.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, v, 1, 74. (1593)

DIGNITY

14 If the graduates express their thoughts in English, it is understood to be infra dignitatem.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table-Talk, p. 287. (1822)

It would be infra dig. in the Provost . . . to associate with Redgauntlet.

WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Ch. 11. (1824)

Few will consent to sing; it is infra dig.

C. J. WILLS, Modern Persia, p. 312. (1883) Infra dig., an abbreviation of infra dignitatem, beneath one's dignity, is a proverbial phrase of obscure origin.

15 It is easier to grow in dignity than to make a start. (Facilius enim crescit dignitas quam incipit.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. ci, sec. 2. (c. A. D. 65)

16 But clay and clay differs in dignity,
Whose dust is both alike.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, iv, 2, 4. (1609)

17 He is a pontifical fellow; that is, proud and stately.

WILLIAM TINDALE, The Obedience of a Christian Man, p. 226. (1528)

How be it for any great courtesie he doth make,
It seemth the gentill man hath eaten a stake.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

DILEMMA

See also Choice

18 Between the altar and the stone. (Inter sacrum saxumque.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 617. (c. 200 B. C.) That is, between the altar and the sacrificial stone, with no chance of escape. Nixon, in his translation for the Loeb Classical Library, renders it, "Between the axe and the altar." "Inter malleum et incudem" (Between hammer and anvil) is another form. The Germans say, "Zwischen Amboss und Hammer." Ray, p. 150, has "Between hawk and buzzard," and there are many other variants. For BETWEEN SCYLLA AND CHARYBDIS, see SCYLLA.

Wolves on one side, dogs on the other. (Hac lupi, hac canes.)

PLAUTUS, Casina, l. 970. (c. 200 B.C.) Plautus is adapting the proverb, "Between wolves and dogs no safety lies" (Inter lupos et canes nullam salutem esse). The French say, "Entre chien et loup" (Between dog and wolf), referring to dusk or twilight, and "D'un côté le loup nous menace, et l'autre, le chien" (On one side the wolf threatens us, on the other, the dog).

On one side a wolf attacks, on the other a dog, as the saying is. (Hac urget lupus, hac canis, aiunt.)

HORACE, Satires, Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 64. (35 B.C.) In front, a precipice; in the rear, wolves. (ἔμπροσθεν κρημνός, ὀπίσθεν λύκοι.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, Chil. iii, cent. iv, No. 94. (1508) Erasmus also gives the Latin, "A fronte praecipitium, a tergo lupus."

Thou'dst shun a bear;

But if thy flight lay toward the raging sea, Thou'dst meet the bear i' the mouth.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iii, 4, 9. (1605)

Go forward and fall, go backward and mar all.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 102. (1639)

I, with my partie, did lie on our poste, as betwixt the devill and the deep sea.

ROBERT MONRO, His Expedition with the Scots Regiment, ii, 55. (1637)

Between the Deel and the deep sea; that is between two difficulties equally dangerous.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 58. (1721)

A narrow lane, and the ass is kicking.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs, No. 315. (1817)

Between the devil and the deep sea, Between the lawyer and trustee—it is difficult to decide.

LORD BYRON, Letters, v, 4. (1820)

A man is, as it were, atween the deil and the deep sea.

WALTER SCOTT, The Pirate, Ch. 18. (1821) See also KINGSLEY, Geoffrey Hamlyn, Ch. 39.

(1859) CHEYNEY, A Trap for Bellamy, p. 111.

(1941) Dark Duet, p. 148. (1943) etc., etc.

She was between the devil and the deep blue sea.

MONTÉ BARRETT, Murder at Belle Camille, p. 281. (1943)

1 He dare not swallow for fear of a bone, nor spit it out for fear there is flesh. (T'un liao p'a shih ku t'ao, t'u liao p'a shih jou.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs, No. 598. (1875)

No road up to the sky, no door into the ground. (Wu fa k'o chih, shang t'ien wu lu.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs, No. 2572.

2 Thys forked questyon; which the sophisters call an horned question.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Paraphrase upon the Newe Testament: Luke xx, 3-7. (1548) It is called a horned question, Udall goes on to explain, "because that to whether of both parties a bodye shall make a direct aunswere, he shall renne on the sharpe poyncite of the horne." In other words, the "horn of a dilemma," in scholastic Latin, argumentum cornutum, on which one is liable to be caught.

And both the Horns of Fates Dilemma wound.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Mistress: Against Hope. (1647)

[He] placed the King in a dilemma, from the horn of which he could not extricate himself.

WILLIAM JERDAN, Autobiography, iii, 10. (1853)

In disputation, the adversary who is refuted by a dilemma is said to be "fixed on the horns of a dilemma."

THOMAS FOWLER, Deductive Logic, v, 121. (1887)

There are two horns to my dilemma. If I don't get hooked on one, I will on the other.

E. S. GARDNER, The D. A. Cooks a Goose, p. 128. (1942)

DILIGENCE

See also Industry

3 A scribe who is experienced in his office will find himself worthy to be a courtier.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live, Col. 27, l. 16. (c. 700 B.C.) Griffith, tr.

Seest thou a man diligent in his business? he shall stand before kings. (Vidisti virum velocem in opere suo? coram regibus stabit.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxii, 29. (c. 350 B.C.)

He [the scribe] shall serve among great men, and appear before princes. (In medio magnatorum ministrabit, et in conspectu praesidis apparebit.)

BEN-SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxxix, 4. (c. 190 B.C.)

4 Practise diligence. (Diligentiam adhibe.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Prol. No. 14. (c. 175 B.C.)

5 Diligence is the mother of good fortune. (La diligencia es madre de la buena ventura.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote, Pt. i, ch. 46. (1605)

Pt. ii, ch. 43. (1615) Referred to as "a common proverb." Quoted by RAY, Proverbs,

p. 85; FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 1289. But the Spaniards also say, "Do falta dicha, por demas es diligencia" (Where luck is wanting, diligence avails nothing).

Diligence is the mother of good luck.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736. SAMUEL SMILES, Thrift, p. 160.

(1875) Variations are, "Diligence is the parent of success," "Diligence is the parent of virtue."

6 Diligence may be called one of the principal daughters of Virtue, for euen as the Philosopher saith, the greatest virtue that is, is to flee idleness.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 63. (1578)

Diligence is able to make the vneasyest thing, easye: the rawest thing rype, the straungest thyngs familiar, the hardest thyngs soft.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 63. The Danes say, "Diligence makes an expert workman," and the Arabs have a proverb, "Diligence is a great teacher."

<sup>1</sup> Diligence overcomes Difficulties, Sloth makes them.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1755.

<sup>2</sup> Diligence alone is a good Patrimony; but Negligence will waste a great Estate.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1288. (1732)
The Germans say, "Gross Diligenz und klein Consciencz macht reich" (Much diligence and little conscience make a man rich), and "Ohne Fleiss, kein Preis" (Without diligence no prize).

<sup>3</sup> Nights and days. (νύκτας τε καὶ ἡμέρας.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 562. (c. 800 B.C.)
Also in HOMER, as quoted by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iv, 24, who gives the Latin, "Noctesque diesque," and adds that the proverb refers to indefatigable diligence.

Turn your hand to it by night, turn it by day. (Nocturna versate manu, versate diurna.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 269. (c. 20 B.C.)
Horace is referring to writing poetry.

<sup>4</sup> To much diligence is hurtfull.

SIR THOMAS HOBY, tr., The Courtier, p. 61. (1561) "It hath bene a proverbe emonge some most excellent peincters of old time." ALL WORK AND NO PLAY, see under JACK.

<sup>5</sup> Who spins well hath a large smock.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Spanish, p. 11. (1659)
The diligent Spinner has a large Shift.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1756.

<sup>6</sup> The hand of the diligent maketh rich. (Manus autem fortium divitias parat.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, x, 4. (c. 350 B.C.)

The hand of the diligent shall bear rule. (Manus fortium dominabitur.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xii, 24.

The soul of the diligent shall be made fat. (Anima autem operantium impinguabitur.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xiii, 4.

<sup>7</sup> Diligence is to the Understanding, as the Whetstone to the Razor.

ROBERT SOUTH, Sermons: John, vii, 17. (1692)

<sup>8</sup> Diligence is the next best thing to having Saturday afternoon off.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 47. (1940)

DINNER

See also Eating, Feast

<sup>9</sup> Better is bread with a happy heart than riches with vexation.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. ix, l. 7. Repeated col. xvi, l. 13. (c. 700 B.C. Griffith, tr.)

Better is a dinner of herbs where love is, than a stalled ox and hatred therewith. (Melius est vocari ad olera cum charitate: quam ad vitulum saginatum cum odio.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xv, 17. (c. 350 B.C.)

Quoted by BRONTË, Jane Eyre, ch. 8. (1847)
Better is a dry morsel and quietness therewith, than an house full of sacrifices with strife. (Melior est buccella sicca cum gaudio, quam domus plena victimis cum iurgio.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvii, 1.

Better is an handful with quietness, than both the hands full with travail and vexation of spirit. (Melior est pugillus cum requie, quam plena utraque manus cum labore, et afflictione animi.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, iv, 6. (c. 250 B.C.)

A simple dinner in a poor man's house, without tapestries and purple, has smoothed the wrinkles from the anxious brow. (Mundaeque parvo sub lare pauperum | cenae sine aulaeis et ostro | sollicitam explicuere frontem.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 29, l. 14. (23 B.C.)

Better to eat onions with a tranquil mind than to dine on poultry with a troubled conscience.

Babylonian Talmud: Pesachim, fo. 114a. (c. 450)

Better is a morsel of bread with joye than an house full of delyces, with chydyinge, seith Salomon.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Persones Tale, Sec. 42. (c. 1389)

I would rather choose to begge,
Or sit with a rosted appull, or an egge,
Where mine appetite serueth me to bee,
Than euery daie to fare lyke a duke with thee.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1562)

A crust with quietnesse, shall be better then Quayles with vnrest.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 243. (1580)

Better fare hard with good Men, than feast it with bad.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 893. (1732)
Better cabbage with peace than sugar with grumbling. (κάλλιον λάχανα μὲ εἰρήνην, παρά σάκχαρι μὲ γλύνιαν.)

NEGRIS, Modern Greek Proverbs, p. 65. (1831)

Ignorance and bungling with love are better than wisdom and skill without.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Wednesday. (1849)

Better a bit of bread with love, than a capon with strife. (Mas vale un pedazo de pan con amor, que gallinas con dolor.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 124. (1853) CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 269, gives a shorter form of this Spanish proverb: "Mas vale pan con amor, que gallina con dolor."

Oh, better, no doubt, is a dinner of herbs,
When season'd by love, which no rancour disturbs,

And sweeten'd by all that is sweetest in life
Than turbot, bisque, ortolans, eaten in strife!

OWEN MEREDITH (E. R. BULWER-LYTTON), Lucile. Pt. i, canto ii, st. 22. (1860)

A bed of stones with friends is better than a bed of down with those we do not love.

STEELE MACKAYE, Paul Kaurar. Act iii. (1888)

I would rather live on canned soup eaten in jolly company than dine upon the finest delicacies that had been cooked with some woman's heart's blood.

D. H. FINK, Release from Nervous Tension, p. 106. (1943)

1 Great is the meal which brings together people who are distant to each other.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 103b. (c. 450)

2 A warmed-up dinner was never worth much. (Un dîner réchauffé ne valut jamais rien.)

NICOLAS BOILEAU, Le Luitrin. Pt. i, l. 104. (1674)
See also under CABBAGE.

3 God send us of our own when rich men go to dinner.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 37. (1639)

4 A good dinner is worth more than a fine coat. (Mieux vaut bon repas que bel habit.)

ISAAC D'ISRAËL, Curiosities of Literature, Ser. ii: The Philosophy of Proverbs. (1820)

5 Reflect carefully beforehand with whom you are to eat and drink, rather than what you are to eat and drink. (Ante circumspiciendum est, cum quibus edas et bibas, quam quid edas et bibas.)

EPICURUS, Fragments. Frag. 542, Usener. (c. 300 B. C.) As quoted by SENECA, Ad Lucilium, xix, 10.

As Epicurus said, one should not so much regard what he eats as with whom he eats. (Il ne fault pas tant regarder ce qu'on mange, qu'avecques qui on mange.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 13. (1595)

Choose thy company before thy drink.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 24. (1639)

The company, and not the charge, make the feast.

ISAAC WALTON, The Compleat Angler. (1653)
Quoted as a proverb.

He showed me his bill of fare to tempt me to dine with him. "Foh," said I, "I value not your bill of fare; give me your bill of company."

SWIFT, Letter to Stella, 2 Sept., 1711.

It isn't so much what's on the table that matters, as what's on the chairs.

W. S. GILBERT, Epigram. (c. 1895) As quoted by PIERSON, Gilbert and Sullivan.

This has been crystallized into the terse English proverb, "The Company makes the feast."

HACKWOOD, Good Cheer, p. 361. (1911)

6 A dinner of meats without the company of a friend is like the life of a lion or a wolf. (Sine amico visceratio leonis ac lupi vita est.)

EPICURUS, Fragments. Fr. 452, Usener. (c. 300 B. C.) Quoted by SENECA, Ad Lucilium, xix, 10.

Who eats his cock alone, must saddle his horse alone.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 350. (1640)

Who eats his dinner alone must saddle his horse alone.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 8. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5701. (1732)

He who eats alone, chokes alone.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 646.

(1817) In the East, to eat alone is disgraceful, and those who do so are despised as misers, deserving suffocation.

7 Neither fire nor weapon,
Be it of bronze or of iron,
Keeps them from flocking to dinner.

(οὐ πῦρ οὐδὲ σιδήρος

οὐδὲ χαλκὸς ἀπέτρχει

μὴ φοιτᾶν ἐπὶ δεῖπνον.)

EUPOLIS, The Flatterers. (c. 425 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, sec. 778E.

Let us now go home, for it is dinner time.

Apocrypha: History of Susanna, 13. (c. 166 B. C.)

Hit's a mighty deaf nigger dat don't year de dinner-ho'n.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Uncle Remus: Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

8 Nice eaters seldom meet with a good dinner.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3540. (1732) FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1751.

9 You to the Cabbage, and I to the Beef.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6007. (1732)

No broth, no ball; no ball, no beef.

MRS. GASKELL, Cranford. Ch. 4. (1853) "We used to keep strictly to my father's rule, 'No broth, no ball; no ball, no beef'; and always began dinner with broth. Then we had suet puddings, boiled in the broth with the beef; and then the meat itself. If we did not sup our broth, we had no ball."

10 If you want your dinner, don't offend the cook.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 523. (1937)

11 To seek his dinner in Poules with duke Humphrey.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works (Grosart), i, 206. (1592) Trow'st thou where he dined to-day? In sooth I saw him sit with Duke Humphrey.

JOSEPH HALL, Biting Satyres, iii, vii, 6. (1599)

Dine thrice a week at Duke Humphrey's table.

UNKNOWN, Penniless Parliament of Threadbare Poets. (1604)

Some breake their fasts with Duke Humphrey.

THOMAS NABBES, Covent Garden. Act iv, sc. 4. (1632)

After the death of good Duke Humphrey . . . to dine with Duke Humphrey [meant] to be dinnerless.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, ii, 345. (1662)

My mistress and her mother must have dined with Duke Humphrey, had I not exerted myself.

SMOLLETT, Roderick Random. Ch. 55. (1748)

This proverb, Fuller says, has altered its meaning. At first it meant dining at another man's table: for Humphrey [Duke of Gloucester, the open-handed son of Henry IV, renowned for his hospitality], commonly called the good Duke, kept an open table, where any gentleman was welcome to dine. After his decease, to dine with Duke Humphrey meant to go dinnerless. . . .

Fuller says, that persons who loitered about in St. Paul's church during dinner-time, were said to dine with Duke Humphrey, from a mistaken notion that he was buried there.

FRANCIS GROSE, ed., A Provincial Glossary. (1790)

One Diggory Chuzzlewit was in the habit of perpetually dining with Duke Humphrey. . . . He will have no choice but to dine again with Duke Humphrey.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 1. (1844)

I din'd with saints and noblemen,

Even sweet St. Giles and the Earl of Murray.

ROBERT SEMPILL, Banishment. Prov. 87. (1680)

The Earl of Murray was interred in St. Giles's Church, Edinburgh.

1 He that dines and leaves, lays the cloth twice.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 349. (1640)

2 Ye see your fare (sayd she).

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Pray eat, you see your dinner.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

3 Diners can not be long, where deinties want,
Where coine is not common, commons must be scant.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1546)

CAMDEN, Remains, p. 305. (1605)

4 It is no bad thing to take one's dinner in season. (οὐ μὲν γὰρ τι χέρειον ἐν ὥρῃ δείπνον ἐλίσθαι.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xvii, l. 176. (c. 850 B. C.)

5 He who dines well lives well. (Bene qui cenat bene vivit.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. vi, l. 56. (B. C. 20)

Twice more in the Epistles, Horace refers to living well: i, xi, 29, and i, xv, 45. Montaigne quotes the latter, i, 38.

6 A man seldom thinks with more earnestness of anything than he does of his dinner.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellanies. Vol. i, p. 249. (a. 1784)

7 Even the great Napoleon could not dine twice. (Même le grand Napoléon ne pouvait pas dîner deux fois.)

ALPHONSE KARR, Le Chemin le Plus Court.

(1836) "No stomach is bigger than another by a span," is a Spanish proverb which occurs in Don Quixote. See under STOMACH

8 Your supper is like the hidalgo's dinner, very little meat, and a great deal of tablecloth.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act i, sc. 4. (1843)

The eye, can it feast when the stomach is starving?

Pray less of your gilding and more of your carving.

EGERTON WARBURTON, On a Mean Host. (c. 1851)

9 Well cooked and seasoned and well talked,

[the dinner] went very well. (Bene cocto et condito, sermone bono et, libenter.)

LUCILIUS, Sermones. Frag. (c. 140 B. C.) Quoted by CICERO, Ad Atticum, xiii, 52.

10 What, did you not know, then, that to-day Lucullus dines with Lucullus? (παρά Λουκούλλου δειπνεῖ Λουκούλλος;)

LUCIUS LUCULLUS, to the servant who had provided only a small repast when his master happened to dine alone. (c. 65 B. C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Lucullus. Ch. 41, sec. 2.

11 Having half dyned, they say as it were in a proverbe, yat they are as well satisfied as the Lorde Maior of London whom they think to fare best, though he eat not most.

JOHN LYL, Euphuus (Arber), p. 437. (1580)

I have dined as well as my Lord Mayor of London.

WILLIAM ROWLEY, A Match at Midnight. Act i. (1633)

Find a satisfaction in his fare,

As great as if h' had din'd with my Lord May'r.

EDMUND GAYTON, Art of Longevity, 12. (1659)

"I have dined as well as my Lord Mayor of London." That is, as comfortably, as contentedly, according to the rule, "satis est quod sufficit" (enough is as good as a feast).

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, London, ii, 346.

(1662) See also under ENOUGH.

I have dined as well as my lord mayor.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation, Dial. ii. (1738)

12 The dinner I like is the dinner I can return. (Haec mihi quam possum reddere cena placet.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xii, No. 48. (A. D. 103)

13 He may live without love,—what is passion but pining?

But where is the man that can live without dining?

OWEN MEREDITH (E. R. BULWER-LYTTON), Lucile. Pt. i, canto ii, st. 19. (1860)

14 The most nourishing meat is first to be eaten, that ancient proverb ratifieth, Ab ovo ad mala.

THOMAS MOFFETT, Health's Improvement, p. 295. (1639) FROM EGGS TO APPLES, see under BEGINNING AND ENDING.

15 The true Amphitryon is the Amphitryon with whom one dines. (Le véritable Amphitryon | Est l'Amphitryon où l'on dine.)

MOLIÈRE, Amphitryon. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 89.

(1668) The person who provides the dinner is the real host, whether he is the master of the house or not. The story is that Jupiter assumed the likeness of Amphitryon in order to visit the latter's wife, Alcmena, and gave a banquet in her honor at Amphitryon's house. But Amphitryon, returning unexpectedly, claimed the honor of being the host. The guests and servants decided that "he who gave the feast was to them the host."

I am the true Amphitryon.

DRYDEN, Amphitryon. Act v, sc. 1. (1690)

<sup>1</sup> The fewer, the better cheer.

MOTTEUX, Rabelais, v, 4. (1693) An interpolation by MOTTEUX. STEELE, The Lying Lover, ii, 2. (1704) SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

The fewer we are, the more we will eat. (Moinous serons, plus nous mangerons.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 376. (1856)

<sup>2</sup> To pot luck. (ἐς τῆς χύτρας τύχην.)

ALEXANDER NEGRIS, Modern Greek Proverbs, p. 118. (1831) To a family dinner.

<sup>3</sup> At the end of the dinner dessert is sweet, though it follows the fullest feast. (δειπνου δὲ ληγοτος γλυκὴ τραγάλιον | καίπερ πεδ' ἀφθονον βοράν.)

PINDAR, Dirges. Frag. 124, Sandys. (c. 480 B. C.)
See ATHENAEUS, xiv, 641C.

Room can always be found for a delicacy.

Babylonian Talmud: Erubin, fo. 82b; Megillah, fo. 7b. (c. 450)

<sup>4</sup> I'll be there with my teeth shod. (Cum calcatis dentibus veniam.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 187. (c. 200 B. C.) Answering an invitation to dinner.

<sup>5</sup> A hope of getting a dinner. (Spes cenatica.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 496. (c. 200 B. C.)

Philo swears he never dines at home, and it is so; he doesn't dine at all when no one has invited him. (Numquam se cenasse domi Philo iurat, et hoc est: | non cenat, quotiens nemo vocavit eum.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, epig. 47. (c. A. D. 90)
You deem it the supreme good to eat at another's table. (Bona summa putes aliena vivere quadra.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. v, l. 2. (c. A. D. 120)

The hope of dining well deceives you.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. v, l. 166. (c. A. D. 120)

At dinner my man appears.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 38. (1640)

Then from the Mint walks forth the man of rhyme,

Happy to catch me just at dinner-time.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 13. (1733)

Never spare the Parson's wine, nor the baker's pudding.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733

<sup>6</sup> No luncheon like a student's; no dinner like a lawyer's; no supper like a merchant's. (N'est desieusner que de escoliers; dipner, que d'auocat; soupper, que de marchans.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 46. (1548)

<sup>7</sup> You make a muck-hill on my trencher, quoth the Bride. You carve me a great heap.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 77. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5936. (1732)

I can just carve pudding, and that's all; I am the worst carver in the world; I should never make a good chaplain.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

<sup>8</sup> He that would eat a good dinner, let him eat a good breakfast.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 124. (1678)

Though breakfast be good, dinner is better. (Ch'in ch'en fan hao, suan pu tê wu 'hou pao.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 348. (1875)

<sup>9</sup> At a round table, the herald's useless.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 129. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 824. (1732) A variant is, "At a round table there's no dispute of place."

<sup>10</sup> A friend's dinner is soon dight.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 229. (1678)

The French say, "Viande d'ami est bientôt prête" (A friend's meat is soon ready).

<sup>11</sup> I will make an end of my dinner; there's pip-pins and cheese to come.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, i, 2, 12. (1601)

Across the walnuts and the wine.

TENNYSON, The Miller's Daughter, l. 32. (1832)

<sup>12</sup> We were to do more business after dinner; but after dinner is after dinner—an old saying and a true.

SWIFT, Letter to Stella, 26 Feb., 1711.

A dinner lubricates business.

WILLIAM SCOTT, BARON STOWELL, Remark. (1780) See BOSWELL, Life of Johnson, viii, 67, note.

AFTER DINNER WALK A MILE, see under HEALTH.

<sup>13</sup> Serenely full, the epicure would say,

"Fate cannot harm me, I have dined to-day."

SYDNEY SMITH, A Recipe for Salad. (a. 1845)

Ascribed to Smith by his daughter, LADY HOLLAND, Memoir.

<sup>14</sup> A puzzle dinner—where you'd be puzzled which dish to try first. (Cena dubia . . . ubi tu dubites quid sumas potissimum.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 342. (161 B. C.) Horace repeats the phrase, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 77.

<sup>15</sup> Those who dine with Plato get on pleasantly the next day also. (ὡς οἱ παρὰ Πλάτωνι δειπνήσαντες καὶ εἰς αἴριον ἡδέως γίνονται.)

TIMOTHEUS, after he had dined with Plato at the Academy on the simple fare of the scholar. (c. 370 B. C.) A famous story, told by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 127B, 686A; AELIAN, Varia Historia, ii, 18; ATHENAEUS, 419D; and CICERO, Tusculan Disputations, v, 35: "Vestrae quidem cenae non solum in praesentia, sed etiam postero die iucunda sunt."

<sup>16</sup> The number of guests should begin with the Graces and end with the Muses. (Convivarum numerum incipere oportere a Gratiarum numero et progredi ad Musarum.)

VARRO, Nescis Quid Vesper Serus Vehat. (c. 50 B. C.)

Many excellent writers have set downe many orders to be observed in feasts, but the chief are these, that the feast alwayes ought to begin at the Graces, and ende at the Muses: that is, that the number of the guests be not under three, nor above nyne.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 248. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Six persons, counting the host, make the right number for a meal: if there be more, it is no meal, but a mēlée. (Sex enim convivium | cum rege iustum: si super, convivium est.)

AUSONIUS, Ephemeris. Pt. v, l. 5. (c. A. D. 370) Not fewer than three nor more than nine. (Neque pauciores tribus, neque plures novem.)

ERASMUS, Familiar Colloquies. (1531)

Seven make a banquet, nine a riot. (Septem convivium, novem convivium faciunt.)

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, The English Gentleman, p. 178. (1630) A condensation of the mediæval, "Quinque advocavi; sex enim convivium Cum rege iustum: si super, convivium est" (I have chosen five; for six are suitable for a king: if more a riot).

Seven at a feast, nine at a fray.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 598. (1681)

Seven may be Company, but Nine are Confusion.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4113. (1732)

Crowd not your table: let your numbers be Not more than seven, and not less than three

WILLIAM KING, Art of Cookery, l. 259. (1708)

Best company consists of five persons.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 132. (1709)

1 He that hath a good dinner, knowes better the way to supper.

UNKNOWN, The Fair Maid of Bristow. Sig. C1. (1605)

He that saveth his dinner will have more for supper.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 85. (1678) The French say, "Qui garde son diner il a mieux à souper." A variant is, "Mal soupe qui dine tout" (He sups badly who eats all at dinner).

2 The full dinner pail.

Republican slogan during the McKinley campaign of 1900, said to have been coined by the editor of Judge.

DIPLOMACY, see Ambassador

DIRT

3 I abominate abominable things. . . . I will not approach filth with my hands.

ANI, Papyrus: Book of the Dead. Ch. 124, l. 3. (c. 4000 B. C.)

He that deals in dirt has aye foul fingers.

ALLAN RAMSAY, Scottish Proverbs. (1737) The Italians say, "Chi si fa fango, il porco lo calpestra" (He that makes himself dirt, the swine will tread on him); the Dutch, "Wie zich onder den draf mengt, dien eten de zwijnen" (He who mixes himself with the draf, will be eaten by the swine).

She can't dish out the dirt without getting dirty.

VIRGINIA RATH, Posted for Murder, p. 103. (1942)

4 Dirt is dirtiest upon the fairest spots.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 344. (1855)

5 You must eat a peck of ashes ere you die.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 165. (1639)

Every man must eat a peck of ashes before he dies.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 57. (1670)

PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs. Ch. 79.

(1710) WALTER SCOTT, Letter, 31 Oct., 1830.

We must eat a peck of dirt before we die.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1709)

Every Man must eat a Peck of Dirt before he dies.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1433. (1732)

You must eat a peck of dirt before you die.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

It is . . . a portion of that peck of dirt which we are all said to eat in our lives without knowing it.

JAMES PAYN, Thicker Than Water. Ch. 49. (1883)

EAT A PECK OF SALT TOGETHER, see under SALT

6 Cast what dirt thou wilt, none will sticke on me.

SIR EDWARD DERING, Speeches in Matters of Religion. Ch. 1. (1642)

Fling dirt enough, and some will stick.

EDWARD WARD, Hudibras Redivivus, i, ii. 2.

(1706) See under CALUMNY.

7 "Ignorance," says Ajax, "is a painless evil"; so. I should think, is dirt, considering the merry faces that go along with it.

GEORGE ELIOT, Mr. Giffel's Love Story. (1857)

8 He jump up fo' sartin—he cut dirt and run.

J. S. FARMER, Americanisms: Cut. Negro song of 1829.

Last year . . . he cut dirt.

W. G. SIMMS, Guy Rivers, i, 64. (1834)

If you ever saw waxworks cut dirt, they cut it then.

A. B. LONGSTREET, Georgia Scenes, p. 202. (1835)

The way the cow cut dirt.

T. C. HALIBURTON, Sam Slick in England, (1843)

I ruther guess you'd better cut dirt.

ANN STEPHENS, High Life in New York, ii, 34. (1843)

Why two-thirds o' the Rebbels 'ould cut dirt, Ef they once thought thet Guv'ment meant to hurt.

J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers. Ser. ii, No. 2. (1862)

9 [He] made up for the dirt they had been eating by the splendour of his entertainment.

F. W. FARRAR, Julian Home. Ch. 9. (1859) For the insulting treatment they had received

Ef you bleedz der eat dirt, eat clean dirt.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Uncle Remus: Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

"To eat dirt" is to retract or "eat humble pie." Magazine of American History, Feb., 1885. p. 199/2.

I've eaten dirt for a month, and what do I make of it?

G. H. LORIMER, Jack Spurlock, p. 294. (1908)

1 That Dirt makes this Dust.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4337. (1732)

2 The mair dirt, the less hurt.

HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 13. (1832)

3 He that falls into the dirt, the longer he stays there the fouler he is.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 411. (1640)

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 130. (1721) "Spoken to those who lie under a slander, urging them to get themselves clear'd as soon as they can."

He that falls in the Dirt, the longer he lies, the dirtier he is.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2096. (1732)

4 What serves dirt for if it do not stink?

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 354. (1721)

"Spoken when mean, baseborn people speak proudly, or behave themselves saucily."

Dirt defies the king.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 87. "Spoken disdainfully to them that say they defy us."

5 If dirt was trumps, what hands you would hold.

CHARLES LAMB, Lamb's Suppers. Vol. ii, last ch. (c. 1830) The French say, "Il porte le deuil de sa blanchisseuse" (He is in mourning for his washerwoman, i. e., his linen is dirty).

6 Man or boy that works or plays

In the fields or the highways

May, without offence or hurt,

From the soil contract a dirt.

MARY LAMB, Cleanliness. (1809)

7 Dirt parts gude company.

SIR DAVID LYNDESAY, Justing of Watson, l. 66.

(c. 1538) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 88, who adds, "Spoken when unworthy fellows break in upon our company, which makes us . . . willing to break up."

8 If you have any noble blood in you, you will esteem him as no more than dirt. (Si quid ingenui sanguinis habes, non pluris eum facies quam lutum.)

PETRONIUS ARBITER, Satyricon. (c. A. D. 60)

Go hom, swithe, fule, drit, cherl.

UNKNOWN, Havelok the Dane, l. 682. (c. 1300)

Turn your back on them like the dirt they are.

CHARLES GIBBON, For Lack of Gold. Ch. 4. (1871)

I hate the nasty dirt.

HALL CAINE, The Manxman, II, 11. (1894)

9 Dirt is not dirtier. (Non lutumst lutulentius.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 158. (c. 194 B. C.)

10 The clartier [dirtier] the cosier.

WALTER SCOTT, The Antiquary. Ch. 26. (1816)

"There was dirt good store. Yet . . . an appearance of comfort that seemed to warrant their old sluttish proverb, 'The clartier the cosier.'"

In an arctic climate, there may perhaps be some excuse for the proverb, "the clartier the cosier."

A. AND J. LANG, Highways and Byways in the Border. Ch. 9. (1913)

11 He done you dirt.

OWEN WISTER, The Virginian, p. 267. (1902)

Somebody, five year ago . . . had done him dirt.

WILL N. HARBEN, The Georgians, p. 95. (1904)

You can . . . do any man dirt you feel like.

MARY S. WATTS, Luther Nichols, p. 90. (1923)

DISCONTENT

12 'Tis the nature of all humankind to be discontented with prosperity. (τὸ μὲν εὖ πράσσειν ἀκόρεστον ἐστὶν | πᾶσι βροτοῖσιν.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 1331. (458 B. C.)

How comes it, Maecenas, that no man living is content with his lot? (Qui fit, Maecenas, ut nemo quam sibi sortem . . . | contentus vivat?)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 1, l. 1. (35 B. C.)

Usually condensed into the proverb, "Nemo sua sorte contentus" (No man is contented with his lot).

Whence comes it that there liveth not

A man contented with his lot?

(D'où vient que personne en la vie N'est satisfait de son état?)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. xii, fab. 9. (1694)

13 Neither frieze nor woollen tunic suits them. (ἢ μήτε χλαῖνα μήτε σιούρα συμφέρει.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Frogs, l. 1459. (405 B. C.)

A proverbial saying about people who are not satisfied with anything.

You always desire what is absent, and despise what is at hand. (Semper aves quod abest, praesentia temnis.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iii, l. 957. (c. 45 B. C.)

At Rome you long for the country; in the country you extol to the stars the distant town. (Romae rus optas; absentem rusticus urbem | tollis ad astra levis.)

HORACE, Satires, Bk. ii, sat. 7, l. 28. (35 B. C.)

Fickle as the wind, at Rome loving Tibur, at Tibur Rome. (Romae Tibur amem ventosus, Tibure Romam.)

HORACE, Epistles, Bk. i, epis. 8, l. 12. (20 B. C.)

He who likes another's lot, of course dislikes his own. (Cui placet alterius, sua nimirum est odio sors.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 14, l. 11. (20 B. C.)

The ox longs for the horse's trappings; the horse when lazy longs to plough. (Optat ephippia bos, piger optat arare caballus.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 14, l. 43. (20 B. C.)

Cited by ERASMUS, i, vi, 71, and by MONTAIGNE, i, 16, the French translation being, "Le bœuf pesant voudroit porter la selle, et le cheval tirer la charrue" (The heavy ox would like to carry the saddle, and the horse draw the plough).

No state wyll be content, the poore wyll be riche, the riche wyl be myghtye, the myghtie wyll be a Prince, the Prince a kyng, the kyng feared, honoured, and also sometyme woorshipped.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 49. (1578)

None says his garner is full.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 659. (1640)

Our condition never contents us. (Notre condition jamais ne nous contente.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: L'Ane et Ses Maîtres.

Bk. vi, fab. 11. (1668) A variation of CICERO, Epist. ad Torquatum, "Everybody believes his own condition the most miserable" (Suam quisque conditionem miserrimam putat).

We love in others what we lack in ourselves.

And would be everything but what we are.

R. H. STODDARD, Arcadian Idyl; l. 30. (1851)

1 Neither pleased full nor fasting.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 34. (1639)

You are never pleas'd fow [full] or fasting.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 176. (1670)

You are never pleas'd fow [full] or fasting.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 376. (1721)

You don't know your own mind; you are neither well, full nor fasting.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

2 Though stone were changed to gold, the heart of man would not be satisfied.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs.

No. 271. (1937)

3 There is no greater pain than discontent. (Hwo' mo' ta' yü pu chih tsu.)

LAO-TSE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 46. (c. 550 B.C.) Old, tr.

None so poor as he who is discontented with his lot.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penanim (Choice of Pearls). No. 562. (c. 1050)

A man's discontent is his worst evil.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 300. (1640)

4 A discontented man knows not where to sit easy.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 347. (1640)

Discontented Minds, and Fevers of the Body, are not to be cured by changing Beds or Businesses.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1750.

The discontented Man finds no easy Chair.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1753.

5 Now is the winter of our discontent

Made glorious summer by this sun of York.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, i, 1, 1. (1594)

To the healthy man the winter of his discontent never comes.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 13 Oct., 1851.

O fire-lit Winter of my deep content!

PHYLLIS MCGINLEY, Ode to the End of Summer. (1941)

6 Content you in my discontent.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, i, 1, 80. (1594)

In pale contented sort of discontent.

JOHN KEATS, Lamia. Pt. II, l. 135. (1820)

7 Dissemble all your griefs and discontents.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, i, 1, 443. (1593)

Let thy discontents be secrets.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739.

Let thy discontents be thy secrets;—if the world knows them, 'twill despise thee and increase them.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1741.

DISCORD

8 He who sows discord will reap regret.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penanim (Choice of Pearls). No. 616 (c. 1050) And frequently in Hebrew literature.

9 The fairest harmony springs from discord. (ἐκ τῶν διαφερόντων καλλίστην ἁρμονίαν.)

HERACLEITUS. (c. 500 B.C.) Quoted by ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics, viii, 1, 6.

Discord makes concord more sweet. (Discordia fit carior concordia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 154. (c. 43 B.C.) As sharpe sauce gives a good taste to sweete meate, so trouble and adversity, makes quiet and prosperity more pleasaunt.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 141. (1576) Discord oft in musick makes the sweeter lay.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. iii, canto ii, st. 15. (1590)

I never heard So musical a discord.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, iv, 1, 121. (1596)

Discords make the sweetest airs,

And curses are a kind of prayers.

BUTLER, Hudibras, iii, i, 919. (1663)

10 A discordant concord. (Concordia discors.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 12, l. 19. (20 B.C.)

Horace is referring to the underlying principle of the philosophy of Empedocles, who held that the life of the world is due to the perpetual conflict of Love and Hate.

Inharmonious harmony. (Discors concordia.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. i, l. 433. (A.D. 7)

Agreement consists in disagreement. (Mansit concordia discors.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. i, l. 98. (c. A.D. 60)

The whole concord of the world consists in discord. (Tota huius mundi concordia ex discordia.)

SENECA, Naturales Questiones, vii, 27. (c. A.D. 62) All concord's born of contraries.

BEN JONSON, Cynthia's Revels, v, 2. (1600)

All discord, harmony not understood.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 291. (1732)

11 Discord has always reigned in the universe.

(La Discorde a toujours régné dans l'univers.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. xii, fab. 8. (1694)

12 Concord makes small things grow; discord makes great things decay. (Nam concordia parvae res crescunt, discordia maxumae dilabuntur.)

SALLUST, Bellum Jugurthinum. Ch. 10, sec. 6. (c. 40 B.C.) Rolfe translates it, "Harmony makes small states great, while discord undermines the mightiest empires."

<sup>1</sup> How shall we find the concord of this discord?
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream,
v, 1, 60. (1596)

Straining harsh discords and unpleasing sharps.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iii, 5, 28. (1595)

We are above the Pitch, out of Tune, and off the Hinges.

SIR THOMAS URQUHART, tr., Rabelais. Bk. iv, ch. 19. (1653) Urquhart's rendering of Rabelais' "Hors toute la gamme."

DISCOURSE, see Conversation

DISCRETION

See also Prudence

<sup>2</sup> Though a man has all other perfections, and wants discretion, he will be of no great consequence in the world.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator, 17 Nov., 1711.

<sup>3</sup> An ounce of discretion is worth a pound of learning.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, i, 123. (1629) Referred to as a true proverb.

An ounce of mothers wit is worth a pound of clergy.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 16. (c. 1595)

An ounce of discretion is worth a pound of wit.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 79. (1670)

We are convinced of the justice of the old saying, that an ounce of mother wit is worth a pound of clergy.

SYDNEY SMITH, Persecuting Bishops. (1822)
The Italians say, "Val più un' oncia di dis-crezione che una libra di sapere."

<sup>4</sup> Discretion is the mother of virtue. (Discretio mater virtutis.)

ST. BENEDICT, Rule of the Benedictines. (c. 530)

An Italian variant is, "La discrezione è la madre degli asini" (Discretion is the mother of asses).

<sup>5</sup> Whan she to yeris of dyscrescyon Was comyn.

OSBORN BOKENHAM, Lyvys of Seyntys, p. 47.
(1447)

The age of discretion is saide the age of xiiii yeres.

SIR THOMAS LITTLETON, Tenures, fo. 23a.
(1574) This is confirmed by WHARTON, Law Dictionary, p. 21/1: "A male at fourteen is at years of discretion."

Wee'le have no babes to be Baptized,
Vntill they come to yeerrs of ripe discretion.

SAMUAL ROWLANDS, Hel's Broke Loose, l. 24.
(1605)

At the years of discretion.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, *Characters: Her Next
Part*. (1613)

Ever since I came to years of discretion.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tender Husband. Act ii,
sc. 1. (1703).

He's not come to years of discretion yet.

GOLDSMITH, She Stoops to Conquer, i, 1. (1773)

<sup>6</sup> Than as wyse and discrete he withdrewe him sayng that more is worth a good retrayte than a folisshe abydinge.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Jason, fo. 23. (c. 1477)

The better part of valour is discretion.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, v, 4, 122. (1597)

Almost invariably misquoted, "Discretion is the better part of valour."

Though abundantly they lack discretion,

Yet are they passing cowardly.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, i, 1, 206. (1607)

It shew'd discretion, the best part of valour.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, *A King and No
King*. Act iv, sc. 3. (1611)

<sup>7</sup> You put too much wind to your sail; discretion

And hardy valour are the twins of honour.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Bonduca. Act i, sc.
1. (1614)

Valour can do little without discretion.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 21. (1678)

Valour is brutish without Discretion.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5343. (1732)

Even in a hero's heart,

Discretion is the better part.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. i, l. 233.
(1762)

Cowardice is not synonymous with prudence. It often happens that the better part of discretion is valour.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 383. (1821)

He [Napoleon] acted on the maxim that discretion is the better part of valour.

CHARLES LOWE, Prince Bismarck. Ch. 3. (1885)

Mrs. Sergison here chose the better part of valour.

E. V. LUCAS, Landmarks, p. 37. (1914)

I hope you'll let discretion be the better part of valor.

EDGAR JEPSON, Keep Murder Quiet, p. 166. (1940)

<sup>8</sup> There can be no true pleasantry without discretion. (No puede haber gracia donde no hay discreción.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii. ch. 44. (1615)

<sup>9</sup> Discrecioun out of your heed is goon.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, Bk. iii,
l. 894. (c. 1380)

<sup>10</sup> A daring pilot is dangerous to a ship. This too is a manly quality, namely discretion. (καὶ τοῦτό τοι τάρδραϊον, ἢ προμηθία.)

EURIPIDES, The Suppliants, l. 510. (c. 421 B.C.)

<sup>11</sup> Offices are geuen, but not discretion. (Si danno bene gli officii, ma non si da discrezione.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 33. (1578)

You may give a Man an Office, but you cannot give him Discretion.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1754.

<sup>12</sup> In a discreet man's mouth a publick thing is private.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.

<sup>1</sup> Valour would fight, but Discretion would run away.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5344. (1732)
Courage would fight, but Discretion won't let him.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1747.

HE WHO FIGHTS AND RUNS AWAY, see under FIGHTING.

<sup>2</sup> Discretion is the friend of man, rashness his adversary.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penimim (Choice of Pearls). No. 621. (c. 1050)

<sup>3</sup> Discretion still preserve thee, understanding shall keep thee. (Consilium custodiet te, et prudentia servabit te.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, ii, 11. (c. 350 B.C.)

<sup>4</sup> Thou halfpenny purse of wit, thou pigeon-egg of discretion.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 1, 77. (1595)

<sup>5</sup> But, what does most my Indignation move, Discretion, thou wer't ne'er a Friend to Love.

ESTHER VANHOMRIGH (VANESSA), To Love. (c. 1720)

DISDAIN

See also Contempt, Scorn

<sup>6</sup> And eek, for she was somdel smoterlich [smirched in reputation], She was as digne [disdainful, haughty] as water in a dich.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Reeve's Tale, l. 44. (c. 1386)

<sup>7</sup> Disdain is employed by women, like fine apparel or cosmetics, to enhance their beauty. (Le sévérité des femmes est un ajustement et un fard qu'elles ajoutent à leur beauté.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 204. (1665)

<sup>8</sup> If they be adorned with beautie, they be straight laced, and made so high in the insteppe, that they disdaine them most that most desire them.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 54. (1579)

<sup>9</sup> Haughtiness is founded on the high opinion we entertain of ourselves; disdain on the low opinion we have of others.

LINDLEY MURRAY, English Grammar, i, 440. (1884)

<sup>10</sup> What, my dear Lady Disdain! are you yet living?

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, i, 1, 119. (1598)

Disdain and scorn ride sparkling in her eyes, Misprising what they look on.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, iii, 1, 51. (1598)

DISEASE

See also Doctor, Medicine, Remedy, Sickness

<sup>11</sup> Doctor Johnson said that in sickness there were three things that were material: the physician, the disease, and the patient; and if any two of them joined, then they have the victory; for, "Ne Hercules quidam contra duos." [Not Hercules himself against two.] If the physician and the patient join, then down goes the disease, for the patient recovers; if the physician and the disease join, then down goes the patient, that is where the physician mistakes the case: if the patient and the disease join, then down goes the physician, for he is discredited.

FRANCIS BACON, Apophthegms. No. 264. (1625)

Referring to Dr. Christopher Johnson, poet and physician.

<sup>12</sup> Diseases of the soul are more dangerous and more numerous than those of the body. (Morbi perniciosiores pluresque sunt animi quam corporis.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iii, ch. 3, sec. 5. (45 B.C.)

That disease is most serious which proceeds from the head. (Gravissimus est morbus qui a capite diffunditur.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. iv, epis. 22.

(C. A.D. 98) SENECA (De Clementia, ii, 2) has, "A capite bona valetudo" (Good health is from the head).

<sup>13</sup> Physicians consider that when the cause of a disease is discovered, the cure is discovered. (Medici causa morbi inventa curationem esse inventam putant.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iii, ch. 10, sec. 23. (45 B.C.)

The beginning of health is the knowledge of the disease. (El principio de la salud está en conocer la enfermedad.)

CERVANTES, Dan Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 60. (1615)

The Latin proverb is, "Ad sanitatem gradus est novisse morbum" (It is a step toward health to know the disease). Obversely, "Occultare morbum funestam" (To hide disease is fatal).

When the disease is known it is half cured.

BAILEY, tr., Erasmus' Colloquies, p. 9. (1725)

A Disease known is half cured.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 75. (1732)

An example of Fuller's admirable faculty for condensation.

<sup>14</sup> For different diseases different remedies. (Ἅλλο δὲ γ' ἐστ' ἄλλῃ φάρμακον κείραι νόσῳ.)

EURIPIDES, Fragments. No. 962, Nauck. (c. 440 B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 102B. See also under REMEDY.

Adapt the remedy to the disease.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 77. (1937)

1
A new name for an ailment affects people like a Parisian name for a novel garment. Every one hastens to get it.

MARY B. EDDY, Science and Health, p. 197. (1875)

2
Against Diseases here, the strongest Fence,
Is the defensive Virtue, Abstinence.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742. An expansion of the Latin proverb, "In morbis minus" (In disease less of everything), a translation from Hippocrates, and commended by Bacon as "a good profound aphorism."

3
I've that within for which there are no plasters.

DAVID GARRICK, She Sloops to Conquer: Prologue. (1773)

A malady

Preys on my heart that med'cine cannot reach.

CHARLES R. MATURIN, Bertram. Act iv, sc. 2. (1816)

4
If a man thinks about his moral or physical nature, he usually discovers that he is ill. (Wenn der Mensch über sein Physisches oder Moralisches nachdenkt, findet er sich gewöhnlich krank.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. (1819)

5
Man hath as many diseases as a horse.

JAMES HOWELL, Parley of Beasts, p. 77. (1660)

6
He has a rupture, he has sprung a leak.

BEN JONSON, The Staple of News, i, 1. (1626)

7
Disease will have its course.

THOMAS MOFFETT, Health's Improvement, p. 8. (1655)

8
It is not the same thing to feel diseases and to cure them; all men can feel, but the evil is removed only by skill. (Non eadem ratio est sentire et demere morbos; | sensus inest cunctis, tollitur arte malum.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. iii. epis. 9, l. 15. (A. D. 13)

9
An incurable body. (Immedicabile corpus.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. i, l. 190 (A. D. 7)

Diseases said to be incurable are called "Op-probrium medicorum" (The reproach of physicians). Gout is one of them.

Vnto a deadly disease, neyther Phisition nor phisick wil serue. (Al mal mortal, ne Medico, ne medicina val.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 27. (1578)

A disease which neither needle nor medicine can reach. (Kung chih pu k'o, tè chih pu nêng.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1613. (1875)

10
Bilious attack—black bile. (Atra bili percita est.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo, l. 727. (c. 200 B. C.)

Every disease, but not disease of the bowels.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, p. 11a. (c. 450)

If there is no disease in the belly, the patient won't die.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 356. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

11
Sickness comes on horseback but goes away on foot. (Venit morbus eques, suevit abire pedes.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 216.

Citing a Latin proverb of c. A. D. 250. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 336. (1869)

Diseases come on horseback and go away on foot. (Maladies viennent à cheval et s'en retournent à pied.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, i, 264.

Citing a proverb of c. 1550. An English equivalent is "Mischiefs come by the pound and go away by the ounce."

Diseases come of their own accord,
But cures come difficult and hard.

SAMUEL BUTLER, The Weakness and Misery of Man, l. 82. (c. 1660)

Sicknesses posteth to us, but crawleth from us.

RICHARD WHITLOCK, Zootomia, p. 124. (1654)
See also under EVIL.

12
Too late is the medicine prepared, when the disease had gained strength by long delay. (Sero medicina paratur, | cum mala per longas convaluere moras.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 91. (c. 1 B. C.)

Meet the disease on its way. (Venienti occurrere morbo.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 64. (c. A. D. 58)

It is far better to cure at the beginning than at the end. (Multo quam finem, medicari initia praestat.)

SUIDAS, Lexicon. (c. A. D. 950) As cited by

ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ii, 40, who quotes a similar sentence from Theognis, "Pharmacia nascenti sunt adhibenda malo," and then gives the proverb in its usual Latin form, "Satiatus est initis mederi, quam fini," commenting, "The most serious diseases may be cured if taken in time. Oppose the disease in the beginning, for when it has taken deep root, medicine will be applied too late."

There is no disease so desperate, but if it be taken in time phisick may help it.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Scilla and Minos, p. 162. (1576)

For want of timely care,

Millions have died of medicable wounds.

JOHN ARMSTRONG, The Art of Preserving Health. Bk. iii, l. 519. (1744)

PREVENTION IS BETTER THAN CURE, see PREVENTION.

13
Diversity of humours breedeth tumours.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1678)

14
Diseases are the tax on ill pleasures.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 7. (1670)

Diseases are the Price of ill Pleasures.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1297. (1732)

But just disease to luxury succeeds,
And ev'ry death its own avenger breeds.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 165. (1734)
Disease: the whipping-post and branding-iron of luxury.

JOSH BILLINGS (H. W. SHAW), Comical Lexicon. (1877)

1
Though a disease be terrible, there is no certainty of a fatal termination.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. vi, Apol. 1. (c. 1258)

2
When a disease returns, no medicine can cure
it. (Fan ping wu yao i.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No.
1606. (1875)

3
Disease is not of the body but of the place.
(Non corpore esse, sed loci morbum.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. civ, sec. 1. (C. A. D. 65)

4
The strongest ills demand the speediest cure.
(βράχιστα γὰρ κράτιστα τὰν νοσίων κακὰ.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 1324. (c. 441 B. C.) See also REMEDY: DESPERATE REMEDIES.

5
Pale Diseases dwell there. (Pallentesque habitant Morbi.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 275. (19 B. C.)

6
Have you ever had the measles, and if so,
how many?

ARTEMUS WARD, War Fever in Baldinsville.
(1861)

7
Polite diseases make some idiots vain.

EDWARD YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. i, l. 95. (1728)
Some maladies are rich and precious and only to be . . . purchased with gold.

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE, *Mosses from an Old
Manse: The Procession of Life*. (1846)

DISGRACE

See also Failure, Ruin, Shame

8
No, my own one, this is the place for me.

J. M. BARRIE, Peter and Wendy. Ch. 16. (1911)
Mr. Darling, when his wife urged him to come out of Nana's kennel.

Reese is in the dog house.

ZELDA POPKIN, No Crime for a Lady, p. 217.
(1942)

I was in the doghouse anyway.

O. R. COHEN, Sound of Revelry, p. 110. (1943)

9
Disgraces are like cherries, one draws another.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 489. (1640)

10
He fears disgrace as worse than death.
(Peiusque leto flagitium timet.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode ix, l. 50. (23 B. C.)
When the stress of circumstances demands it, we must gird on the sword and prefer death to slavery and disgrace. (Mors servituti turpitudi-ne anteponenda.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 23, sec. 81. (c. 45 B. C.)

In disgrace is a punishment worse than death.
(In infamia plus poenae quam in morte.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. vi, ch. ii, sec. 24. (C. A. D. 80)

If there be disgrace, what need of death?
(Apayašo yad asti kim mritiyuna?)

BHARTIRHARI, Nīti Śāstra. No. 55. (C. A. D. 100)
For one is already worse than dead.

11
When men disgraces share,
The lesser is the care.

LEN JONSON, Cynthia's Revels. Act v, sc. 4.
(1601) Quoted.

12
However deep the disgrace we have merited, it is almost always within our power to regain our good name. (Quelque honte que nous ayons méritée, il est presque toujours en notre pouvoir de rétablir notre réputation.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 412. (1665)

13
That and that alone is a disgrace to a man, which he has deserved to suffer. (Id demum est homini turpe, quod meruit pati.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. iii, fab. 11, l. 7. (c. 25 B. C.)

14
Disgrace is deathless; it goes on living even when you think it's dead. (Immortalis est infamia; etiam tum vivit, cum esse credas mortuam.)

PLAUTUS, Persa, l. 355. (c. 200 B. C.) Another Latin proverb says, "Voluptas abit, turpitudo manet" (The pleasure is over, but the disgrace remains).

15
It is better not to live at all than to live disgraced.

SOPHOCLES, Peleus. Frag. 445. (c. 410 B. C.) A Latin proverb says, "Malo mori quam foedari" (I would rather die than be disgraced).

Live to be the show and gaze o' the time.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, v, 8, 24. (1606)

DISH

16
I'm dished and done up brown.

CHARLES BURKE, Rip Van Winkle. Act i, sc. 1.
(1865)

17
An affected man carries himself like his dish
(as the proverb says) very uprightly.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Remains, ii, 334. (a. 1680)

You must carry your dish very upright.

DANIEL DEFOE, Everybody's Business. (1725)

18
There's a thing in it (quoth the fellow when he drank the dish-clout).

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 8. (1639) RAY,
Proverbs, p. 196. (1678)

There is something in it, quoth the Fellow, when he drunk Dish-clout and all.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4884. (1732)

I will not make my dish-clout my table-cloth.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 125. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2646. (1732)

<sup>1</sup> Susan is a nice dish.
FRANK GRUBER, The Hungry Dog, p.125. (1941)

<sup>2</sup> The first dish pleaseth all.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 746. (1640) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 7. (1678) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4527. (1732)

The first dish is aye best eaten.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 336. (1721) The Italians say, "La prima scodella piace ad ognuno" (The first dish pleases every one).

The nearest.
H. D. THOREAU, when asked at table which dish he preferred. See EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Sketches: Thoreau.

<sup>3</sup> Wyfe, all thy disshes be chaffyng disshes plast; For thou chafest at sight of euery dishe thou hast.

HEYWOOD, Epigrams. Cent. vi, No. 38. (1562) All his meat is in chafing dishes.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 34. (1639) All her Dishes are Chafing Dishes.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 519. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> The dish wears its own cover.
SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Erasmus' Colloquies, p. 135. (1680) Quoted as a popular saying.

<sup>5</sup> Many dishes make many diseases.
THOMAS MOFFETT, Healths Improvement, p. 272. (1655) Quoted as a proverb.
Many dishes, many diseases.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

<sup>6</sup> All's lost that is poured into a cracked dish.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 128. (1678) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 546. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> Wee laye some greater matter in his dish.
THOMAS WILSON, The Arte of Logick, 62b. (1551) To accuse or to taunt; to charge against one.

That it be not once again cast in my dish.
THOMAS WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique: Prologue. (1553)

Let no man object and lay in my dish old custom.
THOMAS BECON, Prayers, p. 390. (1559) He casts his begger in my dishe at euerie third sillable.

THOMAS NASHE, Have With You to Saffron-Walden, p. 67. (1596)

Your former follies shall be laide in your dish.
J. O. HALLIWELL, Books of Characters, p. 96. (1609)

Her dowrie will be often cast in thy dish.
JOSEPH SWETNAM, The Arraignment of Women, p. 18. (1615)

Some . . . have been so disingenuous, as to throw Maud the Milk-Maid in my dish.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 164. (1710) To throw in one's teeth, or dish: to reproach.

G. F. NORTALL, Folk Phrases of Four Counties, p. 31. (1894)

DISMISSAL

See also Go

<sup>8</sup> Her ys the dore, her ys the wey!
BRANDL, ed., Mankind, fo. 154. (c. 1475) Here is the doore, and there is the wey, and so . . . farewell.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546) There lies your way, you see the door.

BEN JONSON, The Staple of News. Act iii, sc. 2. (1625)

"Must you stay? Can't you go?"
Legend under a cartoon in Punch, 18 Jan., 1905.

It represented the French Governor of Madagascar addressing the Russian Admiral Rodjestvensky, who had made an unduly prolonged stay at Madagascar, while on his way to Japanese waters to meet the Japanese fleet.

<sup>9</sup> This tinkerly trade, wee give it the bagge.
ALOIS BRANDL, Quellen: Common Conditions, p. 599. (1576) See under BAG.

Geue her the belles, let her flye.
THOMAS DEKKER, Patient Grissil. Act i. (1603) An old proverb, taken from hawking, applied to the dismissal of anyone.

To give us the canvas.
JAMES SHIRLEY, Hyde Park. Act i, sc. 1. (1637) From the practice of journeymen mechanics carrying their tools with them when dismissed, they were said to get the canvas or the bag.

If he knew it, I should get the sack.
DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 20. (1837) From the French, "On lui a donné son sac." To get the mitten.

B. H. HALL, College Words: Mitten. (1851) "At the Collegiate Institute of Indiana, a student who is expelled is said 'to get the mitten.'" Usually used, however, for refusals of marriage. See under MITTEN.

The concern he'd been workin' for was a factory that made canned goods. And now Jim said he was canned himself. He was certainly a card!

RING LARDNER, Haircut. (1926) We all got the bird.
F. W. CROFTS, Circumstantial Evidence, p. 39. (1941)

<sup>10</sup> He turnde hir out at doores to grasse on the playne.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 10. (1546)

<sup>11</sup> Go to the evil cross. (I in malam crucem.)
PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 335. (c. 195 B.C.) A common form of oburgation in the comedies of the period. Plautus uses it many times, and so does Terence. The Germans say, "Geh' zum Henker" (Go to the hangman). "Tu autem" (But thou) was used as a hint to be off, from the words used by preachers at the end of their sermon, "Tu autem, Domine, miserere nostri."

Trudge (quoit I to him), and on your mary-bones Crouche to the grounde.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)

Away, you scullion! you rampallion! you fustilian!

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, ii, 1, 65. (1598)

Make your feet your friend.

J.M. BARRIE, Sentimental Tommy, p.137. (1896)

Kiss yourself good-bye.

WILLIAM JEROME. Title of song. (1902)

Cheese it! they're coming this way!

CLYDE FITCH, The Girl With the Green Eyes. Act i. (1902)

Why don't you pad?

O. HENRY, Extradited from Bohemia. (1908)

Aw, for the love of Mike, go take a powder.

ELLIOTT PAUL, Mayhem in B-Flat, p.259. (1940)

Beat it. I want to sleep.

NIVEN BUSCH, The Carrington Incident, p. 10. (1941)

Go roll a hoop.

CLEVE ADAMS, The Black Door, p. 155. (1941)

Go chase yourself.

ELIZABETH DALY, Murders in Volume 2, p. 83. (1941)

Pack up the fiddle, rosin up the bow,

Vamoose, Skedaddle, mosey, hit the grit!

S. V. BENÉT, Western Star: Prelude, l.44. (1943)

<sup>1</sup> You may be jogging whiles your boots are green.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, iii, 2, 213. (1596)

You may as well be jogging, Sir,

While yet your boots are green.

CHARLES DIRDIN, The Quaker. Act i, sc.1. (1777)

DISPUTE, see Argument

DISOBEDIENCE, see Obedience

DISSIMULATION

See also Deceit, Hypocrisy

<sup>2</sup> Dissimulation invites dissimulation.

FRANCIS BACON, Of the Advancement of Learning. Pt. i, bk. 6. (1605)

<sup>3</sup> He who knows not how to dissimulate, knows not how to rule. (Qui nescit dissimulare, nescit regnare.)

EMPEROR FREDERICK BARBAROSSA (?), Maxim. (c. 1160) See LIPSTUS, Politica Sive Civilis Doctrina. Bk. iv, ch. 14. TACITUS, Annals, iv, 71, speaking of Tiberius, says, "He was prouder of his power of dissimulation than of all his other virtues, for such he considered it," and on the strength of this passage the saying has sometimes been attributed to Tiberius. Other attributions have also been made, but never fully substantiated. Quoted by SIR WALTER RALEGH, The Cabinet-Council, c. 1615, in the form, "Nescit regnare qui nescit dissimulare."

He who knows not how to dissemble, knows not how to reign. (Qui ne scait se feindre, ne scait pas regner.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 17. (1580) The Italians say, "Chi non sa adulare, non sa regnare" (Who knows not how to flatter knows not how to reign), a proverb cited by D'ISRAELI, in his chapter on The Philosophy of Proverbs.

Qui nescit dissimulare, nescit regnare, was frequently, it is said, in the mouth of King James the First, but it did not say much in favor of his sagacity; and by proclaiming it as a principle, it must have defeated his purpose in adopting it.

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. ii, p. 150. (1814)

<sup>4</sup> He who knows not how to dissemble knows not how to live. (Qui nescit dissimulare, nescit vivere.)

EMPEROR FREDERICK BARBAROSSA (?), Maxim. (c. 1160) ROBERT BURTON (Anatomy of Melancholy, i, ii, 3, 15) quotes the saying in this form and attributes it to "that Emperor," meaning Barbarossa, with whom he says it was "a favourite maxim." PALINGNIUS, Zodiacus Vitae, bk. iv, p. 684. 1537, also gives it in this form, as a proverb. ROCHE AND CHASLES, Histoire de France, vol. ii, p. 30, claim the saying as a "maxim of Louis XI," who is said to have permitted his son and successor, Charles, to know no other Latin. DE THOU, Historia Sui Temporis, iii, 293, tells the same story. HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 361, also quotes it, and adds illustratively, "Truth should not always be revealed," and "Innocence itself sometimes needs a mask."

You have set it down as a settled sentence amongst you, that he which knoweth not how to dissemble, knoweth not how to live.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 88. (1576)

He that cannot dissemble cannot live.

ROBERT GREENE, Mamillia. (1583) Works, ii.19. "The Art of Complaisance" (London, 1697) bears on the title the forbidding aphorism, "Qui nescit dissimulare nescit vivere."

SIR HERBERT MAXWELL, Meridiana, p. 61. (1892)

<sup>5</sup> Dissemble. To put a clean shirt upon the character.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

<sup>6</sup> Smooth dissimulation, skill'd to grace

A devil's purpose with an angel's face.

WILLIAM COWPER, Table Talk, p. 129. (1781)

<sup>7</sup> He [Caesar Borgia] was a man master in the art of dissembling, never looking the same way he rowed.

THOMAS FULLER, The Profane State. Bk. v, ch. 7. (1642) See also under LOOK.

<sup>8</sup> Coll vnder canstyk, she can plaie on bothe handis,

Dissimulacion well she understandis.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

<sup>9</sup> Your hearts and words soaked in honey; your hearts and deeds soaked in gall. (In melle sunt linguae sitae vestrae atque orationes | facta atque corda in felle.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus, l. 178. (c. 186 B.C.) See under WORD AND DEED.

Voice of honey, heart of gall. (ὡς μέλι φωνά, ὡς δὲ χολὰ ὄρος ἐστίν.)

MOSCHUS, Rumaway Love, l. 9. (c. 150 B. C.) A similar Greek proverb is μέλι δέχεται, φαρμάκι ἐτοιμάζει (He shows honey, he mixes poison), referring to the pharmacist who displays honey in his shop window while he is mixing poison behind the counter. See NEGRIS, Modern Greek Proverbs, p. 75.

Those who according to the Proverb, have Honey in their mouth, and a knife in their hand.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 68. (1574) Pettie, tr.

A dissembler hath euer-more honnye in his mouth, and Gall in his minde.

JOHN LVLV, Euphuus and His England (Arber), p. 384. (1580)

With honye in her mouth, and a sting in her tayle.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. D3. (1583)
Cited by both Ray and Fuller.

A honey tongue, a heart of gall,
Is fancy's spring, but sorrow's fall.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, The Nymph's Reply. (c. 1590) CAMDEN, Remains, p. 302. (1605)

The heart seldom feels what the mouth expresses.
(Le cœur sent rarement ce que la bouche exprime.)

JEAN CAMPISTRON, Pompeia, xi, 5. (c. 1695)

The Hearts of Dissemblers are too far distant from their Mouths, for their Protestations ever to be cordially true.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 292. (1709)

Honey in the mouth, gall in the heart (Mel in ore, fel in corde.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 110. (1778) A condensation of the Latin jingle, "Multis annis iam peractis, | Nulla fides est in pactis, | Mel in ore verba lactis, | Fel in corde fraus in factis." The French say, "Bouche de roses et cœur puant" (Mouth of roses and stinking heart); the Portuguese, "Boca de mel, coração de fel" (Mouth of honey, heart of gall); the Danes, "Tidt er Gift og Galde under Honningtale" (Often poison and gall under the honeyed speech).

Sweet of tongue but of far distant beneficence.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 214. (1817)

A mouth that prays, a hand that kills.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 472.

A Buddha's mouth and a serpent's heart. (Fo 'kou shé hsin.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 187. (1872)

An oily mouth and a razor heart (Yu tsui 'ti tao hsin.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 191.

His mouth is sweet as honey, his arse biting as ginger. (Tsui li 'tien ju mi; p'i ku la ssü Chiang.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs No. 1359. (1875)

Sweet-melon lipped; bitter-melon hearted. (Tien kua erh tsui; k'u kua erh hain.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1670.

The mouth full of virtue; at heart a whore. (Yi k'ou jén i tao tē; tu li nan tao nü cn'ang.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1362.

Praising with the mouth and damning with the heart.

MARK TWAIN, In Eruption, p. 327. (1907)

See also SAYING AND THINKING.

<sup>1</sup> An apt dissembler sooner hurts his foe. (Qui bene dissimulat citius inimico nocet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 562. (c. 43 B. C.)

<sup>2</sup> To know how to dissimulate is the knowledge of kings. (Savoir dissimuler est le savoir des rois.)

CARDINAL RICHELIEU, Mirame. (c. 1625)

For kings and lovers are alike in this,
That their chief art in reign dissembling is.

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, Loving and Beloved. (a. 1642)

<sup>3</sup> Capable of any form of pretence or dissimulation. (Cuius rei lubet simulator ac dissimulatore.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. v, sec. 4. (c. 41 B. C.) Of Lucius Catilina.

<sup>4</sup> Simulation is a Pretence of what is not, and Dissimulation a Concealment of what is.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tailor. No. 213. (1710)
TO BLOW HOT AND COLD, see under HOT.

DISTANCE

<sup>5</sup> Do not thyself draw near, lest thou be put at a distance, yet stand not [too] far off, lest thou be forgotten.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xiii, 10. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

<sup>6</sup> Not the breadth of a finger-nail, as the saying goes. (Nec transversum unguem, quod aiunt.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. vii, epis. xxv, sec. 2. (45 B. C.)

<sup>7</sup> No one sees what before his feet doth lie,
But scans instead the regions of the sky.
(Quod est ante pedes, nemo spectat, caeli scrutantur plagas.)

ENNIVS, Iphigenia. (c. 180 B. C.) Quoted as from Ennius by CICERO, De Re Publica, i, 18, 30, and as from DEMOCRITUS, De Divinatione, ii, 13, 30. It is sometimes attributed to Thales. Quoted by MONTAIGNE, as from Democritus. Cicero is referring to diviners and Montaigne to philosophers.

What you seek is here; it is in the desert of Ulubrae. (Quod petis hic est, | est Ulubris.)

HORACE, Epistles, Bk. i, epis. 11, l. 30 (20 B. C.) Ulubrae, mentioned as a typical desert by Roman writers, was in Latium, about thirty-five miles from Rome.

Careless of things which are near, we pursue eagerly things which are far away (Proximorum incuriosi, longinqua sectemur.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles Bk. viii, ep. 20. (C. A. D. 108)

Stretching out his hand to catch the stars, he forgets the flowers at his feet.

JEREMY BENTHAM, Deontology. Ch. i, p. 52. (1832)

<sup>1</sup> Slight not what's near, through aiming at what's far. (μή νυν τά πόρρω ταγγύθεν μεθεῖς σκόπει.)

EURIPIDES, Rhesus, l. 482. (c. 450 B. C.)

<sup>2</sup> The pathos of distance. (Das Pathos der Distanz.)

F. W. NIETZSCHE, Beyond Good and Evil. Ch. 9, sec. 257. (1886) Repeated in The Antichrist (1888) and The Twilight of the Idols (1889).

The pathos of distance—memorable phrase of Nietzsche—boasts its obverse, the bathos of proximity.

JAMES HUNEKER, Painted Veils, p. 142. (1920) Hunecker used the phrase as the title of a book. (1913)

<sup>3</sup> Hercules' pillars. ('Ηρακλῆος στηλάν.)

PINDAR, Olympian Odes, iii, 44. (476 B. C.) Of far distance.

Remotest Thule. (Ultima Thule.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. i, l. 30. (29 B. C.) Thule, the most remote land known to the Greeks and Romans, may have been Norway or Iceland. Camden says it was one of the Shetland Islands.

Nor shall Thule be the extremity of the world. (Nec sit terris ultima Thule.)

SENECA, Medea, l. 375. (c. A. D. 60) Edgar Allan Poe (Dreamland, in Graham's Magazine, June, 1844) writes, "I have reached these lands but newly From an ultimate dim Thule."

As far remote as are the boundaries of Mysians and Phrygians. (χωρίς Μυσῶν καὶ Φρυγῶν ὁρίσματα.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Keeping Well, 122C. (c. A. D. 80) Quoting a proverbial phrase.

Our lives are poles apart, as the saying goes. (ἐκ διαμέτρου γὰρ ἡμῶν οἱ βλοῖ, φασι.)

LUCAN, Cataplus. Sec. 14. (c. A. D. 170)

As far apart as the East is from the West.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, xxxii, 18. (c. 622)

As far as heaven from earth. (Tien jang chih fên.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1070. (1875)

<sup>4</sup> The loveliest creature one could find From Paris clear to Old England.

(De la plus bele criature

Que hom puisse trovier ne querre

De Paris juqu'en Aingleterre.)

RUTEBEUF, De Frère Denise, l. 18. (c. 1250)

MONTAIGNE, Recueil des Fables, iii, 263.

"De ci jusqu'en Alemaigne" occurs in i, 35;

"De ci jusqu'en Loheraine" in i, 35; "Entre si e Leons sur Rone" in ii, 246; and "Il n'a meillor de ci en Cypre," iii, 94.

Swetter place

To playen in he may not finde,

Although he soughte oon in-til Inde.

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose, (c. 1240) Chaucer (?) tr., l. 622. (c. 1365)

To gete hir love no ner nas he

That woned at home, than he in Inde.

CHAUCER (?), The Book of the Duchesse, l. 888. (c. 1369)

And seyde thus, "for I ne can nat finde

A man, though that I walked in-to Inde.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Pardoner's Tale, l. 393. (c. 1387)

It is as farre from Athens to England, as from England to Athens.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 476. (1580)

<sup>5</sup> If a man makes me keep my distance, the comfort is he keeps his at the same time.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1706)

The fellows learn to know their distance.

SWIFT, Panegyrick on the Dean, l. 56. (1730)

II—Distance Lends Enchantment

<sup>6</sup> 'Tis distance lends enchantment to the view.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i. l. 7. (1799)

Distance only lends enchantment,

Though the ocean waves divide.

ARTHUR GILLESPIE, Absence Makes the Heart Grow Fonder. (1900)

Distance lends enchantment.

CLYDE FITCH, Captain Jinks. Act ii. (1901)

Distance lends assuagement to his view.

O. HENRY, The World and the Door. (1910)

A case of distance lending enchantment to the view.

INNES, Comedy of Terrors, p. 171. (1940)

<sup>7</sup> Ay farest faderis hes farrest fowlis. [Ay fairest feathers have the farthest fowls.]

WILLIAM DUNBAR, Schir, Yit Remimber, 21. (c. 1508) KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 102.

has, "Far fowls have fair feathers," and BURNS, The Five Carlins, "Far off fowls have feathers fair." A similar proverb from an unknown source is, "Far-off cows have long horns."

Farre folks fare best.

THOMAS DEAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 45. (1633)

Men are best loved furthest off.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 71. (1639)

Far folks fare well, and fair children die.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 136. (1678)

Like Flanders-Mares, fairest afar off.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3229. (1732)

In allusion to Henry VIII's disappointment when he saw Anne of Cleves, and his alleged reference to her as a "Flanders mare."

<sup>8</sup> Far different do things appear far off Than when we scan them close at hand.

(οὐ ταῦτ' οὖν εἶδος φαίνεται τῶν πραγμάτων πρόσθεν ὄντων ἐγγύθεν θ' ὁραμένων.)

EURIPIDES, Ion, l. 585. (c. 419 B. C.)

Mountains when far away appear misty and smooth, but when near at hand are rugged. (καὶ τὰ ὄρη πόρρωθεν ἀεροειδῆ καὶ λεία, ἐγγύθεν δὲ τραχεά.)

DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Lives: Pyrrho. Bk. ix, sec.

85. (c. A. D. 230) The English proverb is, "Hills are green afar off." HALL CAINE, The Deemster, ch. 5, 1887, has, "A green hill when far from me; bare, bare when it is near." "Blue are the faraway hills" runs the Gaelic proverb.—The Spectator, 6 June, 1914, p. 955. At a distance it's something grand: close up, it's nothing. (De loin, c'est quelque chose; et de près, ce n'est rien.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Chameau et les Batons Flottants. Bk. iv, fab. 10. (1668)

They are aye gude that are far awa.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 99. (1902)

1 Paintings and Fightings are best seen at a distance.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1753.

2 Some people can see no good near at home.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 97. (1902)

3 Most men wonder at things which deceive them by distance. (Maiorque pars miratur ex intervallo fallentia.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cxviii, sec 7. (c. A. D. 64) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, iii, 11. A somewhat similar Latin proverb is, "Quae e longinquo magis placent" (Things from afar please us the more).

How much the sense is deceived by distance. (Quanto il senso s' inganna di lontano.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxxi, l. 26. (c. 1300)

By everyone the unknown is held to be magnificent. (Omne ignotum pro magifico est.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 50. (1814)

Citing a Latin proverb, which he says is the reverse of "Familiarity breeds contempt." So, he adds, "great men should not associate too familiarly with the world."

To the vulgar eye, few things are wonderful that are not distant.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Essays: Burns. (1839)

4 Reverence is greater from a distance. (Maior e longinquo reverentia.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iv, sec. 23. (c. A. D. 116)

Adapted from, "Quae ex longinquo in maius audiebantur." MASSINGER, The Maid of Honour, iii, 3 (1632), has "Reverent distance."

NO MAN IS A PROPHET IN HIS OWN COUNTRY, see under PROPHET.

5

Sweetest melodies

Are those that are by distance made more sweet.

WORDSWORTH, Personal Talk, l. 25. (1806)

DISTRUST

See also Suspicion

6 Here must thou all distrust behind thee leave. (Qui si convien lasciare ogni sospetto.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto iii, l. 14. (c. 1300)

7 There is one safeguard known generally to the wise, which is an advantage and security to all, but especially to democracies as against despots—distrust. (ἀπιστία.)

DEMOSTHENES, Philippics. No. ii, sec. 24. (344 B. C.)

8

Be sober, and remember to distrust: These are the very mainsprings of understanding.

EPICHRMUS, Maxim. (c. 550 B. C.) See AHREUS, De Dialecto Dorico, p. 119.

You forget your proverb—

Remember to distrust! This easy faith

Has done more mischief than it e'er did good.

JOHN WILSON, Andronicus Comnenius. Act iii, sc. 3. (1664)

9

Naught is of more service to mankind than a prudent distrust. (σώφρωνος δ' ἀπιστίας | οὐκ ἔστιν οὐδὲν χρησιμώτερον βροτοῖς.)

EURIPIDES, Helen, l. 1617. (c. 412 B. C.)

10

The first step to self-knowledge is self-distrust.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth, p. 454. (1827) A similar maxim is ascribed to Madame Necker, "A certain amount of distrust is wholesome, but not so much of others as of ourselves."

11

Heare all men speak; but credit few or none.

ROBERT HERRICK, Distrust. (1648)

What ever men for Loyalty pretend,

'Tis Wisdomes part to doubt a faithfull friend.

ROBERT HERRICK, Distrust. (1648)

12

To know what to mistrust is the mother of safety. (Savoit que la méfiance | Est mère de la sûreté.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Chat et le Vieux Rat. Bk. iii, fab. 18. (1668)

Distrust is the Mother of Safety, but must keep out of Sight.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1300. (1732)

13

Mistrust no man without cause, neither be ye credulous without proofe.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 154. (1579)

14

Beware a speedy friend, the Arabian said, And wisely was it he advised distrust.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Sonnets, xxi. (1798)

Count after your father. (Comptez après votre père.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 93. (1853) This is a French proverb, and the Spaniards have a somewhat similar one, "Entre dos amigos un notario y dos testigos" (Between two friends, a notary and two witnesses). In other words, never trust anyone.

DIVORCE

15

If she go not as thou wouldest have her, cut her off from thy flesh, and give her a bill of divorce. (Si non ambulaverit ad manum tuam, . . . a carnibus tuis absconde illam.)

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxv, 26. (c. 190 B. C.)

Whosoever shall put away his wife, and marry another, committeth adultery against her. (ὁ δὲ ἀπολύσῃ τὴν γυναῖκα αὐτοῦ καὶ γαμήσῃ ἄλλην μοιχᾶται ἐπ' αὐτήν.)

New Testament: Mark, x, 11. (c. A. D. 55) The Vulgate is, "Quicumque dimiserit uxorem suam, et aliam duxerit, adulterium committit super eam." The Pharisees had asked Jesus whether it was lawful for a man to put away his wife, and Jesus asked, "What did Moses command you?" "Moses suffered to write a bill of divorcement and put her away," they replied. "For the hardness of your heart he wrote that precept," Jesus retorted, and then added that any man or woman who divorced wife or husband to marry another committed adultery.

It hath been said, Whosoever shall put away his wife, let him give her a writing of divorcement: But I say unto you, That whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication, causeth her to commit adultery: and whosoever shall marry her that is divorced committeth adultery.

New Testament: Matthew, v, 31-32. (c. A. D. 65) The insertion of an exception, fornication, will be noted.

1 New York is bounded on the North, South, East and West by the state of Divorce.

LANGDON MITCHELL, The New York Idea. Act i. (1906)

2 Divorce, the public brand of a shameful life.

THOMAS PARNELL, Hesiod, l. 206. (c. 1715)

Divorce is the sacrament of adultery. (Le divorce est le sacrement de l'adultère.)

J. F. GUICHARD, Maximes. (c. 1800)

Divorces are made in heaven.

OSCAR WILDE, The Importance of Being Earnest. Act i. (1895)

DOCTOR

See also Disease, Medicine, Surgeon

3 Nor bring, to see me cease to live,
Some doctor full of phrase and fame,
To shake his sapient head, and give
The ill he cannot cure a name.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, A Wish. (1877)

4 The best of doctors will go to hell.

Babylonian Talmud: Kiddushin, fo. 82a. (c. 450) A cynical estimate of the doctors of the day, who prolonged illnesses in order to increase their earnings.

5 Honour a physician with the honour due unto him. (τίμα τὸν ἰατρὸν ὡς τὰς χεῖρας κυρίου σου.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxxviii, l. (c. 190 B. C.) Midrash Rabbah, Exodus, c. xxi, has it: "Honour thy physician before thou hast need of him." The proverb also occurs in the Babylonian Talmud: Taanith, fo. 83b; and in the so-called Alphabet of Ben Sira. Cited in rabbinical sources as a genuine saying of Ben Sira. Quoted by RAY,

Adagia Hebraica, p. 411, with the comment, "That is, we must honour God in our health and prosperity that he may be propitious to us in our adversity."

6 He that sinneth against his Maker beaveth proudly towards the physician.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxxviii, 15. (c. 190 B. C.)

7 Be ware of that leche which by thee would take experience how he might hele another. (Tu dois aussi fuir le medicin qui veult esprouver en toy comme il guerira les aultres de semblable maladie comment celle que tu as.)

SAINT BERNARD, Le Regime de Mesnaige. (c. 1130)

Flee and eschewe a leche that is drunkelewe. (Se tu es mal dispose de corps tu dois fuir et eviter le medicin qui est souvent yvre.)

SAINT BERNARD, Le Regime de Mesnaige.

8 If you have a physician for your friend, tip your hat and send him to your enemy. (Si tienes medico amigo, quitale la gorra, y envalio á casa de tu enemigo.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. ii, p. 19. (1814)
A Spanish proverb.

9 Few physicians live well.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 322. (1605)

10 For who-so list have helping of his leche,
To him bihoveth first unwrye his wounde.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. i, l. 857. (c. 1380)

From the Phisition & Attorney, keepe not the truth hidden. (Al Medico & Auocato, non tener il ver celato.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 27. (1578)

From your confessor, lawyer, and physician,
Hide not your case on no condition.

(Al confessore, medico, e avvocato,

Non tenere il ver celato.)

SIR JOHN HARINGTON, The Metamorphosis of Ajax, 98. (1596) The French say, "A confesseurs, medecins, avocats, La verité ne cèle de ton cas."

Deceive not thy Physician. Confessor, nor Lawyer.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 110. (1640)

Hide nothing from thy minister, physician, and lawyer.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 102. (1678)

Don't misinform your doctor nor your lawyer.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737.

To Friend, Lawyer, Doctor, tell plain your whole Case,

Nor think on Bad Matters to put a good Face:
How can they advise, if they see but a part?
'T is very ill driving black Hogs in the dark.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1748.

11 Better pay the butcher than the doctor.

CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 82. (1875)

<sup>1</sup> Among the common people Scoggin is a Doctor.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 143. (1639)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 140. (1670) Scoggin was a court jester of the time of Edward IV. A medieval jingle declared, "Fingunt se medicos quivis idiota, sacerdos, | Jedaeus, monachus, histrio, rasor, anus" (Every idiot, priest, Jew, actor, barber, fancies himself a doctor).

<sup>2</sup> When doctors differ, the patient dies.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. (c. 500 B.C.) See TEHYI HSIEH, Confucius Said It First, p. 87. The Italians say, "Finch' el medico pensa, l'amalà more" (While the doctor thinks, the patient dies); the French, "Pendant que les chiens s'entre-grondent, le loup dévore la brebis" (While the dogs snarl among themselves, the wolf devours the sheep). There is an English variant, "While the doctors consult, the patient dies."

Well, doctors differ.

WYCHERLEY, Plain-Dealer. Act i, sc. 1. (1677)
Who shall decide when Doctors disagree?

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 1. (1735) Frequently quoted.

I shall stand protected by the rhyming adage:
"When Doctors disagree, Disciples then are free."
Gentleman's Magazine, 1813. Pt. i, p. 627.

<sup>3</sup> No man is a good doctor who has never been sick himself.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. (c. 500 B.C.) See TEHYI HSIEH, Confucius Said It First, p. 87.

<sup>4</sup> I observe the Phisician with the same diligence, as hee the disease; I see hee feares, and I feare with him.

JOHN DONNE, Devotions. No. 6. (1624)

To the sick man, the physician when he enters seems to have three faces, those of a man, a devil, and a god. When the physician first comes and announces the safety of the patient, then the sick man says: "Behold a god or a guardian angel." (Intransit medici facies tres esse videntur aegrotanti; hominis, Daemonis, atque Dei. Cum primum accessit medicus dixitque salutem, "En Deus aut custos angelus," aeger ait.)

JOHN OWEN, The Physician. (1647)

Angels when we come to cure, devils when we ask payment. (Proemia cum poscit medicus, Sathan est.)

WALTER SCOTT, The Abbot. Ch. 26. (1820) Referred to as an "old saying and true."

<sup>5</sup> 'Tis too late to think of the Doctor after Death.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1709)

AFTER DEATH THE DOCTOR, see under LATE.

<sup>6</sup> The poor die because they cannot afford a doctor; the foolish because they consult ignorant ones.

KABARA EKKEN, Ten Kun (Ten Precepts): Health. (1710) Ken Hoshino, tr.

<sup>7</sup> A young Barber, and an olde Phisition. (Barbier giouine, e Medico vechio.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32. (1578)

Another form is, "Medico vechio, e chirurgo giovane" (An old physician and a young surgeon), or barber, the barber of old being a surgeon, or at least a blood-letter, as the modern barber-pole, with its red and white stripes, testifies. There is a Gascon saying, "De jeune médecin, cimetière bossu" (Of a young physician a lumpy churchyard), that is, a churchyard full of graves.

Young barber, old doctor; otherwise they are not worth a blade of grass. (Jeune barbier, vieil médecin, | Si'l sont autres ne valent pas un brin.)

GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences. Quoting a proverb of c. 1575.

An old Physician, and a young Lawyer.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 650.

(1640) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 652. (1732)

Commonly Physicians like beer are best when they are old, & Lawyers like bread when they are young and new.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: The Good Advocate. (1642)

An old physician, a young lawyer. An old physician because of his experience; a young lawyer, because he . . . will have leisure enough to attend to your business.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 36. (1670)

Beware of the young doctor and the old barber.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733.

Talk of your science! after all is said

There's nothing like a bare and shiny head;

Age lends the graces that are sure to please;

Folks want their doctors mouldy, like their cheese.

O. W. HOLMES, Rip Van Winkle, M.D. Pt. ii. (1870)

A young physician and a young lawyer, and confide in both with equal frankness.

CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 75. (1875)

<sup>8</sup> A pitifull Phisition, maketh a scald [scabby] wound. (Medico pietoso fa la piaga tegnosa.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32. (1578) Because he doesn't cleanse it thoroughly <sup>9</sup> Physicians are the cobblers, rather the botchers, of men's bodies.

JOHN FORD, The Lover's Melancholy Act i, sc. 2. (1628)

<sup>10</sup> To poore people he prescribes cheap but wholesome medicines: not removing the consumption out of their bodies into their purses; nor sending them to the Eastindies for drugs, when they can reach better out of their gardens.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: The Good Physician. (1642)

<sup>11</sup> The vnknowne disease putteth out the Physicians eye.

GERARD DE MALYNES, The Ancient Law-Merchant, 254. (1622) Quoted as a true proverb.

But I am laxative inough there otherwise.
This (quoth this yonge man) contrary doth ryse;
For he is purs sicke, and lackth a phisicien.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

An expansion of the Latin proverb, "Corpus valet, sed aegrotat crumena" (The body is well, but the purse is sick). See also under PURSE.

"Is there no hope?" the sick man said;
The silent doctor shook his head,
And took his leave with signs of sorrow,
Despairing of his fee to-morrow.

JOHN GAY, Fables: Ser. i, No. 27: The Sick Man and the Angel. (1727)

1 Formerly a doctor, Dialulus is now an undertaker. He continues to put his patients to bed in his old effective way. (Chirugus fuerat, nunc est vispillo Dialus. | coepit quo poterat clinicus esse modo.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, No. 30. (c. A. D. 85)

Repeated in No. 47 with a different last line, "Quod vispillo facit, fecerat et medicus" (What the undertaker now does, the doctor did before).

2 They that be whole need not a physician. (οὐ χρείαν ἔχουσιν οἱ ὑγιεστες ἰατροῦ.)

New Testament: Matthew, ix, 12. (c. A. D. 50)

The Vulgate is, "Non est opus valentibus medicus." Repeated in Mark, ii, 17, and Luke, v, 31. Christ was merely quoting a well known proverb, as He frequently did to drive a point home to his auditors.

A physician is superfluous among the healthy. (Supervacuum . . . inter sanos medicus.)

TACITUS, Dialogus de Oratoribus. Sec. 41. (c. A. D. 85)

3 He's a good doctor who knows how to cure. (Bon mire est qui sait guérir.)

JEHAN MIELLOT, Proverbes Français. (c. 1475)

4 No physician delights in the health of his own friends. (Nul médecin ne prend plaisir à la santé de ses amis mesmes.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 21. (1580) A sentiment frequently denounced as untrue.

5 You . . . are doctor.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Comforte against Tribulation. Sec. 2. (1529)

You need not doubt, you are no doctor.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 172. (1670)

You are the lady doctor.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Brickdust Row. (1907) "You're the doctor," i.e. you're the one who must decide.

6 It is not always in a physician's power to cure the sick. (Non est in medico semper relevetur ut aeger.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. iii, l. 17. (A. D. 13)

I know myself better than any doctor can. (Quam medico, notior ipse mihi.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. i, epla. 3, l. 92.

7 The book of Nature is that which the physician must read; and to do so he must walk over the leaves.

PARACELSUS, Maxim. (c. 1530) See Encyclopedia Britannica, xviii, 234. 9th ed.

8 A physician is nothing but a consoler of the mind. (Medicus nihil aliud est quam animi consolatio.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 42. (c. A. D. 60)

I would alwayes haue my Phisition, of a cheerful countenance.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 358. (1580)

A good bedside manner.

GEORGE DU MAURIER, Legend, under a picture in Punch, 15 March, 1884. The dialogue ran:

"What sort of a doctor is he?" "Well, I don't know much about his ability, but he has a very good bedside manner."

In a dying civilisation, political prestige is the reward not of the shrewdest diagnostician but of the man with the best bedside manner.

ERIC AMBLER, A Coffin for Dimitrios, p. 71 (1939)

9 A physician can sometimes parry the scythe of death, but has no power over the sand in the hour-glass.

HESTER LYNCH PIOZZI, Letter to Fanny Burney, 12 Nov., 1781.

10 The carping patient makes a cruel doctor. (Crudelem medicum intemperans aeger facit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 104. (c. 43 B. C.)

11 The patient does himself ill who makes an heir of his doctor. (Male secum agit aeger medicum qui heredem facit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 373. (c. 43 B. C.)

If one be sick . . . be sure that he make not his Phisition his heire.

JOHN LYLY, Campaspe. Act v, sc. 4. (1584)

He knowes he must of Cure despair, Who makes the slie Physitian his Heire.

ROBERT HERRICK, Upon Leech. (1648)

He is a fool that makes his physitian his heir.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Fr.-Eng., p. 11. (1659)

That Patient is not like to recover, who makes the Doctor his Heir.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4368. (1732)

The Germans say, "Setz'st du den Arzt zu deinem Erben, So musst du ohne Gnade sterben" (If you make the doctor your heir, you must die without grace).

He's a fool that makes the doctor his heir.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1732.

12 A hundred devils leap into my body, if there are not more old drunkards than old physicians. (Cent diables me saultent au corps s'il n'y a plus de vieux hyuognes, qu'il n'y a de vieux medecins.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 41. (1534)

It is reported (as you know well enough) that the number of old men that are dronkerds is greater, then the number of olde men that are Phisitions.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 156. (1574) Young, tr.

There are more Physicians in health than drunkards.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 902. (1640) There's more old drunkards than old doctors.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736. The Germans say, "Es giebt mehr alte Weintrinker als alte Aerzte" (There are more old wine-bibbers than old doctors).

1 Don't you know what they say in the common proverb, Happy is the physician who is called in at the declension of the disease? (Ne sçaiz tu qu'on dict en prouerbe commun, Heureux estre le medecin, qui est appellé sus la declination de la maladie?)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 41. (1545) The unlucky doctor treats the head of a disease, the lucky one its tail. (Yün ch'ü hsien shêng i ping t'ou, shih lai hsieu shêng i ping wei.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1631. (1875)

2 He sawe a peyntour that was waxe a physician, to whom he sayde, thou knowest that man might se at the eye the fawtes that thou didst in thy crafte, but nowe they may not be perceyued, for they ar hidde vnther the erthe.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophirs, fo. 37. (1477) Quoting Diogenes. A bad wrestler became a doctor. "Courage," said Diogenes to him, "You are right; now you can put into the earth those who formerly laid you on it." (Un mauvais luitteur se feit medecin: "Courage," luy dict Diogenes; "tu as raison: tu mettras à cette heure en terre ceulx qui t'y ont mis aultrefois.")

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 37. (1580) There was a painter became a physician; whereupon one said to him, "You have done well; for before the faults of your work were seen, but now they are unseen."

FRANCIS BACON, Apophthegms. No. 254. (1620) The sunne doth alwayes behold your good succeſſe, and the earth covers all your ignorances.

JOHN MELTON, Astrologaster, p. 17. (1620) You that dwell neere these graves and vaults, Which oft doe hide Physicians faults.

WEBSTER, Devil's Law Case. Act. ii, sc.3. (1623) 'Tis said of all phisitions

What good comes by their physick the sun sees; But in their art, if they have had succeſſe, That the earth covers.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Pleasant Dialogues. (1637) Physicians, of all men, are most happy; whatever good success soever they have the world proclaimeth, and what faults they commit the earth covereth.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Hieroglyphikes of the Life of Man. (1638)

Physicians are happy men, because the sun makes manifest what good success soever happeneth in their cures, and the earth burieth what faults soever they commit.

JOHN BODENHAM, Politeuphuia, p. 175. (1669) If the Doctor cures, the Sun sees it; but if he kills, the Earth hides it.

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 184. (1721)

3 If you do not pay the doctor who cured you, beware of again falling ill. (Ping 'hao pu hsieh i, hsia tz'ü wu jên i.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1626. (1875)

An unskillful doctor kills with a secret dagger; a stupid doctor murders without a sword. (Hsiao i pu ming, an tao sha jên; yung i sha jên pu yung tao.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1630.

4 The physician cannot prescribe by letter, he must feel the pulse. (Non potest medicus per epistulas eligere, vena tangenda est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xxii, sec. 1. (c. A. D. 65)

5 It is a poor physician who lacks faith in his ability to cure. (Mali medici est desperare, ne curet.)

SENECA, De Clementia. Bk. i, ch. 17. sec. 2. (c. A. D. 55)

6 Kill thy physician, and the fee bestow Upon thy foul disease.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, i, 1, 164. (1605)

7 'Tis not a skillful leech Who mumbles charms o'er wounds that need the knife. (οὐ πρὸς λατροῦ σοφοῦ θηρεῖν ἐπαδὸς πρὸς τομῶντι πημάτι.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 581. (c. 409 B. C.)

He's such a quack I'll bet he's web-footed.

A. M. STEIN, The Case of the Absent-Minded Professor, p. 80. (1943)

8 To preserve a man alive in the midst of so many chances and hostilities, is as great a miracle as to create him.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Dying. Ch. i, sec. 1. (1651)

9 The man over sixty who holds out his hand to a physician is ridiculous. (ἀνὴρ ὑπὲρ ἑξήκοντα γεγονὼς ἔτη καὶ προτείνων λατρῷ χεῖρα καταγέλαιός ἐστιν.)

EMPEROR TIBERIUS. (c. A. D. 25) As quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 136E.

He was wont to mock at the arts of physicians, and to ridicule those who, after the age of thirty, needed counsel as to what was good or bad for their bodies.

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. vi, sec. 46. (A. D. 116) Of Tiberius.

He enjoyed excellent health, . . . although from the thirtieth year of his age he took care of it according to his own ideas, without the aid or advice of physicians.

SUETONIUS, Lives of the Caesars: Tiberius, sec. 68. (c. A. D. 120)

Will you cast away your child on a fool and a physician?

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, iii, 4, 101. (1601)

Eyther mere foolos or good phisitions all.

BARNABE BARNES, Divils Charter, sig. L3. (1607)

No matter whether I be a foole or a phisitian.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, A Mayden-head Well Lost.

Act iii. (1634)

Every one is a fool or a physitian to himself after thirtie.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1659)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 35. (1670)

Remember, every man is a fool, or physician to himself at least.

JOHN DUNTON, Athenian Sports, p. 13. (1707)

Every man at thirty is a fool or a physician. He is a fool who at that age knows not his constitution.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 101. (1721)

Every Man is a Fool, or a Physician, at Forty.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1428. (1732)

A man learns certain rules of health, so that it is said that at forty he is either a fool or a physician.

SIR ARTHUR HELPS, Companions of My Solitude. Ch. 10. (1851)

1 Where there are three doctors, there are two atheists. (Ubi tres medici, duo athei.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 68. (1853) A Latin medieval proverb.

2 A physician is a person who pours drugs of which he knows little into a body of which he knows less.

VOLTAIRE, Epigram. (c. 1760) As quoted by

HELPS, Friends in Council, ii, 10.

He's the best physician that knows the worthlessness of most medicines.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733.

3 Medicine men have always flourished. A good medicine man has the best of everything and, best of all, he doesn't have to work.

JOHN B. WATSON, Behaviorism, p. 4. (1925)

4 There is a great difference between a good physician and a bad one yet very little between a good one and none at all.

ARTHUR YOUNG, Travels in France, 9 Sept., 1787.

5 If doctors fail you, let these three be your doctors: a cheerful mind, rest, and moderate diet. (Si tibi deficient medici, medici tibi fiant Haec tria: mens hilaris, requies, moderata diaeta.)

UNKNOWN, Regimen Sanitatis Salernitanum.

(c. 1550) In a version given by Gabriel

Harvey, "labor" is substituted for "requies."

The first was called doctor diet, the seconde doctor quiet, the third doctor mery man.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, The Governement of Health, fo. 51. (1558) "Counsail was geuen me, that I should not staye myselve vpon the pinion of any one phisicion, but rather vpon three" as named above.

Doctor Diet, Doctor Quiet, and Doctor Merryman.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, The Metamorphosis of Ajax, p. 99. (1596)

This is one of the three Salernitan doctors, Dr. Merryman, Dr. Diet, and Dr. Quiet, which cure all diseases—Mens hilaris, requies, moderata diaeta.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy, ii, ii, 6, 4. (1621)

After these two, Doctor Diet and Doctor Quiet, Doctor Merriman is requisit to preserve health.

HOWELL, The Parley of Beasts, p. 23. (1660)

The best doctors in the world are doctor diet, doctor quiet, and doctor merryman.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

Temperance and labor are the two true physicians of man. (La tempérance et le travail sont les deux vrais mēdecins de l'homme.)

ROUSSEAU, Émile. Bk. i. (1762)

Joy and Temperance and Repose

Slam the door on the doctor's nose.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, The Best Medicines.

(1845) From the Sinngedichte of FRIEDRICH VON LOGAU.

Nature, time and patience, are the three great physicians.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 457. (1855)

II—Physician, Heal Thyself

6 Wretched that I am—such are the inventions I devised for mankind, yet have no cunning wherewith to rid myself of my own sufferings (τῆς νῦν παρούσης πημονῆς ἀπαλλαγῶ.)

AESCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l. 471. (c. 470 B.C.)

7 How, healing others, have you not healed yourself? (καὶ πῶς, ἄλλους ἰώμενος, σαυτὸν οὐκ ἴασω;)

AESOP, Fables: The Worm and the Fox. (c.

570 B.C.) The worm claimed to be a physician, skilled in drugs, and the fox asked why, then, being lame, it hadn't healed itself

Is physic going to be prescribed for diseased limbs by this frog, whose pale face is sicklied o'er with a livid hue? (Pallida caeruleus cui notat ora color?)

AVIANUS, Fables. No. vi, l. 11. (c. A.D. 400)

Physician, heal thy lameness.

Babylonian Talmud: Genesis Rabbah, xxiii, 4.

(c. 450)

What more ridiculous than a sore-eyed person who sets up as an oculist?

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 679. (1817)

8 Do not imitate bad physicians who, in treating the diseases of others, profess to have mastered the whole art of healing, but themselves they cannot cure. (Neque imitare malos medicos, qui in alienis morbis profitentur tenere se medicinae scientiam, ipsi se curare non possunt.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. iv, epis. 5, sec. 5. (45 B.C.)

<sup>1</sup> Saint Luke was a Saint and a Physition, and yet he died.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 133. (1616)

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No.1006.(1640)
Boasting that he could make a man immortal, he himself [Paracelsus] died at fourty seven years.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Paracelsus. (1642)

<sup>2</sup> Healer of others, full of sores himself. (ἄλλων ἰατρὸς αὐτὸς ἔλκεσιν βρῶν.)

EURIPIDES, Fragments. Fr. 1086, Nauck. (c. 420 B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 71F, 88D, 481B, 1110E, and by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, v, 38, who gives the Latin, "Aliorum medicus, ipse hulneribus scates."

He boasts of healing poor and rich,
Yet is himself all over itch.

(Medicin est des aultres en effect:
Toutesfois est d'vlcres tout infect.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, Prologue. (1548)
Motteux' translation of Rabelais' rendering of the Greek, ἰατρὸς ἄλλων, αὐτὸς βρῶν.

<sup>3</sup> Cure, godeman? ye, thow art a faire leche;
Cure thy self, that tremblest as thou goste.

THOMAS HOCCLEVE, De Regimine Principum, p. 7. (c. 1412)

<sup>4</sup> Ye will surely say unto me this proverb. Physician, heal thyself. (ἰατρὲ, θεράπευσον σεαυτὸν.)

New Testament: Luke, iv, 23. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate version is, "Medice, cura teipsum." Christ, as He himself indicated, was merely repeating a proverb which had been current for at least a thousand years, and which is still one of the most widely quoted of all proverbs, not only in English, but in practically all languages. Its popularity is no doubt due to the fact that it is "the hardest and most unanswerable of all taunts," as Blackmore says. All collections of proverbs include it, and these will not be cited here.

Physician, heal thyself. (Medecin, O gueriz toy-mesmes.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, Prologue. (1548)
Medice, teipsum—

Protector, see to 't well, protect yourself.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, ii, 1, 53. (1590)

First therefore physician, cure thine own ills.

DANIEL TUVIL, Vade Mecum, p. 152. (1638)

"Physician, heal thyself," is the hardest and most unanswerable of all taunts.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Christowell. Ch. 24. (1882)

<sup>5</sup> Good leche is he that can himself recure.

JOHN LYDGATE, Daunce of Machabree, l. 424. (c. 1425)

He's a good doctor who can cure himself. (Bon est le médecin qui se peut guérir.)

GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences. (c. 1550)

He is a good physician who cures himself.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 148. (1666)

Remember how many physicians are dead after puckering up their brows so often over their patients. (ἐννοεῖν συνεχῶς πόσοι μὲν ἰατροὶ ἀποτεθνήκασι πολλάκις τὰς ὁφρὺς ὑπὲρ τῶν ἀρρώστων συσπᾶσαντες.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iv, sec. 48. (c. A. D. 174)

<sup>6</sup> That physician will hardly be thought very careful of the health of others who neglects his own. (Difficilement sera creu le medicin auoir soing de la santé d'aultruy, qui de la sienne est negligent.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, Prologue. (1548)
Quoting GALEN, De Sanitate, bk. v.

<sup>7</sup> When the leche may not hele him self howe shulde he hele another.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophirs, fo. 44. (1477) Quoting Socrates.

<sup>8</sup> The cleverest doctor cannot cure himself. (Liang i pu tzū i.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs No. 1624. (1875)

No man is qualified to remove the skeleton from his own closet.

KATHLEEN KNIGHT, Rendezvous with the Past, p. 3. (1940)

He who treats himself has a fool for a patient.
J. F. MONTAGUE, Broadway Stomach, p. 92. (1940) Quoting an old proverb.

III—To Die of One's Physician

<sup>9</sup> Some think Physicians kill as many as they save, and who can tell how many murders they make in a year, that may freely kill folks, and have a reward for it? and, according to the Dutch proverb, a new Physician must have a new Church-yard.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. iv, memb. 1, subs. 1. (1621)

Physicians kill more than they cure.

EDWARD WARD, Writings, ii, 328. (1703) Referred to as "an old maxim."

<sup>10</sup> The doctor cures the sick man who does not die.

GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 439. (1938) A Japanese proverb.

<sup>11</sup> Like some Phisitions, make worke where all was well before.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 33. (1574) Pettie, tr.

I was well; I wished to be better; I am here (Stavo bene; ma per star meglio; sto qui.)

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 25. (1711) Quoting the epitaph on the monument of an Italian valetudinarian.

This comes of altering fundamental laws and overpersuading by his landlord to take physic (of which he died) for the benefit of the doctor. Stavo bene (was written on his monument) ma per star meglio, sto qui.

JOHN DRYDEN, Dedication of the Aeneid. (1697)

One doctor makes work for another.

V. S. LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 73. (1902)

<sup>1</sup> Many physicians have killed the king. (πᾶλλοι ἱατροὶ βασιλέα ἀπώλεσαν.)

EMPEROR HADRIAN, on his deathbed. (A. D. 138)

See XIPHILINUS, Epitome of the Roman History of Dio Cassius. Bk. lxi, sec. 22. The Latin is, "Multi medici regem sustulerunt." Another rendering, dating from more than two centuries later, was, "Turba medicorum regem perdidit" (The crowd of doctors killed the king). There are others of less authority: "Multitudo de medicis me caedebant," and "Multitudo medicorum me caedebant."

Hadrian, the emperor, ceased not to cry out, as he was dying, that the crowd of doctors had killed him. (Adrian l'empereur criot sans cesse, en mourant, "Que la presse des medecins l'avoit tué.")

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 37. (1580)

As he said of Adrian, . . . a multitude of physicians hath killed the emperor; Plus a medico quam a morbo periculi; more danger there is from the physician than from the disease.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy.

Pt. ii, sec. iv, mem. 1, subs. 1. (1621) Burton is quoting a Latin proverb, of which there is a variation, "Si morbum fugiis incidis in medicos" (In fleeing disease you fall into the hands of the doctors), which is sometimes added to the first Ode of the second book of Horace.

<sup>2</sup> Leeches kill with license.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 232. (1721)

"If any die under the hands of a physician, no notice is taken of it."

<sup>3</sup> Doctors and marshals kill people and horses. (Les medecins et les maréchaux Tuent les gens et les chevaux.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, i, 226.

Quoting a proverb of c. 1475.

<sup>4</sup> Diophantus saw Hermogenes the doctor in his sleep and never woke up again, although he was wearing an amulet. ('Ερμωγένη τὸν ἱατρὸν ἰδὼν Διόφαντος ἐν ὕπνῳ | οὐκετ' ἀνηγέρθη, καὶ περίλαμπα φέρων.)

LUCILIUS, Epigram. (c. 140 B. C.) Greek Anthology. Bk. xi, epig. 257. Imitated by MARTIAL, Epigram, bk. vi, No. 53: "Andragorus took a cheerful dinner, but nevertheless was found in the morning dead. He had in a dream seen Doctor Hermocrates" (In somnis medicum viderat Hermocraten).

<sup>5</sup> He who has killed a thousand persons is half a doctor.

P. PERCIVAL, Tamil Proverbs. (1874) BEN SIRA, Ecclesiasticus, xxxviii, 1-3, contends that doctors should be honored, but almost all other sayings concerning them deride them, holding them responsible not only for the cure but also for the death of their patients. Here are a few of the taunts, in addition to the ones noted elsewhere in this section: "The doctor seldom takes physic"; "A new doctor, a new grave-digger"; "When you call the doctor, call the lawyer to make your will"; "He who has a doctor has an executioner"; "When a doctor says there is no hope, he ought to know, since it is he who does the killing."

<sup>6</sup> Paupers got sick and got well as Nature pleased; but woe betided the rich in an age when, for one Mr. Malady killed, three fell by Dr. Remedy.

CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth. Ch. 73. (1861)

<sup>7</sup> Most that perish, it is not their disease that kills them but their physician.

WILLIAM SECKER, The Nonsuch Professor, ii, 257. (1660)

But, when the wit began to wheeze,
And wine had warm'd the politician,
Cur'd yesterday of my disease,
I died last night of my physician.

MATTHEW PRIOR, The Remedy Worse Than the Disease. (1709)

It's my theory that more folks die of the doctor than the disease.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 11. (1843)

The disease does not kill, the physician kills.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 372. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>8</sup> Apollo was held the god of physic, and sender of diseases. Both were originally the same trade, and still continue.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1714)

DOCTRINE

<sup>9</sup> We loved the doctrine for the teacher's sake.

DANIEL DEFOE, Character of the Late Dr Annesley. (1697)

<sup>10</sup> Carried about with every wind of doctrine. (περιφερόμενοι παντὶ ἀνέμῳ τῆς διδασκαλίας.)

New Testament: Ephesians, iv, 14. (c. A. D. 60)
The Vulgate is, "Circumferamur omni vento doctrinae."

Carried away with every blast of vain doctrine. Book of Common Prayer: St. Mark's Day. (c. 1541)

Blown about with every wind of criticism.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 1784.

<sup>11</sup> Adieu, and remember my doctrines. (χαίρετε καὶ μνησθε τὰ δόγματα.)

EPICURUS. His last words. (c. 300 B. C.) See Greek Anthology, vii, 106.

<sup>12</sup> Doctrines, as infections, fear,
Which are not steeped in vinegar.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 339. (1737)

<sup>13</sup> What yesterday was fact to-day is doctrine. JUNIUS, Letters: Dedication. (1769)

DOG

See also Cat: Cat and Dog

<sup>1</sup> A dog in the manger. (κύων ἐν φάτῃ.)

AESOP, Fables: The Dog and the Horses. (c. 570 B.C.) From the well known fable of the dog which growled and snarled to prevent the horses from eating their corn, although the dog itself had no use for it. The form of the proverb usually found in the collections is ἡ κύων, a bitch. Another Greek proverb of a dog where it doesn't belong is "A dog among roses" (κύων ἐν ῥόδῳ), applied to a person living more luxuriously than he deserves.

Like the dog in the manger that neither ate the barley herself nor permitted the hungry horse to eat it. (ἡ κύων ἐν τῇ φάτῃ.)

LUCIAN, Timon. Ch. 14. (c. A. D. 170) ERASMUS, Adagia, i, x, 13, gives the Latin, "Canis in praesepe."

Though it be noght the houndes kinde
To ete chaf, yit wol he werne
An ox which comth to the berne,
Therof to taken eny fode.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. II, l. 84. (c. 1390)

They are lyke to a curre dogge lying in a cocke of hey. For he wyll eate none of the hey hym selfe, nother suffer any other beast that commeth to eate therof.

UNKNOWN, Supplication of the Poore Commons, p. 65. (1546)

Like unto cruel Dogges lying in a Maunger, neither eatyng the Haye theim selues ne sufferyng the Horse to feed thereof hymself.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, A Dialogue against the Fever-Pestilence, p. 9. (1564)

Thou dealest with most of thy acquaintance as the Dogge doth in the maunger, who neither suffereth the horse to eat hay, nor wil himselfe.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 191. (1579)

To dog in the manger some liken I could.

THOMAS TUSSER, Five Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie. Ch. 28. (1580) Tusser was the first to use the exact phrase, "dog in the manger."

Like a . . . dog in the manger, he doth only keep it, because it shall do nobody else good, hurting himself and others.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 3, subs. 12. (1621)

Like the dog of the gardener, that neither eats cabbages himself, nor lets anybody else eat them. (Comme le chien du jardinier qui ne mange pas des choux et ne veut pas que personne en mange.)

OUUDIN, Curiosités Françaises, p. 97. (1640)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3235. (1732) Both Italians and Spaniards put the proverb in this way. The French is sometimes "et n'en laisse point manger aux autres."

Nothing in the world is so hateful as a dog in the manger.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 25 Nov., 1663.

The lazy Dog in the Manger deserv'd hanging for serving the weary'd Ox so barbarously.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 282. (1709)

Like a Dog in the Manger; you'll not eat your selfe, nor let the Horse eat.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3222. (1732) Dead to pleasure themselves, and the blasters of it in others—mere dogs in a manger.

SAMUEL FOOTE, The Minor. Act i. (1760)

What a dog in the manger you must be—you can't marry them both.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Japhet. Ch. 72. (1836)

We mustn't be dogs in the manger, old men like us.

E. V. LUCAS, Advisory Ben, p. 179. (1923)

You know the Manger and the Terrier?—

In other words, the less the merrier.

ODGEN NASH, Home Thoughts from Little Moose. (1933)

That may be dog-in-the-manger stuff.

RICHARD SHATTUCK, The Snark Was a Boojum, p. 131. (1941)

You mustn't be a dog in the manger.

THOMAS JOB, Uncle Harry. Act ii. (1942)

<sup>2</sup> The dog has tasted sausages. (ἐγείσατο χορδῆς ὁ κύων.)

ARISTOPHANES, Fragments. Frag. 75. (c. 410 B.C.)

You should slaughter a dog that has once tasted sheep. (τοὺς γενομένους κύνας τῶν προβάτων δεῖν κατακόπτειν.)

DEMOSTHENES, Against Aristogeiton. Sec. 782. (c. 330 B.C.)

'Tis bad to let a dog taste leather. (χαλεπὸν χορίῳ κύνα γεύσαι.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. x, l. 11. (c. 270 B.C.)

Skin or leather is the literal meaning of χορίον, but here it means a delicacy, a hide, perhaps, to which pieces of fat still cling. Edmonds translates it as "pudding."

The hound can never be frightened away from the greasy hide. (Canis a corio numquam absterbitor uncto.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, No. v, l. 83. (30 B.C.)

A habit once formed is difficult to break.

It is dangerous to permit a dog to taste intestines. (Periculosum est canem intestina gustasse.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. iv, No. 22. (1523) Citing the phrases from Theocritus and Horace from which this proverb springs.

<sup>3</sup> Beware the dog. (εὐλαβεῖσθαι τὴν κύνα.)

ARISTOPHANES, Lysistrata, l. 1215. (412 B.C.)

The Latin "Cave canem," is also very old.

It is set in mosaic, for example, at the portal of one of the houses at Pompeii.

I was gazing at all this, when I nearly fell backwards and broke my leg. For on the left hand as you went in, a great dog on a chain was painted on the wall, and over him was written in large letters, "Beware of the dog." (Cave canem.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 29A. (c. A. D. 60)

Beware of dogs. (βλέπετε τοὺς κύνας.)

New Testament: Philippians, iii, 2. (c. A. D. 60) The Vulgate is, "Videte canes."

<sup>4</sup> Would you go to the crows? (εἰ κόρακας βαδίει μετὰ μῶντος;)

ARISTOPHANES, The Peace, l. 117. (421 B.C.) A proverb the equivalent of "going to the dogs." Repeated in The Birds, l. 28, in The Thesmophoriasusae, l. 1078, and in The Plutus, l. 604, in the sense of "Go to hell." Everything is topsy-turvy. (δὲν κάρω.)

AGIS II, King of Sparta. (c. 402 B.C.) When an old man remarked that everything was going to the dogs in Sparta. "Then things are but following a logical course," Agis replied, "for when I was a boy, my father used to say that everything was topsy-turvy; and my father said that when he was a boy, his father had said the same thing." See PLUTARCH, Moralia; Sayings of Spartans. Sec. 216B.

Addicere aliquem canibus, to bequeath him to dogs.

THOMAS COOPER, Thesaurus Linguae Romanae. (1565)

One is coloured, another is foxed, and a third is gone to the dogs.

ROBERT HARRIS, The Drunkard's Cup, sig. A2. (1619)

Rugby and the School-house are going to the dogs.

THOMAS HUGHES, Tom Brown's School-Days, i, 6. (1857)

None agreed together save in this: that Brixham was going to the dogs.

EDEN PHILLIPOTS, The Haven, i, 14. (1909)

The country is going to the dogs.

BERNARD SHAW, Augustus Does His Bit. (1917)

The world is going to the dogs.

THEODORA DUBOIS, Death Comes to Tea, p. 98. (1940)

Don't let's go to the dogs tonight,
For mother will be there.

A. P. HERBERT, Don't Let's Go to the Dogs.

My grandad, viewing earth's worn cogs,
Said, "Things are going to the dogs";

His grandad in his house of logs
Swore things were going to the dogs;

His grandad in the Flemish bogs
Swore things were going to the dogs;

His grandad in his old skin togs
Said, "Things are going to the dogs."

Well, there's one thing I have to state:
Those dogs have had a good long wait.

UNKNOWN, Going to the Dogs. Sometimes attributed to Dr. George B. Cutten, President of Colgate University, because he read it at an alumni meeting in New York in 1927. But Dr. Cutten writes the compiler, "I got the verses from my brother, who told me he had got them from the Boston Post in the early part of the century, say about 1905." There are various versions.

1
Even the wool-scraper is a prince in his own house.

Babylonian Talmud: Megillah, fo. 12b. (c. 400)

Dogs bark boldly at their master's door.

EDMUND TILNEY, Duties in Marriage. (1568)

Every dog is a lion at home. (Ogni cane è leone a casa sua.)

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 36. (1666)

Every Dog is stout at his own Door.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1414. (1732)

Every dog is valiant at his own door.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 349. (1855)

A dog is impudent on his own dunghill. (Chien sur son fumier est hardi.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, i, 166. (1859)

A dog is a lion when he is at home.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talks. Ch. 13. (1869)

EVERY COCK CAN CROW ON HIS OWN DUNGHILL, see under COCK.

2
[It] would make a dog forget his dinner.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Love's Pilgrimage. Act ii, sc. 2. (c. 1630)

3
To put on dog is to make a flashy display, to cut a swell.

LYMAN H. BAGG, Four Years at Yule, p. 44. (c. 1869)

The Dallas sharp, puttin' on a heap of hawtoor an' dog.

A. H. LEWIS, Wolfville, p. 126. (1897)

Old Joe's putting on as much dog as though he were asking the Colonel for his daughter.

ANDY ADAMS, Log of a Cowboy, p. 243. (1903)

He won't let on he knows me when he's puttin' on dog.

ALICE HEGAN RICE, Sandy, p. 145. (1905)

No use puttin' on dog here.

GERTRUDE ATHERTON, Perch of the Devil, p. 42. (1914)

4
I've got to see a man about a dog.

DION BOUCICAULT, Flying Scud. Act iv, sc. 1.

First produced in London, 6 Oct., 1866; in New York, 24 April, 1867. This line, used as a subterfuge to escape an unpleasant predicament, is the play's only claim to remembrance.

I've got to get back to London to see a man about a dog.

DOROTHY SAYERS, In the Teeth of the Evidence, p. 38. (1940)

I've an appointment with a dog about a walk.

J. J. CONNINGTON, Four Defences, p. 36. (1940)

Good night. I've got to see a fellow about a dog.

J. S. STRANGE, Look Your Last, p. 44. (1943)

5
The best thing about man is the dog. (Ce qu'il y a de mieux dans l'homme, c'est le chien.)

BUYRETTE DE BELLOY, Le Siège de Calais. (c. 1767) Quoted by Voltaire.

The maxim "Of all objects found on earth Man is meanest, much too honoured when compared with any dog."

ROBERT BROWNING, La Saisiaz. Sec. 24. (1878)

6
Who loves me, loves my dog. (Qui me amat, amat et canem meum.)

ST. BERNARD, In Festo Sancti Michaelis. Sermon 1, sec. 3. (c. 1150)

They say who loves me loves my dog. (On dit qui m'aime aime mon chien.)

JEAN DE MEUNG, Trésor, l. 1567. (c. 1250) A proverb in many languages. The Italians say,

"Chi ama me, ama il mio cane"; the Germans, "Wer schlägt meinen Hund, der liebt mich nicht"; the Spaniards, "Quien bien quiere á Beltran, bien quiere á su cane" (Who loves Bertrand loves his dog); and also, "Quien bien quiere á Pedro, no hace mal á su perro" (He who loves Pedro does no harm to his dog). The French also have two forms using a proper name, "Qui aime Jean aime son chien," and "Qui aime Bertrand, aime son chien."

He that loveth me loveth my hound.

UNKNOWN, Early Miscellanies (Warton Cl.), p. 82. (c. 1480)

We say also, He that loveth not my dog, loveth not me.

WILLIAM TINDALE, Treatises, p. 84: (1527)

Whosoever loveth me, loveth my hound.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Sermon on the Lord's Prayer. (c. 1530) FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578)

Loue me, loue my dog.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

Love me? love my dog.—I am bound to that by the proverb, madam.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, The Widdowes Teares. Act i, sc. 2. (1612)

Love me, love my dog, . . . for there are certain decencies of respect due the servant for the master's sake.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Fables, cvi, 122. (1692)

That you must love me, and love my dog. . .

We could never yet form a friendship . . . without the intervention of some third anomaly, . . . —the understood dog in the proverb.

CHARLES LAMB, Popular Fallacies. (1826)

The great pleasure of a dog is that you may make a fool of yourself with him and not only will he not scold you, but he will make a fool of himself too.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Note-Books. (c. 1890)

A dog of good race dreams of the chase. (El can de buena raza, | Siempre ha mientes de la caza.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 231. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

He that keeps another mans dogge, shall haue nothing left but the line.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 323. (1605)

Cited by RAY, English Proverbs, p. 81, 1670, who adds, "This is a Greek proverb ὅς κύνα τρέφει ζῖνον τούτω μόνον λίπος μένει. The meaning is that he who bestows a benefit upon an ungrateful person loses his cost. For if a dog break loose, he presently gets him home to his former master, leaving the cord he was tied with."

I will not have a dog with a bell. (No quiero perro con cencerro.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 23. (1605) Because he could not move without attracting attention.

I am an old dog, and tus, tus, will not do for me. (Yo soy perro viejo, y no hay conmigo, tus, tus.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 33, 69. (1615) "I am too old a bird to be caught with chaff."

To Ianuarie he gooth as lowe,
As evere dide a dogge for the bowe.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchauntes Tale, l. 770. (c. 1386) A "dog for the bow" was a dog used in shooting, hence well trained and obedient, and the phrase was taken to typify all humble or subservient people. Chaucer uses it again in the Friar's Tale, l. 71.

She was made as dogge for the bowe.

JOHN LYDGATE, Troy Book. (1430)

As lowe as dogge to the bowe.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apothegms, fo. 223a. (1542)

He is Clodius' puppy-dog. (P. Clodi canis.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. vi, epis. 3. (50 B.C.)

I am his Highness' dog at Kew;

Pray tell me, Sir, whose dog are you?

ALEXANDER POPE, Engraved on the Collar of a Dog Which I Gave to His Royal Highness. (c. 1740) The Highness in question was Frederick, Prince of Wales.

All the dogs follow the salt bitch.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 13. (1639)

Many dogs may easily worry one.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 56. (1639)

Many Dogs soon eat up a Horse.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3343. (1732)

A dog's nose is ever cold.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 72. (1639)

A womans knee and a doggs snowt are alwayes cold.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1659)

A dog's nose and a maid's knees are always cold.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 51. (1670)

That's a very old saying, "A maid's knee and a dog's nose are the two coldest things in creation."

C. BEDE, in Notes and Queries. Ser. iv, vi, 495 (1870)

In the days of the flood the Ark sprung a small leak, and Noah, who had forgotten to bring carpenter's tools on board with him, was at his wits' end. His faithful dog had followed him to the place where the leak was, and in his trouble Noah seized the dog and crammed his nose into the leak. This stopped it, but in a few moments Noah perceived that the dog must die if kept in this position any longer. By this time Noah's wife had come up, and Noah thereupon released the dog and stuffed his wife's elbow into the crack. The danger was thus averted, but a dog's nose and a woman's elbow will remain cold as long as the world lasts.

BARZILLAI LOWSLEY, A Glossary of Berkshire Words and Phrases. (1888)

<sup>1</sup> Many a dog is hanged for his skin, and many a man is killed for his purse.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 97. (1639)

<sup>2</sup> To take a man up as short as a dog in a halter.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 274. (1639)

For the pence hee's your dog in a halter.

Roxburghe Ballads, vii, 648. (1660)

<sup>3</sup> Dogs fawne on a man no longer than he feeds them.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Amour. (1611)

The dogge waggeth his tayle, not for you, but for your bread.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 21. (1633)

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 36. (1666)

Dogs wag their taile not so much in love to you as to your bread.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 7. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1320. (1732)

If you wish a dog to follow you, feed him.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 422.

(1855) From the Spanish, "Quieres que te siga el can? Da le pan" (Do you want a dog to follow you? Give him some bread).

<sup>4</sup> When a dog is drowning every one offers him water.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Chien. (1611)

When a dog is drowning, every one offers him drink.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 82.

(1640) See also under KICK.

<sup>5</sup> The scalded dog feares euen colde water.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Chien. (1611)

See under EXPERIENCE.

<sup>6</sup> A brabbling curre is never without torne eares.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Hargneux.

(1611)

Brabbling curs never want sore ears.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 55. (1640)

The quarrelsome dog has always the ear torn. (Chien hargneux a toujours l'oreille déchirée.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. x, fab. 9. (1668) "A quarrelsome man is always in the wars."

Tulying [fighting] dogs come halting home.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 309. (1721)

Quarrelling Dogs come halting home.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3988. (1732)

Fuller also has (No. 3899), "Quarrelling Dogs should be kick'd out of Doors."

Quarrelsome dogs get dirty coats.

SAMUEL LOVER, Handy Andy. Ch. 46. (1842)

Quoted as an "old saying."

<sup>7</sup> A bad dog hates to look upon a wolfe.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Loup. (1611)

The French say, "A mauvais chien on ne peut montrer le loup" (To a bad dog one can't show a wolf). Also, "Mauvais chien ne trouve où mordre" (A bad dog can't find a place to bite).

A bad dog never sees the wolf.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 63. (1640)

<sup>8</sup> Brag is a good dog.

THOMAS DELONEY, The Gentle Craft, ii, 5. (c. 1598) See under BOASTING.

<sup>9</sup> He who wishes to kill his dog, accuses him of madness. (Qui veut tuer son chien l'accuse de la rage.)

EUSTACE DESCHAMPS, Miroir du Mariage, v, 402. (a. 1400) Another form is, "Quand on veut noyer son chien, on dit qu'il a la rage" (When one wishes to drown his dog, one says that he has hydrophobia). NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Dog. (1721)

He that will kyll his neyghbours dogge beareth folkes in hande he is made.

JEHAN PALSgrave, La Langue Françoise, 450. (1530)

He that would hang his dog gives out first that he is mad.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 81. (1670)

"He that is about to do anything . . . unworthy, first thinks himself of some plausible pretence."

He who wishes to kill his dog can always find symptoms of rabies. (Quien á su perro quiere matar, rabia le ha de levantar.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbs, p. 273. (1856) A Spanish proverb. The Germans say, "Wer den Hund haengen will, findet leicht einen Strick," "He who wants to hang his dog easily finds a rope"; the French, "Dis que ton chien a la rage, et puis tu le pendras" (Say that your dog has the rabies and then you can hang him).

<sup>10</sup> I am called dog because I fawn on those who give me anything, I yelp at those who refuse, and I set my teeth in rascals. (τοὺς μὲν διδόντας σάειν, τοὺς δὲ διδόντας ὑλακτῶν, τοὺς δὲ πονηροὺς δάκνων.)

DIOGENES, on being asked why he was called a dog. (c. 350 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes, sec. 60. The Greek Anthology records an inscription on a pillar surmounted by a dog, which was raised at Athens to the memory of Diogenes: "Say, dog, What guard you in that tomb?" "A dog." "His name?" "Diogenes." "From far?" "Sinopé." "He who made a tub his home?" "The same. Now, dead, among the stars a star."

Diogenes, a true-born son of Zeus, a hound of heaven. (Διογένης Ζανὸς γόνος οὐράνιός τε κύων.)

CERCIDAS OF CRETE, Meliambics. (c. 250 B.C.)

See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes, sec. 77.

Francis Thompson used The Hound of Heaven as the title of one of his most famous poems. (1893)

<sup>11</sup> You keep dogs when you can't keep yourself. (αὐτὸν οὐ τρέφει κύνας τρέφεις.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, iii, 17. (c. A. D. 125) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, v, 88, with the Latin, "Teipsum non alens, canes alit."

Who hath no more bread than need, must not keep a dog.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 133. (1640)

The dog has no aversion to a poor family. (Kou pu hsien chia p'in.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 134. (1875)

There is no man so poor but what he can afford to keep one dog. And I have seen them so poor that they could afford to keep three.

JOSH BILLINGS (H. W. SHAW), On Poverty. (1865)

<sup>1</sup> Set the bandog on the bull.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Poly-olbion. Sec. 23. (1622)

A bandog is a dog that is chained up because of its ferocity, hence any ferocious dog.

A Mastiff groweth the fiercer, for being ty'd up.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 320. (1732)

<sup>2</sup> Who but a silly Fop, as foolish as the Dog in the Fable, would not prefer the Substance before the Shadow?

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 217. (1709) See under COVETOUSNESS.

<sup>3</sup> A living dog is better than a dead lion.

Old Testament, Ecclesiastes, ix, 4. (c. 250 B. C.)
See under LIFE AND DEATH.

<sup>4</sup> A dog in the seat of honor. (ἡ κύων τοῦ θρόνου.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. vi, No. 4. (1508) With the Latin, "Canis digna sede."

A dog's obeyed in office.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iv, 6. 159. (1605)
See under OFFICE.

<sup>5</sup> To try it on a Carian. (ἐν τῷ Καρί κινδυνεύσμεν.)

EURIPIDES, Cyclops, l. 655. (c. 440 B. C.) PLATO, Laches, 187B, uses the same proverb, the English equivalent of which is "Try it on the dog." Carian mercenaries were held of little account.

Try those jokes on a brother-in-law. (Esas burlas a un cuñado.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 69. (1615)

A variation of the Latin, "Quaere peregrinum" (Try it on a foreigner).

Try it on the dog.

MARK TWAIN, A Connecticut Yankee, p. 129. (1889)

I was trying it on the dog, so to speak.

AGATHA CHRISTIE, The Tuesday Club Murders. Ch. 12. (1933)

She very rudely told Paula to try it on the dog.

GEORGETTE HEYER, Envious Casca, p. 253. (1941)

<sup>6</sup> There is a dog in the well.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 98 (c. 1595) There is something amiss.

There is a whaap [knot] in the reap [rope]

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 305. (1721)

<sup>7</sup> We hounds slew the hare, quoth the messoun [lap-dog].

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 108 (c. 1595) KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 349.

We dogs worried the hare.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 239. (1678)

We Hounds kill'd the Hare, quoth the Lap-Dog.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5443. (1732)
FLY ON THE WHEEL, see under FLY.

<sup>8</sup> A man condemned, is halfe beheaded. (Homo condannato, è mezo degolato.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 30. (1578)

Give a dog an ill name, and he'll soon be hanged.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 124. (1721)
Ill deem'd half hanged.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 195.

Give a dog an ill name and hang him.

GEORGE COLMAN THE ELDER, Polly Honeycombe. Sc. 4. (1760)

It is pithily said, "Give a dog an ill name and hang him," and . . . if you give a man, or a race of men, an ill name, they are likely to do something that deserves hanging.

WALTER SCOTT, Guy Mannering. Ch. 23. (1815)

If you once give a dog a bad name—as the sailor-phrase is—he may as well jump overboard.

R. H. DANA, Two Years Before the Mast. (1840)

Give a dog an ill name and hang him, they say; call a woman a mother-in-law, and it's the same thing.

MRS. OLIPHANT, The Second Son. Ch. 41. (1888)

To give a dog an unrespected name,

And hanging seems to be about the same.

ELLEN THORNECROFT FOWLER, Fuel of Fire.

Ch. 12, Heading. (1901)

Give a dog a bad name!

EUGENE O'NEILL, The Great God Brown. Act i, sc. 2. (1926) RATH, Posted for Murder, p. 197. (1942)

Give a dog an unappetizing name and eat him.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 256. (1938) A Chinese proverb. See also under NAME.

<sup>9</sup> The worst dog waggeth his tayl. (Ogni tristo cane mena la coda.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578)

Another Italian form is, "Non è tristo cane che non meni la coda" (There is no dog so sad but he will wag his tail).

The worse dog that is waggeth his tail.

JOHN DAVIES, The Scourge of Folly. Prov. 190. (1611)

The pittyfull'st dog that is will wag his tail.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 36. (1666)

Cut off a dogs tayle, and he wyl be a dog styl. (Taglia la coda al cane, e sempre resta cane.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578)

Euery dog values his tail.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 36. (1666)

Let every dog carry his own tail.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 47. (1880)

<sup>10</sup> The dog that fetches will carry.

ROBERT FORBY, The Vocabulary of East Anglia, p. 429. (c. 1820) "A talebearer will tell tales of you, as well as to you."

<sup>11</sup> He's gentle, he is kind; I'll never, never find A better friend than old dog Tray.

STEPHEN COLLINS FOSTER, Old Dog Tray. (1853)

1 Dogs never go into Mourning, when a Horse dies.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1314. (1732)
Dogs, that hunt foulest, hit off most Faults.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1318. See also under FAULT.

Dogs, that put up many Hares, kill none.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1319.

Many a Dog's dead, since you were a Whelp.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3336.

When the Dog's dead, all his Malice dies with him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5582.

2 When the Dog is beaten out of the Room, where will they lay their Stink?

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5581. (1732)

The Scots say, "A weel-bred dog gaes oot when he sees them preparing to kick him oot."

3 As seemely as . . . a dogge in a dublet.

JOHN GRANGE, Golden Aphroditis, sig.F1. (1577)

As proud as a dogge in a dublet.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Shoemaker's Holiday. Act iii. sc. 1. (1600)

The dog saw himself in hempen breeches and did not know his comrade. (Vióse el perro en bragas de cerro, y no conocio su companero.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 50. (1615)

In Mal Lara it is "the clown"; "Vióse el villano y fiero que fiero" (As proud as proud could be). The Italian is "Villano nobilitato non conosce suo parentado." Shelton's rendering is, "What care I, quoth Sanchica, 'what he says that sees me stately and majestic? 'There's a dog in a dublet,' and such like." The Berkeley MSS, iii, 33, have, "As proud as a dog in a doublett." (1639)

It would make a dog doff his dublet.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 239. (1678)

Knit my dog a pair of breeches and my cat a cod-piece.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 255. (1678)

Boswell: I think it is a new thought in a new attitude.

Johnson: It is the old dog in the new dublet.

JAMES BOSWELL, Life of Johnson. Ch. 66. (1778)

A mere dog in a dublet: A mean pitiful creature.

G. F. NORTALL, Folk-Phrases, p. 6. (1894)

4 As a very foole was he, who being askt, why the dogge folowed his maister, answered, for that his maister went before.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 86. (1574) Pettie, tr.

This old proverb, It is a hard matter to make a bed for a dogge: for a man cannot tell on which side hee will lye, when he goeth turning round being ready to lye down.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, iii, 110.

5 Fools and dogs use to begin in jest, and end in earnest.

JOSEPH HALL, Contemplations, x, 3. (1612)

Dogs begin in jest and end in earnest.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 345. (1855)

6 De howlin' dog know w'at he sees.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Uncle Remus: Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

7 Though the Mastiff be gentle, yet bite him not by the lip.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 137.

(1640) FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1757. From the Spanish, "Aunque manso tu sabueso, no le muerdas en el bezo."

As the proverb says, tho' the bear be gentle, don't bite him by the nose.

THOMAS D'URFEY, Don Quixote. Pt. iii, act i, sc. 1. (1696)

8 The dog that licks ashes, trust not with meal.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 391.

(1640) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 87. (1678)

9 Look after the dog with jagged teeth; do not grudge him his food, or some time the Day-sleeper may take your stuff. (κύνα καρχαρόδοντα κομείν, μὴ φείδεο σίτον, | μὴ ποτέ σ' ἡμερόκοιτος ἀνὴρ ἀπὸ χρήμαθ' ἔληται.)

HESEIOD, Works and Days, l. 604. (c. 800 B. C.)

The "Day-sleeper" is the robber who works by night.

A dog is worthy of his food. (ἄλφα ἢ κύων τοῦ βρώματος.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. vi, No. 3. (1608)

With the Latin, "Digna canis pabulo." Erasmus cites the proverb from Diogenianus

It's a bad dog that deserves not a crust.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 91. (1639)

It's an ill dog that deserves not a crust.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 81. (1670) A variant is, "It's a poor horse that is not worth his oats."

10 It is, as I have lerned in lystnyng,

A poore dogge that is not woorth the whys-tylyng.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

CAMDEN, Remains, p. 318. (1605)

I count myself worth whistling after.

NICHOLAS BRETON, A Poste with a Packet of Mad Letters. (1603)

It is an ill dog that is not worth the whistling.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 81. (1670)

'Tis an ill dog that's not worth whistling for.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

They are determined to think me a dog not worth whistling for.

Garrick Correspondence, ii, 335. (c. 1770)

11 The dog that is idle barks at his fleas, but he that is hunting feels them not.

DEAN HOLE, More Memories. Ch. 11. (1894)

Quoted as a Chinese proverb, illustrating the statement that "Honest work is the best cure for all ills that flesh is heir to."

A reasonable amount o' fleas is good for a dog—keeps him from broodin' over bein a dog.

E. N. WESTCOTT, David Harum, p. 284. (1899)

<sup>1</sup> Only a stomach that seldom feels hunger scorns common things. (Ieiunus raro stomachus volgaria temnit.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 38. (30 B. C.)

Hungry dogges will eate dirty puddings.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1546)

Suche hongrye doggs will slabbe up sluttish puddings.

UNKNOWN, Respublica, iii, 6. (1553)

The horse . . . has his head ever in the manger; . . . and a hungry dog eats dirty puddings.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Pleasant Comedie of Old Fortunatus. Act ii, sc. 2. (1600)

Hungry dogs will eat dirty pudding.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 82. (1670) Ray quotes the line from Horace given above.

Dirty puddings for dirty dogs.

BERNARD MANDEVILLE, The Virgin Unmask'd, p. 32. (1709)

Scornful dogs will eat dirty puddings.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

The messenger (one of those dogs who are not too scornful to eat dirty puddings) caught in his hand the guinea which Hector chucked at his face.

WALTER SCOTT, The Antiquary. Ch. 43. (1816) "Hungry dogs eat dirty pudding," which is a satire upon the distress of epicures, during the scarcity of provisions.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, Random Recollections, i, 37. (1830)

Hungry dogs are blythe o' bursten puddins.

HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 35. (1832)

A hungry dog's fain o' dirty puddin'.

F. E. TAYLOR, Lancashire Sayings, p. 7. (1901)

<sup>2</sup> The dog teaches thee fidelity.

JOHN HORNECK, The Crucifixion of Jesus. (1686)

Histories are more full of examples of the fidelity of dogs than of friends.

POPE, Letter to H. Cromwell, 9 Oct., 1709.

The dog alone, of all brute animals, has an affection upwards to man.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table-Talk, 2 May, 1830.

The best friend a man has in the world may turn against him and become his enemy. His son or daughter . . . may prove ungrateful. Those who are nearest and dearest to him . . . may become traitors to their faith. . . . The one absolutely unselfish friend that man can have in this selfish world, the one that never deserts him, the one that never proves ungrateful or treacherous, is his dog.

SENATOR GEORGE G. VEST, of Missouri, Address, before a jury at Warrensburg, Mo., in 1876.

The story is that one farmer had shot another's dog for killing sheep or chickens, and the dog's owner had brought suit for damages. There had been several hung juries and the costs were mounting up, when Vest was called in as counsel for the prosecution. He had heard none of the evidence and knew nothing about the case, but his impromptu and wholly irrelevant speech won the case for his client. See WESTBROOK PEGLER's syndicated column. 23 Dec., 1942.

<sup>3</sup> The dog, which bites the stone that is hurled at him.

WILLIAM HUGH, The Troubled Man's Medicine, p. 5. (1546)

They resemble angry Dogges, which byte the stone, not him that throweth it.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber). p. 223. (1580)

Silly Dogs are more angry with the Stone, than with the Hand that flung it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4172. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> When the dog is beaten, the lion is tamed. (Quando canis flagellatur, leo domesticatur.)

JACOBUS DE VORAGINE, The Golden Legend (c. 1280)

By the litul welpys me chastys the lyon.

FÖRSTER, ed., Douce MS, fo. 52. (c. 1350)

And for to maken othere be war by me, As by the whelp chasted is the leoun.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Squire's Tale, l. 491. (c. 1386)

He would beat the dog before the lion. (Battoyt le chien deuant le lion.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 11. (1534) A more modern form is, "On bat souvent le chien devant le lion."

Even so as one would beat his offenceless dog to affright an imperious lion.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, ii, 3, 277. (1605)

Batre le chien devant le lyon: To punish a meane person in the presence, and to the terror, of a great one.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Batre. (1611)

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 826. (1640)

A dog scourged can bid a lion fear.

D. G. ROSSETTI, Dante and His Circle, p. 314 (1892)

<sup>5</sup> Bow-wow you say, like a dog. (Βαὺ Βαὺ καὶ κυρὸς φωνῆς ἔστι.)

JOHN OF ALEXANDRIA, Rhetoric, xxxii, 33. (c. A. D. 625)

He has gone to the demnition bow-wows.

CHARLES DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 64 (1839) "I beg its little pardon," said Mr. Mantalini. . . . "It's all up with its handsome friend. He has gone," etc.

Daddy wouldn't buy me a bow-wow.

JOSEPH TABRAR. Title of song. (1892) Made famous by Vesta Victoria. Lord Pembroke spoke of Dr. Johnson's "bow-wow way." See BOSWELL, Life, 1775.

<sup>6</sup> He that strikes my dog, would strike me if he durst.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 143. (1721) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2318. (1732)

If you beat a dog, you insult his master.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 676. (1872)

Before you hit the dog, look at the master.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. xl. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

Ev'ry time I come to town,
The boys keep kickin' my dawg aroun';

Makes no diff'rence if he is a houn',
They gotta quit kickin' my dawg aroun'.
WEBB M. OUNGST, They Gotta Quit Kickin' My Dawg Aroun'. Published in 1912, and used as the slogan of Champ Clark's campaign for President in that year.

1
A mad dog neither drinks nor smokes, but it would be rash to conclude that he was therefore a safe and pleasant companion.

H. C. LODGE, Speech, U.S. Senate, 6 Jan., 1915.

2
The last dogge oftentimes catcheth the Hare, though the fleetest turne him.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 419. (1580)

Be wisely patient; . . .

The hindmost hound oft takes the doubling hare.
FRANCIS QUARLES, Divine Emblems, iv.4. (1635)
The hindmost hound may catch the hare.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 16. (1659)
As the last dog most commonly catcheth the hare which other dogs have turned and tired before; so such who succeed in dangerous and difficult enterprises, generally reap the benefit of those who went before them.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Derbyshire, i, 373. (1662)

The foremost dog catcheth the hare.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 10. (1670)

The foremost hound grips the hare.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 306. (1721)
Recommending diligence and industry. THE EARLY BIRD CATCHES WORM, see under BIRD.

The hindermost Dog catches the Hare.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4597. (1732)

3
Fierce in the woods, gentle in the home.
(Silvis aspera, blanda domi.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xi, epig. 69, l. 2. (c. A. D. 93) Of a dog.

Dogs are fine in the field.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 940. (1640)

4
Whose dog's dead now?

PHILIP MASSINGER, A Very Woman. Act iii, sc. 2. (1634) What's going on?

Why rings all these bells? What dog is a hanging?
F. J. CHILD, ed., Ballads: Little John a-Begging. (c. 1660)

5
He who wishes to beat a dog easily finds a stick. (Qui veut frapper un chien Facilement trouve un bâton.)

GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences. (c. 1550) From the Latin proverb of unknown origin, "Qui vult caedere canem, facile invenit fustem."

How easy a thing it is to find a staff if a man be minded to beat a dog.

THOMAS BECON, Early Works: Preface. (1563)

It is an easie matter to finde a staffe to beate a dog.
STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 100. (1574) Pettie, tr.

It is an olde proverbe, A staffe is sone found to beate a dogge.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, iv, 120.

The ancient proverb will be well effected:
"A staff is quickly found to beat a dog."

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 170.

(1590) Hart, in a note in the Aldine edition, says, "I have only one earlier example, from Udall's Diotrephes, 1588." But Becon and Pettie were still earlier, and undoubtedly were read by Shakespeare.

A staffe is soone found to beat a dogge withall.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Crossing of Proverbs. (1616)

One need not go far to find

A staff to beat a dog, nor circumstance

To make him guilty that's before foredoom'd!

JOHN WILSON, Andronicus Comnenius. Act ii, sc. 1. (1664)

'Tis an easy matter to find a staff to beat a dog.

Innocence is no protection against . . . a tyrannical power.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Aesop's Fables, iii, 3. (1692)

He who has a mind to beat a dog, will easily find a stick.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Dog. (1721)

If you want a Pretence to whip a Dog, it is enough to say, he eat up the Frying-Pan.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2794. (1732)

It is an easy Thing, to find a Stick to beat a Dog.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2892. (1732)
When you wish to lick

A dog, 'tis easy, sir, to find a stick.

J. R. PLANCHÉ, Extravaganzas, ii, 165. (1842)

Excuses were abundant. . . . It is easy to find a stick to beat a sick dog.

SAMUEL SMILES, Thrift, p. 328. (1875)

The wolf easily finds a reason when it wishes to devour the sheep. (Der Wolf findet leicht eine Ursache wenn er das Schaf fressen will.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 358. (1856) A German proverb.

6
To a bad dog a short leash. (A meschant chien court lien.)

GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences. (c. 1550) Another form is, "A rebelle chien dur lien" (To the fractious dog a strong leash) And finally, "Tel chien tel lien" (Like dog like leash).

A curst dog must be tied short.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 317. (1623)

A curs'd Curr should be short ty'd.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 65. (1732)

7
The bottom dog in the fight, that captures me.

JOAQUIN MILLER, The Danites. Act iii. (1877)

Tom is always for the underdog.

ELIZABETH DALY, Murders in Volume 2, p. 89 (1941)

8
They dragged him out like a dead dog. (Hors le traient com I. mort chien.)

MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, i, 123; De la Borgoise d'Orliens, l. 198. (c. 1250)

He had been treated like a dog.

MARK TWAIN, Tom Sawyer. Ch. 8. (1876)

9
He is olde dogge at expounding.

THOMAS NASHE (?), An Almond for a Parrat, 5b. (1589)

To be, as it were, a dog at all things.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, iv, 4, 14. (1591)

I am dog at a catch.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, ii, 3, 62. (1601)

You are an old dog at these things.

JOHN GAY, The What D'ye Call It. Prelim., sc. 5. (1714)

<sup>1</sup> The wild boar is often held by a small dog.
(A cane non magno saepe tenetur aper.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 422. (c. 1 B. C.)

<sup>2</sup> "Hot dog," whispered Hydrangea.

ELLIOT PAUL, Mayhem in B-Flat, p. 41. (1940)

<sup>3</sup> I have eaten the dog's tongue; I must speak the truth. (De re tamen ego verum dicam, qui linguam caninam comedi.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 43. (c. A. D. 60)

<sup>4</sup> The mastiff never loveth the grey-hound. as the saying is.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, ii, 85. (1576)

<sup>5</sup> It has been related that dogs drink at the river Nile running along, that they may not be seized by the crocodiles. (Canes currentes bibere in Nilo flumine, | A crocodilis ne rapiantur, traditum est.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fable 25. (c. 25 B. C.)

As a dog [drinks] from the Nile. (Ut canis e Nilo.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ix, No. 80. (1523)

In haste. Erasmus says that after the defeat of Marc Antony at Actium, a friend inquiring what he had done there, was told, "Like a dog in Egypt, drank and ran" (Ut canis in Aegypto, bibit et fugit). The story is told also by MACROBIUS, Saturnalia, i, 2.

Then, like the Dogs of Nile be wise,
Who taught by Instinct how to shun
The Crocodile that lurking lyes,
Run as they drink and drink and run.

SWIFT, The Bubble, l. 177. (1720)

"To treat a thing as the dogs do the Nile," was a common proverb with the ancients, signifying to do it superficially. "To give it a lick and a promise."

H. T. RILEY, The Fables of Phaedrus. (1853)

<sup>6</sup> Your dog is your only philosopher. (καὶ ὡς ἀληθὺς φιλόσοφος.)

PLATO, Republic. Bk. ii, sec. 376B. (c. B. C. 375)

The beast of all other, says Plato, the most philosophical. (C'est, comme dict Platon, la beste du monde plus philosophe.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua: Prologe de l'Auteur. (1534)

<sup>7</sup> It is folly to take unwilling dogs out to hunt. (Stultitia est venatum ducere invitas canes.)

PLAUTUS, Stichus, l. 139. (c. 200 B. C.)

<sup>8</sup> Even a dog gets his revenge. (κυρὸς δίκας.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Terrestrial Comparisons. (c. A. D. 95) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 47, who gives the Latin, "Canis vindictam."

Erasmus says that this is a Macedonian proverb, which originated from the death of Euripides in 406 B. C. While on a visit to King Archelaus, of Macedonia, he was torn to death by some dogs, set upon him by a rival. See AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae, xv, xx, 10. Included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, with the rendering, "A dogge hath a day," and the comment, "There is none so vyle or symple a person but at one tyme or other may auenge him selfe of wronges done unto hym."

As euery man saith, a dog hath a daie.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

As a dog hath a day, so may I perchance have time to declare it in deeds.

QUEEN ELIZABETH, in STRYPE, Ecclesiastical Memorials, ii, 28. (1550)

Let Hercules himself do what he may,
The cat will mew and dog will have his day.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 1, 315. (1600)

Let's spend while we may;

Each dog hath his day.

Roxburghe Ballads, i, 184. (c. 1630)

A man ha' his hour, and a dog his day.

BEN JONSON, Tale of a Tub. Act ii, sc. 1. (1633)

Every dog hath his day.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 80. (1670) This, the form in which the proverb is generally used, sometimes with "has" instead of "hath," first appears in RAY. SWIFT uses it in Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

I've heard a good old proverb say,
That ev'ry dog has got his day.

EDWARD WARD, Hudibras Redivivus. Pt. ii, canto iii, l. 18. (1705)

Wise men say That every Dog must have his Day.
SWIFT, Upon the Horrid Plot Discovered by Harlequin, l. 30. (1722)

Dogs, ye have had your day.

POPE, tr., Homer's Odyssey. Bk. xxii, l. 41. (1726)

Homer does not use this phrase, although he starts with "Dogs!" (ὦ κύρες); but he continues, "Ye thought that I should nevermore come home." It is, of course, Ulysses speaking to the wooers

Every Dog has its Day, and every Man his Hour.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1415. (1732)

All dogs have their day; even rabid dogs.

CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Pt. iii, bk. i, ch. 1. (1837) Referring to Marat. The Japanese say, "Even the street dog has his lucky days."

Every dog has his day, and I have had mine.

BERNARD SHAW, Caesar and Cleopatra. Act iii. (1897)

Every dog has its day and every cat its night.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 493. (1940) There are many other variants. Notes and Queries (3rd ser., v, 97) gives an Essex one, "Every dog has his day, and a cat has two Sundays"; and another is, "Every dog has its day, and a bitch two afternoons."

<sup>9</sup> A dog returneth to his vomit.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvi, 11. (c. 350 B. C.)
See under VOMIT.

<sup>1</sup> He that passeth by, and meddleth with strife belonging not to him, is like one that taketh a dog by the ears. (Sicut qui apprehendit auribus canem, sic qui transit impatiens. et commiscetur rixae alterius.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvi, 17. (c. 350 B. C.)
He that taketh a straunge hound by the eres is outhewhyle biten with the hound.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 49. (c. 1387)

<sup>2</sup> To give one the dog to hold.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 70. (1678) To serve one a dog-trick.

It is a good dog that can catch anything.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 70. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2854. (1732)

The best dog leaps the stile first.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 76. (1678)

HELPING LAME DOGS OVER STILES, see under HELP.

<sup>3</sup> There are more ways to kill a dog than hanging.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 127. (1678)

Many ways to kill a dog, and not to hang him.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 253. (1721)

I know that very homely proverb, More ways of killing a dog than hanging him.

SWIFT, Works (Scott) vi, 478. (1725) See also under CAT.

<sup>4</sup> Like Hunt's dog, that will neither goe to Church nor stay at home.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 291. (1678)

Like Wood's Dog; he'll neither go to Church nor stay at Home.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3241. (1732)

"Why," said the old man [Sussex], "it has been a saying as long ago as I was a child, Contrary as Wood's dog, that wouldn't go out nor yet stop at home."

Notes and Queries, Ser. vi, ii, 166. (1880)

Like Hunt's dog that will neither go to church nor stay at home. Impossible to please. . . . Hunt was a Shropshire labourer, whose dog when shut up at home during service-time howled, but when his master took him with him the dog would not enter the church.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 90. (1917)

<sup>5</sup> The more I see of men, the more I admire dogs. (Plus je vois les hommes, plus j'admire les chiens.)

MADAME ROLAND (?), commenting on the behavior of the Jacobins. (1792) The remark has also been attributed to Madame de Sévigné and to Ouida. See Notes and Queries, ser. x, vol. xii, p. 292.

The more I see the representatives of the people, the more I admire my dogs. (Plus je vois des représentants du peuple, plus j'admire mes chiens.)

LAMARTINE, while a member of the French Provisional Government, 1848. See COUNT D'ORSAY, Letter to John Forster, 1850.

<sup>6</sup> After whom dost thou pursue? After a dead dog. (Canem mortuum persequeris.)

Old Testament: I Samuel, xxiv, 14. (c. 700 B. C.)
Am I a dog's head? (Caput canis ego sum?)

Old Testament: II Samuel, iii, 8. (c. 700 B. C.)
Is thy servant a dog, that he should do this great thing? (Quid enim sum servus tuus canis, ut faciam rem istam magnam?)

Old Testament: II Kings, viii, 13. (c. 600 B. C.)

<sup>7</sup> He that goeth to bedde with Dogges, aryseth with fleas. (Chi va dormire con i cani, si leva con i pulici.)

JAMES SANFORD, tr., Guicciardini's Houres of Recreation, fo. 209. (1572) A rendering of the Latin proverb, sometimes attributed to Seneca, "Qui cum canibus concumbunt, cum pulicibus surgunt."

Hee which sleepeth with the dogs, must rise with the fleas.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 38. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Who sleepeth with dogges, shal rise with fleas.

JOHN FLORIO, First Fruites, fo. 29. (1578)

He who associates with dogs carries away fleas. (Qui hante chiens puces remportent.)

JEAN-ANTOINE DE BAIF, Mimes. (1597) A later form is, "Qui se couche avec les chiens Il se lève avec les puces."

They have a certain spice of the disease;

For they that sleep with dogs shall rise with fleas.

WEBSTER, The White Devil. Act v, sc. 1. (1612)

He that lies with the dogs, riseth with fleas.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 345. (1640)

He that lies down with dogs, must rise up with fleas.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 82. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2216 (1732)

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1733

He that sleeps with dogs, must rise with fleas. If you keep company with base and unworthy fellows, you will get some ill by them.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 129. (1721)

To this great truth, a universe agrees,

"He who lies down with dogs, will rise with fleas."

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR). Rights of Kings, viii. (1791)

If you lie down with the dogs, you'll get up with fleas, and that's the fruits of travelling with a fool

CHARLES LEVER, Jack Hinton. Ch. 22. (1842)

See also COMPANY: EVIL COMMUNICATIONS

<sup>8</sup> He sets on a dog to worry a pig. (So kou yao chu.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1737. (1875) He excites a quarrel.

A lean dog shames his master.

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 426.

<sup>9</sup> He is a good dog which goes to church.

WALTER SCOTT, Woodstock. Ch. 1. (1826)

'Tis said by men of deep research,

He's a good dog who goes to church.

F. LOCKER-LAMPSON. My Confidante, l. 44. (1896)

<sup>1</sup> She had transform'd me to a curtal dog and made me turn i' the wheel.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, iii, 2, 151.

- (1593) A curtal dog is one with its tail cut short.

Like a dog in a wheel, which roasts meat for others.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, iv, 120. (1748)
It . . . makes me feel like a dog in a wheel, always moving and never advancing.

WALTER SCOTT, Journal, 22 March, 1827.

<sup>2</sup> I like a bit of a mongrel myself, whether it's a man or a dog: they're the best for everyday.

BERNARD SHAW, Misalliance, p. 19. (1910)

<sup>3</sup> A gentle hound should never play the cur.

JOHN SKELTON, Garland of Laurell, l. 1436. (c. 1525)

Yelping curs will raise mastiffs.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 360. (1721)

<sup>4</sup> Ye come among us plenty. By coples in a peire, As spirites in the haire, Or dogges in a ffayre.

JOHN SKELTON, Works (Dyce), ii, 445. (c. 1520)

That little jackdaw kept hopping about;

Here and there Like a dog in a fair.

R. H. BARIHAM, The Jackdaw of Rheims. (1840)

Like a dog in a fair: here, there, and everywhere.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 270. (1869)

It was all over the place, like a dog at a fair.

G. L. GOWER, Surrey Glossary, Ch. 7. (1893)

<sup>5</sup> The dogged dog-days had begun to bite.

JOHN TAYLOR, A Very Merry-Wherry-Ferry Voyage, l. 6. (1622)

<sup>6</sup> The black dog shall not make a prey of both my master and myself.

MRS. THRALE, in Piozzi Letters, ii, 32. (1778)

"The black dog": depression, low spirits; sometimes the sulks.

Sir Arthur has got the black dog on his back again.

WALTER SCOTT, The Antiquary. Ch. 6. (1816)

The black dog Pompey is said to be on a child's back when he is fractious.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 317. (1869)

The black dog was on his back, as people say, in terrifying nursery metaphor.

STEVENSON, New Arabian Nights, Ch. 2. (1882)

<sup>7</sup> And the young man's dog [went] with him. (Ambulaverunt ambo simul.)

Apocrypha: Tobit, v, 16. (c. 200 B.C.) In xi, 4, is, "They went their way, and the dog went after them." Columella has, "Quis famulus amantior domini quam canis?" (What servant is more attached to his master than is his dog?)

<sup>8</sup> Hunger and ease is a dog's life.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 276. (1666)

A dog's life, hunger and ease.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 172. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 78. (1732)

A dog's life, mickle hunger, mickle ease.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 18. (1721)

She . . . domineers like the devil: O Lord, I lead the life of a dog.

SAMUEL FOOTE, Mayor of Garret. Ch. 1. (1764)
They've been leading him a dog's life this year and more.

HUGHES, Tom Brown at Oxford. Ch. 10. (1861)
He made his wife lead the life of a dog.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Theory and the Hound. (1910)

<sup>9</sup> Dog doesn't eat dog. (Canis caninam non est.)

VARRO, De Lingua Latina. Bk. vii, ch. 32 (43 B.C.) Quoted as a proverb. There is a play made upon this line, "Canis a non canendo" (A dog so called from its not singing).

Wild beasts do not injure beasts spotted like themselves. (Parcit cognatis maculis similis fera.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xv, l. 159. (c. A.D. 120)

See under MAN.

Two bears will not bite one another when they meet.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, iii, 2, 80. (1598)

One bear will not bite another.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, v, 7, 19. (1601)

A wolf will never make war against another wolf.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. 2nd ed. (1651)

Dogs are hard drove, when they eat Dogs.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1312. (1732)

It is an hard Winter, when Dogs eat Dogs.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2894. (1732)

Dog should not prey on dog, the proverb says.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Epistle to Bruce. (1790)

It is a common observation that dog will not eat dog.

SAMUEL PEGGE, Anonymiana. Cent. vi, 26. (1809)
I shall take no fee. "Dog does not eat dog" is the saying, you know.

THOMAS GRAY, Letters, p. 439. (1858)

Dog does not eat dog; and it is hard to be robbed by an Englishman, after being robbed a dozen times by the French.

KINGSLEY, Hereward the Wake. Ch. 30. (1866)

Dog won't eat dog, but men will eat each other up like cannibals.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 14. (1869)

A case of dog eat dog, and the best liar win.

CLARISSA CUSHMAN, I Wanted to Murder, p. 109. (1941) On p. 126 is, "Let dog eat dog."

<sup>10</sup> Strong, keen-scented hounds. (Odora canum vis.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iv, l. 132. (19 B.C.)

<sup>11</sup> A dog is made fat in two meals.

JOHN R. WISE, The New Forest. Ch. 16. (1863)
"Applied to upstart or purse-proud people."

<sup>12</sup> Two'd ['twould] make a dog laugh.

UNKNOWN. Roxburghe Ballads, p. 158. (c. 1603)
To hear how W. Symons do command and look sadly . . . would make a dog laugh.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 8 Jan., 1664.

It would have made a dog laugh.

DANIEL DEFOE, Robinson Crusoe, ii, 2. (1719)

Enough to make the sourest cynic smile,
Or, as the proverb says, "Make a dog laugh."
JOHN WOLCOT, Works (1795), ii, 528. (1794)

II—Dogs: Their Bark

1 Crack was a good dog, but he got hung for barking.

S. O. ADDY, Sheffield Glossary: Supplement, 14. (1891) "A swaggerer comes to a bad end."

2 Aftur the oolde dogge the yonge whelp barks.
GEORGE ASHBY, Poems, p. 32. (c. 1470)

3 If the dog bark at thee, go in; if the bitch bark at thee, go out.

Babylonian Talmud: Erubin, fo. 86a. (c. 450)
A quarrelsome son-in-law may be endured, but a quarrelsome daughter-in-law is intolerable. Cited by RAY, Adagia Hebraica, 398. (1678); and by COHEN, Ancient Jewish Proverbs, 51. (1911)

4 Dogs will not give over barking till you throw them a bone. (Quam in os offam obieceris.)
ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 96. (1511)

5 The Popish Proverb well understood hath a truth in it, Never dog bark'd against the Crucifix, but he ran mad.

FULLER, Profane State: The Atheist. (1642)

6 Dogs bark at people they do not know. (κύες γὰρ καὶ βαῖθουσιν ἐν ἀνθρώποις γινώσκουσιν.)

HERACLEITUS, Fragment. (c. 500 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 787C.

Even my own dogs bark at me. (Etiam me meae latrant canes.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 1234. (c. 194 B. C.)

All dogs barke not at him.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

He car'de not what dogges bark'd at him.

DEKKER, A Knight's Conjuring, 30. (1607)

In his peaceable country, where no dog durst bark against him.

THOMAS FULLER, A Pisgah-Sight of Palestine.

Bk. iii, ch. 4, sec. 1. (1650)

7 At every dogs barke, seeme not to awake.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

Wake not at every dogges barke.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 48. (1633)

8 They are all dumb dogs, they cannot bark. (Canes muti non valentes latrare.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, lvi, 10. (c. 725 B. C.)

9 Dogs bark as they are bred.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 84. (1721)

"Spoken when our neighbour's servants re-have themselves accordingly." FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1313. (1732)

Dogs bark as they are bred, and fawn as they are fed.

CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 140. (1875)

10 Folks dogs bark worse than themselves.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs. D. 102. (1721)

"Spoken when our neighbour's servants resent a thing we have done, worse than they would themselves."

11

The bark of an old dog should be heeded. (L'aboy d'un vieux chien doit-on croire.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, i, 169.

Quoting a proverb of c. 1475. The Germans say, "Wenn ein alter Hund bellt, sollt Man hinaussehen."

An olde dog barketh not in vaine. (Cane vecchio non baia indarno.)

JAMES SANFORD, tr., Houres of Recreation, p. 207. (1572) FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 28.

(1578) HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1097. (1640) The French have the same proverb, "Vieux chien n'aboie pas en vain," or "Un vieil chien jamais ne jappe en vain."

If the old dog bark, he gives counsel.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 199.

(1640) FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 2709. (1732)

Old Dogs bark not for nothing.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3711. (1732)

Look out for the old dog that barks. (Prospectandum vetulo latrante.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 342. (1869)

12

A waking dog doth afar off bark at a sleeping lion.

JOHN LYLY, Endimion. Act iii, sc. 1. (1519)

Quoted as "an old saying."

The dogs may bark; the caravan goes on.

MARCEL PROUST, À l'Ombre des Jeunes Filles en Fleurs. Pt. i, p. 45. (1918) Quoting an Arab proverb which Proust says, "had taken the place, that year, among people who 'really counted' of 'He who sows the wind shall reap the whirlwind, which was sorely in need of rest, not having the perennial freshness of 'Working for the King of Prussia'." That is, working for nothing. There is a similar Latin proverb, "Latrantem curatne alta Diana canem?" (Does the lofty Diana care about the dogs barking?) See under MOON.

13

Like dogges that barke by custome.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina: Dedication. (1631)

It is a common proverb, "Dogs bark more for custome than fiercenesse."

SIR GEORGE WHARTON, Merlini Anglici: Preface (1647)

That Dog barks more out of Custom, than Care of the House.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4338. (1732)

14

It is smal reason you should kepe a dog, and barke yourselfe.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. Q2. (1583)

What? Keep a dog and bark myself?

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 81. (1670)

"Must I keep servants, and do my work myself?"

I'll never keep a dog and bark myself.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 203. (1721)

Hout [silence] your dogs and bark yourself.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs. D. 160.

We'll bark ourselves ere we buy dogs so dear.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 357.

I won't keep a dog and bark myself.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Why bark yourself when you keep a dog?

AUSTEN CHAMBERLAIN, Interview, London Times, 16 Dec., 1924, p. 8/3.

As for thy dog, why dost thou keep one.

And bark thyself?

BERNARD SHAW, The Admirable Bashville. Act i. (1926)

Why keep a dog and bark yourself?

AGATHA CHRISTIE, Thirteen at Dinner, p. 178. (1933)

I never keep a dog and bark myself.

VERA KELSEY, The Bride Dined Alone, p. 106. (1943)

1 One dog still sets another barking.

JOHN WEBSTER, The White Devil. Act v, sc. 3. (1612) From the Latin proverb, "Latrante uno, latrat statim et alter canis" (One barking, and the other dog barks at once).

Like dogs, if one bark, all bark.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 148. (1639)

One barking Dog, sets all the Street a barking.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3736. (1732)

One dog barks at something, and a hundred bark at him. (Yi ch'üan fei hsing, pai ch'üan fei sheng.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 136. (1875)

2 At thieves I bark'd, at lovers wagg'd my tail,
And thus I pleased both Lord and Lady Frail.

JOHN WILKES, Epitaph on the Lap-dog of Lady Frail. (c. 1775)

III—Dogs: Their Bite

3 I will never keep a Dog to bite me.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2640. (1732)

The mad Dog bites his Master.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4644.

4 When the Dogge hath once bitten you, then he comes to fawne on you once againe.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 175. (1574) Young, tr.

Better a dog fawn nor bark on you.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 20. (c. 1595)

Better have a dog fawn upon you than bite you.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 219. (1639)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 902. (1732)

5 Dogs don't bite at de front gate.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Unde Remus: Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

6 In every Country dogs bite.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 622. (1640)

7 It is saide of olde, an olde dog byteth sore,

But by God, th' olde bitche biteth sorer and more,

And not with teeth (she hath none) but with hir tounge.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 6. (1546)

An olde dog byteth sore.

RICHARD TAVERNER, tr., Erasmus, fo. 3. (1550)

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 23. (1721)

Olde dogs ever bite sorest.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 124. (1576)

'Tis a certain truth that an old dog . . . bites sore.

EDWARD WARD, Female Policy, p. 46. (1716)

8 A man maie handle his dog so that he maie make him byte him, though he would not.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

A man may cause his own dog to bite him.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 7. (1670)

A man may provoke his own Dog to bite him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 298. (1732)

9 Every dog is allowed his first bite.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, i, 439. (1902) i. e. he is not punished.

Every dog is allowed by the law one free bite.

Spectator, 15 March, 1913, p. 440.

IV—Dogs: Their Bark and Bite

10 Dogs barking aloof bite not at hand.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 321. (1605)

Dogs that bark at a distance, bite not at hand.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 59. (1670)

Dogs that bark at a Distance, never bite.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1317. (1732)

11 A fierce outside and a weak core can only be a paltry fellow.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xvii, ch. 12. (c. 500 B. C.)

A cowardly dog the worse he barks the less he bites. (Canis timidus vehementius latrat, neque mordet.)

QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS, De Rebus Alexandri Magni. Bk. vii. (c. A. D. 50)

Hit is the manere of the feblest houndes for to berke most.

JOHN DE TREVISA, tr., Higden's Polychronicon, iii, 427. (1387)

Fearefull dogges do barke the sorer. (Canes timidi uehementius latrant.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iii, cent. vii, No. 100.

(1508) TAVERNER, tr., fo. 66. (1550) Taverner adds: "Great braggers commonly be least fyghters, and most cowardes euen as the mooste barkynge dogges be for the most parte least biters." The French say, "Tel menace qui a grand peur" (Many a one threatens who quakes for fear); or "Tel rechigne des dents qui n'a nul talent à mordre" (He who shows his teeth has no skill in biting).

12 Presumed to bark the more that he might bite the less.

THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain. Bk. viii, sec. 2. (1655)

Monkbarns's bark . . . is muckle waur than his bite.

WALTER SCOTT, The Antiquary. Ch. 22. (1816)

The bark of the electioneering mobs is worse than their bite.

THOMAS DE QUINCY, Cicero. (1842)

Her new bark is worse than ten times her old bite.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 28. (1848)
The weakness of her nerves would have balanced the violence of her passions, and her bark been worse than her bite.

CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth, Ch. 66. (1860)

His bark was worse than his bite, and he was essentially a kind-hearted man.

G. C. BRODERICK, Memories and Impressions, p. 253. (1900)

Nat's bark is always worse than his bite.

GEORGETTE HEYER, Envious Casca, p. 63. (1941)
Repeated on p. 85.

After you get to know him, you'll realize his bark's worse than his bite.

ZELDA POPKIN, No Crime for a Lady, p. 13. (1942)
The French say, "Il fait plus de bruit que de mal" (He produces more noise than injury).

<sup>1</sup>
A dog will barke er he bite.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

A curr will bite before he bark.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 316. (1605)

Dogs ought to bark, before they bite.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1316. (1732)
The Italians say, "Cane che morde non abbaia in vano" (A dog that bites does not bark in vain).

<sup>2</sup>
Every dog that barks doesn't bite. (Chacun chien qui aboie ne mord pas.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, i, 167.

Quoting a proverb of c. 1250. The modern form is, "Chien qui aboie ne mord pas." The Italians say, "Cane ch' abbaja, non morde."

A barking dog hurteth not. (Cane che baia, non suol nocer.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 28. (1578)

Those dogs byte least, that greatest barkinges keepe.

THOMAS HOWELL, His Devises, p. 30. (1581)

Orlanio . . . thought the greatest barkers were not alwayes the sorest biters.

ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart), iv, 132. (1587)

A dog that barketh much will bite but little.

NICHOLAS LING, comp., Politeuphuia, p. 198. (1597)

Barking dogs bite not the sorest.

ROBERT GREENE (?), George a Greene. Act iv, sc. 3. (1599)

Great barkers are no biters.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 322. (1605)

J. RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 236.

(1678) KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 112.

(1721), with the comment, "Great boasters are not always best performers."

Your barking Curs will seldom bite.

SWIFT, Traulus. Pt. i, l. 46. (1730)

The greatest Barkers are not the greatest biters.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4567. (1732)

Barking dogs seldom bite.

NATHAN BAILY, Dictionary: Barking. (1736)

Barking dogs rarely bite.

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs, ii, 109. (1814) "Cowards," says Bland, "are fond of noise and bluster, but men of courage are sedate and quiet, as the deepest waters flow with the least noise."

Our dogs which bark, Abdallah, seldom bite.

CHAMIER, Saucy Arethusa. Ch. 35. (1837)

A bargain dog never bites.

OGDEN NASH, Funebrial Reflection. (1940)

<sup>3</sup>
The bicche bitit ille | thau he berke stille.

UNKNOWN, The Proverbs of Alfred, l. 611. (c. 1270) South, ed.

A stille dogge bites sore, but the barking cur feares [frightens] more.

UNKNOWN, Tell-Trothes New Yeares Gift, 15. (1593)

The slowest barker is the surest biter.

DANIEL TUVIL, Vade Mecum, p. 130. (1638)

It is the mute hound that bites the hardest.

A. CONAN DOYLE, Sir Nigel. Ch. 14. (1906)

There is a Latin proverb, "Cave tibi a cane muto et aqua silenti" (Beware of a silent dog and still water), which was perhaps the original from which these later variants derived.

STILL WATERS RUN DEEP, see under WATER.

V—Dog and Bone

<sup>4</sup>
The dog that trots about finds a bone.

GEORGE BORROW, The Bible in Spain. Ch. 47. (1843) See EARLY BIRD, under BIRD

<sup>5</sup>
Try that bone on some other dog. (A otro perro con ese hueso.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 32. (1605)

<sup>6</sup>
We stryve as dide the houndes for the boon, They foughte al day, and yet hir part was noon;

Ther cam a kyte, whyl that they were wrothe, And bar away the boon bitwixe hem bothe.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knightes Tale, l. 319. (c. 1386)

It hath been an old saying, that whiles two dogs strive for a bone, the third may come and carry it away.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Poesies, 475. (1575)

I pray you, sirs, list to Esops talk: Whylest two stout dogs were striving for a bone, There comes a cur and stole it from them both.

UNKNOWN, Arden of Feversham. Act iii, sc. 6. (1592) Shakespeare Apocrypha.

Two dogs strive for a bone, and the third, whiles that they contend, taketh it away.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 30. (1633)

Two dogs fight for a bone, and a third runs away with it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5324. (1732)

<sup>7</sup>
A good dog deserves a good bone.

RANDLE COTORAVE, Dictionary: Bon. (1611)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 144. (1732)

A good dog

Deserves, sir, a good bone, of a free master.

BEN JONSON, The Tale of a Tub. Act. ii, sc. 4. (1633)
The French say, "A bon chien il ne vient jamais un bon os" (To a good dog there never comes a good bone). An English variant is, "A good dog does not always get the best bone."

<sup>1</sup> The dog gnaws the bone because he cannot swallow it.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 459. (1640)
Dogs gnaw bones because they cannot swallow them.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 7. (1670)

<sup>2</sup> In the mouth of a bad dog falls often a good bone.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1091. (1650)

RAY, Proverbs, p. 82, cites this, and gives the French, "Souvent à mauvais chien tombe un bon os en gueule."

Into the Mouth of a bad Dog, falls many a good Bone.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2832. (1732)

<sup>3</sup> The dog will not bite, for being struck with a bone.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 24. (1659)
A dog will not yowl, if you strike him with a bone.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 42. (1721)

"People will bear easily some rough usage, . . . if they see their advantage in it."

A Dog will not cry, if you beat him with a Bone.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 79. (1732)

I can byde the bit and the buffet, . . . a hungry tyke ne'er minds a blaud with a rough bane.

WALTER SCOTT, Woodstock. Ch. 20. (1826)

<sup>4</sup> Ten men can eat at one board, but two dogs cannot satisfy themselves at one carcass.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Maxim 31. (c. 1258)

Two dogs are bad at one bone. (Deux chiens sont mauvais à un os.)

EUSTACE DESCHAMPS, Miroir du Mariage, vii, 133. (a. 1400) Another French form is,

"Deux chiens ne s'accordent point à un os"

(Two dogs never agree over one bone).

Like Dogs that snarl about a Bone,

And play together when they've none.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6431. (1732)

The proverb is, "Two dogs over one bone seldom agree."

<sup>5</sup> Dogs in the kitchen desire nobody. (Chiens en cuisine personne n'i desire.)

TOBLER, ed., Li Proverbe au Vilain. No. 10. (c. 1190) There is another old form quoted by HUME, Proverb Lore, p. 32: "Chen en cosyn compaignie ne desire" (A dog in the kitchen desires no company).

Wil the hund gnagh bon, i-fere neld he non. [While the hound gnaws bone, companions would he none.]

THOMAS WRIGHT, Essays on the Middle Ages, i, 149. Quoting a proverb of c. 1210, which is included in many medieval manuscripts.

As usual there is a Latin jingle of the same date, "Dum canis os rodit sociari pluribus odit" (When a dog gnaws a bone, he hates the society of others).

Whiles a dog gnaws a bone, he hateth his fellowe, whom otherwise he loues.

LEWIS EVANS, Revised Withals Dictionary, sig. C3. (1586)

VI—It Is Hard to Teach an Old Dog New Tricks

<sup>6</sup> It is hard to teach an old dog tricks.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains Concerning Britain (1870), p. 326. (1605)

An old dog will learn no tricks. It's all one to physic the dead, as to instruct old men.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 237. (1670)

An old dog will learn no new tricks.

THOMAS D'URFHEY, Quizote. Pt. i, act ii, sc. 1. (1694) SCOTT, Peveril of the Peak: Introduction. (1823)

It is a singular blessing, that nature has formed the mind of man with the same happy backwardness and renitency against conviction, which is observed in old dogs,—“of not learning new tricks.”

LAURENCE STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. iii, ch. 34. (1767)

I am ower auld a dog to learn new tricks.

WALTER SCOTT, The Bride of Lammermoor. Ch. 26. (1819)

You know the old proverb—"It's bad teaching an old dog new tricks."

TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers. Ch. 13. (1857)

Can't learn an old dog new tricks.

MARK TWAIN, Tom Sawyer. Ch. 1. (1876)

They can't be taught new tricks after they begin to moult.

GEORGE ADE, The Joy of Single Blessedness (1922)

You can't teach an old dog new tricks.

IAN HAY, The Shallow End, p. 5. (1924) PETER

J. STEINCROHN, More Years for the Asking,

p. 66. (1940) DOROTHY HUGHES, The Bamboo Blonde, p. 39. (1941) etc., etc.

<sup>7</sup> They been lyk to houndes; for an hound, whan he comth by the roser or by othere bussches, though he may nat pisse, yet wole he heve up his leg and make a contenance to pisse.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Persones Tale. Sec. 76. (c. 1369)

An old dog cannot alter his way of barking.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 121. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 643. (1732)

<sup>8</sup> The dogge must lerne it, whan he is a whelp. or els it wyl not be: for it is harde to make an olde dogge to stoupe.

JOHN FITZHERBERT, The Boke of Husbandry, p. 45. (1534)

It is harde to make an olde dog stoupe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

Its hard to make an olde dogge lye low.

JOHN DAVIES, Scourge of Folly, p. 47. (1611)

It is a hard matter to mend the manners of an old sinner. An old dog won't be easily brought to wear a collar.

NATHAN BAILEY, tr., Erasmus' Colloquies, p. 75. (1725)

<sup>1</sup> It is better to marry a young gyrl, then a mayde of ripe yeeres, who is hardly brought to leave her old il trickes, if she have taken any.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 18. (1574) Pettie, tr.

VII—Let Sleeping Dogs Lie

<sup>2</sup> Seek not the tracks of a present bear. (ἀρκτου παρὸντος ἴχνη μὴ ἴσθαι.)

BACCHYLIDES, Paeans. (c. 465 B.C.) Cited by ZENOBIUS, Adagia, i, 42.

<sup>3</sup> Ye, wyf, quod he, lat slepen that is stille.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Frankeleyns Tale, l. 744. (c. 1388)

It is good therefore if you have a Wife, that is . . . unquiet and contentious, to let her alone, not to wake an angry dog.

EDWARD TOPSELL, The Historie of Serpents, 658. (1607)

<sup>4</sup> He does wrong to wake a sleeping dog. (Il fait mal éveiller le chien qui dort.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, i, 169. Quoting a proverb of c. 1275. Rabelais has, "Esveiller le chat dui dort" (To waken the cat that sleeps), which is the usual French form. In Middle German, "Den schlafenden Hund sal nymant wecken," or "Lass den Hund schlafen" (Let the dog sleep).

It is nought good a sleeping hound to wake.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, l. 764. (c. 1380)

It is euyll wakyng of a slepyng dog.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

Do not disturb the sleeping dog. (Non stuzzicare il cane che dorme.)

ALESSANDRO ALLEGRI, Rime e Prosa. (c. 1575) Another Italian form is, "Non destare il cane che dorme."

It is ill to waken sleeping dogs.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 64. (c. 1595) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 185, who adds, "It is foolish to stir up a quarrel that has been long forgot; or provoke a person to whom you are not a match."

Wake not a sleeping wolf.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, i, 2, 174. (1598)

This butcher's cur is venom-mouth'd. . . best Not wake him in his slumber.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, i, 1, 120. (1612)

It's best to let a sleeping mastiff rest.

SAMUEL COLVILLE, Whiggs Supplication, ii, 27. (1681)

Take my advice, and speer as little about him as he does about you. Best to let sleeping dogs lie.

WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Let. 11. (1824)

Let sleeping dogs lie—who wants to rouse 'em? DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 39. (1850)

He laughed at the maxim of antiquity, quieta noli movere; which is, in our vernacular, "let sleeping dogs lie."

R. D. BLACKMORE, Christowell. Ch. 26. (1882) Sleeping dogs should be allowed, nay forced, to lie quiet.

EDGAR JEPSON, Keep Murder Quiet, p. 180. (1940) As you say in England, let the sleeping dog lie down.

FRANCIS BEEDING, Eleven Were Brave, p. 118. (1941)

Let sleeping dogs lie until you gets bitten by them.

G.H.D. AND M. COLE, Toper's End, p. 226. (1942)

I know when to let sleeping dogs lie.

GILBERT FRANKAU, Air Ministry, Room 28, p. 73. (1942) "Why couldn't he let sleeping dogs lie?"—Ibid., p. 216.

Very much better let the sleeping years lie.

F. B. YOUNG, A Man About the House, p. 203. (1942)

LET WELL ALONE, see under WELL.

<sup>5</sup> Don't stir up a sound sleeper. (μὴ κινεῖν εὖ κείμενον.)

PLATO, Philibus. Sec. 15C. (c. 350 B.C.)

Never rouse a sleeping wasp. (μὴ πως ἐγειρῆς σφήκα τὸν κοιμώμενον.)

PHILIPPUS OF THESSALONICA, Epigram. (c. A. D. 100) See Greek Anthology, vii, 405.

<sup>6</sup> Stir not the jetsam. (μὴ κίνη χεράδας.)

SAPPHO, Fragments. Frag. 78, Loeb. (c. 610 B.C.) Quoted by SCHOLIAST ON APOLLONIUS RHODIUS, Argonautica, explaining the word χεράδας, seashore refuse. Stir not the refuse, or you will come upon something noisome; in other words, let well alone, or let sleeping dogs lie. ALCAEUS, Frag. 143, uses the same word when he says, "If you take a stone from a stone-heap (χεράδος), you are apt to get a sore hand." See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, i, 237. There is a somewhat similar Latin proverb, "Camarinam movere" (To stir Lake Camarina), a lake which caused a pestilence when an attempt was made to drain it. A related Spanish obscenity is usually contracted to "Peor es meneallo" (It is worse to stir it).

The immemorial political-economic principle that it never will get well if you pick it.

H. L. MENCKEN, What is Going on in the World. (American Mercury, Nov., 1933, p. 257.)

<sup>7</sup> He who rouses a sleeping tiger exposes himself to danger. (Pa wo cho ti lao 'hu 'hung ch'i lai liao.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2070. (1875)

<sup>8</sup> 'Twere better to leave sleeping ills at rest. (φαίνεται ἐνθ' ἔληξεν αὐτοῦ μένειν.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus the King, l. 687. (c. 409 B.C.)

Don't stir up an evil that is at rest. (μὴ κινεῖς κακὸν εὖ κείμενον.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. i, No. 62. (1523)

Let well enough alone, a sentiment which

Erasmus traces back to Theognis, and of which he gives the Latin, "Malum bene conditum ne moveris," comparing it with "Sopitos suscitāt ignes." (He stirs up sleeping fires). Included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 4, with the rendering, "Moue not an euyl that is well layed," and the comment, "An incommoditie wel couched is not to be sturred." A shorter Latin form is, "Quieta non movere" (Don't disturb things that are at rest).

When bad luck sleeps, don't wake it. (Cuando la mala ventura se duerme, nadie la despierte.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 259. (1856) Quoting a Spanish proverb. The French say, "Quand le guignon sommeille, Garde que tu ne le réveilles" (When bad luck sleeps, take care that you don't wake it), or "Quand le Guignon dort, laisse-le dormir" (When bad luck sleeps, let it sleep).

DOLLAR

<sup>1</sup> Each dollar is a soldier that does your bidding. VINCENT ASTOR, Epigram. As quoted by HARVEY O'CONNOR, The Astors. Ch. 4. (1941)

<sup>2</sup> That for which all virtue now is sold, And almost every vice,—almighty gold.

BEN JONSON, Epistle to Elizabeth, Countess of Rutland. (c. 1630)

In what shape was the almighty gold transformed, that has bribed you so much in his favour?

GEORGE FARQUHAR, The Recruiting Officer Act iii, sc. 2. (1706)

The almighty dollar, that great object of universal devotion throughout our land.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Wolfert's Roost: The Creole Village. First appeared in The Knickerbocker Magazine, Nov., 1836. The Creole Village was included among The Crayon Papers, published in 1837, and contained the following: "As we swept away from the shore, I prayed that the inhabitants might long retain . . . their respect for the fiddle and their contempt for the Almighty Dollar."

The "Almighty Dollar" is the only object of worship.

UNKNOWN, Editorial, Philadelphia Public Ledger, 2 Dec., 1836. From the similarity of phrasing, it seems a fair guess that the writer of the editorial had just read Irving's article, published in the Knickerbocker a few days previously.

Almighty Dollar, thy shining face
Bespeaks thy wondrous power;
In my pockets make thy nesting-place,
I need thee every hour.

UNKNOWN, The World's Prayer. (c. 1891)

<sup>3</sup> Gold goes worse than formerly. (Or va pis dide devant.)

GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences. (c. 1498) Or "Money does not go as far as it did."

A dollar went farther in those days.

WILLIAM M. EVARTS, U.S. Secretary of State. (c. 1880)

Mr. Evarts, formerly Secretary of State, showed an English friend the place where Washington was said to have thrown a dollar across the Potomac. The English friend expressed surprise; "but," said Mr. Evarts, "you must remember that a dollar went farther in those days." A Senator met Mr. Evarts next day, and said that he had been amused by his jest. "But," said Mr. Evarts, "I met a mere journalist just afterwards who said, 'Oh, Mr. Evarts, you should have said it was a small matter to throw a dollar across the Potomac for a man who had chucked a Sovereign across the Atlantic.'"

RUSSELL, Collections and Recollections, p. 181.

(1898) Some commentators contend it was the Rappahannock, not the Potomac, others that the incident never occurred.

<sup>4</sup> There's no friend like a dollar.

LENORE OFFORD, Clues to Burn, p. 82. (1942)

<sup>5</sup> I am for gold dollars as against bolony dollars.

ALFRED E. SMITH, Press Interview, New York, 24 Nov., 1933. The first appearance of the phrase. See also BALONEY.

I'LL BET MY BOTTOM DOLLAR, see under GAMBLING.

DONKEY, see ASA

DOOR

<sup>6</sup> When we would have the street cleansed, let every man sweep his own door, and it is quickly done.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, ii, 307. (1629)

How soon are those streets made clean, where every one sweeps against his own door.

THOMAS FULLER, A Pisgah-Sight of Palestine. Bk. iii, ch. 1. (1650)

If everyone will sweep his own house, the city will be clean.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 41. (1666)

Sweep before your own door.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 135. (1678)

FULLER, No. 4296. (1732) The French say, "Chacun doit balayer devant sa propre porte" (Everyone should sweep before his own door). The Germans say, "Sweep under your own doormats."

No one of us but what ought to engage in the important work of self-reformation. . . . "If each would sweep before his own door, we should have a clean street."

RICHARD WHATELY, Annotations Bacon's Essays, p. 287. (1856)

<sup>7</sup> Out at dores sterten they anoon.

CHAUCER, The Canterbury Tales: The Nonne Preestes Tale, l. 557. (c. 1386)

He turnde hir out at doores.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Proverbs, 82. (1546)

Many sailors drink . . . wives and children out of doors.

DANIEL PELL, Pelagos, p. 437. (1659)

That objection is out of doors.

DANIEL DEFOE, Robinson Crusoe, ii, 16. (1719)

1 Make not the door wider than the house.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 11. (1639)

2 At open doors, dogs come in.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 8. (c. 1595) KELLY (Scottish Proverbs, p. 23) has, "At open doors dogs come benn," and adds, "and so will thieves and impertinent persons." SCOTT, Woodstock, ch. 37, has, "They say in my country, when doors are open dogs enter."

An open Door may tempt a Saint.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 655. (1732)
See under OPPORTUNITY.

3 He that commeth last, let hym shut the doore.
(Colui che vien vltimo, serra la porta.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578) The French say, "Le dernier ferme la porte, ou la laisse ouverte" (The last man shuts the door, or leaves it open).

He that comes last, makes all fast.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 109. (1678)

4 A nyse wyfe & a backe dore
Makyth oftyn tymus A ryche man pore.

FURNIVALL, ed., Proverbs of Good Counsel. No. 8. (c. 1450)

Twa daughters and a back door, are three stark thieves.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 94. (c. 1595) RAY (p. 51) and FULLER (No. 5323) have, "Two daughters and a back-door are three arrant thieves."

The postern door makes thief and whore.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 334. (1605) DAVIES, Scourge of Folly. Prov. 71. (1611) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6176. (1732)

A nice wife and a back door,
Oft do make a rich man poor.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 218. (1639) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6268. (1732) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 45. (1721), with "Will soon make a rich man poor" for the last clause, and the comment, "The wife will spend and the servants purloin."

The back door robs the house.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 476. (1640) And adds, "Noble housekeepers need no doors."

Too many stairs and back-doors makes thieves and whores.

BALTHAZAR GERBIER, Discourse of Building. Ch. 14. (1662) Cited as "the old English proverb."

5 The door must either be shut, or it must be open.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World. Letter 51. (1762) The French form, "Il faut qu'une porte soit ouverte ou fermé," was used by Alfred de Musset as the title of a play.

All doors must be shut or open.

GEORGE SAINTSBURY, Nineteenth Century Literature, p. 361. (1896)

6 It shall take place behind closed doors.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), A Dinner at —. (1910)

7 It is but to knocke at a deafe man's doore.

BARNABY RICH, The Ladies Looking Glasse, p. 3. (1616)

You knock at a deafe man's doore, or wrong doore.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 7. (1639)

8 This proverbe was fulfilled, when one doore is shut the other openeth.

DAVID ROWLAND, tr., Lazarillo de Tormes, p. 32. (1586)

When one door is shut, another opens. (Donde una puerta se cierra, otra se abre.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Bk. i, ch. 21. (1605) A Spanish variant is, "Quando una puerta se cierra, ciento se abren" (When one door shuts, a hundred open). The Hindus go even farther, and say, "When one door is shut, a thousand are opened."

As one door shuts another opens.

JOHN GALT, Annals of the Parish. Ch. 26. (1821) To the brave and bold the world will not always be adverse. Where one door shuts another opens. R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 5, p. 116. (1853)

If one door should be shut, God will open another.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 5. (1869) An Irish variant is, "God never shuts one door but He opens another."

9 His door opens on the top of his house. (Wu shan t'ou k'ai mên.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1472 (1875) An inhospitable man.

10 I never darkened his door in my life.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

11 Every door may be shut, but Death's door.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 317. (1666) What is "All men are mortal," as compared with the proverb: Every door may be shut but death's door?

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 18. (1853)

12 The Blood . . . must all be laid to his door.

WILLIAM WOTTON, History of Rome, p. 229. (1701)

You have laid your sins at my door.

HENRY FIELDING, Tom Jones, i, 7. (1749)

The guilt of blood is at your door.
TENNYSON, Lady Clara Vere de Vere. Pt. vi. (1842)

13 The idea of a commercial alliance with England based on the integrity of China and the open door for all nations' trade.

UNKNOWN, The Break-up of China. A report to the British Associated Chambers of Commerce, from Shanghai, 20 Nov., 1898.

The open door.

JOHN HAY. On 2 Jan., 1900, Hay, then, U.S. Secretary of State, announced at a meeting of the cabinet that he had completed negotiations for the "open door" in China, and that thereafter no country would be discriminated against by tariff laws or other limitations.

DOUBT

See also Skepticism

<sup>1</sup> If a man will begin with certainties, he shall end with doubts; but if he will be content to begin with doubts, he shall end in certainties.

FRANCIS BACON, Of the Advancement of Learning. Bk. i, v, 8. (1605)

<sup>2</sup> "I doubt it," said the carpenter,
And shed a bitter tear.

LEWIS CARROLL (C. L. DODGSON), Through the Looking-Glass. (1871)

<sup>3</sup> There's no doubt about the bulls. (Ciertos son los toros.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 35. (1605)

It's all right; we may make our minds easy.
A popular phrase on the eve of a bull-fight.

<sup>4</sup> The old rule of "Give the accused the benefit of the doubt."

F. W. CROFTS, Circumstantial Evidence, p. 269. (1941)

<sup>5</sup> To doubt is not less grateful than to know. (Che, non men che saver, dubbiar m' aggrata.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xi, l. 93. (c. 1300)
Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 25.

<sup>6</sup> You prove only too clearly that seeking to know is often but learning to doubt. (Vous ne prouvez que trop que chercher à connaître n'est souvent qu'apprendre à douter.)

ANTOINETTE DE DESHOULIÈRES, Epigram. (c. 1680) Elaborating the French proverb: "Chercher à connaître c'est chercher à douter."

How prone to doubt, how cautious are the wise!

POPE, tr., Odyssey. Bk. xiii, l. 375. (1726)
Doubt grows with knowledge. (Mit dem Wissen wächst der Zweifel.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. (1819)

<sup>7</sup> The doubting mind sees many ghosts. (I hsin to chien kuei.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 179. (1872)

<sup>8</sup> There sticke in my stomacke some doubts.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 36. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Such doubtfull doubttes, that are enough to make a dogge runne a myle without looking behinde him.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, i, 94.

<sup>9</sup> Of that there is no manner of doubt—

No probable, possible shadow of doubt—

No possible doubt whatever.

W. S. GILBERT, The Gondoliers. Act i. (1889)
Often quoted, recently by H. C. BAILEY, The Bishop's Crime, p. 11. (1941)

<sup>10</sup> With great doubts comes great understanding; with little doubts comes little understanding.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs, p. 693. (1937)

<sup>11</sup> When in doubt win the trick.

EDMOND HOYLE, A Short Treatise on Whist. (1742) See under CARDS.

When in doubt tell the truth.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar. (1893)

Tell the truth or trump—but get the trick.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar. (1893)

When in doubt, do nowt.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 389. (1917)

You know my motto: When in doubt ask a policeman.

PETER CHEYNEY, Farewell to the Admiral, p. 77. (1943)

When in doubt don't do anything.

CHENEY, You Can't Keep the Change, p. 215. (1944)

<sup>12</sup> Doubts and jealousies often beget the facts they fear.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Albert Gallatin, 1806.

<sup>13</sup> He that casteth all doubts, shal neuer be resolved in any thing.

JOHN LYLY (Arber), Euphues and His England, p. 354. (1580) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2063. (1732)

<sup>14</sup> An honest man can never surrender an honest doubt.

WALTER MALONE, The Agnostic's Creed. (1886)

<sup>15</sup> O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt? (ἀλιγόπιστε, εἰς τί ἐδίστασας;)

New Testament: Matthew, xiv, 31. (c. A. D. 65) To Peter as he was sinking, after walking on the water. The Vulgate is, "Modicæ fidei, quare dubitasti?"

DOUBTING THOMAS, see under THOMAS.

<sup>16</sup> There is no doubt in this book.

MOHAMMED, The Koran. Ch. 2. (c. 628)

<sup>17</sup> He that doubteth is damned. (ὁ δὲ διακρινόμενος . . . κατακρίνεται.)

New Testament: Romans, xiv, 23. (c. A. D. 57) The Vulgate is, "Qui autem discernit, damnatus est."

He who dallies is a dastard; he who doubts is damned.

JAMES HAMILTON, GOVERNOR OF SOUTH CAROLINA, Speech, 1831, a phrase which has been attributed to George McDuffie, of the same state. Quoted in Congress by J.C.S. Blackburn, of Kentucky, Feb., 1877, during the Hayes-Tilden controversy; and by Col. Henry Watterson, in the Louisville Courier-Journal, when proposing that a hundred thousand Kentuckians march on Washington and seat Mr. Tilden.

<sup>1</sup> Doubting things go ill often hurts more
Than to be sure they do.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, i, 6, 95. (1609)

The worst estate of human life is doubt.

SIR SAMUEL TUKE, The Adventures of Five Hours. Act iii, last line. (1663)

<sup>2</sup> To be once in doubt Is once to be resolv'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iii, 3, 179. (1605)

The road to resolution lies by doubt.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. iv, emb. 2. (1635)

<sup>3</sup> No hinge nor loop To hang a doubt on.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iii, 3, 366. (1605)

<sup>4</sup> Modest doubt is call'd The beacon of the wise.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, ii, 2, 15. (1601)

To doubt is safer than to be secure.

MASSINGER, A Very Woman. Act i, sc. 1. (1634)

The slow-consenting Academic doubt.

JAMES THOMSON, Liberty. Pt. ii, l. 240 (1736)

The first step towards philosophy is incredulity.

DENIS DIDEROT, Last Conversation. (1784)

My mind is in a state of philosophical doubt.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk, 30 Apr., 1830

There lives more faith in honest doubt,

Believe me, than in half the creeds.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. xcvi, st. 3. (1850)

Doubt is the beginning, not the end, of wisdom

GEORGE ILES, Jottings. (1918)

DOUGH, see Money

DOVE

<sup>5</sup> But the dove found no rest for the sole of her foot. (Non invenisset ubi requiesceret pes eius.)

Old Testament: Genesis, viii, 9. (c. 550 B.C.)

When the soule . . . like Noah's dove, can no sure footing take, She doth returne from whence shee first was sent.

SIR JOHN DAVIES, Nosce Teipsum, xxx, st. 26 (1599)

Like Noah's dove, I flit between

Rough seas and stormy skies.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, For Ever with the Lord. (1853)

<sup>6</sup> Do not be too much of a dove. Alternate the cunning of the serpent with the candor of the dove. (No ser todo columbino; alternense la calidez de la serpiente con la candidez de la paloma.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 243. (1647)

<sup>7</sup> But who does hawk at eagles with a dove?

GEORGE HERBERT, The Sacrifice. St. 23. (1633)

See also under EAGLE

<sup>8</sup> As the hawk is wont to pursue the trembling dove. (Ut solet accipiter trepidas arguere columbas.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. v, l. 606. (A. D. 7)

<sup>9</sup> In the helmet of a soldier doves have made a nest: behold what a friend Venus is to Mars. (Militis in galea nidum fecere columbae: | apparet Marti quam sit amica Venus.)

PETRONIUS. Frag. 23, Loeb. (C. A. D. 60)

<sup>10</sup> Doves will peck in safeguard of their brood.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, ii, 2, 18. (1591)

<sup>11</sup> So shows a snowy dove, trooping with crows.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 5, 50. (1595)

Who will not change a raven for a dove?

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, ii, 2, 114. (1596)

DOWB

<sup>12</sup> The world thought he could do it a good turn in the matter of its brothers and sons and nephews. . . . "Dowb had to be taken care of."

W. F. BUTLER, Sir Charles Napier, p. 187. (1890)

"Take care of Dowb" . . . has become a synonym for unblushing nepotism. . . . Dowbiggen joined the army and went out to the Crimea. His uncle, as Secretary for War, despatched a cablegram [c. 1854] . . . "Take care of Dowbiggen etc. etc." The cable broke off at the first syllable, and "Take care of Dowb" got into the papers.

GEORGE M. MINCHEN, Our Public Schools, p. 42. (1901)

DOWN

<sup>13</sup> I'm the janitor and corresponding secretary of the Down-and-Out Club.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), No Story. (1909)

A man may be down, but he's never out.

E. C. LEFFINGWELL, Slogan of the Salvation Army. (c. 1925) The slogan was coined while Leffingwell was publicity director of the S.A.

I may be down, but I ain't out.

LOUIS ADAMIC, Girl on the Road. (1937)

<sup>14</sup> Lord, I been down so long,
Down don't worry me.

HOWARD W. ODLUM, Wings on My Feet. Ch. 5. (1929) Quoting an American Negro song.

DON'T KICK A MAN WHEN HE'S DOWN, see under KICK.

<sup>15</sup> He putteth down one, and setteth up another. (Hunc humiliat, et hunc exaltat.)

Old Testament: Psalms, lxxv, 7. (c. 350 B.C.)

He pulleth downe, He setteth up on hy;

He gives to this, from that He takes away.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. v, canto ii, st. 41. (1595)

Soone up soone downe.

ROGERS, Naaman the Syrian, p. 229. (1642)

You take me up before I'm down.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

He that's down, down with him.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 129. (1678)
 KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 199 (1721) has,
 "If a man be once down, down with him,"
 and adds, "If fortune frown upon a man, his friends will lessen, and his enemies multiply." A. B. CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore,
 p. 154 (1875) cites the proverb, and comments, "an expression of some of the basest feelings of human nature."

See also FALL: NO MERCY FOR THE FALLEN.

DOWRY

See also Marriage for Money

Often in marriage the dowry, if overlarge, becomes a cause of offense. (Saepe in con-iugis fit noxia, si nimia est dos.)

AUSONIUS, Monosyl. Inconnexa, i. (c. A. D. 370)

A great dowry is a bed full of brambles.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 760.
 (1640) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 193. (1732)

Do not espouse a wife for the sake of a dowry.
 (Uxorem fuge ne ducas sub nomine dotis.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. iii, No. 12. (c. 175 B. C.)

If thou wilt go with me bryng with thee.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578)

Come, but come stooping, i. e. well loaded.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 93. (1678)

Bring something, Lass, along with thee,

If thou intend to live with me.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6286. (1732)

The darts come from her dowry. (Veniant a dote sagittae.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 139. (c. A. D. 120)

They that do desire great dowryes do rather marry them selues to the wealth then to their wife.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 150. (1579)

A tocherless dame sits lang at hame.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 32. (1721)

Better a togher [dowry] in her than with her.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 70. (1721)

Better a Portion in a Wife, than with a Wife.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 868. (1732)

Better to have a fortune in your wife than with her.

E. J. HARDY, *How to Be Happy Though
 Married*. Ch. 4. (1886)

A girl that's good has dowry enough. (Dum modo morata recte veniat, dotata est satis.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 239. (c. 210 B. C.)

She that is good and fayre nede none other dowrie.

PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoise, p. 358. (1530)

A fat dowry is good money. (Pulcra edepol dos pecuniast.)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 180. (c. 200 B. C.) "Quae quidem pol non maritast" (Yes, if it comes without the wife), says the other man.

It is not, What is she? but, What has she?
 now-a-days.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

The red petticoat must piece up all.

JOHN WILSON, The Cheats. Act i, sc. 2. (1664)

The lass i' the red petticoat shall pay for all.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 80. (1678)

"Young men answer so when they are chid for being so prodigal, meaning they will get a wife with a good portion, that shall pay for it."

DREAM

The Gigantic Enterprise . . . got into the Public Prints as a Pipe Dream.

GEORGE ADE, More Fables, p. 190. (1900)

I don't have any pipe-dreams about the law.

E. D. BIGGERS, Seven Keys to Baldpate. Ch.
 13. (1913)

The mind asleep hath clear vision. (φρήν δμρασιν λαμπρύνεται.)

AESCHYLUS, Eumenides, l. 104. (458 B. C.)

Dear Lord, please send us blessed dreams,
 And let them all come true.

ELIZABETH AKERS ALLEN, Blessed Dreams.
 (1866)

The visions of the night do often chance contrary. (Nocturnae visiones contrarios eventus nonnunquam pronuntiant.)

APULEIUS, Metamorphoses (The Golden Ass).
 Bk. iv, sec. 27. (c. A. D. 155) Adlington, tr.

Comynly of these swevenys [dreams] the contrary man shul fynde.

UNKNOWN, The Tale of Beryn: Prologue, l.
 108. (c. 1400)

I dreamed last night, but I hope dreams are contrary.

JOHN LYLY, Sapho & Phao, iv, 3. (1584)

Ground not upon dreams; you know they are ever contrary.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, The Familie of Love. Act
 iv, sc. 3. (1607)

O strange! to see how dreams fall by contraries
 WILLIAM ROWLEY, A Match at Midnight. Act
 iv. (1633)

Never fear it: dreams go by the contraries.

WILLIAM WYCHERLEY, The Gentleman Dancing-Master. Act iv, sc. 1. (1673)

Oh! the perjury of men! I find dreams do not always go by contraries.

HENRY FIELDING, The Grub-Street Opera. Act
 i, sc. 11. (1731)

Dreams, you know, go always by contraries.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World.
 Letter 46. (1760)

Everybody knows that dreams are always contrary.

SUSAN FERRIER, Marriage. Ch. 24. (1818)

Drames always go by conthrarries, my dear.

SAMUEL LOVER, Rory O'More. (1837)

You know

That dreams by their contraries always go.

J. R. PLANCHÉ, Extravaganzas, iv, 179. (1851)
Mangan: I believe in dreams.

Mrs. Hushabye: So do I. But they go by contraries, don't they?

BERNARD SHAW, Heartbreak House. Act ii. (1913)

1 Then I woke up. (κἀτ' ἔγρυ' ἐγερόμεν.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Frogs, l. 51. (405 B.C.)

Dionysus has been relating how he sank a dozen enemy ships, and Heracles says, "Then I woke up," a polite way of saying the other is dreaming—a bit of modern slang, almost twenty-five hundred years old.

2 Dreams give wings to fools.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxxiv, 1, 7. (c. 190 B.C.) The first eight verses of this chapter are devoted to dreams. Whoso regardeth dreams is like him that catcheth at a shadow, and followeth after the wind.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xxxiv, 2.

To believe in one's dreams is to spend all one's life asleep.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 357. (1938)
A Chinese proverb.

3 After a dream of weddings comes a corse.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 236. (1639)

The converse is also supposed to be true, "Dream of a funeral and you hear of a marriage."

Fridaynights' dreams on the Saturday told
Are sure to come true be it never so old.

WILLIAM HONE, Year Book, col. 252. (1831)

Suidas gives a number of old Greek proverbs with reference to dreams: "Dreaming of lions portends battles with the enemy"; "If you dream of the dead, you will find deadness everywhere"; "If you dream you are dead, you'll have freedom from care."

4 To dream is nothing else but to think sleeping.

DEFOE, History of the Devil, ii, 3. (1726)

5 Hideous dreams are exaggerations of the sins of the day.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Spiritual Laws. (1841)

Dreams retain the infirmities of our character.

R. W. EMERSON, Demonology. (1877)

6 To weave cobwebs. (Araneorum telas texere.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. iv, No. 47.

(1523) To waste one's time in frivolous pursuits; to daydream.

Day-dreams are the gaseous decomposition of true purpose.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 42. (1940)

A dream is merely a day-dream at night.

MOSS HART, Lady in the Dark. Act i. (1941)

7 False dreams, avaunt! ye were but nought, it seems. (ψευδὲς ὄνειρος, χαίρει'. οὐδὲν ἦτ' ἔρα.)

EURIPIDES, Iphigeneia in Tauris. l. 569. (c. 440 B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 75E.

8 Behold, this dreamer cometh. (Ecce somniator venit.)

Old Testament: Genesis, xxxvii, 19. (c. 550 B.C.)

9 Many men seyn that in sweveninges [dreams] There nis but fables and lesinges [lies].

(Maintes genz dient que en songes N'a se fables non e mençonges.)

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose, l. 1.

(c. 1240) CHAUCER (?), tr. l. 1. (c. 1365)

A straw for alle swevenes significaunce!

God helpe me so, I counte hem not a bene,
Ther woot no man aright what dremes mene.

(Solo Iddio sa il ver di quel che fia,
Ed i sogni e gli augurii, a che le genti
Stolte riguardan, non montano un moco,
Nè al futuro fanno assai o poco.)

BOCCACCIO, Il Filostrato. Canto v, st. 32. (c.

1350) CHAUCER, tr., Troilus and Criseyde.
Bk. v, l. 362. (c. 1380)

Have I not seyde er this,

That dremes many a maner man bigyle?

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. v, l. 1276. (c. 1380)

For swevenes been but vanitees and japes.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Nonne Preestes Tale, l. 271. (c. 1387)

All dreams are lies. (Tous songes sont mensonges.)

P. J. LE ROUX, Dictionnaire Comique, ii, 150.

(1650) The Spaniards say, "De los sueños no creas, ni malos, ni buenos" (Give no credit to dreams, whether bad or good).

10 Here we are all, by day; by night we're hurl'd
By dreames, each one, into a sev'rall world

ROBERT HERRICK, Dreames. (1648)

11 A dream is from god. (ὄναρ ἐκ Διὸς ἐστίν.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. i, l. 63. (c. 850 B.C.)

12 Two Gates there be of Phantom Dreams, one fashioned of horn and one of ivory. Now the Dreams which come through the gate of sawn ivory deceive men with words without fulfilment; but those which come through the gate of polished horn bring true fulfilment for the mortal who beholds them. (δοιαὶ γὰρ τε πύλαι ἀμετηνῶν εἰσὶν ὄνειρων. | αἱ μὲν γὰρ κεράσει τετεύχεται, αἱ δ' ἐλέφαντι.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xix, l. 562. (c. 850 B.C.)

There is a play in Greek upon the words kéras (horn) and kraínō (fulfil), and upon eléphas (ivory) and depháiroμαι (deceive), which cannot be preserved in English. This famous passage is quoted by VERGIL, Aeneid, vi, 894: "Sunt geminae Somni portae," etc., given below.

Two gates of Sleep there are, whereof the one is said to be of horn, and thereby an easy outlet is given to true shades; the other gleaming with the sheen of polished ivory, but false are the dreams sent by the spirits to the world above. (Sunt geminae Somni portae; quarum altera fertur | cornea, qua veris facilis datur exitus umbris,

altera candenti perfecta nitens elephanto, | sed falsa ad caelum mittunt insomnia Manes.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 893. (19 B. C.)

Homer and Virgil wrote of the two gates of sleep: one is of ivory, by which enter dreams confused, fallacious and uncertain; the other of horn, by which enter dreams certain, true and infallible. (Homere & Virgile des deux portes de songe: l'une est de Iuoyre, par laquelle entrent les songes confus, fallaces, & incertains; . . . l'autre est de corne, par laquelle entrent les songes certains, vrayes, & infallibles.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 13. (1545)
Hear then my dream, whether it has come through horn or through ivory. (εἶτε διὰ κεράτων εἶτε δι' ἐλέφαντος.)

PLATO, Charmides. Sec. 173A. (c. 380 B. C.)
O greatly renowned Dream of the wise son of Battos, surely thou wert of horn, not of ivory.

CALLIMACHUS, Aitia, l. 3. (c. 250 B. C.)
Does some phantom mock me, that flying idly through the ivory gate, brings but a dream? (Vana quae porta fugiens eburna | somnium ducit?)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 27, l. 41. (c. 23 B. C.)
[For dreams] two gates are appointed: that which is arched with ivory ever pours forth upon the air a host of deceptive shapes: the second is of horn and sends forth visions of the truth.

AUSONIUS, Ephemeris. Pt. viii, l. 24. (c. A. D. 370)
Dreames out of the Ivorie gate, and visions before midnight.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, On Dreams. (c. 1650)
Dreams have two gates: one made (they say) of horn; By this port pass true and prophetic dreams.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: Cornwall, i, 302. (1662)

[Archbishop Laud] dreamed that he had turned Papist; of all his dreams the only one, we suspect, which came through the gate of Horn.

T. B. MACAULAY, Essays: Hampden. (1831)

1
The vain dreams of a sick man. (Aegri somnia vanae.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 7. (c. 20 B. C.)

2
After midnight, when dreams come true. (Post mediam noctem visus, cum somnia vera.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 10, l. 33. (35 B. C.)
Those dreams are true which we have in the morning as the lamp begins to flicker. (Namque sub aurora, iam dormitante lucerna, | somnia quo cerni tempore vera solent.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. xix, l. 195. (c. 10 B. C.)

A dream toward morning is likely to be fulfilled

Midrash: Genesis Rabbah, fo. 89. (c. 650)

After mydnyght men saye, that dreames be true.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, Acolastus, sig. II. (1540)

And all the morning dreams are true.

BEN JONSON, Love Restored, last line. (1611)

At break of Day, when Dreams, they say, are true.

DRYDEN, The Spanish Fryar. Act iii, sc. 2. (1681)

Morning dreams . . . are most to be relied upon.

JOHN GAY, The Wife of Bath, iv, 2. (1713)

Oft morning dreams presage approaching fate,

For morning dreams, as poets tell, are true.

MICHAEL BRUCE, Elegy on Spring. (c. 1760)

Morning dreams, which are proverbially sure to be fulfilled.

ALEXANDER MACLAREN, Exposition: Romans, p. 87. (1912)

3
In thoughts from the visions of the night, when deep sleep falleth on men. (In horrore visionis nocturnae, quando solet sopor occipere homines.)

Old Testament: Job, iv, 13. (c. 350 B. C.)

In a dream, in a vision of the night, when deep sleep falleth upon men. (Per somnium in visione nocturna, quando irruit sopor super homines.)

Old Testament: Job, xxxiii, 15. (c. 350 B. C.)

4
In solitude we have our dreams to ourselves, and in company we agree to dream in concert.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 32. (1758)

5
For what one has dwelt on by day, these things are seen in visions of the night. (ἀ γὰρ μεθ' ἡμέραν τις ἐσπούδα ταύτ' εἶδε νύκτωρ.)

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 734. (c. 300 B. C.)

Reck not of dreams; in things which men pursue Sleep sees the hopes of waking hours come true. (Somnia ne cures; nam mens humana quod optat, dum vigilans sperat, per somnum cernit id ipsum.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. ii, No. 31. (c. 175 B. C.)

See DUFF, Minor Latin Poets, p. 608.

(As Cato saith) wee see sleeping that which we wish for waking.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 109. (1576)

Eat, in dreams, the custard of the day.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. i, l. 92. (1728)

The dream of the cat is all about mice.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 225. (1817)

6
The more a man dreams, the less he believes.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. ii, p. 101. (1920)

7
Dreams are subconscious truths.

M. S. MICHEL, Sweet Murder, p. 206. (1943)

8
It is not the shrines of the gods, nor the powers of the air, that send the dreams which mock the mind with flitting shadows; each man makes his own dreams. (Sibi quisque facit.)

PETRONIUS, Fragments. Frag. 121. (c. A. D. 60)

9
Our new-gotten riches are all a dream. (κινδυνεύομεν ὅναρ πεπλουτηκέναι.)

PLATO, Lysis. Sec. 218C. (c. 380 B. C.)

Dreams of wealth. (δρεψα δφέροιο.)

CRINAGORAS, Epigram. (c. 20 B. C.) Greek Anthology, ix, 234.

Golden dreams make men awake hungry.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 129. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1695. (1732)

These may seem to the Reader but Golden Dreams.

WILLIAM DAMPIER, Voyages, i, 6. (1697)

10
It's my own dream you're telling me. (ῥῷ ἐμῷ γ' ἐμοὶ λέγεις ὄναρ.)

PLATO, Republic. Bk. viii, sec. 563D. (c. 375 B. C.) CALLIMACHUS, Anth. Pal., vi, 310, uses the same phrase, as do CICERO, Epistolarum ad Atticum, vi, 9, 3, and LUCIAN, Somnium Seu Gallus, 7.

Let's share our dreams. . . Friends always share their dreams. (τῶν ψεφάτων πάντα μερίζειν.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xxi, l. 31. (c. 270 B. C.)

Tell not my own dream to me. (μὴ λέγε τοῦ μόνου βυειῶν ἐμοί.)

CALLIMACHUS, Epigrams. No. xxxiv, l. 1. (c. 250 B. C.) Repeated in xlix, 6. A proverbial phrase for telling a person what he already knows perfectly well. The Latin proverb is "Tuum tibi narro somnium."

Since you know all, and I nothing, tell me what I dreamed last night.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 338. (1640) Don't tell me what you dreamed last night, For I've been reading Freud.

F. P. ADAMS, Don't Tell Me What You Dreamed Last Night. (1930)

1 In sleep, when the rest of the soul, the rational, gentle and dominant part, slumbers, the beastly and savage part, replete with food and wine, endeavors to sally forth to satisfy its own instincts. There is nothing it will not venture to undertake, for it is released from all sense of shame and reason. It does not shrink from attempting to lie with a mother in fancy; it is ready for any foul deed of blood. . . . The point is that there exists in every one of us, even in some reputed most respectable, a terrible, fierce and lawless brood of desires, which it seems are revealed in our sleep.

PLATO, Republic. Bk. ix, sec. 571C-572B. (c. 375 B. C.) The main thesis of the Freudians.

The most evil type of man is the one who, in his waking hours, has the qualities we found in his dream state.

PLATO, Republic. Bk. ix, sec. 576B. (c. 375 B. C.) Dreams are the touchstones of our characters.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Wednesday. (1849) The French say, "De sot homme sot songe" (For a stupid man a stupid dream)

2 He dreams awake. (Vigilans somniat.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitryon, l. 697. (c. 200 B. C.)

This woman dreams standing up, like a horse (Haec mulier cantherino ritu astans somniat.)

PLAUTUS, Menaechmi, l. 395. (c. 200 B. C.)

3 In dreaming, the soul doth often times foretell what is to come. (En songeant . . . l'ame souvent preuoit les choses futures.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 13. (1545)

We sometimes from dreams pick up some hint worth improving by . . . reflection.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to James Monroe, 1823.

4 When troubles are few dreams are few. (Lü shao mēng tzu shao.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1129. (1875)

5 A dream itself is but a shadow.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 2, 266. (1600)

A dream's but the ghost of a shadow.

JOSEPH DEVLIN, The Girl That I Loved When a Boy. (c. 1900)

6 To sleep: perchance to dream: ay, there's the rub.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 1, 65. (1600)

To dream is not the rub, it's the gravy.

OGDEN NASH, Here's to You, Little Boy Blue. (1942)

7 Deem nothing so secure as what the divine power enjoins in dreams. (παραίνει μηδὲν οὕτως ἡγείσθαι βέβαιον ὥς ὃ τι ἂν αὐτῷ προστάξῃ νόκτωρ τὸ δαιμόνιον.)

SULLA, Memoirs: Dedication. (c. 80 B. C.) As quoted by PLUTARCH, Parallel Lives: Sulla, vi, 6.

The net of sleeping takes. (εὐδοντι κύρτος αλπεί.)

UNKNOWN. A Greek proverb, cited by TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 102. The Latin is, "Dormienti rete trahit." In other words, while asleep, in dreams, one gets what one desires.

We have in the words of the Psalmist (Psalms, cxxvii, 2) were they accurately translated, a beautiful and perfect parallel: "He giveth his beloved" (not "sleep," but) "in their sleep"; his gifts gliding into their bosoms, they knowing not how.

RICHARD CHENEVIX TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 102. (1853)

8 Is the goal so far away?

Far, how far no tongue can say,

Let us dream our dream to-day.

ALFRED TENNYSON, Ode Sung at the Opening of the International Exhibition, London, 1862

9 Short-lived as a dream. (ὀλιγοχρόνιος ὥσπερ ὄναρ.)

THEOGNIS, Elegies. l. 1014. (c. 550 B. C.)

10 May the dream never prove true which an evil sleep brought me yesternight. (Nec sint mihi somnia vera, | quae tulit hesternā pessima nocte quies.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. 4, l. 1. (19 B. C.)

Dreams sport at random in a deceiving night, filling affrighted souls with false alarm. (Somnia fallaci ludunt temeraria nocte | et pavidas mentes falsa timere iubent.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. 4, l. 7. (19 B. C.)

Dreams affright me, that mimic real dangers, and my senses wake to my misfortunes. (Somnia me terrent veros imitantia casus, | et vigilant sensus in mea damna mei.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 43. (A. D. 13)

11 Meet me in Dreamland, sweet dreamy Dreamland,

There let my dreams come true.

BETH SLATER WHITSON, Meet Me To-night in Dreamland. (1909)

DRESS

See also Clothes, Fashion, Tailor

<sup>1</sup> The glory of God is man, and the glory of man is his dress.

Babylonian Talmud: Derech Eretz Zuta. (c. 450)

In the city, my name; out of the city, my dress.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 145b.

<sup>2</sup> A man's attire proclaimeth his occupation. (Amictus corporis . . . enunciat de illo.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xix, 30. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

<sup>3</sup> He who covers thee discovers thee. (Quien te cubre te descubre.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1615)

"Everyone passeth his eyes slightly over the poor, and upon the rich man they fasten them."

Four yards of Cuenca frieze keep one warmer than four of Segovia serge. (Más calientan cuatro varas de paño de Cuenca que otras cuatro de límites de Segovia.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 33. The former was a cheap thick cloth: the latter an expensive and much thinner stuff.

<sup>4</sup> A stick dressed up does not look like a stick. (Palo compuesto no parece palo.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 51. (1615)

Dress a stick and it seems a youth.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

Decke a hedgehog, and he will seem a baron.

JOHN WODROEPHE, Spared Houres, p. 487. (1623)

Trim up a hedge-hog, and he will look like a lord.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 9. (1659)

Clothes set forth poles, and clothe but a pillar and it shall look like a lady.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 187. (1666)

FINE FEATHERS MAKE FINE BIRDS, see under FEATHER.

<sup>5</sup> That suit is best that best suits me.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 16. (1639)

That suit is best that best fits me.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 46. (1670)

<sup>6</sup> The woman shall not wear that which pertaineth unto a man. (Non induetur mulier veste virili.)

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xxii, 5. (c. 650 B. C.)

<sup>7</sup> Eat to please thyself, but dress to please others.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1738.

What's proper is becoming; see the Blacksmith with his white silk Apron!

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1746.

<sup>8</sup> Borrowed garments never fit well.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1008. (1732)

<sup>9</sup> Ugly Women, finely dress'd, are the uglier for it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5352. (1732)

She then shines forth, solicitous to bless.

In all the glaring impotence of dress.

GOLDSMITH, Deserted Village, l. 293. (1770)

Here antique maids of sixty-three.

Drest out lamb-fashion you might see.

UNKNOWN, Gentleman's Magazine, xlvii, 187. (1777)

An old ewe drest lamb fashion, an old woman drest like a young girl.

FRANCIS GROSE, Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Ewe. (1785)

<sup>10</sup> There are some kinde of men (saide Lorde Bernard) because they would have brave and costlie apparell on their backs, make their miserable bellies to suffer the more paine.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 137. (1574) Young, tr.

Many a one, for the sake of finery on his back, has gone with a hungry belly.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758.

Dress drains our cellar dry,

And keeps our larder lean.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 615. (1784)

It's not the skirt that breaks papa, it's the chiffon ruffles.

F. M. KNOWLES, A Cheerful Year Book. (1906)

SILK AND SATIN PUT OUT THE KITCHEN FIRE, see under SILK.

<sup>11</sup> The son full and tattered, the daughter empty and fine.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 216. (1640)

Fine dressing is a foule house swept before the door.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 245.

That is the best gown that goes up and down the house.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 744.

<sup>12</sup> Alas poore verdingales must lie in the streete: To house them, no doore in the citee made meete.

Syns at our narow doores they in cannot win, Send them to Oxforde, at Brodegates to get in.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Epigrams. Cent. v, No. 55.

(1562) Verdingales: farthingales, hooped petticoats.

"Send verdingales to Broad Gates in Oxford." With these verdingales the gowns of women beneath their waists were pent-housed out far beyond their bodies; . . . the first inventress a light house-wife, who . . . sought to cover her shame and the fruits of her wantonness.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: Oxford, iii, 7. (1662)

By God, those are bastard-concealers!

BRIAND DE VALLÉE, referring to hoopskirts. See LAMANDÉ, Montaigne, p. 22.

<sup>13</sup> Glorious in his apparel. (Formosus in stola sua.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, lxiii, 1. (c. 725 B. C.)

Pricked and pranked, made up and done up. (Poliri expoliri, pingi fingi.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 221. (c. 194 B. C.)

Fresh from the bandbox. (De capsula tofos.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cxv, sec. 2. (a. 64 A. D.)

Up ryseth Damian the nexte morwe, . . .
He kembeth him, he proyneth him and pyketh.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale, l. 765. (c. 1388)

And him arrayeth gay, at point-devys.

CHAUCER, The Milleres Tale, l. 503.

You are point-device in your accoutrements.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iii, 2, 402. (1600)

As we maie we love to go gaie all.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

He wears a whole Lordship on his back.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 262. (1639)

Still to be neat, still to be drest.
As you were going to a feast;

Still to be powder'd, still perfum'd:

Lady, it is to be presum'd,

Though art's hid causes are not found,

All is not sweet, all is not sound.

Give me a look, give me a face,
That makes simplicity a grace;

Robes loosely flowing, hair as free:

Such sweet neglect more taketh me

Than all th' adulteries of art;

They strike mine eyes, but not my heart.

BEN JONSON, Song: Epicæne, or The Silent Woman. Act i, sc. 1 (1609) George Colman, in his edition of Jonson, writes: "This elegant little madrigal is a very happy imitation from the following Latin poem:

Semper munditias, semper, Basilissa, decores,

Semper compositas arte recente comas, . . .

The learned may find these verses amongst those which are printed at the end of the Variorum edition of Petronius."

A sweet disorder in the dresse

Kindles in clothes a wantonnesse.

ROBERT HERRICK, Delight in Disorder. (1648)

The more careless the more modish.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

She invariably looked as though she had stepped out of the proverbial bandbox.

MELBA MARLETT, Death Has a Thousand Doors,

p. 63. (1941)

Here everyone dresses above his means. (Hic ultra vires habitus nitor.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 180. (c. A. D. 120)

Laying more on my backe then my friendes could well beare, hauing many times a braue cloke and a thredbare purse.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber),

p. 268. (1580)

Fond Pride of Dress is sure an empty Curse;

E'er Fancy you consult, consult your Purse.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1751.

He is badly covered whose backside is bare.

(Mal est couvert cui le cul pert.)

MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux: De Mantel

Mantaillid, l. 679. (c. 1250)

He sits fu still that hath riven breeks.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 240. (1678)

Without black velvet breeches, what is man?

JAMES BRAMSTON, Man of Taste. (1733)

The things named "pants" in certain documents,

A word not made for gentlemen, but "gents."

O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 422. (1846)

Has a woman who knew that she was well-dressed ever caught a cold?

F. W. NIETZSCHE, Twilight of the Idols. (1889)

A negligent dress is becoming to men. (Forma viros neglecta decet.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 509. (c. 1 B. C.)

Elaborate elegance is not a manly garb. (Non est ornamentum virile concinnitas.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cxv, sec. 2. (a.

A. D. 64) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 39.

Thou knowest that the fashion of a doublet, or a hat, or a cloak, is nothing to a man.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, iii, 3, 127. (1598)

A civil habit Oft covers a good man.

JOHN FLETCHER, Beggars' Bush. Act. ii, sc. 3. (1622)

The higher up in the world a man is, the less good harness he puts on.

ARTEMUS WARD (C. F. BROWNE), In Canada. (1864)

I hold that gentleman to be the best dressed whose dress no one observes.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, Thackeray. Ch. 9. (1879)

The essential thing for a necktie is style. A well-tied tie is the first serious step in life.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act iii. (1893)

An old suit, a battered hat, a perfect tie, and a good collar—that's what makes a well-dressed man.

BARON DE MAYER, International style expert, Newspaper Interview, 1930.

The well-dressed man is he whose clothes you never notice.

SOMERSET MAUGHAM, I Want a Murder. (1940)

See Saturday Evening Post, 28 Dec., 1940.

Let him be inflamed by the love of your dress. (Uratur vestis amore tuæ.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 448. (c. 1 B. C.)

We are captivated by dress; all is concealed by gems and gold; a woman is the least part of herself. (Auferimur cultu; gemmis auroque teguntur Omnia; pars minima est ipsa puella sui.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 343. (c. 1 B. C.)

A gentleman tiptoeing along Broadway, with a lady wiggle-wagging by his side, and both dressed to kill.

E. G. PAIGE, Dow's Patent Sermons. (c. 1849)

The next day I met Davis and Nye . . . dressed to death and trunk empty, as they said of themselves.

Newfoundland Fisheries (De Vere). (1869)

To dress to death suggests clothes cut in the very extreme of fashion. . . . To dress to kill appears but an attenuated version.

MAXIMILIAN SCHELE DE VERE, Americanisms, p. 596. (1872)

It was funny to see the heathen Chinese standing around outside, dressed to kill.

A. B. ALDRICH, A Sea Turn, p. 185. (1902)

<sup>1</sup> Excess in Apparel is another costly folly. The very Trimming of the vain World would cloath all the naked one.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 73. (1693)

<sup>2</sup> He's in his better blue clothes.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 66. (1678) He thinks himself very fine.

Alike every day makes a clout [rag] on Sunday.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 46. (1721)

Those who wear their best clothes every day soon have nothing proper to Sunday.

Every day braw [fine] makes Sunday a daw [drab].

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, i, 347. (1902)

<sup>3</sup> To make a fair show in a country Church.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 192. (1670)

It will make a bra [fine] show, in a landward [country] kirk.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 207. (1721) Your ladyship has a very fine scarf.—Yes, my lord; it will make a flaming figure in a country church.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1728)

<sup>4</sup> Wide will wear, but narrow will tear.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 217. (1678)

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1746.

Wide will wear, but tight will tear.

R. C. TRENCH, Proverbs, p. 19. (1853)

The rule should be . . . not a severe one; lest, like over-severe laws, . . . it should be violated; according to the Proverb, that "Wide will wear, but tight will tear."

RICHARD WHATELY, Bacon's Essays Annotated, 510. (1856)

<sup>5</sup> Though you know the dress full well, what know you of the wearer?

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. ii, Apologue 5. (c. 1258)

<sup>6</sup> Such reverential Awe express,

That Cow-boys know you by your Dress!

SWIFT, A Panegyrick on the Dean, l. 79. (1730)

<sup>7</sup> Lord, my petticoat! how it hangs by jometry!

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

The daughter of Dr. Hanson appeared in the Bloomer suit . . . last week.

UNKNOWN, Article, Boston Transcript, 26 May, 1851. The earliest reference found in print to "bloomers." Although named after Mrs. Amelia Bloomer, of Seneca Falls, N. Y., she neither invented them, nor was the first to wear them, and protested against their being called by her name. However, she was the editor of a magazine called The Lily, in which, in Feb., 1851, the costume was first described in print, and in this way became associated with her. It consisted of a short skirt and loose trousers gathered closely around the ankles. About 1900, another article of female attire won a distinctive name which survived in literature. It was the "rainy-day skirt," a skirt ending at the ankle for street wear in bad weather—hence "rainy-daisies," the daring women who first wore it.

Observing human nature through peekaboo waists.

O. HENRY, (W. S. Porter), The City of Dreadful Night. (1908) The peekaboo waist was a shirt-waist with open-work embroidery, through which some glimpses could be had of the skin beneath. At the turn of the century it was considered very daring.

<sup>8</sup> I found that my ribbons and gew-gaws were dragging me down to Hell, and so I took them off and gave them to my sister.

MARK TWAIN, Letter to the Alta Californian, 18 May, 1867. Ascribed to "a pious girl."

<sup>9</sup> All such dresses are forbidden, which incite irregular desires.

THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety, p. 6. (c. 1750)

Byron said, her costume began too late and ended too soon.

W. C. HAZLITT, Four Generations of a Literary Family, ii, 155. (1897)

That dress seemed somehow improper. It left too much to the imagination.

CHARLES SAXBY, Death in the Sun, p. 103.

(1940) Mahomet gave it as his opinion that "Silk was invented so that women could go naked in clothes."

<sup>10</sup> Dress does not give knowledge. (La ropa no da ciencia.)

DON JUAN YRIARTE, Fables. No. 27. (c. 1750)

DRINKING

See also Ale and Beer; Eating and Drinking; Rum; Wine

<sup>11</sup> These bottled windy drinks that laugh in a man's face and then cut his throat.

THOMAS ADAMS, Works, iii, 267. (1653)

[Cider is treacherous] because it smiles in my face, and cuts my throat.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

<sup>12</sup> Wet your lungs with wine. (τέγγε πλεύμονας οίνω.)

ALCAEUS, Drinking Songs. Bk. ix, frag. 161. Loeb. (c. 595 B.C.)

WET YOUR WHISTLE, see under WHISTLE.

<sup>13</sup> The vine bears three kinds of grapes: the first of pleasure, the next of intoxication, the third of disgust. (τὸν πρῶτον ἡδονῆς· τὸν δεύτερον μέθης· τὸν τρίτον ἀγῆλας.)

ANACHARSIS, Apothegm. (c. 590 B.C.) See DI-GENES LAERTIUS, bk. i, sec. 103.

Wine is first controlled by the character of the drinker, but gradually, as it warms the whole body and becomes mingled therewith, itself forms the drinker's character and changes him.

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Precepts of Statecraft. Sec. 799B. (A.D. 97)

A certaine wise man was wont to saie: That the first cup of wine was of thirst: The second of merrinesse: The third of temptation: The fourth of foolishnesse. And the Vine carrieth likewise (said Caval) three sorts of greapes: the first of plesure, the second of dronkennesse, the third of sorrow.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 152. (1574) Young, tr.

I am not learned, yet haue I heard, that the Vine beareth three grapes, the first altereth, the second troubleth, the third dulleth.

JOHN LYL, Euphuus and His England (Arber), p. 274. (1580)

The first draught serveth for health, the second for pleasure, the third for shame, the fourth for madness.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, Instructions to His Son. Sec. 9. (1618) Paraphrasing Anacharsis.

The first pot quencheth the thirst (so Panyasis the poet determines in Athenaeus): secunda Gratii, Horis, et Dionysus—the second makes merry: the third for pleasure: quarta ad insaniam, the fourth makes them mad.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader. (1621)

First the man takes a drink, then the drink takes a drink, then the drink takes the man.

GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 440. (1938) A Japanese proverb.

At the punch-bowl's brink

Let the thirsty think

What they say in Japan:

"First the man takes a drink,

Then the drink takes a drink,

Then the drink takes the man!"

E. R. SILL, An Adage from the Orient. (1883)

1 If you cannot carry your liquor when you are young, boy, you will be a water-carrier when you are old. (μειράκιον, ἐὰν πῶς ᾖ τὸν οἶνον οὐ φέρῃς, γέρον γερόμενος ὕδωρ οἰσεῖς.)

ANACHARSIS, Apothegm. (c. 590 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, bk. i, sec. 105.

2 I like not him who at his drinking beside the full mixing-bowl tells of strife and lamentable war, but rather one that taketh thought for lightsome mirth by mingling the Muses and the splendid gifts of Aphrodite.

ANACREON, Elegiacs. Frag. 116. (c. 500 B.C.)

Quoted by ATHENAEUS, xi, 463A. See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, ii, 197.

3 Drink a loving-cup. (πῖνε . . . φιλοφροσύναν.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Acharnians, l. 984. (425 B.C.) The exact phrase "loving-cup" (κύλιξ φιλοφροσύνη) occurs in The Lysistrata, l. 203.

4 Drinking like frogs. (οἱ πίνουσι βατράχων.)

ATHENAEUS, Deipnosophistai. (c. A.D. 228) Also "Outdrinking an elephant" (οὐδ' ἂν ἐλέφας ἐκπίοι).

I drink like a templar. (Je boy comme un templier.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 5. (1534) A medieval proverb was "Bibere papaliter" (To drink like a pope).

I can drink like a fish.

JAMES SHIRLEY, Works (Dyce), vi, 321. (1646)

He drinks like a chick, with his eye-balls lifted up.

UNKNOWN, Roxburghe Ballads, iv, 45. (1675)

See under CHICKEN.

Drink like a fish, and swear like a devil.

FARQUHAR, Sir Harry Wildair. Act ii. (1701)

Mr. Trollope and I are in a course of tar-water.

I drink like a fish.

THOMAS GRAY, Letter to Wharton, 26 Apr., 1744.

I shall have nothing to do but to go to Bath and drink like a fish.

HANNAH MORE, in Garrick Correspondence, ii, 320. (1778)

To drink like a funnel.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 191. (1813)

He retained the gravity of a judge, even when he drank like a fish.

SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 35. (1822)

A woman who drank like a fish and swore like a trooper.

MISS BRADDON, The Cloven Foot. Ch. 7. (1879)

He drank like a fish or an Englishman.

R. L. STEVENSON, St. Ives. Ch. 13. (1894)

It's all right to drink like a fish—if you drink what a fish drinks.

MARY P. POOLE, A Glass Eye at the Keyhole. (1938)

5 Between two drinks take only one breath.

(Entre II boires I soupir

I doit on faire seulement.)

WATRIQUE BRASSEL, Des III Dames de Paris, l. 163. (c. 1250) MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, iii, 149.

6 Whatsoever hee draines from the four corners of the citty, goes in muddy taplash downe Gutter-lane.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, Whimzies, p. 145. (1631)

"All goeth down Gutter-lane" . . . a small lane leading out of Cheapside. . . . The proverb is applicable to those who spend all in drunkenness and gluttony.

FULLER, Worthies: London, ii, 348. (1662)

He has a Hole under his Nose, that all his Money runs into.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1858. (1732)

7 We'll tak a right guid-willie waught

For Auld Lang Syne.

ROBERT BURNS, Auld Lang Syne. (1788) "Guid-willie waught" means good-will draught.

Just a wee deoch-an-doris, just a wee yin, that's a' Just a wee deoch-an-doris before we gang a-wa'. There's a wee wifie waitin', in a wee but-an-ben; If you can say "It's a braw bricht moon-licht nicht," Y're a' richt ye ken.

HARRY LAUDER, Just a Wee Deoch-an-Doris. (c. 1900) SCOTT, Redgauntlet, letter ii, spells it "doch an dorroch."

1 Drink temperately if you want to live healthily. (Hoc bibo quo possis si tu vis vivere sanus.)

CATO (?), Disticha de Moribus. Bk. iv, No. 24. (c. 175 B.C.) Greek paroemiographers have preserved the proverb, μέτρω πίνειν ('To drink in measure'), among the many others praising moderation.

Long quaffing maketh a short lyfe.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 229. (1580)

Often drunk, and seldom sober

Falls like the Leaves in October.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6219. (1732)

2 As if one should say—"You should drink with cherries." (Como quien dice, Bebe con guindas.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 35. (1615) Being so entirely a matter of course. "Like sherry after soup," according to Mr. Dasent, in Annals of an Eventful Life. An equivalent saying is, "Miel sobre hojuelas" (Honey on pancakes).

3 I see wel, it is necessarie
Wher that we goon, good drink we with us carie;

For that wol turne rancour and disese
T'acord and love, and many a wrong apese.
O thou Bachus, y-blessed be they name,
That so canst turnen earnest in-to game!

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Manciple's Prologue, l. 95 (c. 1389)

For a pilgrimage near-by, a little leather and a lot of wine. (Pèlerinage voisin, peu de cire et beaucoup de vin.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 278. (1856) A French proverb. The Spanish form is, "Romeria de cerca, mucho vino y poca cera."

4 Let him either drink or begone. (Aut bibat aut abeat.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. v, ch. 41, sec. 118. (45 B.C.) Cicero is saying, "For my part, I think that in life we should observe the rule which is followed at Greek banquets, 'Either drink or begone!' And rightly, for either he should enjoy the pleasure of tippling along with the others or get away early, that a sober man may not be a victim to the violence of those who are heated with wine. This is the same advice that Epicurus gives." The Greek proverb which Cicero refers to is ἢ πίνει ἢ ἀπίνει. It is cited by ERASMUS, i, x, 47. The Latin form is sometimes given as "Aut bibe aut abi" (Either drink or depart). The Germans say, "Sauf oder lauf" (Drink or run).

That Law of Feasts, "either drink or begone." (ἢ πίνει ἢ ἀπίνει.)

ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 31. (1511) This was one of the laws that was invariably put in force, "either drink or leave the company," that none of them might be in a state to take advantage of any unguarded expression that might happen to be used.

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs, i, 225. (1814)

5 He is drinking at the Harrow when he should follow the plough.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 47. (1639)

He is drinking at the Harrow when he should be at the plough.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 180. (1670)

He's drinking at the Harrow, when he should be driving his plough.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2456. (1732)

6 A night of good drinking
Is worth a year's thinking.

CHARLES COTTON, Chanson à Boire. (c. 1665)

Much drinking, little thinking.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Letter to Stella, 26 Feb., 1711.

What's drinking? A mere pause from thinking!

LORD BYRON, The Deformed Transformed. Pt. iii, sc. 1. (1824)

7 By drinking grog I lost my life; so, lest my fate you meet,

Why, never mix your liquor, lads, but always drink it neat.

CHARLES DIBDIN, JR., Ben the Boatswain. (c. 1828)

8 Did you ever hear of Captain Wattle?

He was all for love and a little for the bottle.

CHARLES DIBDIN, Captain Wattle and Miss Rol.

Said Aristotle unto Plato,

"Have another sweet potato?"

Said Plato unto Aristotle,

"Thank you, I prefer the bottle."

OWEN WISTER, Philosophy 4. (1903) Quoted.

9 That which belongs to another. (τὸν ἀλλότριον.)

DIOGENES, when asked which wine he preferred.

(c. 350 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, vi, 54.

Sometimes rendered, "That for which other people pay."

The best wine is that a body drinketh at another man's cost.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, p. 141. (1542)

It is very savoury to eat without paying.

(Gran sabor es comer y no escotor.)

RICHARD PERCIVAL, Spanish Grammar. (1599)

Not loving (as the proverb is) to be drunken with their own wine.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 10. (1574) Pettie, tr.

The rapturous, wild, and ineffable pleasure

Of drinking at somebody else's expense.

HENRY SAMBROOKE LEIGH, Stanzas to an Intoxicated Fly. (1869)

10 The more one drinks the more one may.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 49. (1633)

The more one drinks the more one would.

TORRIANO, Piazza Unversale, p. 25. (1666) The French say, "Qui a bu, boira" (Who has drunk, will drink).

1 Among the Indians of the extreme north . . . there is a liquor made which . . . is called hoochinoo. The ingredients . . . are simple and innocent, being only yeast, flour, and either sugar or molasses.

EDWARD R. EMERSON, Beverages, Past and Present. (Hence, hooch.)

2 Drink and be merry. (αὐτοῦ πῖνε καὶ θύμει.)
EURIPIDES, Cyclops, l. 530. (c. 440 B.C.) EAT, DRINK, AND BE MERRY, see under EATING.

Often I sung thus, and I will cry it from the tomb:

"Drink ere ye put on this dusty garment." (πίνετε, πρὶς ταύτην ἀμφιβάλσθε κόβιν.)

JULIANUS, PREFECT OF EGYPT, On Anacreon. (C. A. D. 150) See Greek Anthology, vii, 32.

3 Here, tapster, broach number 1706, as the saying is. Sir, you shall taste my Anno Domini.

FARQUHAR, Beaux' Stratagem. Act i, sc. 1. (1706)

4 Drink and drouth comes sindle [seldom] together.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 28. (c. 1595)

Drink and drouth come not always together.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 88. (1721)

5 Laith to the drink, and leath fra it.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 72. (c. 1595)

Loth to drink, and loth from it.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 236. (1721)

"Loth to drink and loth to leave off," they say.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 40. (1880)

6 Mony speaks on my grit drinking, bot few of my sore thirst.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 80. (c. 1595)

They speak of my drink, but never consider my drouth.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 312. (1721)

7 My constant attendance, I never making a St. Monday, recommended me to the master.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography. Ch. 1. Never staying away from work on Monday because of over-indulgence Saturday night and Sunday.

8 Drink washes off the Dawb, and discovers the Man.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1330. (1732)

IN VINO VERITAS, see under WINE.

9 When an old Man will not drink, you may safely promise him a Visit in the next World.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5548. (1732)

From the Spanish, "Quando el viejo no puede beber, la huesa le pueden hacer" (When an old man ceases to drink, he will soon cease to live).

10 You drink out of the broad end of the Funnel, and hold the little one for me.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5898. (1732)

You drink Vinegar, when you have Wine at your Elbow.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5899.

Money we want, and cannot borrow;
Yet drink we must, to slacken Sorrow.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6428.

11 We have an old sayin', "Only what I drink is mine."

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 23. (1843) "What I pour down my throat is mine," said a cattleman to Emerson, explaining why he drank up his profits as soon as he had sold his cattle in the Boston market.

Drink water in Maine, champagne in New York, cider in Pennsylvania, and everything in New Orleans from whiskey down to red-ink—that they call claret.

T. C. HALIBURTON, Wise Saws. Ch. 27.

12 Axed how much Tarrif there was on rot-gut.

GEORGE W. HARRIS, The Knob Dance. (1845)

13 Dram ain't good twel yu git it.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Uncle Remus: Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

14 Empty the glass if you would judge of the drink. (Ebibe vas totum si vis cognoscere potum.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 99. (1869)

15 I saved shoe leather by keeping one foot on the foot-rest.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Memoirs of a Yellow Dog. (1906)

The drivers were scattered about town "seeing the elephant and hearing the owl."

O. HENRY, The Higher Abduction. (1907)

Drink always rubbed him the right way.

O. HENRY, The Rubaiyat of a Scotch High-ball. (1907)

16 If you could run as you drink, you might catch a hare.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 375. (1640)

17 Who likes not the drink, God deprives him of bread.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 396. (1640)

God deprives him of bread who likes not his drink

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1678)

18 Never let the ladle lie unused on the bowl while the bout is on. (μηδέ ποτ' οὐλοχόην τιθέμεν κρητήρος ὑπερθε πινόντων.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 744. (c. 800 B.C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 28B, 156E.

19 Full little wit have men who sup on booze.

HIPPONAX (?), Fragments. Frag. 72. (c. 550 B.C.) See under BOOZE.

Where the drink goes in, there the wit goes out.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 189. (1640) See under WINE.

<sup>1</sup>
The flowing bowl—whom has it not made eloquent?

Whom has it not made free, even amid pinching poverty?

(Fecundi calices quem non fecere disertum? contracta quem non in paupertate solutum?)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 5, l. 19. (20 B. C.)

Be in their flowing cups freshly remember'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iv, 3, 55. (1599)

Come, landlord, fill a flowing bowl until it does run over.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Bloody Brother. Act ii, sc. 2. (c. 1620)

In vain I trusted that the flowing bowl
Would banish sorrow and enlarge the soul.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon. Bk. ii, l. 108. (1709)

In the flowers that wreath the sparkling bowl
Fell adders hiss and poisonous serpents roll.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon. Bk. ii, l. 140. (1709)

Thou sparkling bowl! thou sparkling bowl! . . .
I will not touch thee; for there clings
A scorpion to thy side, that stings!

JOHN PIERPONT, The Sparkling Bowl (1843)

<sup>2</sup>
Now is the time for drinking. (Nunc est bibendum.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 37, l. 1. (23 B. C.)

Come, let us drink. (Venite, apotemus.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 42. (1534) The monk's invocation.

Drink till the ground looks blew.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Philocothomista. (1635)

We can drink till all look blue.

JOHN FORD, The Ladies Triall. Act iv, sc. 2. (1638)
Fill what you will, and drink what you fill.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 88. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6168. (1732)

I'll take a standing drink.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 208. (1722)

"I'll do as the cow of Forfar did, I'll take a standing drink. A woman of Forfar set out her wort to cool, a cow came by and drank it up. The cow's owner was sued for damages, but was acquit because the cow took but a standing drink."

Therefore let us drink. (Ergo bibamus.)

GOETHE, Ergo Bibamus: Refrain. (1810) "Bibo, ergo sum" (I drink, therefore I am), from an unidentified source, is, of course a parody of "I think, therefore I am." See under THOUGHT.

<sup>3</sup>
He speaks in his drink what he thinks in his drouth.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 99. (1902) A Scottish proverb.

<sup>4</sup>
Woe unto them that rise up early in the morning, that they may follow strong drink. (Vae qui consurgitis mane ad ebrietatem sectandum.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, v, 11. (c. 725 B. C.)

The priest and the prophet have erred through strong drink. (Sacerdos et propheta nescierunt prae ebrietate.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxviii, 7.

Come ye, I will fetch wine, and we will fill ourselves with strong drink. (Venite, sumamus vinum, et impleamur moerentibus.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, lvi, 12.

Give strong drink unto him that is ready to perish. (Date siceram moerentibus.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxxi, 6. (c. 350 B. C.)

<sup>5</sup>
You can't do anything in this country without setting 'em up first.

A. T. JACKSON, The Diary of a Forty-niner, p. 92. (1859)

[He] requested them all to "smile" at his expense.

T. B. THORPE, Remembrances of the Mississippi. Harper's Magazine, Dec., 1855, p. 36/2.

I "smiled" all the more readily because the morning was intensely cold.

W. F. RAE, Westward by Rail, p. 337. (1870)

"If asked to drink, what would you say?" He answered, "I should smile."

W. S. WALSH, Handy-Book of Literary Curiosities, p. 1016. (1892)

<sup>6</sup>
A strong and manly homebrew of the best language in the world.

ELISHA KENT KANE, The Grinnell Expedition, p. 429. (1853)

You can have some home-brew, if you want it.

THOMAS HARDY, The Mayor of Casterbridge, i, 119. (1886)

<sup>7</sup>
A bald moon quoth Benny Gask, another pint quoth Lesley.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 53. (1721)

"Spoken when people encourage others to stay a little longer in the ale-house, because they have moonlight."

Mind the auld saw, man—It's a bauld moon, quoth Benny Gask—another pint, quoth Lesley; we'll no start for another chappin'.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 29. (1818)

<sup>8</sup>
Nobody should drink, but them that can drink.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 265. (1721)

<sup>9</sup>
Philoxenus, they say, he of Cythera,

Wished that his throat had been three cubits long,

To make his drinking last as long 's could be.

MACHON, On Philoxenus. (c. 300 B. C.) As quoted by ATHENAEUS, viii, 341A.

Efteward hi wesseth that hi hedden nykken of crane and wombe of cou, for that the mosseles [morsels] be lefte lengar in the throte.

FRÈRE LORENS, Le Somme des Vices et des Vertus. (1279) DAN MICHEL, tr., Ayenbite of Inwyt.

I do not know who it was, in ancient days, who wished for a gullet lengthened out like a goose's neck (le gosier allongé comme le col d'une grue), so that he might taste for a longer space of time what he devoured.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1595)

<sup>10</sup>
Splice the main brace, and call the watch.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Peter Simple. Ch. 15. (1833) To serve out grog on board ship.

I'm not going to splice the mainbrace, my lads; we must have no Dutch courage.

FREDERICK CHAMIER, Tom Bowling. Ch. 26.

(1841) DUTCH COURAGE, see under COURAGE.

1

I hate a drinking companion with a memory.
(μισῶ μνήμονα συμπότην.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, epig. 27. (c. A. D. 85)

Quoted by LUCIAN, and by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 1, who gives the Latin, "Odi memorem compotorem." ERASMUS cites the saying again in Moriae Encomium, sec. 131, referring to it as an old proverb, and adding, "This is a new one of my own making, 'I hate a man who remembers what he hears'" (μισῶ μνήμονα δεσποτήν).

He is an ill companion that has a good memory.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 78. (1710)

2

After the story one ought to drink. (Après le conte doit on boire.)

MILON D'AMIENS, Du Prestre et du Chevalier, l. 415. (c. 1250) MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, ii, 59. "Done-moi boire, si t'agrée" occurs in ii, 122. Another French form is, "Après compter fault boire" (After the reckoning one must drink).

3

A Cup of the Creature.

PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Rabelais' Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 9. (1693) The phrase is Motteux'. Rabelais has, "Quelque peu nous rafraichir" (A little something to refresh us).

He chanced to have taken an overdose of the creature.

WALTER SCOTT, Guy Mannering. Ch. 44. (1815)

4

Candy Is dandy But liquor Is quicker.

OGDEN NASH, Reflection on Ice-Breaking. (1931)

5

He is no body that can not drink super nagulum.

THOMAS NASHE, Penilese, p. 58. (1592) Works (Grosart), ii, 78. In a marginal note, Nashe explains, "Drinking super nagulum, a devise . . . which is, after a man hath turned up the bottom of the cup, to drop it on his nayle, and make a pearle with that is left; which, if it slide, . . . he must drinke againe for penance."

He is a man of no fashion that cannot drinke supernaculum.

T. YOUNG, as quoted in BRAND, Popular Antiquities, ii, 331. (1617)

Your true bred woman of honour drinks all. Supernaculum, by Jove.

APHRA BEHN, The False Count, iv, 1. (1682)

6

The smaller the Drink, the clearer the Head, and the cooler the Blood.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 66. (1693)

7

Over their cups. (Inter pocula.)

PERSEUS, Satires. Sat. i. l. 30. (c. A. D. 58). See under CUP.

8

A hot drink is as good as an overcoat. (Calda potio vestiarius est.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 41. (c. A. D. 60)

9

I'm all dried up for lack of a drink.—You shall have one.—It's a long time coming. (Diu fit.)

PLAUTUS, Curculio, l. 121. (c. 200 B. C.)

It's a long time since we drank. (Iam diu factum est, postquam bibimus.)

PLAUTUS, Persa, l. 822. (c. 200 B. C.)

It's a damn long time between drinks.

EDWARD B. DUDLEY, Governor of North Carolina (?), to Pierce Mason Butler, Governor of South Carolina, at the home of Mrs. Nancy Anne Jones, midway between Raleigh and Durham, N.C. (1838) The attribution is purely legendary, but in The Saturday Review of Literature, 18 March, 1939, Lucy M. Cobb, of Raleigh, N.C., had a letter purporting to give the circumstances. There have been other attributions equally unsupported by any real proof. Mr. M. A. Salley, Secretary of the Historical Commission of South Carolina, in a letter to the compiler, states that the remark is "undoubtedly an invention."

Rather a long time between meets.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), After Twenty Years. (1906)

It's a long time between customers.

O. HENRY, Seats of the Haughty. (1907)

They bewailed the space of time between drinks

O. HENRY, A Comedy in Rubber (1908)

10

As a man drinks he generally grows reckless, the more drams the fewer scruples.

GEORGE D. PRENTICE, Prenticeana, p. 80. (1860)

One swallow does not make a summer, but too many swallows make a fall.

GEORGE D. PRENTICE, Prenticeana, p. 155.

11

Let him drink, and forget his poverty, and remember his misery no more. (Bibant, et obliviscantur egestatis suae, et doloris sui non recordentur amplius.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxxi, 7. (c. 350 B. C.)

12

Run always after the dog and he will never bite you; drink always before the thirst and never will anything happen to you. (Courez tousjours après le chien, jamais ne vous mordra, et beuvez tousjours avant le soif, jamais ne vous adviendra.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 5. (1534)

THIRST DEPARTS WITH DRINKING, see under THIRST

13

I drink no more than a sponge. (Ie ne boy en plus q'vne esponge.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 5. (1534)

I will do any thing, Nerissa, ere I'll be married to a sponge.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, i, 2, 107. (1597)

Look! Here's Herbert, the human blotter.

PHYLLIS MCGINLEY, Well, Well, Charlie's in Town. (1940)

1 It were better to cry less and drink more. (Il vault mieulx pleurer moins & boire d'aduantage.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 2. (1532)

Who drinks while eating his soup, when he is dead won't see a drop. (Qui boit en mangeant sa soupe, quand il est mort il n'y voit goutte.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 12. Referred to as an ancient proverb.

2 They drank, as the phrase is, with unbuttoned bellies. (Ilz beurent à ventre deboutonné.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 20.

Better Belly burst, than good Drink lost.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 881. (1732)

3 The man's emphatically mad

Who drinks the best, yet can be sad.

(Furieux est, de bons sens ne iouist, Quiconques boyt, & ne s'en resiouist.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 65. (1548)

The bad weather passes and the good returns

While we clink our cans around the fat ham.

(Le mal temps passe, & retourne le bon, Pendent qu'on trinque au tour de gras iambon.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 65.

When the liquor's out, why clink the cannikin?

ROBERT BROWNING, The Flight of the Duchess. Pt. xvi. (1845)

4 If you touch pot, you must touch penny.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 175. (1678)

Lips go, laps go, drink and pay.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 232. (1721)

"If you put your lip to the pot to drink, put your hand to your lap to take out your purse."

He that drinks fast, pays slow.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733.

5 If ye brew weel, ye'll drink the better.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 244. (1678)

6 Shun not the mead, but drink in measure.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 19.

(c. 900) Bellows, tr. The poet is strongly against overindulgence. In St. 13 he says, "The bird of forgetfulness broods over beer, and steals the minds of men," and there are many other warnings against drunkenness.

7 Pint stoups hae lang lugs.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 26. (1818) "For a great deal is said over them which, but for their influence, would not be heard," adds HISLOP, Proverbs of Scotland, p. 247. (1862)

8 What you want in meat, we'll have in drink.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, v, 3, 28. (1598)

The old proverb, "what they want in meat, let them take out in drink."

THOMAS HEYWOOD, The Fair Maid of the West. Act II, sc. 1. (1617)

Of all meat in the world, drink goes down the best.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 274. (1721)

Of all vittles drink digests the quickest.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

9 He drinks you, with facility.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, ii, 3, 84. (1605)

They drink with impunity, or anybody else who invites them.

ARTEMUS WARD (C. F. BROWNE), Moses the Sassy: Programme. (1865)

10 He's a coward . . . that will not drink . . . till his brains turn o' the toe like a parish-top.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, i, 3, 42. (1599)

O God, that men should put an enemy in their mouths to steal away their brains!

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, ii, 3, 291. (1605)

11 If all be true that I do think,

There are five reasons we should drink:

Good wine—a friend—or being dry—

Or lest we should be by and by—

Or any other reason why.

(Si bene commemini, causae sunt quinque bibendi:

Hospitis adventus, praesens sitis, atque futura, Aut vini bonitas, aut quaelibet altera causa.)

PÈRE SIRMOND (?), Reasons for Drinking. (c.

1595) Henry Aldrich, tr. See MÉNAGE, Ménagiana, i, 172; PLAYFORD, Banquet of Music, 1689.

I drink when I have occasion, and sometimes when I have no occasion. (Bebo cuando tengo gana, y cuando no la tengo.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 33. (1615)

We needs must drinke come wind come weather.

UNKNOWN, Prophysian Garland, p. 368. (c. 1630)

There are two reasons for drinking: one is, when you are thirsty, to cure it; the other, when you are not thirsty, to prevent it. . . . Prevention is better than cure.

T. L. PEACOCK, Melincourt. Ch. 16. (1817)

12 Stay me with flagons. (Fulcite me floribus.)

Old Testament: Song of Solomon, ii, 5. (c. 900 B. C.)

Drink, drink, to drown your misfortunes. (πίνε, πίν' ἐν συμφοραῖς.)

SIMONIDES, Fragments. (c. 500 B. C.) See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, ii, 304.

Bacchus scatters devouring cares. (Dissipat Euhius | curas edaces.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 11, l. 17. (23 B. C.)

The inventor of wine is not called the Releaser on account of the license it gives to the tongue, but because it frees the mind from bondage to cares. (Liberque non ob licentiam linguae dictus est inventor vini, sed quia liberat servitio curarum animum.)

SENECA, De Tranquillitate Animi. Ch. 17, sec. 8. (C. A. D. 60)

Mingle thy sorrow with Zebybe.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 73. (1817) Zebybe is an opium preparation.

Drink does not drown Care, but waters it, and makes it grow faster.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749.

1 I cannot eat but little meat,
My stomach is not good;
But sure I think that I can drink
With him that wears a hood.

JOHN STILL (?), Gammer Gurton's Needle.

Act ii, l. 5. (1575) Said to be from a song older than the play which has been attributed to Nicolas Udall and to John Bridges, Dean of Salisbury. The song has been claimed for William Stevenson, of Durham.

2 Toss pot on high, Let love go by. (ὄψω πνεύματα τέγγε, φάλης δ' ἀπέχου Κυθέρης.)

SUIDAS, Lexicon. (c. 950 A.D.) See EDMONDS, Elegy and Iambus, p. 299.

Then toss off your glasses, and scorn the dull asses

Who, missing the kernel, still gnaw the shell;
What's love, rule or riches? Wise Solomon teaches They're vanity, vanity, vanity still.

Cho. Friends and a bottle still bear the bell.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Drinking Song. (c. 1740)

In a letter to the Abbé de la Roche, giving the text and probably written in 1779, Franklin says that he wrote the song forty years earlier.

3 Let him carry off the dead men as we say in the army.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

Empty bottles were colloquially known as "dead men."

And he that will this health deny,
Down among the dead men let him lie.

JOHN DYER, Song. (c. 1750)

4 It is mere whip-belly-vengeance; he that drinks most has the worst share.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

"Whip-belly" is thin, weak liquor.

Neverout: I'm very dry.

Miss: Then you're the better to burn, and the worse to fry.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii.

5 One top of Parnassus was sacred to Bacchus, the other to Apollo.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1714)

It is sometimes forgotten that only one of the two peaks of Parnassus was sacred to Apollo, the other belonging to Dionysus.

SAINTSBURY, Notes on a Cellar-Book, p. 21. (1920)

If you make Bacchus your God, Apollo will not keep you Company.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2769. (1732)

6 They are pot companions. (Compotrix eius est.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 232. (c. 166 B.C.)

Potations pottle-deep.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, ii, 3, 56. (1605) "Most potent in potting" occurs in l. 78.

7 A bottle of sherry, a bottle of sham, a bottle of port, and a shass caffy.

THACKERAY, Pendennis. Ch. 4. (1849) Harry Foker's idea of the drinks which should go with a dinner—a choice cordially approved by Saintsbury in his Notes on a Cellar-Book.

8 Let them drink, since they will not eat. (Quasi ut biberent quando esse nollent.)

TIBERIUS, of the sacred chickens, who would not eat when he took the auspices, and which he threw into the sea. (c. A.D. 20) See SUTTONIUS, Tiberius. Ch. ii, sec. 2. There is a theological maxim, "Potus non frangit ieiunium" (Drinking does not break a fast).

9 Alcohol is the best of all preservatives.

PERCIVAL WILDE, Inquest, p. 142. (1940)

10 He that drynkes wel, slepes wel.

THOMAS WILSON, The Rule of Reason, sig. H8. (1551)

He that eateth well, drinketh well, he that drinketh well, sleepeth well; he that sleepeth well sinneth not, and he that sinneth not goeth straight through Purgatory to Paradise.

WILLIAM LITHGOW, Rare Adventures, p. 69. (1609) There are a number of variant readings.

Drinking will make a man quaff,

Quaffing will make a man sing,

Singing will make a man laugh,

And laughing long life doth bring,

Saith old Simon, the King.

THOMAS D'URFEY, Pills to Purge Melancholy:

Old Simon the King. (1719) The reference is said to be to Simon Wadloe, keeper of the Devil Tavern in Fleet Street, about 1621.

11 He had drunk his way down the ladder far more quickly than he had fought his way up it.

P. C. WREN, The Uniform of Glory, p. 274. (1941)

12 Drinking with women is as unnatural as scolding with 'em.

WILLIAM WYCHERLEY, The Country Wife. Act ii. (c. 1673)

13 He was hang'd that left his drinke behinde.

UNKNOWN, Roxburghe Ballads, i, 416. (c. 1640)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 71. (1678)

Ray explains the proverb thus: "Good fellows have a story of a certain malefactor, who came to be suspected upon leaving his drink behind him in an Alehouse, at the News of an Hue and Cry."

Yet he was bang'd, nay some say hang'd,

That left his drink behind.

Westminster Drollery. Pt. ii, p. 86. (1671)

Stay till this bottle's out; you know, the man was hang'd that left his liquor behind him.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

He will be hanged for leaving his liquor behind, like the saddler of Bawtry.

SAMUEL PEGGE, Curialia Miscellanea, p. 340. (1818) "This saying is often applied to a man who quits his friends too early, and will not stay to finish his bottle." Bawtry is in Yorkshire, and this is a Yorkshire saying, but nobody remembers who the saddler was.

1
There was an old hen

And she had a wooden leg,
And every damned morning
She laid another egg;
She was the best damned chicken
On the whole damned farm—
And another little drink

Wouldn't do us no harm.

UNKNOWN. Another Little Drink Won't Do Us any Harm. (c. 1850) There is a German student's slogan, "Die alten Deutschen trinken immer noch eins" (The old Germans always drank one more).

A little lift won't do us any harm.

D. B. OLSEN, Cat's Claw, p. 123. (1943)

II—Drinking Healths

2
To the spirit of good fortune! (ἀγαθὸν δαίμονος.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Wasps, l. 525. (422 B.C.)

A cup of undiluted wine to the toast of "Happy Fortune" was the final cup at a feast. Luck to you, luck to us, luck to thee, luck to me. (Bene vos, bene nos, bene te, bene me.)

PLAUTUS, Stichus, l. 709. (c. 200 B.C.) Good luck be ours in things like this! (αἰσιμα τὰ τοιαῦτα παρῆν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Isis and Osiris. Sec. 357F. (c. A.D. 95) Quoting an old toast.

To all friends round the Wrekin.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, The Recruiting Officer: Dedication. (1706) "A mode of drinking to all friends, wheresoever they may be, taking the Wrekin as a center. The Wrekin is a mountain in the neighborhood of Shrewsbury."—GROSE, Provincial Glossary, p. 220.

For more acquaintance, as Sir John Ramsay drank to his father.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 101. (1721) "Sir John Ramsay . . . long abroad . . . met with his father, who did not know him: He . . . drinks to him for more acquaintance. Applied jocosely when we drink to our intimate friends or relations."

But the standing toast that pleased the most Was, "The wind that blows, the ship that goes, And the lass that loves a sailor!"

CHARLES DIBDIN, The Standing Toast. From the comic opera, The Round Robin, produced 21 June, 1811.

This is on me.

WILLIAM ROTHWELL, Epitaph on Tombstone. (1938) A well known town character of Pawtucket, R.I., who always paid the check at parties.

Here's lead in the blackjack.

DANA CHAMBERS, She'll Be Dead by Morning, p. 87. (1940) A modification of the old "Here's lead in your pencil."

Here's mud in your eye!

VAN WYCK MASON, The Bucharest Ballerina Murders, p. 50. (1940)

3
To drink healths is to drink sickness.

THOMAS DEKKER, II The Honest Whore. Act iv, sc. 3. (1635)

When thou dost drink, beware the toast,
For therein lies the danger most.

UNKNOWN, Berkeley MSS., iii, 31. (1639)

So the sailors in this ship [the Carouse] have taken a use to drink other men's healths, to the amplifying of their own diseases.

JOHN TAYLOR, A Navy of Landships. (c. 1650)

We drink one another's healths and spoil our own.

JEROME K. JEROME, Idle Thoughts of an Idle Fellow: On Eating and Drinking. (1889)

4
Pledge your own health you must not.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 152. (1678)

III—Drinking: Drunkenness

5
Drunkenness is a flattering devil, a sweet poison, a pleasant sin.

ST. AUGUSTINE, as quoted by SIR WALTER RALEGH, Instructions to His Son, sec. ix.

6
Become not intoxicated and thou shalt not sin. Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 29b. (c. 450)

The prayer of a drunkard is an abomination.

Babylonian Talmud: Erubin, fo. 64a.

7
The more that some drynke, the more they wax drye.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, The Shyp of Follys, i, 51. (1509)

"A drunken man is always dry," according to the proverb.

JAMES PILKINGTON, Works, p. 51. (1562)

He that's most drunken may soonest be athirst

CHAPMAN, Eastward Hoe. Act i, sc. 2. (1605)

Ever drunk, ever dry.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 321. (1605)

8
Drunkenness is a joy reserved for the gods; so men do partake of it impiously, and so they are very properly punished for their audacity.

JAMES BRANCH CABELL, Jurgen. Ch. 18. (1919)

9
Your faults in drink should not your pardon win:

The wine is guiltless: 'tis the drinker's sin.

(Quae potus peccas ignoscere tu tibi noli; nam crimen vini nullum est, sed culpa bibentis.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. ii, No. 21. (c. 175 B.C.)

Wine is one thing, drunkenness another. (Aliud vinum, aliud ebrietas.)

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 2. (1621) Quoted as a saying.

Drunkenness is not the fault of the wine but of the man. (Chiu pu tsui jên, jên tsü tsui.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1005. (1875)

- 1
I am dronke, I knowe it by my soun;
And therfore, if that I misspeke or seye,
Wyte it the ale of Southwerk, I yow preye.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Miller's Prologue, l. 30. (c. 1386)
In womman vinolent is no defence,
This knowen lechours by experience.
CHAUCER, The Wife of Bath's Prol., l. 467. The Germans say, "A drunken woman is an open door."
- 2
A drunken man who falls out of a cart, though he may suffer, does not die. His bones are the same as other people's, but he meets his accident in a different way. His spirit is in a condition of security.
CHUANG TZU, Right and Wrong. Sec. 3. (c. 400 B.C.)
Fortune that helps frantick men and drunk.
SIR JOHN HARINGTON, tr., Orlando Furioso. Bk. xxx, st. 13. (1591)
There is an oulde prouerbe, and not confirmed true, a drucken man neuer takes harme.
UNKNOWN, Meeting of Gallants, p. 26. (1604)
CHAPMAN, Eastward Hoe, iii, 2. (1605)
HARRIS, The Drunkard's Cup, p. 13. (1619)
The devil has no power over a drunkard.
HENRY GLAPTHORNE, The Lady Mother. Act iii, sc. 2. (1635)
Drunkn folks seldom take harm.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 83. (1670)
The pow'r that guards the drunk, his sleep attends.
JOHN GAY, The Shepherd's Week: Saturday, l. 127. (1714)
Heaven, they say, protects children, sailors, and drunken men.
HUGHES, Tom Brown at Oxford. Ch. 12. (1861)
They say there's a special providence watches over drunk men and bairns.
GEORGE MACDONALD, Alec Forbes. Ch. 76. (1865)
There is a Providence for drunken men.
R. L. STEVENSON, St. Ives. Ch. 13. (1894)
Heaven seems to look after the boozers.
GEORGE BELLAIRS, Murder Will Speak, p. 82. (1943)
- 3
Prudence must not be expected from a man who is never sober. (Nec enim est ab homine numquam sobrio postulanda prudentia.)
CICERO, Philippicae. No. ii, ch. 32, sec. 81. (44 B.C.)
Dronkenesse is verray sepulture
Of mannes wit and his discrecioun.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Pardoner's Tale, l. 230. (c. 1386)
Salomon seith: "ther is no privetee ther-as regneth dronkenesse."
CHAUCER, The Tale of Melibeus, sec. 23.
Ther dronkenesse regneth in any route,
Ther is no conseil hyd withouten doute.
CHAUCER, Tale of the Man of Lawe, l. 678.
What is in the heart of the sober man is in the tongue of the drunkard. (Quod in corde sobrii, id est in lingua ebrui.)
ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. i, No. 55. (1508)

- What soberness conceals, Drunkenness reveals.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6117. (1732)
See also WINE: WINE IN, SECRETS OUT.
- 4
A drunkard is not master either of his soul or his body.
ROBERT CODRINGTON, Proverbs. (c. 1660) The French say, "Homme ivre n'est pas à soi" (A drunken man is not at home).
- 5
I would not have cast up their accounts here, for more than they mean to be drunk this twelvemonth.
DEKKER AND WEBSTER, Westward Hoe. Act v, sc. 1. (1607) Cast up accounts: to vomit.
He drank till he gave up his half-penny.
JOHN RAY, Proverbs, p. 87. (1678)
He's casting up his accounts.
FRANKLIN, Drinker's Dictionary. (1745)
I'm cursedly inclined to shoot the cat.
FREDERICK MARRYAT, The King's Own. Ch. 32. (1830)
- 6
To stay at home when one is drunk is wise. (ὅς δ' ἂν μεθύσθῃς γ' ἐν δόμοις μέλῃ, σοφός.)
EURIPIDES, Cyclops, l. 538. (c. 440 B.C.)
Never go out drunk on a winter night. (Χειμερίας μεθύων μηδαμὰ νυκτὸς ἴης.)
LEONIDAS OF TARENTUM, Epitaph, for a man who died as the result of this indiscretion. (c. 275 B.C.) See Greek Anthology, vii, 660.
- 7
Today it is our pleasure to be drunk.
HENRY FIELDING, Tom Thumb. Act i. (1730)
- 8
Nothing more like a fool than a drunken man.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733
- 9
Bacchus hath drown'd more Men than Neptune.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 830. (1732)
More are drowned in glasses than in all the rivers (Es ertrinken mehr in Glas, als in allen Waessern.)
CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 318. (1856) A German proverb, of which the French have made a jingle, "Il se noie plus gens dans les verres, Que dans toutes les rivières." There are two other German forms, "Im Becher ersaufen mehr als im Meer" (More are drowned in the goblet than in the sea), and "Es trinken tausend sich den Tod, ehe einer stirbt von Durstes Noth" (A thousand will drink themselves to death before one dies of thirst). The Latin proverb is, "Plures crapula quam gladius" (Drunkenness kills more than the sword)
- 10
Drunkards have a Fool's Tongue and a Knave's Heart.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1342. (1732)
Drunkenness is a pair of Spectacles to see the Devil with.
Drunkenness makes some Men Fools; some Beasts; some Devils.
Drunkenness turns a Man out of himself, and leaves a Beast in his room.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 1343-5.

- 1 A drunkard's purse is a bottle.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 149. (1640)
- 2 Malt is about wheate with him, market men saie.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)
Take good heede that malt be not about wheate before you parte.
THOMAS COGAN, Haven of Health, p. 217. (1588)
The malt is above the beir.
FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 98. (c. 1595)
Malt is now above wheat with a number of mad people.
NICHOLAS BRETON, Fantastickes: Harvest. (1626)
The malt is above the water.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 63. (1678)
"Come, come, Provost," said the lady, rising, "if the malt gets above the meal with you, it is time for me to take myself away."
WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Ch. 11. (1824)
He marched home from the little public-house . . . with "the malt above the meal."
ARCHIBALD FORBES, Barrack, Bivouac, and Battle, p. 62. (1891)
- 3 A virtuous man is always drunk.
JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Sec. 9, let. 22. (1645) Quoted as from a pagan philosopher.
He that never drank was never athirst.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1659)
- 4 Drunken, but not with wine. (Ebria non a vino.)
Old Testament: Isaiah, li, 21. (c. 900 B. C.)
- 5 He maketh them to stagger like a drunken man. (Errare eos faciet quasi ebrios.)
Old Testament: Job, xii, 25. (c. 350 B. C.)
They reel to and fro, and stagger like a drunken man. (Turbati sunt, et moti sunt sicut ebrios.)
Old Testament: Psalms, cvii, 27. (c. 250 B. C.)
He has come home late with staggering foot. (Sero domum est reversus titubanti pede.)
PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 14. l. 10. (c. 25 B. C.)
Before he with his feete do seeme indentures for to make.
R. F., Schoole of Slovenrie, 35. (1605)
If he bee drunken you may say hee staggers; . . . for when he is sober hee makes indentures [is a lawyer's clerk].
JOHN STEPHENS, Satirical Essays. Bk. ii, No. 11. (1615)
Being so drunk that he cutteth indentures.
UNKNOWN, Roxburghe Ballads, vi, 3. (1681)
He makes indentures with his legs.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Drinker's Dictionary. (1745)
The Lame goes as far as your staggerer.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 519. (1640)
And pavement faithless to the fuddled foot.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 537. (1730)
The colonel walks as straight as a pin.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
The ship . . . seemed to stagger like a drunken man.
CHAMIER, Saucy Arethusa. Ch. 11. (1837)

He is driving turkeys to market. He cannot walk straight.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 165. (1869)
People can't tell us apart, we stagger so much alike.

F. P. DUNNE, Cross-Examinations. (1902)

6 If we take habitual drunkards as a class, their heads and their hearts will bear an advantageous comparison with those of any other class.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Address, to the Springfield, Ill., Washingtonian Temperance Society, 22 Feb., 1842.

7 One should, every month, get drunk at least once. (Qu'il faut à chaque mois, Du moins s'enivre une fois.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, quoting an old proverb founded on the teaching of Dr. Sylvius. (c. 1400) In The Times' Whistle (c. 1614) reference is made (l. 2115, et seq.) to "a great phisitian" who had prescribed an occasional drinking bout for the better health of the body.

Though drinking to excess is in general improper, yet occasional intemperance may be excused. "Sometimes," says Seneca, "we may extend our draught even to intoxication, not that the wine may drown us, but that it may drown our cares" (Non ut mergat nos, sed ut deprimat curas).

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. 1, p. 157. (1814)

8 We were drinking the whole night through, and very strong wine too. I got up with a head on for four. (ἀνίσταμαι γοῦν τέτταρας κεφαλὰς ἔχων.)

MENANDER, The Flute Girl. Frag. 67K. (c. 300 B. C.)

His veins swollen, as always, with the wine of yesterday. (Inflatum hesterno venas, ut semper, Iaccho.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. Ecl. vi, l. 15. (37 B. C.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 2, with the use of "de more" for "ut semper."

A drunken night makes a mistie morning.

SIR WILLIAM CORNWALLIS, Essays. Pt. ii, sig. D8. (1601) FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 81 (1732), has, "A drunken Night makes a cloudy Morning."

Will the cold brook,
Candied with ice, caudle thy morning taste,
To cure thy o'er night's surfeit?

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, iv, 3, 225. (1608)

Drunkenness departed and reflection came.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 292. (1817)

Who drinks one bowl hath scant delight; to poorest passion he was born;

Who drains the score must e'er expect to rue the headache of the morn.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. viii, st. 11. (1853)

The Dutchman's headache.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 366. (1869)

Drunken days have all their to-morrows, as the old proverb says.

SAMUEL SMILES, Thrift, p. 167. (1875)

I've a head like a concertina: I've a tongue like a button-stick.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Cells, l. 1. (1886)

How gracious those dews of solace that over my senses fall

At the clink of the ice in the pitcher the boy brings up the hall.

EUGENE FIELD, The Clink of the Ice. (1892)

A dark brown taste, a burning thirst,
A head that's ready to split and burst. . . .

No time for mirth, no time for laughter—

The cold gray dawn of the morning after.

GEORGE ADE, Remorse, from The Sultan of Sulu. (1903)

This is the cold, gray dawn of the morning after.

PERCIVAL WILDE, Tinsley's Bones, p.227.(1942)

<sup>1</sup> We ware wanton or sowe dronke.

SIR THOMAS MORE, The Confutacyon of Tindale. (1532)

Your Dane dead drunk.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, ii, 3, 84. (1605)

She was blind drunk in the back parlour.

G. R. SIMS, Mary Jane's Memoirs, p. 45.(1887)

<sup>2</sup> Do not see double where there is but one.
(Nec, quae sunt singula, bina vide.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 764. (c. 1 B. C.)

By this time the lights were multiplying before my eyes. (Et sane iam lucernae mihi plures videbantur.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 64. (c. A. D. 60)

There is a similar Greek proverb in Anecdota Bekkeri, δ'ρα μὴ δύνηται τις τοὺς στρωτήρας ἢ τὰς δοκοὺς ἀριθμεῖν (You can't count the beams or the rafters).

<sup>3</sup> Not drunk is he, who from the floor
Can rise alone, and drink some more;
But drunk is he, who prostrate lies,
Without the power to drink or rise.

T. L. PEACOCK, The Misfortunes of Elphin. Ch. 3. Heading. (1829) Sometimes mistakenly ascribed to Eugene Field.

No man shall be held as mellow

Who can distinguish blue from yellow.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus. Sc. 15. (1839)

<sup>4</sup> If any man commit any offense when drunk, his penalty shall be double that prescribed for the sober. (ἐάν τις δριούθῃ μεθύων ἀμάρτη, διπλασίων ἢ τῷ νήφοντι τὴν ζημίαν εἶναι.)

PITTACUS OF MITYLENE, Laws. (c. 650 B. C.)

Pittacus's law is frequently referred to. This version is from PLUTARCH'S Moralia, 155F. Aristotle mentions it twice, Politics, ii, 12, 13, and Nicomachean Ethics, iii, 5, 8.

He that kylth a man dronke, sober shall be hang'd.
THOMAS STARKEY, England in the Reign of Henry VIII. Bk. i, ch. 2. (1538)

He that kylth a man, when he is dronke (quoth she), Shalbe hangd when he is sobre.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

FULLER, Remains, p. 324. (1605) HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1659)

Drunkenness both aggravates every crime and makes it more clearly a crime. (Omne crimen ebrietas et incendit, et detegit.)

SIR EDWARD COKE, Institutes of the Lawes of England. Bk. iii, sec. 405. (c. 1640) The shorter Latin proverb is, "Qui peccat ebrius, luat sobrius" (Who offends when drunk, pays when he is sober). Quoted in this form in KENDRICK v. HOPKINS, 1580. See CARY, Reports, 133.

Suppose you kill a man when you are drunk, you shall never be hanged for it until you are sober.

MERITON, Yorkshire Ale, p. 154. (1685)

What you do when you're drunk, you must pay for when you're dry. The law makes drunkenness no excuse, but rather an aggravation.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 344.(1721)

<sup>5</sup> The drunkard and the glutton shall come to poverty. (Quia vacantes potibus, et dantes symbola consumentur.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiii, 21. (c.350 B. C.)

<sup>6</sup> He who quarrels with a drunken man injures one who is absent. (Absentem laedit cum ebrio qui litigat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 12.(c.43 B. C.)

Quoted by ADDISON, The Spectator, No. 569 (19 July, 1714), as "One of the prettiest sayings I ever met with."

<sup>7</sup> Let but the drunkard alone, and he will fall of himself.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 407. (1678)

Let the Drunkard alone, and by and by he'll fall of himself.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3193.(1732) Who can help Sickness, quoth the Drunken Wife, when she fell into the Gutter?

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5698.

A drunkard in the gutter is where he ought to be
W. G. SUMNER, The Forgotten Man. (1883)

<sup>8</sup> Ware the of dronkenschap, for the wit that is oucome with wyne is like the hors that casteth his maistre.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictees and Sayenges of the Philosophers, fo. 54. (1477) Quoting Socrates.

<sup>9</sup> If you wish to break off drinking, watch a drunken man when you are sober. (Jo yao tuan chiu fa, hsing yen h'an tsui jên.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 989. (1875)

<sup>10</sup> 'Tis not the drinking that is to be blam'd, but the excess.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Humility. (1659)

<sup>11</sup> Drunkenness is nothing but voluntary madness. (Dic . . . nihil aliud esse ebrietatem quam voluntariam insaniam.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxiii, sec. 18. (c. A. D. 65) A Latin proverb is, "Nil similius insano quam ebrius" (There is nothing more like a madman than a drunken man). The Germans say, "Voll, toll!" (A drunken man, a madman).

<sup>1</sup> Drunkenness does not create vice; it merely drags it into view. (Non facit ebrietas vitia, sed protrahit.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxiii, sec. 20. (c. A. D. 65)

There is more of turn than of truth in a saying of Seneca, "That drunkenness does not produce but discover faults." Common experience teaches the contrary. Wine throws a man out of himself, and infuses qualities into the mind which she is a stranger to in her sober moments.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 569. (19 July, 1714)

<sup>2</sup> Sweet fellowship in shame!
One drunkard loves another of the name.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 3, 49. (1595)

<sup>3</sup> The gentleman had drunk himself out of his five sentences.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, i, 1, 180. (1598)

Drink their estates away and senses too.

DANIEL DEFOE, The True-born Englishman, ii, 92. (1701)

<sup>4</sup> Better to trip with the feet than with the tongue. (κρείττον εἶναι τοῖς ποσὶν ὀλισθεῖν ἢ τῇ γλώττῃ.)

ZENO, excusing drunkenness. (c. 460 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Zeno. Bk. vii, sec. 26. See also under TONGUE.

The proverbe is true that I tell to you,
'Tis better to be dronken and drowsie,
Than hunger starued and lousie.

UNKNOWN, A Knack to Know an Honest Man, i. 657. (1596)

You had better be drunk than drowned.

ROBERT FORBY, Vocabulary of East Anglia, p. 430. (1830) i. e. with wine rather than beer.

<sup>5</sup> He that is drunk is as great as a King.

UNKNOWN, Westminster Drollery. Pt. ii, l. 77. (1672) Said to have been quoted by Charles II to Sir Robert Viner, Lord Mayor of London, in 1674, when the latter appeared at an official function in an intoxicated condition.

For ilka man that's drunk's a lord.

ROBERT BURNS, Guidwife, Count the Lawin'. (c. 1769) "Securus et ebrius" (Carefree and drunk) is the Latin phrase.

APPEAL FROM PHILIP DRUNK TO PHILIP SOBER, see under PHILIP.

IV—Drunkenness: Euphemisms

<sup>6</sup> I was oiled at the time, oiled with the juice that cheers from heels to skull.

HUGH ADDIS, Night Over the Wood, p. 28. (1943)

<sup>7</sup> You don't mean to say you were loaded?

GEORGE ADE, Ariie, p. 77. (1896)

"Was he loaded?" "Well, he wasn't exactly sober."
E. S. FIELD, Sapphire Bracelet, p. 78. (1910)

<sup>8</sup> With a furnace in his lungs. (κάμινον ἔχων ἐν τῷ πνεύματι.)

IMMANUEL BEKKER, Anecdota Graeca. (1814)

<sup>9</sup> He had gone on a wonderful bender.

CLARE BOOTHE, Europe in the Spring, p. 238. (1940)

<sup>10</sup> Arthur had got plastered like a ceiling.

ROBERT CARSON, The Bride Saw Red, p. 51. (1943)

<sup>11</sup> Wel hath this miller vernissed his heed;
Ful pale he was for-dronken, and nat reed.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Reves Tale, l. 229. (c. 1386)

<sup>12</sup> He has caught a fox, he is very drunk.

B. E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew. Sig. E7. (c. 1694)

<sup>13</sup> Half seas over, almost drunk.

B. E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew. (c. 1694)

When I left you, you were half seas over.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

The admiral is half seas over.

PAULDING, The Bucktails. Act iii, sc. 2. (1815)

Everybody was half-seas over.

MARK TWAIN, Connecticut Yankee, p. 197. (1889)

<sup>14</sup> Old Wax and Bristles is about three sheets in the wind.

PIERCE EGEN, Real Life in London, i, 18. (1821)

He seldom went up to the town without coming down "three sheets in the wind."

R. H. DANA, Two Years before the Mast. Ch. 20. (1840) "As high as a kite."

Babbled like three sheets in the wind.

ALLAN UPDEGRAFF, The Hills Look Down, p. 245. (1941)

<sup>15</sup> His hand is in the creill.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 54. (c. 1595)

<sup>16</sup> He hath stole a Roll out of the Brewer's Basket.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1900. (1732)

<sup>17</sup> He was seldom downright drunk, but was often . . . shot in the neck.

ASA GREENE, The Life and Adventures of Dr. Dodimus Duckworth, ii, 176. (1833)

In Pennsylvania section originated . . . "Well shot in the neck" for intoxication.

H. C. TODD, Notes Upon Canada and the United States, p. 22. (1835)

The two exchanged a "shot in the neck."

T. A. BURKE, Polly Peaseblossom, p. 180. (1851)

He offered to fight me, saying he was not drunk, but only shot in the neck.

New Orleans Picayune, 17 March, 1870.

<sup>18</sup> He was seldom downright drunk; but was often . . . most infernally sawed.

ASA GREENE, The Life and Adventures of Dr. Dodimus Duckworth, ii, 176. (1833)

He was often all-firedly sprung.

ASA GREENE, Dr. Dodimus Duckworth, ii, 176.
I sometimes thought he was a little sprung.

SARAH ORNE JEWETT, The Mate of the Daylight, p. 143. (1883)

1 They say he's got snakes in his boots.

JOHN HABBERTON, The Barton Experiment.
Ch. 9. (1877)

2 He set out for a stroll with a skate on.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Sound and Fury.
(1903)

He gets spifflicated.

O. HENRY, Memoirs of a Yellow Dog. (1906)

I had a beautiful skate on last night.

O. HENRY, The Rubaiyat of a Scotch Highball.
(1907)

I'm stewed.

O. HENRY, The Badge of Policeman O'Roon.
(1907)

Boy, us for plain myrtle, while under this fertile
Old grapevine myself I seclude,
For you and bibacious young Quintus Horatius—Stewed.

F. P. ADAMS, Persicos Odi. (1920)

3 He was (as he will be) somewhat cupshotten.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

He has got a cup too much.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 63. (1678)

A DROP TOO MUCH, see under DROP.

4 Drunk, sir? . . . Perhaps he swallowed a tavern token.

BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act i,
sc. 4. (1596)

Indeed he hath swallowed doune many tauerne-tokens.

UNKNOWN, Meeting of Gallants at an Ordinarie,
p. 17. (1604)

He's swallowed a tavern token.

FRANKLIN, Drinker's Dictionary. (1745)

5 She wouldn't have said that if she hadn't been pie-eyed.

KATHLEEN KNIGHT, Rendezvous with the Past,
p. 16. (1940)

You get me pie-eyed.

ALLAN UPDEGRAFF, The Hills Look Down, p. 32.
(1941)

Getting pie-eyed. Sozzled. Fried. Plastered. Ossified. Oh, hell. Drunk.

P. G. WODEHOUSE, Money in the Bank, p. 272.
(1942)

6 Her husband had taken to the tavern, and often came home very late "with a brick in his hat."

H. W. LONGFELLOW, Kavanagh. Ch. 29. (1849)

Tight as a brick three days in the week.

MARK TWAIN, Those Twins. (1849)

7 The tavern bitch has bit him i' th' head.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, A Tricke to Catch the Old-One. Act iv, sc. 5. (1608)

8 He lives ever pickled.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Characters: A Saylor.
(1613)

9 He's boiled to the ears.

HUGH PENTECOST, The Twenty-fourth Horse,
p. 51. (1940)

10 Don't you see I'm just soaking soaked? (Non vides me ut mandide madeam?)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 1297. (c. 200 B. C.)

I am quite soaked. (Plane matus sum.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 41. (c. A. D. 60)

11 He has got a piece of bread and cheese in his head.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 87. (1678)

Proverbial Periphrases of One Drunk: He's disguised. He has drunk more than he has bled. He has been in the sun. He has a jag or load. He has got a dish. He is dagg'd. He has cut his leg. He is afflicted. He is top-heavy. The malt is above the water. . . . He's raddled. He is very weary.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 63. (1678)

His shoe pinches him. He has corns in his head. He makes a Virginia Fence, i. e. he walks like a drunken man.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Drinker's Dictionary. (1745) Others are "soused," "all teed up" (from golf?), "lit," "crooked," "corned" (from corn whiskey), "over the bay," and finally "passed out."

12 I am a peppercorn, a brewer's horse.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, iii, 3, 9. (1597)

To title a drunkard by, wee . . . strive to character him in a more mincing phrase; as thus . . . One whom the Brewer's horse hath bit.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Philocothonista, p. 44. (1635)

One whom the brewer's horse hath bit. One who has had a little too much liquor.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 100. (1917)

13 Was it fit for a servant to use his master so, being perhaps, for aught I see, two and thirty, a pip out?

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, i, 2, 33. (1594) RAY, p. 87, cites the proverb, "He is one and thirty."

14 His eyes were set at eight i' the morning.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, v, 1, 205. (1599)
He was drunk.

Thy eyes are almost set in thy head.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, iii, 2, 10. (1610)

15 He got snapt on egnog.

W. T. THOMPSON, Major Jones's Courtship.
(1840)

16 Get me jingled, then slander me.

UPDEGRAFF, The Hills Look Down, p. 36. (1941)

17 Mault made hym the cat to whip.

UNKNOWN, Roxburghe Ballads, ii, 382. (1600)

To be drunk . . . to whip the cat.

RANDLE COTORAVE, Dictionary: Drunk. (1611)
To be a drunkard, and the cat to whip,
Is call'd the king of all good fellowship.

JOHN TAYLOR, Arrant Thiefe. (1622)
The finest pastime that is under the sun
Is whipping the cat at Albrighton.

CHARLOTTE BURNE, Shropshire Folk-Lore, p. 450. (1883) Lines formerly on an inn sign-board at Albrighton.

V—Drunkenness: Proverbial Comparisons

1
As drunk as a beesom.
S. O. ADDY, Sheffield Glossary, p. 13. (1888)

2
I trowe that ye dronken han wyn ape,
And that is whan men pleyen with a straw.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Manciple's Prologue, l. 44. (c. 1389) The Latin is, "Ebrietas ut vituli et simiae." The French say, "Avoir vin de singe." According to tradition, when a man begins to drink he is like a lamb, but as he keeps on, he becomes in turn like a lion, an ape and a sow.

Such as wilbe as drongen as an ape.
UNKNOWN, Colyn Blowbols Testament, l. 280. (c. 1500) See HAZLITT, Early Popular Poetry, i, 104.

Some are Ape dronke.
BARCLAY, The Skyp of Folyis, i, 96. (1509)
Swilling and gulling, night and day, till they be as drunke as apes.

STUBBES, Anatomie of Abuses, p. 151. (1583)
They'll make you drunker than an ape.

HALL-STEVENSON, Crazy Tales, p. 7. (1762)
As fuddled as an ape.

HACKWOOD, Inns, Ales, etc., p. 169. (1909)

3
And dronkenesse is eek a foul record
Of any man, and namely in a lord.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Somnours Tale, l. 341. (c. 1388)

Drink like a lord.
MIDDLETON AND ROWLEY, The Spanish Gypsy. Act iv, sc. 1. (1623)

The proverb goes, "As drunk as a Lord."
JOHN EVELYN, A Character of England, p. 48. (1651)

They were as drunk as lords.
THOMAS FLATMAN, Heracitus Ridens. No. 6. (1681)

As tipsy as a lord.
THACKERAY, Barry Lyndon. Ch. 18. (1861)
Drunk as a couple of lords.

4
KENT, Jason Burr's First Case, p. 235. (1941)
As drunk as a tinker.

CIBBER, Love Makes a Man. Act i. (1701)

5
Drunk as a fish.
WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Way of the World. Act iv, sc. 9. (1704)

6
He was drunk as a goat.
CAROLYN DAWSON, Remind Me to Forget, p. 68. (1942)

7
Here's my brother as drunk as an emperor.
THOMAS DILKE, The City Lady. Act iii, sc. 2. (1697)

8
He's as dizzy as a goose.
FRANKLIN, Drunkard's Dictionary. (1745)
I am as giddy as a goose, yet I have not touched a drop of liquor today.
JOHN BURGOYNE, The Maid of the Oaks. Act iv, sc. 2. (1774)

9
Drunk as a piper all day long.
JOHN GAY, Fables. (1720)
He became as drunk as a piper.
RICHARD GRAVES, The Spiritual Quixote. Bk. x, ch. 29. (1772)

10
Drunk as a bartender on his night off.
MARION HOLBROOK, Suitable for Framing, p. 73. (1941)

11
Thenne gon he for to go lyk a gleo-monnes bicche,
Sum tyme asyde and sum tyme arere.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text A, passus v, l. 197. (c. 1362)

Drunk as a fiddler's bitch.
ROBERT FORBY, The Vocabulary of East Anglia, p. 27. (1830)

I'm as drunk as a Plymouth fiddler.
STEVENSON AND HENLEY, Admiral Guinea. Act ii, sc. 4. (1892)

12
I'm going to get so drunk you'll be able to bottle me.
JONATHAN LATIMER, The Lady in the Morgue, p. 206. (1936)

13
Thei lai and slepte lik as dronke swyn.
JOHN LYDGATE, The Fall of Princes. Bk. iii, l. 2369. (c. 1440) The final stage of drunkenness. See DRUNK AS AN APE.

As dronke as any swyne.
HAZLITT, ed., Early Popular Poetry, i, 100. (c. 1500)

Drunk as hogs.
UNKNOWN, Poor Robin Almanack, June, 1681
As drunk as a pig.

JOHN WOLCOT, Works (1801), v, 71. (c. 1795)
There's a hog;—for he's as drunk as one.
GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, John Bull. Act iii, sc. 2. (1803)

14
Drunk as a beggar.
PHILIP MASSINGER, The Virgin Martyr. Act iii, sc. 3. (1622) Ray, cites this, p. 187, and states that it was the original form of the proverb, but that in his day lords so far out-did beggars in drunkenness that the proverb became, "As drunk as a lord."

15
Dronkken as the deuel.
RICHARD MORRIS, ed., Alliterative Poems, p. 82. (c. 1365)

Madam Bibbington, in a chair, as drunk as the devil.
EDWARD WARD, Account of Clubs, p. 272. (1709)

He's as d-d-drunk as the very de-de-devill!

T. W. ROBERTSON, David Garrick. Act ii. (1864)

1 Drunk as a horse-fly!

CLIFFORD ODETS, Golden Boy. Act i, sc. 5. (1937)

2 As drunk as a wheel-barrow.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 63. (1678)

Continually raddled, and as drunk as a Wheel-barrow.

MOTTEUX, tr., Rabelais. Bk. v, ch. 38. (1694)

This is Motteux' phrase. Rabelais has simply "tousiours yure."

To make a German general as drunk as a wheel-barrow.

DILKE, The City Lady. Act i, sc. 1. (1697)

3 Fill him as drunk as the Baltic sea.

WALTER SCOTT, Peeveril of the Peak. Ch. 27.

(1823) Repeated in Redgauntlet, ch. 14. Notes and Queries, ser. ix, iv, 336, says, "The phrase is still in use among the seafaring population of the East of Scotland in its homely form of 'As fou's the Baltic.'"

4 I am as drunk . . . as David's sow, as the saying is.

THOMAS SHADWELL, The Miser. Act iv. (1671)

For though as drunk as David's sow.

I love her still the better.

JOHN GAY, New Similes. (1720)

He comes home . . . as drunk as David's sow.

NATHAN BAILEY, tr., Erasmus' Colloquies, p. 160. (1725)

As drunk as David's sow.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

SCOTT, Redgauntlet, ch. 14. (1824) MARRYAT,

Mr. Midshipman Easy. Ch. 14. (1836)

KIPLING, The Incarnation of Krishna Mulvaney. (1896) CARR, Death Turns the Tables, p. 142. (1941)

As drunk as David's sow, a common saying, which took its rise from the following circumstance: One David Lloyd, a Welshman, who kept an alehouse at Hereford, had a living sow with six legs, which was greatly resorted to by the curious. He also had a wife much addicted to drunkenness. . . . One day David's wife having taken a cup too much, . . . turned out the sow, and laid down to sleep herself sober in the sty. A company coming to see the sow, David ushered them into the sty, . . . whence the woman was ever after called David's sow.

FRANCIS GROSE, Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: David's Sow. (1785)

5 You are as tight as a tick.

THORNE SMITH, The Passionate Witch, p. 238.

(1941) BONNAMY, Dead Reckoning, p. 12. (1943)

6 They must still be drunk as owls.

R. L. STEVENSON, Treasure Island. Ch. 24. (1883)

As full as a boiled owl.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Trimmed Lamp. (1906) The Rubaiyat of a Scotch Highball. (1907)

Drunk as a boiled owl.

C. F. ADAMS, And Sudden Death, p. 147. (1940)

I'm as stewed as an owl.

KENDRICK, Blind Man's Bluff, p. 18. (1943)

7 He is dronke ase a dreynt mous.

THOMAS WRIGHT, ed., Lyric Poetry, xxxix, 3. (a. 1310)

Thou comest hoom as dronken as a mous.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 246. (c. 1388)

Dronken as a mouse At the ale house.

JOHN SKELTON, Colyn Cloute, l. 803. (c. 1525)

As dronke as a Ratte.

WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique, p. 128. (1553)

I will be dronken as a rat.

ANDREW BOORDE, Book of Knowledge. (1642)

DROP

8 Drop by Drop the Sea is drained.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1337. (1732)

The French say, "Goutte à goutte la mer s'égoute."

Drop by drop the lake is drained.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 346. (1855)

9 You must own you had a drop in your eye.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

[He] liked a drop as well as his master.

SIR MARTIN HUNTER, Journal, p. 21. (1775)

We're nae that fou, But just a drappie in our e'e

BURNS, Willie Brewed a Peck o' Maut. (1789)

The gentleman did take a drop too much.

THOMAS HOOD, The Green Man, l. 12. (1827)

I have had a drop, but I have not been drinking.

R. L. STEVENSON, Prince Otto. Pt. i, ch. 4. (1886)

I went to the Chequers and had a drop too much.

PAYN, Mystery of Mirbridge. Ch. 11. (1888)

10 Behold, the nations are as a drop of a bucket (Ecce Gentes quasi stilla situlae.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xl, 15. (c. 725 B. C.)

The Eternal Maker . . . to whom the whole Globe is but as a drop of the Bucket.

WILLIAM FREKE, Select Essays. Ch. 33. (1693)

The dealings of my trade were but a drop of water in the . . . ocean of my business.

DICKENS, A Christmas Carol. Stave 1. (1844)

Hardly a drop in the bucket-shop.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Enchanted Profile. (1909)

Just a fly in the bucket, or a drop in the ointment, or whatever the expression was.

RICE, Sunday Pigeon Murders, p. 285. (1942)

11 It's drops that make a shower. (ψεκάδες δμβρον γεννώσαι.)

UNKNOWN, an ancient Greek proverb.

Many drops make a floud.

UNKNOWN, The Honest Lawyer, sig. G2. (1616)

Many drops make a shower.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Drop. (1736)

Little drops of water, Little grains of sand

Make the mighty ocean, And the pleasant land.

JULIA FLETCHER CARNEY, Little Things. (1845)

Wrongly attributed to Ebenezer Cobham Brewer, Charles Mackay, and others.

Little drops of water poured into the milk, give the milkman's daughter lovely gowns of silk.

WALT MASON, Little Things. (1911)

DROUGHT

1 And it is sayd syns afore we were borne
That drought doth neuer make derth of corne.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Play of the Wether, l. 634. (1533)

Drought never brought dearth.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 751. (1640)

Drought never bred dearth in England.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 42. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1338. (1732)

Drought ne'er bred dearth in England. It has been proved by practical farmers that in the fine hot years they do the best.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 52. (1917)

2 Whoso hath but a mouth, shall ne'er in England suffer drought.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 35. (1678)

"For if he doth but open it, it is a chance but it will rain in."

3 There is the chapman's drouth and his hunger baith, as folks say.

WALTER SCOTT, The Pirate. Ch. 6. (1821) The chapman's drouth, that is the peddler's thirst, is proverbial in Scotland because peddlers were accustomed to ask modestly for a glass of water, when, in fact, they wanted food.

DROWNING

4 Drown not thyself, to save a drowning Man.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1340. (1732)

He came safe from the East-Indies, and was drowned in the Thames.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1817.

5 The drowning man snatches at every twig.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Contemplations. Ch. 19. (1612)

And now like a man (ready to drowne)

Catch at a helplesse thing.

CHRISTOPHER BROOKE, The Ghost of Richard the Third, 105. (1614)

Sinking she will take hold of reeds.

UNKNOWN, Harleian Miscellany, iv, 153. (c. 1640)

We catch hold of hopes . . . as drowning men do upon thorns, or straws.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Seneca's Epistles, xviii. (c. 1680)

Drowning Men will catch at a Rush.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1339. (1732)

A drowning man will catch at a straw, the proverb well says.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, vii, 12. (1748)

'Tis but the drowning man catching at straws.

J. K. PAULDING, The Bucktails. Act v, sc. 1. (1815)

"You fool, why do you catch at a straw?" calm good sense says to the man that is drowning.

W. M. THACKERAY, Vanity Fair. Ch. 18. (1848)

A plank in shipwreck. (Tabula in naufragio.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 427. (1869)

I cling to you as a drowning man to a straw.

R. L. STEVENSON, Letters, i, 229. (1875)

He who is drowning will grasp even at an ear of corn.

MOSES GOLDMAN, Proverbs of the Sages. No. 336. (1911) Quoted as a familiar saying. The Italians say, "Chi si affoga, s'attaccherebbe a' rasoi" (A drowning man will catch at razors).

6 Food for fishes. (ἰχθῦσιν διαφθοράν.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 1297. (c. 409 B.C.)

The French say, "Boire à la grande tasse" (To drink at the big cup).

7 Go and drown yourself. (βάλλ' ἐς ὕδωρ.)

UNKNOWN, An old Greek proverb cited by Erasmus. See under DISMISSAL.

DRUM

8 The drum is in hands that will know how to beat it well enough. (En manos está el pandero que le sabrán bien tañer.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 22. (1615)

9 Drumming is not the way to catch a Hare.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1341. (1732)

The noisy Drum hath nothing in it, but mere Air.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4685.

10 Where Drums speak out, Laws hold their Tongues.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5640. (1732)

The French say, "Le bruit des armes l'empeschoit d'entendre la voix des lois" (The noise of arms prevents hearing the voice of laws). Quoted by MONTAIGNE, Essays, iii, 1. A derivative of Cicero's "Silent enim leges inter arma" (Laws are silent amid the clash of arms). See under LAW.

11 Better crack the drum than let the standard fall.

ARTHUR E. MOULE, Proverbs from Ningpo. (DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 329. 1872)

12 Beat your drum inside your house, and outsiders will not hear. (Ku tsai nei ta, shêng pu chien wai hsiang.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1092. (1875)

A good drum does not require hard striking. (Hao ku pu yung ch in ch ui ta.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1294.

TO BLOW ONE'S TRUMPET, see under TRUMPET.

DRUNKENNESS, see under Drinking

DRY

13 As dry as a sieve.

ROBERT GREENE, Life and Death of Ned Browne. (1592)

14 As dry as a chip.

BEN JONSON, New Inn. Act iv, sc. 1. (1630)

By the time it came to me it was as dry as a chip.

NATHAN BAILEY, tr., Erasmus' Colloquies, p.

533. (1725) The French say, "Sec comme une allumette" (Dry as a match).

<sup>1</sup> I'm as dry as a fish.

PEACOCK, ed., Manley Glossary, p. 182. (1889)

<sup>2</sup> Dry as a red herring. (Eximé comme vn haran foret.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 14. (1532)

<sup>3</sup> Also the congars, as dry as a bone.

THOMAS WRIGHT, ed., Political Songs: Philip and Mary. (c. 1555) "As dry as a bone" is a proverbial comparison so frequently used that it is unnecessary to quote examples. It is, as Elsworthy says, the almost invariable simile to express the superlative of dryness.

<sup>4</sup> As dry as dust.

UNKNOWN, New Help to Discourse, 248. (1669)
D'URFEX, Squire Oldsapp, i, 1. (1679)

<sup>5</sup> [I will] squease hym as drie as a kyxe.

UNKNOWN, Respublica, v, 10. (1533) A kex is the dry hollow stem of a plant.

Lippes as drye as any kykkes.

THOMAS DRANT, tr., Horace: Satires, sig. A4. (1566)

Squeez'd as dry as a kex.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, The Observer, ii, 118. (1684)

DUCK

<sup>6</sup> I'll have to duck on that present.

GEORGE ADE, Artie, ii, 9. (1896)

Having delivered herself of these Helpful Remarks, she would duck.

GEORGE ADE, Fables in Slang, p. 42. (1899)

Don't let him see us. . . . We'll duck.

WHITLOCK, Thirteenth District, p. 478. (1902)

I duck out every morning before she's up.

H. L. WILSON, Ruggles of Red Gap, ii, 26. (1915)

<sup>7</sup> I always took to shooting like a duck to water.

SIR JOHN ASTLEY, Fifty Years of My Life, i, 22. (1894)

The native took to European education as a duck to water.

G. W. STEEVENS, In India, p. 94. (1901)

<sup>8</sup> They follow each other like ducks in a gutter.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 525. (1855)

<sup>9</sup> Like rain on an ass. (δρος βεταλ.)

CEPHISODORUS, The Amazons. Frag. I. (c. 400 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, ii, 59, who gives the Latin, "Asinus compluitur." A variant is, "As much as a tortoise bothers about flies" (δσση μλλει τῇ χελώνη μυιῶν), the Latin being, "Quam curat testudo muscas." See ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, viii, 100.

The thing passed off like water from a duck's back.

WILLIAM MAGINN, O'Doherty's Maxims, p. 128. (1824)

When men are men of the world, hard words run off them like water off a duck's back.

KIMOSLEY, The Water Babies. Ch. 4. (1863)

It had all passed off like water off a duck's back.

L. B. WALFORD, Stiffnecked Generation, p. 321. (1889)

Threats would slide off him like water off a duck's back.

McKNIGHT MALMAR, Never Say Die, p. 204. (1943)

<sup>10</sup> I never dreamed of so much happiness when I was still the ugly Duckling!

DULCKEN, tr., Andersen's Little Match Girl: The Ugly Duckling. In Andersen's tale, the cygnet, hatched with a brood of ducklings, was despised for its clumsiness until it grew into a swan. Hence the plainest or seemingly stupidest child in the family, who turns out to be the handsomest or cleverest of all.

The mother's fears about her "ugly duckling" took another turn.

J. H. INGRAM, in Harper's Magazine, July, 1883, p. 226/2.

<sup>11</sup> A Duck will not always dabble in the same Gutter.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 82. (1732)

Prate is prate; but it's the Duck that lays the eggs.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3926. A variant is, "Ducks lay eggs, geese lay wagers."

<sup>12</sup> Then euery daie to fare lyke a duck with thee.

Lyke a duck, lyke a duck (quoth she) thou shalt fare, except thou wilt spare.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

<sup>13</sup> A kind of sport or play with an oister shell or stone throwne into the water, and making circles yer it sinke, It is called a ducke and a drake, and a half-penie cake.

JOHN HIGGINS, tr., Nomenclator, p. 299. (1583)

Boys, with round stones, making ducks and drakes upon the sea.

JOHN FLORIO, Montaigne. Bk. i, ch. 48. (1603)

Florio's rendering of Livy's "mare apertum incessentes."

I will make duckes and drakes with this my gold.

UNKNOWN, Timon. Act v, sc. 5. (c. 1600)

To make ducks and drakes of money is to throw it away carelessly, like stones or oyster-shells.

Be idle; make ducks and drakes with shillings.

CHAPMAN, Eastward Hoe. Act i, sc. 1. (1605)

The poorest ship-boy might on the Thames make duckes and drakes with pieces of eight fetchd out of Spayne.

UNKNOWN, Dick of Devon. Act i, sc. 2. (c. 1626)

Play'd at duck and drake with gold, like pebbles.

JAMES SHIRLEY, Cupid and Death. (1653)

What figured slates are best to make

On wat'ry surface duck or drake.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, ii, iii, 301. (1664)

A miser has it in his power to make ducks and drakes of his guineas.

TUCKER, The Light of Nature, ii, 164. (1768)

He soon made ducks and drakes of what I gave him.

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 47. (1850)

They have our money—play ducks and drakes with it.

S. V. BENÉT, Western Star, p. 60. (1943)

<sup>1</sup> What do you say, . . . will you dine with me?—Will a duck swim?

SAMUEL LOVER, Handy Andy. Ch. 4. (1842)
Are you game for a day with the stag?—Will a duck swim?

WHYTE-MELVILLE, Satanella. Ch. 29. (1872)

Will a duck swim?

O. HENRY, The Coming-Out of Maggie. (1906)

<sup>2</sup> Frauds of which a lame duck on the stock exchange would be ashamed.

MACAULAY, Mirabeau. (Miscellany, ii, 95.) (1841) In England "lame duck" is Stock Exchange slang for a defaulter; in America it is newspaper slang for a defeated Congressman, but lame-duck Congresses were abolished in 1934.

I'll have no lame duck's daughter in my family.

THACKERAY, Vanity Fair. Ch. 13. (1848)

A receptacle of "lame ducks" or broken down politicians.

Congressional Globe, 14 Jan., 1863, p. 307/1.
President Lincoln selected Hale [John Parker Hale, appointed minister to Spain] out of general kindness and good will to the lame ducks.

E. L. PIERCE, Memoir and Letters of Charles Sumner. Vol. iv, p. 255. (1893)

The proposed Constitutional amendment . . . has been usually designated as the "lame-duck" amendment.

G. W. NORRIS, in The Independent, 21 Feb., 1925, p. 213/1.

<sup>3</sup> To play the duck. i. e., to duck the head. (De faire la cane.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 12. (1580) Montaigne is relating how Lorenzo de' Medici once saved his life by ducking when he saw a gun about to be discharged at him.

<sup>4</sup> Ducks fare well in the Thames.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 83. (1670)

<sup>5</sup> Are you the duck that runs the gospel-mill?

MARK TWAIN, Roughing It. Ch. 47. (1872)
Duck: fellow, rascal.

Lucky duck if they don't hang you.

MARK TWAIN, Life on the Mississippi. Ch. 24. (1883)

He was the duck that stole Paddy's horse.

KIRK MUNROE, The Golden Days of '49. Ch. 24. (1889)

Slosher's a slick duck.

W. H. SMITH, Promoters, p. 100. (1904)

She would be very lonely without her "sick duck."

ROBERT HERRICK, Homely Lilla, p. 227. (1923)

<sup>6</sup> The rabble rais'd its eyes—like ducks in thunder.

JOHN WOLCOT, Lyric Odes. No. vii. (1785)

Closed her eyes like a dying fowl—turned them up like a duck in a thunderstorm.

WALTER SCOTT, Peveril of the Peak. Ch. 11. (1823)

What are you turning your ear for, . . . like a duck in thunder.

MICHAEL SCOTT, Tom Cringle's Log. Ch. 9. (1829)

Turned up his eyes like a duck in thunder.

KINGSLEY, The Water-Babies, p. 188. (1863)

Look less like a duck in a thunderstorm.

JAMES PAYN, A Confidential Agent, iii, 161. (1880)

He winks and thinks like a duck i' thunner.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Glossary, p. 72. (1917)

KNEE-HIGH TO A DUCK, see under KNEE-HIGH.

DULLNESS

See also Stupidity

<sup>7</sup> It is to be noted that when any part of this paper appears dull, there is a design in it.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 38. (1709)

Authors have established it as a kind of rule that a man ought to be dull sometimes.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator, 23 July, 1711.

A late facetious writer who told the public that whenever he was dull they might be assured there was a design in it.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. v, ch. 1. (1749)

<sup>8</sup> Why, Sir, Sherry is dull, naturally dull; but it must have taken him a great deal of pains to become what we now see him. Such an excess of stupidity, Sir, is not in Nature.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, referring to Thomas Sheridan. See BOSWELL, Life, 28 July, 1763.

He is not only dull in himself, but the cause of dullness in others.

SAMUEL FOOTE, Remark, parodying Falstaff in SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, i, 2, 11. See under WIT. As quoted by BOSWELL, Life of Johnson, 1784. Powell, ed., iv, 178

<sup>9</sup> Dullness is sometimes a good defence against sharp wits. (Il suffit quelquefois d'être grossier pour n'être pas trompé par un habile homme.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 129. (1665)

<sup>10</sup> It is the dull man who is always sure, and the sure man who is always dull.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. ii, p. 101. (1920)

<sup>11</sup> Much was believ'd, but little understood, And to be dull was construed to be good.

POPE, An Essay on Criticism. Pt. iii, l. 130 (1709)
Born a Goddess, Dulness never dies.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. i, l. 18. (1728)

<sup>12</sup> Dull as a beetle.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 204. (1670)

Dull as a Dutchman.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 296. (1639)

He must be as dull as a Dutch commentator.

JENYNS, Imitation of Horace, ii, 1. (1747)

Dull as an alderman at church, or a fat lapdog after dinner.

THOMAS HOLCROFT, Duplicity. Act i, sc. 1. (1781)

The people . . . are "as dull as ditch-water."

W. H. MAXWELL, Sports and Adventures in Scotland, p. 17. (1844)

He'd be sharper than a serpent's tooth, if he wasn't as dull as ditch water.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. iii, ch. 10. (1865)

I find them as dull as ditch-water.

GEORGE TRAVERS, Mona Maclean, i, 203. (1893)

We'll be as dull as ditchwater.

CLYDE FITCH, The Climbers. Act i. (1901) See also O'HARA, Appointment in Samarra, p. 10. (1934) COLE, Toper's End, p. 134. (1942) CONNINGTON, No Past is Dead, p. 5. (1942) WENTWORTH, The Chinese Shawl, p. 254. (1943) etc., etc.

<sup>1</sup> Dullness is the coming of age of seriousness.

OSCAR WILDE, Phrases and Philosophies for the Use of the Young. (1891)

DUMB, see Mute

DUMPS

<sup>2</sup> Step out of these dreary dumps.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, i, 1, 391. (1593)
It is worth remarking that this is Shakespeare's only use of "dreary."

How now, daughter Katharine! in your dumps?

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, ii, 1, 286. (1594)

Dumps so dull and heavy.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, ii, 3, 73. (1598)

I wail, As one in doleful dumps.

RICHARD SHEALE (?), Ballad of Chevy Chace. (c. 1475)

At the first I was in my dumps.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 22. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Hee was in his most dumps.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 105. (1576)

Dolefulle dumps the mynde oppresse.

UNKNOWN, A Song to the Lute. (c. 1576) See PERCY, Reliques, ii, 5. Quoted by SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iv, 5, 129. (1595)

My female Friends, whose tender Hearts

Have better learn'd to act their Parts,

Receive the News in doleful Dumps.

SWIFT, On the Death of Dr. Swift, l. 225. (1731)

Tho' in the darkest Dumps you view 'em,

Stay but a Moment you'll see through 'em.

THOMAS SHERIDAN, A New Simile for the Ladies, l. 39. (1732) A note defines "dumps" as sullen fits.

DUN

<sup>3</sup> Ther gan our hoste for to jape and pleye,
And seyde, sirs, what! Dun is in the myre!

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Manciple's Prologue, l. 5. (c. 1386) "Dun" was formerly a quasi-proper name for a horse—any horse, not merely a dun one. "Dun is in the mire" was a proverbial phrase meaning that things are at a standstill or dead-lock.

Be his day kept, he rekketh nat a bene,
But elles, siker, "don is in the myre."

HOCCEVE, De Regimine Principum, 86. (1412)

For as wyth me, dun is in the myre,

She hath me stoynd and brought me to bay.

JOHN CAPRAVE, Life of St. Katharine of Alexandria, ii, 1046. (c. 1440)

Dun is in the myre, dame, reche me my spur.

SKELTON, A Garlande of Laurell, l. 1433. (1523)

If thou art dun, we'll draw thee from the mire.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 4, 41. (1595)

Then draw Dun out of the mire,

And throw the clog into the fire.

JAMES SHIRLEY, St. Patrick Was for Ireland.

(1640) "Dun out of the mire" was an old Christmas game, in which a heavy log was lifted and carried off by the players.

<sup>4</sup> Tut! dun's the mouse.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 4, 40. (1595)

I say duns the mouse, and welcome, my bullies.

A. H. BULLEN, Old Plays: Every Woman in Her Humour, iv, 1. (1609)

Why then 'tis done, and dun's the mouse.

UNKNOWN, Two Merry Milkmaids. (1620)

Dun as a mouse.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 283. (1678)

DUST

<sup>5</sup> Excuse our dust.

PHILIP BARRY, You and I. Act ii. (1923)

Excuse my dust.

DOROTHY PARKER, Her Own Epitaph. (c. 1930)

<sup>6</sup> Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return.
(Pulvis es, et in pulverem reverteris.)

Old Testament: Genesis, iii, 19. (c. 550 B.C.)

All are of the dust, and all turn to dust again. (De terra facta sunt, et in terram pariter revertuntur.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, iii, 20. (c. 250 B.C.)

They die, and return to their dust. (Deficient, et in pulverem suum revertentur.)

Old Testament: Psalms, civ, 29. (c. 250 B.C.)

We are but dust and shadow. (Pulvis et umbra sumus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 7, l. 16. (23 B.C.)

The earth takes back everything which it has brought forth. (Capit omnia tellus, quae genuit.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. vii, l. 818. (c. A.D. 60)

We are all made of the same dust. (πάντα μία κόβρις.)

LUCIAN. (c. A.D. 150) The ascription is by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 27, who gives the Latin, "Omnia idem pulvis," but undoubtedly Lucian was merely quoting a proverb already old.

Golden lads and girls all must,

As chimney-sweepers, come to dust.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, iv, 2, 262. (1609)

We turn to dust, and all our mightiest works
Die too.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 531. (1784)

Yes, all men are dust, But some are gold-dust.

J. A. SHEDD, Salt from My Attic, p. 45. (1928)
See also under IMMORTALITY.

<sup>1</sup> This . . . hath raised no little dust in the Church.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Cases of Conscience, p. 220 (1649)

Raise a Dust about nothing.

THOMAS BROWN, tr., Fresny's Amusements, 118. (1700)

Mr. Buck . . . will kick up a dust.

ARTHUR MURPHY, The Gray's Inn Journal. No. 50. (1753)

Much learned dust Involves the combatants.

WILLIAM COWPER, The Task, iii, 161. (1784)

<sup>2</sup> Then [Walker] up and dusted out.

BRET HARTE, East and West Poems, p. 18. (1871)

I guess the little cuss will git up and dust.

JOAQUIN MILLER, First Fam'lies of the Sierras, xvi, 136. (1876)

To have it get up and dust . . . makes you rave.

R. V. BURDETTE, Hawk-Eyes, p. 96. (1879)

I dusted around pretty lively, an' inside of an hour was back with the nurse.

E. N. WESTCOTT, David Harum, p. 333. (1898)

Davy Crockett dusted for the house.

C. E. MULFORD, The Orphan, p. 167. (1908)

<sup>3</sup> Fall headlong in the dust and bite the earth. (πρηνέες ἐν κονίῃσιν ὁδὰς λαζολατο γαῖαν.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ii, l. 418. (c. 850 B. C.) Repeated frequently with minor variations.

Once for all he has bitten the dust. (Humum semel ore momordit.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xi, l. 418. (19 B. C.)

He bites the gory dust. (Sanguinis ille vomens rivos cadit.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xi, l. 668. (19 B. C.)

He lies biting the earth. (Terram ore momordit.)

ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 38. (1511)

First Odus falls, and bites the bloody sand.

POPE, tr., Iliad. Bk. v, l. 51. (1718)

Soon a King shall bite the ground.

JOHN GAY, Poems. Ode viii. (c. 1765)

The foremost Tartar bites the ground.

LORD BYRON, The Giaour. Sec. 20. (1813)

She had yielded and kissed the dust.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, The Last Chronicle of Barset. Bk. ii, ch. 56. (1867)

Fall round him to the earth and bite the dust.

W. C. BRYANT, tr., Iliad. Bk. i, l. 55. (1870)

Several of our family had bitten the grass.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), A Technical Error. (1910)

Better bite the carpet, a man, than fly, a coward.

SHAW, The Admirable Bashville. Act ii. (1926)

The treacherous redskins always bite the dust.

S. V. BENÉT, Western Star, p. 70. (1943) The phrase "Bite the dust" acquired its vogue in America, not from Homer, but from its frequent appearance in the Nick Carter Library, fifty years ago. "Another redskin bit the dust" was an ever-recurring announcement whenever the hero's pistol spoke.

<sup>4</sup> They shall . . . lick up the dust of thy feet. (Pulverem pedum tuorum lingent.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xlix, 23. (c. 725 B. C.)

His enemies shall lick the dust. (Inimici eius terram lingent.)

Old Testament: Psalms, lxxii, 9. (c. 350 B. C.)

Any man who calls sop gravy has got to eat dust or 'pologize.

ELIZABETH B. CUSTER, Following the Guidon, p. 32. (1890)

You don't often lick the dust.

P. A. TAYLOR, The Deadly Nightshade, p. 114. (1941)

<sup>5</sup> When ye depart thence, shake off the dust under your feet for a testimony against them. (ἐκπορευόμενοι ἐκείθεν ἐκτινάξατε τὸν χοῦν τὸν ὑποκάτω τῶν ποδῶν.)

New Testament: Mark, vi, 11. (c. A. D. 55) The Vulgate is, "Excutite pulverem de pedibus vestris." Repeated in Matthew, x, 14. (c. A. D. 65)

<sup>6</sup> He threw dust in the eyes of the jury. (Tenebras offudisse iudicibus.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutiones Oratoriae. Bk. ii, ch. 17, sec. 21. (c. A. D. 80) Referring to Cicero.

To sprinkle dust in the eyes. (Pulverem ob oculos adspargere.)

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae. Bk. v, ch. 21, sec. 4. (c. A. D. 150) The Germans say, "Einem Sand in die Augen streuen" (To throw sand in one's eyes).

To throw dust in the eyes. (Pulverem oculis offundere.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. ix, No. 43. (1523) "A useful stratagem in war," says Erasmus, "is to put an army in such a position that in marching up to the enemy, the dust may be driven in their faces, and from this the adage is supposed to have taken its origin." Another explanation is that the proverb refers to a trick of gladiators in the arena.

They do nothing else but raise a dust to do out their owne eies.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, i, 276. (1581) Pettie, tr.

To cast dust into a man's eyes.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 18. (1633) To mislead by misrepresentation.

To throw dust in the eyes. (Jetter de la poudre aux yeux.)

FLEURY DE BELLINGEN, Etymologie des Proverbes Français, p. 320. (1656) Bellinghen explains, "This proverb originates from those who ran at the Olympic games; they started all together at a signal. The course was covered with very fine sand, so that the leaders in the race kicked up the dust into the eyes of those who followed."

To throw dust in the eyes of censure is proper.

TAVERNER, The Artful Wife. Act. i. (1718)

It required a long discourse to throw dust in the eyes of common sense.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Works, iv, 79. (1767)

<sup>7</sup> As you dust along the turnpike, you can see [the road].

BENJAMIN F. TAYLOR, The World on Wheels. Vol. ii, ch. 7. (1874)

The Rambler . . . don't take the dust of anything afloat.

O. HENRY, Cabbages and Kings, p. 50. (1904)
We're off to South America, and you won't see us for the dust.

EDGAR WALLACE, The Clue of the Twisted Candle, p. 91. (1916)

<sup>1</sup> When a man dies he kicks the dust.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1. (1854) Thoreau is speaking of an auction, where all the dust-covered trumpery of a dead man was brought out of the attic to be sold.

DUTCH

<sup>2</sup> The Dutchman drinks his buttons off, the English doublet and all away.

HENRY GLAPTHORNE, The Ladies Priveledge. Act iii. (1640) Quoted as "a common proverb."

The Dutchman drinketh pure wine in the morning, at noon wine without water, in the evening as it comes from the butt.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 20. (1659)
Because he drinks, he gets in Dutch.

MARGARET FISHBACK, Case History. (1940)

DUTCH COURAGE, see under COURAGE.

<sup>3</sup> If there's a better-dressed man in Europe, . . . I'm a Dutchman.

W. M. THACKERAY, Ravenswing. Ch. 3. (1837)

If that don't do it, I'm a Dutchman!

A. R. SMITH, Christopher Tadpole. Ch. 58. (1848)

If there is as much gold on the ground of New South Wales as will make me a wedding-ring, I am a Dutchman.

CHARLES READE, It Is Never too Late to Mend. Ch. 52. (1856)

If I don't come out to the United States next year, I'm a Dutchman.

LESLIE STEPHEN, Letter. (1866) See MAITLAND, Life and Letters, x, 194.

<sup>4</sup> Our cargoes of meat, drink, and cloaths beat the Dutch.

UNKNOWN, Revolutionary Song. (1775) "It beats the Dutch is an expression often heard in New York and New England, to anything astonishing. The earliest instance of its occurrence that I have met with is in a Revolutionary song written during the siege of Boston in 1775."—JOHN BARTLETT, Dictionary of Americanisms: Dutch. Bartlett found the song in the New England Historical Register for April, 1857, p. 191.

That Amanda the fair, who really beats the Dutch

T. G. FESSENDEN, Poems, p. 18. (c. 1800)

"Well, that beats the Dutch!" laughed Abner.

WILL N. HARBEN, Abner Daniel, p. 279. (1902)

You go off the handle to beat the Dutch.

FRANK NORRIS, The Pit. Ch. 9. (1902)

You women do beat the Dutch.

MARY WILKINS FREEMAN, By the Light of the Soul, p. 277. (1906)

It beats the Dutch.

ZELDA POPKIN, No Crime for a Lady, p. 94. (1942)

DUTY

<sup>5</sup> No phase of life can be free from duty. (Nulla vitae pars . . . vacare officio potest.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 2, sec. 4. (c. 45 B. C.)

Let regard for duty control thy mind. (Mentemque domet respectus honesti.)

CLAUDIAN, Panegyricus de Quarto Consulatu Honorii Augusti, l. 268. (A. D. 398)

<sup>6</sup> If a man put duty first and success after, will not that improve his character?

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xii, ch. 21. (c. 500 B. C.)

<sup>7</sup> Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man. (Deum time, et mandata eius observa: hec est enim omnis homo.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, xii, 13. (c. 250 B. C.)

<sup>8</sup> What I must do is all that concerns me, not what the people think.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Self-Reliance. (1841)

To live without duties is obscene.

EMERSON, English Traits. Ch. 11. (1856)

<sup>9</sup> So nigh is grandeur to our dust,
So near is God to man,

When Duty whispers low, Thou must,
The youth replies, I can.

R. W. EMERSON, Voluntaries. Pt. iii. (1867)

When Duty Whispers low, Thou must, this erstwhile youth replies, I just can't.

OGDEN NASH, Kind of an Ode to Duty. (1940)

<sup>10</sup> Nor is a duty beneficial because it is commanded, but it is commanded because it is beneficial.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739

<sup>11</sup> What is your duty? Whatever the day demands. (Was aber ist deine Pflicht? Die Förderung des Tages.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. (1819)

<sup>12</sup> I began to feel that dull, leaden, soul-depressing sensation known as the sense of duty.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), No Story. (1909)

<sup>13</sup> The right and practical divinity is this: Believe in Christ, and do thy duty in that state of life to which God has called thee.

MARTIN LUTHER, Table-Talk. Ch. 7. (1569)

Do your duty, and leave the rest to the gods (Faites votre devoir, et laissez faire aux dieux.)

PIERRE CORNEILLE, Horace. Act ii, last line. (1640)

To do my duty in that state of life unto which it shall please God to call me.

Book of Common Prayer: Catechism. (1661)

Thanks to the gods! my boy has done his duty.

JOSEPH ADDISON, Cato. Act iv, sc. 4. (1712)

I've done my duty, and I've done no more.

HENRY FIELDING, Tom Thumb the Great. Act i, sc. 2. (1730)

Only aim to do your duty, and mankind will give you credit where you fail.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, The Rights of British America. (1774)

Thank God, I have done my duty.

HORATIO NELSON, last words. (1805) See HUME, History of England.

Here lies Henry Lawrence, who tried to do his duty.

SIR HENRY LAWRENCE, Epitaph. (1857) Lawrence, one of the heroes of the defence of Lucknow, desired this sentence engraved on his tomb.

Like Lawrence, I have tried to do my duty.

GENERAL CHARLES GEORGE GORDON, Postscript, to his last letter from Khartoum, 29 Dec., 1884.

It is my duty, and I will.

W. S. GILBERT, Captain Reece. (c. 1870)

It was my duty, and I did.

ELIZABETH DALY, Murders in Volume 2. (1941)

Where duetie can haue no shewe, honestie can beare no sway.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 195. (1579)

Beauty, strength, youth, are flowers but fading seen;

Duty, faith, love, are roots, and ever green.

GEORGE PEELE, A Farewell to Arms. (a. 1600)

Knowledge is a steep which few may climb,
While Duty is a path which all my tread.

WILLIAM MORRIS, The Epic of Hades: Heré. (1870)

I slept, and dreamed that life was Beauty;

I woke, and found that life was Duty.

ELLEN STURGIS HOOPER, Beauty and Duty.

First published in The Dial, July, 1840.

Do well the duty that lies before you. (τὸ παρὸν εὖ ποιεῖν.)

PITTACUS, Maxim. (c. 675 B.C.) See DIOGENES

LAERTIUS, Pittacus, i, 77.

The path of duty lies in what is near, and men seek for it in what is remote.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. iv, pt. i, ch. 11. (c. 300 B.C.)

Do the duty that lies nearest thee.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. ii, ch. 9. (1833)

All wise men should attend to their duty and do it. (Omnis sapientis | suum officium aequom est colere et facere.)

PLAUTUS, Stichus, l. 39. (c. 200 B.C.)

A shamefaced man finds some honor in remembering his duty. (Is est honos homini pudico, meminisse officium suum.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 697. (c. 194 B.C.)

I do perceive here a divided duty.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, i, 3, 181. (1605)

Divided duties are seldom split in the middle.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 139. (1940)

Duty is what one expects from others.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act ii. (1893)

Duty. That which sternly impels us in the direction of profit, along the line of desire.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

Stern Daughter of the Voice of God! O Duty! WORDSWORTH, Ode to Duty, l. 1. (1805)

O Duty, Why hast thou not the visage of a sweetie or a cutie?

OGDEN NASH, Kind of an Ode to Duty. (1940)

DWARF

A Dwarf threatens Hercules.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 85. (1732)

An intelligent dwarf is superior to an ignorant giant.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. i, Apol. 3. (c. 1258)

A dwarf is not tall, even though he stand on a mountain; a colossus keeps his height, even though he stand in a well. (Non est magnus pumilio, licet in monte constiterit; colossus magnitudinem suam servabit, etiam si steterit in puteo.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxvi, sec. 31. (c. A.D. 65) See also under GREATNESS.

Pigmies are pigmies still, tho' perch'd on alps;
And pyramids are pyramids in vales.

EDWARD YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Nt. vi, l. 309. (1742)

Dwarfs standing on the shoulders of giants see farther than the giants themselves. (Pigmaei gigantum humeris impositi plusquam ipsi gigantes vident.)

DIDACUS CASTELLUS, Tratado de Cuentas.

(1551) The attribution is by BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader. (1621) Burton's rendering is, "I say with Didacus Stella, 'A dwarf standing on the shoulders of a giant may see farther than a giant himself.'" The French say, "Celui qui est sur épaules d'un géant voit plus loin que celui qui le porte" (He who is on a giant's shoulders sees farther than he who carries him).

A Dwarf on a Giant's shoulder, sees further of the two.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 53. (1640)

A proverb . . . that a child on a giant's shoulder may see farther than the giant.

RICHARD WHITLOCK, Zootomia, p. 218. (1654)

For as our modern wits behold,
Mounted a pick-back on the old,
Much farther off, much farther he,
Rais'd on his ancient beast, could see.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto ii, l. 71. (1663)

A dwarf sees farther than the giant when he has the giant's shoulders to mount on.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Friend. Vol. i, p. 8. (1809)

E

EAGLE

<sup>1</sup> This is another grief to me, to die with my own feathers. (καὶ τοῦτο μοι ἑτέρα λύπη, τὸ τοῖς ἰδίοις πτεροῖς ἐναποθνήσκειν.)

AESOP, Fables: The Eagle and the Arrow. (c. 570 B.C.) An eagle, sitting on a rock seeking to capture a hare, is shot with an arrow plumed with feathers from his own wings. Repeated many times in classical literature, until "The eagle shot by means of its own feathers" passed into a proverb.

Even so is he Libyan fable famed abroad: the eagle, pierced by the bow-speed shaft, looked at the feathered arrow and said, "Thus, not by others, but by means of our own plumage, are we slain." (τάδ' οὐχ ὑπ' ἄλλων, ἀλλὰ τοῖς αὐτῶν πτεροῖς | ἀλίσκόμεσθα.)

AESCHYLUS, Myrmidones. Frag. 63, Smyth. (c. 458 B.C.)

These shafts of ridicule are winged by nought
But our own plumes, as Aeschylus would say.
(ταυτὶ μὲν ἠκάσμεσθα κατὰ τὸν Διόχυλον τάδ' οὐχ ὑπ' ἄλλων ἀλλὰ τοῖς αὐτῶν πτεροῖς.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Birds, l. 807. (414 B.C.)

He is killed twice who is killed with his own weapons. (Bis interimitur, qui suis armis perit.)

SENECA. (C. A. D. 64) ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, i, 96, cites this proverb as a chapter heading of one of Seneca's epistles, and says that it derives from Aesop's fable.

We be taken with our owne fethers. (Nostris ipsorum alis capimur.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. vi, No. 52. (1508) TAVERNER, tr., fo. 58. (1550) Taverner says: "This prouerbe . . . is lyke to the englyshe prouerbe: hath made a rod for his owne arse."

That which greeveth me most, is that (as the proverbe saith) shee useth mine owne fethers against mee.

THOMAS UNDERDOWNE, Heliodorus. Bk. ii, p. 74. (1587)

The eagle's fate and mine are one,
Which, on the shaft that made him die,
Espied a feather of his own,
Wherewith he wont to soar so high.

EDMUND WALLER, To a Lady Singing a Song of His Composing. (c. 1645)

Like a young eagle, who has lent his plume
To fledge the shaft by which he meets his doom.

THOMAS MOORE, Corruption, l. 95. (1806)

So the struck eagle, stretch'd upon the plain, . . .
View'd his own feather on the fatal dart,
And wing'd the shaft that quiver'd in his heart.

LORD BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, l. 841. (1809)

We are often shot with our own feathers.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 332. (1710) See also under RETRIBUTION.

<sup>2</sup> An eagle in the clouds. (ἐν νεφέλαισιν αἰετὸς.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Knights, l. 1013. (424 B.C.)
Of something out of reach.

<sup>3</sup> When thou seest an eagle, thou seest a portion of Genius; lift up thy head!

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

<sup>4</sup> Ther mighte men the royal egle finde,
That with his sharpe look perceth the sonne.

CHAUCEUR (?), The Parlement of Foules, l. 330. (c. 1382)

No Bird can looke against the Sunne but those that be bredde of the Eagle.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 87. (1579)

<sup>5</sup> The eagle doesn't chase flies. (αἰετὸς οὐ θυπεύει τὰς μύϊας.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iii, cent. ii, No. 65. (1508) A Greek proverb, which Erasmus Latins, "Aquila non captat muscas." A variant is, ἔλεφας μὲν οὐχ ἀλίσκει (The elephant doesn't try to catch a mouse), the Latin being, "Elephantus non capit murem." (ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ix, 70.) Still another is, "The Indian elephant cares naught for the gnat." The Italians say, "L'aquila non fa guerra ai ranocchi" (The eagle doesn't make war against frogs).

As the eagle regards earthworms. (αἰετὸς θρίπας ὀρῶν.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ix, No. 71. i. c. with contempt. The Latin is, "Aquila thripas aspiciens."

Now I se Aquila non capit muscas.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Letter-Book, p. 50. (1573)

It is well saide, That the Egle catcheth not flies.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 200. (1574) Pettie, tr.

The eagle often snappeth at the Fly.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 78. (1579)

The eagle suffers little birds to sing,
And is not careful what they mean thereby.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, iv, 4, 83. (1593)
That proverb in this point might make thee wise,
That princely eagles scorn the catching flies.

ROWLANDS, Guy, Earle of Warwicke. (1607)

Eagles stoop not to flies.

JAMES SHIRLEY, The Opportunitie. Act v, sc. 2. (1640)

The eagle flies not but at noble game.

JOSEPH GLANVILLE, Scepsis Scientifica, 211. (1665)

Eagles catch nae flies.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 234. (1678)

Eagles don't catch flies.

H. C. BAILEY, Nobody's Vineyard, p. 7. (1942)

<sup>6</sup> Nor do fierce eagles bring forth the peaceful dove. (Nec imbellem feroces | progenerant aquilae columbam.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 4, l. 31. (23 B.C.)

'Tis true; the raven doth not hatch a lark.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, ii, 3, 149. (1593)

Doves beget doves; and eagles, eagles.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Honest Man's Fortune. Act iii, sc. 1. (1613)

<sup>1</sup> They shall mount up with wings as eagles.
(Assument pennas sicut aquilae.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xl, 31. (c. 725 B.C.)

<sup>2</sup> The very feather of an Eagle, is of force to consume the Beetle.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England: Epistle Dedicatory, p. 214. (1580)

<sup>3</sup> Wheresoever the carcass is, there will the eagles be gathered together. (ἐὰν ᾖ τὸ πτώμα, ἐκεῖ συναχθήσονται οἱ ἀετοί.)

New Testament: Matthew, xxiv, 28. (C. A. D.

65) The Vulgate is, "Ubi cumque fuerit corpus, illic congregabuntur et aquilae."

Where the carcass is, the ravens will gather.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 563. (1855)

Where the carcass is, there will the eagles be gathered.

BERNARD SHAW, Major Barbara. Act iii. (1905)

"Where the eagles are gathered together," he said. "I think it's vultures in the revised version," said Cynthia.

FRANCIS BEEDING, The Eight Crooked Trenches, p. 189. (1936) Cynthia is right.

<sup>4</sup> An eagle among birds. (αετὸς ἐν πτανοῖς.)

PINDAR, Nemean Odes. Ode iii, l. 140. (475 B.C.)

<sup>5</sup> America is fitly represented by an Eagle, which Royal Bird is very frequent there.

SAMUEL SEWALL, Phaenomena Quaedam Apocalypticæ, p. 8. (1697)

The Eagle of Freedom with rapture behold,
Overshadow our land with his plumage of gold.

T. G. FESSENDEN, Poems, p. 4. (1798)

Under the auspicious wings of the American Eagle.

R. MCNEMAR, A Kentucky Revival, p. 51. (1807)

Sich a yell as that would . . . make the United States eagle scream.

JOHN S. ROBB, Streaks of Squatter Life, p. 97. (1847)

The plainest print cannot be read through a gold eagle.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Speech, Springfield, Ill., 26 June, 1857.

"The American nation in the Sixth Ward is a fine people," he says. "They love th' eagle," he says, "on the back iv a dollar."

F. P. DUNNE, Mr. Dooley in Peace and War: Oratory on Politics. (1890)

<sup>6</sup> Gnats are unnoted wheresoe'er they fly,
But eagles gazed upon with every eye.

SHAKESPEARE, Rape of Lucrece, l. 1014. (1594)

<sup>7</sup> The old age of an eagle. (Aquilae senectus.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 521. (163 B.C.) See under AGE.

<sup>8</sup> Eagles commonly fly alone: they are crows, daws, and starlings that flock together.

JOHN WEBSTER, The Dutchesse of Malfy. Act v, sc. 2. (1623)

Eagles fly alone.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 291. (1639)
Eagles flie alone, and they are but sheep that always flock together.

NICHOLAS LING, ed., Politeuphuia, p. 185. (1669)
Eagles fly alone, but sheep flock together.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 346. (1855)
YOU ARE TEACHING AN EAGLE TO FLY, see under

LABOR LOST.

THE WREN ON THE EAGLE'S WING, see under WREN.

EAR

See also Eye and Ear

<sup>9</sup> You'll be Midases, if only you've the asses' ears. (Μῖδαις μὲν οὖν, ἢν ὦτ' ὄνου λάβητε.)

ARISTOPHANES, Plutus, l. 287. (388 B.C.) "To have asses' ears, like Midas" (Μῖδαις ὄνου ὦτα ἔχει), is a proverb which has been variously explained: (1) DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, vi, 73, says that it was because he had many spies and nothing escaped him; (2) SCHOLIAST to Plutus says that he was transformed into an ass by Dionysos. The first explanation is probably the correct one. A related Greek proverb is κυρὸς οὐς (You have a dog's ear), meaning either a very keen sense of hearing, or a tendency to listen to gossip, from the way in which a dog pricks up its ears when it hears something that interests it.

What man is there who has not asses' ears? (Aurículas asini quis non habet?)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. i, l. 121. (C. A. D. 58)

And sooth to tellen, also she

Had also fele up-standing eres.

CHAUCER (?), The Hous of Fame. Bk. iii, l. 299. (c. 1383)

You have a quick ear.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, iv, 2, 63. (1594)

<sup>10</sup> A man should not permit his ears to hear improper words, because, before all other members of the human body, his ears, being thin and soft, will be burned first.

Babylonian Talmud: Kethuboth, fo. 5b. (c. 450)

<sup>11</sup> An attentive ear is the desire of a wise man.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), iii, 29. (c. 190 B.C.)

<sup>12</sup> My ears ring with inward humming. (Sonitu suapte tintinant aures.)

CATULLUS, Poems. No. li, l. 10. (c. 57 B.C.)

It is acknowledged that the absent feel a presentiment of remarks about themselves by the ringing of their ears. (Absentes tinnitu aurium praesentire sermones de se receptum est.)

PLINY, Naturalis Historia. Bk. xxviii, sec. 2. (A. D. 77)

Our ears are tingling. (ἐβόμβει τὰ ὦτα ἡμῖν.)

LUCIAN, Dialogus Meretricius. (C. A. D. 180) As quoted by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iv, 37, with the Latin, "Num nobis tinniebant aures." Parmenio's ears were tingling because his mistress was talking of him. Erasmus quotes

Plautus and Pliny as maintaining that if the right ear burns it indicates that people are praising its possessor, and if the left ear burns that they are calumniating him. He also quotes from THEOCRITUS, iii, 37, ἀλλεται ὀφθαλμός μεν ὁ δεξιός (My right eye itches), with the connotation, "I'm going to have some luck," still in use, as is a third saying, "My elbow itches, I shall be kissed by a fool."

And we shal speke of thee som-what, I trowe,
When thou art goon, to do thyne eres glowe!

CHAUCER (?). Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 1021. (c. 1380)

I suppose that daie hir eares might well glow,
For all the towne talkt of hir, hy and low.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1546)

Whose eares I perceiue to glow, and hearts to be grieved at that which I haue already vttered.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 54. (1579)

Mine eares gloed, and my heart was galled to heare the abuses that reygne in Athens.

JOHN LYL, Euphues, l. 153.

What fire is in mine ears? Can this be true?

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, iii, 1, 107. (1598)

One Eare tingles; some there be,
That are snarling now at me.

ROBERT HERRICK, On Himselfe. (1648)

When our cheek burneth, or eare tingleth, we usually say that some body is talking of us.

JOHN AUBREY, Gentilisme and Judaisme, p. 110. (1687)

Lord Sparkish: Miss, didn't your left ear burn last night?

Miss Notable: Pray why, my lord?

Lord Sparkish: Because I was then in some company where you were extolled to the skies, I assure you.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

I dine with Dolby, . . . and if your ears do not burn from six to nine this evening, then the Atlantic is a non-conductor.

CHARLES DICKENS, Letters, iii, 256. (1868)

Wide ears and a short tongue.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 190. (1633)

Wide ears and a short tongue is best.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Wide. (1736)

The ear is the back-door for truth but the front-door for lies. (Es el oído la puerta segunda de la verdad, y principal de la mentira.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim
80. (1647)

Hee ought to stop his eares, as Uliesses did against the song of the Marmaites.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i,
p. 52. (1574) Pettie, tr.

I'll stop mine ears against the mermaid's song.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, iii, 2,
169. (1592) In the same scene (l. 45) is the phrase, "O, train me not, sweet mermaid, with thy note." The early use of "mermaid" for "siren" was unusual, and it is probable that Shakespeare got it from Pettie.

Things committed to the eares, are for the most part proclaimed in the streets.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i,
p. 71. (1574) Pettie, tr.

She began . . . to relent and to give to them no deffe ere.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, p. 24. (1548)

[He] for a long time gave the deafe eare . . .
unto them.

PHILEMON HOLLAND, tr., Livy, xxxiii, 47. (1600)

She had turned a deaf ear to [their] persuasions.

CONNOP THIRLWALL, History of Greece, i, 7. (1835)

TO SING TO DEAF EARS, see under LABOR LOST.

His Mastership may go shake his eares elsewhere.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Letter-Book, p. 42. (1573)

Go shake your ears.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, ii, 3, 134. (1599)

Maria to Malvolio.

Turn him off . . . to shake his ears.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, iv, 1, 26. (1599)

They shut their gates against him, and made him go shake his ears, and to shift for a lodging.

HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. i, sec. 1, let. 21. (1620)

And you may goe and shake your eares,

Who had, and could not hold it.

THOMAS WRIGHT, ed., Political Ballads, p. 69. (1647)

If this be true, as it appears,

Why dost not rouse and shake thy Ears?

THOMAS D'URFEY, Collin's Walk, iv, 177. (1690)

March off and leave him to shake his ears.

FRANCES SHERIDAN, The Dupe. Act i, sc. 3. (1764)

You may go and shake your ears. Spoken to one who has lost his money.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs, p. 215. (1813)

The wisest Oeconomy maketh especiall account of three singular members, a marchants eare; a pigges mouth; and an Asses back.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Pierces Supererogation, p.
166. (1593) "Merchants' ears," to affect not to hear.

I see that seruants must haue Marchants eares

JOHN LYL, The Woman in the Moone. Act i,
sc. 1. (1595)

I put on merchants Eares, not vouchsafing to give them the hearing.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Aleman's Guzman, ii, 7. (1622)

You had on your haruest eares, thicke of hearyng.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

Thine eares be on a pilgrimage . . . as they say commonly, thou hast on thy haruest eares. Vestrae peregrinantur aures.

JOHN WITHALS, Dictionary, p. 46. (1608)

You hearken not at all; you have on your harvest ears.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis,
p. 715. (1681) See under DEAFNESS

1 Who euer with you any tyme therein weares,
He must both tell you a tale, and finde you eares.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)
A man must tell you tales and find you ears.

FRANCIS BACON, Promus. No. 673. (c. 1594)
Tell you a tale, and find you ears.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 195. (1670)
What, miss! must I tell you a story and find you ears?

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

2 There is always someone dinning in my well-rinsed ear. (Est mihi purgatam crebro qui personet aurem.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 7: (20 B. C.)

3 I offer my ear to touch. (Ego vero oppono auriculam.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, No. ix, l. 76. (35 B. C.)
A bystander, consenting to act as witness, allowed the litigant to touch the tip of his ear—an old custom referred to by Plautus.
Hercules tweaks him by the ear. (Hercules auriculam illi tetigit.)

SENECA (?), Ludus de Morti Claudii. Sec. 9.
(c. A. D. 55) To show that he was his witness.
To twitch the ear. (Aurem vellere.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent, vii, No. 40.
(1523) An old way of admonishing one in a friendly manner. A habit of Napoleon.

4 "I can cut your acquaintance . . . if you're really on your ear."—"I'm on my ear," said Ricker.

W. D. HOWELLS, A Modern Instance. Ch. 29.
(1882)

It was evident that the irate old rascal was "on his ear."

W. F. CODY, The Wild West, p. 521. (1888)

I only hope . . . [he] won't get on his ear.

HARRIS, Tents of Wickedness, p. 255. (1907)

5 The ear trieth words, as the mouth tasteth meat. (Auris enim verba probat, et guttur escas gustu diiudicat.)

Old Testament: Job, xxxiv, 3. (c. 400 B. C.)

6 One takes the people by the ears as one takes a pot by the handles. (On prend le peuple par les oreilles comme on fait un pot par les anses.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français. (1859)
Swift cites a similar saying, which he refers to as "the old Slavonian proverb," "Men and asses must be held by the ears."

7 You're bound to get your ears slapped back.

McKNIGHT MALMAR, Never Say Die, p. 21.
(1943)

8 He that hath ears to hear, let him hear. (ὁ ἔχει ὅρα ακούειν ἀκούτω.)

New Testament: Mark, iv, 9. (A. D. 55) The Vulgate is, "Qui habet aures audendi, audiat."

He that hath ears to hear, let him stuff them with cotton.

THACKERAY, The Virginians. Ch. 32. (1858)

9 I was all eare.

JOHN MILTON, Comus, l. 560. (1634)

He was all ear to her charming voice.

WILLIAM BECKFORD, tr., Valhek, p. 88. (1786)

I am all ears.

TROLLOPE, The Belton Estate. Ch. 15. (1865)

10 Of Forests, and enchantments drear,

Where more is meant then meets the ear.

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 120. (1632) See also under EYE.

11 He told this tale to one that had no eares to heare.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 149. (1576)

12 Let the ear despise nothing, nor yet believe anything forthwith. (Nil spernat auris, nec tamen credat statim.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. iii, fab. 10, l. 51. (c. 25 B. C.)

13 Our ears are both in use. (Ambo operam auribus.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 774. (c. 200 B. C.)

I have full use of my ears. (Ego recte meis auribus utor.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 799. (c. 200 B. C.)

14 My ears I surrender to your suzerainty. (Auris meas profecto dedo in dicionem tuam.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 954. (c. 200 B. C.)

I lend you my ears to use. (Auris tibi contra utendas dabo.)

ENNIUS, Telemon. Frag. 324, Loeb. (c. 180 B. C.)

Lend favourable ears to our request.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iii, 7, 101. (1592)

Rise and lend thine ear.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iv, 2, 80. "Lend thine ear" repeated in The Taming of the Shrew, iv, 1, 62.

Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, iii, 2, 78. (1599)

To my unfolding lend your prosperous ear.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, i, 3, 245. (1605)

Then lend me your ears.

DEKKER, Honest Whore. Act i, sc. 1. (1605)

Hang your ears this way.

JONSON, Magnetick Lady. Act i, sc. 7. (1632)

15 His talk has got my ears on end. (Suo mihi hic sermone arrexat aures.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 1293. (c. 200 B. C.)

They stand with ears pricked up. (Arrectis auribus adstant.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 152. (19 B. C.)

With ears erect. (Auribus erectis.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, ii, 56. (1505)

Prick up your ears. (Secouez dehait vos aureilles.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, Prologue. (1548)

Like unback'd colts, they prick'd their ears.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, iv, 1, 176. (1611)

A proverbial saying is, "You prick your ears like an old sow in beans."

PARISH AND SHAW, A Dictionary of the Kentish Dialect, p. 121. (1887)

<sup>1</sup> The things he says flow right through the ears. (Quae dicuntur superfluent aures.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. ii, ch. 5, sec. 13. (c. A. D. 80)

For alle yede out at oon ere
That in that other she dide lere.

CHAUCER (?), The Romaunt of the Rose, l. 5151. (c. 1365)

Oon ere it herde, at the other out it wente.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iv, l. 434. (c. 1380)

Went in the tone eare, and out at the tother.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)
[A sermon] goes in at one eare and out at the other.

ARTHUR GOLDING, Calvin on Deuteronomy, xxi, 125. (1583)

It goes in at one ear, and out at the other.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 64. (c. 1595)

But she might full as well her lecture smother,
For ent'ring one eare, it goes out at t'other.

Ar't Asleepe Husband? Frontispiece. (1640)

All they can say goes in at one ear and out at t'other.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

A world of thanks, which would only have entered at one ear and gone out at the other.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, tr., Gil Blas, iii, 182. (1750)

He comes in at one year, To go out by the other!

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to the Late Lord Mayor, l. 116. (c. 1825)

It came in at one ear, and went out at the other.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 21. (1843)

In at one ear and out at the other. (Chê chih êrh to chin, na chih êrh to ch'u.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2080. (1875) The Italians say, "Dentro da un orecchio e fuori dall' altro," and the phrase is common to most European languages.

<sup>2</sup> Ears are eyes to the blind. (φωρῆ γὰρ ὀφθαλμοί.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus Coloneus, l. 138. (c. 408 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> Up to the ears. (μέχρι τῶν ἀμφοτέρων.)

SUIDAS, Lexicon. (c. 950)

In love up to the eares.

BARNFIELD, The Affectionate Shepherd. (1594)

<sup>4</sup> One cannot hear one's own ears for you.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

<sup>5</sup> He set a yonge lyon and a very eger dogge together by the eares.

RICHARD TAVERNER, The Garden of Wysdome. Ch. 4. (1539)

Together by the eares they come (quoth I) cheerely.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1546)
When is the law profitable? Assuredly . . . in this age, when all men goe together by the eares, for this matter, and that matter.

WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique, p. 37. (1553)

Set them together by the eares.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 71. (1574) Pettie, tr.

When we be together by the eares like dogs and cattes.

LAURENCE TOMSON, tr., Calvin's Sermons on Timothy, p. 280/1. (1579)

Set by the ears. (Menez par les oreilles.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 26. (1580) Florio translates the phrase, "To swallow gudgeons."

One euyll tonge may sette a number of men to gether by the eares.

WILLIAM SPELMAN, A Dialogue Between Two Travellers, p. 74. (c. 1580)

They fell together by the eares about the matter.

RICHARD KNOLLES, History of the Turks, l. 1184. (1603)

The Florentines and Senoys are by the ears.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, i, 2, l. (1603)

Half to half the world by the ears.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, i, 1, 239. (1607)

He sets men together by the eares, more shamefully then pillories.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Characters: A Meere Pettyfogger. (1613)

The devil threw in these bones to set us together by the ears.

BISHOP SAMUEL WARD, Sermons, p. 77. (1636)

Hard Words . . . set folks together by the ears.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, i, i, 4. (1663)

They would fall together by the ears about who should go with you.

DANIEL DEFOE, A New Voyage Round the World, p. 67. (1725)

We are all together by the ears.

SMOLLETT, tr., Don Quixote, ii, 225. (1755)

<sup>6</sup> The ear is the road to the heart. (L'oreille est le chemin du cœur.)

VOLTAIRE, Réponse au Roi de Prusse. (1750)

<sup>7</sup> He had his ear to the ground and his eye on the ball while they were sitting on the fence.

STANLEY WALKER, The Uncanny Knacks of Mr. Doherty. (New Yorker, 12 July, 1941.)

II—Walls Have Ears

<sup>8</sup> They hold counsel only in the open fields (for, says the Rashi, "walls have ears").

Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 8b. (c. 450)

Whisper no secrets in fields where there are hills.

Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 74a. (c. 450) Also, Genesis Rabbah, lxxiv, 2. "The way has eyes; the wall has ears."—Leviticus Rabbah, xxxii, 2.

Utter not slander before a wall; oft may it happen that behind are listening ears.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. 7, Maxim 16. (c. 1257)

Walls have ears. (Les murailles ont des oreilles.)

GRUTHER, Recueil. (c. 1500) See DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, i, 272. Another French form is "Bois ont oreilles, et champs oeillets"

(The wood has ears and the field eyes), the last word being a play upon two meanings, "eyes" or "pinks."

Take heed what you say. Walls have ears.

JAMES SHIRLEY, The Bird in a Cage. Act i, sc. 1. (1633)

For by old Proverbs it appears

That Walls have Tongues, and Hedges, Ears.

SWIFT, A Pastoral Dialogue, l. 7. (1727)

Hedges have eyes, and walls have ears.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

It is not good to speak of such things . . . ; stone walls have ears.

WALTER SCOTT, Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 6. (1822)

In consultations, the walls have ears. (En consejos, las paredes tienen orejas.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 237.

(1856) A Spanish proverb. The Italians say,

"Tras pared, ni tras seto no digas tu segreto"

(Walls have ears, and behind a wall or hedge do not tell a secret).

Walls have ears, and there are listeners under the windows. (Ko ch'iang hsü yü erh, ch'uang wai ch'i wu jên.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1942.

Walls have Ears; but no one cares

Unless a Tongue is also theirs.

ARTHUR GUITERMAN, A Poet's Proverbs, p. 44. (1924)

Walls have ears, bottles have mouths.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 440.

(1938) A Japanese proverb.

The very walls have ears.

NGAIO MARSH, The Nursing-Home Murder, p. 193. (1941)

LITTLE PITCHERS HAVE BIG EARS, see under PITCHER.

<sup>1</sup> In talking on your way remember there may be listeners in the grass. (Lu chung shuo 'hua tsao li yü jên.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 180. (1872)

<sup>2</sup> Write the word down, for partitions have ears.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 11. (1843)

Partitions have chinks, walls have ears. (Ch'iang wu fêng, pi yü erh.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1040. (1875)

<sup>3</sup> Veld haueth hey, and wude haueth heare. (Field hath eye, and wood hath ear.)

UNKNOWN, Trinity College Homilies, (c. 1200)

The same manuscript has the proverb in Latin, "Campus habet lumen, et habet nemus auris acumen" (Field hath eye, and the wood hath the keenness of an ear), evidently a medieval jingle.

Wode has erys, felde has sight.

THOMAS WRIGHT, Essays on the Middle Ages, i, 168. Quoting a saying of c. 1250.

But sooth is seyde, gon sithen many yeres,

That "feeld hath eyen, and the wode hath eres."

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knights Tale, l. 663. (c. 1386)

Feelds haue eles, and woodes haue eares, ye wot.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Bois. (1611) RAY, Proverbs, p. 95. (1670)

The fieldes haue eyes and the wood haue eares. Therefore we must comen closelie, and beware of blabbes.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, A Dialogue Against the Feuer Pestilence, p. 13. (1564)

The fields have eyes, the bushes eares,

False birds can fetch the wind.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie: To Light a Candell Before the Devill. (1577) A variant is cited in Notes and Queries (3rd ser., vi, 494), as from Cornwall, "There's no down without eyes, no hedge without ears."

Fields have Eyes, and Hedges Ears.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1532. (1732)

Heedful of the old saying, that fields have eyes and woods have ears.

S. J. WEYMAN, Starvecrow Farm. Ch. 28. (1905)

III—Ear and Tongue

<sup>4</sup> It is better to play with the ears than the tongue.

JOHN DAVIES, The Scourge of Folly, p. 46. (1611)

<sup>5</sup> The hearing ear is always found close to the speaking tongue.

R. W. EMERSON, English Traits Ch. 4. (1856)

<sup>6</sup> The Tongue offends, and the Ears get the Cuffing.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1757

<sup>7</sup> One pair of ears draws dry a hundred tongues.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 528.

(1640) The Italians say, "Un pajo d'orecchie seccherebbero cento lingue."

A Pair of good Ears will drain dry an hundred Tongues.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1753

<sup>8</sup> The reason why we have two ears and only one mouth is that we may listen the more and talk the less. (διὰ τοῦτο δύο ὦτα ἔχομεν, στόμα δὲ ἓν, ἵνα πλείονα μὲν ἀκούωμεν, ἥττονα δὲ λέγωμεν.)

ZENO, Maxim. (c. 460 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Zeno. Bk. vii, sec. 23. The saying has been credited to Socrates, Diogenes and Demosthenes, as will be seen from the quotations below.

It is a common saying that nature has given to each of us two ears and one tongue, because we ought to do less talking than listening.

PLUTARCH, MORALIA: On Listening to Lectures. Sec. 39B. (c. A. D. 95) Quoted by EPICETUS, Fragments. No. 113. (c. A. D. 100) See also under TONGUE.

Thou hast ii eeres and but on tunge, wherfor thou oughtest to herken double as moche as thou spekest.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophers, fo. 39. (1477) Quoting Diogenes.

To euery creature longith but oon tonge and two erys; and so a man shulde suffir more with his tway erys than any man myght speke with oon tonge.

Dialogues of Creatures, clxvi. (c. 1335)

You have two eares and one tongue, because you shoulde heare more than you speake.

WILSON, Discourse upon Usury, p. 211. (1572)
A wise man beeing asked, why nature hath given us two eares, and but one tongue: to that ende (answered hee) that wee shoulde heare muche, and speake little.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 119. (1574) Pettie, tr.

We have two eyes and two ears that thereby we may learn to hear and see much more than is spoken.

ROBERT GREENE, Penelope's Web. (1587)

Euery man hath one tongue, and two eares: nature, in her building, is a most curious worke-maister.—That is as much to say, a man should heare more than he should speake.

UNKNOWN, The London Prodigall. Act iii, sc. 2. (1605) Shakespeare Apocrypha.

You have two eyes and two ears, but one tongue. You know my meaning.

HOWELL, Letters. Bk. ii, sec. 7. let. 5. (1637)
Demosthenes . . . had these sentences: "That wise men speak little, and that therefore nature hath given men two ears and one tongue, to hear more than they speak."

WILLIAM PENN, No Cross, No Crown. Ch. 19. (1669)

Men are born with two eyes, but with one tongue, in order that they should see twice as much as they say.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. i, No. 112. (1820)

This [Zeno] was he who said to a certain garrulous young man, "On this account have we two ears and but one mouth, that we may hear more and speak less."

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 7 Feb., 1838.

Nature has given us two ears, two eyes, and but one tongue; to the end, we should hear and see more than we speak.—Socrates.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 457. (1855)

1
Give every man thy ear, but few thy voice.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 3, 68. (1600)

In the words of Polonius, "Give every man thine ear, but few thy voice."

FRANCIS BEEDING, Eleven Were Brave, p. 14. (1941)

EARTH

See also World

2
O mother Earth! (ὦ γαῖα μήτηρ.)

AESCHYLUS, Libation-Bearers, l. 44. (458 B.C.)
Mighty earth, mother of all. (Γαῖα μήτηρ πάντων.)

EURIPIDES, Chrysippus. Frag. 836N. (c. 425 B.C.)
Earth is the mother; she gives birth to the body; ether yokes breath to it. (Mater est terra; ea parit corpus, animam aether adiugat.)

PACUVIUS, Chryses. Frag. 115. (c. 160 B.C.)

Hail, Earth, Mother of all! (παμμήτωρ γῆ, χαῖρε.)

MELLAGER, Stephanos. (c. 50 B.C.) See Greek Anthology, vii, 461.

And on the ground, which is my modres gate,
I knokke with my staf, bothe erly and late,
And seye, "leve moder, leet me in!"

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Pardoners Tale, l. 401. (c. 1387)

3
Thou makest the earth to shine as with refined copper.

ANI, Papyrus: Book of the Dead. Ch. xv, l. 4. (c. 4000 B.C.)

4
Until you approach a deep ravine you do not realize the thickness of the earth.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. xlii. (1938)
A Chinese proverb.

5
May the earth swallow me. (τότε μοι χάροι.)

CICERO, Ad Quintum Fratrem. Bk. iii, epis. ix, sec. 1. (54 B.C.) Quoting an ancient Greek oath.

6
Earth must go back to earth. (Reddenda terrae est terra.

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iii, ch. 24. sec. 59. (45 B.C.) Quoting Euripides. The Germans say, "Was von Erde ist, muss wieder zu Erde werden." (What comes from earth must return to earth).

An old said saw, earth must to earth.

GEORGE PEELE, Edward I. Sc. 24. (1593)

The Earth produces all Things, and receives all again.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia No. 4493. (1732)
DUST TO DUST, see under DUST

7
Of the earth, earthy. (ἐκ γῆς χοϊκός.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, xv, 47. (c. A.D. 60) The Vulgate is, "De terra, terrenus"

8
One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh; but the earth abideth for ever. (Terra autem in aeternum stat.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, i, 4. (c. 250 B.C.)

9
I find a greater fault in myself in suffering another to cut the earth from under my feet.

GEOFFREY FENTON, Bandello, ii, 10. (1567) See under GRASS

10
"Fuller's earth."

THOMAS FULLER, Epitaph Written by Himself. (1660)

11
If man cheats the earth, the earth will cheat man.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 593. (1937)

12
The earth is yet common to all. (γαῖα δ' ἐστὶ κοινὴ πάντων.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xv, l. 193. (c. 850 B.C.)
Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 279A.

13
Earth, the giver of grain. (ζείδωρος δρυοπα.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. iv, l. 229. (c. 850 B.C.) A phrase used frequently in both Iliad and Odyssey.

Queen Earth, all-bounteous giver of honey-hearted wealth. (Πότνια Γῆ, πάνδωρε, δότειρα μελίφρονος δάβου.)

UNKNOWN, Homer's Epigrams. No. 7. (c. 400 B. C.) See EVELYN-WHITE, Homerica, p. 470. In Loeb Classical Library.

<sup>1</sup> Between earth and starry heaven. (μεσσηγυῖς γαίης τε καὶ οὐρανοῦ ἀστερδέντρος.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. v, l. 769. (c. 850 B. C.) You talk about things which belong neither to heaven nor earth. (Narratis quod nec ad caelum nec ad terram pertinet.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 44. (c. A. D. 60) Relating neither to earth nor to heaven. (οὔτε γῆς οὔτε οὐρανοῦ ἀπρομήνῃ.)

ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 98. (1511)

<sup>2</sup> Earth's the best shelter.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 38. (1659) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 269. (1678)

<sup>3</sup> The earth belongs to the living and not to the dead.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Madison. (1789)

<sup>4</sup> Speak to the earth, and it shall teach thee. (Loquere terrae, et respondebit tibi.)

Old Testament: Job, xii. 8. (c. 350 B. C.)

<sup>5</sup> The poetry of earth is never dead.

KEATS, On the Grasshopper and Cricket. (1816)

<sup>6</sup> Where on earth am I? (ποῦ ποτ' εἰμι γῆς;)

MENANDER, The Girl Who Gets Her Hair Cut, l. 671. (c. 300 B. C.)

<sup>7</sup> Verily the earth hath store of marvels for those who have faith to see!

MOHAMMED, The Koran, li, 20. (c. 622)

<sup>8</sup> The same earth fosters healing herbs and noxious. (Terra salutare herbas, eademque nocentes | nutrit.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 45. (c. 1 B. C.)

The earth which yeeldeth foode to sustaine our bodies, yeeldeth poison also to [destroy] our bodies.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 186. (1576) See also under COMPENSATION.

<sup>9</sup> He ambles along encumbering the earth. (Terrai odium ambulat.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 820. (190 B. C.)

<sup>10</sup> The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof. (τοῦ κυρίου γὰρ ἡ γῆ καὶ τὸ πλήρωμα αὐτῆς.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xxiv, 1. (c. 350 B. C.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, x, 26. (c. A. D. 60) The Vulgate is, "Domini est terra, et plenitudo eius."

The earth and the fulness thereof are mine, saith Monseigneur.

DICKENS, Tale of Two Cities. Bk. ii, ch. 7. (1859)

<sup>11</sup> Seleucus was of the opinion that the earth turns round about its poles and not the heavens. (Seleucus prins opinion d'affirmer la terre veritablement autour des poles se mouvoir non le Ciel.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 25. (1552)

Dres the world go round?

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, v, 5, 232. (1609)

Yet it does move! (E pur si muove!)

GALILEO is said to have whispered this into the ear of a friend, as he rose from signing his recantation of his theory that the earth moved around the sun—a recantation wrung from him by the Inquisition. (1615) However the earliest known appearance of the phrase was in 1761, and it is doubtful if Galileo ever uttered it. See E. R. HULL, Galileo; VON GEBLER, Galileo Galilei and the Roman Curia.

Roll on, thou ball, roll on. [It rolls on.]

W. S. GILBERT, To the Terrestrial Globe. (1869)

Long has the globe been rolling round.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of the Exposition. (1876)

Gyrate, old Top, and let who will be clever.

B. L. TAYLOR, To a Well-Known Globe. (1911)

<sup>12</sup> The many-garlanded earth puts on her broidery. (ποικίλλεται μὲν γαῖα πολυστέφανος.)

SAPPHO, Frag. 133. (c. 610 B. C.) Quoted by DEMETRIUS, On Style, as an example of the use of beautiful words. See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, i, 275.

<sup>13</sup> The little O, the earth.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, v, 2, 81. (1606)

This opacous Earth, this punctual spot.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 23. (1667)

<sup>14</sup> Earth, Ocean, Air, beloved brotherhood.

SHELLEY, Alastor, l. 1. (1815)

Earth, air, and ocean. glorious three.

ROBERT MONTGOMERY, On Woman. (1833)

<sup>15</sup> Back to earth, the dear green earth.

WORDSWORTH, Peter Bell: Prologue. (1819)

I am in love with this green earth.

LAMB, Essays of Elia: New Year's Eve. (1823)

MAY THE EARTH BE LIGHT ABOVE HIM, see under DEATH.

EARTHQUAKE

<sup>16</sup>

Unhurt amidst the war of elements,

The wrecks of matter, and the crush of worlds.

JOSEPH ADDISON, Cato. Act v, sc. 1. (1712)

<sup>17</sup>

The earth-ox changes [his burden] to the other shoulder. (Ti niu chuan chien.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 182. (1872)

<sup>18</sup>

The earthquake that had the honour to be noticed by the Royal Society.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Essay on Irish Bulls. Ch. 2. (1802) Quoted as "the exquisitely polite expression" of a correspondent of the English Royal Society.

EASE

See also Leisure

<sup>1</sup>
A pennyworth of ease is worth a penny at all times.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 318. (1605)

A pennyworth of ease is worth a penny.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 130. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 344. (1732)

<sup>2</sup>
Who follows ease will in the end find want.
(Otia qui sequitur, veniet huic semper egestas.)

COLUMBANUS, Carmen Monostichon, l. 46. (c. A. D. 600)

<sup>3</sup>
To live at ease is not to live.

JOHN DRYDEN, tr., Persius' Satires, v, 226.

(1693) The French say, "Tout ce qu'on peut en souffrir qu'à l'aise" (Everything can be endured except ease), and on the other hand, "Il n'est vie que d'être aisé" (It is not life unless you are at ease).

<sup>4</sup>
He loveth ease, he loveth rest,
So he is nought the worthiest.

GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. iii, l. 110. (1393)

<sup>5</sup>
He that is at ease, seeks dainties.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 983. (1640)

If you would be at ease, all the world is not.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1017.

<sup>6</sup>
Ease, a neutral state between pain and pleasure.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 85. (1750)

<sup>7</sup>
Take your ease.

HUGH LATIMER, Works, p. 673. (c. 1550)

God laughs at a man who says to his soul, Take thy ease.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Of Myself. (1665)

<sup>8</sup>
Ease is the sauce of labour.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 144 (1579)

<sup>9</sup>
Rough ease he delights in amid small means.
(Sordidaque in parvis otia rebus amat.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, No. 55. (c. A. D. 85)

<sup>10</sup>
Studious of ease, and fond of humble things.

AMBROSE PHILIPS, Epistles from Holland, to a Friend in England, l. 21. (c. 1717)

Studious of elegance and ease.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. i, No. 8. (1727)

Me, therefore, studious of laborious ease.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 361. (1784)

<sup>11</sup>
The life of ease is a kingdom without the worry.
(Vita otiosa regnum est et curae minus.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 725. (c. 43 B. C.)

<sup>12</sup>
Rejoicing in the pursuits of an inglorious ease.
(Studiis florentem ignobilis oti.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iv, l. 564. (29 B. C.)

Thus Belial, with words cloth'd in reasons garb,
Counsel'd ignoble ease, and peaceful sloath.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 226. (1667)

There is an English proverb which says,
"Ease and honour are seldom bedfellows."

<sup>13</sup>
Lith [ease] and selthe [success] felawes are.

UNKNOWN, Havelok the Dane, l. 1338. (c. 1300)

He may not have all his ease that shall thrive.

UNKNOWN, How the Good Wife, l. 130. (c. 1460)

<sup>14</sup>
I am at eas, hade I inow.

UNKNOWN, Wisdom. Sc. iv, st. 70. (c. 1460)

It is an olde prouerbe, He is wel at ease that hath inough, and can say ho.

HENRY PARKER, Dives and Pauper, fo. 1. (1493)

He is weel easit that has aught o' his ain when ithers gang to meat.

JOHN RAY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 238. (1678)

EAST

<sup>15</sup>
'Tis light translatheth night; . . . 'tis the West explains the East.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Ruined Temple. (1839)

Perhaps Bailey had in mind a Latin proverb, "Ex oriente lux, ex occidente lex" (From the East light, from the West law).

Men look to the East for the dawning things, for the light of a rising sun,

But they look to the West, to the crimson West, for the things that are done, are done.

DOUGLAS MALLOCH, East and West. (1923)

<sup>16</sup>
Th' extremes of glory and of shame,
Like east and west become the same.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto i, l. 271. (1664)

This proverb, Extremes meet, or its parallel, Too far East is West, reaches very far into the heart and centre of things.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 93. (1853) See also under EXTREMES.

Big perilous theorem, hard for king and priest:
Pursue the West but long enough, 'tis East.

SIDNEY LANIER, Psalms of the West. (1876)

<sup>17</sup>
From Est til Occident.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of the Man of Lawe, l. 199. (c. 1386)

The farther I journey towards the West, the more convinced I am that the wise men came from the East.

WILLIAM DAVY, KING'S SERJEANT. (1762) See WOOLRYCH, Lives of Eminent Serjeants at Law. Vol. ii, p. 621.

When I hear of high Devonian pretensions, I confess I am reminded of the celebrated saying of Serjeant Davy, that "the oftener he went into the West, he better understood how the Wise Men came from the East."

LORD JOHN CAMPBELL, Lives of the Chief Justices of England. Vol. i, p. 155. (1849)

I think it was Jekyll who used to say that the further he went west, the more convinced he felt that the wise men came from the East.

SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Vol. i.) Smith is referring to Joseph Jekyll, wit and politician, but the epigram undoubtedly belongs to Serjeant Davy.

<sup>1</sup> The longer forenoone the shorter after noone. All comth to one, and therby men haue gest, Alwaie the longer east, the shorter west.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. i, ch. 13. (1546)
The longer East, the shorter West.

THOMAS FULLER, Remains (1870), p. 333. (1605) RAY, Proverbs, p. 84. (1760)

Further East, the shorter West.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 1. (1846)
Longer east shorter west. A deficiency in one part is compensated by abundance in another.

WILLIAM DICKINSON, Cumberland Glossary, p. 192. (1899)

<sup>2</sup> Oh, East is East, and West is West, and never the twain shall meet.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Ballad of East and West. (1889)

East is East, and West is San Francisco, according to Californians.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), A Municipal Report. (1910)

<sup>3</sup> And the end of the fight is a tombstone white with the name of the late deceased, And the epitaph drear: "A Fool lies here who tried to hustle the East."

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Naulahka. Ch. 5, heading. (1891)

Ship me somewheres east of Suez, where the best is like the worst,

Where there aren't no Ten Commandments, an' a man can raise a thirst.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Mandalay. (1892)

<sup>4</sup> Where the gorgeous East . . . Shows on her Kings Barbaric Pearl.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 3. (1667)
Once did she hold the gorgeous East in fee.

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH, On the Extinction of the Venetian Republic. (1802)

You veritably hold the gorgeous East in fee.

R. A. J. WALLING, The Spider and the Fly, p. 183. (1940)

<sup>5</sup> Always the East—old, how incalculably old!

WALT WHITMAN, Specimen Days, 22 July, 1878.

<sup>6</sup> The urge toward the East. (Der Drang nach Osten.)

UNKNOWN. A phrase first heard in Germany while the plans for the Berlin-to-Bagdad railway were under discussion, c. 1888

EASTER

<sup>7</sup> You keep Easter, when I keep Lent.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5927. (1732)

<sup>8</sup> I'll warrant you for an egg at Easter.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 2. (1659) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 52. (1678)

The English tradition was Hai for an egg at Easter.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 323. (1666)

I suppose her ladyship plays sometimes for an egg at Easter.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

A kiss at Christmas and an egg at Easter.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Denham Tracts, ii, 92. (1846)

Gayly matching their Easter-eggs under the shade at the China-berry trees.

KATE CHOPIN, Bayou Folk, p. 180. (1894)

<sup>9</sup> Easter so longed for is gone in a day.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 20. (1659)

<sup>10</sup> Didst thou not fall out with a tailor for wearing his new doublet before Easter?

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iii, 1, 30. (1595)

At Easter let your clothes be new,

Or else be sure you will it rue.

DYER, British Popular Customs, p. 160. (1875)

EASY

<sup>11</sup> As easy as taking a hair out of milk.

Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 8a. (c. 450)

<sup>12</sup> It's going to be as easy as falling downstairs.

H. C. BAILEY, Orphan Ann, p. 32. (1941)

<sup>13</sup> It's easie. saies the Prouerb, to wade the streame. Where the foord's at lowest.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, A Strappado for the Divell, 222. (1615)

It is easy to bowl down hill.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 151. (1639)

Easy it is to bowl down Hill.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1352. (1732)

'Tis easy to rob an orchard when no man keeps it.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 55. (1639)

It is easy to rob an orchard when none keep it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2925. (1732)

It's aizey howdin dain th' latch when nobody poos at th' string.

BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 81. (1917)

<sup>14</sup> As aisy as fawin off a chair when yo're drunk.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 27. (1917)

<sup>15</sup> But you may make 'em at command,
As eas'ly stay as kiss your hand.

CHARLES COTTON, Scarronides. Bk. iv. (1670)

Easy as kiss my hand.

BERTHELSON, Eng.-Danish Dictionary: Easy. (1754)

It's as easy as kiss my 'and a-goin' to Paris now-a-days.

SKETCHLEY, Mrs. Brown at the Paris Exposition, p. 30. (1878)

It's as easy as kiss-my-hand.

DOROTHY BOWERS, Fear and Miss Betony, p. 73. (1942) The French say, "C'est simple comme bonjour" (It's as easy as saying good-day).

<sup>16</sup> It's as easy as pie.

CYRIL HARE, Tragedy at Law, p. 114. (1943)

That's as easy as pie.

ANNE HOCKING, Death Loves a Shining Mark, p. 189. (1943)

- 1
Easy as an old shoe.
G. F. NORTHALL, Folk Phrases, p. 8. (1894)
He's as easy as a gum shoe.
O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Gold that Glittered. (1910)
- 2
You'll win as easily as a fox eats a pear. (Tam facile vinces quam pium vulpes comest.)
PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 559. (c. 220 B. C.) "As easily as a fox eats a pear" was a common proverb.
Just as easy as rain when it pours. (Quam imber est quando pluit.)
PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 336. (c. 200 B. C.)
- 3
Easy as to lick a dish.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 283. (1678)
- 4
As easy as to take money out of a purse. (T'an nang ch'u wu.)
WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1085. (1875)
- 5
Come easy, go easy. (I tē lai, i tē ch'u.)
WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2683. A proverb of c. 100 B. C.
"Easy come, easy go," is . . . characteristic of rapidly acquired commercial fortunes.
SAMUEL WARREN, Diary of a Late Physician. Ch. 22. (c. 1835)
"Easy come, easy go," is a saying as applicable to knowledge as to wealth.
HERBERT SPENCER, Education. Ch. 2. (1861)
"Easy come, easy go" frequently quoted, recently by ERIC AMBLER, A Coffin for Demetrios, p. 29. (1939)
It having come easy, it went the same way.
HOWIE, Murder at Stone House, p. 191. (1942)
- 6
He chops off heads as easily as a dog sits down. (Tam facile homines occidebat, quam canis adsidit.)
SENECA (?), Ludus de Morte Claudii. Sec. 10. (c. A. D. 55)
- 7
'Tis as easy as lying.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, lll, 2, 372. (1600)
Which to me seemed as easy and natural as lying.
WALTER SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 26. (1824)
For my part, getting up seems not so easy
By half as lying.
THOMAS HOOD, Morning Meditations. (c. 1840)
"As easy as lying" is a common proverb, but it must have been invented by an optimist.
JAMES PAYN, The Burnt Million. Ch. 40. (1890)
- 8
Let your precept be, "Be easy."
RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 196. (1711)
- 9
I could do it as easy as rolling off a log.
MARK TWAIN, A Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's Court, pp. 5, 20. (1889)
It could be fixed, as easy as rolling off a log.
HAROLD FREDERIC, The Lawton Girl, p. 125. (1890)
It will be just as easy "as falling off a log."
NORAH DAVIS, The Northerner, p. 115. (1905)

- It's as easy as fallin' off a log.
G. B. McCUTCHEON, The Rose in the Ring, p. 49. (1910)
They'll find it easy as falling off a log.
MARGARET KENNEDY, The Constant Nymph, p. 307. (1924)
It was as easy as falling off a log.
PATRICIA WENTWORTH, The Clock Strikes Twelve, p. 252. (1944)

EATING

See also Dining, Feasts, Food, Gluttony, Meals

- 10
He whose stomach is full increaseth deeds of evil.
Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 32a. (c. 450) In the same book there is another proverb to the same effect: "A lion growls not in a den full of straw, but in a den full of meat." Hosea, xiii, 6, has: "They were filled and their heart was exalted"; and Deuteronomy, xxxii, 15: "Jeshurun waxed fat and kicked."
- 11
Let no man eat before his cattle have been fed.
Babylonian Talmud: Gittin, fo. 62a. (c. 450) He who feeds himself on the street is like a dog.
Babylonian Talmud: Kiddushin, fo. 40a.
- 12
Chew well and thou wilt feel it in thy heels.
Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 152a. (c. 450) Food strengthens the whole body.
Loosen thy sack and put in bread.
Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 152a. (c. 450) Nourishment is essential to well-being
- 13
When eating refrain from speaking, lest the windpipe open before the gullet, and life be in danger.
Babylonian Talmud: Taanith, fo. 5b. (c. 450)
- 14
Of a truth, a little sufficeth for a sensible man, That on his bed he needeth not to groan.
BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Esslesiasticus). xxxi, 19. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.
For growth in strength, at times eat food in measure: You owe more to your health than to your pleasure. (Fortius ut valeas, interdum parior esto: pauca voluptati debentur, plura salut.)
CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. ii, No. 28. (c. 175 B. C.)
Stop short of your appetite; eat less than you are able. (Desine citra | quam capis; es paulo quam potes esse minus.)
OVID, Artis Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 757. (c. 1 B. C.)
Eat a third [of the stomach's capacity], drink a third, leave a third empty.
Babylonian Talmud: Gittin, fo. 70a. (c. 450)
Kill not your hearts with excess of eating and drinking.
MOHAMMED, Sunnah. (c. 630) Sayings of Muhammad, p. 50.
Temprance teacheth this, where he kepeth scoole, He that knoweth whan he bath enough is no foole. Feed by measure, and defie the physicion, And in the contrary marke this condition,

A swyne ouer fatte is cause of his owne bane,
Who seeth nought herein, his wit is in the wane.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)
A little in the morning, nothing at noon, and a light supper doth make to live long.

WRIGHT AND HALLIWELL, eds., Reliquiae Anti-quae. Vol. i, p. 208. (c. 1550)

The lesse one eates, the more he eates. I meane he liveth longer to eat more.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv,
l. 135. (1574) Young, tr.

Saint Augustine saith, Eate alwaies so, that thou still have an appetite.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, iv, 136.
Dine sparingly and sup more sparing still. (Come poco y cena más poco.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43. (1615)
Properly, "Come poco y cena más; Duermee en alto y viviras," Dine sparingly, sup more freely, sleep at the top of the house, and thou wilt live. In PALMIRENO, Valencia, 1589, it is, "Come poco cena más, y dormiras."
A Latin medieval jingle runs, "Ut sis nocte levis, sit tibi coena brevis" (That the night may be light, let your supper be brief).

Feed sparingly and defy the physician.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 39. (1670)
Eat an' drink measurely, an' defy the mediciners.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 234.

Live in measure, and laugh at the mediciners.
Nothing contributes more to Health than a temperate Diet. Whereas, *Nimia gula morborum
Mater* (Gluttony is the mother of disease).

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 236. (1721)
He that eats till he is sick, must fast till he is well.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2094. (1732)
To lengthen thy life, lessen thy meals.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733.

Three good meals a day is bad living.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737.

Dine with little, sup with less:

Do better still; sleep supperless.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1744.

1
Eat not to dullness; drink not to elevation.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography. Ch. 1.
(1771) Temperance, the first of thirteen virtues which Franklin tried to practise. The others were silence, order, resolution, frugality, industry, sincerity, justice, moderation, cleanliness, tranquillity, chastity, humility.

When at table, remember that we never repent of having eaten or drunk too little.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Charles Clay.
(1817) One of ten "canons of conduct."

2
Good to eat, and wholesome to digest, as a worm to a toad, a toad to a snake, a snake to a pig, a pig to a man, and a man to a worm.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

3
Hard fare makes hungry stomackes.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works, ii, E6. (1616).

Hard fare makes hungry bellies.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 241. (1639)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1796. (1732)

4
Tell me what you eat, and I will tell you what you are. (Dis moi ce que tu manges, je te dirai ce que tu es.)

BRILLAT-SAVARIN, Physiologie du Gout. Ch. 36.
(1825)

Man is what he eats. (Der Mensch ist was er isst.)

L. A. FEUERBACH, *Review of Moleschott's
Lehre der Nahrungsmittel für das Volk*.
(1850)

It's a very odd thing—

As odd as can be—

That whatever Miss T eats

Turns into Miss T.

WALTER DE LA MARE, Miss T. (1913)

The old saying that "Man is what he eats."

GEORGE W. GRAY, The Advancing Front of Medicine, p. 43. (1941)

The French say, "Tell me what a man eats and I'll tell you what he is."

BAYARD VEILLER, Bait for a Tiger, p. 7. (1941)

5
Eating his head off means that he would eat as much hay and corn as he was worth.

JOHN BYROM, Private Journals, ii, 1, 35. (1736)

A gentleman . . . does not like to leave him [a good horse] eating his head off.

TROLLOPE, Framley Parsonage. Ch. 14. (1860)

Cattle which have been bought at a loss are said to eat their heads off.

EDWARD PEACOCK, Lincolnshire Glossary. (1877)

6
After God, the stew. (Despues de Dios, la olla.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 242.
(1856) A Spanish proverb. "The cause is gude and the word's 'Fa' on," is said to be a Scottish grace.

Dem w'at eats kin say grace.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Uncle Remus: Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

7
Come along, that I may lick my fingers. (Lle-gaos, que me mamo el dedo.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 29. (1605)
Licking the fingers is often alluded to in
Don Quixote as a proverb, as modern usage says "to lick one's lips" after a thing.

Come and foul a plate with me.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

8
The old woman took kindly to the blits, and did not leave either green or dry. (Regostóse la vieja a los bledos, ni dejo verdes ni secos.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 69. (1615)
Bledo amaranthus blitum (Fr., blette. Germ., blutkraut), used in some places as a substitute for spinach.

9
When going to an eating-house, choose one that is crowded; when going to a bath-house, choose one that is empty.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs. p. 358.
(1938) A crowded eating-place means that the food is good; an empty bath-house means the water will be clean. A Chinese proverb.

<sup>1</sup>
If meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend. (μὴ φάγω κρέα εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, viii, 13. (A. D.

57) The Vulgate is, "Non manducabo carnem in aeternum."

I once ate a pea.

GEORGE (BEAU) BRUMMEL, when asked at dinner if he ever ate vegetables. (c. 1800)

If you become a vegetarian, you separate from your ancestors and cut off posterity.

GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 381. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>2</sup>
He that's ashamed to eat is ashamed to live. (Qui a honte de manger a honte de vivre.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Manger. (1611)

The Latin proverb is, "Apud mensam verecundari neminem decet," and the Italians say, "A tavola non bisogna aver vergogna," both meaning that at table there is no reason to be ashamed of a good appetite.

<sup>3</sup>
I remind myself of what my sainted mother used to say, "He who stirs the soup pot eats first."

ELIZABETH DELEHANTY, Arise from Sleep, p. 45. (1942)

<sup>4</sup>
If a rich man, when you will; if a poor man, when you can. (εἰ μὲν πλούσιος, ὅταν θέλῃ. εἰ δὲ πένης, ὅταν ἔχῃ.)

DIOGENES, when asked the proper time to eat. (c. 350 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes, vi, 40.

Diogenes being asked at what time a man ought to eat, answered, The Rich when he is hungry, the Poor when he has anything to eat. (Diogenes interrogé à quelle heure doit l'home repaistre? répondit: Le Riche, quand il aura faim: le Paouure, quand il aura dequoy.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 64. (1548)

The Queene asked if it were time to goe to supper? Yes (said Cavall) for the rich men when they list, for the poore men when they can.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 128. (1574) Young, tr.

<sup>5</sup>
Plain fare gives as much pleasure as a costly diet, while bread and water confer the highest possible pleasure when they are brought to hungry lips. (οἱ γὰρ λιτοὶ χυλοὶ ἰσὴν πολυτελεῖ διαίτῃ τὴν ἡδονὴν ἐπιφέρουσιν.)

EPICURUS, Letter to Menaeceus. (c. 300 B. C.)

See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Epicurus, x, 130.

Not in the costly savour lies the greatest pleasure [in eating], but in yourself. So earn your sauce with sweat. (Non in caro nidore voluptas [summa, sed in te ipso est. tu pulmentaria quare] sudando.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 19. (35 B. C.)

We have water and porridge; let us rival Jove himself in happiness. (Habemus aquam, habemus polentam, Iovi ipsi controversiam de felicitate faciamus.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cx, 18. (c. A. D. 65)

<sup>6</sup>
He that is fed, beleueeth not the fasting. (El pasciuto, non crede al digiuno.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578)

<sup>7</sup>
Eat for Necessity, not Pleasure, for Lust knows not where Necessity ends.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Rules of Health and Long Life. (Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742.)

He that never eats too much, will never be lazy. FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1756.

<sup>8</sup>
He eats in Plate, but will die in Irons.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1842. (1732)

To eat well is no Whoredom; and to starve is no Gentility.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5159.

Who eats and leaves, has another Meal good.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5700.

<sup>9</sup>
The poor sheep still, for an old grudge, would eat him without salt (as they say).

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Metamorphosis of Ajax, p. 3. (1596)

You must not think to eat me up without salt.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 71. (1639)

He could eat my heart with garlic. That is, he hates me mortally.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 173. (1670)

Now could I eat that satirical devil without salt for my breakfast.

THOMAS D'URFEY, The Richmond Heiress. Act v, sc. 4. (1693)

He could eat me but [without] salt. The man hates me vehemently.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 157. (1721)

Does not miss look as if she could eat me without salt?

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

I could eat him up without a corn of salt, when I think of his impudence.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, vii, 59. (1748)

<sup>10</sup>
The bit that one eats, no friend makes.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 148. (1640)

An upbraided morsel never choked any.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 408.

<sup>11</sup>
Fare well and feede full, that loue ye well to do,

But you lust not to doo, that longeth therto.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

We went where we had boyld beefe and bake mutton,

Whereof I fed me as full as a tunne.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11.

I'd rather batten than bant any day.

O. HENRY, The Octopus Marooned. (1908)

<sup>12</sup>
Eat your fill, and pouch none, is gardener's law.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 95. (1721)

<sup>1</sup> Oh, the pleasure of eating alone!—eating my dinner alone!

CHARLES LAMB, Letter to Mrs. Wordsworth, 18 Feb., 1818. The Arabs say, "He who eats alone chokes alone."

<sup>2</sup> He that eateth well drinketh well, he that drinketh well sleepeth well, he that sleepeth well sinneth not, and he that sinneth not goeth straight through Purgatory to Paradise.

WILLIAM LITHGOW, Rare Adventures. (1609) I eat well, drink well, and sleep well, but that's all, Tom, that's all.

THOMAS MORTON, A Roland for an Oliver. Act i, sc. 2. (1819)

As she occasionally expressed it, she ate hearty, slept like a log, worked like a horse, and enjoyed life.

GARDNER, The D. A. Cooks a Goose, p. 21. (1942)

<sup>3</sup> Neither was I much unlyke these Abbaie lubbers in my lyfe . . . which laboured till they were colde, eat till they sweat, and lay in bed till their boanes aked.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 111. (1579) Eat till you sweat, and work till you freeze. An upbraiding speech to lazy servants who love meat better than work.

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 100. (1721) He'll eat till he sweats, and work till he freezes.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2424. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> Eat enough and it will make you wise.

JOHN LYLY, Mydas. Act iv, sc. 3. (1592) Stuffing holds out storm.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 293. (1721) "Take something before you travel on a bad day."

<sup>5</sup> Solon was wont to say that eating was like other drugs, a medicine against the disease of hunger. (Disoit Solon que le manger estoit, comme les aultres drogues, une medicine contre la maladie de la faim.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 37. (1580)

<sup>6</sup> Ever a Glutton, at another's Cost,
But in whose Kitchin dwells perpetual Frost.

JOHN DRYDEN, tr., Persius. Sat. iv, l. 58. (1693) Mary's mouth costs her nothing, for she never opens it but at others' expence.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736. It is a great pleasure to eat and have nothing to pay.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 427. (1855) See also under Drinking.

<sup>7</sup> She eats you out of house and home. (οὐκ ἔσθ' ὑμᾶς, οὐκ ὀφείλει.)

PHILO, De Agricultura. Sec. 73. (c. A. D. 40) Bot were I not more gracyus and rychere befar, I were eten outt of howse and of harbar.

UNKNOWN, Towneley Plays, xiii, 124. (c. 1400) I eete lyek an horse, of purpose to eete yow owte at the dorys.

UNKNOWN, Paston Letters, ii, 348. (1469)

They ete theyr mayster out of hous Deuourynge his good, tyll he be pore and bare.

BARCLAY, The Shyp of Folly, ii, 93. (1509) [They] eat the poor out of house and harbour.

WILLIAM TINDALE, Doctrinal Treatises, p. 122. (1527)

He hath eaten me out of house and home. SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, ii, 1, 80. (1597)

We have eat him out of house and home in diet. JOHN DAY, The Blind-Beggar of Bednal-Green

Act iv, sc. 1. (1600) They would eat me out of house and home. as the saying is.

THOMAS SHADWELL, The Sullen Lovers. Act v, sc. 3. (1668) See also ARBUTHNOT, John Bull, p. 53. (1712) FIELDING, Intriguing Chambermaid. Act ii, sc. 7. (1734) MARTINEAU, Life in the Wilds. Ch. 4. (1832) O. HENRY, Let Me Feel Your Pulse. (1911) etc., etc.

<sup>8</sup> The greatest eaters are the best fighters. (Grans bancqueteurs facent beaulx faitz d'armes.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 27. (1532) Fill fow and had fow makes a stark man.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 34. (c. 1595) Plenty of meat and drink makes a strong man.

Fill full, and ha'd full, makes a stiff weime [belly].

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 105. (1721) He that eats well does his work well.

EDMUND GAYTON, Pleasant Notes upon Don Quixot, p. 13. (1654)

He that eats well and drinks well, should do his Duty.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2095. (1732)

<sup>9</sup> Often and little eating makes a man fat.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 38. (1670) The French say, "Souvent et peu manger, Ce fait l'homme engraisser." The Arabs, "Eat many meals, and you'll grow fat."

<sup>10</sup> Eat, and welcome; fast, and heartily welcome.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 61. (1678)

<sup>11</sup> He who has eaten well welcomes the night.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol, St. 74. (c. 900)

<sup>12</sup> The more you eat, the less flavor; the less you eat, the more flavor. (To ch'ih shao tzü wei; shao ch'ih to tzü wei.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 361. (1875) A good example of the balanced form in which most Chinese proverbs are written.

<sup>13</sup> Where sups he? doth the old boar feed in the old frank? [sty]

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, ii, 2, 160. (1597) Feed at ease like a boar in a frank.

FRANCIS LENTON, Characterismi, sig. C12. (1631) The abbot fed as the farmer of his grange.

THOMAS FULLER, Church History. Bk. vi, sec. 2. (1655)

To feed like a farmer.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs, p. 202. (1670)
And if he to the pudding gets, he farmer-like doth feed.

Roxburghe Ballads, vii, 278. (c. 1680)
I have fed like a farmer: . . . my jaws are weary of chewing.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)
We reached Abbotsford in one day, and now doth the old bore feed in the old frank.

WALTER SCOTT, Letter. (1825) See LOCKHART,
Life, vi, 81.

1 Men'll eat anythin', when they can't git nothin' else.

F. R. STOCKTON, The Christmas Wreck. (1886)
HUNGRY DOGS EAT DIRTY PUDDINGS, see under Dog.

2 Who can live without a snack? (Quis potest sine offula vivere?)

SUETONIUS, Claudius. Ch. 40. (c. A. D. 120) Of-fula, a little bit, a trifle, a bite to eat. Proverbial.

I'm not voracious, only peckish. (No soy verde, sino moreno.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Bk. ii, ch. 41. (1615)

3 The more I eat the hungrier I am.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

We won't eat you.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii.

4 The greater the enjoyment of eating, the less the need of sauce. (ὁ μὲν ἥδιστα ἐσθίων ἥκιστα δψου δεῖται.)

XENOPHON, Memorabilia. Bk. i, ch. 6, sec. 5.
(c. 375 B. C.)

II—Living to Eat, Eating to Live

5 In compelling man to eat that he may live, Nature gives an appetite to invite him, and pleasure to reward him.

BRILLAT-SAVARIN, Physiologie du Goût. Ch. 36.
(1825)

6 Eat and live, as the proverb is, . . . that only repairs man which is well concocted, not that which is devoured.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy.
Pt. ii, sec. ii, mem. 1, subs. 2. (1621)

7 Not for renewal, but for eating's sake,
They stuff their bellies with to-morrow's ache.

EDMUND VANCE COOKE, From the Book of Ex-tenuations: Lazarus. (1930)

8 Let the stoics say what they please, we do not eat for the good of living, but because the meat is savory and the appetite is keen.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Nature. (1844)
I take some satisfaction in eating my food, as well as being nourished by it.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 20 Oct., 1855.

9 Let us therefore rejoyce, that we are not in the number of those, which live onelie to eate, and whose hunger is bigger than their panches.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv,
p. 134. (1574) Young, tr.

Thou lyuest not to eate, butte eat as thou mayst lyue.

JOHN NORTHBROOKE, A Treatise Against Dic-ing, p. 40. (c. 1577)

10 Their sole reason for living lies in their palate.
(In solo vivendi causa palato est.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xi, l. 11. (c. A. D. 120)

11 The purpose of food is to relieve hunger and thirst, not to minister to caprice and luxury.
(Cibus illis advorsum famem atque sitim, non lubidini neque luxuriae erat.)

SALLUST, Bellum Iugurthinum. Ch. 89. (c. 40 B. C.)

12 Base men live to eat and drink, and good men eat and drink to live. (τοὺς φαύλους ἤν τιν' ἐσθίειν καὶ πίνειν ἕνεκα, τοὺς δ' ἀγαθοὺς ἐσθίειν καὶ πίνειν ἕνεκα τοῦ ζῆν.)

SOPHOCLES, Fragment. (c. 450 B. C.) As quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 21E.

Other men live to eat, while I eat to live. (ἄλλους ἀνθρώπους ζῆν ἵν' ἐσθίοιεν· αὐτὸς δὲ ἐσθίειν ἵνα ζῶη.)

SOCRATES, Saying. (c. 400 B. C.) See DIOGENES
LAERTIUS, Socrates, ii, 34.

You should eat to live, and not live to eat.
(Edere oportet ut vivas, non vivere ut edas.)

CICERO, Rhetoricorum. Bk. iv, sec. 7. (c. 53 B. C.)

Do not live to eat, but eat that you may live
(Non vivas ut edas, sed edas ut vivere posses.)

DIONYSIUS, Fragments. Frag. 13. (c. 25 B. C.)
Socrates indeed used to say that many men wish to live in order to eat and drink, but that he ate and drank in order to live. (Multos homines propterea velle vivere, ut ederent et biberent. & bibere atque edere, ut viverent.)

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae. Bk. xix, ch. 2
(c. A. D. 150) There is a Latin proverb. "Edo.
ergo sum" (I eat, therefore I exist).

We eat to live, God's praises to repeat;
Thou art persuaded that we live to eat.

SADI, Gulistan, iii, 6. (c. 1258) Eastwick, tr

I will ete so that y leue, and nocht lyf that y ete.
UNKNOWN, Secreta Secretorum, tr., p. 67 (c.
1410)

They [the monks] eat not to live, but live to eat.
(Ne mangent mie pour viure, ilz viuent pour manger.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 15. (1545)
We must consider, that we doo eate to liue, and not liue to eate, as many doo. (El ci bisogna considerar che noi mangiamo per viuer, & non viuiamo per mangiare, come fanno molti.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 66. (1578)
How happy are we that eat to live and live not to eat.

ROBERT GREENE, Perimedes. (1588)
According to the saying of an old philosopher, one should eat to live, and not live to eat. (Sui-vant le dire d'un ancien, il faut manger pour vivre, et non pas vivre pour manger.)

MOLIERE, L'Avare. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 140. (1668)
Shadwell rendered the line, "People should eat to live, not live to eat, as the proverb says." Fielding also translated Molière's play, and either wilfully or inadvertently omitted the "not," rendering the line, "We must eat to live and live to eat."

Eat to live, and do not live to eat. That's like a Man, but this below a Beast.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 59. (1693)

III—Eating and Drinking

1 When you are hungry eat, when you are thirsty drink.

Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 62b. (c. 450)
Eat when you're hungry, and drink when you're dry.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 52. (1917)

2 I've seen an old saw, which is well worth repeating,

That says, "Good Eatynge Deserveth good Drynkyng."

R. H. BARRHAM, The Bagman's Dog. (1840)

3 Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God. (εἴτε οὖν ἐσθίετε εἴτε πίνετε εἴτε τι ποιεῖτε, πάντα εἰς δόξαν θεοῦ ποιεῖτε.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, x, 31. (A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Sive ergo manducatis, sive bibitis, sive aliud quid facitis: omnia in gloriam Dei facite."

4 Eating and drinking will take away any man's stomach.

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Mangeant. (1611)

Eating and drinking takes away one's stomach.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 84. (1670)

This eating and drinking takes away a body's stomach.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

Eating and drinking being, as the proverb wisely observes, apt to take away the appetite.

FRANCIS GROSE, ed., Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Damper. (1785)

5 Eat at pleasure, drinke by measure.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Pain. (1611)

Cotgrave is rendering the French proverb, "Pain tant qu'il dure, vin à mesure" (Bread as long as there is any, wine by measure).

RAY, Proverbs, p. 38. (1670)

Eat at Pleasure, Drink in Measure.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6079. (1732)

Bread at pleasure Drink by measure is also a maxim much to be commended.

CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 84. (1875)

6 There is nothing better for a man, than that he should eat and drink. (Nonne melius est comedere et bibere.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, ii, 24. (c. 250 B. C.)

Up to the age of forty, eating is beneficial; after forty, drinking.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath. (c. 450)

7 Poor Dick eats like a well man, and drinks like a sick.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737.

8 To make a horse's meal, i. e. to eat without drinking.

FRANCIS GROSE, The Olio, p. 91. (1793)

9 Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink. (μὴ μεριμνᾶτε τῇ ψυχῇ ὑμῶν τί φάγητε ἢ τί πίνητε.)

New Testament: Matthew, vi, 25. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Ne solliciti sitis animae vestrae quid manducetis, neque corpori vestro quid induamini."

10 Eat and drink, but do not be extravagant.

MOHAMMED, Koran, vii, 29. (c. 622) Bell, tr.

Eat less and drink less, and buy a knife at Michaelmas.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1650)

11 The hand in the pot and the glass in the fist. (La main au pot, & le verre au poing.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 32. (1532)

Eat little and drink the more shall hereafter be my motto. (A petit manger bien boire, sera désormais ma devise.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 18. (1548)

12 Eat a bit before you drink.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 28. (1678)

You eat and eat, but you do not drink to fill you. That much drinking takes off the edge of the Appetite to meat, we see by experience in great drinkers, who for the most part do (as we say) but pingle [trifle] at their meat and eat little.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 33.

Eat thy meat, and drink thy drink, and stand thy ground, old Harry.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 63.

13 Eating an' drinking want but a beginnin'.

JOHN RAY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 234. (1678)

Scarting and eating wants but a beginning.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 286. (1721)

They say, eating and scratching wants but a beginning.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

14 Eat-well is drink-well's brother.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 234. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1357. (1732) The Italians say, "Il mangiare insegna a bere" (Eating teaches drinking).

15 Eat without surfeit: Drink without drunkenness.

HUGH RHODES, Boke of Nurture. (c. 1530) See also under MODERATION.

16 He was an ingenious man that first found out eating and drinking.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

1
Some slouens from sleeping no sooner get vp,
But hand is in aumbrie [pantry], and nose in the cup.

THOMAS TUSKER, Five Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie: Huswiferie: Morning Workes. (1580)

No sooner up, but head in the ambrey, and nose in the cup.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 136. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 198. (1670)

No sooner up, but her head in the ambry. Spoken of, or to maidens, who have too early a stomach.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs. (1721)

IV—Eating: Eat, Drink and Be Merry

2
Withdraw not [thyself] from the good things of a day.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xiv, 14. (c. 190 B.C.) Oesterley, tr.

3
Let us eat and drink; for to-morrow we shall die. (Comedamus, et bibamus: cras enim moriemur.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxii, 13. (c. 725 B.C.)

Let us eat and drink; for to-morrow we die. (φάγομεν καὶ πῖωμεν, αὔριον γὰρ ἀποθνήσκομεν.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, xv, 32. (A.D. 57)

Your companions may certainly say to you, "Let us drink, for we all must die." (Convivae certe tui dicant, Bibamus, moriendum est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. (a. A.D. 65)

Eat and drink, and let the world go to ruin.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 551. (1817)

Eat thou and drink; to-morrow thou shalt die.

D. G. ROSSETTI, The House of Life: The Choice. (1870)

Drink and eat: an inch before us is black night.

S.G.CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 440. (1938)

Drink and dance and laugh and lie,
Love, the reeling midnight through.

For tomorrow we shall die!

(But, alas, we never do.)

DOROTHY PARKER, The Flaw in Paganism. (1936)

Eat, drink, and be merry, for tomorrow and to-morrow and tomorrow roll on their dreary course.

E. S. GARDNER, The Case of the Drowsy Mosquito, p. 189. (1943)

4
A man hath no better thing under the sun, than to eat, and to drink, and to be merry. (Non esset homini bonum sub sole, nisi quod comederet et biberet, atque gauderet.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, viii, 15. (c. 250 B.C.) Luke, xii, 19, has, "Take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry" (ἀναπαύου, φάγε, πῖε, εὐφράινου.) Luke, xv, 23, has, "Let us eat and be merry" (θῆσατε καὶ φαγόντες εὐφρανθήμεν.)

Eat thy bread with joy, and drink thy wine with a merry heart. (Comede in laetitia panem tuum, et bibe cum gaudio vinum tuum.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, ix, 7.

Then went they their way, every one to eat and drink, and make merry.

Apocrypha: I Esdras, ix, 54. (c. A.D. 90) Also Tobit, vii, 9.

Drink and be merry. (Mieux seroit boire & banqueter.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 8. (1552) Motteux' rendering.

Eate, drinke, and to be merry, for that the lyfe of man is soone gone, and but as a short shaddowe.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 149. (1579)

Drink and be merry. (Boy, et t'esjouy.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 19. (1580)

Eat, drink, and be leary.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Man Higher Up. (1908)

5
Eat and drink your fill from day to day,
And never worry—that's the wise man's god.
(ὡς τοῦμπιεύειν γε καὶ φαγεῖν τοῦψ' ἡμέραν, Ζεὺς οὗτος ἀνθρώποισι τοῖσι σώφροσι.)

EURIPIDES, Cyclops, l. 336. (c. 440 B.C.)

Make merry, drink: thy life from day to day
Account thine own, all else in fortune's power.
(εὐφραῖνε σαυτὸν, πῖνε, τὸν καθ' ἡμέραν βίον λογίζου σὸν, τὰ δ' ἄλλα τῆς τύχης.)

EURIPIDES, Alcestis, l. 788. (c. 438 B.C.)

6
Let us make merry with feasting. (δαϊνόμενοι τερπώμεθα.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. i, l. 369. (c. 850 B.C.)

It is good to be merry at meat.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 18. (1670)

7
Drink, live like the Greeks, eat, gorge. (Bibite, pergraeacimini, este, ecfercite vos.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 64. (c. 220 B.C.)

8
Eat, drink, and sport with love; all else is naught. (ἔσθιε, πῖνε, ἀφροδισιάζε· τὰλλα δ' οὐδε.)

SARDANAPALUS, Epitaph. (c. 625 B.C.) As recorded by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 336C. ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics, i, 5, 20, says that many persons of high position share the feelings of Sardanapalus. See also ATHENAEUS, 336D; Greek Anthology, vii, 325.

The man of sense will gather pleasure's fruits,
And three there are which have the potency
Truly to be important in this life:

To eat and drink and have one's way in love;

All else must be declared but secondary.

(τὸ φαγεῖν τὸ πίνειν τὸ τῆς Ἀφροδίτης τυγχάνειν.)
ALEXIS, Fragments. Frag. 271, Kock. (c. 400 B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 21D, 445F.

Seize and eat, seize and drink, for the world we live in is like a wedding feast, soon over.

Babylonian Talmud: Erubin, fo. 54a. (c. 450)

They ete, and drinke, and daunce, and singe, and pleye.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of the Man of Lawe, l. 609. (c. 1386)

"Eat, drink, and love, what can the rest avail us?"
So said the royal sage, Sardanapalus.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 207. (1818)

Eat, drink, and love; the rest's not worth a fillip.

BYRON, Sardanapalus. Act i, sc. 2, l. 299. (1821)

"Eat, drink, and sport; the rest of life's not worth a fillip," quoth the King.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. ii. st. 15. (1853)

Eat, drink, and play, and think that this is bliss.
A. H. CLOUGH, Easter Day. St. 9. (a. 1861)

ECHO

1 I came to the place of my birth and cried:
"The friends of my youth, where are they?"
And an echo answered, "Where are they?"

SAMUEL ROGERS, The Pleasures of Memory. Pt. i. l. 17. (1813) Quoted as from an Arabic manuscript.

Hark! to the hurried question of Despair:
"Where is my child?" An Echo answers—
"Where?"

LORD BYRON, The Bride of Abydos. Canto ii, st. 27. (1813)

2 The echoes have to applaud.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 48. (1940)

ECONOMY, see Frugality

EDEN, see Paradise

EDUCATION

See also School, Teaching

3 What sculpture is to a block of marble, education is to the soul.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 215. (1711)

Then take him to develop, if you can,
And hew the Block off, and get out the Man.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iv, l. 269. (1728) Pope is paraphrasing Aristotle, who maintained that every block of marble contained a statue, which would appear if the superfluous parts were chipped away.

4 Those things which they will use when men.
(οἱ ἄνδρες γινόμενοι χρῶσονται.)

ARISTIPPUS, when asked what boys should be taught. (c. 400 B. C.) The saying is attributed to Agesilaus the Great by PLUTARCH, Laconic Apothegms. No. 67. Sec. 213D.

The idea of a girl's education is whatever qualifies her for going to Europe.

EMERSON, Conduct of Lie: Culture. (1860)

5 A liberal education is mere tomfoolery. (νῦν δείξω ὡς οὐδὲν λέγει τὸ σωφρόνως τραφῆναι.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Knights, l. 334. (424 B. C.) Hence you see why "liberal studies" are so called: it is because they are studies worthy of a free-born gentleman. (Quare liberalia studia dicta sint, vides: quia homine libero digna sunt.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. 88, sec. 2. (c. A. D. 65) Of good natural parts and of a liberal education.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 8. (1605) To love her was a liberal education.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 49. (1709)

Men of polite learning and a liberal education.
MATTHEW HENRY, Commentaries: Acts x. (1710)

6 He never learnt the lyre. (κιθαρίζειν γὰρ οὐκ ἐπίσταται.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Wasps, l. 959. (422 B. C.)

A proverbial expression meaning "He never had much education." Repeated in l. 989.

7 The roots of education are bitter, but the fruit is sweet. (τῆς παιδείας τὰς μὲν ῥίζας εἶναι πικράς, τὸν δὲ καρπὸν γλυκύν.)

ARISTOTLE, Apothegm. (c. 340 B. C.) DIOGENES

LAERTIUS, Aristotle, v, 18, who records a number of other sayings by Aristotle about education: "Education is an ornament in prosperity and a refuge in adversity"; "Educated men are as much superior to uneducated men as the living are to the dead"; "Education is the best provision for old age." He credits Diogenes (vi, 68) with a similar saying, "Education is a controlling grace to the young, consolation to the old, wealth to the poor, and ornament to the rich."

8 Education makes a people easy to lead, but difficult to drive; easy to govern, but impossible to enslave.

LORD BROUGHAM, Speech, House of Commons, 29 Jan., 1828. Frederick the Great is said to have declared, "Ein unterrichtetes Volk lässt sich leicht regieren" (An educated people is easily governed).

9 Not to enlighten one who can be enlightened is to waste a man; to endeavor to enlighten one who cannot be enlightened is to waste words. The intelligent man wastes neither his man nor his words.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xv, ch. 7. (c. 500 B. C.) Rotten wood is unfit for carving.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. v, ch. 9. Crooked by Nature, is never made straight by Education.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1207. (1732)

10 I took a good deal of pains with his eddication, sir; let him run in the streets when he was very young, and shift for his-self. It's the only way to make a boy sharp.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 20. (1836) Sam Weller's father speaking.

11 The carp leaps the dragon gate. (Li yü tiao lung mên.)

JUSTUS DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 181. (1872) To "leap the dragon gate" is to get an academic degree.

12 By education most have been misled;
So they believe, because they so were bred.

JOHN DRYDEN, The Hind and the Panther. Pt. iii, l. 389. (1687)

13 Idjagation is something that a man has to fight f'r an' pull out iv its hole be th' hair iv its head. That's th' reason it's so precious.
F. P. DUNNE, Mr. Carnegie's Gift. (1901)

1 A very nicely educated creature, apt to catch Cold upon the least blast of Wind.

B.E., Dictionary of the Canting Crew: Tens derparnel. (1690)

2 Only the educated are free. (μόρους τοὺς παιδευθέντας ἐλευθέρους εἶναι.)

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 1, sec. 23. (c. A. D. 100)

3 There is no royal road to geometry.

EUCLID, to Ptolemy I, when the latter asked if there was not some easy way to master the science. (c. 300 B. C.) See PROCLUS, Commentaria in Euclidem. Bk. ii, ch. 4.

4 Education begins a Gentleman, Conversation completes him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1359. (1732) Education polishes good Natures, and correcteth bad ones.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1360.

5 Education forms the man.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Owl, the Swan . . . and the Farmer, l. 9. (1727)

Education makes the man.

JAMES CAWTHORN, Birth and Education of Genius. (c. 1750)

6 All uneducated people are hypocrites.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table-Talk: On the Knowledge of Character. (1821)

7 I am nicely.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, Letter, announcing his arrival in New York from England, 15 Dec., 1835.

"Whom are you?" said he, for he had been to night school.

GEORGE ADE, Bang! Bang! The Steel Box. (1920)

Ricky: I can go to night school . . .

Ronny: "Whom are you?" said Cyril.

PHILIP BARRY, You and I. Act i. (1923)

8 Instruction increases inborn worth, and right discipline strengthens the heart. (Doctrina sed vim promovet insitam, | rectique cultus pectora roborant.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 4, l. 33. (23 B. C.)

I wouldn't be surprised if Plato or Cicero or such a one said that education is the mother of benevolence.

MICHAEL INNES, Comedy of Terrors, p. 53. (1940)

9 I take it that no man is educated who has never dallied with the thought of suicide.

WILLIAM JAMES, Letters, ii 39. (1896)

10 The education usually given to the young is merely an extra dose of amour-propre. (L'éducation que l'on donne d'ordinaire aux jeunes gens est un second amour-propre qu'on leur inspire.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 761. (1665)

11 An educated man is not necessarily a learned man or a university man, but a man with certain subtle spiritual qualities which make him calm in adversity, happy when alone, just in his dealings, rational and sane in all the affairs of life.

RAMSAY MACDONALD, Address, London, 1931. The educated man knows how to work, is good to work with, and is equipped not only for work but also for leisure.

A. A. DAVID, BISHOP OF LIVERPOOL, "Speech Day" Address, 1935.

12 My foolish parents taught me to read and write. (Me litterulas stulti docuere parentes.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ix, epig. 73. (A. D. 93) He can write and read and cast account. . . . Here's a villain!

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iv, 2, 92. (1590)

To write and read comes by nature.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, iii. 3, 15. (1598)

13 A little of everything, but everything of nothing, after the French manner. (Un peu de chasque chose, et rien du tout, à la françoise.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 25. (1580) Of the education of children.

A smattering of everything, and a knowledge of nothing.

DICKENS, Sketches by Boz: Sentiment. (1835)

14 The ancient Romans kept their youth upright, and taught their children nothing that could be learned sitting. (Ils n'apprennoient rien à leurs enfants qu'ils deussent apprendre assis.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 21. (1580) Quoting Seneca.

The Roman rule was to teach a boy nothing that he could not learn standing.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: New England Reformers. (1844)

I've taught you to shoot straight, ride hard, and live clean.

O. HENRY, The Higher Abdication. (1907)

15 That's what education means—to be able to do what you've never done before.

GEORGE HERBERT PALMER, Life of Alice Freeman Palmer. The exclamation of the cook when Mrs. Palmer baked a loaf of bread without previous experience.

16 Education is a treasure. (Litterae thesaurum est.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 47. (c. A. D. 60)

17 To receive a proper education is the source and root of all goodness. (πηγὴ γὰρ καὶ ῥίζα καλοκαγαθίας τὸ νομίμον τυχεῖν παιδείας.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: De Iisberis Educandis. Sec. 7. (c. A. D. 94)

18 Education is the same, but capacities differ.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 7, Apologue 6. (c. 1258)

Capacity without education is pitiful; education without capacity is thrown away.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Maxim 56.

1

We learn, not for life, but for the lecture-room. (Non vitae sed scholae discimus.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cvi, sec. 12. (c. 64) The study of wisdom has become the study of words. (Quae philosophia fuit, facta philologia est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium, cviii, 23.

What avails it to have our bellies full of meat, if it is not digested? (Que nous sert il d'avoir la panse pleine de viande, si elle ne se digere?)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 24. (1580)

We labor only to fill the memory, and leave the understanding and the conscience empty. (Nous ne travaillons qu'à remplir la memoire, et laissons l'entendement et la conscience vuides.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 24.

Our system of education is a system of despair.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: New England Reformers. (1844) Emerson was pessimistic about American education. In the same essay he said, "We are students of words: we are shut up in schools and colleges for ten or fifteen years, and come out at last with a bag of wind."

2

Wisdom is ever a blessing; education is sometimes a curse.

JOHN A. SHEDD, Salt from My Attic, p. 29. (1928)

3

What does education often do? It makes a straight-cut ditch of a free, meandering brook.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, Oct., 1850.

4

Intelligence appears to be the thing that enables a man to get along without education. Education appears to be the thing that enables a man to get along without the use of his intelligence.

WIGGAM, New Decalogue of Science. (1923)

5

Education is an admirable thing, but it is well to remember from time to time that nothing that is worth knowing can be taught.

OSCAR WILDE, The Critic as Artist. (1891)

EEL

6

You hold an eel by the tail. (δρ' οὐπὰς τὴν ἑγχελὺν ἔχεις.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iv, 94. (1523) You are dealing with a slippery fellow. The Latin is, "Cauda tenes anguillam." HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 277, cites another form, "Non habet anguillam, per caudam qui tenet illam" (An eel held by the tail is not yet caught). The French say, "Qui tient une anguille par la queue il peut bien dire qu'elle n'est pas sienne" (He who holds an eel by the tail may well say that it is not his).

Whosoever have hym best, is no more sure of hym, than he that hath an ele by the tayle.

DUKE OF NORFOLK, State Papers Henry VIII, iv, 224. (1524)

Her promise of freendship for any auayle, Is as sure to holde as an ele by the tayle.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

I have a sliddrie eill by the tail.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 66. (c. 1595)

He that holds a woman has an eel by the tail.

BAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Scornful Lady.

Act ii, sc. 1. (c. 1612) DILKE, Lover's Luck.

Act v, sc. 1. (1696)

A woman and a wet eel have both slippery tails.

JAMES SHIRLEY, Arcadia. Act v, sc. 1. (1640)

There is as much hold of his word, as of a wet eel by the tail.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 173. (1670)

7

He is as much out of his Element, as an Eel in a Sandbag.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1912. (1732)

8

You cannot hide an eel in a sack.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 764.

(1640) RAY, Proverbs, p. 8. (1670) FULLER,

Gnomologia. No. 5875. (1732)

9

Let everybody skin their own eels.

J. C. NEAL, Beedle's Sleigh Ride, p. 36. (c. 1840)

It is a lucky eel that escapes skinning.

GEORGE ELIOT, Felix Holt, p. 27. (1866)

USED TO IT, AS EELS TO BE FLAYED, see under USE.

EFFECT, see Cause and Effect

EGG

10

Sinne of it selfe is good neither egge nor bird.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, (1861) i, 170. (1629)

Neither good egg nor bird.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 173. (1670)

He'll never dow [be good] egg nor bird.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 355. (1678)

Never good egg, or burd [chicken]. Spoken of bad boys when they become worse men.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 262. (1721)

She was never good, egg, or bird.

JOHN O'KEEFFE, Fontainebleau. Act iii, sc. 4. (1784)

11

It takes longer to hard-boil a man or a woman than an egg.

F. L. ALLEN, Only Yesterday, p. 118. (1931)

She must be a real tough egg.

DENNIS WHEATLEY, The Scarlet Impostor, p. 113. (1942)

He was a hard-boiled egg.

R. A. J. WALLING, A Corpse by Any Other Name, p. 26. (1943)

12

He lays round eggs, and asks for young turkeys.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 166.

(1817) Turkeys' eggs are oval, whereas the pigeon egg, which is here meant, is nearly round.

13

He has brought his eggs to a fine market.

CHARLOTTE BURNES, Shropshire Folk-Lore, p. 589. (1883) Said in irony of a bankrupt trader.

<sup>1</sup> Your eggs have two yolks.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 367. (1721)

"Spoken to them that think much of what they give."

All your Eggs have two Yolks apiece.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 573. (1732)

<sup>2</sup> One egg is nothing, two are very good, three are enough, four are too many, five will kill. (Un œuf n'est rien, deux font grand bien, trois est assez, quatre est trop, cinq donnent la mort.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, ii, 205. (1859)

<sup>3</sup> As good it is to be an addle egge, as an idle bird.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 207. (1580)

If you love an addle egg as well as you love an idle head, you would eat chickens i' the shell.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, i, 2, 146. (1601)

As good be an addled Egg, as an idle Bird.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 681. (1732)

But one Egg, and that addled too.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1031. (1732)

Praise thyself, chick, thou hast laid an egg, and that a bad one.

J. COLLINS, Spanish Proverbs, p. 14. (1823)

<sup>4</sup> Who can help loving the land that has taught us Six hundred and eighty-five ways to dress eggs?

THOMAS MOORE, The Fudge Family in Paris. Letter viii. (1818) Moore is referring to the epigram of De la Reynière. "On connoît en France 685 manières différentes d'accommoder les œufs, sans compter celles que nos savans imaginent chaque jour" (They know in France 685 different ways of dressing eggs, without counting those which our savants invent every day). Anyone who looks through the Escoffier cook-book will see that this is scarcely an exaggeration.

<sup>5</sup> Eggs today are better than a chicken tomorrow. (Ad praesens ova, cras pullis sunt meliora.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 42. (1545)

Quoting a Latin proverb, from the Greek, κάλλια τὸ σημερινὸν αὔρον, παρὰ τὴν αὐρινὴν δριμύτα. See NEGRIS, Greek Proverbs, p. 65. The Spaniards say, "È meglio oggi un uovo, che domani una gallina," and the Italians have the same proverb.

It is better to have an egg today than a hen tomorrow.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Ital.-Eng., p. 1. (1659) TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 113. (1666)

Better to have an Egg to Day, than a Hen to Morrow; what's in the Fist, is worth two in the Fenn; one Horse in the Stable, is more useful for present Service, than three in the Pasture.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 215. (1709)

It is better to have a Hen to Morrow, than an Egg to Day.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2916. (1732)

A more foresighted version.

An egg to-day is better than a hen to-morrow

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

An egg to-day is better than a chicken to-morrow.

CHARLES DIBDIN, The Quaker. Act i, sc. 2. (1777)

There is an old adage that "an egg to-day is worth a hen to-morrow."

R. S. SURTEES, Plain or Ringlets? ch. 13. (1860)

A BIRD IN THE HAND IS WORTH TWO IN THE BUSH, see under BIRD.

<sup>6</sup> An egg will be in three bellies in twenty-four hours.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 131. (1678)

Better half an egg than an empty shell.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 131. HALF A

LOAF BETTER THAN NO BREAD, see under BREAD.

Give him the other half-egg and burst him.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 241.

<sup>7</sup> One can't expect to make an omelet without breaking eggs. (On ne saurait faire une omelette sans casser des œufs.)

ROBESPIERRE, Epigram. (c. 1790) On the authority of A. B. CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 131, but Robespierre was merely repeating an old saying, which has also been ascribed to Napoleon.

The omelette will not be made without the breaking of eggs.

GEN. P. THOMPSON, Audi Alt., ii, xc, 65. (1859)

You cannot make an omelette without breaking eggs.

R. L. STEVENSON, St. Ives. Ch. 8. (1894)

Without breaking eggs one could not make omelettes.

S. J. WEYMAN, Ovington's Bank. Ch. 19. (1922)

Like Napoleon, he knows that you cannot make an omelette without breaking eggs.

A. MERRITT, Creep, Shadow, p. 160. (1934)

You can't make an omelette without breaking eggs.

CYRIL HARE, Tragedy at Law, p. 163. (1943)

You cannot, proverbially, make omelettes without breaking eggs.

WILLIAM ROUGHHEAD, The Art of Murder, p. 14. (1943)

The Italians say, "Chi non rompe le uova, non fa la frittata" (pancakes); the Spaniards, "No se hacen tortillas sin romper huevos."

You can't unscramble eggs.

J. PIERPONT MORGAN, when he rejected the proposal to dissolve the trusts. (c. 1905)

<sup>8</sup> Mine honest friend, Will you take eggs for money?

SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale, i, 2, 161. (1611)

To be put off with something worthless.

Contented to take eggs (as it were) for their money.

G. H., History of the Cardinals, ii, 1, 130. (1670)

By the next fight, if we beat, the Dutch will certainly be content to take eggs for their money.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 27 June, 1666.

He will be glad to take eggs for his money, i. e. to compound the matter with loss.

B.E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew. (1720)

<sup>1</sup> An egge is not so full of meate, as she is full of lyes.

JOHN STILL (?), Gammer Gurton's Needle. Act v, sc. 2. (1575)

Thy head is as full of quarrels as an egg is full of meat.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iii, 1, 24. (1595)

As full of knavery as an egge of meat.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 69. (1639)

As full of waggery as an egge's full of meat.

COWLEY, The Guardian. Act i, sc. 1. (1641)

As full of champagne as an egg's full of meat.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Bibo and Charon. (1719)

As full of wit as an egg is full of meat.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Vol. ii, ch. 37. (1758)

An egg is proverbially "full of meat."

JOHN DORAN, Table Traits, p. 190. (1854) The Italians say, "È pieno quanto un uovo," and the French, "Il est plein comme un œuf."

As full as an egg is of meat.

FRANCIS BEEDING, Eleven Were Brave, p. 65. (1941)

<sup>2</sup> Don't risk all your livelihood on the hollow ships. (μή δ' ἐπὶ ῥησὶν ἀπαντα βίον κοίησαι τῆσθαί.)

TERTULLIAN, quoting an old Greek proverb. (c. A. D. 197) As cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, who gives the Latin, "Uni navi ne committas omnia" (Trust not all your goods to one ship).

I adventured in one ship to put all my wealth . . . determining either to be a Knight as we saye or a knitter of cappes.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 285. (1580)

My ventures are not in one bottom trusted.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, i, 1, 42. (1596)

Let us not venture all this poore remainder In one unlucky bottom.

JOHN WEBSTER, The Dutchesse of Malfy. Act iii, sc. 5. (1623)

Venture not all in one bottom.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 95. (1639) The Germans say, "Lade nicht Alles in einem Schiff" (Don't embark your all in one vessel).

I must not hang all my bells upon one horse.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 14. (1659)

FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 1786, improves the form: "Hang not all your Bells upon one Horse." The Scots say, "Put not all your crocks on one shelf."

Don't venture all your eggs in one basket.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 344. (1710)

To put all his eggs in the same basket. (Mettre tous ses œufs dans un même panier.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, i, 188.

Citing the Dictionnaire de l'Académie, 1835. "May I carry your basket all my life?" "If you'll put all your eggs in it, yes," answered Annie boldly.

WHYTE-MELVILLE, Uncle John. Ch. 27. (1874)

The fool saith, "Put not all thy eggs in one basket"—which is but a manner of saying, "Scatter your money and your attention"; but the wise man saith, "Put all your eggs in one basket and WATCH THAT BASKET."

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar. (1893)

Do not put too many eggs in one basket. However well you may be advised, . . . something may occur to upset all calculations.

LORD AVEBURY, Use of Life. Ch. 3. (1894)

Lay all your eggs in one basket and then you will trip over them.

JOSEPH SHEARING, The Strange Case of Lucile Cléry, p. 127. (1932)

I put all my eggs into one basket and I have lost my treasure.

MANNING COLES, They Tell No Tales, p. 225. (1942)

I don't keep all my eggs in one basket.

J. A. PHILLIPS, The Case of the Shivering Chorus Girls, p. 80. (1942)

<sup>3</sup> He who likes to eat fresh eggs must raise his own chickens.

HERMAN SUDERMAN, The Song of Songs. Ch. 12. (1909)

<sup>4</sup> He's a good sound egg and will keep the matter under his hat.

LEE THAYER, Hanging's Too Good, p. 110. (1943)

<sup>5</sup> Persones comyng in with their fiue egges, how that Scylla had given over his office.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, 272. (1542) "To come in with five eggs," to come in fussily, with an idle story or silly rumor.

He came in the thyردة, with his V egges.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1546)

He comes in with his five eggs, and foure be rotten.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 19. (1639)

You come with your five eggs a penny and four of them rotten.

GEORGE MERITON, Praise of Yorkshire Ale, p. 83. (1683)

You must come in with your two eggs a-penny, and three of them rotten.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

When there's five eggs a penny, four of them are rotten.

C. H. SFURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 16. (1869)

FROM EGGS TO APPLES, see under BEGINNING AND ENDING.

WON WITH THE EGG AND LOST WITH THE SHELL, see under WINNING AND LOSING.

EGOISM

See also Conceit, Self-Love, Vanity

<sup>1</sup> Every Sprat, now-a-days, calls it self a Herring.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1464. (1732)
Each little life

Thinks the great axle of the universe
Turns on its fate.

BAYARD TAYLOR, Lars. Bk. i. (1873)

<sup>2</sup> You haf too much Ego in your Cosmos.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Life's Handicap: Bertran and Bimi. (1890)

He had "too much ego in his cosmos," like
Kipling's Bimi.

VAN WYCK BROOKS, *New England: Indian
Summer*, p. 482. (1940) Of Henry Adams.

Overstuffed egos, waddling about in self-appointed importance!

E. K. GOLDTHWAITE, You Did It, p.117. (1943)

<sup>3</sup> Egoism is hateful. (Le moi est haïssable.)
. . . It is unjust in itself since it makes itself the center of everything; it is unjust to others since it would enslave them.

PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. i, art. ix, no. 23. (c. 1660)
Egoism is sometimes a form of genius.

JAMES HUNEKER, Painted Veils. Ch. 1. (1920)

<sup>4</sup> I easily regain favor with myself. (Mecum facile redeo in gratiam.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. v, fab. 3, l. 6. (c. 25 B.C.)
Men love to hear well of themselves.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 12. (1639)

<sup>5</sup> When the loose mountain trembles from on high,

Shall gravitation cease if you go by?

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 127. (1732)

To observations which ourselves we make,
We grow more partial for th' observer's sake.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 11. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> Without doubt I can teach crowing, for I gobble. (Sans doute Je peux apprendre à coqueriquer: je glougloute.)

EDMOND ROSTAND, Chanticleer. Act i, sc.2. (1910)

THE COCK THINKS HE MAKES THE SUN RISE. see under COCK.

<sup>7</sup> He that is giddy thinks the world turns round.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, v, 2,
20. (1594)

Though . . . the whole world contradict it, they care not, . . . and as Gregory well notes of such as are vertiginous, they think all turns round and moves.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy.
Pt. iii, sec. iv, mem. 1, subs. 3. (1621)

<sup>8</sup> It is difficult to esteem a man as highly as he wishes to be esteemed. (Il est difficile d'esti-mer quelqu'un comme il veut l'être.)

VAUVENARQUES, Réflexions. No. 67. (1746)

Of all speculations the market holds forth,
The best that I know, for the lover of pelf,
Is to buy Marcus up at the price he is worth,
And then sell him at that which he sets on himself.

THOMAS MOORE, A Speculation. (c. 1823)

<sup>9</sup> I and my king. (Ego et rex meus.)

CARDINAL WOLSEY, referring to Henry VIII.
(c. 1520) Bad taste, perhaps, but certainly good Latin!

The most violent egotism I have met with in the course of my reading, is that of Cardinal Wolsey, ego et rex meus.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 562. (1712)

Der Kaiser auf der Vaterland

Und Gott on high, all dings gommand,

Ve two, ach, don'd you understandt?

Meinself—und Gott.

ALEXANDER MACGREGOR ROSE, Kaiser & Co.
(1897)

<sup>10</sup> It makes dear self on well-bred tongues prevail,

And I the little hero of each tale.

EDWARD YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. i, l. 115.
(1728)

We talk little, if we do not talk about ourselves.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 172. (1821)

They talked together like two egoists,

In conversation made up all of eyes.

THOMAS HOOD, Legend of Navarre. (c. 1825)

EGYPT

See also Nile

<sup>11</sup> Truly at weaving wiles the Egyptians are clever. (θεῖοι πλέκουν τοὶ μηχανὰς Αἰγύπτιοι.)

AESCHYLUS, Fragmenta Incerta. No. 206,
Smyth. (c. 458 B.C.) SCHOLIAST ON ARISTOPH-
ANES, Clouds, 1130, and in various collections of proverbs, ZENOBIUS, iii, 37; PSEUDO-DIOGENIANUS, iv, 35, etc.

<sup>12</sup> The riches of Egypt are for the foreigners therein.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 262.
(1817) "Since the time of the Pharoahs Egypt has never been governed by national rulers, but constantly by foreigners."

<sup>13</sup> Ye shall spoil the Egyptians. (Spoliabitis Aegyptum.)

Old Testament: Exodus, iii, 22. (c. 800 B.C.)
And they spoiled the Egyptians. (Spoliaverunt Aegyptios.)

Old Testament: Exodus, xii, 36. (c. 800 B.C.)
"How does a man of your strict principles reconcile yourself to cheat the revenue?" "It's a mere spoiling o' the Egyptians," replied Andrew.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 18. (1818)

Is it lawful to spoil the Egyptians?

CHARLES READE, Wandering Heir. Ch. 4. (1872)

It's poor work spoiling the Egyptians.

BERNARD SHAW, John Bull's Other Island. Act
iii. (1904) Proverbial for despoiling or plundering one's enemies.

<sup>1</sup> The land of Egypt, when we sat by the flesh pots, and when we did eat bread to the full. (Terra Aegypti, quando sedebamus super ollas carniū, et comedebamus panem in saturitate.)

Old Testament: Exodus, xvi, 3. (c. 800 B.C.)
We remember the fish, which we did eat in Egypt freely; the cucumbers, and the melons, and the leeks, and the onions, and the garlick.

Old Testament: Numbers, xi, 5. (c. 550 B.C.)
The French say, "Regretter les oignons d'Egypte" (To regret the onions of Egypt).

<sup>2</sup> Bury me not, I pray thee, in Egypt. (Non sepelias me in Aegyptio.)

Old Testament: Genesis, xlvii, 29. (c. 550 B.C.)

<sup>3</sup> Egypt is like a very fair heifer. (Vitula elegans atque formosa Aegyptus.)

Old Testament: Jeremiah, xlvii, 20. (c. 700 B.C.)
Soldiers, from these pyramids forty centuries look down upon you. (Soldats, du haut ces Pyramides quarante siècles vous regardent!)

NAPOLEON, Proclamation to His Army, before the Battle of the Pyramids, 21 July, 1797.
See GUILLON, Napoléon, p. 59.

ELBOW

<sup>4</sup> He . . . welche will dwell a pleasure . . . must dwell at elbowe rome.

ANDREW BOORDE, The Boke for to Lerne a Man to be Wyse in Buylding of His House, A ij b. (c. 1540)

What does she seek more than elbow room? (Que cherche elle tant que ses coudees franches?)

MONTAIGNE, Essays, Bk. i, ch. 38. (1580)

Now my soul hath elbow-room.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, v, 7, 28. (1596)

Give me a footing, and I will find elbow room.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Note, in his Erasmus. (1600)

Give faith scope, give it elbow-room to work.

THOMAS BROOKS, Works (1867), vi, 331. (1670)

But I love Elbow-room when're I drink.

SWIFT, Toland's Invitation, l. 37. (1712)

I would rather want victuals than elbow-room.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Like hogs in a pen, and in want of elbow-room.

JOHN LEACOCK, The Fall of British Tyranny: Dedication. (1776) "Elbow-room" is repeated twice more in the play, put into the mouth of General Burgoyne, with a note that the expression should be attributed to General Howe and not to Burgoyne, who, because of his use of it, had come to be known as Mr. Elbow Room. "How much better will the American clergy be employed by Congress, than Mr. Elbow Room was by his master, George the Third."—Maryland Journal, 20 Jan., 1778.

They had resolved upon . . . securing the elbow-room which Burgoyne proposed enjoying.

WILLIAM GORDON, The History of the Rise, Progress, and Establishment of the Independence of the United States of America. Vol. ii. p. 40. (1788)

<sup>5</sup> In and out like a fiddler's elbow.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 79. (1917)
"Too much play, like a fiddler's elbow." Said of something which has worked loose.

Devonshire Assn. Transactions, lvii, 152. (1926)

<sup>6</sup> No elbow bends outwards.

GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 358. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>7</sup> It smells of elbow-grease.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 92. (1639)
Meer ink and elbow-grease do more harm.

ANDREW MARVELL, The Rehearsal Transposed, i, 5. (1672)

It will cost nothing but a little elbow-grease.

B.E., A Dictionary of the Canting Crew, sig. E1. (1690)

It had no elbow-grease bestowed on't. Nec demorsos sapit unguis.

ADAM LITTLETON, Latin Dictionary. (1735)

Elbow-grease gives the best polish—i.e. hard rubbing makes furniture look brighter; generally industry is the surest road to success.

ROBERT FORBY, The Vocabulary of East Anglia, p. 431. (1830)

Forethought is the elbow-grease which a novelist—or poet, or dramatist—requires.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, Thackeray, p. 122. (1879)

The whole place shone with elbow grease.

GEORGE BELLAIRS, Murder Will Speak, p. 33. (1943)

<sup>8</sup> Using the elbow to wipe the nose. (ἀγκῶν ἀπομυσοῦμενος.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, iv, 46. (c. A.D. 125)

<sup>9</sup> Money which . . . he squander'd away in shaking the elbow.

THOMAS HEARNE, Collections, 26 Nov., 1705
That is, in throwing dice.

Many good and great men have shook the elbow

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianae. Works (1855), i, 127. (1826)

<sup>10</sup> My elbow itches, I must change my bed-fellow.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 12. (1659)

<sup>11</sup> More power to your elbow!

J. R. LOWELL, Letters, i, 341. (1860) SHAW.
John Bull's Other Island. Act i. (1904)

<sup>12</sup> Your witte wilbe worn threadbare, and your banquerout inuention cleane out at the el-bowes.

THOMAS NASHE, An Almond for a Parrot, 26 (1590)

He cannot [speak] sir; he's out at elbow.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, ii, 1, 61 (1604)

My stockings happen to be a little out at elbows.

SAMUEL WESLEY, Maggots: To the Reader. (1685)

They are one day very richly drest, and perhaps out at elbows the next.

EDWARD WARD, The London Spy, p. 163. (1700)

It's a little awt at elbows.

COLLEY CIBBER, The Provok'd Husband. Act iv, sc. 1. (1728)

[He] is said to be much out at elbows.

SMOLLETT, Humphry Clinker, Apr. 28. (1771)

He [Steele] died out at elbows on his wife's little property in Wales.

SAMUEL SMILES, Thrift, p. 273. (1875)

1 She hath broke her elbow at the Church door. Spoken of a housewively maid that grows idle after marriage.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 230. (1678)

She broke her elbow at the kirk door.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 293. (1721)

She broke her Elbow on her Wedding Day.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4119. (1732)

2 Let us bathe our hands in Caesar's blood Up to the elbows.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, iii, 1, 107. (1599)

Up to our elbows making Damson Jam.

AUSTIN DOBSON, A Dead Letter. (1883)

3 One rubb'd his elbow thus, and fleer'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 109. (1595)

Fickle changelings . . .

Which gape and rub the elbow at the news.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, v, 1, 77. (1597)

He'll . . . scratch the elbow, To see two butchers cures fight.

EDWARD GUILPIN, Skiaethia, p. 25. (1598) To rub or scratch the elbow is to show oneself pleased.

ELEPHANT

4 The white elephant whereon he [the King of Siam] was mounted.

HENRY COGAN, tr., Pinto's Travels. Ch. 48. (1663)

Elyot regarded this new dignity much as the gift of a white elephant.

CROFT, in Elyot's Governor, i, Life, 60. (1883)

And he swore like mad because he had

An elephant on his hands.

J. CHEEVER GOODWIN, Wang: Elephant Song.

(1891) Made famous by De Wolf Hopper.

5 If there were no elephant in the jungle, the buffalo would be a great animal.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 120. (1902)

A West African proverb.

6 That's sufficient, as Tom Haynes said when he saw the Elephant. Now let him come.

AUGUSTUS B. LONGSTREET, Georgia Scenes, p. 6. (1835)

When a man is disappointed in anything he undertakes, when he has seen enough, . . . he has "seen the elephant."

GEORGE W. KENDALL, The Sante Fé Expedition, i, 110. (1844)

My friend Will Wyllie, who has seen the elephant in its entirety, from trunk to tail.

J. H. BEADLE, Western Wilds, p. 45. (1878)

In Dodge in '82 it took money to see the elephant.

ANDY ADAMS, The Log of a Cowboy, p. 203. (1903)

He claims to have saw the elephant and hearn the owl.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Passing of Black Eagle. (1909)

7 He is encompassed with an elephant's hide. (Elephanti corio circumtentus est.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 235. (c. 200 B. C.)

The Germans say, "Er hat ein Eselsfell" (He has a mule's hide).

8 The camel never forgets an injury. (μνησικακία κάμηλου.)

UNKNOWN. A Greek proverb, celebrating the camel's memory (μνήμην κάμηλου), reputed prodigious among the Greeks. In modern times, this faculty has been transferred to the elephant, but the Greeks regarded the elephant as stupid and senseless, perhaps on account of its size.

Women and elephants never forget an injury.

SAKI (H. H. MUNRO), Reginald: Reginald on Besetting Sins. (1910)

Women and elephants never forget.

DOROTHY PARKER, Ballade of Unfortunate Mammals. (1930)

A dick like you is like an elephant. He never forgets.

C. F. ADAMS, And Sudden Death, p. 99. (1940)

ELOQUENCE

See also Oratory

9 I grew intoxicated with my own eloquence.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Contarini Fleming. Pt. i, ch. 7. (1832)

10 Every man is eloquent once in his life.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Eloquence. (1877)

11 Eloquence hath force to make the coward courageous the tirant curteous & merciful.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 57. (1578)

A man whose eloquence has power

To clear the fullest house in half an hour.

SOAME JENYNS, Imitations of Horace. Bk. ii, epis. 1. (1747)

12 Then among them uprose Nestor, sweet of speech, the clear-voiced orator of the men of Pylos. (τοῖσι δὲ Νέστωρ ἡδυσπῆς ἀνδρόνοος, λιγύς Πυλίων ἀγορητής.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. i, l. 247. (c. 850 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ii, 56, with the Latin proverb, "Nestorea eloquentia." Erasmus follows this with another proverb, "Lepos Atticus: eloquentia Attica" (Attic charm, Attic eloquence).

13 Their own eloquence is fatal to many. (Sua mortifera est facundia.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 9. (c. A. D. 120)

<sup>1</sup> Eloquence is to the sublime what the whole is to its part. (L'éloquence est au sublime ce que le tout est à sa partie.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 1. (1688)
Profane eloquence is transferred from the Bar, where it has become obsolete, to the Pulpit, where it is out of place. (L'éloquence profane est transposée, pour ainsi dire, du Barreau, . . . à la Chaire où elle ne doit pas être.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 15.
<sup>2</sup> The finest eloquence is that which gets things done.

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE, Speech, at the Peace Conference, Paris, Jan., 1919.

<sup>3</sup> Eloquence is a persuasive thing. (πειστικὸν λόγος.)

MENANDER, Hymnis. Frag. 472K. (c. 300 B. C.)
"But," Menander continues, "it's really the character of the speaker that does the persuading, not eloquence."

<sup>4</sup> Till the sad breaking of that Parliament
Broke him, as that dishonest victory
At Chaeronea, fatal to liberty,
Kil'd with report that Old man eloquent.

JOHN MILTON, Sonnet: To the Lady Margaret Ley. (c. 1640) Referring to Isocrates, the Athenian orator, who died four days after learning of the defeat of the Athenians at Chaeronea. "Old man Eloquent" was afterwards applied to John Quincy Adams and to W. E. Gladstone.

<sup>5</sup> Often there is eloquence in a silent look.
(Saepe tacens vocem verbaque vultus habet.)
OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 574. (c. 1 B. C.)

<sup>6</sup> Soul-bending queen of all the world, Eloquence! (Flexanima atque omnium regina rerum oratio!)

PACUVIUS, Hermiona. Frag. 187, Loeb. (c. 160 B. C.)

<sup>7</sup> True eloquence scorns eloquence. (La vraie éloquence se moque de l'éloquence.)

PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. i, art. x, No. 34. (c. 1660)

<sup>8</sup> He is eloquent enough who has the accent of truth. (Sat est disertus e quo loquitur veritas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 691. (c. 43 B. C.)
He who has the truth at his heart need never fear the want of persuasion on his tongue.

JOHN RUSKIN, The Stones of Venice. Vol. iii, pt. iv, sec. 99. (1853)

<sup>9</sup> It is the heart which makes us eloquent.
(Pectus est quod disertos facit.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. x, ch. vii, sec. 15. (c. A. D. 80) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, Essays, iii, 5. The Germans say, "Wo das Herz mir spricht ist die Zunge beredet" (Where the heart speaks to me is the tongue eloquent).

<sup>10</sup> So much the more eloquent as I was less sincere. (D'autant plus éloquent que j'étais moins sincère.)

EDMOND ROSTAND, Cyrano de Bergerac. Act iii, sc. 1. (1898)

<sup>11</sup> Plenty of eloquence, but little wisdom. (Satis eloquentiae, sapientiae parum.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Sec. 5. (c. 41 B. C.)
Sometimes rendered, "Plenty of talk, but little wisdom."

Eloquence may exist without a proportionable degree of wisdom.

EDMUND BURKE, Revolution in France. (1790)
Much eloquence, little conscience. (Di grand' eloquenza, poco coscienza.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 190. (1856) An Italian proverb.

<sup>12</sup> Eloquence, smooth and cutting, is like a razor whetted with oil.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1714)

<sup>13</sup> Mistress of all the arts. (Omnium artium domina.)

TACITUS, De Oratoribus. Sec. 32. (c. A. D. 85)
Referring to eloquence.

Eloquence, the foster-child of license, which fools call liberty. (Eloquentia, alumna licentiae, quam stulti libertatem vocabant.)

TACITUS, De Oratoribus. Sec. 46.

EMPTY

<sup>14</sup> As empty as a snake's slough. (κενότερος λεβηρίδος.)

ATHENAEUS, Deipnosophistai Sec. 362B. (c. A. D. 228)

Empty as a bran new coffin.

JOAQUIN MILLER, The Danites. Act i. (1877)

As cold and empty as a dead man's hand.

JOAQUIN MILLER, The Danites. Act i.

The house was empty as a shell.

R. P. TRISTRAM COFFIN, Late Christmas. (1942)

<sup>15</sup> Empty chambers make women play the wantons.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary:Chambre. (1611)

Empty chambers make foolish maids.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 30. (1640)

Bare walls make giddy housewives. Parallel to this I take to be that French proverb, Vides chambres font les dames folles, which yet Mr. Cotgrave thus renders, Empty chambers make women play the wantons; in a different sense.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 69. (1678)

<sup>16</sup> But they have left an aching void.

The world can never fill.

WILLIAM COWPER, Olney Hymns. Bk. i, 3. (1779) Eric Partridge says "aching void" has long been a cliché.

<sup>17</sup> They go about like empty vessels, void of sense but full of noise. (ὥσπερ ἀγγεῖα κενὸί φρενῶν ἤχου δὲ μεστόι περιπατοῦν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Garrulity. Sec. 502F. (c. A. D. 95)

One coin in a box rattles loud.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Metzia, fo. 96b. (c. 450)

Vessels never make so greate a sound as when they are emptie.

BISHOP JOHN JEWEL, Defence of the Apology for the Church of England. (c. 1560)

The emptie vessell giueth a greater sound then the full barrrell.

JOHN LVLV, Euphues (Arber), p. 45. (1579)

The saying is true, "The empty vessel makes the greatest sound."

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 74.

(1599) The Germans put it the other way around, "Volle Fässer klingen nicht!" (Full vessels make no sound).

Empty vessels have the loudest sounds, And cowards prattle more than men of worth.

ROBERT GREENE, The Pinner of Wakefield, l. 1101. (1599)

Those vessels yield most sound, that have least liquor.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Contemplations, xiii, l. (1612)

Empty vessels sound most.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 645. (1640)

Too[m] [empty] bags rattle.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 64. (c. 1595)

I have always observed that your empty vessels sound loudest.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Faculties of the Mind. (1707)

Shaal [shallow] waters make the greatest sound. And empty fellows make the greatest noise.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 289. (1721)

Empty Vessels give the greatest Sound.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1366. (1732)

Empty vessels sound the loudest. (Vasa vacua multum sonant.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 214. (1778)

It rings; it is empty.

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 437. (1869)

Empty barrels make the most noise.

E. M. WRIGHT, Rustic Speech, 171. (1913) The French say, "Les tonneaux vides sont ceux qui font le plus se bruit." Also in this form in German, Dutch, and Danish. The Danes also say, "Tomme Vogne buldre meest" (Empty wagons make the most noise).

The full teapot makes no sound; the half-empty one is very noisy.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 423. (1937)

END

See also Beginning and End

1 You . . . made no end of promises.

JOHN BINGHAM, Xenophon, p. 143. (1623)

Box at the opera costs no end.

CHARLES READE, It is Never too Late to Mend. Ch. 10. (1856)

You will have no end of trouble.

EDWARD PEACOCK, Mabel Herron, i, 1, 9. (1872)

Keats was no end of a fellow.

WALTER BESANT, All in a Garden Fair. Ch. 8. (c. 1886)

2 This time we must put an end to it. (Il faut en finir.)

CLARE BOOTHE, Europe in the Spring, p. 64. (1940) The phrase which was on all French lips in the spring of 1940.

3 Who keeps one end in view makes all things serve.

ROBERT BROWNING, In a Balcony. (1855)

4 I hope of this to maken a good ende.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. i, l. 973. (c. 1380)

This is your ende and your conclusioun.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knightes Tale, l. 1011. (c. 1386)

After the word of Senek: for "thinges that been folily doon, . . . shullen never come to good ende."

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibens. Sec. 42.

5 But at the laste, as every thing hath ende.

She took hir leve, and nedes wolde wende

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, l. 615. (c. 1380)

Every thing hath ende

CHAUCER, The Legend of Good Women: Cleopatra, l. 72. (c. 1385)

Som tyme an ende ther is of every dede.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knightes Tale, l. 1778. (c. 1386)

Than may ye see that al this thing hath ende.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knightes Tale, l. 2168.

Ye wote wele of all thing moste be an ende

UNKNOWN, Partonope of Blois, l. 11144. (c. 1400)

Every thyng at the laste draweth to his ende

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoyse, p. 527. (1530)

All things have their end and period. (Ainsi ont toutes choses leur fin & periode.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 31. (1534)

All things tend to their end. (Toutes choses se meuvent à leur fin.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 36. (1552)

There is no road but hath an end. (N'y a il chemin qui n'ayt son issue.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 19. (1580)

Euery thing hath an end, and a pudding hath two

THOMAS NASHE, Four Letters Confuted, p. 28

(1592) Nashe seems to have been the first to add the second phrase, which became instantly popular. See SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738) SCOTT, Woodstock. Ch. 10. (1826) etc., etc.

A pudding merits double praise.

A pudding hath two ends.

THOMAS BASTARD, Chrestoleros. Bk. iii, epig. 12. (1598)

As writers say, all things have end,

And that we call a pudding hath his two.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Knight of the Burning Pestle. Act i. (1609)

6 Playing both ends against the middle.

PETER CHENEY, Dark Duet, p. 125. (1943)

He was not above playing both ends against the middle to get what he wanted.

ELIZABETH DEAN, Murder a Mile High, p. 25. (1944)

1 Remember the end. (τέλος σκοπεῖν.)

CHILON, the Spartan philosopher, and one of the seven wise men of Greece, who died c. 597 B.C. The phrase is said to have been one of those inscribed on the wall of the temple at Delphi. Quoted by Solon to Croesus. (PLUTARCH, Lives, Solon. Sec. 28.) The Latin is, "Finem respice," or "Respice finem." For full quotation see under DEATH: COUNT NO MAN HAPPY.

You must look to the end. (τέλος ὄπ᾿αν.)

SOLON, to Croesus. (c. 575 B.C.) As quoted by ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics, i, 10. 1. Whatsoever thou takest in hand, remember the end, and thou shalt never do amiss. (In omnibus operibus tuis memorare novissima tua, et in aeternum non peccabis.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), vii, 36. (c. 190 B.C.) Ben Sira gives two other similar admonitions, "Remember thy end, and let enmity cease" (xxviii, 6), and "Remember the last end" (xxxviii, 20).

Whatever you attempt, consider where you're coming out. (Quicquid conaris, quo pervenias cogites.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 561. (c. 43 B.C.) The wise man, before beginning an action, looks carefully to the end.

BHARTIRHARI, Niti Sataka. No. 99. (c. A. D. 100) In every thing you do, consider the matters which come first, and those which follow after, and only then approach the thing itself. (ἐκάστου ἔργου σκόπει τὰ καθηγουμένα καὶ τὰ ἀκόλουθα καὶ οὕτως ἔρχου ἐπ' αὐτό.)

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. iii, ch. 15, sec. 1. (c. A. D. 100)

For qua [who] be-gynne wil any thing euer-mare think on the endinge.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 4379. (c. 1300) Who take hede of the begynnyng, what fal shal of the ende. | He leyith a bussh to-fore the gap, ther fortune wold in ryde.

UNKNOWN, The Tale of Beryn, l. 55. (c. 1400) Whatever you do, do cautiously, and look to the end. (Quidquid agas, prudenter agas, et respice finem.)

UNKNOWN, Gesta Romanorum. Tale 103. (c. 1440)

In al your maters, er ye begynne,
Think what ende wol be the conclusion.

GEORGE ASHBY, Poems, p. 39. (c. 1470) Respice finem, mark the end; look upon the end.

HUGH LATIMER, Sermon at Stamford, 1550.

This sage saying, the wise have said, and say,
Have an eye to the end, ere thou aught begin.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, The Spider and the Flie, p. 254. (1556)

Mark the end. (Riguarda il fine.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32. (1578)

Respice finem, respect your end; or rather. . .
'Beware the rope's end.'

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, iv, 4, 43. (1593)

When any great design thou dost intend,
Thinks on the means, the manner, and the end.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, Of Prudence, l. 186. (c. 1650) In everything one must consider the end. (En toute chose il faut considérer la fin.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Renard et le Bouc. Bk. iii, fab. 5. (1668) See also L'ESTRANGE, Aesop, 81. (1692) SCOTT, The Antiquary. Ch. 8. (1816)

This human life is best understood by the wise man's rule, of regarding the end.

SWIFT, A Tale of a Tub. Sec. 7. (1704)

2 Whoso regardeth not the end, hath not Fortune to friend.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, tr., The Thousand Nights and a Night. Nt. 4. (1885)

3 We inn diversely, but end alike.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 13. (1639)

4 I cannot make both ends meet.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 242. (1639) I cannot live within my income. From the French, "Joindre les deux bouts."

Worldly wealth he cared not for, desiring onely to make both ends meet.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: Cumberland, i, 343. (1662)

Tho' he had a good estate, hardly making both ends meet.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, iv, 137. (1748)

He made shift to make the two ends of the year meet.

SMOLLETT, Roderick Random. Ch. 10. (1748)

They made out to make two ends meet.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws, Ch. 6. (1843)

The sort of life where it is hard to make both ends meet.

E. M. WRIGHT, Rustic Speech, p. 14. (1913)

5 This answered my end.

DANIEL DEFOE, Robinson Crusoe, i, 10, 174. (1719)

I have no end to serve but truth.

BISHOP GEORGE BERKELEY, A Defence of Free-Thinking in Mathematics. Sec. 6. (1735)

She had fully gained her end.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, History of Scotland, i, 3, 260. (1759)

6 There is no end in nature, but every end is a beginning.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Circles. (1841)

To accomplish anything excellent, the will must work for catholic and universal ends.

EMERSON, Essays: Civilization. (1870)

7 All ends well. (ἀλλ' εὖ τελεῖται.)

EURIPIDES, Orestes, l. 1670. (c. 410 B.C.)

Wel is him, that wel ende mai.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Hendyng, l. 1. (c. 1300)

Al ys good that hath good ende.

JOHN AWDELEY, Poems, p. 54. (c. 1426)

If the end be well, all will be well. (Si finis bonus est, totum bonum erit.)

UNKNOWN, Gesta Romanorum. Tale 67. (c. 1440)

"Al ys well that endyth well," said the gud wyff.
HILLS, Common-place Book, p. 110. (c. 1530)
All is well that ends well.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

A proverb usually quoted in the form Shakespeare used as the title of a play (1602),
"All's well that ends well."

Nothing is ill that ends well.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3668. (1732)
All is well that ends well. (Tout est bien qui finit bien.)

HENRI AMIEL, Journal Intime, 21 Sept., 1868.

Amiel was repeating a proverb common to all European languages. The Germans say, "Ende gut, alles gut"; the Italians, "Tutto è bene che riesce bene"; the Spaniards, "Al fin es debido el honor"; the Dutch, "Het end goed, alles goed"; the Danes, "Naar Enden er god er alting godt."

A's weel that ends weel! the world will last our day.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 34. (1818)

All's swell that ends swell.

H. S. KEELER, The Sharkskin Book, p. 149. (1941)

1 The end maketh al men equal.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 31. (1578)

See also under DEATH.

2 A morning Sun, and a wine-bred child, and a Latin-bred woman seldom end well.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 865. (1640)

3 Some loose or od ende will come man, some one daie.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

He's on a loose end, without employment.

P. THOMPSON, History of Boston, p. 714. (1856)

When I've left off carrying my pack, and am at a loose end.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Mill on the Floss. Bk. vi, ch. 4. (1860)

On the Saturday evening he was at the "lowse end."

EDWARD PEACOCK, Ralf Skirlaugh, iii, 228. (1870)

4 The business end of a carpet tack.

ALFRED HOLBROOK, Hygiene of the Brain, 56. (1878)

I'm about good enough to manage the business end of an affair like this here.

WINSTON CHURCHILL, The Crisis, p. 113. (1901)

7 To bring to an end. (Ad umbilicum adducere.)

HORACE, Epodes. No. xiv, l. 8. (c. 20 B.C.)

Quoted by ERASMUS, i, ii, 32, who gives the proverb as "Ad umbilicum ducere."

We have come to the very end. (Pervenimus usque ad umbilicos.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iv, No. 89. (c. A. D. 90)

The umbilicus is, of course, the umbilical cord, or the navel, and hence the middle of anything, and so it was used as the name of the projecting end of the cylinder on which an ancient book was rolled. When one came to it, one came to the end of the book. Martial uses the expression a number of times.

6

Do not ask—we cannot know, what end the gods have set for us. (Tu ne quaesieris—scire nefas—quem mihi, quem tibi | finem di dederint.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode xi, l. 1. (23 B.C.)

7

In the end things will mend.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1659)

8

Nothing is ended with honour which does not conclude better than it began.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 207. (1750)

9

The end crowns the work. (Finis coronat opus.)

LEHMANN, Florilegium Politicum. A Latin proverb cited also by HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 128.

It is commonly said that the end crowns the work. (Dit-on communiment que la fin couronne l'œuvre.)

UNKNOWN, Roman du Jouvenel, fo. 37. (c. 1250)

Another French form is, "La fin loue l'œuvre" (The end praises the work). A proverb in many languages. The Italians say, "Il fin loda l'opera"; the Spaniards, "Al fin se canta la Gloria"; the Russians, "Konets dyelu vyenets"; the Dutch, "Het einde kroont het werk."

An ende proveth euery thing.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. vi, l. 2383. (c. 1390)

Thende dooth shewe euery werk as it is.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Pisa's Moral Proverbs. (1478)

The end maketh al. (El fine fa il tutto.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578)

Thou talk'st of harvest, when the corn is green; The end is crown of every work well done.

THOMAS KYD, The Spanish Tragedie. Act ii, sc. 6. (1592)

Le fin couronne les œuvres.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, v, 2, 28. (1590)

Let the end try the man.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, ii, 2, 52. (1597)

The end crowns all.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, iv, 5, 224.

(1601) BROME, Weeding of Covent Garden.

Act iii, sc. 1. (1658)

What e'er the course, the end is the renown.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, iv, 4, 35. (1602)

Integrity of Life is fame's best friend,

Which nobly, beyond death, shall crown the end.

JOHN WEBSTER, The Dutchesse of Malfy. Act v, sc. 5. (1614)

The end crowns every action, stay till that.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, The Muses' Looking-Glasse. Act iii, sc. 1. (c. 1630)

The end tryeth all.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 117. (1639)

It is the end that crownes the work.

JOHN JACKSON, The True Evangelical Temper, ii, 160. (1641)

A good end gilds everything, however unsatisfactory the means. (Todo lo dora un buen fin, aunque lo desmientan los desaciertos de los medios.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 66. (1647)

'Tis not the Fight that crowns us, but the end.

ROBERT HERRICK, The End. (1648)

It is plain Matter of Fact, that the End crowns all Things.

DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 278. (1709)

As I say, the end crowns the work.

DICKENS, Edwin Drood. Ch. 18. (1870) TAYLOR, Deukalion, i, 6, 30. (1887) JOB, Uncle Harry, Act i. (1942)

<sup>1</sup> The end of evil deeds is at hand. (Finis adest scelerum.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. iii, l. 328. (c. A. D. 60) Sometimes given, "Finis adest rerum."

The end is not yet. (οὐπω ἐστὶν τὸ τέλος.)

New Testament: Matthew, xxiv, 6. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Nondum est finis."

<sup>2</sup> So eger of an end, as one leaping ouer a stile before hee come to it.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 270 (1580)

<sup>3</sup> I wish there was some man she'd go off the deep end about.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Kitty Foyle, p. 278. (1939)

There's no reason for your going off the deep end.

KATHLEEN KNIGHT, Rendezvous with the Past, p. 44. (1940)

He has shot himself off at the deep ending.

NGAIO MARSH, Death in Ecstasy, p. 229. (1941)

[She] is not at all the sort to go off the deep end.

VIRGINIA PERDUE, The Case of the Grieving Monkey, p. 121. (1941)

She simply went in off the deep end.

ANNE HOCKING, Death Loves a Shining Mark, p. 109. (1943)

<sup>4</sup> We must turn our style end for end.

ROGER NORTH, Examen. Pt. ii, ch. 5, sec. 2. (c. 1730)

[The boat] went end for end over.

ARCHIBALD DUNCAN, The Mariner's Chronicle, i, 224. (1804)

He turns commonplaces end for end.

LOWELL, My Study Windows, p. 201. (1870)

<sup>5</sup> She knows which end is up.

ZELDA POPKIN, No Crime for a Lady, p. 94.

(1942) On p. 102, "She's another one that knows which end is up."

<sup>6</sup> Her end is bitter as wormwood. (Illius amara quasi absinthium.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, v, 4. (c. 400 B. C.)

A bitter is but the turn of a cable about the bits, and the bitter end is that part of the cable which doth stay within board.

CAPTAIN JOHN SMITH, Seaman's Grammar. (1627)

We rode with two anchors ahead, and the cables veered out to the better end.

DANIEL DEFOE, Robinson Crusoe. Ch. 1. (1719)

It is alleged by some authorities that "bitter end" is a corruption of "better end," but it seems more probable that Defoe mistook the word.

The bitter end is that part of the cable which is abaft the bits, and therefore within board when the ship rides at anchor. When a chain or rope is paid out to the bitter end no more remains to be let go.

W. H. SMYTH, The Sailor's Wordbook. (1867)

"To the bitter end": to the last and direst extremity; to death itself. So commonly used, but the history is doubtful.

Oxford English Dictionary, i, 885/2. (1933)

To the present compiler, the phrase seems too natural and understandable to require an involved explanation.

<sup>7</sup> As the saying is. At the yard's end there is no cloth left. (Comme l'on dict, au bout de l'aulne fault le drap.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 32. (1532)

<sup>8</sup> There will be nothing else spoken about . . . till this is either ended or mended.

SCOTT, The Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 3. (1818)

This is the way physicians mend or end us.

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto x, st. 42. (1824)

<sup>9</sup> There's a divinity that shapes our ends, Rough-hew them how we will.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 2, 10. (1600)

The professors who shaped our ends, rough-house them though we did.

MAC MITCHELL, Address, Fiftieth Birthday Dinner, Class of '94, Princeton, 5 Oct., 1940.

<sup>10</sup> Matters be ended as they are be-friended.

THOMAS STARKEY, England in the Reign of Henry VIII. Bk. i, ch. 3. (1538)

<sup>11</sup> She's kept up her end.

HARRIET BEECHER STOWE, Poganuc People, p.

63. (1878) "To hold up one's end" is to do one's full share in any coöperative undertaking.

She'd been wore out . . . trying to keep up her end.

A. W. TOURGÉE, Button's Inn, p. 131. (1887)

[He] would hold his end up, but he hated a hog.

G. H. LORIMER, Letters of a Self-Made Merchant to His Son, p. 239. (1902)

<sup>12</sup> Big-endians and Little-endians.

SWIFT, Gulliver's Travels: Voyage to Lilliput.

Pt. i, ch. 4. (1726) In the kingdom of Lilliput, the Big-endians belonged to the party which made it a matter of conscience to break their eggs at the big end, and were regarded as heretics by the orthodox party, who broke their eggs at the little end. Big-endians signified the Catholics, and Little-endians the Protestants

II—Better End and Worse End

- 1 They . . . begin at the wrong end.
JOHN LOCKE, An Essay Concerning Human Understanding, iii, xi, sec. 24. (1690)
This was . . . beginning at the wrong end.
B. H. MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas, vi, iii. (1809)
We talk of the wrong end of the stick
KINGTON OLIPHANT, New English, i, 491. (1886)
You will rarely find that the apparently impassive countryman has "got the wrong end of the stick."
ROLF BOLDREWOOD (T. A. BROWNE), A Colonial Reformer. Ch. 20. (1890)
He was at the wrong end of the whip.
S. E. WHITE, The Blazed Trail. Ch. 32. (1902)
She gets hold of the wrong end of the stick.
BERNARD SHAW, Misalliance, p. 104. (1910)
You've got hold of the wrong end of some stick.
MARGERY SHARP, Stone of Chastity, p. 50. (1940)
- 2 By godes ge, iche had not the best end of the staffe.
JOHN PICKERING, Horestes, l. 168. (1567)
He having gotten (as we say) the better end of the staffe, did wrest our wills at his pleasure.
THOMAS JACKSON, Commentaries upon the Apostles Creed, viii, 8. (1626)
We have rather cheated the devil, than he us; and have gotten the better end of him.
ROBERT SANDERSON, Sermons, ii, 97. (1638)
The devil of money has the better end of the staff.
SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Quevedo's Visions, p. 38. (1667)
He has the best end o' the string.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 237. (1678)
I have had the better end of the staff.
SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison. Pt. ii, ch. 2, p. 12. (1753)
We have always had a curious feeling that though we crucified Christ on a stick, he somehow managed to get hold of the right end of it.
BERNARD SHAW, Androcles and the Lion: Preface. (1912)
She does not know everything; but she has got hold of the right end of the stick.
BERNARD SHAW, Saint Joan. Sc. 5. (1924)
- 3 The hot end of the spit. (τὸ θερμὸν τοῦ βέλους.)
SOPHOCLES, Fragments. Frag. 949. (c. 450 B. C.)
- 4 Men of that side schal haue the worse ende.
JOHN DE TREVISA, tr., Polychronicon, ii, 29. (1387)
He schal be sure, asse God me saue.
EYUER the worse yend of the staff to haue.
UNKNOWN, Two Coventry Plays, p. 49. (1534)
Thei see their selves to haue the wurse ende of the staffe.
NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus, p. 306. (1542)
Yow maie haue cause to thincke, that yow holde by the worst ende of the staffe.
THOMAS DORMAN, A Proufe of Certeyne Articles in Religion, p. 92. (1564)
Thai that haue the wors end of the staff shall be sure to be wrung to the wors.
GABRIEL HARVEY, Letter-Book, p. 3. (1573) On

p. 5, "He knew he had the wors end of the staff."

If at any time you find you have the worst end of the staff, . . . fall upon the person of your adversary.

JOHN WILSON, The Cheats. Act i, sc. 4. (1664)
He that has the worse end of the staff is very apt to fling off from the point.

ROGER NORTH, Lives of the Norths, i, 144. (1740)

III—The End Justifies the Means

- 5 I am rather afraid of our people mistaking the means for the end.
HARRIET MARTINEAU, Life in the Wilds. Ch. 7. (1832)
- 6 The meanes of begetting a man, hath more increast mankind than the end.
SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Newses from Any Whence: Newses from Court. (1613)
- 7 A good End cannot sanctifie evil Means; nor must we ever do Evil, that Good may come of it.
WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. Pt. i, Maxim 537. (1693)
Be virtuous Ends pursued by virtuous Means, Nor think th' Intention sanctifies the Deed.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Irene. Act. iii, sc. 8. (1749)
Him, only him, the shield of Jove defends, Whose means are fair and spotless as his ends
WORDSWORTH, Dion. St. 6. (1814)
You are not at liberty to execute a good plan with bad instruments.
HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit, p. 104. (1887)
How frequently this remarkable combination of good motive and bad conduct occurs in history and daily life! The end does not justify the means, whatever people say.
W. H. G. THOMAS, Genesis i-xxv, p. 198. (1907)
- 8 To use bad means to a good end. (De nous servir de mauvais moyens pour une bonne fin.)
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 23. (1580)
- 9 All . . . find the means proportion'd to their end.
POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 82. (1732)
The French say, "Qui veut le fin, veut les moyens" (Who wills the end, wills the means).
- 10 A little harm done to a great good end
For lawful policy remains enacted.
SHAKESPEARE, Rape of Lucrece, l. 528. (1594)
- 11 The end excuses any evil. (οὐδὲν ῥῆμα σὺν κέρδει κακόν.)
SOPHOCLES, Electra, l. 61. (c. 409 B. C.)
The end always passes judgment on what has gone before. (Extrema semper de ante factis iudicant.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 190. (c. 43 B. C.)

Foul is fair for a good cause. (Honesta turpitudine est pro causa bona.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae, No. 244.

The result justifies the deed. (Exitus acta probat.)

OVID, Heroides, Eleg. ii, l. 85. (c. 10 B.C.) Used by George Washington as a motto.

When the end is lawful, the means are also lawful. (Cum finis est licitus, etiam media sunt licita.)

HERMANN BUSENBAUM, Medulla Theologiae.

(1650) Busenbaum was a Jesuit, and it was a Jesuitic doctrine that the end justifies the means.

The end must justify the means:

He only sins who ill intends:

Since therefore 'tis to combat evil,

'Tis lawful to employ the devil.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Hans Carvel. (1718)

What if to spells I had recourse,

'Tis but to hinder something worse!

The end must justify the means.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Hans Carvel.

The end directs and sanctifies the means.

SIR JOHN WILMOT, Judgment, Collins v. Blantern, 1762. (2 Wils. Rep., 351.)

The end, sister, sanctifies the means.

WALTER SCOTT, The Abbot. Ch. 12. (1820)

We both hope the end justifies the means.

CLYDE FITCH, The Girl with the Green Eyes. Act iii. (1902)

In this case the end justifies the means.

HILEA BAILEY, The Smiling Corpse, p. 238. (1941)

The end always justifies the means when the end is the noble one of separating the bourgeoisie from its cash.

WILLIAM O'FARRELL, Repeat Performance, p. 135. (1942)

ENDURANCE

1

An anvil to receive the hammer's blows and to forge the red-hot ore, he, without a groan, endured in silence, like a tunny-fish. (<ἄκμων> | σφύρας δέχεσθαι κάπιχαλκύνειν μύθρους, | ὃς ἀστενακτὶ θύννος ὡς ἡρείχετο | ἀναυδός.)

AESCHYLUS, Fragments. No. 167, Smyth. (c. 458 B.C.) ATHENAEUS, Deipnosophists, vii, 66, 303C. Tunny-fish when netted were killed by blows and, as fish, are "mute."

Happy is the man who bears and is silent.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 7a. (c. 450)

Blessed are they who endure with patience.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, ii, 155. (c. 622) Naish, tr. "Endure patiently," xxi, 77. Frequently repeated.

Nothing will mitigate our sufferings more than patient endurance.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 153. (c. 1050)

2

Endure, my heart, for worse thou hast endured. (τέτλαθι δὴ, κραδίη· καὶ κύντερον ἄλλο ποτ' ἔτλης.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xx, l. 18. (c. 850 B.C.)

Quoted by PLATO, Republic, 390D; Phaedo 94D.

Set your teeth and endure. (δακῶν δ' ἀνδρᾶν.)

MENANDER, The Girl from Samos, l. 144. (c. 300 B.C.)

Better to endure whatever comes. (Melius, quicquid erit, pati!)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode xi, l. 3. (23 B.C.)

Endure, and keep yourselves for days of happiness. (Durate, et vosmet rebus servate secundis.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 207. (9 B.C.)

You must wait and endure. (Expectes et sustineas.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ix, No. 3. (A.D. 93)

Hold on and wait for the grasshoppers. (Durate atque expectate cicades.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 96.

(1869) Wait for better times. Quoting Juvenal.

We have a proverb where no help could be had in pain, "to grin and abide."

ERASMUS DARWIN, Zoönomia, ii, 114. (1794)

The best plan is to grin and bear it.

MARRYAT, Peter Simple. Ch. 54. (1834)

I must grin and bear it.

MARY BRIDGMAN, Robert Lynne. Bk. ii, ch. 9. (1870)

All things are dead against me; I must grin, as you say, and bear it.

R D. BLACKMORE, Cripps the Carrier. Ch. 10. (1876)

Don't grin, or you'll have to bear it.

OGDEN NASH. Title of Poem. (1938)

3

Endurance is the crowning quality, And patience all the passion of great hearts.

J. R. LOWELL, Columbus, l. 241. (1844)

Endurance is nobler than strength, and patience than beauty.

RUSKIN, The Two Paths. Lect. iv, sec. 3. (1858)

4

Nothing befalls any man which he is not fitted to endure. (οὐδὲν οὐδενὶ συμβαίνει, ὃ οὐχὶ πέφυκε φέρειν.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. v, sec. 18. (c. A.D. 174)

5

He that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved. (ὁ δὲ ὑπομείνας εἰς τέλος οὗτος σωθήσεται.)

New Testament: Matthew, xxiv, 13. (c. A.D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Qui autem perseveraverit usque in finem, hic salvus erit."

He that endures is not overcome.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 853. (1640)

6

Much and long have I endured. (Multa diuque tuli.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 11a, l. 1. (c. 13 B.C.)

Endure and persist. (Perfer et obdura.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 11a, l. 7.

7

Endure what's hard in order to bear what's easy. (Feras difficilia ut facilia perferas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 218. (c. 43

B.C.) A somewhat similar proverb is, "Portatur leviter quod portat quisque libenter" (What anyone bears willingly he bears easily).

Endure what hurts in order to withstand success. (Feras quod laedit ut quod prodest perferas.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 220.

1 Not what you endure, but how you endure, is important. (Non quid sed quemadmodum feras interest.)

SENECA, De Providentia. Ch. 2, sec. 4. (c. A. D. 45)

2 O vile, Intolerable, not to be endured!

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, v, 2, 94. (1594)

3 Bear it like a man, even if you feel it like an ass.

SHAW, Man and Superman. Act ii. (1903)

4 Such was his life, gently to bear with and endure all men. (Sic vita erat: facile omnis perferre ac pati.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 62. (166 B. C.)

5 At the least bear patiently, if thou canst not joyfully. (Ad minus sustine patienter, si non potes gaudenter.)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. iii, ch. 57. (c. 1420)

6 He who can endure all can dare all. (Qui sait tout souffrir peut tout oser.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 189. (1746)

7 Whatso'er it be, every fortune is to be overcome by bearing it. (Quidquid erit, superanda omnis fortuna ferendo est.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. v, l. 710. (19 B. C.) The proverb is usually given in this form: "Omnis sors ferendo superanda est."

Wel abbit that wel may tholye. Quoth Hendyng.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Hendyng, in Reliquiae Antiquae, i, 115. (c. 1320) "Well thriveth that well endureth."

Quath Peers the Plouhman pacientes vincunt.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text C, passus xvi, l. 138. (c. 1393)

He that can quietly endure overcometh.

Book of Meery Riddles. Prov. 28. (1629)

He conquers who endures. (Vincit, qui patitur.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 462. (1869)

Know how sublime a thing it is

To suffer and be strong.

LONGFELLOW, The Light of Stars. St. 9. (1838)

BEAR AND FORBEAR, see under FORBEARANCE.

II—What Can't be Cured Must be Endured

8 This marchant saugh ther was no remedye, And, for to chyde, it nere but greet folye, Sith that the thing may nat amended be.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Shipman's Tale, l. 427 (c. 1386)

9 It is stupid to fear what can't be escaped. (Stultum est timere quod vitari non potest.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs, i, 280. (1814)

10 What cannot be repaired is not to be regretted.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. (1759) FITZGERALD, Polonius: Preface. (1852)

11 Qant Oportet vyent en place yl ny ad que Pati. [When Must comes forward, there is nothing for it but to Suffer.]

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text B, passus x, l. 439. (1377) Perhaps an adaptation of a line from Plautus, "Pati nos oportet quod ille faciat cuius potestas plus potest" (It behoves us to endure what he does whose power is greater than ours).

And when oportet cums in plas, Thou knawys miserere [have mercy] has no gras. Reliquiae Antiquae: Grammatical Rules, ii, 14. (c. 1400)

For the thyng that may not be eschewed.

But of force mot be sywed.

JOHN LYDGATE, Reson and Sensuality, l. 4757. (c. 1407)

Thynge that may be tyde is for to dowre.

UNKNOWN, How the Good Wiif Taughte His Doughtir. (c. 1460)

Such il as is forced mought nedes be endured.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Shepheardes Calender: September, l. 139. (1579)

Things which cannot be altered are to be borne, not blamed.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 297. (1580)

One must learn to endure what can't be escaped. (Il faut apprendre à souffrir ce qu'on ne peut éviter.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 13. (1595) The Spanish form is, "Se debe tolerar lo que no se puede mudar" (One has to tolerate what can't be changed); the German, "Was ich nicht ändern kann, Nehm' ich geduldig an" (What I can't change I take along patiently with me), or "Glücklich ist, wer vergisst, was nicht mehr zu ändern ist" (Happy is he who forgets what cannot be altered).

12 What can't be cured, must be endured.

PETER MOTTEUX, Rabelais. Bk. v, ch. 16. (1693) An interpolation by Motteux.

'Tis our prudence to endure

With patience what we cannot cure.

EDWARD WARD, Hudibras Redivivus. Pt. ix, canto xiv, l. 5. (1706)

Patience is sorrow's salve: what can't be cured, So Donald right areeds, must be endured.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Prophecy of Famine, l. 363. (1763)

What was over couldn't be begun, and what couldn't be cured must be endured.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 48. (1837)

That stupid resignation which some folks preach . . . is merely saying—"What can't be cured Must be endured."

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Madam How and Lady Why. Ch. 1. (1870) "What can't be cured must be endured" is used so frequently that only a few additional examples need be cited:

HALIBURTON, Wise Saws, ch. 3. (1843);
 SHAW, John Bull's Other Island, act iii.
 (1904); Jitta's Atonement, act iii. (1926);
 PETER CHANEY, A Trap for Bellamy, p. 58.
 (1941)

1 What it is not possible to change, must be borne in silence. (Quod mutari non potest, id tacite fere ferendum est.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 179. (1778) Another form is, "One should bear patiently the burden which it is necessary to bear" (Ferre decet patienter onus, quod ferre necessum).

2 What can't be changed you should bear, not blame. (Feras non culpes quod mutari non potest.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 206. (c. 43 B. C.) What you cannot change, you should bear as it comes. (Mutare quod non possis, ut natum est, feras.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 411.

3 It is best to endure what cannot be amended. (Optimum est pati, quod emendare non possis.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium Epistulae. Epis. cvii, sec. 9. (C. A. D. 65)

4 What cannot be eschew'd must be embraced.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, v, 5, 251. (1601)

When remedies are past, the griefs are ended
 By seeing the worst, which late on hopes depended.
 To mourn a mischief that is past and gone
 Is the next way to draw new mischief on.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, i, 3, 202. (1605)

What's gone and what's past help
 Should be past grief.

SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale, iii, 2, 223. (1610)

What's past help is beyond prevention.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Unnaturall Combat. Act ii, sc. 1. (c. 1619)

5 What's amiss I'll strive to mend,
 And endure what can't be mended.

ISAAC WATTS, Good Resolutions. (1720)

ENEMY

See also Friend and Enemy

6 The Spartans are not wont to ask "how many are the enemy," but "where are they?" (οὐκ δὲ τοὺς Λακεδαιμονίους ἐρωτᾶν πόσοι εἰσὶν οἱ πολέμιοι, ἀλλὰ ποῦ εἰσὶν.)

AGIS II, King of Sparta, Apothegm. (c. 410 B. C.) See PLUTARCH, Moralia, 215D.

"We are fallen among our enemies," said a soldier to Pelopidas. "How are we fallen among them more than they among us?" said he.

PLUTARCH, Apothegms: Pelopidas. (371 B. C.)

7 My enemies shall die, but not by my sword.
 ARISTAR, Teachings. Col. xii, l. 174 (c. 550 B. C.)

Oft the enmye is easelyer vanquished with service than with strooke of swerde.

SAINT BERNARD, Regisme de Mesnaige. (c. 1130)

8 All thine enemies have fallen down headlong before thee.

ANI, Papyrus: Book of the Dead. Ch. cxxxvii, l. 9. (c. 4000 B. C.) The phrase is repeated three times in subsequent lines.

9 Instead of destroying the bridge already there, we should build another alongside it, if that be possible, so that he may retire the more quickly from Europe.

ARISTIDES, to Themistocles, when the latter proposed to destroy the bridge of boats which Xerxes had built across the Hellespont in order to invade Greece. (480 B. C.)

See PLUTARCH, Lives: Themistocles. Ch. 16. Give the enemy not only a road for flight, but also the means of defending it. (Hosti non solum dandam esse viam fugiendi verum etiam munendum.)

SCIPIO AFRICANUS. (c. 210 B. C.) See FRONTINUS, Strategemata. Bk. iv, ch. 7, sec. 16.

Always open to your enemies all the gates and ways, and make for them a bridge of silver, in order to get rid of them. (Ouvez tousiours à voz ennemys toutes les portes & chemins, & plus tost leurs faictes vn pont d'argent, affin de les renuoyer.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 43. (1534) Rabelais refers to this as a rule of correct military science, for to drive the enemy into despair by fear of wholesale slaughter is only to make him desperate and formidable. The proverbial French form is "Faire un pont d'or à vos ennemis."

If thine enemye will flie, make him a bridge of golde.

WILLIAM LAMBARDE, A Perambulation of Kent, p. 371. (1576)

Not to stoppe the way of the enemy . . . but rather (according to an old counsell) to make him a bridge of silver.

SIR GEOFFREY FENTON, The Historie of Guicciardini, ii, 78. (1579)

To a flying enemy a bridge of silver. (Al enemigo que huye, la puente de plata.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 58. (1615)

Another Spanish form, given by CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 246 is, "Al enemigo, si vuelve les espaldas, la puente de plata," and the saying is attributed by Spaniards to Gonsalvo Fernandez de Cordova, one of their military heroes (c. 1500), but of course it is many centuries older.

For a flying foe,
 Discreet and provident conquerors build up
 A bridge of gold.

MASSINGER, The Guardian. Act i, sc. 1. (1633)

He [the good general] makes his flying enemy a bridge of gold, and disarms them of their best weapon, which is necessity to fight whether they will or no.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: The Good General. (1642)

Make a Silver Bridge for your Enemy to fly over.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3312. (1732)
A golden bridge is for a flying enemy.

LORD BYRON, The Deformed Transformed. Act ii, sc. 2. (1824)

A military proverb: that it is a good thing to make a bridge of gold to a flying enemy.

R. L. STEVENSON, The Master of Ballantrae. Ch. 4. (1889)

<sup>1</sup> Wise men learn much from enemies. (ἀλλ' ἀπ' ἐχθρῶν δῆτα πολλά μανθάνουσιν οἱ σοφοί.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Birds, l. 375. (414 B. C.)

Even from an enemy a man may learn wisdom. (μάθος γὰρ ἂν τις καὶ τῶν ἐχθρῶν σοφόν.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Birds, l. 382. (414 B. C.)

It is lawful to be taught even by one's enemy. (Fas est et ab hoste doceri.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. iv, l. 428, (A. D. 7) Or, "It is permitted to learn even from one's enemy."

An Enemy may chance to give good Council.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 600. (1732)

<sup>2</sup> A stake was driven into the ground before his door, as a token that he was a public enemy.

SARAH AUSTIN, tr., Ranke's History of the Reformation. Vol. ii, p. 215. (1845)

He says you are Public Enemy Number One.

NIGEL MORLAND, Murder in Wardour Street, p. 61. (1940)

<sup>3</sup> By the way threaten the enemy.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 95. (c. 450)

<sup>4</sup> A secret foe gives a sudden blow.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Foe. (1736)

<sup>5</sup> Never trust an enemy, for as brass doth his malice corrode.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xi, 10. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr. The French say, "Ennemi ne s'endort" (An enemy never sleeps).

With his lips an enemy speaketh sweetly, but in his heart he deviseth deep pitfalls.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xii, 16

<sup>6</sup> If thou suppose thee sure whilst thou hast an enemy, thou puttest thyself in peril.

SAINT BERNARD, Le Regime de Mesnaige. (c. 1130)

Of enemies the fewer the better. (De los enemigos los menos.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 14. (1615)

One enemy is too much.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 525. (1640)

<sup>7</sup> Debyltie of an enemy is no sure peace, but truce for a season.

SAINT BERNARD, Regime de Mesnaige. (c. 1130)

The war is not done as long as an Enemy lives.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1049. (1640)

<sup>8</sup> They love him . . . for his integrity and judgment and iron will; but they love him most for the enemies he has made.

GEN. EDWARD S. BRAGG. Speech, seconding the nomination of Grover Cleveland for the Presidency, at the Democratic National Convention, Chicago, 9 July, 1884. See Wisconsin State Journal, 10 July, 1884. "They" referred to the young men of Wisconsin; "enemies" to Tammany Hall of Cleveland's own state of New York, which was bitterly fighting Cleveland's nomination. The phrase became one of the slogans of the campaign, and was usually quoted, "We love him for the enemies he has made." See McELROY, Grover Cleveland, i, 81.

<sup>9</sup> He has got beyond the gunshot of his enemies.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i. (1678)

<sup>10</sup> No one is so contemptible that he cannot hurt when hurt. (Nemo ita despectus, quin possit laedere laesus.)

CATO (?), Dicta Catonis. (c. 175 B. C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 626.

A wise man dreads an enemy, however insignificant. (Inimicum quamvis humilem docti est metuere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 294. (c. 43 B. C.)

Beware of an enemy, however insignificant: the smallest insect can cause the death of the greatest man.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penimim (Choice of Pearls). No. 618. (c. 1050)

Whosoever despises a small enemy is like him who is careless about a little fire.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Maxim 11. (c. 1258)

Twist not thy moustache boastful, nor with pride thy weak foe scan:

Every bone contains some marrow, every garment cloaks a man.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Maxim 16.

Even though thy foe be feeble, in the battle still take care:

He may dash the lion's brains out when he's driven to despair.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Maxim 24.

Ne be nat negligent to kepe thy persone, nat only fro thy gretteste enemys but fro thy leeste enemy. Senek seith: 'a man that is wel avysed, he dredeth his leste enemy.'

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 31. (c. 1387)

Even an ant and a gnat have bile. (ἐνσι καὶ μύρμηκι καὶ σέρφω χολή.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. v, No. 31.

(1508) Quoted from SCHOLIAST on ARISTOPHANES, The Birds, l. 82, with the Latin, "Inest et formicae et serpho bilis." Sometimes translated, "Even ants and gnats have their stings." A similar one is, "Habet et musca splenam" (Even a fly has its spleen). "The proverb," says Erasmus, "warns us not to despise any enemy however weak and insignificant he may seem to be, nor wantonly to offend any one." See under FLY.

There is no man, though never so little, but sometimes he can hurt.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1117. (1640)

Among our enemies, the most to be feared are often the smallest. (Entre nos ennemis | Les plus à craindre sont souvent les plus petits.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Lion et le Moucheron. Bk. ii, fab. 9. (1668)

Cursing, or undervaluing an Enemy, is not the Way to beat him.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 266. (1709) No Viper so little, but hath its Venom.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3639. (1732) Tho' thy Enemy seem a Mouse, yet watch him like a Lion.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5015. There is no little enemy.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733. The French say, "Il n'y a pas de petit ennemi." The Germans, "Kleine Feinde und kleine Wunden sind nicht zu verachten" (Little enemies and little wounds are not to be despised).

Speak with contempt of none, from slave to king; The meanest Bee hath, and will use, a sting.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1743.

Unfortunately, while there are few great friends, there is no little enemy.

LORD AVEBURY, Pleasures of Life, i, 5. (1887)

1 It is a comyn prouerbe An Enemyes mouth saith seeld wel.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Reynart the Foxe. Ch. 4, p. 7. (1481) "An enemy's mouth seldom says well."

III will never said well.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 107. (1678)

2 Every wys man dredeth his enemy.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibæus. Sec. 31. The Portuguese say, "Despreza teu inimigo, serás logo vencido" (Despise your enemy, you will soon be beaten).

3 Enmity is anger watching the opportunity for revenge. (Inimicitia ira ulciscendi tempus observans.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iv, ch. 9, sec. 21. (B. C. 45)

A man hath many enemies when his back is to the wall.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 166. (1639) See also FRIENDS AND ADVERSITY.

4 Our enemies will tell the rest with pleasure.

WILLIAM FLEETWOOD, The Spectator. No. 384. Fleetwood was Bishop of St. Aspath, and this phrase occurred in the last paragraph of a preface to four sermons delivered about 1700 and published in 1712. Burned by order of the House of Commons, it was afterwards published as No. 384 of The Spectator.

5 In an Enemy, Spots are soon seen.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2813. (1732)

6 A man should take vengeance on his enemy by increasing his own good qualities.

SALOMON IBN GABRIOL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 617. (c. 1050)

Do you wish revenge on your enemy? Govern yourself well. (Vuoi far vendetta del tuo nemico? Governati bene.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 215. (1856) An Italian proverb. The French answer to the same question is, "Sois irréprochable" (Be above reproach).

If you would be reveng'd of your enemy, govern yourself.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

Wouldst thou confound thine Enemy, be good thy self.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1750.

7 If you attend to your work, and let your enemy alone, someone else will come along some day, and do him up for you.

E. W. HOWE, Country Town Sayings. (1911)

8 Man's life is filed by his foe.

HOWELL, Proverbs, Brit.-Eng., p. 19. (1659)

Believe no tales from an enemy's tongue.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Brit.-Eng., p. 32.

9 There exists no man who has not an enemy.

KHATI I, KING OF EGYPT, Teaching. No. xxv. (c. 2500 B. C.) Burge, tr.

10 Our enemy is our master. (Notre ennemi c'est notre maître.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. vi, fab. 8. (1668)

11 It is easy to keep quiet that which is at rest; it is easy to prevent that which has not yet happened; it is easy to break that which is feeble, or to scatter that which is scanty. Therefore combat the disease before it begins.

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 64. (c. 550 B. C.) Carus, tr.

Slay the enemy while he is small; nip evil in the bud, and then you will not have a crop of tares. (Dum parvus est hostis, interfice; nequitia elidatur in semine.)

ST. JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Letters. Let. xxii, sec. 6. (A. D. 384) Referring to enemies to virginity.

A single arm can tear up a sapling, but leave it for a time and no engine can upheave its roots.

SADI, Gulistan, Ch. i, Apologue 4. (c. 1258)

12 There is no greater evil than making light of the enemy. (Hwo' mo' ta' yü ch'ing ti.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 69. (c. 550 B. C.) Carus, tr.

In cases of defence 'tis best to weigh The enemy more mighty than he seems.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, ii, 4, 43. (1599)

Do not under-value an Enemy by whom you have been worsted.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: War. (c. 1650)

13 Ye have heard that it hath been said, Thou shalt love thy neighbour, and hate thine enemy. But I say unto you, Love your enemies. (ἀγαπάτε τοὺς ἐχθρούς.)

New Testament: Matthew, v, 43-44. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Diligite inimicos vestros." See also Luke, vi, 27. "It is asserted that 'hate thine enemy' has no foundation in Jewish literature, and that the correct interpretation is, 'Love all men, even thine enemies.'"—Jewish Encyclopedia, iii, 398.

Shew kindness even to thy foes:

The dog's mouth with a morsel close.

SADI, Gulistan, i, 33. (c. 1258) Eastwick, tr.

Disce, doce, dilige Deum, and thyn enemye.
[Learn, teach, love God and thine enemy.]

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text
C, passus xvi, l. 141. (c. 1362)

If we are bound to forgive an Enemy, we are not bound to trust him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2728. (1732)
Tho' you are bound to love your Enemy, you are not bound to put your Sword in his hand.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5017.
But to forgive our enemies their virtues, that is a greater miracle, and one that no longer happens.
(Mais à ses ennemis pardonner les vertus, C'est un plus grand miracle, et qui ne se fait plus.)

VOLTAIRE, Discours sur la Vraie Vertu. (c. 1750)

1
In the house of your enemy
Keep a woman for your ami.

(En la maison de ton ennemy Tiens une femme pour ton amye.)

GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences. (c. 1500)

2
A man's enemies are the men of his own house.
(Inimici hominis domestici eius.)

Old Testament: Micah, vii, 6. (c. 725 B.C.)

Enemies in my own house. (Hostis domi.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 796. (c. 200 B.C.)

A man's foes shall be they of his own household.
(ἐχθροὶ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου οἱ οικιακοὶ αὐτοῦ.)

New Testament: Matthew, x, 36. (c. A.D. 65)
What pestilence is more mighty for to anoye a wight than a familer enemy?

CHAUCER (?), Boethius de Consolatione Philosophie. Bk. iii, prose 5, l. 78. (c. 1380) "Familiar" here means belonging to one's family, of one's own household.

For in this world nis worse pestilence
Than hoonly foo al day in thy presence.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale, l. 549. (c. 1388)

It hath been an old proverbe that there is no worse pestilence than a famlyar enemy.

Lisle Papers, xii, art. 43. (c. 1538) See Notes and Queries, 4th ser., ix, 423.

Would I had met my dearest foe in heaven
Or ever I had seen that day, Horatio.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 2, 182. (1600)

My nearest and dearest enemy.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, Anything for a Quiet Life. Act v, sc. 1. (c. 1626) The phrase "Our friends, the enemy" is said to have originated in 1815, when the allies entered Paris, after the defeat of Napoleon.

3
Our enemies are the price we pay for fame.

PHILIP MOELLER, Madame Sand. Act iii. (1917)
The Germans say, "Viel Feind, viel Ehr"
(Many enemies, much honor).

4
It is evil to trust the enemy. (Male creditis hosti.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. ii, l. 225. (c. A.D. 8)

5
We have met the enemy and they are ours—
two ships, two brigs, one schooner and one sloop.

OLIVER HAZARD PERRY, Dispatch, to Gen. William Henry Harrison, announcing his victory at the battle of Lake Erie, 10 Sept., 1813.

6
I'd rather have my enemies envying me than envy my enemies. (Mihi inimicos invidere, quam med inimicis meis.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus, l. 744. (c. 186 B.C.)

Enmity is the greatest flattery.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 142. (1940)

7
If thine enemy be hungry, give him bread to eat; and if he be thirsty, give him water to drink. (Si esurierit inimicus tuus, ciba illum: si sitierit, da ei aquam bibere.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxv, 21. (c. 350 B.C.)

8
His enemies shall lick the dust. (Inimici eius terram lingent.)

Old Testament: Psalms, lxxii, 9. (c. 250 B.C.)
See under DUST.

9
No one can safely be reconciled to an enemy. (Cum inimico nemo in gratiam tuto redit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 106. (c. 43 B.C.)
And eek thou shalt eschewe the consoiling of thyne olde enemys that been reconciled.

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 23. (c. 1387)
The book seith: that no wight retourneþ sauþly into the grace of his olde enemy. And Isope seith. ne trust nat to hem to whiche thou hast had somtyme werre or enmittee, ne telle hem nat thy conseil. And Seneca telleth the cause why. It may nat be, seith he, that, where greet fyr hath longe tyme endured, that ther ne dwelleth som vapour or warmnesse." And therfore seith Salomon: "in thyn olde foo trust never."

CHAUCER, The Tale of Melibeus, Sec. 23.

Trust not a reconciled foe more than an open foe.
UNKNOWN, Roxburghe Ballads, i, 432. (c. 1600)
Dicke said, beware of a reconciled foe.

SIR JOHN HARINGTON, Epigrams. Bk. i, No. 87. (1618)

Take heed of a reconciled enemy.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy
Pt. ii, sec. iii, mem. 7. (1621)

A reconciled enemy is not safely to be trusted.

FRANCIS OSBORNE, Advice to a Son, p. 89. (1656)
Take heed of enemies reconcil'd, and of meat twice boill'd.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Spanish, p. 17. (1670)
Beware of meat twice boill'd, and an old foe reconcil'd.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733.

Tell Mrs. Boswell I shall taste her marmalade cautiously at first. . . . Beware, says the Italian proverb, of a reconciled enemy.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, BOSWELL, Life, 3 May, 1777.

1 Against an enemy, one must be either brave or suppliant. (Contra hostem aut fortem oportet esse aut supplicem.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 138. (c. 43 B. C.)
Speak no evil of your enemy, but devise it. (De inimico non loquaris male sed cogites.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 150.

Avoid an angry man for a little, but an enemy for long. (Iratum breviter vites, inimicum diu.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 288.

2 Pleasant is the stain from the blood of an enemy. (Iucunda macula est ex inimici sanguine.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 313. (c. 43 B. C.)

The body of a dead enemy always smells sweet. (Optime olere occisum hostem.)

AULUS VITELLIUS, when riding over the field of Beriacum, a few days after the battle, 14 April, A. D. 69. See SÜETONIUS, Lives of the Caesars: Vitellius. Sec. 10. The saying has also been attributed to Vespasian, perhaps being confused with his remark about money always smelling sweet, even if it came from a tax on urinals, and to Charles IX of France, on the night of St. Bartholomew, 1571.

Too many there be to whom a dead enemy smells well.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. iii, sec. 12. (1682)

3 His is a very wretched fortune who has no enemy. (Miserrima est fortuna quae inimico caret.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 356. (c. 43 B. C.)

If you have no Enemies, it's a Sign Fortune has forgot you.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2759. (1732)

A man's greatness can be measured by his enemy.

DONN PLATT, Memories of Men Who Saved the Union: Appendix. (1887)

4 He who cannot spare his own folk befriends his enemies. (Suis qui nescit parcere inimicis favet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 663. (c. 43 B. C.)

He that gives honour to his enemy is like to an ass.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 413. (1678)

5 It is enough to defeat an enemy, too much to ruin him. (Satis est superare inimicum, nimium est perdere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 686. (c. 43 B. C.)

6 When an enemy has tried every expedient in vain, then will he agitate the chain of friendship.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Maxim 23. (c. 1258)

7 Crush the serpent's head with the hand of an enemy: if the enemy is successful, thou hast killed a snake; if the snake is successful, thou hast lost an enemy.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Maxim 24. (c. 1258)

It is good to strike the Serpent's Head with your Enemy's Hand.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2945. (1732)

8 Before the enemy can string his bow, thy arrow should transfix him.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Maxim 11. (c. 1258)

GET YOUR FIST IN FIRST, see under PREPAREDNESS.

9 Compassionate not the weakness of a foe, for were he to become powerful he would have no pity on thee.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Maxim 16. (c. 1258)

He is his own enemy who slays not his enemy when he has him in his power.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 54.

Who shows mercy to an enemy denies it to himself. (Qui misericordiam inimico impertit, sibi denegat.)

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum: Crudelitas. (1605)

Mercy to enemies is as base as cruelty to friends.

STEELE MACKAY, Paul Kaurvar. Act iv. (1888)

10 I love to hear of worthy foes.

WALTER SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto iv, st. 8. (1810)

The stern joy which warriors feel

In foeman worthy of their steel.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake, v, 10.

11 You have many enemies, that know not Why they are so, but, like to village-curs, Bark when their fellows do.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, ii, 4, 158. (1612)

12 What mockery sweeter than to mock at foes? (οὐκ οὐν γέλως ἥδιος εἰς ἐχθροὺς γέλαν;)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 79. (c. 409 B. C.)

13 He was within a few hours of giving his enemies the slip for ever.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. i, ch. 12. (1759)

14 Tho' 'tis a Maxim you must know, Who does no Ill, can have no Foe.

SWIFT, Answer to Dr. Delany, l. 57. (1730)

15 Fortune can give no greater advantage than discord among the enemy. (Nihil iam praestare fortuna maius potest, quam hostium discordiam.)

TACITUS, Germania. Sec. 33. (A. D. 98)

When discord arises among the forces of the enemy, take courage; when they are united, beware.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Maxim 22. (c. 1258)

This maxim contains one of Sadi's characteristic but untranslatable puns. Jama shudan signifies to be united, and also to be of good cheer.

16 Is it wrong to avenge yourself upon your enemies, or to catch them as they'd catch you? (Iniuriam autem ulcisci adversarios? | aut qua via te captent eadem ipsos capi?)

TERENCE, Hecyra, l. 72. (165 B. C.)

One may employ everything against one's enemies. (On peut tout employer contre ses ennemis.)

RICHELIEU, Les Tuilleries. (c. 1635) See also under LOVE: ALL'S FAIR IN LOVE AND WAR.

<sup>1</sup> The enemy is at hand. (Hostis adest.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ix, l. 38. (19 B. C.)

<sup>2</sup> I go to fight your majesty's enemies, and I leave you in the midst of my own. (Je vais combattre les ennemis de votre majesté, et je vous laisse au milieu des miens.)

MARÉCHAL DE VILLARS, Remark, to Louis XIV, as he bade the king good-bye and started to join the Army of the Rhine. (1696) DUVEMET, Vie de Voltaire, attributes the saying to Voltaire.

<sup>3</sup> They are all dying. I have hardly a warm personal enemy left.

J. A. McNEILL WHISTLER. (c. 1900) See SEITZ, Whistler Stories.

<sup>4</sup> I choose my friends for their good looks, my acquaintances for their good characters, and my enemies for their good intellects. A man cannot be too careful in the choice of his enemies.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 1. (1891)

<sup>5</sup> Enemies are wealth to anyone who can derive profit from them. (οἱ ἐχθροὶ χρήματά εἰσι τῷ δυναμένῳ ἀπὸ τῶν ἐχθρῶν ὠφελεῖσθαι.)

XENOPHON, Oeconomicus. Ch. i, sec. 15. (c. 375 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 86: C, E.

We have to depend upon our enemies to hear the truth. (ἀκουστέον ἐστὶ παρὰ τῶν ἐχθρῶν τὴν ἀλήθειαν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: How to Profit by One's Enemies, 89C. (c. A. D. 95)

Our enemies come nearer the truth in the judgments they form of us, than we do in our judgment of ourselves. (Nos ennemis approchent plus de la vérité dans les jugements qu'ils font de nous, que nous n'en approchons nous-mêmes.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 458. (1665)

Love your enemies, for they tell you your faults.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1756.

The assailant makes the strength of the defense. Therefore, we ought to pray, give us a good enemy.

R. W. EMERSON, Journal, 1865.

I love my best friend, . . . my bravest enemy. That is the man who keeps me up to the mark.

BERNARD SHAW, Major Barbara. Act iii. (1907)

<sup>6</sup> Cause thy heart to rejoice, for thy enemies are not.

UNKNOWN, Laments of Isis and Nephthys, l. 31. (c. 700 B. C.) Dennis, tr.

'Tis most sweet

To see a foe, triumphant once, brought low.

(ἐκ γὰρ εὐτυχούσ ἡδιστον ἐχθρὸν ἀνδρὰ δυστυχούσθ' ὁρᾶν.)

EURIPIDES, Children of Hercules, l. 939. (c. 430 B. C.)

Rejoice not over thy greatest enemy being dead. (Noli de mortuo inimico tuo gaudere.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), viii, 7. (c. 190 B. C.)

When an enemy dies no tears are shed. (Inimico extincto exitium lacrimae non habent.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 326. (c. 43 B. C.)

<sup>7</sup> Tel thou neuer thy fo that thy fot [foot] aketh.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Hendyng, 12. (c. 1300) Thou shouldst not tell thy foe when thy fit [foot] slides.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 100. (c. 1595) Tell not thy foe when thy foot's sleeping, nor thy step-minny when thou'rt sore hungry.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 317. (1721) Ne'er tell you fae when your foot sleeps.

HISLOP, Proverbs of Scotland, p. 240. (1862) DO NOT BOAST UNTIL YOUR ENEMY IS DEAD, see under CHICKEN: DON'T COUNT CHICKENS.

II—Nobody's Enemy but His Own

<sup>8</sup> What is man's chief enemy? Each is his own. (τί ἐστὶ πολέμιον ἀνθρώποις; αὐτοὶ ἑαυτοῖς.)

ANACHARSIS, Maxim. (c. 550 B. C.) STOBÆUS, Florilegium, ii, 43.

He is his own worst enemy. (Sibi est adversarius unus acerrimus.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. x, epis. 8. (49 B. C.) Referring to Julius Caesar.

Yet is every man his greatest enemy, and, as it were, his own executioner.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 4. (1643)

None but yourself, who are your greatest foe.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, Michael Angelo. Pt. ii, sec. 3. (1872)

He's his own worst enemy.

GILBERT FRANKAU, Air Ministry, Room 28, p. 214. (1942)

<sup>9</sup> The enemy is within the gates; it is with our own luxury, our own folly, our own criminality that we have to contend.

CICERO, In Catilinam. No. ii, ch. 5, sec. 11.

<sup>10</sup> To affirm that a vicious man is only his own enemy is about as wise as to affirm that a virtuous man is only his own friend.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. (1820)

<sup>11</sup> It smarts not halfe so ill as the phrase, Euery bodies friend but his owne.

SIR WILLIAM CORNWALLIS, Essays, sig. E7. (1600)

We commonly say of a prodigall man, that hee is no man's foe but his owne.

BISHOP JOHN KNIGHT, Lectures upon Jonah. (1611)

I am nobody's enemy but my own.

DANIEL DEFOE, Robinson Crusoe, ii, 11. (1719)

The prodigal is no man's foe but his own, saith the proverb.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), iii, 80. (1629)

He is no man's enemy but his own.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 21. (1639)
Tom, though an idle, thoughtless, rattling rascal, was nobody's enemy but his own.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. iv, ch. 5. (1749)
Some people are nobody's enemies but their own.

DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 43. (1838)
He is quite a good fellow—nobody's enemy but his own.

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 25. (1850)
[He] has been singularly inoffensive. As the saying is, "He has been no man's enemy but his own."
AUGUSTUS JESSOP, Arcady, p. 183. (1881)

1
I must disclaim his friendship who ceases to be a friend to himself.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man.
Act iv. (1768) "His own enemy is no one's friend."

2
In beyng your owne foe, you spin a fayre threede.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

3
Let me hack at my own vines. (Ut vineta egomet caedam mea.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 220. (20 B. C.)
A proverbial expression for doing something to one's own injury.

4
He is not harmless who harms himself. (On n'est point innocent quand on nuit à soimême.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 134. (1810)
None but myself ever did me any harm.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Remark, at St. Helena,
6 April, 1817. See O'MEARA, Napoleon in Exile.

5
Formidable is the enemy that lurks in a man's own breast. (Gravis est inimicus is, qui latet in pectore.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 235. (c. 43 B. C.)

6
A wedge from itself splits the tree.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches,
p. 490. (1940) That is, a man is his own worst enemy.

ENGLAND AND THE ENGLISH

7
When hempe is sponne; England's done.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Prophecies. (1597)
"The triuiall Phrophecie, which I hearde when I was a Childe, and Queene Elizabeth was in the flower of her yeares, was: When Hempe is sponne; England's done. Whereby, it was generally conceived, that after the Princes had Reigned, which had the Principall Letters, of that word Hempe (which were Henry, Edward, Mary, Philip, Elizabeth) England should come to utter confusion."

8
Ah! perfidious England! (Ah! la perfide Angleterre!)

JACQUES BOSSUET, *Premier Sermon pour la
Circoncision*. Preached at Metz in 1652.

Perfidious Albion. (Perfide Albion.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, on leaving England for
St. Helena, 1815, using the phrase as the Romans used Punita fides, because he was being banished by the country to which he had surrendered. The attribution to Napoleon has never been fully verified.

9
England, Mother of Parliaments.

JOHN BRIGHT, Speech, at Rochdale, 18 Jan.,
1865. See ROGERS, Speeches of John Bright, ii, 112.

Parliament means a place where one talks; nothing more. (Parlement signifie "endroit où l'on parle." Rien de plus.)

MAX O'RELL, John Bull et Son Ile, p. 243. (1890)
That hospital of incurables, the House of Lords.
LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 1 Aug., 1766.

10
No dearth but breeds in the horse-manger.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains Concerning Britain, p. 329. (1636)

A famine in England begins at the horse-manger.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 44. (1670)

11
In England there are sixty different religions, and only one sauce. (Il y en Angleterre soi-sante sectes religieuses différentes, et une seule sauce.)

PRINCE FRANCESCO CARACCIOLI, Neapolitan Ambassador. (c. 1790) The attribution is legendary. Talleyrand is said to have remarked that in the United States there were thirty-two religions and only one course (plat) at dinner.

In China we have only three religions, but we have a hundred dishes we can make from rice.

GURNEY CHAMPTION, Racial Proverbs, p. 374.
(1938) A Chinese proverb.

He had dined on whiting with paperhanger's sauce, . . . topped off with orphan's caviar, or tapioca pudding.

ELLIOT PAUL, Mayhem in B-Flat, p. 57. (1940)

12
Be England what she will,
With all her faults, she is my country still.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Farewell, l. 27. (1760)
England, with all thy faults, I love thee still.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 206. (1783)

13
There is more good victuals in England than in seven other kingdoms.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 74. (1639)

14
Doing good,
Disinterested good, is not our trade.

We travel far, 'tis true, but not for nought.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. i, l. 673. (1784)

15
Let me, however, make this clear, in case there should be any mistake about it in any quarter. We mean to hold our own. I have not become the King's First Minister in order to preside over the liquidation of the British Empire.

WINSTON CHURCHILL, Speech, at the Mayor's
Day Luncheon, Mansion House, 10 Nov., 1942.

1 Rous'd by the lash of his own stubborn Tail,
Our Lion now will foreign Foes assail.

JOHN DRYDEN, Astraea Redux, l. 117. (1660)
The British lion always rouses itself to fresh efforts by lashing itself with its tail.

DEAN W. R. INGE. (MARCHANT, Wit and Wisdom of Dean Inge. No. 159.)

2 England is the paradise of women, the purgatory of men, and the hell of horses. (L'Inghilterra è il paradiso delle donne, il purgatorio degli uomini, e l'inferno dei cavalli.)

JOHN FLORIO, Second Fruits, p. 205. (1591)
The wife of euey Englishman is counted blest.

THOMAS DELONEY, Works (1912), p. 377. (c. 1593)

England is said to be a hel for horses, a purgatorie for servantis and paradise for women.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 126. (c. 1595)
England is termed by foreigners the paradise of women, as it is by some accounted the hell of horses, and purgatory of servants.

UNKNOWN, New Help to Discourse, p. 51. (1619)
England is a paradise for women, and hell for horses: Italy a paradise for horses, hell for women, as the diuverb goes.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. iii, mem. 1, subs. 2. (1621)

England, they say, is the only hell for horses, and only paradise for women.

THOMAS DEKKER, Il the Honest Whore Act iv, sc. 1. (1630)

"England is the paradise of women, hell of horses, purgatory of servants." For the first, billa vera . . . For the next, . . . Ignoramus . . . for the last, . . . we cast it forth as full of falsehood.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: Berkshire, i, 116. (1662) Fuller, in his Holy State, refers to the proverb in this form, "England is a prison for men, a paradise for women, a purgatory for servants, and a hell for horses."

3 In these troublous days, when the great Mother Empire stands splendidly isolated in Europe.

HON. GEORGE EULAS FOSTER, Speech, Canadian House of Commons, 16 Jan., 1896.

Whether splendidly isolated or dangerously isolated, I will not now debate; but for my part, I think splendidly isolated, because this isolation of England comes from her superiority.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER, Speech, Canadian House of Commons, 5 Feb., 1896.

We have stood alone in that which is called isolation—our splendid isolation, as one of our Colonial friends was good enough to call it.

SIR WILLIAM EDWARD GOSCHEN, Speech, at Lewes, 26 Feb., 1896.

4 "England is the ringing island." Thus it is commonly called by foreigners, as having greater, more, and more tunable bells than any one country in Christendom.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: Berkshire, i, 115. (1662)

England is proverbially called "the ringing island."
WILLIAM HONE, Every-Day Book, ii, 509. (1827)

5 England were but a fling, Save for the crooked stick and the grey-goose wing.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, i, 116. (1662) A feeble thing, except for her archers.

[At Agincourt] his archers bared their arms . . . to give fair play to "the crooked stick and the grey goose wing," but for which—as the rime ran—"England were but a fling."

JOHN R. GREEN, A Short History of the English People, p. 261. (1874)

6 Long beards heartless, painted hoods witless,
Gay coats graceless, make England thriftless.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, i, 119. (1662)

A saying said to have been made by the Scotch in the reign of Edward II., when elated with their victory at Stirling (1297).

GROSE, Provincial Glossary: England. (1790)

7 God punish England. (Gott strafe England!)

ALFRED FUNKE, Schwert und Myrte. (1914)

This was a novel published serially in the Sonntagszeitung für das deutsche Haus, and the phrase became instantly popular in Germany.

8 Heart of oak are our men.

DAVID GARRICK, Heart of Oak. (c. 1770) See under HEART.

9 Little Britain. (Britannia minor.)

GEOFFREY OF MONMOUTH, Historia Britonum. (c. 1150) Referring to Brittany.

The Danes woefully harassed the land, which caused him to ship himself over into Little Britain in France.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, iii, 493. (1662)

10 Three wonders of England, ecclesia, foemina, lana; "the churches, the women, the wool."

JOSEPH HALL, Contemplations, iv, 11. (1612)

11 The stately homes of England.

How beautiful they stand.

FELICIA HEMANS, The Homes of England. (c. 1830)

Those comfortably padded lunatic asylums which are known, euphemistically, as the stately homes of England.

VIRGINIA WOOLF, The Common Reader: Lady Dorothy Nevill.

12 The Cat, the Rat, and Louell our dog.

Rule all England under an hog.

RAPHAEL HOLINSHED, Chronicles, iii, 442.

(1577) Holinshed says [King Richard III executed] "a poore gentleman called Callingborne, for making a small rime of three of his counsellors, . . . lord Louell, sir Richard Ratcliffe and sir William Catesbie."

"His name was Lovel." "What! the cat, the rat and Lovel our dog? Was he descended from King Richard's favourite?"

WALTER SCOTT, The Antiquary. Ch. 2. (1816)

1
With all the World have War,
But with England do not jar.
(Con todo el Mundo guerra,
Y paz con Inglatierra.)

JAMES HOWELL, Spanish Proverbs, p. 1. (1659)
Quoted by FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1743.

2
A pirate spreading misery and ruin over the face of the ocean.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Walter Jones,
1810.

England . . . the sea's scourge, the world's scourge; robber, hypocrite and leech.

WALDO FRANK, The Bridegroom Cometh, p.
395. (1939)

3
What should they know of England who only England know?

RUDYARD KIPLING, The English Flag. (1891)

The error so often made by Little Englanders.

Westminster Gazette, 1 Aug., 1895, p. 2/2.

Goldwin Smith was . . . a Little Englander of the Little Englanders. He saw nothing in the Empire . . . but a burden on England.

London Times, Weekly, 10 June, 1910, p. 420.

4
There was an olde saying, all countries stande in neede of Britaine, and Britaine of none.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Ar-ber), p. 439. (1580)

5
England expects every man to do his duty.

HORATIO NELSON, Signal, to the fleet at the battle of Trafalgar, 21 Oct., 1805. See

SOUTHEY, Life of Nelson. Ch. 9. This is the generally accepted version of Nelson's signal, and the most dramatic, due perhaps to Southey's touch. In the London Times, 26

Dec., 1805, it was given: "England expects every officer and man to do his duty this day." William Pryce Cunby, First Lieutenant of Nelson's flagship, Bellerophon, reported it: "England expects that every man will do his duty." Captain Pasco, Nelson's flag-lieutenant, stated that Nelson's order was:

"Say to the fleet, England confides that every man will do his duty," and that "expects"

was substituted for "confides" at his suggestion. For full discussion, see Notes and Queries. Ser. vi, vol. ix, pp. 261, 283.

If . . . as the poet informs us, England expects every man to do his duty, England is the most sanguine country on the face of the earth, and will find itself continually disappointed.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 43. (1843)

For England, home, and beauty.

A. CONAN DOYLE, The Bruce-Partington Plans.

(1917) A traditional toast in the British navy.

6
This is a country where, as an Englishman said to me once, the sun shines for all alike. That was nothing, I ought to add, but a figure of speech. (C'est ici un pays où, comme me le disait un Anglais, le soleil luit pour tout le monde. Ce n'était, je dois ajouter, qu'une figure de rhétorique.)

MAX O'RELL, John Bull et Son Ile, p. 21. (1890)

An Englishman, as Dr. Johnson said, has more frequent need to solicit than to exclude the sun.

MICHAEL INNES, The Weight of the Evidence,
p. 64. (1943)

7
He who would England win, In Ireland must begin.

DIEGO ORTIZ. (1567) As quoted in FROUDE,
History of England, x, 480. Referred to as an English proverb.

It is a saying auncient . . . That who-so England will subdew, With Ireland must begin.

WILLIAM WARNER, Albions England. Ch. 54, st.
4. (1592)

Get Ireland to-day and England may be thine to-morrow.

JAMES HOWELL, Lexicon Tetraglotton: Appendix, p. 2. (1658)

"He that will England win Must with Ireland first begin." . . . England . . . is too great a morsel for a foreign foe to be chopped up at once; and therefore it must orderly be attempted, and Ireland be first assaulted.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: Berkshire, i, 119.
(1662)

8
England has saved herself by her exertions, and will, I trust, save Europe by her example.

WILLIAM PITT, Speech, at Lord Mayor's banquet, at Guildhall, London, 9 Nov., 1805

This was Pitt's last speech, and, as is usually the case, what he actually said was variously reported. The version given here is from

STANHOPE, Life of Pitt, vol. iv, p. 346, as told him by the Duke of Wellington, who was present at the banquet. From it was derived the motto on the medal struck in 1814 to commemorate the Treaty of Paris,

"Seipsum constantia, Europam exemplo"

(Herself by fortitude, Europe by example).

9
Dieu et mon droit. (God and my right.)

RICHARD I, CŒUR DE LION, Parole, at the battle of Gisors. (1198) Richard chose the phrase as his battle-word, to show that he was not a vassal of France, but owed his royalty only to God. In commemoration of the great victory he won there, it was made the motto of the royal arms of England.

Saint George of mery England, the signe of victoree.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto x, st. 61. (1590)

St. George he was for England; St. Dennis was for France

UNKNOWN, St. George for England. (1512)

Old ballad cited by PERCY, Reliques, ser. iii,
bk. iii.

10
This precious stone set in the silver sea.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, ii, 1, 46. (1595) Set in Silver was the title of a novel by the Williamsons. (1909)

The Channel is that silver strip of sea which severs merry England from the tardy realms of Europe.

UNKNOWN, Article, in Church and State Review, 1 April, 1863.

W. E. GLADSTONE, in Edinburgh Review, 18 Oct., 1870, writing of the English Channel. The value of the "silver streak" as a defense for England against her enemies, scarcely needs demonstration.

H. B. GEORGE, Relation of Geography and History, p. 136. (1903)

1

Rule, Britannia, rule the waves;
Britons never will be slaves.

JAMES THOMSON, Rule, Britannia! This ode appeared originally in the last scene (Act ii, sc. 5), of Alfred, A Masque, in which Thomson collaborated with David Mallet, and which was published in 1740. Often attributed to Mallet, but evidence favors Thomson.

With Freedom's lion-banner,
Britannia rules the waves.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Ode to the Germans. (1832)

Oh, Britannia, the pride of the ocean,
The home of the brave and the free.

UNKNOWN. Probably an adaptation of Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean, a song written in 1843 by a young English actor named Thomas à Becket, playing at the Chestnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, and sung there by another English actor, David Taylor Shaw, who afterwards claimed its authorship. Some authorities allege that the British version was the first, and was sung by Shaw in England before he came to America. See BANKS, Immortal Songs of Camp and Field, p. 77; Notes and Queries, 26 Aug., 1899.

2

A shopkeeper will never get the more custom by beating his customers, and what is true of a shopkeeper, is true of a shopkeeping nation.

JOSIAH TUCKER, DEAN OF GLOUCESTER, Four Tracts on Political and Commercial Subjects. (1766) The words are said to have been used by Dean Tucker some years before they appeared in print.

To found a great empire for the sole purpose of raising up a people of customers, may at first sight appear a project fit only for a nation of shopkeepers.

ADAM SMITH, Wealth of Nations. Vol. ii, bk. iv, ch. 7, sec. 3. (1775)

A Nation of shop-keepers are very seldom so disinterested.

SAMUEL ADAMS, Oration, said to have been delivered in the State House at Philadelphia, 1 Aug., 1776, but it is extremely doubtful whether this oration was really delivered, for it exists only in a professed English reprint (Philadelphia, printed; London, reprinted for E. Johnson, No. 4 Ludgate Hill, 1776), of which a number of copies are in existence. W. V. Wells, in his Life of Adams, asserts that "No such American edition has ever been seen."

Let Pitt then boast of his victory to his shopkeeping nation. (Nation boutiquière.)

BERTRAND BARÈRE, Speech, before the French National Convention, 11 June, 1794. England is a nation of shopkeepers. (L'Angleterre est une nation de boutiquiers.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, as quoted by O'MEARA, Napoleon at St. Helena, vol. ii. But what Napoleon probably said was "sono mercanti," a phrase of Paoli. See GOURGAUD, Journal Inédit de Ste.-Hélène, i, 69. Gourgaud quotes Napoleon, 26 Sept., 1817, as saying, "You were greatly offended with me for having called you a nation of shopkeepers. Had I meant by this that you were a nation of cowards, you would have had reason to be displeased, but . . . I meant that you were a nation of merchants."

We are indeed a nation of shopkeepers.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, The Young Duke. Bk. i, ch. 11. (1831)

3

In this country it is necessary, from time to time, to put one admiral to death in order to pep up the others. (Dans ce pays-ci il est bon tuer de temps en temps un amiral pour encourager les autres.)

VOLTAIRE, Candide. Ch. 23. (1578) The reference is to the execution of the English admiral, John Byng, because of his failure to relieve Minorca, besieged by the French, 1756.

4

Oh, England, no wonder your troubles begin,
When blockaded without, and block-headed within.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to the Countess of Upper Ossory, 12 Sept., 1781. Quoted as an epigram of the day.

5

His Majesty's dominions, on which the sun never sets.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianae. No. 42, April, 1829. "The sun never sets on his empire" was applied originally to the King of Spain. See under SPAIN. Claudian applied the idea to Rome. See under ROME.

The sun of her glory is fast descending to the horizon.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Notes on Virginia. (1782) Snobs are . . . recognized throughout an Empire on which I am given to understand the Sun never sets.

W. M. THACKERAY, in Punch, x, 101/2. (1846) The great army of Browns, who are scattered over the whole empire on which the sun never sets.

THOMAS HUGHES, Tom Brown's School Days. Pt. i, ch. 1. (1857)

Great Britain has intinded her domain until the sun niver sets on it. No more do th' original owners iv th' sile, they bein' kept movin' be th' polis.

F. P. DUNNE, On the Victorian Era. (1898)

6

Brut that berne [warrior] bolde of hand,
First conquerour of meri ingland.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 8. (a. 1300) The first known use of the phrase "merry England," afterwards so popular.

1
Hops, Reformation, Bays, and Beer
Came into England all in one year.

UNKNOWN, Old Rhyme. (c. 1600)
Turkeys, Carpes, Hops, Picarel and Beer
Came into England, all in one year.

SIR RICHARD BAKER, Chronicle of the Kings of England, p. 298. (1643)

II—The English

2
The meanest Briton scorns the highest slave.

ADDISON, The Campaign, l. 300. (c. 1705)

Britons never will be slaves.

JAMES THOMSON, Rule Britannia. (1740)

A soil whose air is deemed too pure for slaves to breathe in.

FRANCIS HARGRAVE, Argument, in Somerset Habeas Corpus Case, 14 May, 1772. Somerset was a negro slave born in Jamaica, who accompanied his master to England and claimed his freedom. Hargrave was Somerset's counsel, and his argument was upheld by the presiding judge, William Murray, Earl of Mansfield. See State Trials, xx, 1

Slaves cannot breathe in England.

WILLIAM COWPER, The Task Bk.ii,l.40. (1784)

Englishmen never will be slaves: they are free to do whatever the government and public opinion allow them to do.

SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iii. (1903)

3
Law is a Bottomless-Pit. Exemplify'd in the Case of the Lord Strutt, John Bull, Nicholas Frog, and Lewis Baboon, who spent all they had in a Lawsuit.

DR. JOHN ARBUTHNOT. Title of a political allegory designed to ridicule the Duke of Marlborough, and to render unpopular the European war which was then (1712) raging. Each European nation was given a nickname by Arbuthnot, "Nicholas Frog" for the Dutch and "Lewis Baboon" for the French, for example, but "John Bull" for the British was the only one which lived. For some reason it caught the British imagination and has been in use ever since. Arbuthnot used the sobriquet in a series of fine pamphlets, John Bull in His Senses, John Bull Still in His Senses, etc., which were finally collected and published in one volume, The History of John Bull.

If an honest believing nation is to be made a Jest of, we have a story of John Bull and his wife.

ALEXANDER POPE, A Key to the Lock. (1714)
France . . . assisted the American cause, for which John Bull abused and fought her. But John will come off wretchedly.

JOHN ADAMS, Familiar Letters (1876), p. 350.
(1778)

[Johnson] was, indeed, if I may be allowed the phrase, at bottom much of a John Bull.

JAMES BOSWELL, Life of Johnson. Ch. 30. (a.
1791)

A horse-race we met with near Chester-le-Street.
This we could not resist, as some of us had never seen John Bull at his favourite amusement.

ALEXANDER CARLYLE, Autobiography, ix, 374.
(a. 1805)

Not a Bull of them all but is persuaded he bears
Europa upon his back.

J. R. LOWELL, On a Certain Condescension in Foreigners. (1871)

John Bull et Son fle.

MAX O'RELL, Title of book. (1890)

The typical John Bull—Lord Palmerston's "Fat man with a white hat in the twopenny omnibus."

G. W. E. RUSSELL, Collections and Recollections. Ch. 5. (1898)

4
Euery Englysshe Archer beareth vnder hys gyrdle xxiii Scottes.

ROGER ASCHAM, Toxophilus, p. 84. (1545) Because he carried twenty-four arrows.

I thought upon one pair of English legs
Did march three Frenchmen.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iii, 6, 158. (1599)

Even the Indians . . . have a proverb, three Moors to a Portugal, three Portugals to an Englishman.

SAMUEL PURCHAS, His Pilgrim, i, 35. (1625)

One Englishman could beat three Frenchmen.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator. No.383.(1712)

We, who formerly . . . could any one of us beat three Frenchmen, are now so degenerated that three Frenchmen can evidently beat one Englishman.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter, to G. Montagu, 13
July, 1745.

That silly, sanguine notion, which is firmly entertained here, that one Englishman can beat three Frenchmen, encourages, and has sometimes enabled, one Englishman, in reality to beat two.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 7 Feb., 1749.

We had no arms; but one Englishman is able to beat five Frenchmen at any time.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World.
Letter 119. (1762) Growing, it will be noted, like Falstaff's "rogues in buckram."

5
No good man is a Briton. (Nemo bonus Brito est.)

AUSONIUS, Epigrams. No. 110. (c. A. D. 370)

6
You have a saying that the English lose every battle but the last.

FRANCIS BEEDING, Eleven Were Brave, p. 18.
(1941)

He wants to make quite sure that England will be able to fight this war to the last Frenchman.

FRANCIS BEEDING, Eleven Were Brave, p. 35.

7
One of the essential differences between the English and the Spaniards is that the English describe necessity as the mother of invention, whereas the Spaniards refer to it as the enemy of chastity.

FRANCIS BEEDING, Heads Off at Midnight. Ch.
7. (1938)

<sup>1</sup> In spite of their hats being terribly ugly, God-damn! I love the English! (Quoique leurs chapeaux soient bien laids, Goddam! moi j'aime les Anglais.)

PIERRE JEAN DE BÉRANGER, Les Boxeurs. (1814)

<sup>2</sup> [He] grumbles . . . now and then, because, like all of us Englishmen, he must have his grievance.

BLACKMORE, Cradock Nowell. Ch. 64. (1866) Trinidad is loyal (with occasional grumblings, of course, as is the right of free-born Britons).

CHARLES KINGSLEY, At Last. Ch. 3. (1871) We are like to grumble a bit sometimes—it is an Englishman's privilege, you know.

WILLIAM WESTALL, The Old Factory. Ch. 37. (1881)

<sup>3</sup> Twenty-seven millions, mostly fools.

CARLYLE, Latter-Day Pamphlets. No. 6. (1850) A certain man has called us, "of all peoples the wisest in action"; but he added, "the stupidest in speech."

CARLYLE, The Nigger Question. (1849)

<sup>4</sup> Collins's old Peerage-Book . . . is properly all we English have for a Biographical Dictionary;—nay, . . . for a National Bible.

CARLYLE, Latter-Day Pamphlets. No. 7. (1850) That bulky volume which has been called the Englishman's Bible—Burke's Peerage.

W. BATES, Maclise Portrait-Gallery, p. 68. (1883)

<sup>5</sup> A right Englishman.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 78. (1639)

You are a right Englishman, you cannot tell when you are well.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 10. (1659) A right Englishman knows not when a thing is well.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 85. (1670) I find you are a true Englishman; you never know when you are well.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

A true Englishman knows not when a thing is well.

THOMAS FIELDING, Proverbs of All Nations, p. 75. (1824) "Who knows," says Fielding, "but it is to the grumbling spirit of our countrymen that England owes her superiority to other nations! Thank God, we have not the phlegm of the Germans, to whom, if they only say, 'Eat straw,' they eat straw."

<sup>6</sup> Th' English dress up f'r a Methodist preacher, stick a piece iv lead pipe in th' tails iv their coat in case iv emargency, an' get all the money there is in th' line.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, Observations of Mr. Dooley. As quoted by THEODORE DREISER, America Is Worth Saving, p. 217.

We are in Washington and I could of borrowed from the United States Treasury. I would of pretended I was an Englishman.

RING LARDNER, The Golden Honeymoon. (1926)

<sup>7</sup> An Englishman who has lost his fortune is said to have died of a broken heart.

R. W. EMERSON, English Traits. Ch. 10. (1856)

<sup>8</sup> They amused themselves sadly after the fashion of their country. (Ils se rejoissoient tristement selon la coutume de leur pays.)

JEAN FROISSART, Chronicle. (c. 1390) The attribution is by HAZLITT, Sketches and Essays: Merry England. EMERSON, English Traits, ch. 8, also attributes the saying to Froissart, and gives it as "Ils s'amusaient tristement selon la coutume de leur pays." It has not, however, been found in his writings, but probably derives from a passage in the Duc de Sully's Mémoires (c. 1630), "Les Anglais s'amusent tristement selon l'usage de leur pays." Proverbially shortened to, "The English take their pleasures sadly."

An Englishman's idea of happiness is to find something he can kill and to hunt it.

FRANCIS BACON, Promus. No. 356. (1594)

Summed up in "What shall we go out and kill?" the after-breakfast inquiry.

The English race is the best at weeping and the worst at laughing. (Anglica gens est optima flens et pessima ridens.)

THOMAS HEARNE, Reliquiae Hearnianae. Vol. i, p. 136. (c. 1700) A medieval Latin proverb quoted in KORNMANUS, De Linea Amoris. ii, p. 47.

How hard it is to make an Englishman acknowledge that he is happy.

W. M. THACKERAY, Pendennis. Ch. 1. (1849)

The Englishman takes his pleasure sadly.

RUTH FEINER, Young Woman of Europe, p. 218. (1942)

<sup>9</sup> England is a good land and a bad people.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, i, 120. (1662) "This is a French proverb," Fuller comments.

I love my country, but I do not love any of my countrymen that have been capable, if they have been so, of a foul assassination.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to Voltaire, 21 June 1768. Referring to the killing of Ensign Coulon de Jumonville and nine of his men, by a party of British soldiers under George Washington, in 1764. Only after the fight was over did Washington learn that Jumonville was the bearer of a summons from Fort Duquesne that the British vacate the territory claimed by the French. The event was represented by French writers as being a cold-blooded massacre. See PARKMAN, Montcalm and Wolfe. Vol. i, p. 145.

England is a little garden full of very sour weeds.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Provincial Dictionary: England. (1790) Grose explains that this also is of French origin, "an observation frequently in the mouth of Louis XIV" during the Marlborough campaigns. Anton Rubenstein is said to have remarked, "The only letter which Englishmen write in capitals is I. This, I think, is the most pointed comment on their national character."

Though I love my country I do not love my countrymen.

LORD BYRON, Letter to Count d'Orsay, 22 April, 1823.

1 Englishmen are not made of polishable substance.

HAWTHORNE, Journal, 13 Feb., 1854

2 Ill manners make the Englishman.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Manners Make the Man. (1829) See The Atlas, 29 March.

The English are the only people to whom the term blackguard is peculiarly applicable—by which I understand a reference of everything to violence, and a contempt for the feelings and opinions of others.

HAZLITT, English Characteristics (1829) See The Atlas, 5 July.

3 When two Englishmen meet, their first talk is of the weather.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler No. 11. (1758)

4 A Frenchman must be always talking, whether he knows anything of the matter or not; an Englishman is content to say nothing when he has nothing to say.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 1779.

I hope we English will long maintain our grand talent pour le silence.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lect. 6. (1840)

The English are a dumb people.

CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1843)

Heinrich Heine is said to have defined silence as "A conversation with an Englishman."

5 A stern, true-born Englishman.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 1783.

A glorious charter, deny it who can, Is breathed in the words, "I'm an Englishman."

ELIZA COOK, The Englishman. (c. 1840)

Some people . . . may be Roosians, and others may be Prooshans; they are born so, and will please themselves.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 19. (1844)

He might have been a Roosian,
A French, or Turk, or Prooshian,
Or perhaps Itali-an!

But in spite of all temptations

To belong to other nations,

He remains an Englishman!

W. S. GILBERT, H.M.S. Pinafore. Act. ii. (1878)

A thorough specimen of a fine old English gentleman.

FRANK E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 49. (1850)

Never, when the storm-clouds appear blackest, have I been tempted to wish that I was other than an Englishman.

DEAN W. R. INGE. (MARCHANT, Wit and Wisdom of Dean Inge. No. 166.)

6 The English, a nation over-proud, claim the empire of the sea; the French, a flighty nation, seize that of the air.

(Les Anglais, nation trop fière,
S'arrogent l'empire des mers;
Les Français, nation légère,
S'emparent de celui des airs.)

LOUIS XVIII OF FRANCE, when he was Comte de Provence in 1783, Impromptu sur Nos Découvertes Aérostatiques. Referring to the balloon flights of Montgolfier and other Frenchmen. The attribution has been questioned on the ground that even this bit of doggerel was far beyond Louis' capacities. Providence has given to the French the empire of the land; to the English that of the sea: to the Germans that of—the air!

JEAN PAUL FRIEDRICH RICHTER, as quoted by Madame de Staël. (c. 1810) See CARLYLE. Essays: Richter. This seems on its face to be a better prophecy than it really was, for Richter was referring to music rather than to air power.

7 They haue long ears and short tongues, quicke to heare and slow to vtter, broad eyes and light fingers, ready to espy and apt to stricke.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 247. (1580)

An English man hath three qualatyties, he can suffer no partner in his loue, no straunger to be his equal nor to be dared by any.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 316

It is alwayes incident to an English-man, to thinke worst of his owne nation, eyther in learning, experience, common reason, or wit, preferring alwaies a straunger rather for the name, then the wisdom.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 439

8 One of the greatest qualities which have made the English people a great people is their eminently sane, reasonable, fair-minded inability to conceive that any viewpoint save their own can possibly have the slightest merit.

WALTER MILLIS, The Road to War, p. 64. (1935)

You English are sublime. You are the only nation in the world that believes it has a monopoly of ordinary common sense.

ERIC AMBLER, A Coffin for Dimitrios, p. 84 (1939)

When foreigners ponder world affairs, why sometimes by doubts they are smitten,

But Englishmen know instinctively that what the world needs most is whatever is best for Great Britain.

OGDEN NASH, England Expects. (1940)

9 That mountain of shams.

MARGARET FULLER OSSOLI, Letter to R. W. Emerson, 16 Nov., 1846.

10 The most honest people in the world are the French who think and the British who talk (Les plus honnêtes gens du monde, ce sont les Français qui pensent et les Anglais qui parlent.)

SAINT-ÉVREMOND, Epigram. (c. 1663) See INGE. Wit and Wisdom: Preface.

1 Child Rowland to the dark tower came,
His word was still,—Fie, foe, and fum,
I smell the blood of a British man.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iii, 4, 187. (1605)
Shakespeare is paraphrasing an old Scottish ballad, noted in JAMESON, Illustrations of
Northern Antiquities, and other collections.

Child Roland to the dark tower came.
SCOTT, Bridal of Triermain. Canto iii, st. 6. (1818)
Dauntless the slug-horn to my lips I set,
And blew. "Childe Roland to the Dark Tower came."

ROBERT BROWNING, Childe Roland to the Dark
Tower Came. St. 34. (1855)

2 England, where, indeed, they are most potent in potting: your Dane, your German, and your swag-bellied Hollander, are nothing to your English.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, ii, 3, 78. (1605)

3 An Englishman thinks he is moral when he is only uncomfortable.

SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iii. (1903)

4 Much like the French (or like ourselves, their apes).

JOSHUA SYLVESTER, tr., Du Bartas His Divine
Weekes and Workes. Wk. i, day ii, l. 231. (1605)

The English are the Frenchmen's apes.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, i, 118. (1662)

The Englishman weeps, the Irishman sleeps, but the Scotchman gangs while [till] he gets it.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 323. (1721)
"A pretended account of the behaviour of these three nations, when they want meat"

In settling an island, the first building erected by a Spaniard will be a church; by a Frenchman, a fort; by a Dutchman, a warehouse; and by an Englishman, an alehouse.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Provincial Dictionary: Eng- land. (1787)

An Englishman is never happy but when he is miserable, a Scotchman never at home but when he is abroad, and an Irishman never at peace but when he is fighting.

ARCHBISHOP RICHARD WHATELY, Common- place-Book, p. 293. (1865)

5 And curving a contumelious lip,
Gorgonized me from head to foot
With a stony British stare.

TENNYSON, Maud. Sec. xiii, st. 2. (1855)

The self-complaisant British sneer.

TOM TAYLOR, Abraham Lincoln. In Punch, 6
May, 1865.

6 It is to the middle class we must look for the safety of England.

THACKERAY, The Four Georges: George III.
(1860) Reminiscent of Voltaire's alleged remark that "The English are like their own beer: froth on top, dregs at the bottom, the middle excellent."

7 The English are mentioned in the Bible:
Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Cal- endar. (1893)

8 The Britons, wholly sundered from all the world. (Penitus toto divisos orbe Britannos.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. Ecl. i, l. 66. (37 B.C.)

The sea which, according to Virgil's famous line, divided the poor Britons utterly from the world, proved to be the ring of marriage with all nations.

EMERSON, English Traits. Ch. 3. (1856)

Not only England, but every Englishman is an island. (Non seulement l'Angleterre, mais chaque anglais est une île.)

NOVALIS, Fragments. (1799)

Every one of these islanders is an island himself, safe, tranquil, incommunicable.

EMERSON, English Traits. Ch. 6. (1856)

English plants have English habits here.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 29 Oct., 1858.

9 A perfect Englishman, travelling without motive. buying at great cost modern antiques, looking at everything with a haughty air, and despising the saints and their relics.

(Parfait Anglais, voyageant sans dessein,
Achetant cher des modernes antiques,
Regardant tout avec un air hautain,
Et méprisant les saints & leurs reliques.)

VOLTAIRE, La Pucelle. Chant viii. (1755)

The English people are people who defend themselves. (Les gens Anglais sont gens qui se dé-fendent.)

VOLTAIRE, La Pucelle. Chant x.

The gloomy Englishman, even in his loves, always want to reason. We are more reasonable in France.

(Le sombre Anglais, même dans ses amours,
Veut raisonner toujours.

On est plus raisonnable en France.)

VOLTAIRE, Les Originaux: Entrée des Diverses
Nations. Last lines. (c. 1760)

10 The only funny thing about England is the English, and they don't know it.

CONSTANCE WAGNER, The Major Has Seven
Guests, p. 63. (1940)

11 They never know when they are beaten.

G. J. WHYTE-MELVILLE, Digby Grand. Ch. 4.
(1853) "The name of Englishman [is] a type of all that is resolute, daring and invincible.
We have a high authority in the expression of Napoleon, that 'they never know when they are beaten.'"

The British subject has a reputé for not knowing when he is beaten.

J. H. A. MACDONALD, in The Spectator, 30 Sept.,
1911, p. 489.

We are always serene in times of difficulty. We have staying power; we are not rattled.

STANLEY BALDWIN, Radio Speech, 25 Sept., 1933.

1 My good associates, by whose light and leading I have walked.

SIR HENRY WOTTON, Letter to James I, 1651. The men of England, the men, I mean, of light and leading in England.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France. (1790) Disraeli was fond of "men of light and leading," and used the phrase at least three times: in a speech in the House of Commons, 28 Feb., 1859; in a letter to the Duke of Marlborough, 10 March, 1880; and in Sybil, bk. v, ch. 1.

2 He sayd that Englysshemen ar callyd the grettyste fedours in the worlde.

WRIGHT AND HALLIWELL, eds., Reliquiae Antiquae, i, 326. (c. 1540)

Gluttony is the sin of England.

THOMAS FULLER, Joseph's Parti-Coloured Coat. (1640) Sermons, i, 203.

NOT ANGLES. BUT ANGELS, see under ANGEL.

III—The English Language

3 This Wardour-Street Early English—a perfectly modern article with a sham appearance of real antique about it.

A. BALLANTYNE, Wardour-Street English. In Longman's Magazine, Oct., 1888, p. 585.

Wardour Street, once noted for . . . its spurious antiques, extends from Coventry St. to Oxford St.

MUIRHEAD, Guide to London, p. 161. (1918)

4 Somewhat he lipsed, for his wantownesse, To make his English swete up-on his tonge.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 266. (c. 1386)

5 God save the king, that is lord of this langage.

CHAUCER, The Astrolabe: Prologue, l. 63. (c. 1380)

Charge them for counterfeiting the King's English.

THOMAS WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique p. 162. (1560) It will be observed that, although a queen was on the throne of England in 1560, it was still "the King's English." Similarly in 1600, and 1601.

Still he must be abusing the Queenes English.

THOMAS NASHE, Works (Grosart), ii, 184. (1593) One of the rare examples of the use of "Queen's English."

Marry, here's a stammerer taken clipping the king's English.

W. C. HAZLITT, ed., Old Plays: Look About You. Sc. 9. (1600)

Here will be an old abusing . . . of the king's English.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, i, 4, 5. (1601)

That is not shorthand, 'tis called clipping the King's English.

JOHN LACY, Sir Hercules Buffoon. Act v, sc. 4. (c. 1675) In Franklin's Drinker's Dictionary (1745), "He clips the King's English" is given as a synonym for drunkenness

My dear ma'am how do you clack away.

King George's English hack away.

JOHN O'KEEFFE, The Farmer. Act i, sc. 3. (1787) In her attempt to appear . . . a lady, she "clipped the King's English," and made almost as glaring errors as Mrs. Malaprop.

MRS. LINNAEUS BANKS, Manchester Man. Ch. 15. (1876)

I have translated it here, not in verse, . . . but at least in the king's English.

R. L. STEVENSON, Kidnapped. Ch. 10. (1886)

6 What thinke you of this English tongue, tel me, I pray you? It is a language that wyl do you good in England, but passe Douer, it is woorth nothing.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 50. (1578)

It is a language confused, with many tongues: . . . so that if euery language had his owne wordes againe, there woulde but a fewe remaine for English men.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 50.

The borrowed ware soe far to our aduantag . . . we raise a profit of new woordes from the same stock, . . . the longe woordes that we borrowe, being intermingled with the shorte of our owne store, make vp a perfitt harmonye.

RICHARD CAREW, Epistle on the Excellency of the English Tongue. (1595)

7 Dan Chaucer, well of English undefyled.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. iv. canto ii, st. 32. (1596)

From purest wells of English undefiled
None deeper drank than he, the New World's child.

J. G. WHITTIER, James Russell Lowell. (1891)

8 Under the tropic is our language spoke.

EDMUND WALLER, Upon the Death of the Lord Protector. (1659)

English as She is Spoke.

ANDREW WHITE TIER. Title of a reprint (1883) of the English part of a book by P. Carolino, first issued in 1855 at Paris, entitled O novo guia da conversação em Portuguez e Ingles (A Guide to English Conversation for the Use of Portuguese Students). The phrase, "English as she is spoke" does not occur in the Portuguese book, but was suggested to Mr. Tier by the equally grotesque specimens of English which it contained.

ENOUGH

9 Whan it was day, this marchant gan embrace
His wyf al newe, and kiste hir on hir face,
And up he gooth and maketh it ful tough,
"Namore" quod she, "by god, ye have y-nough!"

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Shipman's Tale, l. 377. (c. 1386)

Hee'l have enough one day, when his mouth is full of moule.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 38. (1639)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 173. (1670) KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 161. (1721)

He'll ne'er have enough, till his Mouth is full of Mould.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2428. (1732)

1 We have not enough if we look upward, but more than enough if we look downward.

KAIBARA EKKEN, Ten Kun (Ten Precepts). Bk. i. (1710) Quoted as an old proverb.

2 Enough sufficeth for the wise. (ἐνεὶ τὰ γ' ἀρκούνθ' ἱκανὰ τοῖς γε σώφροσιν.)

EURIPIDES, Phoenissai, l. 554. (c. 420 B.C.)

PLATUS, Persa, l. 729, has "Sapienti sat" (Enough for the wise), and HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 398 notes another proverb, "Satis est, quod sufficit" (That is enough which satisfies). A shorter form is "Satis quod sufficit," which is used by SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, i, 1. (1595) FULLER, Worthies, London, ii, 346, uses "Satis est quod sufficit."

3 Not in gluttony lies virtue: enough is as a feast. (οὐ γὰρ ἐν γαστρὶς βόρᾳ | τὸ χρηστὸν εἶναι, μέτρια δ' ἐξαρκεῖν.)

EURIPIDES, Suppliants, l. 865. (c. 421 B.C.)

As good ys ynough as a gret feste.

JOHN LYDGATE, The Assembly of Gods, l. 2035. (c. 1420)

Enough is as good as a feast.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 11. (1546)

Heywood seems to have been the first to put the proverb into its generally accepted form, which is used so frequently that no further examples need be noted. It is a proverb, in various forms, in many languages. The French say, "On est assez riche quand on a le nécessaire" (One is rich enough who has the necessities); the Germans, "Man muss mit Wenigem zufrieden sein" (One must be content with little); the Italians, "Chi so contenta, gode" (He who is content is happy); the Spaniards, "Hombre harto no es comedor" (The satisfied man is not an eater).

Die not indebted to thy bellie, but enough is a feast.

ROBERT GREENE, Franciscos Fortunes. (1590)

In Works (Grosart), viii, 168.

I neither want nor yet abound,—

Enough's a feast, content is crowned.

JOSHUA SYLVESTER, A Contented Mind. (c. 1610)

Enough's as good as a feast, to one that's not a beast.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 90. (1678)

Ray gives the French, "Assez y a, si trop n'y a."

A little dish oft furnishes enough:

And sure enough is equal to a feast.

HENRY FIELDING, The Covent Garden Tragedy.

Act ii, sc. 6. (1732)

Popular Fallacies: That enough is as good as a feast. Not a man, woman, or child in ten miles around Guildhall, who really believes this saying.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays: Popular Fallacies. (1826)

4 Of anuch men leaves.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 82. (c. 1595)

Of enough men leave.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 272. (1721)

"They who leave no scraps can hardly be said to have enough."

There was never enough where nothing [was] left.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 38. (1639)

Ther's never enough where nought leaves.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 85. (1670)

The Italians have the same proverb, "Non vi è abbastanza se niente avanza" (There is not enough if there is nothing over).

5 The poor have little, beggars none; the rich too much, enough, not one.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733. Repeated in 1740.

6 Who has enough of no more has he need.

ROBERT HENRYSON, Fables of Aesop: The Town and Country Mouse. (c. 1480)

Enough is a plenty, too much is a pride.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie: Dinner Matters. (1573)

The French say, "Trop est trop" (Too much is too much).

Enough! or too much.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

7 He who desires only what is enough, is troubled neither by raging seas, nor hail-smitten vineyards, nor an unproductive farm. (Desiderantem quod satis est neque | tumultuosum sollicitat mare | . . . non verberatae grandine vineae | fundusque mendax.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 1, l. 25. (23 B.C.)

Blest is he to whom the god with chary hand has given just enough. (Bene est, cui deus obtulit | parca quod satis est manu.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 16, l. 43.

Let him who has enough ask for nothing more. (Quod satis est cui contingit, nihil amplius optet.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 46. (20 B.C.)

Give us enough, but with a sparing hand.

EDMUND WALLER, Reflections. (c. 1680)

8 There is now enough. (Iam satis est.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 5, l. 12. (35 B.C.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iv, epig. 91. (A.D. 85) Used also by Plautus, Ausonius, and others.

Enough is enough.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 11. (1546)

The Italians say, "Assai basta, e troppo guasta" (Enough is enough, and too much spoils); the French, "Mieux vaut assez que trop" (Better enough than too much); the Dutch, "Genoeg is meer dan overvloed" (Enough is better than too much).

As for money, enough is enough; no man can enjoy more.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Doctor. Ch. 20. (1834)

Fun is fun, but enough's enough.

ODGEN NASH, For the Most Improbable She. (1938)

<sup>1</sup> Women, priests, and poultry never have enough. (Donne, preti, e polli non son mai satolli.)

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Ital.-English, p. 7. (1659)

Women, Priests, and Poultry have never enough. THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5809. (1732)

The French also have a proverb about women, priests and poultry, "Qui veut tener nette sa maison, N'y mette ni femme, ni prêtre, ni pigeon" (Who'd keep his house clean, let him not admit woman, priest, or pigeon). They also say, "Rien n'a qui assez n'a" (He has nothing who has not enough).

<sup>2</sup> just enough, and no more, like Jannet Harris shearers' meat.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 212. (1721)
"Spoken when people have eaten all that is before them."

Like Madam Hassell's feast, enough, and none to spare.

Notes and Queries, Ser. ii, i, 313. (1856) "This proverb is changed only in name in Ireland. In Dublin . . . it originated at the table of a Mrs. Casely, who . . . was accustomed to say, 'Well, I declare; just enough and none to spare.'"—N. & Q., ii, ii, 339. Perhaps the name was Casey and she ran a boarding-house.

Enough and no more, like Mrs. Milton's feast.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 54. (1917)

<sup>3</sup> He who knows when he has enough will not be put to shame. He who knows when to stop will not come to harm. (Chih tsu pu ju'. Chih tzü pu tai'.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-tek-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 44. (c. 550 B.C.) Giles, tr.

It is an olde prouerbe. He is well atte ease that hath ynough & can say ho.

UNKNOWN, Dives et Pauper, sig. A1. (1493)

He that knoweth when he hath enough is no foole.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

<sup>4</sup> What's enough for one is enough for two.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 178. (1902)
The old fallacy that two can live as cheaply as one.

<sup>5</sup> Too few know when they have Enough; and fewer know how to employ it.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 249. (1693)

<sup>6</sup> Enough, and more than enough. (Quantum sat est, et plus satis.)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 346. (c. 200 B.C.)

Enough and more than enough. (Satis superque.)

HORACE, Epodes. Epode i, l. 31. (20 B.C.) Pliny has "Satis superque est" (It is enough and more than enough). "Enough and to spare."

Here is enough, and to muche.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

Enough, with over-measure.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, iii, 1, 140. (1607)

More than enough is too much.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3461. (1732)

The French say, "Assez y a si trop n'y a" (There is enough if there is not too much).

<sup>7</sup> For me anything is enough. (Mihi quidvis sat est.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 750. (c. 200 B.C.)

<sup>8</sup> Enough said. (Dixi satis.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 817. (c. 200 B.C.)

He said enough. Enough said.

GERTRUDE STEIN, Enough Said. (1935) The poem consists of these words, five times repeated.

<sup>9</sup> Distribution should undo excess,
And each man have enough.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iv, 1, 73. (1605)

Huey Long cited these lines as describing his goal in his "Share the wealth" program.

<sup>10</sup> Lay on, Macduff,
And damn'd be him that first cries, "Hold,
enough!"

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, v, 8, 33. (1606)

<sup>11</sup> He hath enough who is contented with a little.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 52. (1666) See also under CONTENT.

ENTERPRISE

<sup>12</sup> On the neck of the young man sparkles no gem so gracious as enterprise.

HAFIZ, Ghazals. (c. 1350) See EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Power.

<sup>13</sup> An ounce of enterprise is worth a pound of privilege.

FREDERIC R. MARVIN, The Companionship of Books, p. 318. (1905)

<sup>14</sup> Some enterprise That hath a stomach in't.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 1, 99. (1600)

<sup>15</sup> Enterprise is a vagabond.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: On Vagabonds. (1863)

ENTHUSIASM

<sup>16</sup> Enthusiasm moves the world.

A. J. BALFOUR, Letter to Mrs. Gladstone, 1891.

<sup>17</sup> Enthusiasm is that secret and harmonious spirit which hovers over the production of genius.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Character. Ch. 12. (1795)

Every production of genius must be the production of enthusiasm.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: Solitude. (c. 1800)

Enthusiasm is the genius of sincerity, and truth accomplishes no victories without it.

LORD LYTTON, The Last Days of Pompeii. Bk. i, ch. 8. (1834)

Enthusiasm is that temper of the mind in which the imagination has got the better of the judgment.

BISHOP WILLIAM WARBURTON, The Divine Legation of Moses Demonstrated. Bk. v. (1739)

Nothing great was ever achieved without enthusiasm.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Circles. (1841)

Every great and commanding moment in the annals of the world is the triumph of some enthusiasm.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses and Lectures: Man the Reformer. (1841)

Enthusiasm is the leaping lightning, not to be measured by the horse-power of the understanding.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Progress of Culture. (1875)

A little ginger 'neath the tail
Will oft for lack of brains avail.

T. F. MACMANUS, Cave Sedem. (c. 1912)

A gloomy hair-brained enthusiast.

DAVID HUME, Principles of Morals. Ch.9. (1751)

Enthusiast most strange! (Sonderbarer Schwärmer!)

SCHILLER, Don Carlos. Act iii, sc.10, l. 277. (1787)

Put down enthusiasm.

ARCHBISHOP MANNERS-SUTTON, Valedictory Sermon, on Bishop Heber's consecration to the see of Calcutta. (1822)

"Put down enthusiasm"—the Church of England in a nutshell.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD, Robert Elsmere. Bk. ii, ch. 16. (1888)

Rash enthusiasm in good society
Were nothing but a moral inebriety.

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, st. 35. (1823)

Enthusiasm is very catching, especially when it is very eloquent.

MARY R. MITFORD, in L'ESTRANGE, Life. Vol. ii, ch. 1. (1817)

There is a melancholy which accompanies all enthusiasm.

LORD SHAPTESBURY, Characteristics. Vol. i, p. 13. (1711)

ENVY

See also Jealousy

He who is unenvied is unenviable. (ὁ ἀφθόνητος γ' οὐκ ἐπίζηλος πέλει.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 939. (458 B. C.) Or, "He who is unenvied is never wholly happy."

Self-tortured, envy of itself vindicates you. (Ipsum se cruciat, te vindicat invidus in se.)

CATO (?), Dicta Catonis. No. 28. (c. 175 B. C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 624.

In other words, the very fact that a man is envied is in itself testimony to his merit. A medieval monkish maxim runs, "Invidiosus ego, non invidus esse laboro" (I endeavor not to be envious, but to be envied).

As iron is eaten away by rust, so are the envious consumed by their own passion. (ὥσπερ ὑπὸ τοῦ ἰσθ τοῦ σιδήρου, οὕτως τοὺς φθονεροὺς ὑπὸ τοῦ ἰδίου ἥθους κατασθλεσθαι.)

ANTISTHENES, Apothegm. (c. 375 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Antisthenes, vi, 5.

Envy, which is proud weakness, and deserveth to be despised.

FRANCIS BACON, Filum Labyrinthi. (a. 1626)

Envy never dyeth.

JOHN BOURCHIER BERNERS, tr., Froissart. Ch. 428. (1523) "There is a comune proverbe, the whiche is true, howe envy never dyeth."

Envy hath no holidays.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum. Pt. i, bk. vi, sec. 16. (1605) The Arabs say, "There is no rest to envy."

The envious will die, but envy never. (Les envieux mourront, mais non jamais l'envie.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Tartuffe. Act v, sc. 3, l. 25. (1664)

Molière is paraphrasing an older French proverb, "Envieux meurt, mais envie ne mourra jamais."

Envy writhes; it don't laugh.

BYRON, Letter to John Murray, 7 Feb., 1821.

The envious man shall never want woe.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 333. (1605)

Nothing can allay the rage of biting envy. (Rabiem livoris acerbi | nulla potest placare quies.)

CLAUDIAN, De Raptu Proserpinae. Bk. iii, l. 290. (C. A. D. 395)

A man shall neuer bee enriched by enuie.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 52. (1633)

Envy never enriched any man.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 8. (1678)

Envy never yet enrich'd any Man.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1380. (1732)

To all apparent beauties blind,
Each blemish strikes an envious mind.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1740.

An envious Man is a squint-eyed Fool.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 601. (1732)

Envy and Covetousness are never satisfied.

Envy and Idleness married together begot Curiosity.

Envy is asham'd, and afraid to be seen.

Envy is so shameful and cowardly a Passion, that no body ever had the Confidence to own it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 1375-80

Nothing sharpens Sight like Envy.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3674.

1 Every animosity may be healed save that whose source is envy.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penanim (Choice of Pearls). No. 594. (c. 1050) Ascher, tr. Appears also in ALI, Sentences: Appendix.

2 Envy is a kind of praise.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Hound and the Huntsman. (1727)

Envy is the sincerest form of flattery.

CHURTON COLLINS, Aphorisms. (c. 1904)

Envy is admiration in despair.

UNKNOWN, Poor Richard Jr.'s Almanack, p. 83. (1906)

3 Envy is the most universal passion.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 22. (1821) The Danes say, "If envy were a fever, all mankind would be ill."

4 Envy: punishing ourselves for being inferior to our neighbours.

HORACE SMITH, The Tin Trumpet, p. 145. (1836)

He who envies admits his inferiority. (Qui invidet, minor est.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 360. (1869)

5 Bitten by envy's tooth. (Dente mordeor invidio.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 3, l. 16. (23 B.C.)

6 The envious man grows lean when his neighbor waxes fat. (Invidus alterius mascescit rebus opimis.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 57. (20 B.C.)

Base Envy withers at another's joy.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 284. (1728)

He sicken'd at all triumphs but his own.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 64. (1761)

An envious man waxes lean with the fatness of his neighbour.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 311. (1855)

7 Than envy Sicilian tyrants have invented no worse torture. (Invidia Siculi non invenere tyranni | maius tormentum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 58. (20 B.C.)

Here is the very ink of the cuttlefish; here is envy unadulterate. (Hic nigrae sucus lolliginis, haec est | aerugo mera.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 4, l. 100. (35 B.C.)

8 If you burst yourself, you'll never be as large. (Si te ruperis, par eris.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 319. (35 B.C.)

A retelling of the fable of Aesop's frog, which tried to puff itself up as large as the ox, and burst. Hence the phrase, "To burst with envy."

9 Things we haven't got we disparage.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine, xxvii, p. 42. (1908)

Men always hate most what they envy most.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices Ser. iv, p. 130. (1924)

10 Envy! eldest-born of hell!

CHARLES JENNENS, Saul: Chorus. (1740) Jennens, who was a friend of Handel, wrote the words for his famous oratorio.

Envy's a coal comes hissing hot from hell.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Country Town. (1839)

11 Envy slayeth the silly man. (Parvulum occidit invidia.)

Old Testament: Job, v, 2. (c. 350 B.C.) "The petty man" is a closer rendering of the Latin.

Envy and wrath shorten life. (Zelus et iracundia minuunt dies.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxx, 24. (c. 190 B.C.)

Envy, avarice, and ambition take a man from the world.

Babylonian Talmud: Pirké Aboth, iv, 28. (c. 450)

12 Envy is more irreconcilable than hatred. (L'envie est plus irréconciliable que la haine.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 328. (1665)

The truest mark of being born with great qualities, is to be born without envy. (Le plus véritable marque d'être né avec de grandes qualités, c'est d'être né sans envie.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 433.

Envy always outlasts the good fortune of its objects. (Notre envie dure toujours plus longtemps que le bonheur de ceux que nous envions.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 476.

There are fewer people without selfishness than without envy. (Il y a encore plus de gens sans intérêt que sans envie.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 486.

13 The greatest harm that you can do unto the envious, is to doo well.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 153. (1579)

Envy braggeth, but draweth no blood: ye malicious haue more munde to quip, then might to cut.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 206.

14 I envy no man, no, not I,
And no man envies me!

CHARLES MACKAY, The Miller of the Dee. (1859)

15 I am Envy, begotten of a Chimney-sweeper and an Oyster-wife. I cannot reade, and therefore wish all bookes were burnt. I am leane with seeing others eate.

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, Dr. Faustus, l. 745. (1604)

16 Envy, most grim of all diseases. (ὁ βόσων χαλεπώτατος φθόνος.)

MENANDER. Frag. 535K. (c. 300 B.C.)

Envy, worst of all evils. (τὸ κακίστον τῶν κακῶν πάντων, φθόνος.)

MENANDER. Frag. 540K. (c. 300 B.C.)

Envy is a blemish of the mind; it is to the mind what disease is to the body.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penanim (Choice of Pearls). No. 588. (c. 1050)

That most odious and anti-social of all passions—envy.

JOHN STUART MILL, On Liberty. Ch. 4. (1859)

1 Envy feeds on the living; it ceases when they are dead. (Pascitur in vivis Livor; post fata quiescit.)

OID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 15, l. 39. (c. 13 B. C.)
When one told Plistarchus that a notorious wailer spoke well of him, said he, "Somebody hath told him I am dead, for he can speak well of no man living."

PLUTARCH, Apothegms: Of Plistarchus. (c. A. D. 95)

Envy the living, not the dead, doth bite.

RICHARD LOVELACE, On Sanazar's Being Honour'd with 600 Ducats. (c. 1650)

2 Envy, the vice of cowardice, enters not into lofty character, but creeps like a hidden snake along the ground. (Livor, iners vitium, mores non exit in altos, | utque latens ima vipera serpit humo.)

OID, Ex Ponto. Bk. iii, epis. 3, l. 101. (A. D. 13)

3 Envy will ever be hatched where multitudes are drawn together.

HENRY PERCY, Advice to His Son. (1609)

4 Envy ever fastens on the noble and strives not with the mean. (ἄπτεται δ' ἐσλῶν ἀέλ, χεῖρνεσσι δ' οὐκ ἐρίξει.)

PINDAR, Nemean Odes. Ode viii. l. 22. (c. 485 B. C.)

Envy ever dogs success. (Λιπρὰ γὰρ τὰ κρείσσονα.)

EURIPIDES, Ion, l. 597. (c. 419 B. C.)

Envy is the comrade of glory. (Invidia gloriae comes.)

CORNELIUS NEPOS, De Viris Illustribus: Chabrias. (c. 40 B. C.)

Envy follows hard upon glory. (Post gloriam invidiam sequi.)

SALLUST, Bellum Iugurthinum. Ch. 55. (c. 40 B. C.)

Envy, like lightning, seeks the highest places. (Invidiam, tamquam ignem, summa petere.)

LIVY, History. Bk. viii, sec. 31. (c. 10 B. C.)

What is highest is envy's mark. (Summa petit livor.)

OID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 369. (c. 1 B. C.)

See also GREATNESS: ITS PENALTIES.

Envye is lavender of the court alway.

CHAUCE, The Legend of Good Women: Prologue, l. 358. (c. 1385)

Envy always shooteth at high marks.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Germanicus and Agrippina, p. 78. (1576) On p. 262, Pettie has: "As things most excellent are ever most envied."

Envy creepeth not so low as cottages.

ROBERT GREENE, Philomela. (1592) Works, xi, 176.

Envy is but the smoke of low estate, Ascending still against the fortunate.

SIR FULKE GREVILLE, Alaham. (c. 1625)

Envy will Merit as its shade pursue.

POPE, An Essay on Criticism, ii, 266. (1709)

5 Envy is better than pity. (κρέσσων γὰρ οἰκτιρμοῦ φθόνος.)

PINDAR, Pythian Odes. Ode i, l. 163. (470 B. C.)

Quoted by PALLADAS, Greek Anthology, x, 51. Bethink thee how much better a thing it is to be envied than pitied. (σὺ δὲ μαθὼν ὅσῳ φθονέεσθαι κρέσσον ἐστὶ ἢ οἰκτεῖρεσθαι.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. iii, sec. 52. (c. 445 B. C.)

The origin of the proverb still in common use. It is better to be envied than pitied. (Praestat invidiosum esse quam miserabilem.)

HERODOTUS, Thalia. (c. 440 B. C.) As quoted by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, iv, 87. Envy, as Erasmus explains, is the attendant of good fortune, as pity is of distress and misery. The French have the same proverb, "Il vaut mieux faire envié que pitié." The Italians say, "È meglio essere invidiato, che compassionato," or "Piu tosto invidia che compassione"; the Germans, "Besser Neider als Mitleider"; the Flemings, "Beter benijd, dan beklaegt."

Better be envied than pitied, folke sey.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Let me be envy'd and not pittied.

MARLOWE, The Jew of Malta: Prologue, l. 27. (c. 1592)

It is better to be spited than pitied.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 299. (1636)

Men say, and truly, that they better be which be envied than pitied.

JOHN DONNE, Verse Letters. (c. 1630) Works, (1896), ii, 32.

I'd much rather be envied than pitied.

G. W. E. RUSSELL, Collections and Recollections. Ser. ii, ch. 33. (1902)

6 Let not envy cast a rough stone at me. (μὴ βαλέτω με λίθῳ τραχεῖ φθόνος.)

PINDAR, Olympian Odes. Ode viii, l. 55. (460 B. C.)

7 Envy is pain at another's good, while malignancy is joy at another's evil. (φθόνος μὲν γὰρ ἐστὶ λύπη ἐπ' ἀλλοτρίοις ἀγαθοῖς, ἐπὶ χαιρεκακία δ' ἡδονὴ ἐπ' ἀλλοτρίοις κακοῖς.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Curiosity. Sec. 518C. (c. A. D. 95)

8 A sound heart is the life of the flesh: but envy the rottenness of the bones. (Vita carnum, sanitas cordis: putredo ossium, invidia.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xiv, 30. (c. 350 B. C.) Wrath is cruel, and anger is outrageous, but who is able to stand before envy? (Ira non habet misericordiam, nec erumpens furor: et impetum concitati ferre quis poterit?)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvii, 4.

9 He who can endure envy is either made of iron or fortunate. (Invidiam ferre aut fortis aut felix potest.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 285. (c. 43 B. C.)

Envy rages silently but vindictively. (Invidia tacite sed inimice irascitur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 287.

Envy speaks of what it sees, not of what is hidden. (Invidia id loquitur quod videt non quod subest.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 302.

We envy others' fortune; others envy ours. (Aliena nobis, nostra plus aliis placent.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 28.

1 Troubled With the green sickness.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, iii, 2, 6.

(1606) "Green with envy" is the proverbial phrase.

The man is green with envy.

MICHAEL INNES, The Weight of the Evidence, p. 144. (1943)

2 Envy doesn't know how to hide itself. (L'envie ne saurait se cacher.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 284. (1746)

3 Envy slays itself by its own arrows. (ὁ φθόνος αὐτὸς ἐαυτὸν τοῖς βελόεσσι δαμάζει.)

UNKNOWN. See Greek Anthology. Bk. x, ep. 111. (c. A. D. 400)

Enuyos hert hym-selue fretys.

UNKNOWN, How the Good Wiif Taughte His Doughtir, l. 109. (c. 1460) Made into a jingle in PLASIDAS, Mothers Blessing, 167. (1597) "An enuius hert Procures mickle smert."

Envy with a pale and meager face . . . stood shooting at stars, whose darts fell down again on her own face.

JOHN LYL, Endimion. Act v. (1590)

Enuy shootith at other, but hitteth and woundith herself.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Marginalia, p. 103. (c. 1590)

Envy shooteth at others, and woundeth her self.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1381. (1732)

EPIGRAM

4 What is an epigram? A dwarfish whole,
Its body brevity, and wit its soul.

Attributed to S. T. COLERIDGE, but not found in his works. See MATTHEWS, American Epigrams, Harper's Monthly, Nov., 1903.

5 Sure if they cannot cut, it may be said
His saws are toothless, and his hatchet's lead.

POPE, Epilogue to Satires. Dial. ii, l. 148. (1738)

6 Some learned writers . . . have compared a Scorpion to an Epigram . . . because as the sting of the Scorpion lyeth in the tayl, so the force and virtue of the Epigram is in the conclusion.

EDWARD TOPSELL, The Historie of Serpents, p. 756. (1653) A paraphrase of LILLIUS GYRALDUS, De Poetarum Historia, dial. x (1545), "Alfi epigramma Scorpioni, perquam simile esse voluerint, qui licet omni ex parte mineatur, in cauda tamen, in qua inest aculeus, venenum habet."

The qualities rare in a bee that we meet,
In an epigram never should fail;

EQUALITY

The body should always be little and sweet,
And a sting should be felt in its tail.

TOMAS DE YRIARTE, The Epigram. See MATTHEWS, American Epigrams, Harper's Monthly, Nov., 1903.

EPITAPH

7 What difficulty is there about refraining from reading the inscriptions on tombs as we journey along the roads? . . . Nothing useful or pleasant has been written there.

PLUTARCH, MORALIA: On Curiosity, Sec. 520E (c. A. D. 60) Shillito has the following note on this section: "Plutarch rather reminds one, in his evident contempt for Epitaphs, of the cynic who asked, 'Where are all the bad people buried?'"

In some Monuments, the red veins in the marble may seem to blush at the falsehoods written on it. He was a witty man that first taught a stone to speak, but he was a wicked one that taught it first to lie.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy State: Of Tombs. (1642)

Grave-stones tell truth scarce forty years.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. 5. (1658) A note explains, "Old ones being taken up, and other bodies laid under them"

Here comes Glib-Tongue: who can out-flatter a Dedication, and lie like ten Epitaphs.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742.

In lapidary inscriptions a man is not upon oath

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 1775.

The rarest quality in an epitaph is truth. .

Fame itself is but an epitaph; as late, as false, as true.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Monday. (1849)

8 Covered . . . with these two narrow words,
Hic jacet.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, A History of the World. Bk. v, ch. 6, sec. 12. (a. 1618) The first two words of old tombstone inscriptions were usually "Hic Jacet," Here Lies.

May no rude hand deface it,

And its forlorn Hic Jacet.

WORDSWORTH, Ellen Irwin. St. 7. (1800)

The cold Hic Jacets of the dead.

TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 751. (1870)

EQUALITY

9 Fairness, equality have no existence beyond the name. (νῦν δ' οὐδ' ὁμοίον οὐδὲν οὐτ' ἴσον βροτοῖς, | πλὴν ἐνόμασιν.)

EURIPIDES, Phoenissae, l. 501. (c. 420 B. C.)

It is not true that equality is the law of nature: nature has made nothing equal. (Il est faux que l'égalité soit une loi de la nature: la nature n'a rien fait d'égal.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 227. (1746)

Nothing is more plausible in theory than equality, but nothing is more impracticable. (Rien n'est si spécieux, dans la spéculation, que l'égalité, mais rien n'est plus impracticable.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 551. (1746)

Men are not equal and 'tis meet and right
That robes and titles our respect excite.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Borough, iv. (1810)

Men are made by nature unequal. It is vain, therefore, to treat them as if they were equal.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Party Politics. (1860)

The doctrine that all men are, in any sense, or have been, at any time, free and equal, is an utterly baseless fiction.

T. H. HUXLEY, On the Natural Inequality of Man. (1890)

No economic equality can survive the working of biological inequality.

HERBERT HOOVER, The Challenge to Liberty.
Ch. 3. (1934)

It is just as easy for an ebony tree to grow hard wood that will take a high polish, as it is for a white pine to grow soft wood that will not. So much for the idea that all men are created equal.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 60.
(1940)

All men, among themselves, are by nature equal. The inequality we now discern hath its spring from the civil law.

THOMAS HOBBES, *Philosophical Rudiments
Concerning Government and Society*. Ch. 1.
(1651)

Inequality is as dear to the American heart as liberty itself.

W. D. HOWELLS, Impressions and Experiences: New York Streets, p. 202. (1896)

Salt is sold me at the same price as to you.
(Eodem mihi pretio sal praehibitur quo tibi.)

PLAUTUS, Persa, l. 429. (c. 200 B. C.)

The odds for high and low's alike.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale, v, 1, 207. (1610)

As gude hauds the stirrup as he that louns on.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 230. (1678)

I am an aristocrat. I love liberty; I hate equality.

JOHN RANDOLPH OF ROANOKE, Speech. (c. 1828)
See BRUCE, Randolph of Roanoke, li, 203.

Equality breeds no war. (Ἰσον πόλεμον οὐ ποιεῖ.)

SOLON, Maxim. (c. 590 B. C.) See PLUTARCH,
Lives: Solon. Sec. 14.

Value Equality, which knitteth friend to friend.
(ἰσότης τιμῶν, ἢ φίλους δει φίλοις.)

EURIPIDES, Phoenissae, l. 536. (c. 420 B. C.)

Equality produces friendship. (ἰσότης φιλότητα ἀπεργάζεται.)

PLATO, Laws. Bk. vi, sec. 757A. (c. 345 B. C.)

Equality is friendship. (ἰσότης φιλότης.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. ix, ch. 8, sec. 2. (c. 335 B. C.) See under FRIENDSHIP.

Equality is the Life of Conversation.

RICHARD STEELE, The Teller. No. 225. (1710)

One man is as good as another—and a great dale better, as the Irish philosopher said.

THACKERAY, Roundabout Papers: On Ribbons.
(1860)

We are all born equal, and are distinguished alone by virtue. (Omnes pari sorte nascimur, sola virtute distinguimur.)

UNKNOWN. A medieval Latin proverb. (c. 1350)

Related to it is the legal maxim, "Quod ad ius naturale attinet, omnes homines aequales sunt" (As far as natural law extends, all men are equal). See under LAW. From Cicero comes the short, "Instar omnium" (As good as all). "You're as good as I am," see under DEMOCRACY.

We hold these truths to be self-evident: that all men are created equal.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, American Declaration of Independence. (1776) Writings, xix, 278.

Adopted by the Continental Congress, in session at Philadelphia, Pa., on the evening of 4 July, 1776. Printed as a broadside and sent to the Colonies, 6 July, 1776.

All men are born free and equal.

JOHN ADAMS, Constitution of Massachusetts.
(1779) Works, vi, 465.

We are all equal; nature made you so. Equality is your birthright.

ROBERT SOUTHBY, Wat Tyler. (1794)

On the turf and under the turf all men are obliged to be equal.

R. S. SURTEES, Handley Cross. Ch. 59. (1854)

An epigram attributed to Lord George Bentinck. (c. 1830) Usually quoted, "All men are equal on the turf and under it."

It appears that beneath the turf or on it all men are equal.

HENRY SETON MERRIMAN, The Sowers. Ch. 3.
(1896)

EQUATOR

I am not surprised, for I have heard him speak very disrespectfully of the Equator.

SYDNEY SMITH, to Sir John Leslie, when the latter complained that Francis Jeffrey had attacked in the Edinburgh Review an article of his dealing with the North Pole, and when he protested, had retorted, "Oh, damn the North Pole!" See GREVILLE, Memoirs, 1833;
LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Ch. 2.

Insultin' the sun and quarrellin' wi' the equator.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianae. No. 24
May, 1830.

ERRAND

Mony man makes an errand to the hall, to bid
the Ladie good-day.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 78. (c.
1595)

To make . . . a sleeveless errande.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 7. (1546)

Send that . . . villain . . . of a sleeveless errand
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, v, 4, 9.
(1601) A "sleeveless errand" was a futile, bootless errand. For full explanation of the word see under SLEEVELESS.

- <sup>1</sup> Drafte is your errand, but drinke ye wolde.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)
Drafte was mine arrand, but drinke I would.
LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 468. (1580)
Drafte was his errand, but drink he would have.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 83. (1670)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1325. (1732)
Draff he sought, but drink was his errand. Spoken to them that make a sleeveless errand into a house where they know people are at dinner.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 88. (1721)
- <sup>2</sup> Did not the Pope send all the Princes of Christendom upon a Fool's Errand, to gain the Holy Land?
EDMUND HICKERINGILL, Priest-craft, i, 20. (1705)
The doctor's come on a fool's errand.
FREDERICK MARRYAT, Poor Jack. Ch. 8. (1840)
A Fool's Errand.
ALBION W. TOURGÉE. Title of novel. (1879) A "fool's errand" is a senseless or profitless undertaking.
- <sup>3</sup> The tod never sped better than when he went his own errand.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 311. (1721)
"Every man is more zealous for his own interest. See MASTER THE EYE OF THE MASTER.
- <sup>4</sup> Good to send on a dead body's errand.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 171. (1670)
You are good to send of a dead man's errand.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
To send him for a yard-wide packthread.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 223. (1813) To send on a fool's errand. There are many variants: "To send for a left-handed gimlet," etc.

ERROR

See also Mistake

- <sup>5</sup> He who errs quickly, is quick in correcting the error.
FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum: Promptitudo. (1605)
Errors, in the first Concoction, are hardly mended in the second.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1385. (1738)
A double error sometimes sets us right.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: II Heaven. (1839)
- <sup>6</sup> No Man prospers so suddenly as by others' Errors.
FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Fortune. (1597)
Sometimes we may learn more from a man's errors than from his virtues.
LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. iv, ch. 3. (1839)
- <sup>7</sup> Error is worse than ignorance.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Mountain Sunrise. (1839)
- <sup>8</sup> The shortest errors are always the best. (Les plus courtes erreurs sont toujours les meilleures.)
PIERRE CHARRON, Traité de la Sagesse. Bk. i, ch. 38. (1601) MOLIÈRE, L'Étourdi, iv, 3, 24. (1653)

- <sup>9</sup> In spite of dulness, and in spite of wit,
If to thyself thou canst thyself acquit,
Rather stand up, assured with conscious pride,
Alone, than err with millions on thy side.
CHARLES CHURCHILL, Night, l. 381. (1761)
- <sup>10</sup> It could not, in the opinion of His Majesty's Government, be classified as slavery in the extreme acceptance of the word without some risk of terminological inexactitude.
WINSTON CHURCHILL, Speech, House of Commons, 22 Feb., 1906. Referring to the status of Chinese laborers in South Africa.
- <sup>11</sup> I would rather err with Plato than perceive the truth with others. (Errare malo cum Platone, quam cum istis vera sentire.)
CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 17, sec. 39. (45 B.C.) There is a Latin proverb, said to be of Arabic origin, "Cum errat eruditus, errat errore erudito" (When the learned man errs, he errs with a learned error).
Better to err with Pope than shine with Pye.
LORD BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, l. 102. (1809)
I had rather be damned with Plato and Lord Bacon than go to Heaven with Paley and Malthus.
SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound: Preface. (1820)
If I have erred, I err in company with Abraham Lincoln.
THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, during the presidential campaign of 1912, a statement which provoked ironic comment from various satirists.
- <sup>12</sup> Ignorance is a blank sheet on which we may write; but error is a scribbled one from which we must first erase.
C. C. COLTON, Lacon. No. 1. (1820)
- <sup>13</sup> What can we know, or what can we discern,
When error chokes the windows of the mind?
SIR JOHN DAVIES, The Vanity of Human Learning. St. 15. (1599)
- <sup>14</sup> Errors, like straws, upon the surface flow;
He who would search for pearls, must dive below.
JOHN DRYDEN, All for Love: Prologue. (1678)
- <sup>15</sup> No one who lives in error is free. (οὐδείς τολμῶν ἀμαρτάνων ἐλευθέρως ἔστιν.)
EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 1, sec. 24. (c. A.D. 100)
- <sup>16</sup> To err again on the same string. (Eadem oberare chorda.)
ERASMUS, Adagia, i, v, 9. (1523) To stumble twice over the same stone.
- <sup>17</sup> Error is always in Haste.
Error, tho blind herself, yet sometimes bringeth forth seeing Children.
FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 1382-4. (1732)

Every Age confutes old Errors, and begets new.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1403.

<sup>1</sup> The reign of error is but brief.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penimim (Choice of Pearls). No. 426. (c. 1050) The Appendix to Ali's Sentences, p. 47, has, "The reign of error endureth but a moment."

<sup>2</sup> A most pleasing error of the mind. (Mentis gratissimus error.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 140. (20 B. C.) His was the error of head, not of heart.

THOMAS MOORE, The Irish Slave, l. 45. (1827)

<sup>3</sup> One goes to the right, the other to the left; both err, but in different ways. (Ille sinister-sum, hic dextrorsum abit, unus utrique | error, sed variis illudit partibus.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 50. (35 B. C.)

Brother, brother; we are both in the wrong.

JOHN GAY, Beggar's Opera. Act. ii, sc. 10. (1727)

<sup>4</sup> The errors and misfortunes of others should be a school for our own instruction.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Mary Jefferson Eppes. (1798)

<sup>5</sup> To err to high heaven. (Toto coelo errare.)

MACROBIUS, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 12. (c. A. D. 400)

A proverb cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 49, who says that it means to mistake entirely the meaning of anything, "As far from the right as the east is from the west."

<sup>6</sup> The last error shall be worse than the first. (ἔσται ἡ ἐσχάτη πλάνη χειρὼν τῆς πρώτης.)

New Testament: Matthew, xxvii, 64. (c. A. D.

65) The Vulgate is, "Erit novissimus error peior priore."

<sup>7</sup> If it was an error, its causes were honorable. (Si fuit errandum, causas habet error honestas.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. vii, l. 109. (c. 10 B. C.)

<sup>8</sup> Who can understand his errors? (Delicta quis intelligit?)

Old Testament: Psalms, xix, 12. (c. 350 B. C.)

<sup>9</sup> To be learned in many errors, as to be ignorant in all things, hath little diversity.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, History of the World. Bk. ii, ch. 1. (1614)

<sup>10</sup> An error is not counted as a crime. (Error a culpa vacat.)

SENECA, Hercules Oetaeus, l. 983. (c. A. D. 60)

The proverbial form is, "Non omnis error stultitia est dicendus" (Not every error can be called stupid). EMERSON, Natural History of Intellect, quotes Voltaire as saying, "Croyez moi, l'erreur aussi a son merite" (Believe me, error also has its merit).

<sup>11</sup> O hateful error, melancholy's child,

Why dost thou shew to the apt thoughts of men

The things that are not?

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, v, 3, 67. (1599)

The error of our eye directs our mind:

What error leads must err.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, v, 2, 110. (1601)

<sup>12</sup> Who errs and mends, to God himself commends.

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 28. (1620)

He that after sinning mends, recommends himself to God.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2037. (1738)

<sup>13</sup> Admitting Error clears the Score

And proves you Wiser than before.

ARTHUR GUITERMAN, A Poet's Proverbs, p. 83. (1924)

<sup>14</sup> One cannot too soon forget his errors and misdemeanors.

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 9 Jan., 1842.

II—To Err Is Human

<sup>15</sup> Even the wisest of the wise may err. (ἀμαρτάνει τοι καὶ σοφοῦ σοφώτερος.)

AESCHYLUS, Fragments. No. 219, Smyth. (c. 458 B. C.) STOBAEUS, Anthology, iii, 3, 14.

Men are men, they needs must err. (ἀμαρτεῖν εἰκὸς ἀνθρώπους, τέκνον.)

EURIPIDES, Hippolytus, l. 615. (c. 428 B. C.)

But men are men; the best sometimes forget

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, ii, 3, 241. (1605)

The best may slip, and the most cautious fall;
He's more than mortal that ne'er err'd at all.

JOHN POMFRET, Love Triumphant Over Reason, l. 145. (c. 1700)

The best may err.

JOSEPH ADDISON, Cato. Act v, sc. 4. (1712)

<sup>16</sup> For in this world, certain, ther no wight is,
That he ne dooth or seith som-tyme amis.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Frankeleyns Tale, l. 51 (c. 1388)

While man's desires and aspirations stir,

He cannot choose but err.

(Es irrt der Mensch, solang' er strebt.)

GOETHE, Faust: Prolog im Himmel: Der Herr, l. 77. (1808) Bayard Taylor, tr. Taylor remarks, "It has seemed to me impossible to give the full meaning of these words—that error is a natural accompaniment of the struggles and aspirations of man—in a single line."

<sup>17</sup> Mortal am I, I have erred. (ἀνθρωπὸς εἰμι, ἥμαρτον.)

HERODES, Mimes. No. v, l. 27. (c. A. D. 100)

<sup>18</sup> Being human I erred. (ἀνθρωπος ὦν ἥμαρτον.)

MENANDER, Phanium. Frag. 499K. (c. 300 B. C.)

It is human to err. (Humanum est errare.)

SENECA, Naturales Quaestiones. Bk. iv, ch. 2. (c.

A. D. 62) One of the most widely used of all proverbs. Quoted by many Latinists, such as St. Jerome, St. Chrysostom, Polignac, and Cognatus, as well as by innumerable writers in other languages.

It is human to err; it is devilish to remain wilfully in error. (Humanum fuit errare, diabolicum est per animositatem in errore manere.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Sermons. No. 164, sec. 14. (c. A. D. 400)

To err is human, to persist in error beastly. (Errare humanum est, in errore perseverare, belluinum.)

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Introductory Letter. (1576)

The first shows thee a weak man—humanum est errare, to err is human.

WILLIAM GURNALL, The Christian in Compleat Armour, i, 298. (1655)

To err is human, to forgive divine.

ALEXANDER POPE, An Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 325. (1709) One of the rare instances where one may witness the birth of a proverb. This, of course, is its best known modern form.

To err is human, to repent divine, to persist devilish.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742.

To step aside is human.

ROBERT BURNS, Address to the Unco Guid or the Rigidly Righteous. (c. 1786)

1 Man errs as the horse stumbles. (Jên yu shih ts'o, ma yu lou t'i.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1514. (1875)

2 To err is common to all men, but the man who, having erred, repents and seeks the cure, is not unwise. (ἀνθρώποισι γὰρ | τοῖς πᾶσι κοινόν ἐστι τοῦ ἁμαρτάνειν.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 1023. (c. 441 B. C.)

Any man may err, but nobody but a fool persists in error. (Cuiusvis hominis est errare; nullius nisi insipientis in errore perseverare.)

CICERO, Philippics. No. xii, sec. 2. (43 B. C.)

3 Error is a hardy plant; it flourisheth in every soil.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Truth in Things False. (1839)

II—Error and Truth

See also Falsehood and Truth

4 An error is the more dangerous in proportion to the degree of truth which it contains.

HENRI AMIEL, Journal, 26 Dec., 1852.

5 Truth, crushed to earth, shall rise again;
Th' eternal years of God are hers;

But Error, wounded, writhes in pain,
And dies among his worshippers.

BRYANT, The Battle-Field, St. 9. (a. 1879) The first line quoted by BRONSON HOWARD, The Henrietta. Act i. (1887)

I've learned that lies are futile, and that truth crushed to earth will rise again.

L. K. ANSPACHER, The Unchastened Woman. Act. iii. (1915)

6 The thing is not only to avoid error, but to avoid immense masses of truth.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Journal, 28 Oct., 1833.

7 Truth is a good dog; but, beware of barking too close to the heels of an error, lest you get your brains kicked out.

SAMUEL TAYLOR COLERIDGE, Table Talk, 7 June, 1830.

8 Truth is immortal; error is mortal.

MARY BAKER EDDY, Science and Health, p. 466. (1875)

9 A new truth is a truth, an old error is an error, Tho' Clodpate won't allow either.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

Nothing is more harmful to a new truth than an old error. (Einer neuen Wahrheit ist nichts schädlicher als ein alter Irrtum.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. (1819)

10 It is far easier to recognize error than to find truth. (Der Irrtum ist viel leichter zu erkennen, als die Wahrheit zu finden.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. (1819)

11 Truth is for the few, error is both common and vulgar. (La verdad es de pocos, el engaño es tan comun como vulgar.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 43. (1647)

12 Truth is an imaginary line dividing error into two parts.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Roycroft Book of Epigrams. (c. 1911)

13 It was Henrik Ibsen who said that the value of a truth lasted about fifteen years; then it rotted into error.

JAMES HUNEKER, Old Fogy. Ch. 1. (1913)

14 It is error alone that needs the support of government. Truth can stand by itself.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Notes on Virginia. (1782)

15 It is one thing to show a man that he is in an error, and another to put him in possession of truth.

JOHN LOCKE, An Essay Concerning Human Understanding. Bk. iv, ch. 7, sec. 11. (1690) Locke is discussing maxims, whose only use, he says, is "to silence wranglers, and put an end to dispute."

16 There is no error so crooked, but it hath in it some lines of truth.

MARTIN FARQUHAR TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy. (1837)

ESCAPE

<sup>1</sup> He is trying to escape, yet shouts at the top of his voice.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 696. (1817)

<sup>2</sup> Better a clear escape than good men's prayers. (Mas vale salto de mata que ruego de hombres buenos.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 21. (1605)
Pt. ii, ch. 67. (1615)

<sup>3</sup> To mount to the heavens, no road; to enter the earth, no door. (Shang tien wu lu ju ti wu mên.)

JUSTUS DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 191. (1872) In other words, no way to escape.

<sup>4</sup> I am escaped with the skin of my teeth. (De-relicta sunt tantummodo labia circa dentes meos.)

Old Testament: Job, xix, 20. (c. 350 B. C.) Almost always incorrectly quoted, "I have escaped by the skin of my teeth."

He reckoned himself only escaped with the skin of his teeth, that he had nothing left.

E. H. CLARENDON, Tracts (1727) p. 510. (1647)

I got in by the skin of my teeth.

G. A. SALA, London Up to Date, p. 66. (1894)

I got away with it that time, but only by the skin of my teeth.

O'FARRELL, Repeat Performance, p. 150. (1942)

<sup>5</sup> Most of our escapes have to be made uphill.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 133. (1940)

ETERNITY

<sup>6</sup> Eternity is the Day, and Everlastingness the Night.

ANI, Papyrus. Book of the Dead. Ch. xvii, l. 29. (c. 4000 B. C.)

<sup>7</sup> Blessed eternity or eternal blessedness. (Beata aeternitas vel aeterna beatitudo.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, De Civitate Dei, ix, 132. (c. 400)

There is a Latin proverb, "Praestant aeterna caducis" (Things eternal are better than things which are transitory).

<sup>8</sup> As a drop of water unto the sea, and a gravel-stone in comparison of the sand; so are a thousand years to the days of eternity.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xviii, 10. (c. 190 B. C.)

<sup>9</sup> Who can speak of Eternity without a solecism?

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 11. (1643)

<sup>10</sup> There are two sorts of Eternity, from the Present backwards to Eternity, and from the Present forwards.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Pindarique Odes: The Muse: Note. (1656)

Both eternities . . . Past and Future.

RALPH CUDWORTH, Intellectual System of the Universe, p. 119. (1678)

The soul awakes . . . between two dim eternities—the eternal past, the eternal future.

H. B. STOWE, Uncle Tom's Cabin. Ch. 22. (1850)

<sup>11</sup> Eternity is not an everlasting flux of Tyme; but Tyme is a short parenthesis in a longe period.

JOHN DONNE, Devotions. Med. 14. (1624)

Eternity is in love with the productions of time.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

<sup>12</sup> For ever and ever. (τοὺς αἰῶνας τῶν αἰῶνων.)

New Testament: Galatians, i, 5. (c. A. D. 53)

The Vulgate is, "In saecula saeculorum."

Yesterday, and to-day, and for-ever. (σήμερον ὁ αὐτός, καὶ εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας.)

New Testament: Hebrews, xiii, 8. (c. A. D. 90)

The Vulgate is, "Heri, et hodie: ipse et in saecula."

For ever and a day.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iv, 1, 143. (1600)

Men may come and men may go,

But I go on forever.

TENNYSON, The Brook, l. 49. (1855)

<sup>13</sup> Eternity gives no answer.

GEORGE HERZOG, Jabo Proverbs, p. 19. (1936)

<sup>14</sup> Eternity is now.

JAMES HUNEKER, Painted Veils, p. 159. (1920)

<sup>15</sup> Eternity, be thou my refuge. (Éternité deviens mon asile!)

ÉTIENNE PIVERT DE SENANCOUR, author of Obermann. The inscription he wished placed on his tomb. (1846) Quoted by MATTHEW ARNOLD, Obermann Once More, l. 271.

Gout, hack-work, and Madame Senancour explain the inscription he desired to be placed on his tomb, Éternité deviens mon asile!

HUGH KINGSMILL, Matthew Arnold, p. 121.

<sup>16</sup> Eternity consists of opposites. (Contrariis rerum aeternitas constat.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cvii, sec. 8. (c. A. D. 65)

ETHIOPIAN, see Negro

EUPHEMISM

See also Death: Euphemisms; Drunkenness: Euphemisms; Hanging: Euphemisms

<sup>17</sup> The skunk yields a handsome fur, lately become fashionable under the name of "Alaska Sable."

COUES, Fur-Bearing Animals, Ch. 7. (1877)

<sup>18</sup> The Chairman felt it his imperative duty to demand . . . whether he had used the expression . . . in a common sense. Mr. Blotton had no hesitation in saying that he had not—he had used the word in its Pickwickian sense.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 1. (1837)

In every case it had only a political, perhaps I might say a Pickwickian meaning.

JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN, Speech, at Birmingham, 17 Nov., 1902.

<sup>1</sup> "Interesting condition" was the genteel synonym for pregnancy.

ELEANOR EARLY, A New England Sampler, p. 225. (1940)

<sup>2</sup> Marian was out powdering her nose.

RING LARDNER, Zone of Quiet. (1926)

A girl has to powder her nose.

G. H. COXE, The Glass Triangle, p. 166. (1940)

Celia's gone to powder her nose. The number of times that girl powders her nose is simply remarkable. I believe it's all due to war strain.

GILBERT FRANKAU, War Ministry, Room 28, p. 212. (1942) A phrase which has become a cliché in recent fiction, if there ever was one.

<sup>3</sup> The ancient Athenians used to cover up the ugliness of things with auspicious and kindly words. Thus they called harlots "companions," taxes "contributions," and a prison a "chamber."

PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Sec. 15. (c. A. D. 110) Théroigne had only the limited earnings of her profession of unfortunate-female.

CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Pt. i, bk. vii, ch. 7. (1837)

One more Unfortunate, Weary of breath.

Rashly importunate, Gone to her death!

THOMAS HOOD, The Bridge of Sighs. (a. 1845)

In calling a prostitute an "unfortunate" the Victorians wished to imply that a prostitute was someone who had invested in the wrong stock, in spite of the advice of more experienced investors.

HUGH KINGSMILL, Matthew Arnold, p. 12. (1928)

<sup>4</sup> I will but look upon the hedge and follow you.

SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale, iv.4, 857. (1610)

A Shakespearean exit (I go to look upon a hedge).

E. A. ROBERTSON, Four Frightened People, p. 101. (1931)

In other days, Frenchmen used Vespasians—those convenient if inartistic comfort stations for men that dot the boulevards.

BERNHARD RAGNER, Paris Under the Germans.

(American Mercury, Feb., 1941) From the Roman Emperor who declared that money had no smell, even when secured by a tax on urinals. See under MONEY.

<sup>5</sup> I've heard that breeches, petticoats and smock Give to the modest mind a grievous shock, And that my brain (so lucky its device,) Christ'neth them inexpressible, so nice.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), A Rowland for an Oliver, ii, 154. (c. 1783)

[He] took himself up by the waist bands of his unmentionables.

UNKNOWN. In Massachusetts Spy, 6 Jan., 1830.

The knees of the unmentionables . . . soon began to get alarmingly white.

DICKENS, Sketches by Bos. (1835)

[He] dressed himself in a new bright blue coat . . . and a pair of showy unwhisperables.

W. E. BURTON, Waggeries and Vagaries, p. 75. (1848)

<sup>6</sup> It is good to find modest words to express immodest things.

UNKNOWN. MS. Proverbs in Notes and Queries, cliv, 27. (c. 1645)

Immodest words admit of no defence,

For want of decency is want of sense.

WENTWORTH DILLON, On Translated Verse, l. 113. (1684) Often attributed to Pope.

EUROPE

See also Names of European Countries

<sup>7</sup> The workshop of the human race. (Humani generis officinam.)

MONTESQUIEU, De l'Esprit des Lois. Ch. 17. (1748) Referring to northern Europe.

<sup>8</sup> Roll up the map of Europe; it will not be wanted these ten years.

WILLIAM PITT. On his deathbed. (1806)

<sup>9</sup> Better fifty years of Europe than a cycle of Cathay.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 184. (1842) Tennyson evidently used the word as meaning a long period of time, an age, but a Chinese cycle consists of only sixty years.

Better fifty years of Europe than a cyclone in the bay.

O. HENRY (W.S. PORTER), He Also Serves. (1909)

<sup>10</sup> Europe has a set of primary interests, which to us have none, or a very remote concern

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Farewell Address. (1796)

<sup>11</sup> I take Europe to be worn out. When Voltaire dies we may say "Good-night."

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to Horace Munn, 24 Nov., 1774.

EVE, see Adam

EVEN

<sup>12</sup> "Now we are even," quoth Steven, when he gave his wife six blows to one.

SWIFT, Letter to Stella, 20 Jan., 1711.

I was determined to be even with Bernardine.

ANN RADCLIFFE, The Mysteries of Udolpho. Ch. 27. (1794)

I'll be even with you, pretty one.

LORD LYTTON, Godolphin, p. 9. (1831)

EVENING

<sup>13</sup> Well, th' evening crowns the day.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, All Fools. Act ii. (1605)

The evening praises the day, and the chief grace of the theatre is in the last scene.

JOSEPH HALL, Contemplations, xix, 5. (1612)

THE LAST ACT CROWNS THE PLAY, see under PLAY.

Welcome, sweet night! the evening crowns the day.

JOHN FORD, 'Tis Pity She's a Whore. Act ii, sc. 6. (1633)

The evening praises the day, and the morning a frost.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)
The evening crowns the day. For as our success appears then, it is good or bad.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 336. (1721)
See also DAY: ITS END.

1 Evening discovers more friends than the dawn.
(Decima hora amicos plures quam prima invenit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 173. (c. 43 B. C.) Literally, "The tenth hour discovers more friends than the first." Men are apt to be unsocial in the morning, but convivial in the evening.

2 The e'ening brings a' hame.

EDWARD B. RAMSAY, Reminiscences, v, 200. (1857) "An interesting saying, meaning that the evening of life . . . softens many of our religious and political differences."

3 You know not what evening may bring.
(Nescis quid vesper serus vehat.)

MARCUS VARRO, Menippean Satires. (c. 50 B. C.)
The title of one of the satires, according to AULUS GELLIUS, xiii, 11. Quoted by VERGIL, Georgics, i, 461; by LIVY, xlv, 8; and by PONTANUS, p. 126.

What the evening will bring is uncertain. (Quid vesper vehat, incertum est.)

SIR WALTER RALEGH, History of the World: Preface. (1614) See also under DEATH.

EVENT

See also Result

4 The gravest events dawn with no more noise than the morning star makes in rising.

H. W. BEECHER, Royal Truths. (1862)

5 Certain signs precede certain events. (Certis rebus certa signa praecurrent.)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. i, ch. 52, sec. 118. 44 B. C.)

Against ill chances men are ever merry;
But heaviness foreruns the good event.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, iv, 2, 81. (1598)

And in such indexes, although small pricks
To their subsequent volumes, there is seen
The baby figure of the giant mass
Of things to come at large.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, i, 3, 343. (1601)

Often do the spirits

Of great events stride on before the events,
And in to-day already walks to-morrow.

SCHILLER, Wallenstein's Tod. Act v, sc. 1. (1799)
Coleridge, tr.

Coming events cast their shadows before.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Lochiel's Warning, l. 56. (1801) A rare privilege to be able to indicate the author and the exact birthdate of a proverb!

He had a conviction that coming events cast their shadows before.

GEORGE BARTON, Thrilling Triumphs of Crime Detection, p. 147. (1937)

I've never subscribed to the theory that coming events cast their shadows before.

KATHLEEN KNIGHT, Rendezvous with the Past, p. 43. (1940)

The shadows of coming events fit perfectly the events already here.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 143. (1940)

6 The event is the print of your form. It fits you like your skin.

R. W. EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate. (1860)

7 The event proves the act. (Exitus acta probat.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. ii, l. 85. (c. 10 B. C.)

Adopted as a motto by George Washington.
See also END AND MEANS.

The event itself will show. (Res ipsa indicabit.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iii, cent. iv, No. 49. (1523) The Germans say, "Der Ausgang wird's lehren" (The event will teach).

EVIDENCE, see Proof

EVIL

See also Good and Evil; Ill

8 Of all evils the Lemnian takes the first place.
(κακῶν δὲ πρῶτον τὸ Λήμιον.)

AESCHYLUS, Libation-Bearers, l. 631. (458 B. C.)

The Lemnians were proverbial for two acts of violence: the men massacred the children they had had by some Athenian women they had carried off; the women, jealous of the Thracian slaves, killed their husbands, so that when the Argonauts visited the island, they found no men. Another Greek proverbial saying was, θαλάσση, καὶ πῦρ, καὶ γυνή, κακὰ τρία (Sea, fire, woman, three evils). See also under THREE.

9 Better suffer a great evil than do a little one.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 330. (1855)

10 The authors of great evils know best how to remove them. (τῶν γὰρ αὐτῶν εἶναι καὶ ποιεῖν τὰ μεγάλα κακὰ καὶ παύειν.)

CATO THE YOUNGER, when criticized for advising the Senate to place the affairs of the state in the hands of Pompey. (49 B. C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Cato the Younger, sec. 52.

11 Welcome evil, if thou comest alone. (Bien vengas, mal, si vienes solo.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 55. (1615)

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 146. (1640)

The evil comes upon us all at once like blows to a dog. (El mal nos viene junto, como al perro los palos.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 68.

<sup>1</sup> That evil is half-cured whose cause we know.
CHARLES CHURCHILL, Gotham, iii, 652. (1764)

<sup>2</sup> Every evil in the bud is easily crushed. (Omne malum nascens facile opprimitur.)

CICERO, Philippics. No. v, sec. 11. (43 B.C.)

There is a Greek proverb, μικρὸν κακὸν, μέγα ἀγαθόν (A small evil is a great good). NO EVIL WITHOUT GOOD, see under COMPENSATION.

Any evil at the first entering in of it may easily be avoyded, but let one or two presidentes passe patiently without resisting, and it will run into a custome, and from thence to a law, and you will never bee able after to rid your handes of it.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 121. (1576)

<sup>3</sup> Flee from every evil and from whatsoever is similar to it.

R. ELIEZER (?), Didache, or Teaching of the Twelve Apostles (Διδαχὴ τῶν Δώδεκα Ἀποστόλων), iii, 1. (c. 150) A well-known Jewish proverb, whose attribution to Eliezer has been questioned. "Avoid evil and it will avoid thee" is an English variant.

<sup>4</sup> Forgetfulness of evil, how wise it is! (λήθη τῶν κακῶν, ὡς εἰ σοφία.)

EURIPIDES, Orestes, l. 213. (c. B.C. 410) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 522D.

Don't recall past evils. (μὴ μνησικακήσης.)

THRASYBULUS, Maxim. (c. 400 B.C.) When Thrasybulus expelled the thirty tyrants who had seized upon the government of Athens, he enacted a law that no one should be punished for the part they had taken in the civil dissensions, and added, "Don't recall past evils." Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, 1, 94, who gives the Latin as "Ne malorum memineris."

Repeat no grievances.

CHARLES I, OF ENGLAND. (c. 1640) One of his rules of conduct, which Charles II followed when recalled from banishment in 1660.

<sup>5</sup> To sick ones welcome is the couch,
A place of evil, and yet necessary.

(φίλον τοι τῷ νοσοῦντι δέμνιον, ἀνιάρδον δὲ τὸ κτήμ', ἀναγκαῖον δ' ὄμωσ.)

EURIPIDES, Orestes, l. 229. (c. 410 B.C.) Whence the Greek proverb, "A necessary evil" (ἀναγκαῖον κακόν).

A necessary evil. (Necessarium malum.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. v, no. 26. (1500) Necessary evils.

ROBERT GREENE, Morando. (1584) Works, iii, 101. Referring to women. See under WOMAN.

Nothing is evil that is necessary.

ROBERT GREENE, Penelope's Web. (1587)

<sup>6</sup> Do Evil, and look for the like.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1305. (1732)

Evil is soon believed.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1475.

Most of our evils come from our vices.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3471.

<sup>7</sup> It is bad to do evil, but worse to boast of it.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, If You Know Not Me. Pt. ii. (1606)

<sup>8</sup> No healing can be found for evil once wrought. (οὐδέ τι μῆχος | ῥεχθέντος κακοῦ ἔστ' ἄκος εὐρεῖν.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 249. (c. 850 B.C.)

WHAT'S DONE CAN'T BE UNDONE, see under DEED.

<sup>9</sup> Evil doth ever follow hard on evil. (δέχεται κακὸν ἐκ κακοῦ αἰεί.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xix, l. 290. (c. 850 B.C.)

One evil rises out of another. (Aliud ex alio malum.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 987. (161 B.C.)

EVIL MUST COME OF EVIL, see under RETRIBUTION

<sup>10</sup> Evil deeds do not succeed. The slow catches the swift. (οὐκ ἀρετᾶ κατὰ ἔργα· κιχάνει τοι βραδὺς ὠκύν.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. viii, l. 329. (c. 850 B.C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 19D.

<sup>11</sup> Evil is wrought by want of Thought.
As well as want of Heart.

THOMAS HOOD, The Lady's Dream, l. 95. (a. 1845)

<sup>12</sup> Their feet run to evil. (Pedes eorum ad malum currunt.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, lix, 7. (c. 725 B.C.)

<sup>13</sup> Every one that doeth evil hateth the light. (πᾶς γὰρ ὁ φαῦλα πράσσων μισεῖ τὸ φῶς.)

New Testament: John, iii, 20. (c. A. D. 110) The Vulgate is, "Omnis enim, qui male agit, odit lucem." Compressed into an Elizabethan proverb, "He that doeth evil hateth the light." Paraphrased into a medieval Latin proverb, "Demon ipse crucem fugit ut malus undique lucem" (An evil man avoids the light as the devil the cross).

Who doth euyl, hateth light. (Chi fa male, odia il lume.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 28. (1578)

He that does ill hates the light.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 38. (c. 1595)

<sup>14</sup> No evil man is happy. (Nemo malus felix.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iv, l. 8. (c. A. D. 120)

Earth now maintains none but evil men and cowards. (Terra malos homines nunc educat atque pusillos.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xv, l. 70.

<sup>15</sup> We believe no evil except when it arrives. (Nous ne croyons le mal que quand il est venu.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 8. (1664)

<sup>16</sup> The common saying is not altogether false: to him who thinks evil evils will come. (Le dit commun n'est pas tout faux: Qui mal pense à li viendra maux.)

MARIE DE FRANCE, Ysopet: L'Esprevier et le Coulon. (1333) A rendering of the fable of the fowler and the lark.

Evil to him who thinks evil. (Honi soit qui mal y pense.)

Motto, of the Order of the Garter, instituted (on the authority of Froissart) by Edward III of England about 1344. The garter was probably selected as the badge of the Order, because Edward had given his own as a signal of battle at Crecy. "By the time of Selden [1614] it was traditionally asserted that the garter was that of the Countess of Salisbury, which dropped off while she danced with the King, who picked it up and tied it on his own leg," quoting the old French proverb as he did so. (O.E.D.) But there is no historical authority for this story. See HUME, History of England. Ch. 10.

Yvel shal have, that yvel wol deserve.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Prioress Tale, l. 180. (c. 1386)

Who thinketh il, no good may him befall.

SIR RICHARD ROS, La Belle Dame Sans Merci. (c. 1460) See SKEAT, Chaucer, vii, 397.

St. George he was for England; St. Dennis was for France.

Sing, Honi soit qui mal y pense.

UNKNOWN, St. George He Was for England. Black-letter ballad, London, 1512.

Goodly garters below the knee, with an inscription which condemns him (qui mal y pense) who think ill of it. (Les vns porter iects aux iambes bien beaux & precieux, avec inscription aux veruelles, par laquelle qui mal y pensera est condemné.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 5. (1552) Lord Melbourne once remarked, "I like the Garter, there is no damned merit about it." See MUNTHE, Story of San Michele, p. 214.

And Honi soit qui mal y pense write

In emerald tufts, flowers purple, blue, and white. SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, v, 5, 73. (1601)

Evil falls on him who goes to seek it. (El mal para quien le fuere a buscar.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 20. (1605)

To who thinks evil, evil befalls him.

GIOVANNI TORIANNO, Piazza Universale, p. 200. (1666)

SHAME TO HIM WHO THINKS SHAME, see under SHAME.

<sup>1</sup> Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof. (ἡμέρα ἡ κακία αὐτῆς.)

New Testament: Matthew, vi, 34. (c. A. D. 70)

The Vulgate is, "Sufficit diei malitia sua." Frequently quoted. See SCOTT, St. Roman's Well, ch. 11. (1824) TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers, ch. 15. (1857) SHAW, Misalliance, p. 106. (1910) KEELER, The Book with the Orange Leaves, p. 132. (1942), etc., etc.

We learn that it is best to let tomorrow's evil take care of itself.

CONSTANCE WAGNER, The Major Had Seven Guests, p. 78. (1940)

<sup>2</sup> Everyone has power to do evil. (πᾶς δύναται κακῶς ποιεῖν.)

MENANDER, The Toady, l. 83. (c. 300 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> Do not befriend an evil man, and no evil will overtake you.

Midrash: Genesis Rabbah, 22. (c. 550)

Bestow no good upon that which is evil, and no evil will befall thee.

UNKNOWN, Alphabet of Ben Sira. No. 9. (c. 1000) Rabbinical sources characterize this as a genuine saying of Ben Sira, though it does not occur in Ecclesiasticus. However BEN SIRA, vii, 1, has, "Do no evil, then shall no evil come upon thee."

<sup>4</sup> Endure evil with patience and forgive, for therein is great and true wisdom.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, xlii, 43. (c. 622)

<sup>5</sup> One evil cureth another. (Le mal y guarit le mal.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 29. (1580)

It is weakness to yield to evils, but folly to foster them. (C'est foiblesse de ceder aux maux, mais c'est folie de les nourrir.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 3.

<sup>6</sup> If evils come not, then our fears are vain; And if they do, fear but augments the pain.

SIR THOMAS MORE, On Fear. (a. 1535) FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1741. See under TROUBLE.

Don't let us make imaginary evils, when you know we have so many real ones to encounter.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man. Act i, sc. 1. (1768)

<sup>7</sup> No evil is great which is the last. (Nullum magnum malum quod extremum est.)

CORNELIUS NEPOS, De Viris Illustribus. (c. 40 B. C.)

No evil is great which is the last evil of all. (Nullum malum est magnum, quod extremum est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. iv, sec. 3. (c. A. D. 65)

The last Evil smarts most.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4623. (1732)

<sup>8</sup> One never does evil so thoroughly and so gaily as when one does it for conscience' sake. (Jamais on ne fait le mal si pleinement et si gaïement que quand on le fait pas un faux principe de conscience.)

BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. ii, art. xvii, No. 53. (1660)

<sup>9</sup> The things we don't want come more quickly than the things we crave. (Nimio celerius veniet quod noles quam illud, quod cupide potas.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 72. (c. 220 B. C.)

The yll commeth by poundes, and goeth away by ounces. (El mal vien per libra, e va via per oncie.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578)

Ill comes by ells, and goes out by inches.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 196. (1640)

Evil cometh by cartloads, and goes away by ounces, cometh on horseback and goes away on foot.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 138. (1666) A rendering of the French, "Le mal vient à cheval, et s'en va à pied."

Mischief comes by the pound and go away by the ounce.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 121. (1670)

Misfortunes come on wings and depart on foot.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 452.

(1855) See also under DISEASE; MISCHIEF.

1 Keep what you have; the known evil is best. (Habeas ut nactu's: nota mala res optumast.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 63. (c. 194 B. C.)

Submit to the present evil, lest a greater one befall you. (Hoc sustinete, malus ne veniat malum.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fable ii, l. 31. (c. 25

B. C.) This is the fable of the Frogs Asking for a King, who weren't satisfied with King Log, and got King Stork.

The best known evil is the most tolerable. (Notissimum quodque malum maxime tolerabile.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxiii, sec. 3. (c. 10 B. C.)

Put up with familiar evils, rather than make trial of unfamiliar ones. (τὴν τὰ οικειώματα τῶν κακῶν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Brotherly Love. Sec. 482A. (c. A. D. 95)

The oldest and best known evil is always more tolerable than a new and unexperienced one. (Le plus vieil et mieulx cogneu mal est tousjours plus supportable que le mal recent et inexperimenté.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 9. (1595)

Better rew sit, nor rew flit.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 22. (c. 1595) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 59, who adds, "Spoken to them that long to change masters." SCOTT, Heart of Midlothian, ch. 20, has, "Better sit and rue, than flit and rue."

Remembering the olde proverbe, Better is the evill knowne, than the good that is yet to knowe.

DAVID ROWLAND, tr., Lazarillo, p. 73. (1586)

Rather bear those ills we have

Than fly to others that we know not of.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 1, 81. (1600)

Better the harm I know than that I know not.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 87. (1869)

We prefer the evils we know, and so on.

CROFT, Circumstantial Evidence, p. 98. (1941)

2 When evil is advantageous, he errs who does rightly. (Cum vitia prosunt, peccat qui recte facit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 113. (c. 43 B. C.)

No evil without its advantages.

WILLIAM HONE, Every-Day Book, ii, 649. (1827)

3 The evil that lies concealed is always the most serious. (Gravius malum omne est quod sub aspectu latet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 233. (c. 43 B. C.)

Bad characters never lack an instructor. (Malae naturae numquam doctore indigent.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 369.

He who is bent on doing evil can never want occasion. (Male facere qui vult numquam non causam invenit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 377.

The evil mind in secret meditates worse evil. (Malus animus in secreto peius cogitat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 410.

What a pity when an outworn evil is renewed! (Quam miserum est cum se renovat consumptum malum!)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 612.

4 There is no evil in the world without a remedy. (Al mondo mal non è senza rimedio.)

JACOPO SANNAZARO, Ecloga Octava. (c. 1510)

For every evil under the sun,

There is a remedy, or there is none;

If there be one, try and find it,

If there be none, never mind it.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 135. (1869)

Apparently an adaptation of the Spanish proverb, "Si hay remedio porqui te apuras? Si no hay remedio porqui te apuras?"

5 Fear not that men should speak evil of you; fear only lest you should do evil.

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1842. (1875)

6 No time is too brief for the wicked to accomplish evil. (Nullum ad nocendum tempus angustum est malis.)

SENECA, Medea, l. 292 (c. A. D. 60)

That which is evil is soon learn't.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 8. (1670) The Germans say, "Das Böse lernt sich von selbst" (Evil is learnt from itself).

7 Desperate evils generally make men calm. (Solent suprema facere securos mala.)

SENECA, Medea, l. 292. (c. A. D. 60)

8 Nothing is without evils. (οὐτὼν κακῶν ἄπ' οὐδέν.)

SIMONIDES, Fragments. (c. 650 B. C.) See STOBÆUS, Florilegium, 98, 16.

9 He sucked evil from the dug.

HENRY SMITH, Sermons, i, 32. (c. 1585)

From my dugs he drew not this deceit.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, ii, 2, 30. (1595)

10 Do not try to cure evil with evil. (μὴ κακὸν κακῷ διδοὺς ἄκος.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 362. (c. 409 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, who gives the Latin proverb, "To cure ill with ill" (Malum malo medicari).

HERODOTUS, History, Bk. iii, ch. 53, quotes Periander's daughter as saying to Lycophron, "μὴ τῷ κακῷ τὸ κακὸν ἰώ" (Seek not to cure one evil with another).

Curing one evil with another. (σχεδόθεν δὲ κακῷ κακόν.)

APOLLONIUS RHODIUS, Argonautica. Bk. iv, l. 1081. (c. 225 B. C.)

Do not add evil to evil. (Non esse malo addendum malum.)

PHAEDRUS (?), New Fables. No. 18. (c. 25 B. C.)

11 Blessed are they who never tasted evil. (εὐδαίμονες οἱ κακῶν ἀγευστος αἰών.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 582. (c. 441 B. C.)

1 Those in evil plight are driven to evil ways. (ἀλλ' ἐν τοι κακοῖς | πολλή 'στ' ἀνάγκη κάπιτη-δεύειν κακά.)

SOPHOCLES, Electra, l. 309. (c. 409 B. C.)

2 Heaven's justice never smites
Him who ill with ill requites.

(οὐδενὶ μοιριδία τίσις ἔρχεται ἀν προπάθῃ τὸ τίνειν.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus at Colonus, l. 229. (c. 409 B. C.)

Recompense to no man evil for evil. (μηδενὶ κακὸν ἀντὶ κακοῦ ἀποδιδόντες.)

New Testament: Romans, xii, 17. (c. A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Nulli malum pro malo reddentes."

3 The extremest of extreme evils. (ἔσχατ' ἔσχατων κακά.)

SOPHOCLES, Philoctetes, l. 65. (c. 409 B. C.) PLATO speaks of "A prodigious evil" (δωλύγιον κακόν), and ARISTOPHANES in The Wasps, l.
466, has the phrase "Terribly terrible"
(πῶν πόνηρε).

The vilest evil of all. (ὡς χαλεπὼν χαλεπώτατον.)

MENANDER, The Necklace. Frag. 403K. (c. 300
B. C.) St. Chrysostom phrases it, ὦ κακόν, κακὼν κάκιστον.

Thou art as opposite to every good

As the Antipodes are unto us,

Or as the south to the septentrion.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, i, 4. 134. (1591)

Septentrion: the constellation of the Great
Bear, with its seven stars.

4 Evil never dies. (ἐπεὶ οὐδὲν πω κακόν γ' ἀπώ-λετο.)

SOPHOCLES, Philoctetes, l. 446. (c. 409 B. C.) A Latin proverb says, "Mala ultro adsunt"
(Evils come spontaneously).

5 Man creates the evil he endures.

SOUTHEY, Inscriptions. No. 2, last line. (a. 1843)

The evils we bring on ourselves are the hardest to bear.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 119. (1902) Th:
French say, "Bien est malheureux qui est cause de son malheur" (He is indeed unhappy who is the cause of his own unhappiness).
There is a Latin proverb, "Plura mala con-tingunt quam accidunt" (More evils reach us than happen by chance), that is, we bring most of our evils on ourselves.

6 Abstain from all appearance of evil. (ἀπὸ παντὸς εἶδους πονηροῦ ἀπέχεσθε.)

New Testament: I Thessalonians, v, 22. (c.
A. D. 52) The Vulgate is, "Ab omni specie mala abstinete vos."

I must avoid even the appearance of evil.

AGATHA CHRISTIE, Moving Finger. p. 75. (1942)

7 Iniquity is the greatest evil (summum malum).

BENJAMIN WHICHCOTE, Moral Aphorisms.
(1753)

8 Those who do evil to others, hate them. (Tous ceux qui font du mal aux autres hommes les haïssent.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 397. (1746)

9 The olde prouerbe sayth, who so wyll none euyll do, shulde do nothyng that longeth thereto.

RICHARD WHITFORD, Werke for Housholders,
sig. D7. (1537)

He that will none ill doo

Must do nothyng, that belongeth thereto.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

He that would no evils doe

Must shun all things that longs thereto.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 202. (1639)

He that would no Evil do,

Must do nought that's like thereto.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6305. (1732)

10 When bale [evil] is highest, boot [remedy] is nighest. (Thegar böler haest er bót naest.)

UNKNOWN. An Icelandic proverb of c. 1000.

When the evil is the worst, the remedy is nearest. Transferred almost bodily into an ancient English proverb, "When the bale is hest, thenne the bote is nest." (SKEAT, Early English Proverbs, gives the Elizabethan form as, "Whan bale is greetest, than is bote a nyebore [neighbor].")

Wone the bale is aire-hecst, thonne is the bote air-necst.

UNKNOWN, Owl and Nightingale, l. 687. (a.
1250)

Quen the bal ys alder hext then sum time ys bote next.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 4775. (a. 1300)

When the bale is hest, Thenne is the bote nest.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Hendyng. (c. 1320)

See Reliquiae Antiquae (1841), i, 113.

An olde proverbe aleged by many wyse:—
"Whan bale is greetest, than is bote a nye-bore."

USK, Testament of Love, ii, ix, 144. (1387)

When bale is hext [highest] than bote is next [nighest].

JOHN RUSSELL, Boke of Nurture, l. 32. (c. 1450)

Comforte your selfe with this old text,

When bale is hekst boote is next.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 12. (1546)

II—Of Two Evils Choose the Lesser

11 Better to struggle with one evil than two.
(ἐνὶ γὰρ ἐνέχεσθαι κρείττον ἢ δύοιν κακοῖν.)

ARISTOPHANES, Ecclesiazusae, l. 1096. (c. 393 B. C.)

12 Better lose the wool than the sheep. (Meglio è dar la lana, che la pecora.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs, i, 96. (1814)

Better miss breakfast than spoil the whole broth.

CARR, Case of Constant Suicides, p. 183. (1941)

13 When better choices are not to be had,

We needs must take the seeming best of bad.

SAMUEL DANIEL, *The History of the Civile
Warres*. Bk. ii, st. 24. (c. 1600)

1 Of evils that were the least. (κακῶν δὲ κε φέρτατον εἶη.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvii, l. 105. (c. 850 B. C.)

2 When compelled to choose one of two evils, nobody will choose the greater when he may choose the lesser. (ὅταν τε ἀναγκασθῇ δυοῖν κακοῖν τὸ ἕτερον αἰρεῖσθαι, οὐδεὶς τὸ μείζον αἰρήσεται ἔξὸν τὸ ἐλαττον.)

PLATO, Protagoras. Sec. 358D. (c. 389 B. C.)

We must choose the lesser of two evils, as the saying is. (φασί, πλοῦν τὰ ἐλάχιστα ληπτέον τῶν κακῶν.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. ii, ch. 9, sec. 4. (c. 335 B. C.)

I have learned from philosophers that among evils one ought not only to choose the least, but also to extract even from these any element of good that they may contain. (Sed quia sic ab hominibus doctis accepimus, non solum ex malis eligere minima oportere, sed etiam excerpere ex his ipsis, si quid inesset boni.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. iii, ch. 1, sec. 3. (c. 45 B. C.)

Of evils choose the least. (Minima de malis.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. iii, ch. 29, sec. 105. (c. 45 B. C.)

Of evils one should choose the least. (τὰ ἐλάχιστα δεῖν αἰρεῖσθαι τῶν κακῶν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Brotherly Love. Sec. 482A. (c. A. D. 95) Quoting the remark of a Spartan when he married a little wife.

Of two evils choose the lesser. (Car de II maus prent-on le mieux.)

MILON D'AMIENS, Du Prestre et du Chevalier, l. 144. (c. 1250) MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, ii, 50.

Of harms two, the lesse is for to chese.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, Bk. ii, l. 470 (c. 1380)

Of two evils, the less is ever to be chosen. (De duobus malis, minus est semper eligendum.)

THOMAS A KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. iii, ch. 12, sec. 2. (c. 1420) Another Latin form is, "E duobus malis minimum eligendum."

Of two yls, choose the least whyle choyse lyth in lot.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1546)

Of evils ye least is to be chosen.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace (Hartman), p. 27. (1576) Repeated on pp. 67, 68, 123.

Of two mischiefs the least is to be chosen.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 338. (1580)

Of two evils the least must be choosed.

NATHANIEL WOODS, The Conflict of Conscience. (1581)

Of two evils we take the less.

RICHARD HOOKER, Laws of Ecclesiastical Polity. Bk. v, ch. 81. (1597)

Since it is the lesser evil of the two, it is to be preferred.

HENRY FIELDING, The Temple Beau. Act iv, sc. 5. (1703)

Of all evils we ought to choose the least.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738) The French say, "De deux maux il faut choisir moindre"; the Germans, "Aus zwei Uebeln muss man das Kleinste wählen." The Spanish form is, "De los enemigos los menos" (Among enemies choose the least).

3 It was a choice of evils. (Illud malum aderat.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 502. (c. 195 B. C.)

Life too often presents us with a choice of evils, rather than of goods.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. ii, No. 102. (1822)

4 Out of many evils the evil which is least irksome is the evil which irks the least. (Ex malis multis malum, quod minimumst, id minimest malum.)

PLAUTUS, Stichus. Act i, sc. 2. (c. 200 B. C.)

5 When in doubt choose the side from which the least injury will result.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Maxim 14. (c. 1258)

6 Of two evils, choose neither.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. (1880)

EVOLUTION

7 A fire-mist and a planet,
A crystal and a cell,

A jellyfish and a saurian,
And caves where the cavemen dwell;
Then a sense of law and beauty,

And a face turned from the clod—
Some call it Evolution,
And others call it God.

W. H. CARRUTH, Each in His Own Tongue. (1909)

8 God, in giving life to all created things, is surely bountiful to them according to their qualities. Hence the tree that is full of life He fosters and sustains, while that which is ready to fall He cuts off and destroys.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. (c. 500 B. C.) Ku Hung Ming, tr., p. 39. The law of the survival of the fittest—only to Confucius it means the survival, not of the brutally strong, but of the morally fittest.

This survival of the fittest, which I have here sought to express in mechanical terms, is that which Mr. Darwin has called "natural selection, or the preservation of favoured races in the struggle for life."

HERBERT SPENCER, Principles of Biology. Pt. iii, ch. 12, sec. 165. (1864) Darwin first used the phrase "natural selection" in The Origin of Species, ch. 3 (1859), defining it as the "principle by which each slight variation, if useful, is preserved." He speaks of it, in the same chapter, as "the struggle for existence."

"The unfit die—the fit both live and thrive."

Alas, who say so? They who do survive.

SARAH N. CLEGHORN, The Survival of the Fittest. (1917)

Evolution is a stern taskmaster that knows no compromise and grants no reprieve.

ALBERT EDWARD WIGGAM, The New Decalogue of Science, p. 36. (1923)

<sup>1</sup> The question is this: Is man an ape or an angel? I, my lord, am on the side of the angels.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, at Oxford Diocesan Conference, 1864.

He might have given us a hint that he was on the side of the angels.

ELIZABETH DALY, The House Without the Door, p. 266. (1942)

<sup>2</sup> The connecting link between the homo sapiens and his supposed progenitor the oran outang.

T. M. WINTERBOTTOM, An Account of the Native Africans in the Neighbourhood of Sierra Leone. Vol. i, ch. 12, p. 202. (1803)

A break in the chain implying no doubt many missing links.

SIR CHARLES LYELL, The Elements of Geology. Ch. 17. (1851)

The missing link between words and things.

BENJAMIN JOWETT, Plato, iv, 154. (1875)

The early critics of the hypotheses of evolution were not slow to fix upon "missing links" and their nature.

Gentleman's Magazine. Vol. ccxlv, p.298. (1879)

EXAGGERATION

<sup>3</sup> Exaggeration is a branch of lying. (El encarcer es ramo de mentir.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 41. (1647)

An exaggeration is a truth that has lost its temper.

KAHLIL GIBRAN, Sand and Foam. (1926)

<sup>4</sup> We always weaken whatever we exaggerate. (On affaiblit toujours tout ce qu'on exagère.)

J. F. LA HARPE, Mélanie. Act i, sc. 1. (c. 1770)

<sup>5</sup> The report of my death was an exaggeration.

MARK TWAIN, Cablegram, from London to inquiring New York newspaper, 2 June, 1897.

EXAMPLE

<sup>6</sup> Example is the school of mankind, and they will learn at no other.

EDMUND BURKE, Letters on a Regicide Peace. Letter 1. (1795)

<sup>7</sup> They do more harm by their evil example than by their actual sin. (Plus exemplo quam peccato nocent.)

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. iii, sec. 14. (c. 52 B. C.)

Cicero is speaking of rulers.

The people are fashioned by the example of their kings. (Componitur orbis regis ad exemplum.)

CLAUDIAN, Panegyricus de Quarto Consulatu Honorii Augusti, l. 299. (A. D. 398)

Examples lead us, and wee likely see, Such as the Prince is, will his People be.

ROBERT HERRICK, Examples. (1648)

<sup>8</sup> What is shown by example, men think they may justly do. (Quod exemplo fit, id etiam iure fieri putant.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. iv, epis. 3. (57 B. C.)

Nor knowest thou what argument Thy life to thy neighbor's creed has lent.

R. W. EMERSON, Each and All. (1867)

<sup>9</sup> Example often is nothing but a mirror that deceives. (L'exemple souvent n'est qu'un miroir trompeur.)

PIERRE CORNEILLE, Cinna. Act ii, sc. 1. (1640)

Example is the greatest of all the seducers. (L'exemple est le plus grand de tous les séducteurs.)

COLLIN D'HARLEVILLE, Mœurs du Jour. Bk. ii, sec. 5. (c. 1790)

<sup>10</sup> Wretched is he, that geueth example to others. (Tristo colui, che da esempio altrui.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578)

<sup>11</sup> Setting too Good an Example is a kind of Slander seldom forgiven; 't is Scandalum Magnatum.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1753.

<sup>12</sup> The salutary influence of example.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Milton. (1779)

<sup>13</sup> Example is a dangerous lure:

Where the wasp got through, the gnat sticks sure.

(L'exemple est un dangereux leurre:

Où la guêpe a passé, le moucheron demeure.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Corbeau Voulant Imiter l'Aigle. Bk. ii, fab. 16. (1668)

<sup>14</sup> Nothing is so contagious as example. (Rien n'est si contagieux que l'exemple.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 230. (1665)

<sup>15</sup> Everyone is bound to bear patiently the results of his own example. (Sua quisque exempla debet aequo animo pati.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 26, l.12. (c.25 B. C.)

I am myself tormented by the fear of my own example. (Exemplique metu torqueor mei.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 4, l. 46. (c. 13 B. C.)

<sup>16</sup> 'Tis better to profit by a horrible example than to be one. (Te de aliis, quam alios de te suavius fieri doctos.)

PLAUTUS, Persa, l. 540. (c. 200 B. C.)

It is better to take example by other, than other to take yt by hym.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophirs, fo. 107. (1477)

I have ever deemed it more honorable and more profitable, too, to set a good example than to follow a bad one.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings, xiv, 222. (c.1800)

<sup>17</sup> Like me, God bless the example.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 184. (1670)

My husband lies to me, and I lie to the neighbors.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs, No. 316. (1817)

The young ones of the duck are swimmers.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 478.

<sup>1</sup> A house-wife in bed, at table a slattern;
For all an example, for no one a pattern.

SWIFT, Portraits from Life. (a. 1745)

I do not give you to posterity as a pattern to imitate, but as an example to deter.

JUNIUS, Letters. No. 12. (30 May, 1769)

<sup>2</sup> I bid him look into the lives of all men, as into a mirror, and to take example to himself from others. (Inspicere tamquam in speculum, in vitas omnium | iubeo; atque ex aliis sumere exemplum sibi.)

TERENCE, Adelphoi, l. 415. (c. 160 B. C.)

II—Example and Precept

See also Preaching and Practice

<sup>3</sup> One example is more valuable . . . than twenty precepts written in bookes.

ROGER ASCHAM, The Scholemaster, p.66. (1570)

Example prevails more than precept.

FRANCIS OSBORNE, Advice to His Son. (1656)

Example is always more efficacious than precept.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 30. (1735)

Examples work more forcibly on the mind than precepts.

FIELDING, Joseph Andrews. Bk. i, ch. 1. (1742)

Example is better than precept.

DAVID MOIR, Mansie Waugh. Ch. 19. (1824)

Men are more easily led than driven: example is better than precept.

LORD AVEBURY, Use of Life. Ch. 19. (1894)

<sup>4</sup> Words but direct, example must allure.

SIR WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Doomsday: The Ninth Hour. St. 113. (1614)

Precepts may lead but examples draw.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p.475. (1855)

<sup>5</sup> That is the way to set an example, when the judge does himself what he warns others to do. (Sic exempla parantur, | cum iudex, alios quod monet, ipse facit.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. vi, l. 647. (c. A. D. 8)

<sup>6</sup> The path of precept is long, that of example short and effectual. (Longum iter est per praecepta, breve et efficax per exempla.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. vi, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 65)

The French say, "Précepte commence, exemple achève" (Precept begins, example accomplishes).

<sup>7</sup> We have enough good precepts, but few good examples. (Nous avons d'assez bons préceptes, mais peu de bons maîtres.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 604. (1746)

<sup>8</sup> The sermon edifies, the example destroys. (Le sermon edifie, l'exemple détruit.)

PIERRE DE VILLIERS, L'Art de Prêcher. (1682)

Examples draw where precept fails,

And sermons are less read than tales.

MATTHEW PRIOR, The Turtle and the Sparrow, l. 192. (a. 1721)

A good Example is the best Sermon.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 146. (1732)

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1747.

A good example is half a sermon. (Gute Exempel, halbe Predigt.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 341. (1856) A German proverb.

EXCELLENCE

<sup>9</sup> Excellence is the perfect excuse. Do it well, and it matters little what.

R. W. EMERSON, Journal, 1862.

<sup>10</sup> The excellence of a building is its site; the excellence of a mind is its profundity; the excellence of speech is truthfulness; the excellence of government is order; the excellence of action is ability; the excellence of movement is timeliness.

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue).

Sec. 8. (c. 550 B. C.) Giles, tr.

<sup>11</sup> Different men excell in different ways. (τέχνας δ' ἐρέπων ἕρεται.)

PINDAR, Nemean Odes. No. i, l. 25. (c. 476 B. C.)

One man excels in one thing, another in another. (In aliis rebus alius est praestantior.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 332. (c. 43

B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, ix, 13.

Whoe'er excels in what we prize,

Appears a Hero to our Eyes; . . .

In Learning let a Nymph delight,

The Pedant gets a Mistress by't.

SWIFT, Cadenus and Vanessa, l. 732. (1713)

To excel all is, to be lonely.

SHAW, The Admirable Bashville. Act i. (1926)

EXCEPTIONS PROVE THE RULE, see under RULE.

EXCESS

<sup>12</sup> The road of excess leads to the palace of wisdom. You never know what is enough unless you know what is more than enough.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

Quoted by BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman: Preface. (1903) See also under ENOUGH.

<sup>13</sup> To whiten ivory with ink. (Ebur atramento candefacere.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iii, 70. (1523) To spoil nature by art, to paint the lily.

The fine Marble you know needeth no painting.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 268. (1576)

Corrall needeth no colouring, neither the fine Marble painting.

STEPHEN GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i,

p. 4. (1581) Pettie, tr. FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1706. (1732)

Painting is meet for ragged walls than fine marble.

JOHN LYLY, The Anatomy of Wit: Epistle Dedicatorie, p. 204 (1580)

To gild refined gold, to paint the lily,

To throw a perfume on the violet,

To smooth the ice, or add another bue

Unto the rainbow, or with taper-light
To seek the beauteous eye of heaven to garnish,
Is wasteful and ridiculous excess.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, iv, 2, 11. (1596)

But Shakespeare also says, 'tis very silly
"To gild refined gold, or paint the lily."

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 76. (1818)

She tried a little lily-gilding.

RAYMOND CHANDLER, Farewell, My Lovely, p. 196. (1940)

1 Everything in excess is opposed to nature.
(πάν γάρ τὸ πολὺ πλεόνειον τῇ φύσει.)

HIPPOCRATES, Aphorisms. Bk. ii, No. 3. (c. 400 B. C.) A Latin proverb says, "Excessus in jure reprobatur" (Excess is condemned in law).

The too constant use even of good things is hurtful. (Bonarum rerum consuetudo pessima est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 58. (c. 43 B. C.)

The best things carried to excess are wrong.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Rosciad, l. 1039. (1761)

If in excess even nectar is poison.

P. PERCIVAL, Tamil Proverbs. No. 463. (1842)

TOO MUCH OF A GOOD THING, see under MUCH.

2 The chief beginning of evil is goods in excess.
(ἀρχὴ μεγίστη τῶν ἐν ἀνθρώποις κακῶν, ἀγαθὲ, τὰ λίαν ἀγαθὰ.)

MENANDER, Fragment. (c. 380 B. C.) Quoted by PHILO, De Abrahamo, 135.

That that is overdoon, it wol nat preve

Aright, as clerkes seyn, it is a vyce.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Canon Yeoman's Prologue, l. 92. (c. 1389)

True that sayinge is, that every excesse is turned into vice.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Alexius, p. 250. (1576) The Latin proverb is, "Omne nimium vertitur in vitium."

3 All excess breeds trouble in excess. (Nimia omnia nimium exhibent.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 239. (c. 200 B. C.)

4 Nothing in excess. (μηδὲν ἄγαν.)

SOLON, Maxim. (c. 900 B. C.) The Latin is "Ne quid nimis," sometimes rendered "Nothing too much." See under MODERATION.

5 Moderation is a fatal thing. Nothing succeeds like excess.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act iii. (1893)

EXCHANGE

6 Chaunge be no robry, but robry maketh chaunge.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

Then chop your horses most familiarly,

Exchange you tell them is no robbery.

JOHN CLAVELL, A Recantation of an Ill Led Life, 13. (1628)

A fair exchange is no robbery.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Humphry Clinker. (1771) Works (1817), vi, 339.

Casting an eye at my hat and wig, . . . he took them off, and clapping his own on my head, declared that a fair exchange was no robbery.

SMOLLETT, Roderick Random. Ch. 41. (1784)

EXCUSE

See also Apology, Explanation

7 To defend yourself for your fault is to commit another fault. (Defender la sua colpa, è un'altra colpa.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 187. (1856) An Italian proverb.

8 A Lame Excuse, a sorry shift or evasion.

B. E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew: Lame. (c. 1695)

A threadbare excuse: A hackneyed excuse; an excuse made too often by a specific person.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Threadbare. (1941)

9 I will not equivocate, I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch, and I will be heard.

WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON, Editorial, in The Liberator. (1831) This was Garrison's first editorial in the first copy of The Liberator.

10 I find excuses for myself. (Egomet mi ignosco.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3, l. 23. (35 B. C.)

"Fac et excusa" (Do it and make excuses).

How wretched the man who cannot make his excuses to himself! (Quam miser est qui excusare sibi se non potest!)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 614. (c. 43 B. C.)

He is witty in nothing but framing excuses.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Characters: Slothful. (1608)

11 He that fears his blotches may offend,
Speaks gently of the pimples of his friend;
For reciprocity exacts her dues,
And they that need excuse must needs excuse.
(Qui ne tuberibus propriis offendat amicum postulat, ignoscet verrucis illius: aequum est peccatis veniam poscentem reddere rursus.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3, l. 73. (35 B. C.) Conington, tr.

12 The olde Prouerbe, . . . Tis as hard to find a Hare without a Muse, as a woman without a scuse.

ROBERT GREENE, A Disputation Betweene a Hee Conny-catcher and a Shee Conny-catcher, p. 22. (1592) A "muse" is a gap through which a hare is accustomed to pass.

Take a Hare without a muse, and a Knave without an excuse, and hang them up

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 12. (1659)

Find you without an excuse, and find a hare without a muse.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 174. (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6081. (1732)

1 When you think to excuse, you accuse. (Dum excusare credis, accusas.)

ST. JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Epistles: Ad Virginem. Epis. iv. (c. A. D. 370) Sometimes given as "Dum excusare velis, accusas" (When you seek to excuse, you accuse). The Latin law maxim is, "Excusatio non petita fit accusatio manifesta" (An excuse which is uncalled for becomes an obvious accusation).

He who excuses himself, accuses himself. (Qui s'excuse, s'accuse).

GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences, p. 63. (c. 1575)

To excuse yourself is to excuse yourself. (S'accuser, ce s'excuser.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 17. (1580) Unconsidered excuses serve as accusations. (Les excuses inconsiderées servent d'accusation.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1595) Accusing the Times is but excusing ourselves.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 759. (1732) Too much asseveration is a good Ground of Suspicion.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5258.

Excuses are more than tacit confessions.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison, iii, 22. (1754)

Who excuses without being accused makes clear his own sin. (Chi si scusa senza esser accusato, | Fa chiaro il suo peccato.)

CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 210. (1856) An Italian proverb. A shorter form is, "Chi si scusa, s'accusa." The Spaniards say, "Quien te cubre te descubre" (Who covers thee discovers thee).

2 A plaister is a small amends for a broken head, and a bad excuse will not purge an ill accuser.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 324. (1580)

3 Excuse, that daughter of Afterthought, who is wise too late. (Ἐπιμαθεὺς ἄγων | ὀψινοῦ θυγατέρα Πρόφασιν.)

PINDAR, Pythian Odes. No. v, l. 27. (462 B. C.)

4 To seek a handle. (Quaerere ansam.)

PLAUTUS, Persa. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 19. (c. 200 B. C.)

To seek a handle or excuse for breaking an agreement. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iv, 4, with examples from Aristophanes and Plato.

5 You may often make excuses for another, never for yourself. (Ignoscito saepe alteri; nunquam tibi.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 308. (c. 43 B. C.) Never excuse.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, v, 1, 363. (1596)

Don't make excuses—make good.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams. (1905)

6 An excuse is a lie guarded.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1714) Sometimes ascribed to Pope.

7 Better (they say) a badde scuse than none.

NICOLAS UDALL, Ralph Roister Doister. Act v, sc. 2, l. 28. (c. 1550)

A bad excuse is better, they say, than none at all. STEPHEN GOSSON, The Schoole of Abuse, p. 42. (1579)

He thought a bad excuse better than none at all. JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 359. (1580)

'Tis good to have a cloak for the rain; a bad shift is better than none at all.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 179. (1599) L'ESTRANGE, tr., Aesop, p. 112. (1692) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4. (1732)

Better a bad excuse, than none at all.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 320. (1605)

Bad excuses are worse than none.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 833. (1732)

A Good Excuse is Worse than None.

OGDEN NASH. Title of poem. (1933)

EXERCISE

8 Exercise and temperance can preserve something of our early vigor even in old age. (Potest igitur exercitatio et temperantia etiam in senectute conservare aliquid pristini roboris.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. 10, sec. 34. (44 B. C.)

The Wise, for Cure, on Exercise depend.

DRYDEN, Epistle to John Dryden, l. 94. (a. 1700)

Rosy-complexion'd Health thy steps attends, And exercise thy lasting youth defends.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. i, l. 73. (1716)

To cure the mind's wrong bias, Spleen, Some recommend the bowling green; Some, hilly walks; all, exercise; Fling but a stone, the giant dies.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 89. (1737)

There's a natural method for recapturing youth; . . . the remedy requires no money, physician nor magic. Just go out in the field and begin to dig and plough. . . . Eat simple food, live with the beasts as a beast, don't be too proud to dung the field you reap. That's the best method, really, to keep yourself young at eighty. (Das ist das beste Mittel, glaub', | Auf achtzig Jahr dich zu verjüngen!)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 6: Hexenküche. (1806)

9 I get my exercise acting as pallbearer to my friends who exercise.

CHAUNCEY DEPEW, when asked what kind of exercise he took. (c. 1890)

The only exercise I take is being pallbearer for my friends who have always exercised to keep in good condition.

DONALD M. NELSON. See Hygeia, Nov., 1942, p. 821/1.

When I feel a desire to exercise, I lie down till it goes away.

ROBERT M. HUTCHINS. (c. 1935) As quoted by CHRISTOPHER HALE, Exit Screaming, p. 91.

<sup>1</sup> Thus differ folke lo, in exercisynge:
That one may not, an other may.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 11. (1546)

<sup>2</sup> Why do strong arms fatigue themselves with silly dumb-bells? Trenching a vineyard is worthier exercise for men. (Quid pereunt stulto fortes haltere lacerti? | exercet melius vineae fossa viros.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiv, epig. 49.

<sup>3</sup> Bodily exercise profiteth little. (Corporalis exercitatio, ad modicum utilis est.)

New Testament: I Timothy, iv, 8. (c. A. D. 62)

EXILE

<sup>4</sup> Exiles feed on hope. (φεύγοντας ἄνδρας ἐλπίδας σίουμένων.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 1668. (458 B. C.)

<sup>5</sup> To banish to the isles of Lizards. (Desterrar a las islas de los Lagartos.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 38. (1615)

To uninhabited islands, according to Antonio de Torquemada.

<sup>6</sup> What exile from his country ever escaped from himself? (Patriae quis exsul se quoque fugit?)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 16, l. 19. (23 B. C.)

What exile from himself can flee?

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 84. (1812)

<sup>7</sup> Exile is life. (Exilium vita est.)

VICTOR HUGO. Inscribed over his door on his exile to the island of Jersey. (1851)

<sup>8</sup> Each voter took an ostrakon (δσρακον), or potsherd, wrote on it the name of that citizen whom he wished to remove from the city, and brought it to a place in the agora.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Aristides. Ch. 7, sec. 4. (c.
A. D. 110) Hence ostracism.

Ostracism was not a penalty, but a method of satisfying that jealousy which delights to humble the eminent.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Themistocles. Sec. 22.

Since that inquest I've been regularly oysterized.

J. J. CONNINGTON, Four Defences, p. 213. (1940)

<sup>9</sup> The homeless exile is a corpse without a grave.
(Exsul ubi ei nusquam domus est sine sepulcro est mortuus.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 182. (c. 43 B. C.)

A homeless exile to his country dead. (ἄπολις, δοικος, πατρίδος ἐστερημένος.)

DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Lives: Diogenes. Sec. 38.

(c. A. D. 230) Of Diogenes. Quoting from an old poet. NAUCK, T.G.F., Adesp. 284.

<sup>10</sup> He suffers exile who denies himself to his country. (Exsilium patitur patriae qui se denegat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 185. (c. 43 B. C.)

We are outcasts from our country. (Nos patriam fugimus.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. Ecl. i, l. 4. (37 B. C.)

<sup>11</sup> Sigh'd my English breath in foreign clouds, Eating the bitter bread of banishment.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, iii, 1, 20. (1595)

EXPECTATION

<sup>12</sup> On the tips of the toe-nails. (ἐπ' ἄκρων δνύχων.)

ARISTOPHANES. (c. 422 B. C.) That is, eagerly listening, or eagerly expectant.

Both hosts are on tiptoe with excitement. (Arrectaeque amborum acies.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xii, l. 731. (19 B. C.)

On tiptoe. (ἀκροποδιῇ.)

LUCIAN, Prometheus. Ch. 1. (c. A. D. 170)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, iii, 66, with the Latin, "Summis ingredi pedibus."

<sup>13</sup> Anticipation forward points the view.

ROBERT BURNS, The Cotter's Saturday Night.
St. 5. (1786)

<sup>14</sup> Man never heeds enough from hour to hour what he should shun. (Quid quisque vitet, numquam homini satis | cautum est in horas.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 13, l. 13. (23 B. C.)

That which one most forheats [anticipates] soon-est comes to pass.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 71. (1678)

<sup>15</sup> The unexpected makes hearts dance the more.
(ἐκ τῶν ἀέλπτων μᾶλλον ὥρχησαν φρένες.)

ION, Epigram. (c. 900 B. C.) As quoted by Athenaeus, 1, 20F. See EDMONDS, *Lyra
Graeca*, ii, 159. The Latin proverb is, "Grata superveniet quae non sperabitur hora" (The hour of happiness will be the more welcome the less it is expected).

The unhopd-for happens more frequently than the hoped-for. (Inesperata accidunt magis saepe quam quae speres.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 197. (c. 220 B. C.) "The unexpected always happens." The Germans say, "Unverhofft kommt oft" (The unlooked-for often comes); the Italians, "Dove non si crede, l'acqua rompe" (Where it is not expected the water breaks out).

What we don't expect comes to pass. (Quod non expectes, ex transverso fit.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 55. (c. A. D. 60)

Unlooked for often comes.

A. B. CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 133.
(1875)

It is the unexpected that constantly happens.

E. J. HARDY, How to Be Happy Though Married. Ch. 25. (1886)

<sup>16</sup> Blessed is he who expects nothing, for he shall never be disappointed.

ALEXANDER POPE, Letter to John Gay, 6 Oct.,
1727. Pope characterizes the saying as "a ninth beatitude added to the eight in the Scripture." See ROSCOE, Life of Pope, x, 184.
Quoted by FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1739.

Blessed are they that nought expect,
For they shall not be disappointed.

JOHN WOLCOT, Ode to Pitt, l. 1. (c. 1782)

1 Oft expectation fails.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, ii, 1, 145. (1602)

2 Now is the day we long have looked for.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, ii, 335. (1594)

Long lookt for comes at last.

ROBERT ARMIN, A Nest of Ninnies, p. 11. (1605)

Long-looked-for comes at last.

THOMAS FULLER, Church History, ii, 2. (1655)

Here's a letter for you: long looked for is come at last.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Pamela, i, 179. (1740)

A gay day . . . for us . . . Long looked forward to, and come at last.

DICKENS, The Battle of Life. Ch. 2. (1846)

3 I have a devilish rich uncle . . . from whom I have the greatest expectations.

SHERIDAN, The School for Scandal. Act iii, sc. 3. (1777)

Great Expectations.

DICKENS. Title of novel. (1861)

4 'Tis expectation makes a blessing dear.

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, Against Fruition. (c. 1640)

5 Whatever happens beyond expectation should be counted clear gain. (Quidquid praeter spem eveniat, omne id deputare esse in lucro.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 246. (161 B.C.)

He hath indeed better bettered expectation.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, i, 1, 16. (1598)

6 We should expect everything and fear everything from men, as from the weather. (If faut tout attendre et tout craindre du temps et des hommes.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 102. (1746) Expect the best and fear the worst.

It is folly to expect men to do all that they may reasonably be expected to do.

ARCHBISHOP RICHARD WHATELY, Apothegms. (c. 1820)

7 It is always nice to be expected and not to arrive.

OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband. Act iv. (1895)

EXPEDIENCY

8 The old story over again: Expediency's heel, on the neck of inclination.

PHILIP BARRY, You and I. Act i. (1923)

9 All things are lawful unto me, but all things are not expedient. (πάντα μοι ἔξεστιν ἀλλ' οὐ πάντα συμφέρει.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, vi, 12; x, 23.

(A. D. 57) The Vulgate is, "Omnia mihi licent, sed non omnia expediunt."

10 Whosoever is king, thou wilt be his man.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 183. (1670)

Whosoever is King, thou shalt be his Man.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5734. (1732)

He'll wag as the bush wags with him.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 140. (1721)

"That is, he will comply with all the changes of times, and parties." See also BRAY, VICAR.

11 Expediency, or choosing that course which offers the slightest obstacles to the feet, that is, a downhill one.

THOREAU, Slavery in Massachusetts. (1854)

EXPERIENCE

12 You know it by experience. (σὺ τοι νυν οἶσθα δι'ἡμερῶν.)

AESCHYLUS, Seven Against Thebes, l. 994. (467 B. C.)

I speak from experience. (Expertus dico.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 34. l. 3. (c. 24 B. C.)

Believe an expert. (Experto credite.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xi, l. 283. (19 B. C.) Believe one who knows by experience. See EXPERT.

13 Experience is surely the beginning of wisdom. (πειρά τοι μάθηςος ἀρχά.)

ALCMAN, Fragments. Frag. 67. (c. 630 B. C.)

Quoted by SCHOLIAST on PINDAR, Isthmian Odes, i, 56, "He who has suffered, beareth for it forethought in his mind," which means, Scholiast adds, that a man's mind gains forethought or prudence by experience. See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, i, 93.

It was rightly saide of an ancient Poet, that experience is the father of wisdom, and memorie the mother.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 33. (1574) Pettie, tr. Quoted by FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1480. (1732)

Tyme is the father of truth, and experience is the mother of all things. (Il tempo è padre de la verita, & l'esperientia è madre de le cose.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32. (1578)

Experience the mother of wisdom.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 58 (1616)

Experience is the mother of knowledge.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works (Grosart), ii, 8. (1637)

Men are wise in proportion, not to their experience, but to their capacity for experience.

SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

14 One should learn how to row before trying to take the rudder. (ἐρέτην χρῆναι πρῶτα γενέσθαι, πρὶν πηδαλίοις ἐπιχειρεῖν.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Knights, l. 542. (424 B. C.)

Fyrst the chylde crepyth and after gooth.

FÖRSTER, ed., MS. Douce, 52. (c. 1350)

Fyrst must vs crepe and sythen go.

UNKNOWN, Towneley Plays, p. 103. (c. 1400)

Children learne to creepe er they can learne to go.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

And as the prouerbe old doth teach vs, so

We first must creepe, before we well can goe,

WILLIAM HORNBY, Horn-book, sig. B3. (1622)

First creep, then go.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 116. (1639)
We did first creep, then run, then fly into preferment.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England, iii, 210. (1662)

Folk maun creep before they gang.

WALTER SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 3. (1823)
We must all creep afore we can walk, and all be bitten afore we can bite.

R. S. SURTEES, Handley Cross. Ch. 17. (1854)
Creep awa', my birdie, creep afore ye gang.

JAMES BALLANTINE, Creep Afore Ye Gang. (1871)

<sup>1</sup> Experience is the fruit of years. (πλήθος χρόνου ποιεῖ τὴν ἐμπειρίαν.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. vi, ch. 8, sec. 6. (c. 335 B. C.) Probably a quotation, though not so indicated in the text.

Experience comes with ripe years. (Seris venit usus ab annis.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. vi, l. 29. (A. D. 7)
There is a Turkish proverb, "Experience is a precious gift, only given a man when his hair is gone."

<sup>2</sup> It is costly wisdom that is bought by experience. . . . He hazardeth sore that waxeth wise by experience.

ROGER ASCHAM, The Scholemaster, p. 61. (c. 1565)
Experience sometimes is perilous. (Experientia è qualche volta pericolosa.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 30. (1578)
Unless experience be a jewel that I have purchased at an infinite rate.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, ii, 2, 213. (1601)

I have experience dearly bought.

SWIFT, Imitation of Horace: Epistles, i, 8, 133. (1712)

Experience is good, if not bought too dear.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1479. (1732)
Experience keeps a dear school, yet Fools will learn in no other.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1743.
Experience is the best of schoolmasters, only the school fees are heavy.

CARLYLE, Miscellaneous Essays, i, 137. (1839)
Experience keeps a dear school.

WILLI FRISCHAUER, Twilight in Vienna, p. 93. (1938) The French say, "Devenir sage à ses dépens."

<sup>3</sup> By far the best proof is experience. (Demonstratio longe optima est experientia.)

BACON, Novum Organum. Bk. i, ch. 70. (1844)

<sup>4</sup> Experience inkreases our wizdum but don't reduce our phollys.

JOSH BILLINGS (H. W. SHAW), Encyclopedia of Wit and Wisdom. (1874)

<sup>5</sup> Experience without learning is better than learning without experience.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 352. (1855)

<sup>6</sup> The tongue of experience has most truth.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 592. (1817)

<sup>7</sup> Caution and care let the experience of others teach you. (Quid cautus caveas aliena exempla docebunt.)

CATO (?), Dicta Catonis. (c. 175 B. C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 626.

Draw from other people's dangers the lesson that may profit yourself. (Periculum ex aliis facito tibi quod ex usu siet.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 221. (163 B. C.)

It is good to profit by the follies of others, as the saying is. (Optimum est, ut vulgo dixere, aliena insania frui.)

PLINY, Naturalis Historia. Bk. xviii, ch. 5. sec. 31. (A. D. 77) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iii, 39. (1508) HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 311, gives a slightly different form, "Optimum est aliena frui experientia" (It is best to profit by the experience of others), and adds, "Let another's ship-wreck be your sea-mark."

Wyse ben by foles harm chastysed.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde, iii, 329. (c. 1374)

Who-so that nil be war by othere men,

By him shul othere men corrected be.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 180. (c. 1388)

He is wyse, that can beware by an other manys harme.

RICHARD HILLS, Common-place Book, p. 132. (c. 1530)

It is good to beware by other men's harmes.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 326. (1605)

Is not hee accompted most wise, whome other mannes harmes doe make most warie?

JOHN LYL, Euphuus (Arber), p. 39. (1579)

Better learn by your neighbour's skaith nor by your own.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 20. (c. 1595)

By others faults wise men correct their own offences.

NICHOLAS LING, comp., Politeuphuia, p. 44. (1597)

Wise men, as Poor Dick says, learn by others' harmes.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758.

Be warned by others' harms.

R. H. BARHAM, Misadventures at Margate. (1842)

<sup>8</sup> The fatuity of "twice against the same stone" is held up to reproach in a familiar proverb. (Bis ad eundem lapidem.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. x, epis. 20. (c. 50 B. C.) To commit the same error twice. TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 39 (1550) renders it, "He that wyse is, wyll not the seconde tyme stomble at the same stone."

Where you have slipped once, be it your fault if you fall again. (Lapsus ubi semel sis, sit tua culpa, si iterum cecideris.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 343. (c. 43 B. C.)

O! fy! for shame! they that han been brent,
 Allas! can they nat flee the fyres hete?

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Chanouns Yemannes Tale, l. 854. (c. 1389)

He that stumblenth twice at one stone is worthy to breake his shins.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England. (Arber), p. 319. (1580)

1 To most men, experience is like the stern lights of a ship, which illumine only the track it has passed.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk, p. 434. (c. 1830)

2 Experience is the child of Thought, and Thought is the child of Action.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Bk. v, ch. 1. (1826)

3 Each believes naught but his experience. (ἀντὶ μόνον πισθόντες ὅτι προέκυρσεν ἕκαστος.)

EMPEDOCLES, Fragments. Frag.2,1.5.(c.450 B. C.)

4 Me thinks that you speake by experience. (Mi par che voi parlate per esperientia.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 10. (1578)

5 Experience is the teacher of all things. (Rerum omnium magister usus.)

CAESAR, De Bello Civili. Bk. ii, sec. 8. (c. 52 B. C.)

Experience is the most efficient teacher of all things. (Usus efficacissimus rerum omnium magister.)

PLINY, Naturalis Historia. Bk. xxvi, sec. 2. (A. D. 77) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, l. 22. (1580)

Experience, superlative teacher. (Usus magister egregius.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Letters. Bk. i, epis. 20. (c. A. D. 98)

Experience teaches. (Experientia docet.)

TACITUS, Histories. Bk. v, ch. 6. (c. A. D. 109)

Another form is "Empta dolore docet experientia" (Experience bought with sorrow teaches). DICKENS, David Copperfield, ch. 11, has Mrs. Micawber remark, "Experientia does it—as papa used to say." (1849)

Experience, next to thee I owe, Best guide.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 807. (1667)

Experience, slow preceptress, teaching oft
 The way to glory by miscarriage foul.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 505. (1784)

All that useful sort of knowledge

Which is acquired in Nature's good old college.

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 136. (1818)

The school of hard knocks.

Experience teaches slowly, and at the cost of mistakes.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Party Politics. (1850)

Experience is our only teacher, both in war and peace.

W. S. LANDOR: Imaginary Conversations: Aeschines and Phocion. (1853)

6 The things which hurt, instruct.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1744.

7 His head was silver'd o'er with age,
 And long experience made him sage.

JOHN GAY, Fables: Introduction, l. 3. (1727)

The natural crown that sage Experience wears.

WORDSWORTH, Excursion. Bk. vi, l. 281. (1814)

8 Experience joined with common sense,
 To mortals is a providence.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 312. (1737)

Experience holds the cautious glass,

To shun the breakers, as I pass,

And frequent throws the wary lead,

To see what dangers may be hid.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 820.

9 Nobody will use other people's experience, nor have any of his own till it is too late to use it.

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE, American Note-Books, 25 Oct., 1836.

10 The misfortune of the foolish is a warning to the wise. (Casus dementis correctio fit sapientis.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 51. (1869)

Experience! wise men do not need it.

Experience! Idiots do not heed it.

OGDEN NASH, Experience to Let. (1940)

See also FOOLS AND WISE MEN.

11 He had acquired a big amount of experience out of books.

O. HENRY, The Octopus Marooned. (1908)

12 I have but one lamp by which my feet are guided, and that is the lamp of experience.

PATRICK HENRY, Speech, Virginia House of Delegates, 23 March, 1775. Arranged by William Wirt, 1818.

13 Fools get their lesson from the deed done. (ῥεχθὲν δὲ τε νήπιος ἔγνω.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvii, l. 32. (c. 850 B. C.) "By laying our sad experiences to heart you may be on your guard and escape learning by your own pain, like the fool in the adage."

PLATO, Symposium, 222B.

Only by suffering does the fool learn. (παθὼν δὲ τε νήπιος ἔγνω.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 218. (c. 800 B. C.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 31, gives the Latin. "Malo accepto stultus sapit."

Experience is the teacher of fools. (Stultorum eventus magister est.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxii, sec. 39. (c. 10 B. C.) The more usual form of the proverb is "Experientia stultorum magistra" founded on TACITUS, History, bk. v, ch. 6.

It is commonly said, yet doe I thinke it a common lye, that experience is the mistresse of fooles, for in my opinion they be most fooles that want it.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 123. (1579)

Experience may teach a fool.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 30. (c. 1595)

And others' follies teach us not,
Nor much their wisdom teaches;
And most, of sterling worth, is what
Our own experience preaches.
TENNYSON, Will Waterproof's Lyrical Monologue, l. 173. (1842)

1 All is but lip-wisdom that wants experience.
SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk. i, p. 92. (1580)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 522. (1732)

2 All experience is an arch wherethro'
Gleams that untravell'd world whose margin fades

For ever and for ever when I move.

TENNYSON, Ulysses, l. 18. (1842)

All experience is an arch to build upon.

HENRY ADAMS, Education of, p. 87. (1918)

3 You shall know by experience. (Experiundo scies.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 331. (163 B.C.)

4 Experience is in the head and fingers. The heart is inexperienced.

H. D. THOREAU, Early Spring in Massachusetts.
(3 April, 1842)

5 Happy wilt thou be who art taught by another's suffering to avoid thy own. (Felix, quicumque dolore | alterius disces posse cavere tuom.)

TIBULLUS (?) Elegies, iii, 6, 43. (c. 19 B.C.)

Happy he who learns from another's scourging.
(Felix, alterius cui sunt documenta flagella.)

COLUMBANUS, Carmen Monostichon, l. 19. (c.
A. D. 600)

Fortunately wise is he who gains wisdom from another's mishap. (Feliciter is sapit qui periculo alieno sapit.)

HERMOLAUS BARBARUS (?), Interpolated Scene in Plautus' Mercator, v, 7, 40. (c. 1480) The ascription is uncertain.

He is happy whom other mens perylles maketh warre. (Foelix quem faciunt aliena pericula cautum.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. i, No. 31. (1508)

Taverner, tr. fo. 3. (1550) Quoted by FRANK-LIN, Poor Richard, 1743, with the rendering,
"Happy is he that takes caution from others."

Happy is he whom the horns of others have made cautious. (Felix quem faciunt aliorum cornua cautum.)

JOHANNES RAVISIUS TEXTOR, Dialogue. (c.
1525) Quoted as a proverbial saying.

Happie is he by example that can | take heede by the fall of a mischieued man.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie. Ch. 10. (1573)

A happy man and wise is he
By others' harms can warn'd be.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Fruits, fo. 103. (1591)

He is happy can beware by others' harms.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 325. (1605)

Happy is he that by other men's harms takes heed.

SIR ROBERT FOWLER, Charge, at trial of Thomas
Tonge, 1662. (6 How. St. Tr. 265)

6 Experience . . . is merely the name men give to their mistakes.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 4.
Lady Windermere's Fan. Act iii.

II—The Burnt Child Dreads the Fire

7 Suffering frequently becomes instruction to men. (πολλάκις τὰ παθήματα τοῖς ἀνθρώποις μαθήματα γίνονται.)

AESOP, Fables: The Dog and the Cook. (c. 570
B. C.) Fable xxxvi, The Lion, the Ass, and the Fox, has a similar moral, as has also Fable xlvi, The Shepherd and the Sea.

The wounded fisherman learns sense. (ὁ ἀλιεύς πληγῆς νόον οἶσσι.)

SOPHOCLES, Fr. 118. (c. 450 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 29 (1508), with the Latin, "Piscator ictus sapiet" (The fisherman learns by the sting), and relates the fable of the fisherman who, putting his hand hastily into his net, was wounded by the thorns on the back of a fish, and cried, "I shall now become wiser." This, in turn, is said to have given rise to the adage, "Bought wit is best," since experience acquired by suffering is long remembered. Another is, "Wit once bought, is worth twice taught." The Spanish form is,
"El hombre mancebo perdiendo gana seso"
(By losing, the young man acquires knowledge).

Suffering has been my teacher. (τὰ δὲ μοι παθήματα εὐντα ἀχάριτα μαθήματα γέγονε.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. i, ch. 207. (c. 445 B.C.)

There is a play on the rhyme between the words, "Learning by heart-burning."

He who suffers, remembers. (Cui dolet, meminit.)

CICERO, Pro Murena. Sec. 42. (63 B.C.)

'Tis wounds that teach the soldier fear. (Vulneri-bus didicit miles habere metum.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. 11, l. 6. (c. 22 B.C.)

My wit has grown through suffering. (Crevit ingenium malis.)

SENECA, Medea, l. 910. (c. A. D. 60)

I would have suffered if I hadn't suffered (Periissem.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 108. (1814)

If I hadn't learned by suffering, I would have suffered still more.

8 Who has eaten of the pot knows the taste of the broth.

SIMEON ASHKENAZI (?), Yalkut to Deuteronomy, 829. (c. 1250)

Give him selfe counsaile, by the triall him selfe hath alreadie made.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i,
p. 33. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Only he who has entered the bath knows how hot it is.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 612. (1817)

He who has burned his tongue doesn't forget to blow on his soup. (Wer sich einmal verbrennt hat, blaest hernach in die Suppe.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes,
p. 307. (1856) A German proverb.

Drink the water and know the fountain. (Yin shui chih yüan.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 186. (1872)

<sup>1</sup> The child learns by experience. (πεχθεν δε τε νηπιος εγνω.)

ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 28. (1511)
Brennyd cat dredith feir.

UNKNOWN, The Tale of Beryn, l. 78. (c. 1450)
Onys ybrend euer dret feer—Ignem formidat adusta manus.

UNKNOWN, Harleian MS., l. 3362. (c. 1470)
Once burnt ever dreads the fire. The burnt hand dreads the fire.

<sup>2</sup> For evermore gladly, as I rede,
Brent child of fyr hath much drede.
(E me doit bien espoenter, Qu'eschaudez doit eve doter.)

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose, l. 1783. (c. 1240) Chaucer (?), tr., l. 1819.

Sare man aght to dred the brand,
That brint him forwit in his hand.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 7223. (c. 1300)
Brend child fur dredeth.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Hendyng, l. 24. (c. 1320) The first appearance in English, so far as known, of a proverb which was to become one of the most popular of all proverbs. Its second recorded appearance was in the Douce MS., 52 (c. 1350), where the spelling is, "Brende chylde fyre dredis."

By that diete a great disease once I gat. And burnt child fyre dredth.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1546)
TAVERNER, Translations from Erasmus, fo. 3 1550, has, "The brent chylde fyre dredeth."

A burnt child feareth the fire, and a beaten dogge escheweth the whippe.

THOMAS WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique: Prologue. (1553)
The burned chylde, dreaddeth the fire (L'infante brugiato, teme il foco.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 31. (1578) The Germans say, "Gebranntes Kind fürchtet das Feuer."

Hee that hath beene burned knoweth the force of the fire, he that hath beene stong, remembreth the smart of the Scorpion.

JOHN LVLV, Euphues (Arber), p. 123. (1579)
The burnt child dreads the fire.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 66. (1670) Ray seems to have been the first to put the proverb in exactly its modern form. It occurs in every language. David Livingston heard it in the heart of Africa among the Bechuanas, who said, when some one had been injured by some foolish act, "You will not go into those coals a second time." Lafcadio Hearn heard it among the Creoles of Louisiana, who say, "Chatte brille pair di feu" (The burnt cat fears the fire). In Denmark they say, "A bitten child dreads a dog," and there are many other variants.

The scalded child dreads the fire, say the English. (Enfant échaudé craint le feu, disent les Anglais.)

MAX O'REIL, John Bull et Son Ile, p. 281. (1890)

<sup>3</sup> A dog once scalded fears cold water.

(Chien une fois eschaudé D'eau froide est intimidé.)

GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences. (c. 1550) The Italians say, "Il can battuto del bastone ha paura dell' ombra" (A beaten dog is afraid of the stick's shadow).

Dogges, after they have bine once scalded with hott water, are aferd of the colde.

SIR THOMAS HOBY, tr., The Courtier, p. 191. (1561)

The scalded cat feares colde water. (Chat échaudé craint l'eau froid.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Chat. (1611)

Under Chien, Cotgrave has, "The scalded dog feares euen colde water," and the proverb is repeated by HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum, No. 14. (1640) TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs, p. 59, in commenting on it, says it is a better proverb than "A burnt child dreads the fire," which "does but express that those who have suffered once will henceforward be timid in respect of that same thing with which they have suffered; but that other the tendency to exaggerate such fears, so that now they shall fear even where no fear is."

A Fool grows wise upon suffering; the scalded Cat fears cold Water; Hang a Dog on a Crab-tree, and he'll never love Verjuice.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 148. (1709)
Dogs once scalded, are afraid even of cold Water.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1315. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> I am a shipwrecked man who fears every sea (Timeo naufragus omne fretum.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 126. (A. D. 13)
The shipwrecked man shrinks even from calm waters. The fish once wounded by the treacherous hook, fancies the barbed bronze concealed in every food. A wounded body shrinks from even a delicate touch; an empty shadow inspires the anxious with fear. (Tranquillas etiam naufragus horret aquas.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. 7, l. 8. (A. D. 13)
SPENSER, Faerie Queene, ii, i, 4, puts this in a line, "The fish that once was caught, new bait wil hardly byte."

He who has suffer'd Ship-wrack feares to saile Upon the Seas, though with a gentle gale.

ROBERT HERRICK, Shipwreck. (1648)

<sup>5</sup> The least rustle of a feather brings dread upon the dove that thy talons, O hawk, have wounded. (Terretur minimo pennae stridore columba | unguibus, accipiter, saucia facta tuis.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. 1, l. 75. (c. A. D. 9)
Phaëton, if alive, would shun the skies. (Vitaret caelum Phaëthon, si vivcret.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. 1, l. 79.

He that hath been bitten by a serpent is afraid of a rope.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 407. (1678)
TRENCH, Proverbs, iii. 71. comments, "The Jewish Rabbis had said long before: One bitten by a serpent is afraid of a rope's end; even a resemblance to a serpent . . . shall now inspire him with fear." The Italians say, "Cui serpe mozzica, lucerta teme" (He who has been bitten by a serpent is afraid of a lizard). The proverb is common to the Japanese, Hebrew, Hindu, Persian, Armenian, Danish, and many other languages—in fact everywhere that snakes exist.

The bird that hath been limed in a bush,
With trembling wings misdoubteth every bush.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, v, 6, 13. (1591)

Birds never limed no secret bushes fear.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l.88. (1594)

1 When the mouse tastes pitch. (μὴς γεύμεθα πίσσας.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xiv, l. 51. (c. 270 B. C.)

Quoting a proverb, "When the mouse tastes pitch, he learns." The mouse that fell into the caldron of pitch while intruding where he had no business to be was proverbial of those who find themselves in difficulties because of their own folly.

2 A burnt child loves the fire.

OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray Ch. 17. (1891)

The burnt child, urged by rankling ire,
Can hardly wait to get back at the fire.

OGDEN NASH, Experience to Let. (1940)

EXPERIMENT

3 Experiment is the mother of science. (La experiencia madre es de la ciencia.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 248. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

4 Our country has deliberately undertaken a great social and economic experiment, noble in motive and far-reaching in purpose.

HERBERT HOOVER, Letter to Senator William H. Borah, 28 Feb., 1928. Repeated by Hoover in address at Stanford University accepting the Republican nomination for President. Hoover was referring to national prohibition, which, from this speech, came to be known as "the noble experiment."

5 In the full tide of successful experiment.

JEFFERSON, First Inaugural, 4 March, 1801.

6 Learning pottery on a wine-jar. (ἐν τῷ πλῶ τῇν κεραμεῖαν ἐπιχειρεῖν μαθάνειν.)

PLATO, Gorgias. Sec. 514E. (c. 375 B. C.) Rushing into a business without any experience. Usually rendered, "Don't experiment with a wine-jar."

Make your experiment on a worthless subject. (Fiat experimentum in corpore villi.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 126. (1869) A similar one is, "A surgeon experiments on the heads of orphans" (In capite orphani discit chirurgus); "A barber learns to shave by shaving fools."

EXPERT

7 Every expert ought to be believed in his own art. (Chasque expert doit estre creu en son art.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580)
Quoted as a saying of Pythagoras.

8 Do not talk Arabic in the house of a Moor.
R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, iii, 65. (1853) Don't try to deceive an expert. There are many variants: "Never try to teach monkeys to climb trees"; "Don't limp before a lame man"; "One can't deceive a baboon by tricks," and so on. See under LABOR LOST.

9 Believe an expert. (Experto credite.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xi, l. 283. (19 B. C.) Believe one who has had experience. Quoted by OVID, Artis Amatoria, iii, 511 (c. 1 B. C.) and by ST. BERNARD, Epistles. No. 106.

Believe the experienced Robert. (Experto crede Roberto.)

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader. (1621) Burton is quoting an anonymous medieval line, "Quam subito, quam certo, experto crede Roberto" (How suddenly and how certainly [it will come] believe the experienced Robert). Believe Robert, who has tried it. The line appears in Le Jardin de Récréation, edited by GOMÈS DE TRIER. (1611)

Be quiet and let an expert talk.

OWEN DAVIS, Icebound. Act iii. (1923)

EXPLANATION

10 Never explain: your friends will understand and your enemies will not believe you anyhow.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Orphic Sayings. (1900)

Never explain. A friend who needs explanation isn't worth keeping.

E. S. GARDNER, The Case of the Drowsy Mosquito, p. 162. (1943)

11 I trust I shall not have to dot the 'i.'

ELLIOT PAUL, Mayhem in B-Flat, p. 126. (1940)

12 You have made the steep places level. (Fecisti modo mi ex proclivo planum.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 1018. (c. 200 B. C.)

You have made the dark places clear.

13 Explain an ill saying and you make it worse. (Male dictum interpretando facias acrius.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 372. (c. 43 B. C.) WHO EXCUSES ACCUSES, see under EXCUSE.

14 Make clear the explanation, and remove differences.

UNKNOWN, Alphabet of Ben Sira. (c. 1050)

I wish he would explain his explanation.

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto I, Dedication, l. 16. (1818)

Explanations explanatory of things explained.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, referring to Stephen A. Douglas's explanations during the Lincoln-Douglas debates. (1858)

I do loathe the explanations.

J. M. BARRIE, My Lady Nicotine. Ch. 16. (1890)

A pretty hypothesis which explains many things. (Jolie hypothèse elle explique tant de choses.)

HERBERT ASQUITH, Speech, House of Commons, 29 Mar., 1917. Quoting "a witty Frenchman."

EXTREMES

<sup>1</sup> Trained from his tree-rocked cradle to his bier
The fierce extremes of good and ill to brook.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Gertrude of Wyoming. Pt. i, st. 23. (1809)

<sup>2</sup> Over hot, over cold.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 84. (c. 1595)

Like to the time o' the year between the extremes
Of hot and cold, he was nor sad nor merry.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, i, 5, 51. (1606)

<sup>3</sup> Flee th'attemptyng of extremities all.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

MAN'S EXTREMITY GOD'S OPPORTUNITY, see under GOD.

<sup>4</sup> Sturt [trouble] follows all extremes.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 286. (1721)

<sup>5</sup> Extreme straightness is as bad as crookedness.
Extreme cleverness is as bad as folly. Extreme fluency is as bad as stammering. (Ta' chih joh ch'ü Ta' 'ch'iao joh cho. Ta' pien' joh no.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue).
Sec. 45. (c. 550 B. C.) Giles, tr.

<sup>6</sup> Perfect good sense shuns all extremity.

Content to couple wisdom with sobriety.

(La parfaite raison fuit toute extrémité,

Et veut que l'on soit sage avec sobriété.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Misanthrope. Act i, sc. 1, l. 151. (1666)

<sup>7</sup> Nothing is extreme, which has his like. (Rien n'est extreme, qui a son pareil.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 27. (1580)

<sup>8</sup> The wise have lauded with exceeding praise,
"Avoid extremes." (σοφοί δὲ καὶ τὸ "μὴδὲν ἄγαν" ἔπος αἰνεῖσαν περισσῶς.)

PINDAR, Fragment. No. 216. (c. 477 B. C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 116D.

Avoid extremes, and shun the fault of such,
Who still are pleas'd too little or too much.

POPE, An Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 184. (1709) The motto of Cleobulus of Lindos, μέτρον ἄριστον, "Moderation is best," is sometimes translated "Avoid extremes." See under MODERATION.

Be wary of extremes: the green and the over-ripe fruit cause the worst pain.

J. H. RHOADES, Jonathan's Apothegms. Vol. ii, no. 15. (1942)

<sup>9</sup>

The fate of all extremes is such,
Men may be read, as well as books, too much.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 9. (1732)

Extremes in Nature equal ends produce;

In Man they join to some mysterious use.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 205.

Extremes in Nature equal good produce,

Extremes in Man concur to gen'ral use.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 161.

<sup>10</sup>

One extreme produces another.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, vi, 213. (1748)

<sup>11</sup> We seem to be plunging into the horrors of France . . . yet, as extremes meet, there is at this moment amazing insensibility.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letters, vii, 395. (1780)

Les extrêmes se touchent.

L. S. MERCIER, Tableaux de Paris. Vol. iv, title of chapter. (1782)

Gentlemen, extremes are said to meet.

B. H. MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas. Bk. i, ch. 5. (1809)

A Puritan?—not the less likely to be a Papist,
. . . for extremities meet, as the scholiast proveth.

SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 27. (1822)

That dead time of the dawn when (as extremes meet) the rake . . . and the hard-handed artisan jostle . . . for the honours of the pavement.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: Chimney-Sweepers. (1822)

Extremes meet, as the whiting said with its tail in its mouth.

THOMAS HOOD, Doves and the Crows. (c. 1830)

Extremes meet. Roman emperors would one day have blasphemous honours paid to them, . . . on the next day . . . to be flung into the common sewer.

TRENCH, Proverbs, iv, 96. (1853)

Extremes meet, and there is no better example than the haughtiness of humility.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Greatness. (1875)

Oatmeal marks not only the child's breakfast, it is the favourite food of Edinburgh Reviewers.
Thus do extremes meet.

E. V. LUCAS, Domesticities, p. 24. (1900)

EYE

See also Observation; Sight

<sup>12</sup>

A rolling eye, a roving heart.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), ii, 219. (1629)

"The eye is the pulse of the soul," Adams says. "As physicians judge of the heart by the pulse, so we by the eye; a rolling eye, a roving heart."

To whirl the eyes too much, shows a kite's brain

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 719. (1640)

It is hard for a greedy eye to have a leal heart.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 209. (1721)

His right eye was a good little eye,

But his left eye loved to roam.

S. H. ADAMS, The Incredible Era, p. 101. (1939)

Quoted as a "sportive ditty."

<sup>1</sup> Squinting his left eye, like a tunny-fish. (τὸ σκαῖον ὁμα προβαλὼν θύρον δίκην.)

AESCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 168 Smyth. (c. 458 B. C.) A frequently used comparison. See ATHENAEUS, Deipnosophistai, vii, 66, 303C; PLUTARCH, On the Craftiness of Animals, 979E; AELIAN, On Animals, ix, 42, etc., etc.

He looks up with one eye and down with the other.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 48. (c. 1595) With affection beaming in one eye and calculation shining out of the other.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 8. (1844) As goggle-eyed as a codfish.

CLARISSA CUSHMAN, I Wanted to Murder, p. 125. (1941)

<sup>2</sup> Better a drop of cold water in the eyes than all the eye-salves in the world.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 108b. (c. 450)

Diseases of the eye are to be cured with the elbow.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 205. (1640) The Spanish form is, "El ojo limpiase con el codo" (Cleanse the eye with the elbow); the Portuguese, "O mal do olho curase com o cotovelo" (Soreness of the eye is cured with the elbow).

You should never touch your eye but with your elbow.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 39. (1670)

Never rub your eye but with your elbow.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3529. (1732)

WHATELY, Bacon's Essays Annotated, xxii, 252. (1856) The same caution is given proverbially concerning the ear: "Never pick your ear but with your elbow."

Nothing is good in the eyes, but bad in the stomach.

UNKNOWN. A proverb well established in German, Danish, Dutch, Swedish, and other languages. The second clause was eventually dropped and the proverb shortened to "Nothing is good in (or for) the eyes." (Nichts ist gut in [für] die Augen). Then somebody thought up an involved explanation for it, to the effect "nichts" is a synonym for the vulgar form "nix," and that "nix" not only means "nothing" but also "nihilum album," a salve for the eyes. Carolus Tuinman, in a book on proverbs published at Middleburg, Holland, in 1720, explains the Dutch proverb, "Nothing is good for the eyes, but bad for the teeth" (Niet is voor de oogen goed, maar quaad voor de tanden), by the remark that "niet" is a plant used as a remedy for the eyes. Martin Luther seems to have understood the proverb in a somewhat similar sense, for he writes, "Minutissima festuca in oculo offendit oculum. Hinc Germani dicunt de remediis oculorum: Nichts ist in die Augen gut." See TAYLOR, The Proverb, p. 79.

<sup>3</sup> Two eyes are better than one.

FRANCIS BACON, Promus. No. 946. (c. 1594)

Eyes see more than eye. (Plus vident oculi, quam oculus.)

RICHARD HAKLUYT, Navigations: Dedication. (1600) Quoting a Latin proverb.

Two eyes can see more than one.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 334.

(1605) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5326. (1732)

He that hath but one eye, sees the better for it.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 44. (1639)

RAY, Proverbs, p. 134 (1678), calls this "a ridiculous saying."

Two eyes see more than one.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. iv, ch. 5.

(1642) RAY, Proverbs, p. 138. (1678)

Many eyes see more than one.

THOMAS HOBBS, Leviathan. Pt. ii, ch. 25. (1651)

Four eyes see better than two. (Vedon più quattr'occhi che due.)

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 175. (1666)

The Spanish form is, "Mas ven quatro ojos que dos."

Two eyes see better than one.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 567. (1681) The French say, "Deux yeux voyent plus clair qu'un."

Four eyes are better than two, and all that.

JEAN WEBB, No Match for Murder, p. 53. (1943)

TWO HEADS BETTER THAN ONE, see under HEAD.

<sup>4</sup> Faith, being eagle eyed, can . . . see the majesty of God.

WILLIAM BARLOW, Eagle and Body, E 4 a. (1601)

The most eagle-eyed Physician.

JAMES HART, Anatomy of Urines, ii, 3. (1625)

A plague of her Hawk's Eyes!

THOMAS OTWAY, Atheist. Act iv, sc. 1. (1684)

I have a Hawk's Eye at a Woman's Hand.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Old Batchelour. Act i, sc. 1. (1687)

Eagle-eyed abroad, and blind at home.

WILLIAM BURKITT, Notes on the New Testament: John, viii, 11. (c. 1700)

The eagle-eyed friendship of Mr. Weller.

M. L. WEEMS, Life of Washington. Ch. 5. (1800)

There are persons in the world who seem to have hawks' eyes where anything evil is concerned.

C. H. SPURGEON, in Sword and Trowel, July, 1884, p. 318/2.

You've got eyes like a hawk.

EDGAR WALLACE, The India-Rubber Men. Ch. 7. (c. 1920)

<sup>5</sup> He hath plucked his eye from himself.

Book of the Dead. (c. 4000 B. C.) See MASPERO, Recueil de Travaux, v, 19.

If thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life with one eye, rather than having two eyes to be cast into hell fire. (εἰ δὲ ὀφθαλμός σου σκανδαλίζει σε, ἔξελε αὐτόν καὶ βάλε ἀπὸ σοῦ.)

New Testament: Matthew, xviii, 9. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Si oculus tuus scandalizat te, erue eum, et proice abs te."

Better eye out then alwaie ake.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 8. (1546)

BACON, Coulers of Good and Evil, p. 10.

(1597) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 86. (1670)

<sup>1</sup> His eyen twinkled in his heed aright,
As doon the sterres in the frosty night.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 269.
(c. 1386)

Sikerly she hadde a likerous yē.

CHAUCER, The Miller's Tale, l. 58.

What an eye she has! methinks it sounds a parley of provocation.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, ii, 3, 22. (1605)

<sup>2</sup> So longe mote ye live, and alle proude,
Til crowes feet be growe under your yē.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l.
402 (c. 1380)

The black Crowes foote shall appeare in their eye.
JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 55. (1579)

<sup>3</sup> Paradys stood formed in hir yēn.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. v, l.
817. (c. 1380)

From women's eyes this doctrine I derive:
They are the ground, the books, the academes
From whence doth spring the true Promethean fire.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 3, 302.
(1595)

For where is any author in the world
Teaches such beauty as a woman's eye?

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 3, 312.

With store of Ladies, whose bright eies
Rain influence, and judge the prise.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 121. (1632)

Bright as the sun, her eyes the gazers strike,
And, like the sun, they shine on all alike.

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto ii, l. 13. (1712)

<sup>4</sup> The prophete seith that "troubled eyen han no cleer sighte."

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Melibeus, l. 2891.
(c. 1386)

They that have the yellow Jaundeise, thinke all objects they looke on to bee yellow.

JOHN WEBSTER, The White Devil. Act i, sc. 2.
(1612)

Such as are troubled with the jaundice see all things yellow.

WILLIAM SECKER, The Nonsuch Professor, ii,
184. (1660)

All looks yellow to the jaundic'd eye.

POPE, An Essay on Criticism, ii, 359. (1709) An admirable example of Pope's ability to compress a rambling sentence into a compact epigram.

<sup>5</sup> Ful wel coude I yow quyte
With blering of a proud milleres yē.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Reeve's Prologue, l. 10. (c. 1386)

For al thy waiting, blered is thyn yē

CHAUCER, The Maunciple's Tale, l. 148.

<sup>6</sup> The behavior of Aulus's son makes his consul-ship not a consulship, but a black eye (ὀφθαλμὸς) for our friend Pompey.

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. i, epis. 20. (60 B. C.)

Interesting to find this bit of modern slang of such ancient origin.

One eye black. (Vn œil poché au beurre noir.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 12. (1548)

Literally, "Poached with black butter," as eggs are prepared. The French saying is, "Il m'a poché l'œil" (He has poached my eye).

BLACK IS HIS EYE, see under BLACK.

<sup>7</sup> The eyes, like sentinels, have the highest station. (Oculi tamquam speculatores altissimum locum obtinent.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. ii, ch. 56, sec.
140. (45 B. C.)

Our eyes are sentinels unto our judgements.

MIDDLETON AND ROWLEY, The Changeling. Act
i, sc. 1. (1623)

<sup>8</sup> For I just can't make my eyes behave,
Two bad brown eyes, I am their slave;
My lips may say, "Run away from me,"
But my eyes say, "Come and play with me."

WILL D. COBB, *I Just Can't Make My Eyes
Behave*. (1906) Sung with great success by Anna Held in A Parisian Model.

He could not make his feet behave.

O. HENRY, The Unprofitable Servant. (1911)

<sup>9</sup> He that hath but one eye had need make much of it, had best looke well to it.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Garder. (1611)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2136: "He that has but one Eye, had need look well to that."
(1732)

He that hath but one eye, must be afraid to lose it.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1086. (1640)

<sup>10</sup> Better to have one eye than be blind altogether.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 8. (1670)

NATHAN BAILEY, in his Dictionary: Better
(1736) condenses this to, "Better one eye than quite blind." IN THE COUNTRY OF THE BLIND, THE ONE-EYED MAN IS KING, see under BLINDNESS.

He who has but one Eye, is always wiping it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2385. (1732)

<sup>11</sup> Their eyes by this time all drew straws.

ALICIA D'ANVERS, Academia, p. 36. (1691)

My eyes begin to draw straws.

BERNARD MANDEVILLE, The Virgin Unmask'd,
p. 98. (1709)

Indeed my eyes draw straws.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

It is a current expression . . . to say of a person, when his eyes are heavy, and he is much inclined to sleep, that his eyes draw straws.

Gentleman's Magazine, 1790. Pt. ii, p. 978.

<sup>12</sup> He kept him as the apple of his eye.

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xxxii, 10. (c.
650 B. C.) See under APPLE.

<sup>13</sup> What argues sniv'ling and piping your eye?

CHARLES DIBDIN, Poor Jack. (1789) Nautical slang for weeping.

[He] then began to eye his pipe,
And then to pipe his eye.

THOMAS HOOD, Faithless Sally Brown. (1826)

The smoke kept us coughing and piping the eye.

R. L. STEVENSON, Treasure Island, iv, 19. (1883)

<sup>1</sup> The eyes can deal no wound, if hand strike not.
(οὐκ ἔσθ' ἐν ὀφθαλμοῖς τραῦμα μὴ δρώσης χειρός.)

EURIPIDES, Heracleidae, l. 684. (c. 430 B. C.)

Your yēn two wol slee me sodenly,

I may the beaute of hem not sustene,

So woundeth hit through-out my herte kene.

CHAUCER (?), Merciles Beaute: A Triple Roundel, l. 1. (c. 1380)

The eies are the onelie wounders of lovers, which Bocace also affirmed with this saying, To behold with the stinging of the eie.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv,
p. 181. (1574) Young, tr.

<sup>2</sup> 'Tis sweet to gaze in sympathetic eyes. (ἐὶς δμματ' εὖρου φῶτος ἐνβλέψαι γλυκύ.)

EURIPIDES, Ion, l. 732. (c. 419 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> He shuts his eyes and thinks none see.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, Polonius, p. 28. (1852)

NONE SO BLIND, see under BLINDNESS.

<sup>4</sup> Euery man that hath but halfe an eye, seeth these grosse inconsequences.

WILLIAM FULKE, Heskins Parliament Repealed, p. 348. (1579)

Whych any man with half an eye may easily discern.

B. R., Euterpe, p. 58. (1584)

For any man with half an eye,

What stands before him may espy;

But optics sharp it needs, I ween,

To see what is not to be seen.

JOHN TRUMBULL, McFingal. Canto i, l. 67. (1776)

Anybody with half an eye could see through that

R. D. BLACKMORE, Cripps. Ch. 40. (1876)

I saw with half an eye that all was over.

R. L. STEVENSON, Treasure Island, iv, 18. (1883)

<sup>5</sup> A small Hurt in the Eye is a great one.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 406. (1732)

He that comes after, sees with more Eyes than his own.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2067

<sup>6</sup> One's eyes are what one is, one's mouth what one becomes.

JOHN GALSWORTHY, Flowering Wilderness, p.
343. (1932)

<sup>7</sup> There's more here, sir, than meets the eye.

JOHN GALSWORTHY, The Man of Property.

(1906) A favorite cliché with the English.

There is something more than hops to the eye in this affair.

NGAIO MARSH, Death in Ecstasy, p. 307. (1941)

There's more in most things than meets the eye.

F. W. CROFTS, Double Tragedy, p. 17. (1943)

<sup>8</sup> That's all my eye.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man.
Act ii. (1768)

That's all my eye and my elbow, as the saying is.

UNKNOWN, George Bateman, ii, 113. (1782)

That was all in the eye.

SUSAN FERRIER, The Inheritance, i, 31. (1824)

As for black clothes,—that's all my eye and Tommy.

JOHN POOLE, Hamlet Travestie. Act i, sc. 1. (1811)

The tenderness of Spring is all my eye.

THOMAS HOOD, Spring. (1842)

<sup>9</sup> That's my eye betty martin.

FRANCIS GROSE, ed., A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Betty Martin. (1785)

Grose explains that the phrase is "an answer to any one that attempts to impose or humbug."

All my eye, Betty.

THOMAS MOORE, Tom Crib's Memorial to Congress. (1819)

Who was Betty Martin, and wherefore should she be so often mentioned in connection with my precious eye or yours?

ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Doctor. Ch. 125. (1837)

Southey did not answer his question, and no one else has done so satisfactorily. The tradition that "Betty Martin" is a corruption of a medieval invocation, "Beate Martine" is ingenious but unconvincing.

Hullo! my eye and Betty Martin! . . . This is too ridiculous.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Alton Locke. Ch. 25. (1850)

Only your eye and Miss Elizabeth Martin.

J. R. PLANCHÉ, Extravaganzas, iv, 158. (1851)

That's all my eye, and Betty Martin! Nobody believes that.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Perlycross. Ch. 21. (1894)

These things are all my eye and Betty Martin.

AGATHA CHRISTIE, The Patriotic Murders, p.
108. (1941) CAMPBELL, Ringed with Fire, p.

138. (1942) It will be noted from these examples that the exclamation is strictly British, and is still in common use.

<sup>10</sup> The eies are great dissemblers.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv,
p. 178. (1574) Young, tr.

The eies are two captaines which guide us to the war of love.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 180.

<sup>11</sup> The eies . . . are called the windowes of the heart, by the which love enters into the same

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv,
p. 179. (1584) Young, tr. In Bk. ii, p. 131, occurs the phrase, "The windowes of his eyes."

These lovely lamps, these windowes of the soule.

JOSHUA SYLVESTER, tr., Devine Weekes and Workes. Week i, day 6. (1591)

Ere I let fall the windowes of mine eyes.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, v, 3, 116. (1595)
Shakespeare uses the same metaphor in Romeo and Juliet, iv, 1, 100, "Thy eyes' windowes fall," and in Venus and Adonis,
l. 482, "Her two blue windowes faintly she upheaveth."

The heart's letter is read in the eyes.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 222. (1640)

Eyes so transparent that they permit your soul to be seen. (Ils sont si transparents qu'ils laissent voir votre âme.)

THÉOPHILE GAUTIER, Two Beautiful Eyes. (c. 1860)

1
Hir eyen two were cleer and light
As any candel that brenneth bright.

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose. (c. 1240) Chaucer (?), tr., l. 3199. (c. 1365)

Her pierceinge eies twinckled like starres.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 211. (1576)

2
Hir yën greye as a faucoun.

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose. (c. 1240) Chaucer (?), tr., l. 543 (c. 1365)

His eyen greye as glas.

CHAUCEUR, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 152. (c. 1386) "Yën greye as glas" is repeated in

The Reves Tale, l. 54.

His eyen greye as goos.

CHAUCEUR, The Milleres Tale, l. 132.

The cercles of his eyen in his heed,
They glowden bitwixe yelow and reed.

CHAUCEUR, The Knightes Tale, l. 1273.

His eyen bright citryn [citron-colored].

CHAUCEUR, The Knightes Tale, l. 1309.

Grene for chaunge and doublenesse.

JOHN LYDGATE, tr., Fall of Princes. Bk. vi, pt. 1. (c. 1430) There is an old French rhyme about eyes which may be freely rendered: "Blue eyes go to the skies; Grey eyes go to Paradise; Green eyes are doomed to hell; Black in Purgatory dwell."

The mother's eyes are black as sloes.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Ser. i, fab 3, l. 16. (1727) A popular proverbial comparison See under BLACK.

Eyes . . . black and burning as a coal.

LORD BYRON, Don Juan Canto iv, st. 94. (1819) She blued—and almost starched and ironed him—with her cobalt eyes.

O. HENRY, To Him Who Waits. (1909)

3
Every eye forms its own beauty.

CHARLES G. HARPER, The Brighton Road, p. 249. (1906) "As the proverb truly says."

BEAUTY IN EYE OF BEHOLDER, see under BEAUTY.

4
The eye will have his part.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 468. (1640)

5
I was eyes to the blind, and feet was I to the lame. (Oculus fui caeco. et pes claudo.)

Old Testament: Job, xxix, 15. (c. 400 B. C.)

6
Your eyes are so sharpe, that you cannot onely looke through a Milstone, but cleane through the minde.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 289. (1580)

Why has not man a microscopic eye?

For this plain reason, man is not a fly.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 193. (1732)

Locke uses the phrase "Microscopical eyes" in his Essay Concerning Human Understanding, bk. ii, ch. 23, sec. 12.

You've got an eye like a gimlet.

KATHLEEN KNIGHT, Rendezvous with the Past, p. 5. (1940)

7
The eye hath euer bene thought the pearle of the face.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 406. (1580)

The Eye is the Pearl of the Face.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4506. (1732)

8
From within, out of the heart of man, proceed evil thoughts. . . . an evil eye. (ὁφθαλμός πονηρός.)

New Testament: Mark, vii, 21–22. (A. D. 70)

The Latin is, "Oculus malus."

The evil eye of another can be averted, but there is no escape from the evil of one's own.

ABDULLAH ANSARI, The Knower and the Known. (c. 1075)

He certainly possesses the gift of the evil eye.

LORD LYTON, The Last Days of Pompeii. Part i, ch. 3. (1834)

9
The light of the body is the eye. (ὁ λύχνος τοῦ σώματος ἐστὶν ὁ ὀφθαλμός.)

New Testament: Matthew, vi, 22. (c. A. D. 70)

The Vulgate is, "Lucerna corporis tui est oculus tuus."

10
You must mind your eye, if you are shovelling slop into a cart.

HENRY MAYHEW, London Labour and the London Poor, ii, 224. (1851)

11
Towers, and Battlements it sees
Boosom'd high in tufted Trees,
Wher perhaps som beauty lies,
The Cynosure of neighbouring eyes.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 77. (1632)

The cynosure of all eyes.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Tictocq. (1894)

12
Our eyes are greater than our belly. (Nous ayons les yeulx grands que le ventre.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 30. (1580)

Thou art like the Epicure, whose bellye is sooner filled than his eye.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 327. (1580)

Now gentlewomen, do I finde the olde prouerbe true: Better fill a man's belly than his eye.

ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart), ix, 167. (1590)

Better fill a gluttons belly than his eye.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 319. (1605) JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 96. (1670)

The eye is bigger than the belly.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1016. (1640)

The captain . . . replied with the old English proverb, "That he doubted my eyes were bigger than my belly."

SWIFT, Gulliver's Travels, ii, 8. (1726)

It is easier to fill a Glutton's Belly, than his Eye.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2928. (1732)

I thought I could have eaten this wing of a chicken; but my eye's bigger than my belly.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

And gazed around them to the left and right
With the prophetic eye of appetite.

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 50. (1820)

A man is said to have his "eyes bigger than his belly" who takes more food upon his plate than he can eat.

EDWARD PEACOCK, Manley Glossary, p. 193.

(1889) The Germans say, "Die Augen sind weiter bann der Bauch."

1
Your eyes were not silent. (Non oculi tacuere tui.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. ii, eleg. 5, l. 17. (c. 13 B. C.)

There are often voice and words in a silent look.
(Saepe tacens vocem verbaque vultus habet.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 574. (c. 1 B. C.)

Eyes can speak and eyes can understand.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, The Gentleman Usher. Act ii, sc. 1. (1606)

The eyes have one language everywhere.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 957. (1640)

The eyes of men converse as much as their tongues.

R. W. EMERSON, The Conduct of Life: Behavior. (1860)

He gave me an Italian glance and made me his.

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i. (1887)

2
The eyes, in beholding the afflicted, sometimes suffer affliction. (Dum spectant laesos oculi, laeduntur et ipsi.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 615. (c. 1 B. C.)

3
Drink to me with your eyes alone. . . . And if you will, take the cup to your lips and fill it with kisses, and give it so to me. (ἐμολ δὲ μούοις πρόπινε τοῖς ὀφθαλμοῖς.)

PHILOSTRATUS, Epistles. Epis. xxxiii. (c. A. D. 225) See Oxford Companion to Classical Literature, p. 325.

Drink to me only with thine eyes,
And I will pledge with mine;

Or leave a kiss but in the cup,
And I'll not look for wine.

BEN JONSON, To Celia. (c. 1610) A paraphrase of Philostratus.

4
She has eyes in the back of her head. (In occipitio quoque habet oculos.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 64. (c. 210 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, iii, 41. The Greek proverb is, καὶ εἰς τὴν πλάτην ὀφθαλμοὶ ἔχει (He has eyes even on his back). The Germans say, "Er hat auch hinten Augen" (He has also eyes behind).

Take hede of Sim Glovers wife, she hath an ele behind her!

JOHN STILL, Gammer Gurton's Needle. Act ii, sc. 2. (c. 1565)

He has an eye in his neck.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 170. (1721)

5
Argus who has eyes all over him. (Argus qui oculus totus fuit.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 555. (c. 210 B. C.) Argus, the herdsman whom Hera set to watch Io, was called Argos Panoptes, because he had eyes all over his body—a hundred of them. When Hermes killed him, Hera set his eyes in the peacock's tail. See OVID, Metamorphoses, i, 588. "Argus-eyed" has since become proverbial.

Your fader is in sleighte as Argus yēd.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde, iv, 1459. (c. 1374)

For as fele[many] eyen hadde she

As fetheres upon foules be.

CHAUCER (?), The Hous of Fame. Bk. iii, l. 291. (c. 1383)

Lo, Argus, which that hadde an hondred yēn.

For al that ever he coude poure or pryen,

Yet was he blent.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale, l. 867. (c. 1388)

If I had as many eyes as Argus, I could not have sought a man more narrowly.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Poesies, Supposes, ii, l. (1575)

Watch me like Argus.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, v, 230 (1597)

6
We shall throw a cataract over his eyes. (Glau-cumam ob oculos obiciemus.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 148. (c. 200 B. C.)

Don't try to pull the bed clothes over my eyes.

KAUFMAN and HART, The Man Who Came to Dinner. Act ii. (1939)

PULL WOOL OVER ONE'S EYES, see under WOOL.

7
The eye is the index of the mind. (Oculus animi index.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 143. (1778)

The eye looks, but it is the mind that sees.

EDWARD WHITE, Life in Christ. Bk. iv, ch. 25. (1875)

8
Her eyes flashed lightning. (Fulminat illa oculis.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iv, eleg. viii, l. 55 (c. 22 B. C.)

His eyen stepe, and rollinge in his heed,
That stemed as a forneys of a leed.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 201. (c. 1386)

Swiche glaringe eyen hadde he as an hare.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 686

He loketh as a sperhawk with his yēn.

CHAUCER, Epilogue to the Nonne Preestes Tale, l. 11. (c. 1387)

An eye like Mars, to threaten and command.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 4, 57. (1600)

He holds him with his glittering eye.

COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. i, st. 4. (1798)

9
Hell and destruction are never full; so the eyes of man are never satisfied. (Infernus et per-ditio numquam implentur: similiter et oculi hominum insatiabiles.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvii, 20. (c. 350 B. C.)

<sup>1</sup> The eyes are blind when the mind is elsewhere. (Caeci sunt oculi cum animus alias res agit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 129. (c. 43 B. C.)

<sup>2</sup> The eyes commit no wrong, if the mind controls the eyes. (Nihil peccant oculi, si animus oculis imperat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 423. (c. 43 B. C.)

The guiltless eye Commits no wrong.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. i, l. 333. (1784)

<sup>3</sup> He has all his eyes about him.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 60. (1813) He looks well after his affairs.

Keep your weather eye open.

SMYTH, Sailor's Word-Book, p. 724. (1867)

You know how to keep your weather eye lifting.

LEE THAYER, Murder Is Out, p. 240. (1942)

<sup>4</sup> I was by (quoth Pedley) when my eye was put out.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 242. (1678)

"This Pedley was a natural fool, of whom go many stories."

<sup>5</sup> A stranger's eye sees clearest.

CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth,

Ch. 58. (1860) Cited as "a common saying."

<sup>6</sup> Keep your eye skinned for Injuns.

J. S. ROBB, Squatter Life, p. 105. (1847)

It ain't so bad for one to keep his eyes skinned.

JAMES WEIR, Simon Kenton, p. 12. (1852)

"Keep your eye skinned" is the universal proverb of the prairies.

Harper's Magazine, April, 1859, p. 603/2.

Keep "his eye peeled" for buffalo.

W. F. RAE, Westward by Rail, p. 83. (1870)

He kept them big eyes of his skinned for me all day long.

HAROLD FREDERIC, The Deserter, p. 69. (1898)

You got to keep your eyes skinned.

H. G. WELLS, You Can't Be too Careful, p. 55.

(1942)

<sup>7</sup> Faster than his tongue

Did make offence his eye did heal it up.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iii, 5, 116. (1600)

<sup>8</sup> I have a good eye, uncle; I can see a church by daylight.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, ii, 1, 85. (1598)

<sup>9</sup> Even in the glasses of thine eyes

I see thy grieved heart.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, i, 3, 208. (1595)

In the forehead and the eye, the lecture of the heart is read.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 60. (1633)

In the forehead and the eye, the lecture of the mind doth lie.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 92. (1670)

<sup>10</sup> I ne'er could any lustre see,
In eyes that would not look on me.

SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act i, sc. 2. (1775)

<sup>11</sup> When ye kyst a shepys ie . . . [at] mastres Andelby.

JOHN SKELTON, Against Garnesche, iii, 54. (1529)

On whom he many a sheepish eye did cast.

JOHN GRANGE, Golden Aphroditis, sig. D1. (1577)

If he but look awry, or cast a sheeps eye.

UNKNOWN, Tom Tyler, l. 124. (c. 1580)

Mopsa throwing a great number of sheeps eyes upon me.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia, ii, 107. (c. 1586)

She casts many a sheep's eye at thee.

ROBERT GREENE, Never Too Late. (1590)

On Cleopatra he has cast a sheep's-eye.

SIR WILLIAM DAVENANT, The Play-House to be Let. Act v. (c. 1663)

Mister Curate, for all your grave Looks, I'm afraid

You cast a Sheep's Eye on her Ladyship's Maid.

SWIFT, The Great Question Debated, l. 147. (1729)

I have often seen him cast a sheep's eye out of a calf's head at you.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Is it one of my colleens you've been throwing the eye at, Sir?

SAMUEL LOVER, Handy Andy. Ch. 8. (1842)

The horrud old Colonel . . . was making sheep's eyes at a half-caste girl there.

THACKERAY, Vanity Fair. Ch. 27. (1848)

She used to make eyes at the Duke of Marlborough.

THACKERAY, Henry Esmond. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1852)

Many were the sheeps'-eyes that were cast.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), A Chaparral Christmas Gift. (1910)

Can you make matinée eyes at them?

O. HENRY, The Higher Pragmatism. (1908)

It is goo-goo eyes or git.

O. HENRY, A Lickpenny Lover. (1908)

Barney Google with his Goo Goo Googly eyes.

BILLY ROSE, Barney Google. (1923)

The minx with her goo-goo eyes.

H. C. BAILEY, Mr. Fortune Here, p. 65. (1940)

LOOK BABIES IN HER EYES, see under BABY.

<sup>12</sup> The eye is a shrew.

HENRY SMITH, Sermons, i, 283. (c. 1585) "It is a true proverb; although it [the eye] shew light, yet it leadeth many into darkness. If Eve had not seen, she had not lusted."

<sup>13</sup> The eye seeth all things and cannot see itself.

HENRY SMITH, Sermons, i, 284. (c. 1585)

The eye that sees round about it selfe, sees not into it self.

THOMAS NASHE, The Unfortunate Traveller: Dedication. (1594)

The Eye, that sees all Things else, sees not it self.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4507. (1732)

<sup>1</sup> Thou hast doves' eyes. (Oculi tua columbarum.)

Old Testament: Song of Solomon, i, 15. (c. 900 B.C.) A phrase repeated in iv, 1, and v, 12.

Com forth now, with thyn eyen columbyn [dove-like].

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale, l. 897. (c. 1388)

Those doves' eyes Which can make gods forsworn. SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, v, 3, 26. (1607)

<sup>2</sup> Wouldst have me doubt the evidence of my eyes? (πᾶς δ' οὐκ ἔγω κάτοιδ' ἃ γ' εἶδον ἐμφανῶς;)

SOPHOCLES, Electra, l. 923. (c. 409 B.C.)

I have seen it with my own eyes.

JOHN STEVENS, tr., Quevedo's Comicall Works, p. 350. (1707)

I saw her with my own eyes.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>3</sup> Alive and with eyes open I go to destruction. (Vivos vidensque pereō.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 73. (161 B.C.)

<sup>4</sup> My right eye twitches. (ἄλλεται ὀφθαλμός μου ὁ δεξιός.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. iii, l. 37. (c. 270 B.C.)

An omen that one will soon see a desired sight.

<sup>5</sup> The naked eye may easily see farther than the armed. It depends on who looks through it.

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 21 Jan., 1853.

<sup>6</sup> Nothing but a handful of dust will fill the eye of man.

R. C. TRENCH, Proverbs, iv, 75. (1853) Quoting an Arabic proverb, "on the never satisfied eye of desire."

<sup>7</sup> Betere is eye sor, than all blynd, quoth Hendyng.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Hendyng, p. 8. (c. 1300) A rendering of the Latin proverb, "Luscus praefertur caeco, sic undique fertur."

WRIGHT, Essays on the Middle Ages, i, 141, cites another form, "A sore eye is better than all blind."

He that hath sore eyes must not behold the candle.

JOHN LYLIV, Euphues and His England, p. 394. (1580)

The light is naught for sore eyes.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 161. (1639)

Cited by RAY (Proverbs, p. 114) with the French, "À l'œil malade la lumière nuit."

The sore eye infecteth the sounde.

JOHN LYLIV, Euphues (Arber), p. 111. (1579)

An eye-sore to our solemn festival.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, iii, 2, 102. (1594)

The sight of you is good for sore eyes.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

AN EYE FOR AN EYE, see under RETRIBUTION.

II—What Eye Sees Not, Heart Rues Not

<sup>8</sup> When the eye does not see, the heart does not grieve.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 410. (1817)

What the eye doesn't see, the heart doesn't grieve.

CHARLOTTE BURNE, Shropshire Folk-Lore, p. 588. (1883)

What the eye doesn't see the heart won't grieve over.

GEORGETTE HEYER, No Wind of Blame, p. 44. (1939)

What the eye doesn't see the heart can't grieve for.

KIERAN ABBEY, Let the Coffin Pass, p. 49. (1942)

WENTWORTH, Pursuit of a Parcel, p. 221. (1942)

YOUNG, A Man About the House, p. 184. (1942)

<sup>9</sup> Men saye communely that ferre ys from the eye is ferre from the herte.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Jason, p. 83. (c. 1477)

See also under ABSENCE.

<sup>10</sup> Nothing troubles you for which you do not yearn. (Nihil autem est molestum quod non desideres.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. 14, sec. 47. (44 B.C.)

What is unknown none desires. (Ignoti nulla cupido.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 397. (c. 1 B.C.)

<sup>11</sup> Closing one's eyes is the surest protection against worldly allurements.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 181. (c. 1050)

<sup>12</sup> If the eye do not admire, the heart will not desire.

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 263. (1869)

What the eye sees not, the heart does not desire (Yen pu chien hsin pu yüan.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1490. (1875)

<sup>13</sup> That the eie seeth not, the hert rewth not.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, iv, 125. (1574)

FLORIO, tr., Montaigne, iii, 13. (1603)

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 341. (1721) etc., etc.

As the common saying is, yt which the eye seeth the hart greeveth.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 177. (1576)

What the eie sees not neuer hurteth the heart.

ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart), xi, 140. (1592)

If eyes don't see, heart won't break. (Ojos que no veen, corazón que no quiebra.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 67. (1615)

Shelton, in his translation (1620), renders it,

"The heart dreams not of what the eye sees not." BLAND, Proverbs, ii, 37, puts the Spanish in slightly different form, "Ojos que no ven, corazón que no llora." Common to many languages.

What the eye ne're sees, the heart ne're rues.

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, A Paire of Spy-Knaves, p. 8. (1620)

What the eye views not, the heart craves not, as well as rues not.

WILLIAM PENN, No Cross, No Crown. Ch. 5. (1669)

When the Eye sees what it never saw, the Heart will think what it never thought.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5583. (1732)

What the eye does not see, the heart does not rue.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 6. (1853)

What the mind doesn't know, the eyes don't cry over.

FRANCIS ILES, Before the Fact. Ch. 5. (1932)

What the eye doesn't see the nose doesn't smell.

JOHN LODWICK, Running to Paradise, p. 169. (1943)

1
Least he longs that little seeth.

THOMAS LODGE, Damons Pastorall. (1600)

2
The present eye praises the present object.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, iii, 3, 180. (1601)

The jewel that we find, we stoop and take't,

Because we see it; but what we do not see

We tread upon, and never think of it.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, ii, 1, 24. (1604)

III—Eyes and Ears

See also Speaking and Hearing

3
Right well shall he see with his two eyes, right well shall he hear with his two ears, the things which are true.

ANTI, Papyrus: Book of the Dead. Ch. 133, l. 14. (c. 4000 B. C.)

4
The eyes are as ignorant as the ears are knowing. (καὶ τόσον ὀφθαλμοὶ γὰρ ἀπενθέες ὅσον ἀκουὴ εἰδυλῆς.)

CALLIMACHUS, Fragments. Frag. 128. (c. 250 B. C.)

5
Hearing a hundred times is not as good as seeing once.

GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 445. (1938) A Japanese proverb. The Germans say, "Die Augen glauben sich selbst, die Ohren andern Leuten" (The eyes believe themselves, the ears believe other people)

6
Before the eyes can see, they must be incapable of tears. Before the ear can hear, it must have lost its sensitiveness.

MABEL COLLINS, The Light on the Path. (1908)

7
"I heard" is not as good as "I saw."

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 280. (1872)

8
The eye is not satisfied with seeing, nor the ear filled with hearing. (Non saturatur oculus visu, nec auris auditu impletur.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, i, 8. (c. 250 B. C.)

9
Men trust their ears less than their eyes. (ὦτα τυγχάνει ἀνθρώποισι ἐόντα ἀπιστότερα ὀφθαλμῶν.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. i, ch. 8. (c. 445 B. C.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 143.

(1778) quotes Herodotus and gives a Latin rendering, "Arbiter est oculis certior aure meus" (My eye is a better witness than my ear).

The eye is more reliable than the ear. (ὥτιον πιστότεροι ὀφθαλμοί.)

CALLIMACHUS, Fragments. (c. 250 B. C.) Cited

by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 100, with the Latin, "Oculis magis habenda fides que auribus," or "Oculis credendum potius que auribus." TAVERNER includes it in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 4, with the rendering, "Credite is rather to be gyuen to the eyes than to the eares," and the comment. "That is the thynges that be sene are more certayne than that be harde."

Less vividly is the mind stirred by what finds entrance through the ears than by what is brought before the trusty eyes. (Segnius irritant animos demissa per aurem | quam quae sunt oculis subiecta fidelibus.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 180. (c. 20 B. C.)

Our eyes deceive us. (Fallunt nos oculi.)

PETRONIUS, Fragments. Frag. 30, Loeb. (c. A.D. 60)

Men trust more fully to their eyes than to their ears. (Homines amplius oculis quam auribus credunt.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. vi, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 65)

10
I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear, but now mine eye seeth thee. (Auditu auris audiui te, nunc autem oculus meus videt te.)

Old Testament: Job, xlii, 5. (c. 350 B. C.)

The hearing ear and the seeing eye. (Aurem audientem, et oculum videntem.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xx, 12. (c. 350 B. C.)

11
Do you see her playing the hunter with her eyes and bird-catcher with her ears? (Vident tu illam oculis venaturam facere atque aucupium auribus?)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 990. (c. 200 B. C.)

Stabbed with a white wench's black eye; shot through the ear with a love-song.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 4, 13. (1595)

12
Better is one eye-witness than ten hearsay ones. (Pluris est oculatus testis unus quam auriti decem.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus, l. 489. (c. 200 B. C.)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, vi, 54. TAVERNER, Translations from Erasmus, fo. 43, renders it, "One eye wytnesse, is of more value, than ten are [ear] wytnesses."

Of more force standes eye witenesse one, Than ten eare witnesses among.

RICHARD ROBINSON, tr., A Learned and True Assertion of the Life of Prince Arthure, 39. (1582)

We credit most our sight; one eye doth please
Our trust farre more than ten eare-witnesses.

HERRICK, The Eyes Before the Eares. (1648)
One Eye-witness is better than ten Hearsays.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3750. (1732)
The eye-witness observes what the absent does not see.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 782. (1817)

<sup>1</sup>
The ear endures an injury better than the eye.
(Iniuriam aures facilius quam oculi ferunt.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 303. (c. 43 B. C.)

FACE

<sup>4</sup>
An ape covered with paint and powder.
(πίθηκος ἀνάπλωος ψιμυθίου.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Ecclesiazusae, l. 1072. (c. 393 B. C.)
ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, vii, 62, gives the Latin, "Simia plena fuci," and adds that the proverb applies to ugly old women who seek allurement through use of cosmetics.

Even now, mad girl, dost ape the painted Briton and wanton with foreign dyes upon thy cheek?
(Nunc etiam infectos demens imitare Britannos, ludis et externo tincta nitore caput?)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 18b, l. 23. (c. 25 B. C.)

Where the countenance is faire, there neede no colours.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber),
p. 204. (1580)

He's a god or a painter, for he makes faces.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 648.
(1595) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1914. (1732)

Harlot's cheek, beautied with plastering art.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 1, 51. (1600)

From pargetting, painting, slicking, glazing, and renewing old rivel'd faces, good Mercury defend us.

BEN JONSON, Cynthia's Revels. Act v, sc. 11.
(1601) Pargetting: plastering.

A good face needes no painting.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Somers Tracts, iii, 575. (1612)
A painted face is the Devil's looking-glass. Painting is an enemy to blushing, which is beauty's color.

T. T., Of Painting the Face. (1614)

Thy flattering picture, Phryne, is like thee,
Onely in this, that you both painted be.

JOHN DONNE, Phryne. (c. 1631)

Men say y'are faire; and faire ye are 'tis true;
But (Hark!) we praise the Painter now, not you.

HERRICK, Upon a Painted Gentlewoman. (1648)

A woman and a cherry paint themselves for their hurt.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Span.-Eng., p. 18. (1659)

A woman and a cherry is coloured to its prejudice.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 75. (1666)

Ancient Phillis . . . makes her own faces,
And each morning wears a new one.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Double-Dealer. Act
iii, sc. 10. (1694)

<sup>2</sup>
What the ear hears is not like what the eye sees. (Erh wên pu ju yen chien.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No.
2031. (1875)

<sup>3</sup>
It is not well to see everything, nor to hear everything. (Non expedit omnia videre, omnia audire.) Many affronts may pass us by: in most cases the man who is unconscious of them escapes them.

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. iii, ch. 11, sec. 1. (c. A. D. 55)

F

Let no woman's painting breed thy stomach's fainting.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 20. (1670)

She that paints will doubtless be a whore.

EDWARD WARD, The London Spy, p. 420. (1699)

A Woman that Paints, puts up a Bill, that she is to be let.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 481. (1732)

Ægle, beauty and poet, has two little crimes:
She makes her own face, and does not make her rhymes.

LORD BYRON, From the French. (c. 1818)

<sup>5</sup>
If you open your face . . . again tonight I'll separate you from your breath.

GEORGE ADE, Artie. Ch. 3. (1896)

The marshal bade him "shut his face."

UPTON SINCLAIR, King Coal, p. 200. (1917)

<sup>6</sup>
There's never a fou' [foul] face, but there's a fou' fancy. Ugly people have ugly thoughts.
J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 119. (1917)

<sup>7</sup>
It is the melancholy face that gets stung by the bee.

GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 443
(1938) A Japanese proverb. The Japanese also say, "There is always a wasp to sting a weeping face."

<sup>8</sup>
A Somnour was ther with us in that place,
That hadde a fyr-reed cherubinnes face.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 625.
(c. 1386)

He was christened with pump-water.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 79. (1678) He has a red face.

<sup>9</sup>
The face is the image of the soul, and the eyes are its interpreter. (Nam ut imago est animi vultus sic indices oculi.)

CICERO, Orator. Sec. 60. (c. 46 B. C.) Cicero's brother, Quintus, in De Petitionis Consulatus, sec. 11, has, "Vultus ac frons animi ianua"
(The face and brow are the entrance of the mind). HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 470, gives the proverb as "Vultus index animi"
(The face is the index to the mind), and adds,
"The face discovers wisdom," but on the contrary, "Merit is often belied by the countenance" (Vultu saepe laeditur pietas.)

From a man's face I read his character. (Ex vultibus tamen hominum mores colligo.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 126. (c. A. D. 60)

The face the unerring index of the mind.
(Sumit utrumque inde habitum facies.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ix, l. 20. (c. A. D. 120)
Gifford, tr.

Your face doth testify what you are inwardly.

LEWIS EVANS, Witnals' Dictionary, sig. L7. (1586)

There's no art

To find the mind's construction in the face.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, i, 4, 11. (1606)

Man is to man the subject of deceite;

And that old saying is vntrue, "the face
Is index of the heart."

R. C., Times' Whistle. Bk. ii, l. 630. (c. 1615)

Man is read in his face.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Deus in Creaturis.
(1636)

The face is oftentimes a true index of the heart.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters. Bk. i, No. 15. (1621)

The Face is but a false Index of the Mind.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 255. (1709)

In the face judicious eyes may find

The symptoms of a good or evil mind.

EDWARD WARD, The History of the Grand Rebellion, i, 8. (1713)

For what is form and what is face,

But the soul's index or its case?

NATHANIEL COTTON, Pleasure. (1750)

The face the index of a feeling mind.

GEORGE CRABBE, Tales of the Hall. Bk. xvi, l. 113.

(1819) LOVER, Rory O'More. Ch. 42. (1837)

The face was but an index of her heart.

T. S. ARTHUR, Ten Nights in a Bar-room. Night
v, p. 87. (1854)

You have not to learn that the face is the outward index of the mind within.

MRS. HENRY WOOD, Trevlyn Hold. Ch. 1. (1864)

1
I know you sing well; I see you have a singing face.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Wild Goose Chase. Act
ii, sc. 2. (1621)

I see you have a singing face—a heavy, dull, sonata face.

FARQUHAR, The Inconstant. Act ii, sc. 1. (1702)

You know you haven't got a singing face.

W. B. RHODES, Bombastes Furioso. (1810)

2
Hir face whyt and wel coloured.

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose. (c.
1240) CHAUCER (?) tr., l. 548. (c. 1365)

As whyt as lillie or rose in rys.

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose.
Chaucer, tr., l. 1015.

There is a garden in her face,

Where roses and white lilies grow.

THOMAS CAMPION, Cherry Ripe. (1606)

3
As round as appel was his face.

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose, (c.
1240) Chaucer (?), tr., l. 819. (c. 1365)

A face like a full moon.

WALTER BESANT, All Sorts and Conditions of Men. Ch. 1. (1882)

4
Do not let your face put your heart to shame.
(σὲ δὲ μὴ τι νόον κατελεγχέτω εἶδος.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 714. (c. 800 B. C.)

We know men's faces, not their hearts.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs.
No. 261. (1937)

5
Not in my face would he dare to look,
Though he have the front of a dog.

(οὐδ' ἂν ἐμοί γε τετλαίη κύνεός περ ἔων εἰς ὤπα ἰδέσθαι.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 372. (c. 850 B. C.)

6
The human face is the masterpiece of God.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Little Journeys: Da Vinci
(1915) Quoted.

7
Therefore have I set my face like a flint. (Ideo posui faciem meam ut petram durissimam.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, 50, 7. (c. 725 B. C.)

He . . . sets his face like a flint.

JOHN BUNYAN, *The Advocateship of Jesus
Christ*. (1688)

8
Men's faces are not to be trusted. (Frontis nulla fides.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 8. (c. A. D. 120)

9
Your face betrays your years. (Facies tua computat annos.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 199. (c. A. D. 120)

The ruins of a house can be repaired, but not the ruins of a face. (Les ruines d'une maison | Se peuvent réparer: que n'est cet avantage | Pour les ruines du visage!)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: La Fille. Bk. vii, fab. 5.
(1678)

We may know your age by the wrinkles of your horn.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 359. (1721)
"She has a good many nicks in her horn"; said of a girl who is becoming an old maid. A cow is said to have a nick in her horn for every year.

P. W. JOYCE, English as We Speak It, p. 113.
(1910) "Her face was a map crossed with lines of lassitude and languitude."—Scribner's Commentator.

10
O what a face! (O qualis facies!)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 157. (c. A. D. 120)

The tartness of his face sours ripe grapes.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, v, 4, 18. (1607)

A damned disinheriting countenance.

R. B. SHERIDAN, The School for Scandal. Act
iv, sc. 1. (1777)

She's the only gal I love,

With a face like a horse and buggy.

UNKNOWN, Fireman, Save My Child. (c. 1876)

His face was as gnarled as an English walnut.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Door of Unrest. (1911)

Her face would stop a freight train.

M. V. HEBERDEN, The Lobster Pick Murder, p.
67. (1941)

<sup>1</sup> Then he turned his face to the wall, and prayed unto the Lord. (Qui convertit faciem suam ad parietem, et oravit Dominum.)

Old Testament: II Kings, xx, 2. (c. 600 B. C.)

See also Isaiah, xxxviii, 2.

He turned his face to the wall . . . and sleapte sweetly in the Lorde.

UNKNOWN, Narratives of the Days of the Reformation (Camden), p. 35. (1579) Said of a person on his death-bed, conscious of the approach of the end.

He turnd his face unto the wall,
And death came creeping to him.

UNKNOWN, Barbara Allen's Cruelty. (c. 1640)

See CHILD, Ballads, ii, 277.

He would turn his face to the wall, and die with that word unsaid.

MARK TWAIN, Tom Sawyer. Ch. 3. (1876)

<sup>2</sup> I will set my face against that man. (Ego ponam faciem meam contra illum.)

Old Testament: Leviticus, xx, 3. (c. 570 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> How frantick are those louers which are caried away with the gaye glistening of the fine face.

JOHN LYL, Euphues, p. 54. (1579)

In these days the fairest faces mask the foulest souls.

STEELE MACKAY, Paul Kauvar. Act ii. (1888)

<sup>4</sup> Was this the face that lancht a thousand shippes?

And burnt the toplesse Towres of Ilium?
Sweete Helen, make me immortall with a kisse.

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, Doctor Faustus, I. 1328. (c. 1590)

Was this fair face the cause, quoth she,
Why the Grecians sacked Troy?

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, i, 3, 73. (1602)

This is the face that burnt a thousand boats.

SHAW, The Admirable Bashville. Act iii. (1926)

Is this the face that launched a thousand gyps and lured innumerable virgins to their doom?

JOHN LODWICK, Running to Paradise, p. 343. (1943)

<sup>5</sup> You will see long faces enough when these taxes come to be paid.

HARRIET MARTINEAU, Farrers. Ch. 1. (1834)

I shall pull a long face.

READE, Never too Late to Mend. Ch. 45. (1856)

Put on a very long face and try to scold people into religion.

C. H. SPURGEON, Sermons, xxv, 548. (1879)

<sup>6</sup> I am all face. (Moy, je suis tout face.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. I, ch. 35. (1580) The well known reply of the man clothed only in a breech-cloth in full winter to the befurred one who asked how he could endure the cold. The complete sentence is, "Vous avez bien la face decouverte: or moy, je suis tout face."

Usually the story is told of an Indian on the ice at Quebec. Montaigne places it in France. The face, when we are born, is no less tender than any other part of the body: it is use alone hardens it, and makes it more able to endure the cold. And therefore the Scythian philosopher gave a very significant answer to the Athenian, who wondered how he could go naked in the frost and snow. "How," said the Scythian, "can you endure your face exposed to the sharp winter?" "My face is used to it," said the Athenian. "Think me all face," replied the Scythian.

JOHN LOCKE, On Education. Sec. 5. (1693)

<sup>7</sup> I don't get the name, but the face is familiar.
OGDEN NASH, The Baffled Hermit. (1935)

<sup>8</sup> The poore Birde when he saw hir make that face to him was halfe afraide.

SIR THOMAS NORTH, tr., Doni's Moral Philosophy. Bk. iii, p. 184. (1570)

Why do you make such faces?

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iii, 4, 67. (1606)

<sup>9</sup> Often a silent face has voice and words
(Saepe tacens vocem verbaque vultus habet.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 574. (c. 1 B. C.)

See also under LOOK.

<sup>10</sup> No slight advantage is a pleasing countenance
(Auxilium non leve vultus habet.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. 8, l. 54. (A. D. 13)

See under APPEARANCE.

<sup>11</sup> Alas, how hard it is not to betray a guilty conscience in the face! (Heu! quam difficile est crimen non prodere vultu!)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. ii, l. 447. (A. D. 7)

A troubled countenance oft discloses much
(Multa sed trepidus solet detegere vultus.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 330. (C. A. D. 60)

<sup>12</sup> Make thy face to shine upon thy servant
(Illustra faciem tuam super servum tuum.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xxxi, 16. (c. 250 B. C.)

Show thy servant the light of thy countenance.

Book of Common Prayer: Psalter, xxxi, 18 (1548)

<sup>13</sup> Let thy face be bright what time thou livest.

PTAH-HOTEP, Instruction. No. 34. (c. 3550 B. C.)

Prisse Papyrus. Gunn, tr.

A merry face is the sign of a happy heart, but sad eyes are signs of worry.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus). xiii, 26. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

Let your countenance be pleasant, but in serious matters somewhat grave.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Motto, in early copy book. (a. 1748)

<sup>14</sup> I think his face is made of a fiddle, every one that looks on him loves him.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 243. (1678)

Your honour's face is made of a fiddle; every one that looks on you loves you.

SMOLLETT, Sir Launcelot Greaves. Ch. 8. (1762)

His face was made of a fiddle, as they say, for a body that looked on him liked him.

WALTER SCOTT, Old Mortality. Ch. 37. (1816)

A face as long as a fiddle.

QUILLER-COUCH, Hetty Wesley, ii, 4. (1903)

1 The human face is my landscape.

SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS, remarking that he did not enjoy the scenery of Richmond. (c. 1759)

2 A fair countenance is the key of closed doors.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. iii, Apologue 28. (c. 1258)
A fair face cannot have a crabbed heart.

UNKNOWN, Passionate Morrice, p. 92. (1593)

A good face needs no band.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 131. (1639)

A good face needs no band, and a bad face deserves none. Some make a rhyme of this by adding, "And a pretty wench no land."

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 97. (1678)

SWIFT, Polite Conversation, Dial. i. (1738)

A fair face is half a portion.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 89. (1732)

A good face is a letter of recommendation.

HENRY FIELDING, Amelia. Bk. ix, ch. 5. (1750)
See under APPEARANCE.

3 I next strained my eyes, with equally bad success, to see if, among the sea of up-turned faces which bent their eyes on the pulpit as a common centre, I could discover the sober and business-like physiognomy of Owen.

SIR WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 20. (1817)

In this sea of upturned faces there is something which excites me strangely.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech, Faneuil Hall, 30 Sept., 1842. Opening sentence. The phrase, "A sea of upturned faces" is frequently quoted, recently in Clifford Odets' Waiting for Lefty, sc. 5. (1935)

We came to a wharf, paved with uplifted faces.

CHARLES DICKENS, American Notes. Ch. 2. (1842)

I peared be4 a C of upturned faces in the Red School House.

ARTEMUS WARD (C. F. BROWNE), The Crisis. (1860)

The mass of upturned faces.

MARK TWAIN, A Connecticut Yankee, p. 359. (1889)

4 Face. Save it while you may.

JOHN SPAIN, Dig Me a Grave, p. 16. (1942)

5 And made a good face to the eorle and sem-blant.

JOHN DE TREVISA, tr., Higden, vii, 25. (1387)

And wher thou hast most mater to compleyne, Make ther good face and glad in port the[e] feine.

JOHN LYDGATE, Troy Book. Bk. ii, l. 4366. (c. 1415)

Though it be a foule lye, set upon it a good face.

JOHN BAYLE, Kynge Johan, l. 1991. (c. 1540)

Set a good face on a bad matter.

HUMPHREY GIFFORD, A Posie of Gilloflowers, p. 44. (1580)

Making a good face of an euill matter.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, Natures Embassie, p. 107. (1621)

Well, madam, put a good face on it.

GEORGE ELIOT, Felix Holt. Ch. 1. (1866)

6 I wyll set a face of brasse on it.

GEORGE WHETSTONE, Promos and Cassandra. Pt. ii, iii, 1. (1578)

Can any face of brass hold longer out?

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 395. (1595)

His face is of brasse, which may be said either ever or never to blush.

THOMAS FULLER, The Profane State. Bk. v, ch. 10. (1642)

More brass in his face than in his kitchen.

JOHN SOMERS, Tracts. Vol. iv, p. 490. (1647)

Put on a bold face for once.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

[He] has brass enough to face the world.

T. T. LYNCH, Self-Improvement, p. 45. (1853)

I admire your brass.

L. K. ANSPACHER, The Unchastened Woman. Act ii. (1915)

7 Lette hym have his will, and he will flie in thy face.

THOMAS WILSON, Arte of Rhetorique, p. 203. (1553)

Let him shew them a Cudgell, they flie in his face.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Apologie Against the Brownists. Sec. 13. (1610)

This was flying in Mr. Alworthy's face.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. iii, ch. 8. (1749)

8 Two-faced men. (διπλοῦς ἄνδρας.)

ZENOBIUS, Adagia, iii, 23. (c. A. D. 130)

Two hedes in one hood at ones.

UNKNOWN, Romaunt of the Rose, l. 7388. (c. 1400)

God lovyd neuer two facys in oon hood.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems, p. 69. (c. 1440)

Two faces in one hode courtly I bere,

Water in one hande, and fyre in the other.

JOHN SKELTON, Magnyfycence, l. 720. (1529)

To beare two faces in one hood.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

These flatterers be wonders perilous felowes, hauynge two faces under one hooode.

THOMAS LEVER, Sermons, p. 99. (1550)

To haue two colours to one meaning, and (as the saying is) to beare two complexions in one face.

GEOFFREY FENTON, Golden Epistles, p. 292. (1575)

He hath two faces vnder one hood. (Lui ha due faccie sotto vna beretta.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firte Fruits, fo. 31. (1578)

If thou be as hot as ye mount Aetna, faine thy selfe as colde as the hil Caucasus, carry two faces in one hood.

JOHN LYLIV, Euphues (Arber), p. 117. (1579)

Icetes had carried two faces in one hood, and . . . was become a Traytor.

SIR THOMAS NORTH, tr., Plutarch, p. 224. (1580)

With false Iudas you can beare two faces in one hooode.

THOMAS DELONEY, Works (1912), p. 462. (1586)

He carrieth two faces under one hood.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 140. (1639)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5327. (1732)

SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 11. (1818)

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 40. (1841)

May the man be damned and never grow fat,
Who wears two faces under one hat.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 451. (1855)

<sup>1</sup> A good poker face is essential; the countenance should not betray the nature of the hand.

UNKNOWN, Encyclopaedia Britannica (ed. ix), xix, 283/2. (1885)

He glanced around the circle and found poker faces.

C. E. MULFORD, Rustlers' Valley. Ch. 10. (1924)

<sup>2</sup> "What is your fortune, my pretty maid?"

"My face is my fortune, kind sir," she said.

UNKNOWN, Where Are You Going, My Pretty Maid? (c. 1850)

Her profligate father told her that her face was her fortune.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 16. (1880)

FACT

<sup>3</sup> Plain matters of fact are terrible stubborn things.

EUSTACE BUDGELL, Liberty and Progress, ii, 76. (1732)

Matters of Fact, as Mr. Budgell somewhere observes, are very stubborn things.

MATTHEW TINDALE, Last Will and Testament, p. 23. (1733)

Facts are stubborn things.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, tr., Gil Blas. Bk. x, ch. 1. (1749) KINGSLEY, Miscellanies, i, 8. (1853)

BLACKMORE, Cradock Nowell. Ch. 51. (1866)

BAILEY, Nobody's Vineyard, p. 262. (1942)

THAYER, Murder Is Out, p. 247. (1942) etc.

Facts are more powerful than arguments.

THOMAS PAINE, Letter to Abbé Raynal. (1782)

But facts are chieftains that winna ding,

And downa be disputed.

ROBERT BURNS, A Dream. St. 4. (1786)

Facts is like jackasses, precious stubborn things.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 48. (1850)

Facts are contrary 'z mules.

LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. ii, No. 4. (1862)

<sup>4</sup> Facts and Figures! Put 'em down!

DICKENS, The Chimes: First Quarter. (1845)

Now what I want is, Facts. Facts alone are wanted in life.

DICKENS, Hard Times. Bk. i, ch. 1. (1854)

In this life we want nothing but facts, Sir; nothing but facts.

DICKENS, Hard Times. Bk. i, ch. 1. A phrase put into the mouth of Thomas Gradgrind.

<sup>5</sup> A popgun is a popgun, though the ancient and honorable of the earth affirm it to be the crack of doom.

R. W. EMERSON: The American Scholar, 1837.

No facts to me are sacred; none are profane.

EMERSON, Essays: Circles. (1841)

No anchor, no cable, no fences avail to keep a fact a fact.

EMERSON, Essays: History. (1841)

A little fact is worth a whole limbo of dreams.

EMERSON, Essays: The Superlative. (1847)

<sup>6</sup> Her taste exact For faultless fact Amounts to a disease.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act ii. (1885)

<sup>7</sup> With fact he mixes fiction. (Veris falsa remiscet.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 151. (c. 20 B. C.)

<sup>8</sup> The fatal futility of Fact.

HENRY JAMES, Preface: The Spoils of Poynton (1907)

<sup>9</sup> So much the worse for the facts.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 96. (1902)

<sup>10</sup> Nothing's more pleasing than to know all the facts. (οὐδὲν γλυκύτερόν ἐστιν ἢ πάντ' εἰδέναι.)

MENANDER, The Arbitrants. Frag. 850 K. (c. 300 B. C.)

<sup>11</sup> I will sing of facts; but some will say that I invented them. (Facta canam; sed erunt qui me finxisse loquantur.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. vi, l. 3. (c. A. D. 8)

<sup>12</sup> The facts speak for themselves. (Res ipsa testist.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 421. (c. 210 B. C.) In Epidicus, l. 713, PLAUTUS varies the form to "Ipsa res dicet tibi."

The facts speak for themselves. (Res ipsa indicat.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 705. (161 B. C.) "Res indicabit" occurs in l. 469, and in Heauton Timorumenos, l. 824, "Ipsa re experibere." The legal proverb is, "Res ipsa loquitur."

<sup>13</sup> Patiokim: In Russia we face facts.

Edstaston: In England, sir, a gentleman never faces any facts if they are unpleasant facts.

Patiokim: In real life, all facts are unpleasant.

BERNARD SHAW, Great Catherine. Sc. 1. (1913)

<sup>14</sup> Don't tell me of facts, I never believe facts; you know Canning said nothing was so fallacious as facts, except figures.

SYDNEY SMITH, (c. 1840) See LADY HOLLAND, Memoir, vol. i, ch. 11.

<sup>15</sup> Facts are facts, as the saying is.

SMOLLETT, Sir Launcelot Greaves. (1762)

But facts are facts and flinch not.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book. Pt. ii, l. 1049. (1868)

<sup>16</sup> It's all-fired stiff, that's a fact.

ANN STEPHENS, High Life in New York, i, 2. (1843)

I don't just know, Joe, that's a fact.

RANDALL PARRISH, My Lady of the South, p. 21. (1909)

<sup>17</sup> Let us look at the facts. (Rem ipsam ptemus.)

TERENCE, Adelphoe, l. 796. (160 B. C.)

1 I went to the woods because I wished . . . to front only the essential facts of life.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 2. (1854)

Have you got any [men] who know the facts of life?

F. & R. LOCKRIDGE, A Pinch of Poison, p. 219. (1941) "Life" in this phrase had become synonymous with "sex."

2 Let us not underrate the value of a fact; it will one day flower into a truth.

H. D. THOREAU, Excursions. (1863)

3 Facts, or what a man believes to be facts, are delightful. . . . Get your facts first, and then you can distort them as much as you please.

MARK TWAIN. (KIPLING, From Sea to Sea. Letter 37.)

Ugly facts are a challenge to beautify them.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 82. (1940)

FAILURE

See also Defeat; Fall; Success and Failure; Victory and Defeat

4 They fail, and they alone, who have not striven.

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Enamored Architect of Airy Rhyme. (c. 1880)

Straight from a mighty bow this truth is driven: "They fail, and they alone, who have not striven."

CLARENCE URM, The Arrow. (c. 1920)

5 May he be not found to be light in the Balance.

ANI, Papyrus: Book of the Dead. Ch. i, l. 43. (c. 4000 B. C.) The reference is to the ceremony which is supposed to take place in the Judgment Hall of Osiris before the deceased can enter into the presence of Osiris, the God of Truth. The heart of the deceased is weighed in a balance against an ostrich feather, emblematic of truth. The scale must balance exactly if the heart is to be found right and true, and its owner sinless. In the papyrus of Ani, there is an elaborate vignette of this scene, showing twelve gods looking on and acting as a sort of jury.

His heart hath been found right by the trial in the Great Balance.

Book of the Dead. Ch. xxx. (c. 4000 B. C.)

Thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting. (Appensus es in statera, et inventus es minus habens.)

Old Testament: Daniel, v. 27. (c. 170 B. C.)

6 Oft do the gods, my child, cause men to fail. You've named the simplest way: just blame the gods.

(πόλλ', ὦ τέκνον, σφάλουσιν ἀνθρώπους θεοί.

τὸ ῥᾶστον εἶπας, αἰτίαςασθαι θεούς.)

EURIPIDES, Archelaus. Fr. 254. (c. 440 B. C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 20D and 1049F

7 Half the failures in life arise from pulling in one's horse as he is leaping.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth. Pt. i. (1827)

8 It is a shameful thing to tarry long and return empty. (αλσχρόν τοι δηρόν τε μένειν κενέον τε νέεσθαι.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ii, l. 298. (c. 850 B. C.) ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, viii, 87, has "Foedum est & mansisse diu, vacuumque redisse," and quotes CICERO, Ad Atticum, bk. vi.

9 John Jones may be described as "one of the has beens."

WILLIAM HONE, Every-Day Book. Vol. ii, col. 820. (1826)

10 A failure is a man who has blundered, but is not able to cash in the experience.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams. (1905)

11 He is good that failed never.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs. (1721)

12 A living failure is better than a dead masterpiece.

BERNARD SHAW, The Adventures of the Black Girl in Her Search for God. (1920)

13 He who never fails will never grow rich.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. (1869) Cited as a proverb.

It is an old saying that failure is the only high-road to success.

GRAHAM BALFOUR, Life of Stevenson, i, 101. (1902) The proverb as usually quoted is, "Failure teaches success." The French say, "On apprend en faillant" (One learns by failing). The Japanese say, "Man learns little from success, but much from failure."

Nearly all my successes are founded on previous failures.

LOUIS N. PARKER, Disraeli. Act ii. (1911)

NO SUCH WORD AS FAIL, see under YOUTH.

FAIR

14 If that course be fair, again and again quoth Bunny to his bear.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 179. (1639)

If that ben't fair, hang fair.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

15 As you find your penniworths, so you speake of the faire.

JAMES MARBE, tr., Celestina (Broadway Translations), p. 70. (1631)

Men speak of the fair as things went with them there.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 157. (1640)

Every man will speak of the fair as his own market has gone in it.

LAURENCE STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. i, ch. 5. (1759)

- 1
Fair is fair, work or play.
SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Lessons on Proverbs,
p. 31. (1710) FAIR PLAY, see under PLAY.
ALL'S FAIR IN LOVE AND WAR, see under LOVE.
2
He need go no farther, the fair is heer;
Bye when ye list, it lasteth ouer year.
UNKNOWN, Scholehouse of Women, 1.348. (1541)
The fayre lasteth all the yere.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1546)
Her fayre lasts all the yeare.
SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Epigrams. Bk. i, No. 72.
(1618)

FAITH

See also Belief, Trust

- 3
Faith is the guide, the womb, the guardian, the begetter and the cherisher of all virtues.
. . . It is the foot on which we find great treasure, the hand with which we grasp happiness.
ASVAGHOSA (?), Mahāyāna: Ratnolka Dhārūni.
(c. A. D. 75)
4
Give to faith the things which belong to faith.
(Da fidei, quae fidei sunt.)
FRANCIS BACON, Of the Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii. (1605)
5
You can do very little with faith, but you can do nothing without it.
SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Note-Books,
p. 336. (a. 1900)
6
As good faith requires. (Ex fide bona.)
CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. iii, sec. 70. (c. 45 B. C.)
7
Faith sees by the ears.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1493. (1732)
8
That Faith is easily wrought which teacheth men to believe well of themselves.
THOMAS FULLER, *The Profane State: The Rigid
Donatists*. Bk. v, ch. 11. (1642)
9
Faith has no merit where human reason supplies the proof. (Fides non habet meritum ubi humana ratio praebet experimentum.)
ST. GREGORY, Homilies. Homily xl, bk. ii, sec.
26. (c. A. D. 300)
To lead a virtuous Life, my Friends,
And get to Heaven in Season,
You've just so much more need of Faith,
As you have less of Reason.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1748.
The Way to see by Faith is to shut the Eye of Reason.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758.
Faith is a higher faculty than reason.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Proem, l. 84. (1839)
Faith branches off from the highroad before reason begins.
WILLIAM JAMES, Thought and Character, ii,
327. (c. 1900)

The ancient principle that the less you understand the greater your faith.

- R. A. J. WALLING, The Spider and the Fly, p.
22. (1940) The "ancient principle" referred to is the Latin proverb, "Maiorem fidem homines adhibent iis quae non intelligunt" (Men have greater faith in those things which they do not understand).
IGNORANCE MOTHER OF DEVOTION, see under IG-NORANCE.
10
Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. (ἐστιν δὲ πίστις ἐλπιζομένων υπόστασις, πραγμάτων ἔλεγχος οὐ βλεπομένων.)
New Testament: Hebrews, xi, 1. (c. A. D. 90)
The Vulgate is, "Est autem fides sperandarum substantia rerum, argumentum non apparentium."
What is faith, unless it is to believe what you do not see? (Quid est fides nisi credere quod non vides?)
ST. AUGUSTINE, Johannis Evangelical Tract.
Ch. 20, sec. 8. (c. A. D. 400)
11
Faith is a gift of God which man can neither give nor take away by promise of rewards or menaces of torture.
THOMAS HOBBS, Leviathan. Ch. 42. (1651)
12
Faith always implies the disbelief of a lesser fact in favor of a greater.
O. W. HOLMES, *The Professor at the Breakfast-
Table*. Ch. 5. (1860)
13
Faith without works is dead. (ἡ πίστις χωρὶς τῶν ἔργων ἀργή ἐστίν.)
New Testament: James, ii, 20. (A. D. 44) The Vulgate is, "Fides sine operibus mortua est."
In ii, 26, the idea is elaborated, "For as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also."
Faith is deed with-ouen werkes.
CHAUCER, *Canterbury Tales: The Second
Nonnes Tale: Prologue*, l. 64. (c. 1389)
Fayth, that without woorkes it is dead.
STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i,
p. 32. (1574) Pettie, tr.
Faith is a great lady, and good works are her attendants.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs. (1659)
14
Faith is often the boast of the man who is too lazy to investigate.
F. M. KNOWLES, A Cheerful Year Book. (1906)
15
If your faith be insufficient, verily, you will receive no faith. (Shin pu tsuh yen 'yiu pu shin.)
LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue).
Sec. 17. Repeated in sec. 23. (c. 550 B. C.)
16
Thy faith hath made thee whole. (ἡ πίστις σου σώσεν σε.)
New Testament: Mark, v. 34. (c. A. D. 55) The Vulgate is, "Fides tua te salvam fecit." See also Luke, viii, 48.

1 If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place; and it shall remove. (ἐὰν ἔχητε πίστιν ὡς κόκκον σινάπεως, ἔρειτε τῷ ὄρει τούτῳ Μεράβα ἔνθεν ἐκεῖ, καὶ μεταβήσεται.)

New Testament: Matthew, xvii, 20. (c. A. D.

65) The Vulgate is, "Si habueritis fidem, sicut granum sinapis, dicetis monti huic, Transi hinc illuc, et transibit." Hence the proverbial, "Faith will move mountains."

2 Faith giveth the victory and overcometh all.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, iii, 139. (c. 622)

3 How many things served us yesterday for articles of faith, which to-day are fables to us! (Combien de choses nous servoient hier d'articles de foy, qui nous sont fables aujourd'hui!)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 26. (1580)

4 Faith is the elbow for a heavy soule to leane upon.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Newes from the Lower End of the Table. (1613)

5 For modes of faith let graceless zealots fight; His can't be wrong whose life is in the right.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 305. (1733)

Quoted by FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1745

6 He that has lost faith, what has he left to live on? (Fidem qui perdit quo rem servat relicuam.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 196. (c. 43 B. C.)

He who loses faith has nothing left to lose. (Fidem qui perdit nihil pote ultra perdere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS. Sententiae. No. 209.

Where decency is, there faith is ever revered. (Ubi cumque pudor est, semper ibi sancta est fides.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS. Sententiae. No. 707. (c. 43 B. C.)

7 It will profit me nothing, for I have no faith in it. (Elle ne me profitera de rien, car je n'y adjouste point de foi.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 42. (1534) The monk's remark when he says that he knows a prayer which guarantees immunity from all firearms.

8 Punic faith. (Punica fides.)

SALLUST, Bellum Jugurthinum. Ch. 108, sec. 3. (c. 40 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, viii, 28, with examples of its use by Livy, Quintus Curtius Rufus, Ausonius, and other historians, who all agreed that the Phoenicians or Carthaginians were full of cunning and trickery. Another proverbial phrase with a similar meaning was "Graeca fides" (Greek faith), also noted by Erasmus. "Attica fides" (Attic faith) was inviolable faith, the opposite of Punic faith.

Punic wiles. (Astuce punique.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 5. (1580)

The Punicque faith is branded by Our enemies.

PHILIP MASSINGER, Believe as You List. Act ii, sc. 2. (1631)

Our Punick faith

Is infamous, and branded to a proverb.

ADDISON, Cato. Act ii, sc. 5. (1712)

French faith became the same among us, as Punic faith had been among the Romans.

ABRAHAM TUCKER, The Light of Nature, ii, 318. (c. 1770)

The coalheaver's faith. (Fides carbonaria.)

UNKNOWN. A medieval proverb, from the anecdote of the coalheaver who said that he believed what the Church believed. When asked what that was, he answered, "What I believe."

9 He wears his faith but as the fashion of his hat; it ever changes with the next block.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, i, 1, 76. (1598)

There are no tricks in plain and simple faith.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, iv, 2, 22. (1599)

10 What faith is there in the faithless? (τίς ὁ ἀρα πίστις ἀπίστω;)

THEOGNIS, Sententiae. (c. 600 B. C.) SPENSER, Shepherds Calender: May: Piers' Emblem.

Much knowledge of things divine escapes us through want of faith. (ἀλλὰ τῶν μὲν θείων τα πολλὰ ἀπιστίῃ διαφυγγάνει μὴ γινώσκεισθαι.)

HERACLEITUS, Fragments. Frag. 116. (c. 500 B. C.)

In the Affairs of this World Men are saved, not by Faith, but by the Want of it.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1754.

11 The mason asks but a narrow shelf to spring his brick from; man requires only an infinitely narrower one to spring the arch of faith from.

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 31 Jan., 1852.

12 Faith is the consolation of the miserable and the terror of the happy. (La Foi est la consolation des misérables, et la terreur des heureux.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 323. (1746)

13 Nowhere is faith secure. (Nusquam tuta fides.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iv, l. 373. (19 B. C.)

14 Faith is the antiseptic of the soul.

WHITMAN, Leaves of Grass: Preface. (1855)

FAITHFULNESS

See also Constancy; Love: Constant; True

15 The beauty of a man is his faithfulness, and his hatefulness is the lying of his lips.

ARIKAR, Teachings. Col. ix, l. 132. (c. 550 B. C.)

16 The Vine-pole proved unfaithful to the Vine. (εἶτα οὖν ἐξηπάτησεν ἡ χάραξ τὴν ἀμπελον.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Wasps, l. 1291. (422 B. C.)

A proverb used with reference to persons who find the support they trusted giving way in the hour of need.

<sup>1</sup> The superior man is intelligently, not blindly, faithful.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xv, ch.36. (c.500 B. C.)

<sup>2</sup> Leal folks never wanted gear.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 231. (1721)

The French say, "Loyauté vaut mieux qu'argent" (Loyalty is worth more than money).

<sup>3</sup> She that hath beene faithlesse to one, will neuer be fa[i]thfull to any.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 58. (1579)

Though Aeneas was too fickle to Dido, yet Troylus was too faithfull to Cressid.

JOHN LYL, Euphues, p. 73.

<sup>4</sup> So spake the Seraph Abdiel faithful found,
Among the faithless, faithful only hee.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 893. (1667)

Abra was ready ere I called her name;
And, though I called another, Abra came.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon, ii, 362. (a. 1721)

<sup>5</sup> Be thou faithful unto death. (γίλον πιστὸς ἄχρι θανάτου.)

New Testament: Revelation, ii, 10. (c. A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Esto fidelis usque ad mortem." The Latin proverb is, "Fidelis ad urnam" (Faithful to the funeral urn). "Semper fidelis" (Always faithful) is another, sometimes with the addition, "Mutare sperno" (I scorn to change).

<sup>6</sup> It is better to be faithful than famous.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Maxim. (c. 1903) See RIIS, Theodore Roosevelt the Citizen, p. 403.

Riis says this was one of Roosevelt's life rules.

<sup>7</sup> Fidelity gained by bribes is overcome by bribes. (Pretio parata vincitur pretio fides.)

SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 287. (c. A. D. 60)

Prosperity asks for fidelity; adversity exacts it. (Fidem secunda poscunt, adversa exigunt.)

SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 934.

<sup>8</sup> Loyalty is the holiest good in the human heart. (Fides sanctissimum humani pectoris bonum est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. 88, 29. (c. A. D. 64)

It is said in Proverb, But lawté [loyalty] All other vertewis ar nocht worth ane fle.

ROBERT HENRYSON, The Morall Fabillis of Esop, p. 195. (c. 1450)

<sup>9</sup> The faithful Achates. (Fidus Achates.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 188, and frequently thereafter. (19 B. C.) "Fidus Achates" became a proverbial phrase for a faithful friend.

<sup>10</sup> Where ye lead, there am I. (Qua ducitis, adsum.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 701. (19 B. C.)

I will sticke as close to thee, as the soale doth to the shoe.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 308. (1580)

<sup>11</sup> Young men want to be faithful and are not; old men want to be faithless and cannot.

OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray. (1891)

FALL

<sup>12</sup> The hardest tumble a man can take is to fall off his own bluff.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Epigram. (c. 1906) Quoted by HABAS, Morals for Moderns, p. 214.

<sup>13</sup> It is easier to descend than to ascend.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains Concerning Britain, p. 326. (1605)

A man may sooner fall than rise.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 54. (1633) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1670)

The proverb is, To go down hill is easy.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. ii, p. 239. (1684)

Easier it is to fall, than rise.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1353. (1732)

<sup>14</sup> He who falls to-day, may rise to-morrow. (El que hoy cae puede levantarse mañana.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 65. (1615)

Some falls are means the happier to arise.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, iv, 2, 403. (1609)

He falls low that cannot rise again.

GEORGE MERITON, Praise of Yorkshire Ale, p. 72. (1685)

He that falls today may be up again tomorrow.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2097. (1732)

We fall to rise, are baffled to fight better.

ROBERT BROWNING, Asolando: Epilogue. (1890)

<sup>15</sup> Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall. (ὥστε ὁ δοκῶν ἐστάναι βλεπέτω μή πέσῃ.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, x, 12. (A. D. 57)

The Vulgate version is, "Itaque qui se existimat stare, videat ne cadat."

<sup>16</sup> A man low-fallen from high estate more sharply feels the strangeness of it than the long unblest. (δταν δ' ἀνὴρ | πράξῃ κακῶς ὑψηλός, εἰς ἀθλίαν | πίπτει κακίῳ τοῦ πάλαι δυσδαίμονος.)

EURIPIDES, Helen, l. 417. (c. 412 B. C.)

Way, tr. Whoever has fallen from his former high estate is, in his calamity, the scorn even of the base. (Quicumque amisit dignitatem pristinam | Ignavis etiam iocus est in casu gravi.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 21, l. 1. (c. 25 B. C.)

<sup>17</sup> Such as clime hastily fall sodainly.

ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart), xii, 158. (1592)

Hasty climbers soon do fall.

SIR EDWARD DYER, My Mind to Me. (a. 1607)

Hasty climbers have sudden falls.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works (Grosart), ii, E9. (1616) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 71. (1670)

<sup>18</sup> Down she falleth backward.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 75. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Dost thou fall upon thy face?
Thou wilt fall backward when thou hast more wit.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 3, 41. (1596)

1 He that stumbles and falls not, mends his pace.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 8. (1640)

A Stumble may prevent a Fall.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 424. (1732)

2 He that is fallen cannot help him that is down.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 755. (1640)

3 I cam to fall in, and not to fall out.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

No foolery to falling out.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Brit.-Eng., p. 27. (1659)

4 Better syt styll than ryse and fall.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

It is better to sit on the ground with little ease, than to ryse and fall with great daunger.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 419. (1580)

You say it is better to sit still then to aryse and fall, and I saye hee that neuer clymbeth for feare of falling, is like vnto him that neuer drincketh for feare of surfeting.

LYL, Euphues and His England, p. 420.

As good sit still as rise up and fall.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 132. (1670)

5 He fell for her, hook, line and sinker.

ANNE HOCKING, Death Loves a Shining Mark, p. 101. (1943)

6 How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning! (Quomodo cecidisti de caelo, lucifer, qui mane oriebaris?)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xiv, 12. (c. 725 B.C.)

How are the mighty fallen! (Quo modo ceciderunt fortes?)

Old Testament: II Samuel, i, 19. (c. 700 B.C.)

Verse 25 has, "How are the mighty fallen in the midst of the battle!" (Quo modo ceciderunt fortes in praelio?)

And great was the fall of it. (καὶ ἦν ἡ πτώσις αὐτῆς μεγάλη.)

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 27. (c. A.D. 70)

The Vulgate is, "Et fuit ruina illius magna."

And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer,

Never to hope again.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, iii, 2, 371. (1612)

7 Who falls for love of God shall rise a star.

BEN JONSON, Underwoods: To Master Colby. (c. 1620)

8 Nowhere to fall but off,

Nowhere to stand but on.

BEN KING, The Pessimist. (1894)

I even permitted "passers by." (God knows there's nowhere to pass but by.)

O. HENRY, A Dinner at —. (1910)

9 Thou louest me well that takest me up before I fall.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. L1. (1583)

Take me not up before I fall.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 336. (1721)

"Do not . . . give an answer before you hear me out."

You take me up before I'm down.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Ye take me up before I fall down.

SCOTT, Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 18. (1818)

10 He who soars not, suffers not by a fall.

MENCIUS, Discourses. (c. 300 B.C.) See BROWN,

Wisdom of the Chinese, p. 78.

Pouertee and poore degree, taken well,

Feedth on this, he that neuer climbde neuer fell.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 12. (1546)

Who never climbed never fell.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 15. (1659)

He that never rose never fell.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 139. (1721)

Never to climb is a good way never to fall. (Ne pas grimper, bon moyen pour ne pas dégringoler.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 376. (1856)

Who never wins can rarely lose,

Who never climbs as rarely falls.

WHITTIER, To James T. Fields. St. 13. (c. 1870)

Those who fly low are not hurt by a fall. (Fei pu kao tieh pu shang.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1941. (1875)

11 Awake, arise, or be for ever fall'n.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 330. (1667)

12 All that shakes does not fall. (Tout ce qui bransle ne tumbé pas.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 9. (1595)

All that shakes falls not.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1020. (1640)

13 Low though I am, I have not fallen so low that I am beneath you too, for beneath you there can be nothing. (Non adeo cecidi, quamvis abiectus, ut infra te quoque sim, inferius quo nihil esse potest.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. v, eleg. 8, l. 1. (c. A.D. 9)

14 And the final event to himself has been that, as he rose like a rocket, he fell like a stick.

THOMAS PAINE, Letter to the Addressers. (c. 1794) Referring to Edmund Burke.

He has risen like a rocket and he will come down like a stick.

JOHN GIBSON LOCKHART, review of the Pickwick Papers, Quarterly Review. (1837) The reference of course is to Dickens—one of the worst prophecies ever made by a reviewer—and the phrase is lifted from Paine. The first time Dickens met Lockhart after the publication of the review, he said, "I will watch for that stick, Mr. Lockhart, and when it comes down, I will break it across your back." It never came down.

He's a classical example of a man who has done an "inverse skyrocket"—all the way from the top of life to the bottom.

H. S. KEELER, The Man with the Wooden Spectacles, p. 35. (1941)

<sup>1</sup> The lowly can fall neither far nor heavily.
(Humilis nec alte cadere nec graviter potest.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 267. (43 B. C.)
He who lies on the ground has no place from which to fall. (Qui iacet in terra, non habet unde cadat.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia. (c. A. D. 125) It is said that this line was quoted by Charles I of England to the French minister, M. de Bellèvre, when the latter was trying to persuade him to seek safety in flight. The minister replied, "Sire, on peut lui faire tomber la tête" (One can make his head fall).

A man on ground resting can not much lower fall.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Mirrouir of Good Manners, p. 46. (1570)

We say, Qui iacet in terra, non habet unde cadat,—He that lies on the ground hath no lower descent to fall to.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, ii, 192. (1629) KVD, Spanish Tragedie, Act. 1, sc. 3. (1592)

He that is prostrate on the floor,
Lies there, whence he can fall no lower.

GEORGE WITHER, Single Si Quis. (1648)

He that is down can fall no lower.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, i, iii, 878. (1663)

He that is down need fear no fall,

He that is low, no pride.

BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. ii. (1684)

He that lieth upon the Ground, can fall no lower.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2217. (1732)

<sup>2</sup> No one by fearing ever reached the top.
(Nemo timendo ad summum pervenit locum.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 471. (c. 43 B. C.) See also under TIMIDITY.

Fain would I climb, yet fear I to fall.

SIR WALTER RALEGH. Scratched with a diamond on a window-pane, either in the presence of Queen Elizabeth, or where she would be certain to see it.

If thy heart fails thee, climb not at all.

QUEEN ELIZABETH. Written by her under Ralegh's line. See FULLER, Worthies of England: Devonshire, p. 261. Ralegh's line is usually quoted, "Fain would I climb but that I fear to fall." See SCOTT, Kenilworth, ch. 17, where the Queen's line is given as, "If thy mind fail thee, do not climb at all."

<sup>3</sup> Who pities not the fallen, let him fear,
Lest, if he fall, no friendly hand be near.

SADI, Gulistan, i, 10. (c. 1258)

<sup>4</sup> All things that rise will fall. (Omniaque orta occidunt.)

SALLUST, Bellum Iugurthinum. Ch. 2, sec. 3. (c. 40 B. C.) The precursor of the modern, "What goes up must come down."

<sup>5</sup> No man is so faint-hearted that he would rather hang in suspense for ever than fall once for all. (Nemo tam timidus est, ut malit semper pendere quam semel cadere.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xxii, sec. 3. (c. 64 A. D.)

There is no man so base but much prefers to fall once, than to dwell always in fear of falling. (Il n'y a homme si couard qui n'ayme mieulx tumber une fois, que de demourer toujours en bransle.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 32. (1580) Montaigne cites this as a saying of Lucilius, who states that it was borrowed by him from Epicurus' Idomeneus.

I had rather fall out of a low window to the ground, then hang in the middle way by a bryer.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 420. (1580)
Far better fall once than be ever falling.

JOHN WEBSTER, The Dutchesse of Malfy. Act v, sc. 2. (1614)

<sup>6</sup> Even at the base of Pompey's statua,
Which all the while ran blood, great Caesar fell.

O, what a fall was there, my countrymen!

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, iii, 2, 193. (1599)

<sup>7</sup> What though success will not attend on all,
Who bravely dares must sometimes risk a fall.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Advice, l. 207.

<sup>8</sup> If you fall by the way, don't stay to get up again.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>9</sup> Humpty-Dumpty sat on a wall,
Humpty-Dumpty had a great fall.

UNKNOWN. Old nursery rhyme. (c. 1750)

Humpty Dumpty sat on a wall;
Humpty busted, and that'll be all.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Phoebe. (1909)

<sup>10</sup> The ephemeral fly bursts from its hole,
With gauzy wings like snow;

So quick the rise, so quick the fall

Of those great men we know.

UNKNOWN, Book of Songs (Shiking). Bk. xiv. Against Frivolous Pursuits. (c. 600 B. C.) Legge, tr. The French say, "La roche Tarpeienne est près du Capitole" (The Tarpeian rock is near the Capitol). Downfall sometimes follows closely on the heels of triumph. It was from the Tarpeian rock, at Rome, that persons convicted of treason were thrown headlong.

II—The Bigger They Come the Harder They Fall

<sup>11</sup> In proportion to the ingenuity is the error.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Metsia, fo. 96b. (c. 450)

<sup>12</sup> From a great height, a great fall. (A gran salida, gran caída.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 279. (1856) A Spanish proverb. The French say, "De grande montée grande chute" (From a great rise a great fall).

<sup>13</sup> The highest tree hath the greatest fall.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 333. (1605) CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 122. (1639)

FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 204 (1732), has, "A great Tree hath a great Fall"; and BAILEY, Dictionary: Tree (1736), "The higher the tree the greater the fall"; which is exactly the Flemish proverb, "Hoe hooger boom, hoe zwaarder val."

The highest Flood always has the lowest Ebb, and the highest Standing, the lowest Fall. . . . The Tallest Tree has the greatest Fall.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p.248. (1709)

<sup>1</sup> For swifter cours cometh thing that is of wighte

Whan it descendeth, than don thinges lighte.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 1385. (c. 1380)

Evere fro the hyer degree that man falleth, the more is he thral.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Persones Tale. Sec. 9. (c. 1389)

They that stand high . . . if they fall, they dash themselves to pieces.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, i, 3, 260. (1592)

The higher up, the greater fall.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 98. (c. 1595) KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 319 (1721) has, "The higher up, the lower fall."

<sup>2</sup> The bigger they come the harder they fall.

ROBERT FITZSIMMONS, pugilist, when asked by a newspaper reporter, before his losing fight with James J. Jeffries at San Francisco, 25 July, 1902, if he thought he could defeat a man so much heavier than himself. The remark is sometimes attributed to James J. Corbett, before his fight with Fitzsimmons, a much taller man, in 1897. Frequently quoted, recently by MITCHELL WILSON, Footsteps Behind Her, p. 157. (1942) PETER CHEYNEY, Farewell to the Admiral, p. 61. (1943)

The harder I'm hit, the higher I bounce.

PATRICIA WENTWORTH, Weekend with Death, p. 51. (1941) The American variant is, "The harder you fall the higher you bounce."

The bigger they think they are, the harder they'll crash.

E. S. GARDNER, The Case of the Smoking Chimney, p. 94. (1943)

<sup>3</sup> Look high, and fall low.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3272. (1732) The greatest Favourites are in the most Danger of Falling.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4572.

<sup>4</sup> 'Tis the lofty towers that fall with heaviest crash. (Celsae graviore case | decidunt turre.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 10, l. 10. (23 B.C.)

Seeking excessive wealth, he was but building up the many stories of a lofty tower whence the fall would be the greater. (Excelsae turris tabulata, unde altior esset casus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 106. (c. A.D. 120)

<sup>5</sup> He is raised the higher that he may fall the heavier. (ἐνάλπειαι γὰρ μείζον, ἵνα μείζον πέσῃ.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag.531K. (c. 300 B.C.)

Great they were, and herein great was their fall. (Graviter magni magno cecidere ibi casu.)

LUCRETIVS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. i, l. 741. (c. 45 B.C.)

The higher it rises, the more liable it is to fall. (Quoque altius surrexerit, opportunius est in occasum.)

SENECA, De Brevitate Vitae. Ch. 17, sec. 4. (c. A.D. 45)

They are raised on high that they may be dashed to pieces with a greater fall. (Tolluntur in altum, | ut lapsu graviore ruant.)

CLAUDIAN, In Rufinum. Bk. i, l. 22. (c. A.D. 395)

A Latin proverb is, "Periculosior casus ab alto" (A fall from a height is the more dangerous).

<sup>6</sup> The older they are the harder they fall.

NIGEL MORLAND, Murder in Wardour Street, p. 167. (1940) Speaking of women and movie actors.

<sup>7</sup> They that soar too high, often fall hard.

WILLIAM PENN, More Fruits of Solitude. No. 96. (1718)

<sup>8</sup> The higher the fool, the greater the fall.

JOHN PLATT, Morality, p. 34. (1878)

<sup>9</sup> When you have climbed out of a deep well, right to the top, the greatest danger of falling is right there at the top. (Quom ex alto puteo sursum ad summum escenderis, | maximum periculum inde esse ab summo ne rusum cadas.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 1150. (c. 200 B.C.)

The higher the position, the greater the fall.

Midrash: Genesis Rabbah, 19. (c. A.D. 500)

Who sitteth hiest moost like to falle soone.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems, p. 24. (c. 1430)

On p. 120, Lydgate has, "Who clymbythe hiest most drefulle is his falle."

Sodyn clymbyng axeth a sodyn fall.

JOHN LYDGATE, tr., Falle of Princes. Bk. ix, l. 1211. (c. 1440) The Times' Whistle, p. 39 (c. 1616) puts this into a jingle, "And 'tis a saying held for true of all, 'A sudden rising hath a sudden fall.'"

The hygher that a man is exalted in his lordship, the more greuous it shalbe to him to fall from the same.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophers, fo. 87. (1477) Quoting Ptolemy.

Who clymbeth high, his ffalle grett is.

Digby Plays (E.E.T.S.), p. 154. (c. 1480)

Who clymbed to hye often hath a fall.

HENRY BRADSHAW, St. Werburge, 40. (1513)

The mair eleuat that ane person be in superfleu digniteis, his fal and ruuyn sal be the hayuar [heavier]. Quanto gradus altior, tanto casus gravior. (By as much as the station is higher, by so much the fall is heavier.)

UNKNOWN, Complaynte of Scotlande, p. 170. (1549)

He falls most lowe, who seekes to climbe most high.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 101. (1574) Pettie, tr.

I have noted some, who the more they strived to shewe themselves, the more did they overthrow themselves, verifying the saying of the Poet,

He which will climbe too high,
doth seeke to catch a fall:

What God hath given to man, let him content himselfe withall.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, ii, 135.

The higher we seeke to climb for ambition, we are subject to a greater fall.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, iv, 164.

By how much the more I loue [see] the high clymbing of thy capacitie, by so much the more I feare thy fall.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 39. (1579)

Falls come not by sitting low, but by climbing too high.

ROBERT GREENE, The Card of Fancie. (1587)

He falls so much the lower, by how much higher he had mounted. (Il en retombe d'autant plus bas, qu'il s'estoit plus hault monté.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 2. (1595)

The ould saynge The higher thou clymeste, and thy foote slyppe, the greater is thy fall.

WILLIAM SPELMAN, Dialogue Between Two Travellers, p. 96. (c. 1597)

He that climbs highest has the greatest fall.

CYRIL TOURNEUR, The Revenger's Tragedy. Act v. (1607)

It is an ancient proverbe, That the higher a man climbes, the greater is his fall.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina, p. 221. (1631)

The higher that I climbe, the greater is my fall.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 7. (1633)

Bear in mind Who highest soar fall farthest.

W. S. GILBERT, Princess Ida. Act ii. (1884)

If he had not risen so high he could not have fallen so low.

FRANCES WINWAR, Oscar Wilde, p. 308. (1940)

III—No Mercy for the Fallen

1 It is inborn in men to trample more upon the fallen. (σύνγονον | βροτοῖσι τὸν πεσόντα λακτίσαι πλέον.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 884. (458 B. C.)

When a man's once down, I perceiue he shall be trod vpon.

BARTEN HOLYDAY, Technogamia, v, 4. (1618)

If a man once fall, all will tread on him.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 115. (1639)

KICK A MAN WHEN HE'S DOWN, see under KICK.

2 To flay a flayed dog. (κύνα δέπειν δεδαμμένην.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Lysistrata, l. 158. (412 B. C.) Aristophanes attributes the proverb to Pherecrates, who is unknown. The Latin is "Canem excoriatum excoriare."

3 When the ox falls, they sharpen their knives.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 32a. (c. 450) See also Lamentations Rabbah, i, 7,

"When the ox falls its slayers are many." A Palestinian proverb.

When the ox falls, there are many that will help to kill him.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 405. (1670)

4 Everyone pushes a falling fence.

GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 359. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

5 Poure not water on a drowned mouse.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 9. (1639) RAY, Proverbs, p. 133. (1670) KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 267 (1721), with the comment, "Never insult over those who are down already"; SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738), and many others.

6 The common saying, that wee must not adde affliction to the afflicted.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 171. (1574) Pettie, tr.

7 When an oak falls, every man becomes a wood-cutter. (ὅπρὸς πεσοῦσης πᾶς ἀνὴρ ξυλεύεται.)

MENANDER, The Flute Girl, l. 123. (c. 300 B. C.)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, i, 86, with the Latin, "Arbore delecta, quivis ligna colligit" (When the tree is fallen, every one gathers firewood). A proverb in many languages. The Italians say, "Dell' albero caduto tutti se fan legna"; the Germans, "Wenn der Baum faellt, so sammelt jedermann Holz;" the French, "Quand l'arbre est déraciné, Chacun y vient à la ramée" (When a tree is uprooted, everyone comes for the branches), or, "Arbre tombé, approvisionnement pour tout le monde" (The fallen tree provides for everybody).

This is a most true saying, That the tree is no sooner fallen downe to the grounde, but everie one is readie to runne upon it with his Hatchette

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 172. (1574) Young, tr.

When the tree is fallen, all go with their hatchet.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 568. (1640)

The Tree is no sooner down, but every one runs for his Hatchet.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4804. (1732)

He quoted a Greek proverb, "that when a great oak falls, every neighbour may scuffle for a faggot."

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature, iii, 444. (1791) Referring to John Preston, Master of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, 1622.

8 Hit him hard; he's got no friends!

DINAH MARIA MULOCK, Woman's Thoughts, p. 156. (1850) "The poor costermonger, who shouts after the little pugilistic sweep the familiar tragio-comic saying."

9 Whan a man is throwen under the foote ones [once], than every man gothe upon hym.

PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoyse, p. 757. (1530)

10 Whoever falls from a once high estate, is the butt even of cowards. (Quicumque amisit dignitatem pristinam, | ignavis etiam iocus est in casu gravi.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fable 21. (c. 25 B. C.)

1
Against a fallen man any rumor is believed.
(Ad calamitatem quilibet rumor valet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 17. (c. 43 B. C.) "All bite the bitten dog."

To crush the suppliant is not valor but barbarity.
(Supplicem hominem opprimere virtus non est sed crudelitas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 690. (c. 43 B. C.)

2
To throw stones on a man in a well. (Lo ching hsia shih.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 899. (1875)

3
When we see a brother goin down hill to Ruin, let us not giv him a push, but let us seeze rite hold of his coat-tails.

ARTEMUS WARD (C. F. BROWNE), Fourth of July Oration. (1859) Referring to the proverb, "When a man is going down hill, everyone gives him a push."

HE THAT'S DOWN, DOWN WITH HIM, see under DOWN.

FALSE

4
Falsnes brewes bale [mischief].

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, Chronicle, p. 55. (c. 1330)

5
It must needs be, that of those two contrarie propositions, the one be false.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i. p. 17. (1574) Pettie, tr.

6
False in one thing, false in all. (Falsus in uno, falsus in omni.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 119. (1869) "A cracked bell can never sound well."

False with one can be false with two.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, iii, 463. (1902)

7
False folk should have many witnesses.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 104. (1721)
"For otherways they will deny their bargain."

8
There is a false modesty which is vanity; a false glory which is levity; a false grandeur which is meanness; a false virtue which is hypocrisy; a false wisdom which is prudery.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Des Femmes. (1688)

9
There is mony a fair thing fu' fa'se.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 259. (1678)
See also under APPEARANCE.

10
A false abstract cometh from a false concrete.
SKELTON, Bowge of Courte, l. 439. (c. 1520)

11
All is not false which seems at first a lie.
SOUTHEY, St. Gualberto. St. 28. (a. 1843)

II—Proverbial Comparisons

12
He found all to be false as hell.

EARL OF ARRAN, Lauderdale Papers, iii, 65. (1678)

Ye are false as hell.

THOMAS D'URFEY, The Virtuous Wife. Act iv, sc. 3. (1680)

The accusation is as false as hell.

LORD ELLENBOROUGH, Speech, House of Lords, 22 Mar., 1813.

His passion told him every hour . . . that she was false as hell.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, The Golden Lion of Granpère. Ch. 11. (1872)

13
"False as a bulletin," became a proverb in Napoleon's time.

THOMAS CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero-Worship. Ch. 6. (1840)

14
She is of trouth as fals, as God is trew.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)
As false as fayre.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)
More false than fair.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, tr., Orlando Furioso. Canto vi, st. 14. (1591)

Unchast and false, as ever water wet.

HARRINGTON, Orlando Furioso, xvi, 15.

15
As false as a fox.

HOLLAND, Cheshire Glossary, p. 445. (1886)

16
Magnificently false. (Splendide mendax.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 11, l. 35. (23 B. C.)

The deuil is no falsar then is hee.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 139, has the phrase, "As false as the devil." (1639)

17
As false as a Scot.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 204. (1670)

SCOTT (The Talsman, ch. 15) has, "It is enough of folly . . . to have intrusted your banner to a Scot—said I not they were ever fair and false?"

18
I am falsar than vows made in wine.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iii, 5, 73. (1600)

As false as dicers' oaths.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 4, 45. (1600)

As false

As air, as water, wind, or sandy earth,
As fox to lamb, as wolf to heifer's calf,
Pard to the hind, or stepdame to her son;
Yea, let them say, to stick the heart of falsehood.
As false as Cressid.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus, iii, 2, 198. (1601)

She was false as water.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, v, 2, 134. (1605)

FALSEHOOD

See also Lies and Lying

19
Speak not to a man in falsehood, the abomination of God.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. 13, l. 15. (c. 700 B. C.) Griffith, tr.

Hated of God is the falsifier of words, his great abomination is the dissembler.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live, 14, 2.

- 1
Be wele ware of falsehode in felawship.
GEORGE ASHBY, Poems, p. 26. (c. 1470)
Falsehod in felowshyp is my sworne brother.
JOHN SKELTON, Magnyfycence, l. 723. (1529)
If he plaie falsehed in felowship, plaie yee.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)
Ther is falsehood in felowship.
JOHN LYLly, Euphues (Arber), p. 48. (1579)
CAMDEN, Remains, p. 313. (1605) FULLER,
Gnomologia. No. 4894. (1732)
What is there in Fraunce to bee learned more than in England, but falshood in fellowship?
THOMAS NASHE, The Unfortunate Traveller, p.
95. (1594)
- 2
Falsehood never made a fair hinder end.
DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 32 (a.
1598)
Falsehood stings those who meddle with it. . . .
The Scotch say, "Frost and fausehood hae baith a dirty wa'-gang."
F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 206. (1902)
- 3
There is a difference between telling a falsehood and lying. One who lies is not himself deceived, but tries to deceive another; he who tells a falsehood is himself deceived. . . . A good man ought to take pains not to lie; a wise man, not to tell what is false. (Vir bonus praestare debet ne mentiatur, prudens, ne mendacium dicat.)
PUBLIUS NIGIDIUS, Fragments. No. 49. (c. 60
B. C.) See AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae, xi, 11.
- 4
Falsehood playes a larger part in the world than truth.
SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, *Newes of My Morning
Worke*. (1613)
- 5
Even false becomes true when a superior says
so. (Falsum etiam est verum quod constituit superior.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 228. (c. 43 B. C.)
Falsehood for safety's sake is truth. (Verum est quod pro salute fit mendacium).
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 706.
Falsehood is only an inferior sort of truth.
H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Thursday. (1849)
- 6
The uttering of a falsehood is like a violent blow: even should the wound be healed, the scar will remain.
SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Maxim 84. (c. 1258)
- 7
O what a goodly outside falsehood hath!
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, i, 3,
103. (1597) See under APPEARANCE.
- 8
A falsehood uttered for the sake of a righteous end ceaseth to be a falsehood.
UNKNOWN, Mahabharata: Karna Parva. Sec.
69. (c. 200 B. C.)

FAME

See also Death and Fame; Name and Fame; Reputation

I—Fame: What It Is

- 9
Fame is like a River, that beareth up Things
Light and Swolne, and Drownes Things
waightly and Solide.
FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Praise. (1612)
Fame, like Water, bears up the lighter things,
And lets the weighty sink.
SIR SAMUEL TUKE, The Adventures of Five Hours. Act ii. (1663)
- 10
Fame is the mother of virtue. (τὴν δόξαν ἀρετῶν μήτέρα εἶναι.)
BION, Aphorism. (c. 100 B. C.) See DIOGENES
LAERTIUS, Bion. Bk. iv, sec. 48.
Fame is the shadow of Virtue. (Gloria umbra virtutis est.)
SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxix, sec. 13. (c.
A. D. 65)
Fame is a thin Shadow of Eternity.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1496. (1732)
- 11
Fame is the perfume of heroic deeds.
H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 353.
(1855) Quoting Socrates.
Fame, like a river, is narrowest at its source and broadest afar off.
H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 353.
- 12
Fame is a liar, and was never other.
WILLIAM BROWNE, Shepherd's Pipe. (1614)
Common fame is but a common liar.
EDWARD WARD, Nuptial Dialogues, i, 214. (1710)
Common fame, Magnus considered, was a common liar.
WALTER SCOTT, The Pirate. Ch. 39. (1821)
- 13
Fame is the thirst of youth.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 112. (1812)
- 14
Fame is an undertaker that pays but little attention to the living, but bedizens the dead, furnishes out their funerals, and follows them to the grave.
C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 527. (1820)
- 15
The splendors of earthly fame are but a wind,
That in the same direction lasts not long.
(Non è il mondan romore altro che un fiato di vento, che or vien quinci ed or vien quindi, e muta nome, perchè muta lato.)
DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto xi, l. 100 (c. 1300)
Fame is but winde.
THOMAS CORVAT, Crudities, i, 60. (1611)
Fame they tell you is air; but without air there is no life for any; without fame there is none for the best.
W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: The Ciceros. (1853)
- 16
Fame is the beauty-parlor of the dead.
BENJAMIN DECASSERES, Fantasia Impromptu.
(1933)

1 Fame is a food that dead men eat.

AUSTIN DOBSON, Fame Is a Food. (1877)

Fame is a fickle food Upon a shifting plate.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. v, No. 4. (c. 1880)

2 Fame is a magnifying Glass.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1495. (1732)

Fame is but the Breath of the People; and that often unwholesome. Fame is in the keeping of the Mob.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 1497-8.

3 Fame is a Bubble the Reserv'd enjoy,
Who strive to grasp it, as they touch, destroy.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1750.

What is fame? an empty bubble.

JAMES GRAINGER, Ode to Solitude, l. 96. (1760)

4 And what after all is everlasting fame? Altogether vanity. (τί δὲ καὶ ἔστιν ὅλως τὸ ἀελ. μνηστον; ὅλον κενόν.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iv, sec. 33. (C. A. D. 174)

All is ephemeral,—fame as well as the famous. (πάν ἐφήμερον, καὶ τὸ μνημονεύον καὶ τὸ μνημονεύμενον.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations, iv, 35. Literally, "The rememberer, as well as the remembered."

5 Fame is no plant that grows on mortal soil.

JOHN MILTON, Lycidas, l. 78. (1637)

6 Fame beeyng a tatlyng Goddesse.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Tereus and Progne, p. 42. (1576) Perhaps original with Pettie, though he may have got his inspiration from Vergil's Fama. See Aeneid, iv, 174; viii, 554.

7 Fame is a bugle call

Blown past a crumbling wall.

LIZETTE WOODWORTH REESE, Taps. (c. 1920)

8 For, what is understood by Fame

Beside the getting of a Name?

SWIFT, The Description of a Salamander, l. 13. (1705)

Fame is nothing but an empty name.

CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. i, l. 230. (1762)

Fame is but an inscription on a grave.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: On the Writing of Essays. (1863)

A little heap of dust, A little streak of rust,

A stone without a name—Lo! hero, sword, and fame!

AMBROSE BIERCE, Fame. (1898)

9 Fame, which by the sweetness of her voice, enchants ambitious men and appears so ravishing, is merely an echo, a dream, or rather the shadow of a dream, which fleets like the wind and vanishes in a moment.

(La fama che invaghisce a un dolce suono voi superbi mortali, e par sì bella, è un'eco, un sogno, anzi del sogno un'ombra, ch'ad ogni vento si dilegua e sgombra.)

TORQUATO TASSO, La Gerusalemme Liberata. Canto xiv, st. 63. (1581) Quoted by Montaigne, i, 41.

Fame's but a hollow echo.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, History of the World. Bk. v, ch. 6. (1614)

Fame is the echo of actions.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Fame. (1642)

II—Fame: Aphorisms

10 Let us now praise famous men. (ἀνέσωμεν δὴ ἀνδρας ἐνδόξους.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xlv, 1. (c. 190 B. C.) The Vulgate version is, "Laudemus viros gloriosos."

11 Herostratus lives that burnt the Temple of Diana; he is almost lost that built it.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. 5. (1658)

The aspiring youth that fired the Ephesian dome Outlives, in fame, the pious fool that rais'd it.

CIBBER, Richard III (alt.). Act iii, sc. 1. (1700)

12 I awoke one morning and found myself famous.

LORD BYRON, Remark, after the publication of the first two cantos of Childe Harold's Pilgrimage, March, 1812. See MOORE, Memo-randa from Life. Ch. 14.

He was one of those few men who awake one day and find themselves famous.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 78. (1880)

13 Upon the very books in which philosophers bid us scorn fame, they inscribe their names. (Ipsi illi philosophi etiam illis libellis, quos de contemnenda gloria scribunt, nomen suum inscribunt.)

CICERO, Pro Archia Poeta. Ch. 11, sec. 26. (62 B. C.) See also GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, ii, 217. (1574)

Though they [philosophers] write contemptu gloriae, yet as Heiron observes, they will put their names to their books.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. iii, subs. 14. (1621)

Even those who write against fame wish for the fame of having written well. (Ceux qui écrivent contre la gloire veulent avoir la gloire d'avoir bien écrit.)

BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. i, art. v, sec. 3. (c. 1660)

All men are fond of glory, and even those philosophers who write against that noble profession prefix their names to their own works.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: Fame Contemned. (1791)

The hater of property and of government takes care to have his warranty deed recorded, and the book written against Fame and learning has the author's name on the title-page.

R. W. EMERSON, Journal, 1857.

1 Only to myself do I owe my fame. (Je ne dois qu'à moi seul toute ma renommée.)

CORNEILLE, Excuse à Ariste, l. 50. (c. 1650)

2 Fame, like man, will grow white as it grows old.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, (c. 1660) See SAMUEL

JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Cowley.

Thy fame, like men, the older it doth grow,
Will of itself turn whiter too.

THOMAS SPRAT, To the Happy Memory of the Late Lord Protector, l. 5. (c. 1700)

3 For not on downy plumes, nor under shade
Of canopy reposing, fame is won.

(Chè, seggendo in piuma,

In fama non si vien, nè sotto coltre.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxiv, l. 47. (c. 1300)

Sloth views the towers of fame with envious eyes,
Desirous still, still impotent to rise.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, The Judgement of Hercules, l. 436. (1741)

4 Who soweth vertue, reapeth fame, and true fame ouercometh death. (Chi semina virtù, racoglie fama, & vera fama supera la morte.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 28. (1578)

5 There have been as great souls unknown to fame as any of the most famous.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

6 Fame sometimes hath created something of nothing. . . .

Fame often makes a great deal of a little.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Fame.
(1642)

Fame is not just. She never finely or discriminatingly praises, but coarsely hurrahs.

H. D. THOREAU, Summer, 4 June, 1854.

7 Fame hath much of the scold in her; the best way to silence her is to be silent.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Fame.
(1642)

8 A good Fame is better than a good Face.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 150. (1732)

See also under REPUTATION.

All Fame is dangerous: Good, bringeth Envy;
Bad, Shame.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 513.

From Fame to Infamy is a beaten Road.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1628.

Beaten hard because so many travel it.

9 Fame transacts business only with principals.
(La fama siempre va con los primeros.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim
62. (1647)

10 There are many ways to fame.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 541. (1640)

11 Fame usually comes to those who are thinking about something else.—very rarely to those who say to themselves, "Go to, now, let us be a celebrated individual!"

O. W. HOLMES, *The Autocrat of the Breakfast-
Table*. Ch. 12. (1858)

12 Fame grows like a tree with hidden life.
(Crescit occulto velut arbor aevo | fama.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 12, l. 45. (23 B. C.)

13 It is a wretched thing to lean on the fame of others. (Miserum est aliorum incumbere famae.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. viii, l. 76. (c. A. D. 120)

14 Honest fame awaits the truly good. (Veris magna paratur fama bonis.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ix, l. 593. (c. A. D. 60)

15 Who is there among men but wishes for riches and honor and seeks to monopolize the conspicuous mound?

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, pt. ii, ch. 10, sec.
6. (c. 300 B. C.)

16 The first in danger, as the first in fame.

POPE, tr., Homer's Iliad. Bk. vi, l. 637. (1715)

Great friend of Liberty! in Kings a name
Above all Greek, above all Roman fame.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 25. (1732) Referring to George II!

17 Common fame is seldom to blame.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 88. (1670)

Cited by KELLY (Scottish Proverbs, p. 80) with the comment, "A man will seldom be under an universal ill report, unless he has given some occasion for it." The Germans say, "Gemein Geplär ist nie ganz leer" (Common fame is never quite unfounded); the Dutch, "Gemeen gerucht is zelden gelogen"
(Common fame seldom lies).

Common fame is mostly to blame.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6120. (1732)

Common Fame hath a Blister on its Tongue.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1127.

I trust a great deal to common fame, as we all must. If a man has good corn, or wood, or boards, or pigs, to sell, or can make better chairs or knives, crucibles, or church organs, than anybody else, you will find a broad, hard-beaten road to his house, though it be in the woods.

R. W. EMERSON, Common Fame: Journals, 1855. Vol. viii, p. 528. The genesis of the famous "mouse-trap" quotation. In April, 1871, Emerson delivered a series of lectures at San Francisco and Oakland, California.
One of his auditors was Mrs. Sarah S. B.
Yule, and after one of the lectures she wrote in her "handbook," as part of what she had heard, the following: "If a man can write a better book, preach a better sermon, or make a better mouse-trap, than his neighbor, though he builds his house in the woods, the world will make a beaten path to his door."
In 1889, Mrs. Yule was one of the editors of a little book called Borrowings, compiled by the ladies of the First Unitarian Church of Oakland, and printed to raise some money for the church. On p. 38, the above quotation appeared, credited simply "Emerson." The word "mouse-trap" was so striking that there was at once a thorough search of Emerson's works for it, but it has never been found. It is almost certainly a verbal variation, a happy thought which came to Emerson at the moment of delivery. See STEVENSON, Famous Single Poems (rev. ed.), for a full history of the quotation.

<sup>1</sup> He is not dead whose renomme and fame lastith.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophirs, fo. 108. (1477)

<sup>2</sup> Now, though late, redeem thy name, And glorify what else is damned to fame.

RICHARD SAVAGE, Character of the Rev. James Foster, l. 43. (c. 1726)

All crowd, who foremost shall be damn'd to Fame. POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iii, l. 158. (1728)

Damn'd to everlasting fame.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 284. (1732)

<sup>3</sup> True fame will never be in Chance's gift. (Non erunt honores umquam fortuiti muneris.)

SOLON, Sententiae. (c. 600 B. C.) See AUSONIUS (?), Septem Sapientum Sententiae, l. 31.

<sup>4</sup> His very negligence of fame increased his fame. (Ipsa dissimulatione famae famam auxit.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 18. (A. D. 98)

<sup>5</sup> Love of fame is the last weakness which even the wise resign. (Etiam sapientibus cupido gloriae novissima exiuit.)

TACITUS, Historiae. Bk. iv, sec. 6. (c. A. D. 109) Of the unreasoning humors of mankind, it seems that fame is the one which even philosophers have rid themselves of last and with most reluctance. (Des humeurs desraisonnables des hommes, il semble que les philosophes memes se desfacent plus tard et plus envy de cette cy que de nulle aultre.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 41. (1580)

Though the desire of fame be the last weakness Wise men put off.

PHILIP MASSINGER, A Very Woman. Act iii, sc. 4. (1634)

Read but ore the stories

Of men most fam'd for courage or for counsaile, And you shall find that the desire of glory (That last infirmity of noble minds)

Was the last frailty wise men e'er putt off.

JOHN FLETCHER (?), Sir John van Olden Barnavell. Act i, sc. 1. (1619)

Fame is the spur that the clear spirit doth raise (That last infirmity of Noble mind)

To scorn delights, and live laborious dayes.

JOHN MILTON, Lycidas, l. 70. (1637) Swinburne called the lines in parenthesis "The most astonishing coincidence in the whole range of literature."

He was ambitious—who among us is ashamed to own that "last infirmity of noble minds"?

TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers. Ch. 1. (1857)

<sup>6</sup> Suffer me to barter death for fame. (Letumque sinas pro laude pacisci.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xii, l. 49. (19 B. C.)

No hero to me is the man who wins fame by the easy shedding of his blood; give me the man who can win praise without dying. (Nolo virum facili redemit qui sanguine famam; | hunc volo, laudari qui sine morte potest.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, epig. 8. (A. D. 85)

If it is for fame that men do brave actions, they are only silly fellows after all.

R. L. STEVENSON, The English Admirals. (1887)

<sup>7</sup> I must essay a path whereby I, too, may rise from earth and fly victorious on the lips of men. (Temptanda via est, qua me quoque possim | tollere humo victorque virum volitare per ora.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iii, l. 8. (29 B. C.)

My quest is for everlasting fame, that I may be celebrated forever throughout the whole earth. (Mihi fama perennis | quaeritur, in toto semper ut orbe canar.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 15, l. 7. (c. 13 B. C.)

The desire of fame delights me, and has grown with my renown. (Nam iuvat, et studium famae mihi crevit honore.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 393. (c. 1 B. C.)

<sup>8</sup> She [Fame] walks on the earth, and her head is concealed in the clouds. (Ingrediturque solo, et caput inter nubila condit.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iv, l. 177. (19 B. C.)

He fired his soul with love of future fame. (Incenditque animum famae venientis amore.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 889. (19 B. C.)

<sup>9</sup> The good man is not famous; if he be famous, he is not really good, since fame is nothing but falsehood.

YANG CHU, Fame and Vanity. (c. 300 B. C.)

FAMILIARITY

<sup>10</sup>

Beauty soon grows familiar to the lover, Fades in his eye, and palls upon the sense.

ADDISON, Cato. Act i, sc. 4, l. 149. (1712)

A maid oft seen, and a gown oft worn Are disesteem'd and held in scorn.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 294. (1855)

Staled by frequency, shrunk by usage into commonest commonplace!

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall Sixty Years After. St. 38. (1886)

<sup>11</sup>

Familiarity makes even the most terrible things easy of approach. (ἡ συνήθεια καὶ τὰ φοβερά τῶν πραγμάτων εὐπρόσιτα ποιεῖ.)

ÆSOP, Fables: The Fox and the Lion. (c. 570 B. C.) The first time the fox saw the lion it was badly frightened, the second time it was still frightened a little, but the third time took courage and came up to talk to the lion. The same moral follows the fable of The Camel. The first time men saw a camel they fled, but soon finding it harmless, they turned it over to boys to drive. LA FONTAINE gives this fable, Le Chameau et les Batons Flottants. Bk. iv, fab. 10, with the moral, "L'accoutumance ainsi nous rend tout familier" (Custom makes everything familiar to us).

Nothing is so great or so wonderful but all men, little by little, abate their wonder. (Nil adeo magnum neque tam mirabile quicquam, quod non paulatim minuant mirari omnes.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. ii, l. 1028. (c. 45 B. C.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 22.

A man does not wonder at what he sees frequently, even though he be ignorant of the cause. (Quod crebro videt, non miratur, etiamsi cur fiat nescit.)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. ii, sec. 22. (44 B. C.) The pauper hungers without noticing it.

Babylonian Talmud: Megillah, fo. 7b. (c. 450) Too much levity lessens respect.

SALOMON IBN GABRIOL, Mibhar ha-Penimim (Choice of Pearls). No. 234. (c. 1050) "Levity annihilates respect, as fire destroys wood." (Ethics, ii, 13.) "If you would insure respect, beware of levity." (Abboth de Rabbi Nathan, ch. 26.)

Quermyche homeliness with a thing gendrieth dis-pising toward the same thing.

REGINALD PECOCK, The Repressor of Ouer Much Blaming of the Clergy, p. 184. (c. 1449)

Near acquaintance doth diminish reverent fear.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk. iii. (c. 1580)

Over-greet homliness engendreth dispreysinge.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 55. (c. 1387)

Over great familiaritie genders despite.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 82. (c. 1595)

Sweets grown common lose their dear delight.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cii. (1609)

<sup>1</sup> Intimacy lessens fame. (Minuit praesentia famam.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. ii, p. 124. (1814)

<sup>2</sup> Those near the temple insult the god. (Chin miao 'chi shên.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 183. (1872)

<sup>3</sup> Though familiarity may not breed contempt, it takes the edge of admiration.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 2. (1821)

<sup>4</sup> Where diddest thou learne that . . . being suffered to be familiar thou shouldest waxe haile fellowe?

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 371. (1580)

Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 3, 61. (1600)

Avoid familiarities in intercourse. Neither use them nor permit them. The stars keep their brilliance by not making themselves common. Every familiarity breeds contempt. (Toda humanidad facillta el desprecio.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 177. (1647)

<sup>5</sup> Familiarity begets boldness.

SHAKERLEY MARMION, Antiquary. Act i. (1641)

<sup>6</sup> Too much familiarity breeds contempt. (Nimia familiaritas parit contemptum.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 463. (c. 43 B. C.) Cited by ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs, i, 49, with the comment, "From three excellent endowments, says Plutarch, three of the worst of our affections are produced, for truth begets hatred, familiarity contempt, and success envy." Pope Innocent III combined two proverbs in one when he wrote (c. 1200), "Obsequium amicos, veritas odium, familiaritas contemptum parit" (Subservience begets friends, truth hatred, familiarity contempt), the first two clauses being from Terence. Angelo Poliziano gives the proverb in a slightly different form, "Veritas odium, prosperitas superbiam, securitas periculum, familiaritas contemptum, id est, parit" (Truth breeds hatred, prosperity pride, safety danger, familiarity contempt). GABRIEL HARVEY, Works, i, 293, has still a third version, "Truth begetteth hatred; Virtue, envy; Familiaritie contempt." (1593)

Familiarity with danger gives contempt for danger. (Contemptum periculorum assiduitas periclitandi dabit.)

SENECA, De Providentia. Ch. 4, sec. 12. (c. A. D. 45) There are those who disdain whatever has become too familiar (Sunt enim qui fastidiant quicquid proprius adierunt.)

SENECA, De Tranquillitate Animi. Ch. 17, sec. 2. (c. A. D. 60)

Contempt born of familiarity. (Vitato assiduitatis fastidio.)

SUETONIUS, Lives of the Twelve Caesars: Tiberius. Ch. x, sec. 1. (A. D. 120)

Frequent use breeds contempt, while rarity wins admiration. (Parit enim conversatio contemptum, raritas conciliat ipsis rebus admirationem.)

APULEIUS, De Deo Socratis. (c. A. D. 155)

Lest familiarity should breed contempt. (ἐκ τοῦ δημῶδους εὐκαταφρόνητον ἦ.)

DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Heracleitus. Bk. ix, sec. 6. (c. A. D. 230)

Familiaritie breedethe contempt.

ALAIN DE L'ISLE, Satires. (c. 1160) See WRIGHT, Minor Anglo-Latin Satirists. Ser. ii, p. 454

Earliest known use of the phrase in English

Familiaritye bringeth contempt.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms (1548)

Too much familiaritie would breede contempte.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 105. (1574) Pettie, tr. PETTIE, Pettie Palace, p. 216. (1576) GREENE, The Card of Fancie. (1587)

I hope upon familiarity will grow more contempt. SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, i, 1, 256. (1601)

Greater familiarity on his side might have bred contempt.

SMOLLETT, Adventures of an Atom, p.148. (1769)
Familiarity breeds contempt. (La familiarité engendre le mépris.)

P. J. LE ROUX, Dictionnaire Comique, i, 450. (1786) The Spanish form is, "La mucha familiaridad acarrea menosprecio." Mirabeau, in his Letters, speaks of the "Don terrible de la familiarité" (The terrible gift of familiarity).

Perhaps if I had heard Tennyson talking every day, I shouldn't read Tennyson. Familiarity does breed contempt.

TROLOPE, He Knew He Was Right, p.311. (1869)
Familiarity breeds contempt—and children.

MARK TWAIN, Unpublished Diaries. (c. 1900)

FAMILY

See also Home, Kin

1 There are some other that account Wife and Children but as Bills of charges.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Marriage. (1597)
Wife and children are bills of charges.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 5. (1659) RAY, Proverbs, p. 29. (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5741. (1732)

2 We visited an exhibition [at Coventry] called the "Happy Family."

P. T. BARNUM, Sixty Years' Recollections, p. 120. (1844) It was a collection of birds and animals living happily together in one cage.

3 'T is a Shame that your Family is an Honour to you! You ought to be an Honour to your Family.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1750.

4 A small Family is soon provided for.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 405. (1732)

5 He that hath a wife and children, wants not business.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 780. (1640) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2157. (1732)

He that hath a Wife and Children, must not sit with his Fingers in his Mouth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2158. (1732)
Depend on't, he who has a wife and bairns will never be short of care to carry.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 72. (1880)

6 There's no family but there's a whore or a knave in it.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Span.-Eng., p. 1. (1659) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1678)

It is poor kin that has neither whore nor thief in it.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 186. (1721)

He that has no Fools, Knaves, nor Beggars in his Family, was begot by a Flash of Lightning.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2144. (1732)

The Chinese say, "Nobody's family can hang out the sign, 'Nothing the matter here.'"

7 We have given so many hostages to fortune. (Dedimus tot pignora fatis.)

LUCIAN, Mortuorum Dialogi. No. vii, l. 662. (C. A. D. 175)

He that hath Wife and Children hath given Hostages to Fortune.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Marriage and the Single Life. (1597)

For what secures the civil life

But pawns of children, and a wife?

That lie, like hostages, at stake,

To pay for all men undertake.

BUTLER, Hudibras, iii, i, 809. (1678)

Wife and Children are Hostages given to Fortune.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5742. (1732)
No hostages to fortune.

LANGDON MITCHELL, The New York Idea. Act i. (1906)

8 There is scarcely less vexation in the government of a family than of an entire state. (Il n'y a gueres moins de torment au gouvernement d'une famille, que d'un estat entier.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 38. (1580) The Japanese say, "It is easier to rule a kingdom than a family."

9 He has far to flee who flees from his own family. (Longe fugit, quisquis suos fugit.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 43. (C. A. D. 60)

10 When families quarrel, outsiders laugh. (Chia li pu 'ho wai jên ch'i.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 376. (1875)

11 He that loves not his wife and children, feeds a lioness at home, and broods a nest of sorrow.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Sermons. Vol. i, p. 236. (c. 1660)

12 No roof can cover two families.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 484. (1940) See also under RIVALRY.

13 A kingdom is a nest of families, and a family a small kingdom.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Subjection. (1839)

14 Where can one better be than in the bosom of one's family? (Où peut-on être mieux qu'au sein de sa famille?)

UNKNOWN. A French song, ironically enough the favorite of Napoleon.

FAMINE

See also Hunger

15 A Melian famine. (λιμὴ Μηλίων.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Birds, l. 186. (414 B. C.)

Referring to the extremities to which the inhabitants of Melos were reduced during its siege, ten or twelve months before the production of the play. See THUCYDIDES, v, 89-116. Proverbial for a devastating famine.

1 Seven years lasted the famine, but it came not to the artisan's door.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 29a. (c. 450) See also under INDUSTRY, WORK.

2 All's good in a Famine.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 545. (1732)

3 They that die by famine die by inches.

MATTHEW HENRY, Commentaries. Psalm lix. (1710)

4 It is a wicked thing to make a dearth one's garner.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 897. (1640)

5 Famine ends famine.

JONSON, Explorata: Amor Nummi. (c. 1630)

6 A famine in England begins at the horse-manger.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 37. (1678)

After a famine in the stall [a bad hay crop], comes in famine in the hall.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 363. (1678)

FANCY

See also Imagination

7 "Fancy is free," quoth Peg.

JOHN ARBUTHNOT, John Bull. Pt. iii, ch. 3. (1712)

8 Fancy is a fool.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 6. (1633)

9 Chew on fair fancy's food, nor deem unmeet I will not with a bitter chase the sweet.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, tr., Orlando Furioso. Canto iii, st. 62. (1591)

Chewing the food of sweet and bitter fancy.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iv, 3, 102. (1600)

10 Fancy may kill or cure.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 111. (1721)

"There are many stories of the power of the imagination to do good or evil." FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1500. (1732)

11 Fancy may bould [sift] bran, and make ye take it floure.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

Fancy may bould bran till it be floure.

JOHN DAVIES, The Scourge of Folly. Prov. 358. (1611)

Fancy may bould bran and think it flour.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 88. (1670)

12 All power of fancy over reason is a degree of insanity.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 44. (1759)

13 Fancy flees before the wind.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 105. (1721)

14 To giue reason for fancie were to weigh the fire, and measure the winde.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 104. (1579)

Fancie, the glasse of pestilence.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 107.

15 Fancy surpasses beauty.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 136. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1501. (1732)

FAREWELL

See also Parting

16 All the milk is gone. Farewell frost!

WILLIAM BULLEIN, A Dialogue against the Fever Pestilence, p. 72. (1564) Said sardonically.

So farewell frost, my fortune naught me cost.

JOHN LYLY, Mother Bombie. Act ii, sc. 3. (1592)

Farewell frost; nothing got, nor nothing lost.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 174. (1670)

Farewell frost, fair weather next.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 104. (1721)

"Spoken when they go off, whom we are glad to part with."

17 Buttermilk to fare-you-well.

G. W. CABLE, Dr. Sevier. Ch. 54. (1884)

The little cuss has got me bluffed to a fare-you-well.

W. McL. RAINE, Bucky O'Connor, p. 77. (1910)

We're double-crossed to a fare-you-well.

JACK LONDON, The Valley of the Moon, ii, 7. (1913)

18 For ever, brother, hail and farewell. (In perpetuum, frater, ave atque vale.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode ci, l. 10. (c. 57 B. C.) Ave, Salve, Vale, are the titles of three books of reminiscences by George Moore. (1911, 1912, 1914)

Live and farewell. (Vive valeque.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 5, l. 110. (35 B. C.)
Long life and good health to you.

For ever, and for ever, farewell, Cassius!

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, v, 1, 117. (1599)

19 And singe, "Go, farewell feldefare."

CHAUCER (?), The Romaunt of the Rose, l. 5510. (c. 1365) "Farewell fieldfare" has much the same half-contemptuous meaning as "Farewell and be hanged." Said to one of whom the speaker wishes to see no more, with allusion to the fieldfare's departure northward at the end of winter.—O.E.D.

The harm is doon, and fare-wel feldefare!

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, Bk. iii, l. 861. (c. 1380)

It means, I apprehend, that as fieldfares disappear at a particular season, the season is over; the bird is flown.

JAMES JENNINGS, Dialects, p. 37. (1825)

20 Farewell and be hanged, Goodman Cowe.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Letter-Book, p. 95. (1575)

Farewell, and be hang'd, you rascals.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, A Trick to Catch the Old One. Act iv, sc. 1. (1608)

Farewell and be hang'd, friends must part.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 174. (1670)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1504. (1732)

<sup>1</sup> Ye see your fare (sayd she) set your hert at rest.

Fare ye well (quoth I), how ever I fare now.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

<sup>2</sup> She opened a window and put forth her head—Hence, Forty Pence, quo' she.

HENRY MEDWALL, Interlude of Nature. (c.1500)
See Lost Tudor Plays, p. 98.

Farewell fortie pence, too deare of [by] three shillings.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. T4 (1583)
A contemptuous dismissal.

Why, farewell, forty pence! I ha fight fair and caught a frog.

JOHN DAY, The Blind-Beggar of Bednal-Green. Act v. (1600)

Farewell fortie pence, Jack Noble is dead.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 68. (1639)

<sup>3</sup> The last farewell. (Supremumque vale.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. vi, l. 509; bk. x, l. 62.
(C. A. D. 7) The final farewell when dying.

Farewell forever. (Aeternum vale!)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, No. 66. (C. A. D. 85)
The last salutation to the dead. "Cara, valet!"
(Dear one, farewell), and "Caram vale, sed non aeternum" (Dear one, farewell, but not for ever) were frequently used in epitaphs.

Farewell! a long farewell, to all my greatness!

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, iii, 2, 351. (1612)

Fare thee well! and if for ever,

Still for ever, fare thee well.

LORD BYRON, Fare Thee Well. (c. 1815)

Lord Byron was eternally Farewelling.

BERT LESTON TAYLOR, Farewell. (1911)

<sup>4</sup> Adieu, canals, ducks, rabble! (Adieu, canaux, canards, canaille!)

VOLTAIRE, when leaving Holland, summing up his impressions of the country. (1722)

FARMING

See also Plough

<sup>5</sup> Cultivate the fields, that thou mayest find what thou needest; and receive the bread of thine own threshing-floor; better is a bushel that God giveth thee than five thousand obtained by force.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. viii, l. 17. (c. 700 B. C.) Griffith, tr.

He that tilleth his land shall have plenty of bread; but he that followeth after vain persons shall have poverty enough. (Qui operatur terram suam, satiabitur panibus.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxviii, 19. (c.350 B. C.)

He that tilleth his land shall increase his heap.

BEN SIRA, Ecclesiasticus, xx, 28. (c. 190 B. C.)

Make yourself a slave to the earth and you will have plenty of bread.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 58a. (c.450)

I will say to my fellows, once for all, As long as possible live free and uncommitted. It makes but little difference whether you are committed to a farm or the county jail.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 2, par. 5. (1854)

<sup>6</sup> He that will have a full flock

Must have an old stagge [gander] and a young cock.

JOHN AUBREY, A Lancashire proverb. (c. 1690)
In HALLIWELL, Dictionary of Archaic Words, ii, 794.

He that will have his farm full,

Must keep an old cock and a young bull.

WILLIAM ELLIS, The Modern Husbandman. Ch. 3, p. 94. (1750) "When a bull comes to be four, he is heavy and sluggish. The old verse is," etc.

<sup>7</sup> There is no lower occupation than that of tilling the soil.

Babylonian Talmud: Jebamoth, fo. 63.a. (c.450)

<sup>8</sup> Every farm should own a good farmer. The best shares are ploughshares.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit, p. 8. (1887)

<sup>9</sup> Cursing the weather is bad farming.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 46. (1917)

<sup>10</sup> A man of highest birth, a son of the soil. (Summo genere natus, terrae filius.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. vii, epis. ix, sec. 3. (54 B. C.) Quoted. Cicero means that although the man has a long lineage, he is really nothing but a clodhopper.

Son of the soil. (Progenies terrae.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 57. (C. A. D. 58)

A good ploughman is a terrae filius.

H. D. THOREAU, Early Spring in Massachusetts, 28 March, 1857.

<sup>11</sup> Husbandry is of that kind that judgment and labor do not govern it, but the most uncertain of circumstances, winds, and tempests. (Res rusticae eiusmodi sunt, ut eas non ratio, neque labor, sed res incertissimae. venti, tempestatesque moderentur.)

CICERO, In Verrem. No. 3, sec. 98. (70 B. C.)

<sup>12</sup> Useless at field-toil be dainty-nurtured hands. (κακαὶ γεωργεῖν χεῖρες εὐ τετραμμένα.)

EURIPIDES, Rhesus, l. 176. (c. 450 B. C.)

Dirty hands make clean money.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 485. (1940) Especially applied to farming.

<sup>13</sup> On Candlemas-day You must have half your Straw and half your Hay.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6487. (1732)

It is time to cock your hay and corn

When the old donkey blows his horn.

J. O. HALLIWELL, Popular Rhymes, p. 157.

(1849) Because the braying of the ass is said to be an indication of rain. There are innumerable weather proverbs in connection with farming, most of which may be found in INWARDS, Weather Lore.

<sup>1</sup>
'Tis the Farmer's Care
 That makes the Field bear.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6350. (1732)
 There is a variant, "'Tis the want of care
 That makes the field bare."

<sup>2</sup>
 We want them to be practical farmers, book-farmers and gentlemen-farmers in one.

GAIL HAMILTON, Skirmishes. Ch. 9. (1865) The
D.A.E. i, 281, contains a number of quotations from agricultural publications expressing contempt for "book-farming," i.e. farming in accordance with theories obtained from books.

<sup>3</sup>
 Once a farmer, always a sucker. . . . Once a farmer, always a come-on.

O. HENRY, Modern Rural Sports. (1908)

<sup>4</sup>
 Even if a farmer intends to loaf, he gets up in time to get an early start.

E. W. HOWE, Country Town Sayings. (1911)

<sup>5</sup>
 Farmers are often worthless fellows. . . .
 They have all the sensual vices of the nobility, with cheating into the bargain.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, May 14, 1778.

<sup>6</sup>
 Six years thou shalt sow thy field, and six years thou shalt prune thy vineyard, and gather in the fruit thereof; But in the seventh year shall be a sabbath of rest unto the land, a sabbath for the Lord; thou shalt neither sow thy field nor prune thy vineyard. That which groweth of its own accord of thy harvest thou shalt not reap, neither gather the grapes of thy vine undressed: for it is a year of rest unto the land. (Annus enim requietiones terrae est.)

Old Testament: Leviticus, xxv, 3-5. (c. 570
 B.C.) Hence "Sabbatical year."

<sup>7</sup>
 To sow wheat upon stubble. (πύρους ἐπὶ καλὰ μὴ ἀρούρ.)

LYSIAS, Fragment. (c. 400 B.C.) As quoted by SUIDAS, Lexicon. A proverbial phrase for exhausting by continual use.

Constant tillage exhausts a field. (Continua messe senescit ager.)

OSID, Artis Amatoria, Bk. iii, l. 82. (c. 1 B.C.)

<sup>8</sup>
 When the land is cultivated entirely by the spade, and no horses are kept, a cow is kept for every three acres of land.

JOHN STUART MILL, Political Economy. Bk. ii, ch. 6, sec. 5. (1848) Referring to peasant-farming in Flanders.

Three acres and a cow.

JESSE COLLINGS, M. P., who carried the "small holdings amendment" against Lord Salis-bury's government in 1886. DANIEL DEFOE, in his Tour Through the Whole Islands of Great Britain (1724), suggested a provision of three acres of ground for every man in a settlement, and a certain amount of common land where they could have a few sheep and cows.

Every family shall have a plot of not more than forty acres of tillable ground.

GEN. W. T. SHERMAN, Special Field Order,
 Savannah, Ga., 16 Jan., 1865. It was this field order, most probably, which gave rise to the phrase, "Forty [or ten] acres and a mule," which many American negroes expected to receive after emancipation.

The anxiety to secure support from the newly enfranchised labourers gave prominence to Mr.
 Jesse Collings's formula of "three acres and a cow," which became the battle-cry of the liberal party.

SIR H. MAXWELL, Life of W. H. Smith, p. 274.
 (1894)

An honest man who had worked long and well should have "three acres and a cow."

DEAN HOLE, Then and Now. Ch. 11. (1902)

<sup>9</sup>
 It is sweet to spend time in the cultivation of the fields. (Tempus in agrorum cultu consumere dulce est.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. 7, l. 69. (A. D. 13)

<sup>10</sup>
 Always next year the husbandman is going to be rich. (ἀεὶ γεωργὸς εἰς νέοντα πλούσιος.)

PHILEMON, Fragments. Frag. 4. (c. 300 B.C.)

Cited by ZENOBIUS, Adagia, ii, 43. (c. A. D.
 130) ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, ix, 14, has, "Sem-per agricola in novum annum dives," because, he explains, the farmer always expects next year to be better than this year.

Rich he'll be ever who toiled hard afield. (Dives erit semper, dure qui operatur in agro.)

COLUMBANUS, Carmen Monostichon, l. 45. (c.
 A. D. 600)

<sup>11</sup>
 Each man reaps his own farm. (Sibi quisque ruri metit.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 799. (c. 220 B.C.)

<sup>12</sup>
 A thin meadow is soon mowed.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 20. (1678) Or, in shorter form, "Sow thin, and mow thin."

Sow beans in the mud and they'll grow like wood.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 36. (1678) Another proverb about sowing is, "Sow in a slop, sure of a crop."

Sow Wheat in Dirt and Rye in Dust.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4235. (1732)

The Spanish form is, "Siembra trigo en barral, y pón viña en cascaval" (Sow corn in clay, set vines in sand). The French say,
 "Faut un homme alerte pour semer l'orge, et un homme lent pour semer l'avoine" (It needs a quick man to sow barley, and a slow man to sow oats). Seneca's dictum is, "Post malam segetem serendum est" (After a bad crop you should sow).

<sup>13</sup>
 Look at your corn in May,
 And you'll come weeping away;
 Look at the same in June,
 And you'll come home to another tune.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 33. (1678)

Look to the cow, and the sow, and the wheat-mow, and [all] will be well enow.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 347.

1 Good husbandry is good divinity.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 39. (1678)

2 The first and most respectable of all the arts is agriculture. (Le premier et le plus respectable de tous les arts est l'agriculture.)

ROUSSEAU, Emile. Bk. iii. (1762) The universal point of view among western nations.

A Yeoman upon his Legs is higher than a Prince upon his Knees.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 488. (1732) A Plowman on his Legs is higher than a Gentleman on his Knees.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1746.

3 And he gave it for his opinion . . . that whoever could make two ears of corn, or two blades of grass, to grow upon a spot of ground where only one grew before, would deserve better of mankind, and do more essential service to his country, than the whole race of politicians put together.

SWIFT, Gulliver's Travels: Voyage to Brobdingnag. Ch. 7. (1726)

4 No amusement has worn better than farming. It tempts men just as strongly today as in the day of Cincinnatus.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 29 Oct., 1857.

5 Ill husbandrie braggeth, to go with the best: Good husbandrie baggeth up gold in his chest. Ill husbandrie lieth in prison for debt: Good husbandrie spieth where profit to get.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie. Ch. 51. (1573)

6 The great Father himself has willed that the path of husbandry should not be easy. (Pater ipse colendi | haud facilem esse viam voluit.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. i, l. 121. (29 B. C.)

7 Work returns to the husbandmen, moving in a circle, as the year rolls itself round in its former track. (Redit agricolis labor actus in orbem, | atque in se sua per vestigia volvitur annus.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 401. (29 B. C.)

Farming is a most senseless pursuit, a mere laboring in a circle. You sow that you may reap, and then you reap that you may sow. Nothing ever comes of it.

STOBAEUS, Florilegium, xxxviii, 30. (c. A. D. 400)

8 He [the husbandman] equalled the riches of kings in the happiness of his mind; and returning home in the late evening, loaded his board with feasts unbought. (Regum aequabat opes animis; seraque revertens | nocte domum, dapibus mensas onerabat inemptis.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iv, l. 132. (29 B. C.)

He brings out dainties unbought. (Dapes inemptas adparet.)

HORACE, Epodes. No. ii, l. 48. (c. 20 B. C.)

Horace is saying that he prefers a farmer's simple unbought meal to oysters or turbot or Ionian pheasant.

9 To break a pasture makes a man; to make a pasture breaks a man.

UNKNOWN. Quoted in the Spectator (London), 28 Oct., 1922. There are countless proverbial phrases which derive from farming and country life in general, such as "To break fresh ground," "To lie fallow," "To feel his oats," "To kick over the traces," "To take the bull by the horns," "To put a spoke in his wheel," "To go the whole hog," "To clip his wings," "To crow over," etc. They will be found elsewhere in this book under their appropriate headings. Consult the index.

FARTHING

10 Take every farthing I am worth.

HENRY FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. vi, ch. 13. (1749) Down to the last quarter of a penny, which is what a farthing is.

Nor can you touch one farthing of her money.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Annals of a Quiet Neighbourhood. Ch. 32. (1866)

11 If we take a farthing from a thousand pound, it will be a thousand pound no longer.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World. Letter 27. (1760)

12 She thinkth her farthyng good sylver.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs and Epigrams, p. 165. (1562)

13 It matters not a farthing.

NATHANIEL WARD, The Simple Cobler of Aggawam, p. 43. (1647) Not an atom, not a bit.

My life to a brass farthing.

UNKNOWN, Andromana. Act i, sc. 1. (1660)

He does not care a farthing for her.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 522. (1712)

He would not give one brass farthing.

ROGER NORTH, Lives of the Norths, i, 229. (1740)

It does not signify a brass farthing.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, The Poor Gentleman. Act ii, sc. 1. (1801)

He did not care a brass farthing.

WILLIAM BLACK, The Strange Adventures of a Phaeton. Ch. 25. (1872) SHAW, Fanny's First Play: Induction. (1911)

FASHION

See also Clothes, Dress

14 He is only fantastical that is not in fashion.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. ii, mem. 2, subs. 3. (1621)

15 So many lands, so many fashions.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Alphonsus. Act iii, sc. 1. (1634) See also under OPINION.

<sup>1</sup> There nis no new gyse that it nas old.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knight's Tale, l. 1267. (c. 1386) Gyse: fashion.

A new fashion, which being vsed in the morning, is accompted olde before noone, which varietie of chaunging, being oftentimes noted of a graue Gentleman in Naples, who hauing bought a Hat of the newest fashion, and best block in all Italy, and wearing but one daye, it was tolde him yat it was stale, he hung it vp in his studie, and viewing al sorts, al shapes, perceiued at ye last, his olde Hat againe to come into the new fashion, wherewith smiling to himselfe he sayde, I haue now lyued compasse, for Adams old Apron, must make Eue a new Kirtle.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 323. (1580)

What has been the fashion will come into fashion again.

GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 440. (1938) A Japanese proverb.

<sup>2</sup> As good out o' the world as out o' the fashion.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 171. (1639)

CIBBER, Love's Last Shift. Act ii. (1696)

Out of the fashion, out of the world.

RICHARD HEAD, The English Rogue. Act ii, sc. 3. (1671)

It is better to be out of the world than out of the fashion.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

MAITLAND, Window in Chelsea, p. 31. (1903)

One may as well be out of the world as out of the fashion.

THEODORE HOOK, Jack Brag. Ch. 16. (1837)

Follow the fashion or quit the world. (Suis la mode, ou quitte le monde.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 375. (1856)

<sup>3</sup> The fashion of this world passeth away. (παράγει γὰρ τὸ σχῆμα τοῦ κόσμου τούτου.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, vii, 31. (c. A. D. 60) The Vulgate is "Praeterit enim figura huius mundi."

<sup>4</sup> Fashion makes the fur fly.

MARGARET FISHBACK, Time for a Quick One, p. 118. (1940)

<sup>5</sup> Nothing exceeds in Ridicule, no doubt, A Fool in Fashion, but a Fool that 's out; . . . If what is out of Fashion most you prize Methinks you should endeavour to be wise.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1746.

Philosophy as well as Foppery often changes Fashion.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1753.

<sup>6</sup> Fools may invent Fashions that Wise Men will wear.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1579. (1732)

The French say, "Les fous inventent les modes et les sages les suivent."

<sup>7</sup> It is in vain to mislike the current Fashion.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2968. (1732)

The present Fashion is always handsome.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4718.

<sup>8</sup> Tailors and Writers must mind the Fashion.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4301. (1732)

<sup>9</sup> Worshipping God slyghtly for fashyon sake.

ARTHUR GOLDING, Psalms of David, xl, 7. (1571)

For fashion sake, I thank you.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iii, ii, 272. (1600)

For fashion's sake, as dogs go to the market.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 109.

For Fashion's sake, as Dogs go to Church.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1590. (1732)

<sup>10</sup>

Euery man after his fassion.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

BACON, Promus. No. 955. (c. 1594) CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 321. (1605)

<sup>11</sup>

The plain fashion is best.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Epigrams. No. 201. (1562)

<sup>12</sup>

In clothes, I would have the fashion choose the man, and not the man the fashion.

JAMES I OF ENGLAND, Table-Talk. (c. 1610) See OVERBURY, Crumms from King James's Table. No. 31.

<sup>13</sup>

As far as Paris to fetch over a fashion.

BEN JONSON, Every Man Out of His Humour.

Act ii, sc. 2. (1599) Hence, "Paris fashions."

Fashions crosse the Seas as oft as the Packet Boat.

RICHARD WHITLOCK, Zoötomia, p. 225. (1654)

<sup>14</sup>

One could span her waist with one hand, but one couldn't place her fundament in a wash tub.

JOHN KOBLER, Some Like It Gory, p. 35. (1940)

Quoting a description of the fashionable female figure of the Victorian era.

<sup>15</sup>

Fashion ever is a wayward child.

WILLIAM MASON, The English Garden. Bk. iv, l. 430. (c. 1775)

<sup>16</sup>

The glass of fashion and the mould of form.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 1, 161. (1600)

You glassy fashion and moulded form.

O. HENRY, The Moment of Victory. (1909)

Rafe turned up looking like the glass of fashion and the mold of form.

HULBERT FOOTNER, Murderer's Vanity, p. 16. (1940)

<sup>17</sup>

The fashion wears out more apparel than the man.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, iii, 3, 148. (1598)

Fine Cloaths wear soonest out of Fashion.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1536. (1732)

But in No. 1537 Fuller adds, "Fine Cloth is never out of Fashion." Weber is credited with saying, "Die Mode ist weiblichen Geschlechts, hat folglich ihre Launen" (Fashion is of the female sex, and has consequently its whims).

1 Old fashions please me best.
SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, iii, 1, 80. (1594) There is a Latin proverb, "Hoc erat in more maiorum" (This was the fashion of our forefathers).

2 You cannot be both fashionable and first-rate.
LOGAN PEARSALL SMITH, Afterthoughts. (c. 1920)

3 One fashion excludes another. (Une mode en exclut une autre.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 691. (1746)

4 Disguise it as you will,
To right or wrong 'tis fashion guides us still.
JOSEPH WARTON, Fashion, l. 1. (1746)

5 Fashion is what one wears oneself. What is unfashionable is what other people wear.

OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband. Act iii. (1892) After all, what is fashion? From the artistic point of view, it is usually a form of ugliness so intolerable that we have to alter it every six months.

OSCAR WILDE, Suitable Dress for Women Workers. In Women's World and on Women's Achievements, p. 428.

FASTING

6 A hard case enough his who has not broken his fast at two in the afternoon. (Asaz de desdichada es la persona que a las dos de la tarde no se ha desayunado.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 33. (1615)

See also BREAKFAST.

7 He that feeds barely fasts sufficiently.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Assez. (1611) He fasts enough that has had a bad [slender] meal. (Digiuna assai chi mal mangia.)

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living. Bk. iv, ch. 5. (1650) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1844. (1732)

He fasts enough, whose Wife scolds all Dinner-time.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1845. (1732) He fasts enough who eats with reason.

A. J. CRONIN, Grand Canary, p. 183. (1933)

8 Fast from evil. (νηστεύσαι κακότητος.)

EMPEDOCLES, Maxim. (c. 450 B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 464B, who calls it "a great and divine saying."

To sterve thy sin, not bin,

And that's to keep thy Lent.

ROBERT HERRICK, Noble Numbers: To Keep a True Lent. (1648)

9 And what food is, by fastyng it is known. (Il cibo pel digiun s'apprezza.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 44. (1578) Quoting Ariosto.

10 Is there no Mean, but Fast or Feast?

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3113. (1732) Dock labour has been graphically described as "either a feast or a fast."

Daily Telegraph (London), 26 July, 1912, p.

12. In the United States the steel industry has always been defined as "either a feast or a famine" business.

11 Fasting begins in the morning, and not at night.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 126. (1574) Young tr.

If I were to fast for my life I would eat a good breakfast in the morning.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 67. (1678)

If I were to fast for my life, I would take a good breakfast in the morning, a good dinner at noon, and a good supper at night.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

12 He who is sated with food can praise the merits of fasting. (Qui satur est, pleno laudat ieiunia ventre.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 364.

(1869) The Italians say, "É bello predicare il digiuno a corpo pieno" (It is all very well to preach fasting with a full stomach).

13 Is this a Fast, to keep

The Larder leane? And cleane

From fat of Veales, and Sheepe? . . .

Yet still to fill

The platter high with Fish?

ROBERT HERRICK, To Keep a True Lent. (1648)

It is good fasting when the table is covered with fish.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 270. (1855)

14 In that house commonly such is the cast,
A man shall as soone breake his necke as his fast.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Housekeeping's dead, Saturio: wot'st thou where? Forsooth, they say far hence, in Break-neck shire. And, ever since, they say, that feel and laste, That men may break their neck soon as their fast.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Satires, v, 2. (1597)

Ye will break your neck and your fast alike in this house.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 112. (c. 1595)

One may as soon break his Neck as his Fast, at your House.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3770. (1732)

15 Rather fast then surfette, rather starue then strue to exceede.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 108 (1579)

16 When ye fast, be not, as the hypocrites, of a sad countenance (ὅταν δὲ νηστεύητε, μὴ γίνεσθε ὡς οἱ ὑποκριταὶ σκυθρωποί.)

New Testament: Matthew, vi, 16. (c. A.D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Cum autem ieiunatis, nolite fieri sicut hypocritae tristes."

Spare Fast, that oft with gods doth diet.

JOHN MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 46. (1632)

17 'Tis but a three years' fast:

The mind shall banquet, though the body pine.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, i, 1, 24. (1595)

<sup>1</sup> Who fasteth and doth no other good, spares his bread and goes to hell. (Chi digiuna ed altro ben non fa, Sparagna il pane, ed al inferno va.)

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living. Bk. iv, ch. 5. (1650)
He who fasteth and doeth no good, saveth his bread, but loseth his soul.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 399. (1855)

<sup>2</sup> Let not your fasts be with hypocrites, for they fast on Mondays and Thursdays, but do you fast on Wednesdays and Fridays.

UNKNOWN, The Didache, or Teaching of the Twelve Apostles. (c. A. D. 125)

FAT

<sup>3</sup> I am not much in fear of these fat, sleek headed fellows, but rather of those pale thin ones. (οὐ πάντ' αὐτοὺς δέδοικα τοὺς παχέας καὶ κομήτας, μᾶλλον δὲ τοὺς ὥχρους καὶ λεπτοὺς ἐκείνους.)

JULIUS CAESAR, referring to Antony and Dola-bella as the fat ones, and Brutus and Cassius as the lean ones. (43 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Caesar. Ch. 62, sec. 5.

Let me have men about me that are fat;
Sleek-headed men and such as sleep o' nights:
Yond Cassius has a lean and hungry look;
He thinks too much: such men are dangerous.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, i, 2, 192. (1599)

Who ever hears of fat men heading a riot, or herding together in turbulent mobs?

WASHINGTON IRVING, Knickerbocker's History of New York. Bk. iii, ch. 2. (1809)

Fat men are capable of far greater deviltries than thin men.

A. MERRITT, Seven Footprints to Satan. Ch. 5. (1928)

<sup>4</sup> He was a lord ful fat and in good point.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 200. (c. 1386)

Shew themselves to the worlde (according to the prouerbe applied to beastes) faire, fat, and in good liking.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 138. (1574) Young, tr.

Fat old women, fat and five-and-fifty.

JOHN FLETCHER, Women Pleased. Act iii, sc 2. (1620)

I am resolved to grow fat and look young till forty, and then slip out of the world with the first wrinkle and the reputation of five-and-twenty.

DRYDEN, The Maiden Queen. Act iii, sc. 1. (1668)

Fat, fair, and forty were all the toast of the young men.

JOHN O'KEEFE, Irish Minnie. Act ii, sc. 3. (1795)

A fat, fair, and fifty card-playing resident of the Crescent.

MRS. MELISINA TRENCH, Letter, 18 Feb., 1816.

A sort of Tom Shuffleton, grown fat, stale, and fortyish.

New Monthly Magazine, ii, 324. (1821)

Fat, fair, and forty.

WALTER SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 7. (1824)
The Prince Regent's description of what a wife should be. Scott repeats the phrase in Redgauntlet, ch. 7.

The Widow Douglas, fair, smart, and forty.

MARK TWAIN, Tom Sawyer. Ch. 5. (1876)

<sup>5</sup> This night shal I make it wel,

Or casten all the gruwel in the fyre.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, l. 710. (c. 1374) The plan is an utter failure.

Cast adoun the crokk the colys amyd.

LANGLAND, Richard the Redeles, ii, 51. (1399)

The fat is in the fire.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 3. (1546)

The earliest known use of the proverb in its modern form. Used so frequently thereafter that only variants will be noted.

Or else your cake is dough, and all your fat lie in the fire.

THOMAS BECON, Prayers, p. 277. (1559)

Should we once complain,

The fat will all be in the fire.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Livery of London. (1797)

The fat in the fire will be thing worth looking at.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Latter-Day Pamphlets, iv, 4. (1850) The phrase used in the later sense of the commission of some injudicious act, sure to cause an explosion.

The fat was flaring and sizzling in the fire now.

CARTER DICKSON, The Unicorn Murders. Ch. 3. (1935)

A telephone call put the fat in the fire.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Kitty Foyle, p. 71. (1939)

So you want me to pull the fat out of the fire for you?

C. F. ADAMS, The Black Door, p. 102. (1941)

<sup>6</sup> Great housekeepers leave poor executors.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Cuisine. (1611)

A fat kitchen, a lean will.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Testament.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733, 1758. The Germans say, "Fette Küche, magere Erbschaft" (A fat kitchen, a lean legacy).

Fat housekeepers make lean executors.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1505. (1732) KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 111, thinks it necessary to explain, "Because they spend all in their lifetime."

<sup>7</sup> Nobody loves a fat man.

EDMUND DAY, The Round-Up. (1907) The line, spoken just before the final curtain, was made famous by Macklyn Arbuckle, as Sheriff "Slim" Hoover.

There's the old saying, "Nobody loves a fat man."

RING LARDNER, Zone of Quiet. (1926)

There is someone who loves a fat girl.

ETHEL WHITE, Fear Stalks the Village, p. 53. (1942)

<sup>1</sup> Any woman who has fallen from a horse-load to a cart-load . . . can direct you to her.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Honest Whore. Pt. ii, act v, sc. 1. (1630) Dekker is alluding to the carting of prostitutes.

To fall away from a horse-load to a cart-load.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 243. (1678)
Fallen away from a horse-load to a cart-load, spoken ironically of one considerably improved in flesh on a sudden.

B.E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew, sig. G1. (1690)

Don't you think the colonel's mightily fall'n away of late?—Ay, fall'n from a horseload to a cart-load.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>2</sup> Jeshurun waxed fat, and kicked.

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xxxii, 15. (c. 700 B.C.) The phrase is not in the Vulgate.

He that putteth his trust in the Lord shall be made fat. (Qui vero sperat in Domino, sanabitur.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxviii, 25. (c. 350 B.C.)

<sup>3</sup> Fat bellies do not make fine wits. (παχέα γαστήρ λεπτόν οὐ τικτεῖ νόον.)

GALEN, Treatise on Medicine, v, 878. (c. A.D. 180)

Fat paunches have lean pates.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, i, 1, 26. (1595)

Fat bodies, lean brains!

BEAUMONT and FLETCHER, Love's Cure. Act ii, sc. 1. (c. 1613)

He has more guts than brains.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 163. (1678)
See also under BELLY: THE FULL BELLY.

<sup>4</sup> Ye shall eat the fat of the land. (Comedatis medullam terrae.)

Old Testament: Genesis, xlv, 18. (c. 800 B.C.)

This Realme . . . wanted neither the favour of the Sunne, nor the fat of the Soile.

WILLIAM LAMBARDE, A Perambulation of Kent, p. 223. (1576)

For thirteen years he has lived on the fat of the land.

TROLLOPE, The Three Clerks. Ch. 14. (1857)

<sup>5</sup> Many a feller looks fat, who is only swelled, as the Germans say.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 24. (1843)

<sup>6</sup> Sore abhorryng the Italian nacion, for lickyng the fat from their beardes.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicles, fo. 169B. (1548) To forestall the results of a person's enterprise or industry.

The fat cleane flit fro my berde.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, p. 6. (1562)

But they that shooten nearest the pricke, Sayne, other the fat from their beards doen lick.

SPENSER, Shepherd's Calendar, Sept. (1579)

<sup>7</sup> She was made lyke a beere pot, or a barell.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1546)

She stoops, is lame, . . . as slender in the middle as a cow in the waist.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. ii, mem. 1. (1621) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 207. (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 727. (1732)

What she wants in up and down she hath in round about.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 140. (1678)

<sup>8</sup> Fat men are more likely to die suddenly than the slender.

HIPPOCRATES, Aphorisms. (c. 400 B.C.)

<sup>9</sup> You may see me fat and shining, a hog from Epicurus' herd. (Me pinguem et nitidum . . . Epicuri de grege porcum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 4, l. 15. (20 B.C.)

The fattest hog in Epicurus' sty.

WILLIAM MASON, An Heroic Epistle. (1773)

<sup>10</sup> A fat commodity hath no fellow.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 3. (1659)

<sup>11</sup> Who drives fat oxen should himself be fat.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 1784. Johnson was parodying Henry Brooke's line, "Who rules o'er freemen should himself be free," from The Earl of Essex. The line was deleted shortly thereafter.

<sup>12</sup> Fat flesh freezes soon.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 108. (1721)

<sup>13</sup> A light heart in a fat body ravishes not only the world, but the philosopher.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Sandra Belloni. Ch. 19. (1864)

<sup>14</sup> A soule in a fat body lies soft, and is loth to rise.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Forren Newes: Newes from My Lodging. (1613)

<sup>15</sup> Often and little eating makes a man fat.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 29. (1670)

<sup>16</sup> You must take the fat with the lean.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 218. (1678)

A man must take the fat with the lean; that's what he must make up his mind to in this life.

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 51. (1850)

<sup>17</sup> No gentleman ever weighs more than two hundred pounds.

THOMAS B. REED, when his statement of his own weight as 199 pounds was questioned. (c. 1900) See ROBINSON, Life.

<sup>18</sup> In the same time that fat men meagre grow, The lean will perish on affliction's road.

SADI, Gulistan, ii, 12. (c. 1258) Lamentations Rabbah, iii, 20, has, "While the fat one becomes lean, the lean one expires."

<sup>19</sup> Sweep on, you fat and greasy citizens!

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 1, 55. (1600)

He's fat, and scant of breath.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 2, 298. (1600)

- 1 Falstaff sweats to death
And lards the lean earth as he walks along.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 2, 115. (1597)
They would melt me out of my fat drop by drop.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor,
iv, 5, 100. (1601) This is also Falstaff.
Fat drops fall from fat flesh.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 137. (1678)
- 2 Fat and merry, lean and sad.
THOMAS WRIGHT, Passions of the Minde. (1604)
Laugh and Be Fat.
JOHN TAYLOR, WATER-POET. Title of tract. (1612)
Laugh, and be fat, sir, your penance is known.
BEN JONSON, Entertainments: Penates. (c.1620)
See also under LAUGHTER.
- 3 Lytyl wote the full what the hungry aylys.
UNKNOWN, Douce MS. (Förster), 52. (c. 1350)
For the full wombe without any faylys wot fulle lytyl what the hungry aylys.
UNKNOWN, Babees Book (Furnivall), p. 16.
(c. 1480)
The fat man knoweth not what the lean thinketh.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 607. (1640)
Little knows the fat sow what the lean one means.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 92. (1678) The Danes have a similar proverb, "Den fede So veed ei hvad den sultne lider" (The fat sow knows not what the hungry sow suffers).

II—Proverbial Comparisons

- 4 Fat as a whale, and walkinge as a swan.
CHAUCER, Somnour's Tale, l. 222. (c. 1388)
- 5 He'll come back as fat as a seal.
J. J. CONNINGTON, Four Defences, p.142. (1940)
- 6 As fat as a foole.
JOHN LYL, Euphues, p. 118. (1579) RAY,
Proverbs, p. 283. (1670)
- 7 He shall be as fatte . . . as a porke hog.
SIR THOMAS MALORY, Le Morte Darthur. Bk.
vii, ch. 1. (1485)
Gras comme un cochon. (Wee say the same) as fat as a pigge.
RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Cochon. (1611)
As fat as a hog.
ISAAC WALTON, The Compleat Angler. Pt. i, ch.
10. (1653) GARRICK, Correspondence, i, 252.
(1767)
Fat as a bacon-pig at Martlemas.
MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 60. (1846)
- 8 Fatter than a basket. (Plus grosse qu'une baschoe.)
MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux: Des II.
Changeors, l. 204. (c. 1250)
- 9 As plump as a partridge.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 281. (1678)
SCOTT, Anne of Geierstein, ch. 13. (1829)
PEACOCK, Crochet Castle, ch. 14. (1831)
Plump as a partridge was I grown.
JOHN GAY, Poems (Underhill), ii, 278. (1720)

- 10 A gross fat man—As fat as butter.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 4, 560. (1596)
- 11 I shall grow as fat as a porpoise.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)
Repeated in Dial. iii.
Here's your brother Bob—as fat as a porpoise.
THOMAS HARDY, Under the Greenwood Tree.
Pt. i, ch. 7. (1872)

FATE

See also Destiny, Providence

- 12 We wrestle in our present state
With bonds ourselves have forged—and call it Fate.
BHARTRIHARI, Niti Sataka. No. 54 (c. A. D. 100)
Be content with your lot. Man's success or failure is in the hands of Fate.
BHARTRIHARI, Niti Sataka. No. 84.
- 13 All remedies are powerless to heal the wounds of Fate. (Μολραϊσι δ' ἀναλθέα φάρμακα πάντα.)
BION, Of Hyacinthus. Frag. 11. (c. 120 B. C.) Disease may be cured, not fate. (I tē ping, i pu tē ming.)
WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No.
662. (1875)
- 14 All things are produced by fate. (καθ' εἰμαρ-μένην δὲ φασὶ τὰ πάντα.)
CHRYSIPPUS, De Fato. (c. 240 B. C.) See DI-
OGENES LAERTIUS, Zeno. Bk. vii, sec. 149.
- 15 Fate leads the willing, drags the unwilling.
(Ducunt volentem fata, nolentem trahunt.)
CLEANTHES, Fragments. Frag. 527. (c. 250 B. C.)
See SENECA, Ad Lucilium, cviii, 11. Quoted by
RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 36. (1552)
What thou must do, do willingly. Fata volentem ducunt, nolentem trahunt. God gently leads thee coming, but drags thee on withdrawing.
THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, ii, 94. (1629)
Fate leads the Willing, but drives the Stubborn.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No.1508. (1732)
- 16 Of mortals he who yields to fate we think
Is wise and knows the ways of Providence.
(δῆστις δ' ἀνάγκη συνεκχώρηκεν βροτῶν σοφὸς παρ' ἡμῖν καὶ τὰ θεῶν ἐπίσταται.)
EURIPIDES, Fragments. Nauck, No. 965. (c. 440
B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 116F.
'Tis writ on Paradise's gate,
"Woe to the dupe that yields to Fate!"
R. W. EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Persian Poetry. (1875) Quoting Hafiz.
- 17 Of mortals he who bears his lot aright
To me seems noblest and of soundest sense.
(τὰ προσπεσόντα δ' ὁ δῆστις εὖ φέρει βροτῶν ἀριστος εἶναι σωφρονεῖν τὸ μοι δοκεῖ.)
EURIPIDES, Melanippe. Nauck, fr. 505. Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 116F.

<sup>1</sup> Fate will give kingdoms to a slave, and triumphs to a captive. (Servis regna dabunt, captivis fata triumphum.)

JUVENAL, Satires. No. vii, l. 201. (c. A. D. 120)

Quoted by SIR WALTER RALEGH, History of the World, i, 1.

'Tis fate that flings the dice, and as she flings Of kings makes peasants, and of peasants kings.

JOHN DRYDEN, Jupiter Cannot Alter the Decrees of Fate. (c. 1690)

<sup>2</sup> Fate cures us of many faults that no amount of thought could cure. (La fortune nous corrige de plusieurs défauts que la raison ne saurait corriger.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 154. (1665)

Fate laughs at probabilities.

LORD LYTTON, Eugene Aram. Bk. i, ch. 10. (c. 1860)

<sup>4</sup> She was apparently warding off the fate which maiden ladies insist is far worse than death.

NIGEL MORLAND, Murder in Wardour Street, p. 3. (1940)

A fate worse than debt.

EUGENE HEALY, Mr. Sandeman Loses His Life, p. 143. (1940)

To suffer a fate worse than death: (of a woman) to be raped. [A cliché since] mid-19th Cent.; since ca. 1918, usually jocular.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Fate. (1941)

I was safe from death or a fate that was worse than death.

RUTH WALLIS, Too Many Bones, p. 218. (1943)

<sup>5</sup> 'Twas fated so. (Sic erat in fatis.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. i, l. 481. (c. A. D. 8)

<sup>6</sup> When fate goes awry, human counsels fail. (Ubi fata peccant, hominum consilia excidunt.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 699. (c. 43 B. C.)

<sup>7</sup> Fate is the helmsman of the ship of life, no matter though the owner rend his clothes.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. v, Apologue 9. (c. 1257)

<sup>8</sup> Thunderbolts and fires come as fate requires. (Lei ta 'huo shao, ming li so chao.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 653. (1875) There are many variations of this proverb: "Robberies and fires," "Falling walls and fires," and so on.

The man can, but his fate cannot. (Jên nêng ming pu nêng.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 676.

<sup>9</sup> Call it Nature, Fate, Fortune; all these are names of the one and selfsame God. (Naturam voca, fatum, fortunam; omnia eiusdem dei nomina sunt.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. iv, sec. 8. (A. D. 64)

<sup>10</sup> Many have come upon their fate while shunning fate. (Multi ad fatum | venere suum dum fata timent.)

SENECA, Oedipus, l. 993. (c. A. D. 60)

No one is made guilty by fate. (Nemo fit fato nocens.)

SENECA, Oedipus, l. 1019. (c. A. D. 60)

<sup>11</sup> O God! that one might read the book of fate!

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, iii, 1, 45. (1598)

<sup>12</sup> I am the mistress of my fate.

SHAKESPEARE, Rape of Lucrece, l. 1069. (1594)

Men at some time are masters of their fates.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, i, 2, 139. (1599)

One is, when one wills it, master of his fate. (On est, quand on veut, maître de son sort.)

LOUIS FERRIER, Adraste. (c. 1700)

For man is man and master of his fate.

TENNYSON, Marriage of Geraint, l. 355. (1859)

I am the master of my fate,

I am the captain of my soul.

W. E. HENLEY, Invictus. (a. 1903)

EVERYONE IS THE ARCHITECT OF HIS OWN FORTUNE, see under FORTUNE.

<sup>13</sup> Fate drives us all to find our chiefest good In what we can, and not in what we would.

BERNARD SHAW, The Admirable Bashville. Act iii. (1926)

<sup>14</sup> Heavier lot is none Than to lie helpless in the coils of fate.

(τῆς ἀναγκαίας τύχης οὐκ ἔστιν οὐδὲν μείζον ἀνθρώποις κακόν.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 485. (c. 409 B. C.) Storr, tr.

You stand once more on the razor edge of Fate. (φρόνει βεβῶς αὖ νῦν ἐπὶ ξυροῦ τύχης.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 996. (c. 441 B. C.)

<sup>15</sup> She that Dares choose to die, may Brave her Fate.

SIR SAMUEL TUKE, The Adventures of Five Hours. Act i. (1663)

<sup>16</sup> Following the fate assigned to him. (Data fata secutus.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 382. (19 B. C.)

To spread the sails to fate. (Dare fatis vela.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iii, l. 9.

Enjoy a happier fate. (Melioribus utere fatis.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 546.

We are shattered by fate. (Frangimur fatis.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vii, l. 594.

Fate's willing follower. (Fatis egere volentem.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. viii, l. 133.

Inevitable fate. (Ineluctabile fatum.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. viii, l. 334.

<sup>17</sup> Man blindly works the will of fate. (Blindlings that er blos den Willen des Geschickes.)

WIELAND, Oberon. Pt. iv, l. 59. (1780)

The compulsion of fate is bitter. (Des Schicksals Zwang ist bitter.)

WIELAND, Oberon. Pt. v, l. 60.

<sup>18</sup> Fate is the endless chain of causation whereby things are, the reason or formula by which the universe goes on. (ἔστι δ' εἰμαρμένη αἰτία τῶν ὄντων εἰρημένη ἢ λόγος καθ' ὃν ὁ κόσμος διεξάγεται.)

ZENO, Apothegm. (c. 460 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Zeno. Bk. vii, sec. 149.

Fate is nothing but the deeds committed in a prior state of existence.

R. W. EMERSON, The Conduct of Life: Fate. (1860) Quoted as a Hindu proverb.

Fate is unpenetrated causes.

EMERSON, The Conduct of Life: Fate.

II—Fate: What Will Be Will Be

Things are where things are, and, as fate has willed,

So shall they be fulfilled.

(ἔστι δ' ὅπη νῦν ἔστι τελεῖται δ' ἐς τὸ πεπωμένον.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 67. (458 B. C.)

What is to come, will come. (τὸ μέλλον ἔξει.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 1240.

What has to come has to come.

E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM, Last Train Out, p. 37. (1940)

Is it not hopeless to wrestle against doom? (οὐκ ἀπρακτος ἄτα;)

AESCHYLUS, Libation-Bearers, l. 339. (458 B. C.)

'Tis not for us to strive with fate. (ἡμῖν δ' οὐ βιαστέον τύχην.)

EURIPIDES, Rhesus, l. 584. (c. 450 B. C.)

Dreadful is the mysterious power of Fate; there is no escape from it by wealth or war, by walled city, or dark, sea-beaten ships. (ἀλλ' ἂ μοιριδία τις δύνασις δεινά.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 950. (c. 441 B. C.)

No man shall alter Fate's decree. (ὃ χρὴ γὰρ οὐδεὶς μὴ χρεῶν θήσει ποτέ.)

EURIPIDES, Hercules Furens, l. 311. (c. 420 B. C.)

Not even by sitting on his hearth at home doth a man the more escape his appointed doom. (οὐτ' ἐν στέγῃ τις ἡμενος παρ' ἐστία | φεύγει τι μᾶλλον τὸν πεπωμένον μόρον.)

AESCHYLUS, Fragments. No. 199, Smyth. (c. 458 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Life and Poetry of Homer, 157. "Perhaps the nearest approach to pure fatalism in Greek tragedy," according to H. W. Smyth.

All men's lives have a fixed limit in death, even though a man shut himself in a chamber and keep watch. (πέρας μὲν γὰρ ἅπασιν ἀνθρώποις ἐστὶ τοῦ βίου θάνατος, κἀν ἐν οἴκῳ τις αὐτὸν καθείρξας τηρή.)

DEMOSTHENES, On the Crown. Ch. xviii, sec. 97. (330 B. C.)

This was, and is, and yet men shal it see.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. i, l. 245. (c. 1380)

Whan a thing is shapen, it shal be.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knightes Tale, l. 608. (c. 1386)

That shalbe, shalbe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1546)

What doctrine call you this, Che sara sara, What will be, shall be?

MARLOWE, Doctor Faustus. Act i, sc. 1. (1604) What Fate saith "Be" perforce must be.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, tr., The Thousand Nights and a Night. Nt. 5. (1885)

Heaven's visitation, sooner or later, cometh on all men. (συμφοραὶ θεήλατοι | πᾶσιν βροτοῖσιν ἢ τότ' ἤλθον ἢ τότε.)

EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 852. (c. 430 B. C.)

Fate is too strong for thee and for the gods. (τὸ γὰρ χρεῶν σου τε καὶ θεῶν κρατεῖ.)

EURIPIDES, Iphigenia in Taurica, l. 1486. (c. 414 B. C.)

Of sheer necessity

Must prudent men be bondmen unto fate.

(νῦν δ' ἀναγκᾶς ἔχει δοῦλοισιν εἶναι τοῖς σοφοῖσι τῆς τύχης.)

EURIPIDES, Orestes, l. 715. (c. 410 B. C.)

What the gods give must be endured. (τὰ μὲν διδόμενα ἀνάγκη δέχεσθαι.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. xv, epis. 17. (44 B. C.)

Quoting a proverb.

Nothing, which can happen to men, can we refuse. (Nihil, quod homini accidere possit, recusare debeamus.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. xv, epis. 1.

Yet for all his auguries he warded not off black fate. (ἀλλ' οὐκ οἰωροῖσιν ἐρίσατο κῆρα μέλαιναν.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ii, l. 859. (c. 850 B. C.)

Not even Hercules, for all his might, escaped his fate. (οὐδὲ γὰρ οὐδὲ βίη Ἱηρακλῆος φύγε κῆρα.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xviii, l. 117. (c. 850 B. C.)

Homer, in many places, emphasizes the impossibility of escaping fate. See Iliad, iii, 164; Odyssey, iii, 236; v, 134; vii, 197.

To none is it given to vanquish iron Fate (Ferrea sed nulli vincere fata datur.)

VERGIL (?), Catalepton. Epig. xiii, l. 4. (c. 45 B. C.)

No planning can defeat fate. (Ratio fatum vincere nulla valet.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. iii, eleg. 6, l. 18. (c. 10 A. D.)

Quoted by SIR WALTER RALEGH, History of the World, i, 1.

From no place can you exclude the fates. (Nullo fata loco possis excludere.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iv, ep. 60, l. 5. (c. A. D. 90)

No flying from Fate.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3568. (1732)

Yet who shall shut out Fate?

ARNOLD, Light of Asia. Bk. iii, l. 336. (1879)

Whatever's allotted cannot be blotted.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 490. (1940)

I'll see if what is to be will be.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Tobin's Palm. (1906)

Whatever is, it is necessary to endure. (Hoc quod est, id necessarium est perpetui.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 252. (c. 200 B. C.)

Whatever happens must be borne with a calm mind. (Ferendum esse aequo animo, quicquid acciderit.)

PHAEDRUS (?), New Fables. Fab. 19. (c. 25 B. C.)

<sup>1</sup> There is no appeal from the decrees of Fate or Destiny, as is recorded by our ancient lawyers. (Appeller iamais on ne peult de iugemens decidez par Sort & Fortune, comme attestent nos antiques Iurisconsultes.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 12. (1545)

<sup>2</sup> There is no power nor strength but in God.
SADI, Gulistan. Ch. v, Apologue 5. (c. 1258)
That is, There is no striving against fate.
Nisi Dominus frustra.

<sup>3</sup> What fates impose, that men must needs abide;

It boots not to resist both wind and tide.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, iv, 3, 58. (1591)
Fate, show thy force: ourselves we do not owe;
What is decreed must be, and be this so.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, i, 5, 329. (1599)
As the old hermit of Prague, that never saw pen and ink, very wittily said to a niece of King Gorboduc, "That that is is."

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, iv, 2, 14. The "hermit of Prague" was perhaps Jerome, the hermit of Camaldoli, but more probably an invention of Shakespeare.

Things must be as they may.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, ii, 1, 22. (1599)
O, sir, things must be as they may; and what a man cannot get, he may lawfully deal for.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles, ii, 1, 119. (1609)
WHAT'S DONE IS DONE, see under DEED.

III—The Fates

<sup>4</sup> What profits it to fight against the Fates?
(Che giova nelle Fata dar di cozzo?)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto ix, l. 97. (c. 1300)

<sup>5</sup> The Fates rule over men. (Fata regunt homines.)

JUVENAL, Satires. No. ix, l. 32. (c. A. D. 120)

<sup>6</sup> The three wool-spinning sisters it has been no man's lot to move by prayer. (Lanificas nulli tres exorare puellas | contigit.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iv, No. 54. (c. A. D. 90)

<sup>7</sup> The fates will find a way. (Fata viam inveniunt.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iii, l. 395; bk. x, l. 113. (19 B. C.)

The fates stand in the way. (Fata obstant.)
VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iv, l. 440. A proverbial phrase, even when Vergil used it.

<sup>8</sup> The fates call. (Fata vocant.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iv, l. 496. (29 B. C.)

Wherever the fates lead, let us follow. (Quo fata trahunt . . . sequamur.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. v, l. 709. (19 B. C.)

Whither the fates call. (Ubi fata vocant.)

OVID, Heroides. Epls. vii, l. 1. (c. 10 B. C.)

Whither the fates lead, virtue will fearlessly follow. (Quo fata trahunt, virtus secunda sequetur.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ii, l. 287. (c. A. D. 60)

FATHER

<sup>9</sup> He that honoureth his father shall have a long life. (Qui honorat patrem suum, vita vivet longiore.)

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, iii, 6. (c. 190 B. C.)

HONOUR THY FATHER AND THY MOTHER, see under PARENTS.

<sup>10</sup> Ye learn your father to get bairns.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 112. (c. 1595)

Teach your father to get children.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 9. (1659)

He wishes to show his father how to make children. (Il veut monstrier à son père à faire des enfants.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, i, 272. (1859)

<sup>11</sup> Pittacus one of the seven wise men of Greece plainly shewed, saying, Never be afeard to be counted a flatterer of thy father.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 85. (1574) Pettie, tr.

<sup>12</sup> Like to a father's was his gentle sway. (πατήρ δ' ὡς ἡπιος ἦεν.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. ii, l. 47. (c. 850 B. C.)

For a great sin a slight punishment contents a father. (Pro peccato magno paulum supplicii satis est patri.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 903. (166 B. C.)

According to the proverb, "He that hath the judge to his father," etc., [goes safe to trial].

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43. (1620)

He whose Father is Judge, goes safe to his Trial.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2400. (1732)

<sup>13</sup> Our Father which art in heaven. (Πάτερ ἡμῶν ὁ ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς.)

New Testament: Matthew, vi, 9. (c. A. D. 70)

The opening phrase of the "Lord's Prayer."

The Vulgate is, "Pater noster, qui es in caelis."

Be bold as a leopard, swift as an eagle, fleet as a hart, strong as a lion to do the will of the Father which is in heaven.

RABBI JUDAH BEN THELMA, Aboth, v, 30. (c. 550)

<sup>14</sup> The best father that ever was. (Le meilleur pere qui feut oncques.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580)

<sup>15</sup> I will talk to her like a father.

J. K. PAULDING, Chronicles of the City of Gotham, p. 64. (1830)

I had to talk to him like a father.

H. B. STOWE, Uncle Tom's Cabin. Ch. 16. (1852)

<sup>16</sup> I will make thee make thy Dad sport shortly.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Tereus and Progne, p. 54. (1576)

Raw dads mak fat lads.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 254. (1678)

You have to dig deep to bury your daddy.

NGALO MARSH, Vintage Murder, p. 274. (1940)

Quoting a Gypsy proverb.

- 1
Your father was no glazier.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
"Your father was a bad glazier"; said to a person who is standing in one's light.
P. W. JOYCE, English as We Speak It, p. 113. (1910)
- 2
'Tis happy for him that his father was born before him.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)
You may thank God that your father was born before you.
H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 579. (1855)
- 3
Whom should he bear with, if he should not bear with his own father? (Quem ferret, si parentem non ferret suum?)
TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 202. (163 B. C.)
What harsh judges fathers are to all young men. (Quam iniqui sunt patres in omnis adulescentis iudices!)
- 4
TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 213.
Fathers should be neither seen nor heard. That is the only proper basis for family life.
OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband. Act iii. (1895)

II—Father and Children

- 5
A father's love is for his children, and the children's love for their children.
Babylonian Talmud: Sotah, fo. 49a. (c. 400)
Children take precedence over parents.
No love to a father's.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 126. (1640)
- 6
Ask the Mother if the Child be like the Father.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 818. (1732)
- 7
It always falleth out, that a good Father getteth a naughty child.
STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 16. (1574) Pettie, tr.
I can never forget the undoubted saying, that few children are like the father.
GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 45.
Amongst all the abuses of the world . . . there is none worse then a negligent father.
GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 71.
It is a thing most certayne, that God heareth the prayers of the Father against his children.
GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 73
- 8
Never did any man of himself know his own parentage. (οὐ γὰρ πώ τις ἐδὼν γόνον αὐτοῦ ἀνεγνώ.)
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. i, l. 216. (c. 850 B. C.)
No one knows his own father. (αὐτὸν γὰρ οὐδεὶς οἶδ' ὅπου ποτ' ἐγένετο.)
MENANDER, The Carthaginian. Frag. 261K. (c. 300 B. C.)
Wise are the children in these dayes that know their owne fathers.
ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart), vi, 92. (1589)

- It is a wise father that knows his own child.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, ii, 2, 80. (1597)
I am not so wise a child as you take me for; I never knewe my father.
JOHN DAY, Isle of Guls. Act ii, sc. 1. (1606)
The world's so changed one shape into another, It is a wise child now that knows her mother.
CYRIL TOURNEUR, The Revengers Tragedie. Act ii, sc. 1. (1607)
Is't not hence this common proverb grows,
'Tis a wise child that his own father knows?
GEORGE WITHER, Abuses Stript and Whipt: Of Desire. (1613)
None but wise children know their own fathers.
WILLIAM ROWLEY, A Match at Midnight. Act i. (1633)
The children of this age must be wise children indeed if they know their fathers.
WILLIAM WYCHERLEY, The Gentleman Dancing-Master. Act i, sc. 1. (1673)
It is a wise child that knows its own father.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 78. (1678) In frequent use since, recently in P. C. WREN, The Uniform of Glory, p. 76. (1941) VIRGINIA RATH, Posted for Murder, p. 57. (1942)
Wise is the child that knows its sire,
The ancient proverb ran;
But wiser far the man who knows
How, when and where his offspring grows.
RUDYARD KIPLING, My Sons in Michigan. (c. 1897) Referring to the towns of Rudyard and Kipling, in Michigan.
It's a wise child that knows its fodder.
OGDEN NASIH, Look What You Did, Christopher. (1933)
- 9
There is nothing more wretched than a father, Except another father of more children. (οὐκ ἔστιν οὐδὲν ἀθλιώτερον πατρός, πλὴν ἕτερος ἀν' ἧ πλειόνων πατήρ.)
MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 656K. (c. 300 B. C.)
- 10
Fathers that wear rags
Do make their children blind;
But fathers that bear bags
Shall see their children kind.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, ii, 4, 48. (1605)
- 11
Foolish is he who, having killed the father, suffers the children to live. (νῆπιος δὲ πατέρα κτείνας παῖδας καταλείπει.)
STASINUS, Cypria. (c. 700 B. C.) Quoted by ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric, i, 15, 15, as a proverb.
I have done like one that should slay the father and spare the children. (ὡς εἰ τις πατέρα ἀποκτείνας τῶν παίδων αὐτοῦ φείσατο.)
CYRUS, to Croesus, when the Lydians revolted. (c. 540 B. C.) As related by HERODOTUS, i, 155.

III—Father and Son

- 12
From good parents comes a good son. (ἐκ ἀγαθῶν ἀγαθός.)
ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. i, ch. 2, sec. 1255b. (c. 330 B. C.)

Qualis pater, talis filius; bona arbor bonum fructum facit. (Such as the father is, such is the son: a good tree brings forth good fruit.)

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Text B, passus ii, l. 28. (1362) There is a Latin proverb of slightly different form, "Arbor naturam dat fructibus atque figuram" (The tree gives its nature to the fruit). See HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 25. The Greek, as recorded in Anecdota Bekkeri, is τοῦ πατρὸς τὸ παῖδιον. "Good fruit never came from a bad tree" is an English variant.

As doth the fox Renard, [so doth] the foxes sone. CHAUCER, Legend of Good Women, l. 2448. (c. 1386)

The olde prouerbe hath longe agone be sayde That oft the sone in maner lyke will be Vnto the Father.

BARCLAY, Skyp of Folys, i, 236. (1509)
Such a Father, such a Son.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 331. (1605) The French say, "Tel père. tel fils."

Like father, like sonne: like mother, like daughter.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 23. (1616)
READE, Cloister and the Hearth, ch. 79. (1860)
DE MORGAN, Alice-for-Short. Ch. 30. (1907)
P. C. WREN, The Uniform of Glory, p. 214. (1941) etc., etc. Like so many other proverbs, this one stems back to one of Aesop's fables, that of the crab, who said to her son, "Why do you walk sideways like that, my son? You ought to walk straight." And the young crab replied, "If you'll show me how, dear mother, I'll be glad to try." There are many variants. The Hindus say, "Vessels of the same kiln"; the Dutch, "The young ravens are beaked like the old"; the Persians, "The son of a tyrant will be a tyrant, as the broken sword becomes a dagger"; the Irish, "The big dog's nature will be in the pup"; the English, "As the old cock crows, so the young one chirrups."

LIKE MOTHER, LIKE DAUGHTER, see under MOTHER.

1
Diogenes struck the father when the son swore.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sc. ii, mem. 2, subs. 5. (1621)

2
As fathers commonly go, it is seldom a misfortune to be fatherless; and considering the general run of sons, as seldom a misfortune to be childless.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 July, 1751.

3
Some time before his death, he had stamped his likeness upon a little boy.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 34. (1837)

4
The sons of great men are vicious. (ἀνδρῶν ἡρώων τέκνα πῆματα.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. vi, No. 32. (1508) The Latin is, "Heroum filii noxae," and "noxious" is not a bad rendering. Included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 58, with the rendering, "The chylidren of most renowned and noble personages be for most part destructious to the common wealth," and adding, "Fynally our common prouerbe sayeth, that the wysest men haue moost folos to theyr chylidren." Think but of that old proverb, Heroum filii noxae, great men's sons seldom do well.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. ii, mem. vi, subs. 3. (1621)

Gods! how the son degenerates from the sire! POPE, tr., Iliad. Bk. iv, l. 451. (1715)

5
The son inferior to his father. (χείρων πατρός.)

EURIPIDES, Heracleidai, l. 328. (c. 430 B.C.)
He follows his father with unequal steps. (Sequiturque patrem non passibus aequis.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 724. (19 B.C.)
He doesn't sing his father's songs. (οὐ πατρῶικὰ αὐλεῖ μέλη.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. x, No. 94. (1508) In Latin, "Haud canit paternas cantiones." Erasmus cites TERENCE, Adelphoe: "Pol haud paternum istuc dedisti" (I swear you've not trodden in your father's steps).

6
The father to the bough, the son to the plough.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: Kent, ii, 124. (1662) "That is, though the father is executed for his offence, the son shall nevertheless succeed to his inheritance." A Kentish proverb, noted also by LAMBARDE, Perambulation of Kent, p. 497; by Cole in the Harleian Miscellany, iv, 306, and by FRANCIS GROSE, A Provincial Glossary, p. 182.

The Fork is commonly the Rake's Heir.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4536. (1732)

7
One father is enough to govern one hundred sons, but not a hundred sons one father.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 406. (1640)

One father is more than a hundred School-masters. HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 688. Sometimes varied to "One good mother is worth a hundred school-masters." The Germans say, "Ein Vater ernährt eher zehn Kinder, denn zehn Kinder einen Vater" (One father supports ten children better than ten children one father).

8
The litter is lyke to the syre and the damme. How can the fole amble, if the hors and mare trot?

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)
Trotte sire and trotte damme, how should the fole amble?

THOMAS WILSON, Arte of Rhetorique, 61. (1553)
The olde proverbe is: "If the mother trot how should the daughter amble?"

BARNABY RICH, The Honestie of This Age, 32. (1614)

If the dam trot, the foale will not amble.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy, iii, iii, 4, 2. (1621)

Trot mother, trot father, how can the foal amble? FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 96. (c. 1595)

How can the Foal amble, when the Horse and Mare trot?

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2554. (1732)

<sup>1</sup> Little like Tydeus is his father's son. (ἡ ὀλίγον οἱ παῖδα δοικόντα γαίνατο Τυδεύς.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. v, l. 800. (c. 850 B. C.)

Howbeit the son grew not old in his father's armor. (ἀλλ' οὐχ υἱὸς ἐν ἔννεσι πατρὸς ἔγηρα.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvii, l. 197. (c. 850 B. C.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, ix, 3, gives the Latin equivalent as "Filius degenerans."

Few sons indeed are like their fathers. (παῦροι γὰρ τοὶ παῖδες ὁμοῖοι πατρὶ πέδονται.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. ii, l. 276. (c. 850 B. C.)

And Homer adds that most are worse, and few better.

<sup>2</sup> Let thistles grow instead of wheat, and cockle instead of barley. (Pro frumento oriatum mihi tribulus, et pro hordeo spina.)

Old Testament: Job, xxxi, 40. (c. 350 B. C.)

Vinegar, the son of wine.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Metzia, fo. 83b.

(c. 450) Bad son of a good father.

He is a lion, the son of a lion. Thou art a lion, the son of a fox.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Metzia, fo. 84b.

(c. 450) Good son of a good father; good son of a bad father. Or, as Cant. Rabbah, i, 6, puts it: "A branch bringeth forth a fig. From the thorn-bush cometh the rose."

Rarely into the branches of the tree

Doth human worth mount up.

(Rade volte risurge per li rami | l' umana probitate.)

DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto vii, l. 121. (c. 1300)

<sup>3</sup> Happy is that child whose father goeth to the devil.

HUGH LATIMER, Sermons on the Lord's Prayer.

Pt. v. (1552) "Many a father goeth to the devil for his child's sake," Latimer explains, "in that he . . . scraped for his child, and forgot to relieve his poor miserable neighbour."

And happy always was it for that son

Whose father for his hoarding went to hell.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, ii, 2, 47. (1591)

Happy is the child whose father went to the devil. For commonly they who first raise great estates, do it either by usury and extortion, or by fraud and cozening, or by flattery and ministering to other men's vices.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 100. (1670)

The French say, "Heureux sont les enfants dont les pères sont damnés." The Portuguese reverse it, "Alas for the son whose father goes to heaven!" Because he will have been a poor man.

<sup>4</sup> The son ought to resemble the father. (Li fils doit ressembler le père.)

MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux: La Contre-gengle, l. 137. (c. 1250)

<sup>5</sup> Confirme the proverb, that it currant runne, A miser father finds a thriftlesse sonne.

WILLIAM PARKES, The Curtaine-Drawer of the World, p. 30. (1612) The French say, "Un père est un banquier donné par la nature" (A father is a banker given by nature).

To an avaricious father, a prodigal son. (A padre ganador, hijo gastador.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 268. (1856) A Spanish proverb. The Spaniards also say, "De padre santo, hijo diablo"

(From a saintly father, a devilish son).

<sup>6</sup> He takes after his father. (Patrissat.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 639. (c. 220 B. C.)

His father's son. (Patrissat filius.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 442. (c. 195 B. C.)

His mother's son. (τῆς μητρὸς τὸ παιδίον.)

STRABO, Historical Studies. Sec. 470. (c. 2 B. C.)

He's his father's boy. (τοῦ πατρὸς ἐστὶ τὸ παιδίον.)

SUIDAS, Lexicon, xi, 69. (c. 950) A Greek proverb, also cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, iii, 36, with the Latin, "Patris est filius."

Thou art thy father's own son.

WILLIAM WALKER, Phraseologia, p. 30. (1672)

The French say, "C'est son père tout craché" (He is the very spit of his father).

<sup>7</sup> It behoves a father to be virtuous if he expects his son to be more virtuous than he has been. (Probum patrem esse oportet, qui gnatum suum | esse probiorem, quam ipse fuerit postulet.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 438. (c. 195 B. C.)

How can you assume the power and privilege of a father, when you, though an old man, do worse things than your child? (Unde tibi frontem libertatemque parentis, | cum facias peiora?)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiv, l. 56. (c. A. D. 120)

<sup>8</sup> A better man than his father. (Ipso patre melior.)

PLINY, Letters. Bk. iv, epis. 15. (c. A. D. 98)

<sup>9</sup> A wise son maketh a glad father. (Filius sapiens laetificat patrem.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xv, 20. (c. 350 B. C.)

A foolish son is a grief to his father. (Ira patris, filius stultus.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvii, 25.

A foolish son is the calamity of his father. (Dolor patris, filius stultus.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xix, 13.

<sup>10</sup> Of such bread such pottage. (De tel pain tel soupe.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 11. (1534)

There was never a good knife made of bad Steel.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1755.

There is a Hebrew proverb, "We may not expect a good whelp from a bad dog."

CHIP OF THE OLD BLOCK, see under CHIP.

<sup>11</sup> The child hath a red tongue, like its father.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 234. (1678)

<sup>12</sup> It is not flesh and blood but the heart which makes us fathers and sons. (Nicht Fleisch und Blut; das Herz macht uns zu Vätern und Söhnen.)

SCHILLER, Die Räuber. Act i, sc. 1. (1777)

<sup>1</sup>
A dead father's counsel, a wise son heedeth.
TEGNER, Fridthjof's Saga. Canto viii. (1825)

IV—Father of His Country

<sup>2</sup>
Father of his country. (Parens patriae.)

QUINTUS CATULUS, Speech, before the Roman Senate, A. D. 64, referring to Cicero, after his exposure of the conspiracy of Catiline. CICERO, In Pisonem, ch. 3, says, "Quintus Catulus, before a crowded meeting of the Senate, named me Father of my Country" (Parentem patriae nominavit). PLUTARCH, Lives: Cicero, ch. 23, sec. 3, describes at some length how the title "Father of his country" (πατέρα πατρίδος) was bestowed upon Cicero, and adds, "He was the first to receive this title, after Cato had given it to him before the people." Cicero nowhere refers to Cato as the coiner of the phrase, so in this Plutarch was probably mistaken. It will be noted that Cicero uses "Parens patriae," but the usual phrase, following Plutarch, is "Pater patriae." PLINY, however, also uses "Parens patriae," and there is a shade of difference, in Latin as in English, between it and "Pater patriae," the latter connoting the more intimate relationship. LUCAN, for instance, De Bello Civili, ii, 7, has "Parens rerum" (The parent of things), while PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles, v, 19, has "Pater familias" (Father of a family).

But Rome was yet free when she styled Cicero Parent and Father of his country. (Sed Roma parentem | Roma patrem patriae Ciceronem libera dixit.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. viii, l. 243. (c. A. D. 120)

Juvenal's use of both terms is interesting, as emphasizing both an official and personal relationship. Cicero was not the only Roman who was called "Pater patriae." MARTIAL, in his Liber Spectaculorum, iii, 11, written to celebrate the opening of the Colosseum in A. D. 80, applies the term to the Emperor Vespasian, and it had already been given to Julius and Augustus Caesar. It was offered to Marius, who refused it. Cosimo di' Medici was so called, and the title was conferred upon Peter the Great by the Russian Senate, in 1721. The famous American example is, of course, George Washington.

A prince whom not in empty flattery we have been led to call Father of his Country. (Principi . . . quem appellavimus Patrem Patriae non adulatione vana adducti.)

SENECA, De Clementia. Bk. i, ch. 14, sec. 2. (C. A. D. 55) Referring to Nero.

<sup>3</sup>
Were an energetic and judicious system to be proposed with your signature it would be a circumstance highly honorable to your fame . . . and doubly entitle you to the glorious republican epithet, The Father of your Country.

HENRY KNOX, Letter to George Washington, 19 March, 1787. See FORD, Washington's Writings. Vol. xi, p. 123.

Every countenance seemed to say, "Long live George Washington, the Father of the People."

UNKNOWN, Article, Pennsylvania Packet, 21 April, 1789, describing Washington's election to the Presidency.

The Father of his Country—We celebrate Washington!

UNKNOWN, Editorial, Pennsylvania Packet, 9 July, 1789, p. 284. (Transactions Colonial Society of Mass., vol. viii, p. 275. )

I hope to have the happiness of . . . saluting you, not merely as the Father of the United States, but of the United Empires of America.

JOHN TRUMBULL, Autobiography, p. 382. (1799)

America says the Father of his Country must have a monument worthy of his exalted place in history.

O. W. HOLMES, Over the Teacups, p. 103. (1891)

<sup>4</sup>
To safeguard the citizens is the greatest [virtue] of the father of his country. (Servare cives maior est patriae patri.)

SENECA, Octavia, l. 444. (c. A. D. 60)

A good Prince ought to purchase to him selfe the name of the father of his Countrie, and not to beare himselfe otherwise towards his subjectes, then a father doeth towards his sonnes.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 209. (1574) Pettie, tr.

He pleased the ladies round him,—with manners soft and bland;

With reason good, they named him,—the father of his land.

W. M. THACKERAY, The King of Brentford. (c. 1855) After Béranger. The Romans had a phrase for it, "Pater urbi" (Father to the town).

FAULT

<sup>5</sup>
Men's years and their faults are always more than they are willing to own.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 452. (1855)

<sup>6</sup>
Flesh upon horses and money with women hide a many faults.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 57. (1917)

<sup>7</sup>
Nobody lives without faults. (Nemo sine crimine vivit.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. i, No. 5. (c. 175 B. C.)

No one is born without faults. (Vitiis nemo sine nascitur.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3, l. 68. (35 B. C.)

A man must have his faults. (Sibi quisque peccat.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 45. (c. A. D. 60)

None of us is without faults. We are men, not angels. (Nemo nostrum non peccat. Homines sumus, non dei.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 75.

Nobody but has his fault.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, i, 4, 15. (1601)

They say, best men are moulded out of faults.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, v, 444. (1604)

Every man has his fault.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, iii, 1, 29. (1608)
All men make faults.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xxxv. (1609)
Many without punishment, but none without fault.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 62. (1633)
Many without punishment, but none without sin.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 17. (1670)
No man liveth without a fault.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1659)
Everyone has his fault, to which he always returns. (Chacun a son défaut, où toujours il revient.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: L'Ivrogne et Sa Femme.
Bk. iii, fab. 7. (1668)

Every man, in fine, has a weak side, if a body could but hit upon't.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Aesop's Fables. No. 392. (1692) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1427, has "Every man hath his weak side."

Every bean has its black.

NATHAN BAILEY, Divers Proverbs, p. 2. (1721)
"This is an excusatory Proverb," says Bailey, "for the Common Failings of Mankind; and intimates, that there is no Man perfect in all Points." The Italians say, "Ogni grano ha la sua semola" (Every grain has its own bran).
See also under COMPENSATION.

What soul is without faults? (Quelle âme est sans défauts!)

ARTHUR RIMBAUD, Une Saison en Enfer. Ch. 5. (1873)

Amongst men who is faultless? (Wei jên shui wu ko ts'o ch'ü.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1512. (1875)

Nobody is faultless.

V. S. LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 64. (1902)

1
For faults committed oft yourself arraign:
In treating wounds, the cure for pain is pain.
(Cum quid peccaris, castiga te ipse subinde: vulnera dum sanas, dolor est medicina doloris.)
CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. iv, No. 40. (c.175 B. C.)

2
Men's faults are characteristic. It is by observing a man's faults that one may come to know his virtues.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. iv, ch. 7. (c. 500 B. C.)
Ku Hung-ming, tr.

Alas! I have never met a man who could see his own faults and arraign himself at the bar of his own conscience.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. v, ch. 26.

3
To have faults and not reform them—that may indeed be called having faults.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xv, ch. 29. (c. 500 B. C.) Legge, tr. Giles, puts it: "The real fault is to have faults and not try to amend them."

Not to know our faults is ignorance; not to correct them is wickedness.

KATABARA EKKEN, Ten Kun (Ten Precepts): On Practice. (1710) Ken Hoshino, tr.

4
I like her with all her faults; nay, like her for her faults.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Way of the World. Act i, sc. 3. (1700)

All his faults are such that one loves him still the better for them.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man. Act i. (1768)

With all thy faults, I love thee still!

WILLIAM COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 206 (1784) Referring to England.

5
Some to hide faire faults can make faire weather.

JOHN DAVIES, Scourge of Folly, p. 44. (1611)

6
He who tells me of my faults instructs me; he who tells me of my virtues robs me.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 281. (1872)

7
Who is faultie, is suspected. (Chi è in difetto, è in suspetto.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 28. (1578)

The faulty stands on his guard.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 794. (1640) RAY, Proverbs, p. 9. (1670)

8
A hydden fault, is halfe pardoned. (Peccato celato è mezo perdonato.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32. (1578)

9
A Fault, wilfully committed, deserveth no Pardon.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 94. (1732)
Happy is the Man, who sees his Faults in his Youth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1792.

He hath more Faults than Hairs.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1892.

The first Faults are theirs that commit them; the second theirs that permit them.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4528.

10
Small Faults indulged are little Thieves, that let in greater.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4191. (1732)
Or, more briefly, "Small faults let in greater."

Neglect mending a small Fault, and 't will soon be a great One.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1755. Johann Paul Richter is credited with saying, "Der Hauptfehler des Menschen bleibt, dass er so viele kleine hat" (The chief fault of man is that he has so many small ones).

11
The fool imputes his faults to others, the wise man confesses his, the righteous avoids either.

SALOMON IBN GABRIEL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 63. (c. 1050)

12
Faults are less serious than crimes. (Vitia enim flagitiis leviora sunt.)

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae. Bk. i, ch. 17. (c. A. D. 150)

1 Our best good fortune is that which corrects our faults. (Das höchste Glück ist das, welches unsere Mängel verbessert.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. (1819)

2 Know your chief fault. (Conocer su defecto rey.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 225. (1647)

3 The fault is as great as he that is faulty.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 371. (1640) The French have the same proverb, "La faute est grande comme celui qui la commet," and so have the Spaniards, "Tan grande es el yerro como el que yerra."

GREAT MEN HAVE GREAT FAULTS, see under GREATNESS.

4 He that commits a fault thinks every one speaks of it.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 556. (1640) He that is foolish in the fault, let him be wise in the punishment.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 557.

5 Every one puts his fault on the Times.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 677. (1640)

Every one lays his Faults upon the Time.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1448. (1732)

Lay the main fault thereof on the badness of the times.

BLACKMORE, The Maid of Sker. Ch. 1. (1872)

6 Faults done by night. will blush by day.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Vision to Electra. (1648)

7 Harde is for any man all fautes to mende.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Much easyar hyt ys to spy ii fautes then amend one.

THOMAS SHARKEY, Life and Letters. Vol. i, ch. 3. (c. 1555)

A fault is sooner found than mended.

ULPIAN FULWELL, Ars Adulandi, sig. H4. (c. 1580)

He may find fault that cannot mend.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 171. (1721)

One mend-fault is worth two find-faults, but one find-fault is better than two make-faults.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735 A variant of the older, "A fault-mender is better than a fault-finder." Mrs. E. L. CHAMBERLAIN, West Worcestershire Words, p. 39, has, "One mend-fault is worth twenty spy-faults," and there is an old jingle, "Many find fault without any end, | And yet do nothing at all to mend."

Tell me my Faults, and mend your own.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1756.

8 He hath (quoth he) but one faute, he is nought.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. xi. (1562)

Such a man hath no fault but one, and if that were amended, all were well: what is that? (quoth an other). In good faith he is naught.

THOMAS WILSON, Arte of Rhelorique, p. 153. (1560)

Your main Fault is, you are good for nothing.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6054. (1732)

9 There are faults, nevertheless, which we desire to overlook. (Sunt delicta tamen, quibus ignovisse velimus.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 347. (c. 20 B. C.)

This measure my books learn to keep, to spare the person, to denounce the fault. (Parcere personis, dicere de vitiis.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, epig. 33, l. 10. (A. D. 93)

Condemn the fault, and not the actor of it?

Why, every fault's condemn'd ere it be done.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, ii, 2, 37. (1604)

10 Fault is committed both within the walls of Troy and without. (Iliacos intra muros peccatur et extra.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 16. (20 B. C.)

There is fault on both sides.

There are faults on both sides.

DEAN HOLE, Then and Now. Ch. 13. (1902)

11 The dog who hunts foulest, hits at most faults.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 1. (1659)

Dogs, that hunt foulest, hit off most Faults.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1318. (1732)

12 Faults are thick where love is thin.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Brit.-Eng., p. 2. (1659)

Where love fails we espy all faults.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 16. (1670)

"When love cools, our faults are seen" is a Scottish form.

Where there is no Love, all are Faults.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5676. (1732)

13 To maintain a fault known is a double fault.

JOHN JEWEL, An Apologie in Defence of the Church of England. (1562)

14 A fault once excused is twice committed.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Marginalia, p. 100. (1590)

Denials make little faults great.

NICHOLAS LING, comp., Politeuphuia, p. 163. (1597)

He that does one fault at first,

And lies to hide it, makes it two.

ISAAC WATTS, Divine Songs. No. 15. (1720)

A Fault once denied, is twice committed.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 93. (1732)

From the French, "Une faute niée est deux fois commise."

Denying a Fault doubles it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1267.

15 Bad men excuse their faults, good men will leave 'em.

BEN JONSON, Catiline. Act. iii, sc. 5. (1611)

16 We confess our faults, in order that our frankness may repair the damage they do us in the eyes of others. (Nous avouons nos défauts, pour réparer par notre sincérité le tort qu'ils nous font dans l'esprit des autres.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 184. (1665)
We never confess our faults except through vanity. (Nous n'avouons jamais nos défauts que par vanité.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées. No. 609.

We confess our faults in the plural, but deny them in the singular.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 132. (1902)

1
Faults of temperament are more common than those of the understanding. (Il y a plus de défauts dans l'humeur que dans l'esprit.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 290. (1665)

2
There are certain faults which, adroitly displayed, shine with greater lustre than virtue itself. (Il y a de certains défauts qui, bien mis en œuvre, brillent plus que la vertu même.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 354. (1665)
We endeavour to take pride in faults that we do not wish to correct. (Nous essayons de nous faire honneur des défauts que nous ne voulons pas corriger.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 442

3
Fortune sometimes makes use of our faults to exalt us. (La fortune se sert quelquefois de nos défauts pour nous élever.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 403. (1665)
There are men whose qualities would never have been recognized but for their faults. (Il y a des gens qui n'auraient jamais fait connaître leurs talents, sans leurs défauts.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 608 (1746)

To certain spirits one must grant their eccentricities. (Gewissen Geistern muss man ihre Idiotismen lassen.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. (1819)

His very faults smack of the raciness of his good qualities.

IRVING, The Sketch Book: John Bull. (1820)
Happy the man when he has not the defects of his qualities. (Heureux l'homme quand il n'a pas les défauts de ses qualités.)

BISHOP FÉLIX ANTOINE DUPANLOUP, Pastoral Letters. (c. 1860)

4
We have scarcely any faults which are not more excusable than the means we adopt to conceal them. (On n'a guère de défauts qui ne soient plus pardonnables que les moyens dont on se sert pour les cacher.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 411. (1665)
What pains our justice takes his faults to hide: With half that pains sure he might cure 'em quite.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

5
By purifying, by cleansing, by profound intuition, one can be free from faults. (Tih, ch'ui, hsüen 'lan, neng wu tzü.)

LAO-TSEZ, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 10. (c. 550 B.C.) Carus, tr.

6
The blemish that is hidden is deemed greater than it is. (Quod tegitur, maius creditur esse malum.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iii, No. 42. (c. A. D. 85)

Martial is speaking of the use of cosmetics.

In all perfect works, as well the fault as the face is to be shown.

JOHN LYL, The Anatomy of Wit: Epistle Dedicatory. (1580)

7
No man beholds clear-eyed his own faults. (οὐδεὶς ἐφ' αὐτοῦ τὰ κακὰ συνῶπ' | σαφῶς.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 631K. (c. 300 B.C.)

How few there are who have courage enough to own their Faults, or resolution enough to amend them!

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1743.

Oxen know not their strength, nor men their faults. (Jên pu chih chi kuo, niu pu chih li ta.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1523. (1875)

8
Let a fault be concealed by its nearness to a virtue. (Lateat vitium proximitate boni.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. ii, l. 662. (c. 1 B.C.)
Pardon the fault. (Da veniam culpae.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. vii, l. 105. (c. 10 B.C.)

The fault is not of the man but of the place. (Non hominis culpa, sed ista loci.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. v, eleg. vii, l. 60. (c. A. D. 9)

9
In every fault there is folly.

JOHN PLATT, Morality, p. 34. (1878)

10
He has no fault except that he has no fault (Nihil peccat, nisi quod nihil peccat.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. ix, epis. 26 (c. A. D. 108)

He is lueles, that is faultles.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1922. (1732)

At the best, my lord, she is a handsome picture, And, that said, all is spoken.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Great Duke of Florence. Act iii, sc. 1. (1627)

Thou hast no faults, or I no faults can spy;

Thou art all beauty, or all blindness I.

CHRISTOPHER CODRINGTON, Lines to Garth, On His Dispensary. (1696) Leigh Hunt states that this epigram was written by Lord Chesterfield in praise of David Mallet's Truth in Rhyme, but it is now generally attributed to Codrington.

It is well that there is no one without a fault, for he would not have a friend in the world.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 66. (1821)

Whatever has not a mixture of imperfection in it soon grows insipid, or seems "stupidly good."

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 67.

Faultily faultless, icily regular, splendidly null, Dead perfection, no more.

TENNYSON, Maud, l. 82. (1855)

He is all fault who hath no fault at all.

TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 132. (1859)

Insipid as the queen upon a card.

TENNYSON, Aylmer's Field, l. 28. (1864)

Faultless to a fault.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book. Pt. ix, l. 1177. (1868)

The old saying is, "Lifeless, faultless."

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 10. (1869)

The absence of flaw in beauty is itself a flaw.

HAVELOCK ELLIS, Impressions and Comments. Ser. i, p. 217. (1914)

1 It is a peculiar mark of vice that we feel more ashamed of our faults before our enemies than before our friends.

PLUTARCH, Moralia: How to Profit by One's Enemies. Sec. 88A. (c. A. D. 95)

2 You could quickly avoid a fault, if you repent having committed it. (Cito culpam effugas si incurrisse paenitet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 139. (c. 43 B. C.)
When a fault is quickly corrected, scandal usually overlooks it. (Ubi peccatum cito corrigitur, fama solet ignoscere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 731.
He invites a sin who overlooks a fault. (Invitat culpam qui peccatum praeterit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 277.
The fault which time has planted time will take away. (Quod aetas vitium posuit aetas auferet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 566.

3 From a neighbor's fault a wise man corrects his own. (Ex vitio alterius sapiens emendat suum.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 177. (c. 43 B. C.)
One man's fault is another man's lesson.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 569. (1855)

It is certainly the depth of ignorance not to know your fault. (Est utique profunda ignorantia nescire quod pecces.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 193. (c. 43 B. C.)
The greatest of faults is to be conscious of none.

THOMAS CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Prophet. (1840)

5 He abounds in sweet faults. (Abundat dulcibus vitiis.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. (c. A. D. 80)
Cited by HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 4.

They say, best men are moulded out of faults; And, for the most, become much more the better For being a little bad.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, v, 1, 444. (1604)

Some people disgust in spite of their virtues; others please in spite of their faults. (Il y a des gens dégoûtants avec du mérite, et d'autres qui plaisent avec des défauts.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 155. (1665)
There are some faults so nearly allied to excellence that we can scarce weed out the vice without eradicating the virtue.

GOLDSMITH, Good-Natured Man. Act i. (1768)
E'en his failings lean'd to Virtue's side.

GOLDSMITH, Deserted Village, l. 164. (1770)

Most of his faults brought their excuse with them.

JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Prior. (1779)
Countries, like people, are loved for their failings.

FRANCIS YEATS-BROWN, Lives of a Bengal Lancer, p. 45. (1930)

AMIALE WEAKNESS, see under WEAKNESS.

6 Every one's faults are not written in their foreheads.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1678)
It is well, that all our faults are not written in our face.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 214. (1721)
If the best man's faults were written on his forehead, it would make him pull his hat over his eyes.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 417. (1855)
All men's faults are not written on their foreheads, and it's quite as well they are not, or hats would need very wide brims.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talks. Ch. 10. (1869)

7 You would spy faults if your eyes were out.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 271. (1678)

8 You display your merits in your palm, but conceal your faults under your arm.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. ii, Apologue 6. (c. 1258)
You know your Virtues well enough, no doubt;

Your Faults are what you need to hear about.

GUITERMAN, A Poet's Proverbs, p. 79. (1924)

9 Don't blame others for your own faults. (Tzù chi yu ts'o hsiu kuai pieh jên.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1805. (1875)

10 Read not my blemishes in the world's report.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, ii, 3, 5. (1606)

11 If little faults . . .
Shall not be wink'd at, how shall we stretch our eye

When capital crimes . . . Appear before us?

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, ii, 2, 55. (1599)

Wink at small faults.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 225. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 156. (1670)

Wink at small faults, for you have great ones yourself.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 341. (1721)
Wink at small faults, unless you cast the first stone.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Wink. (1736)

Wink at small faults—remember thou hast great ones.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1738.

12 Oftentimes excusing of a fault Doth make the fault the worse by the excuse.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, iv, 2, 30. (1596)

I do not write to excuse my faults, but to prevent my readers from imitating them. (Je n'écris pas pour excuser mes fautes, mais pour empêcher mes lecteurs de leur imiter.)

ROUSSEAU, Emile. Bk. iii, footnote. (1762)

1
Shame to him whose cruel striking
Kills for faults of his own liking!
SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, iii, 2, 281.
(1604)

2
O, what a world of vile ill-favour'd faults
Looks handsome in three hundred pounds a year!

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, iii,
4, 32. (1601)

Faults that are rich are fair.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, i, 2, 13. (1608)

3 We cite our faults,
That they may hold excus'd our lawless lives.
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona,
iv, 1, 53. (1594)

We do not confess little faults except to insinuate that we have no great ones. (Nous n'avouons de petits défauts que pour persuader que nous n'en avons pas de grands.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 327. (1665)

4
There is an old saying in Spain, that a man wot would buy a mule without a fault must not buy one at all.

R. S. SURTEES, Handley Cross. Ch. 17. (1854)

The proverb is, "He who wants a mule without fault must walk on foot."

5 Different men have different faults. (Aliud aliis viti est.)

TERENCE, Hecyra, l. 270. (165 B. C.)

6 'Tis a meaner part of sense
To find a fault than taste an excellence.

JOHN WILMOT, EARL OF ROCHESTER, *An Epi-
logue*, l. 6. (c. 1675)

You find fault with a fat goose.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 248. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5902. (1732)

A Carper can carp at anything.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 33. (1732)

Every one knows how to find Fault.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1447. A variant of the longer, "Every one can find fault, few can do better." The Germans have a jingle, "Tadeln kann ein jeder Bauer, | Besser machen wird ihm sauer" (Every clown can find fault; to do better would puzzle him).

They who seek only for faults, see nothing else.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 527. (1855)

7
A fault which humbles a man is of more use to him than a good action which puffs him up.

THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety. (c. 1570)

8
One fault (they say) doth but one pardon need.

GEORGE WITHER, A Satyre, l. 720. (1615)

Where no fault is, there needs no excuse.

UNKNOWN, Machiavel's Dogge, fo. 8. (c. 1617)

There is no need of pardon, where there is no fault committed.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina, p. 83. (1631)

Where no fault is, there needs no pardon.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 208. (1639)

Where no Fault is, there needs no Punishment.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5651. (1732)

9
A fault confessed is more than half amends.

UNKNOWN, Arden of Feversham. Act iv, sc. 4.

(1592) Shakespeare Apocrypha.

A fault confest were half amended.

SIR JOHN HARINGTON, Epigrams. Bk. iii, No. 25.

(1618)

Faults confess'd they say, are half forgiven.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Prothetess. Act
v, sc. 3. (1622)

We need not be distressed by our faults if we have the strength to confess them. (On doit se consoler de ses fautes, quand on a la force de les avouer.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées. No.

641. (1665) The French proverb has two forms, "Faute avouée est à demi amendée," and "Péché avoué est à moitié pardonné."

Confession of a fault makes half amends.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 5. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1140. (1732)

A fault confessed is a new virtue added to a man.

L. S. KNOWLES, The Love-Chase. Act i, sc. 2.
(1837)

A fault confessed is half redressed.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 285. (1855)

II—Faults of Others

10
Jupiter has loaded us with two wallets: the one filled with our own faults he has placed at our backs, the second, heavy with the faults of others, he has hung before. From this circumstance, we are not able to see our own faults, but as soon as others make a slip, we are ready to censure.

(Peras imposuit Iuppiter nobis duas:
propriis repletam vitiis post tergum dedit, alienis ante pectus suspendit gravem.
Hac re videre nostra mala non possumus;
alii simul delinquant, censores sumus.)

AESOP, Fables: The Two Wallets. (c. 600 B. C.)

As rendered by PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 10. (c. 25 B. C.) Rabelais summarizes the fable in Pantagruel, bk. iii, ch. 15.

Great Jove, in his paternal care,
Has giv'n a man two Bags to bear;
That which his own default contains
Behind his back unseen remains;
But that which others' vice attests
Swags full in view before our breasts.
Hence we're inevitably blind,
Relating to the Bag behind;
But when our neighbours misdeem,
Our censures are exceeding keen.

CHRISTOPHER SMART, The Two Bags: Phaedrus,
iv, 10. (1765)

Everyone has his faults, but we do not see the wallet on our own back. (Suus cuique attributus est error: | sed non videmus manticae quod in tergost.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode xxii, l. 20. (c. 57 B. C.)

Whoso dubs me madman shall hear as much in reply, and shall learn to look behind on what is hanging from his back, and which he never notices. (Dixerit insanum qui me, totidem audiet atque | respiciere ignoto discet pendentia tergo.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, Sat. 3, l. 298. (30 B.C.)
The vices of others we keep before our eyes, our own behind our back. (Aliena vitia in oculis habemus, a tergo nostra sunt.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. ii, ch. 28. (c. A.D. 55)
Nobody tries to search into himself—nobody; all watch the wallet on the back that walks before. (Ut nemo in sese temptat descendere, nemo, | sed praecedenti spectatur mantica tergo!)

PERSIUS, Satires. No. iv, l. 23. (c. A.D. 58)
We do not see what is in the wallet—which hangs behind us. (Non videmus manticae, quod in tergo est.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. vi, No. 90. (1523)
We see not what sits on our shoulder.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 52. (1639)
Other mens sinnes wee ever beare in mind;
None sees the fardel of his faults behind.

ROBERT HERRICK, Our Own Sinnes. (1648)
The pouch behind our own defects must store,
The faults of others lodge in that before.
(Il fit pour nos défauts la poche de derrière,
Et celle de devant pour les défauts d'autrui.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: La Besace. (1668)
We see not what is in the Wallet behind.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5453. (1732)
Happy Tom Crump ne'er sees his own Hump.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758.
Every body can see the hump on his friend's shoulders, but it takes some effort to see our own.

ALEXANDER MACLAREN, Exposition of Matthew, i, 327. (1905)

The camel never sees its own hump, but that of its brother is always before its eyes.

CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 330. (1938)

1 We generally reproach others with faults similar to our own.

Babylonian Talmud: Kedushin, fo. 70b. (c. 450)
You bring to light your own faults by complaining of the faults of others.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penimim (Choice of Pearls). No. 604. (c. 1050)

2 If you use the heart with which you reprove others to reprove yourself, there will be fewer faults; if you use the heart with which you forgive yourself to forgive others, there will be perfect friendship.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 364. (1938)
A Chinese proverb.

3 As judge, condemn your own faults more than another's. (Plus tua quam alterius damnabis crimina iudex.)

COLUMBANUS, Carmen Monostichon, l. 27. (c. A.D. 600)

4 If a man attack his own failings instead of those of others, will he not remedy his personal faults?

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xii, ch. 21. (c. 500 B.C.)

He who demands much from himself and little from others avoids resentment.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xv, ch. 14.

5 A man winnows his neighbor's faults like chaff, but hides his own, even as a dishonest gambler hides a losing throw.

DHAMMAPALA, Commentaries. Verse 252. (c. 475)

6 Let every one sweep the snow from before his own door, and not trouble himself about the frost on his neighbor's tiles.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 281. (1872)

7 When you survey your own sins, your eyes are rheumy and daubed with ointment; why, when you view the faults of your friends, are you as keen of sight as an eagle or as a serpent of Epidaurus? (Cum tua pervideas oculis mala lippus inunctis, | cur in amicorum vitiis tam cernis acutum | quam aut aquila aut serpens Epidaurius?)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3, l. 25. (35 B.C.)
Epidaurus was famous for the worship of Aesculapius, whose symbol was a serpent.
How blind is Pride! what Eagles we are still
In matters that belong to other men!
What Beetles in our own!

GEORGE CHAPMAN, All Fools. Act iv, sc. 1.
(1605) Chapman is thinking of the proverbial comparison, "Blind as a beetle." See under BLINDNESS.

He is eagle-eyed in other mens matters, but as blind as a buzzard in his own.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 26. (1633)

Lynxes towards others, moles towards ourselves. (Lynx envers nos pareils, et taupes envers nous.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: La Besace. (1668) RABELAIS, bk. iv, ch. 5, says, "In others' houses looking more sharply than a lynx, in his own blinder than a mole" (En maisons estranges voyant plus pénétrament qu'un lince, en sa maison propre estoit plus aveugle que taulpe).

Eagle-sighted into our friends' faults, blear-ey'd to our own.

JOHN WILSON, tr., The Praise of Folly. Sec. 18. (1668)

8 One who expects his friend not to be offended by his own warts, will pardon the other's pimples. (Qui ne tuberibus propriis offendat amicum | postulat, ignoscet verrucis illius.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3, l. 73. (35 B.C.)

9 The same faults which in others are heavy and insupportable are in ourselves imperceptible. (Les mêmes défauts qui dans les autres sont lourds et insupportables sont chez nous comme dans leur centre.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Des Jugements. (1688)

10 If we had no faults, we should not take so much pleasure in remarking them in others. (Si nous n'avions point de défauts, nous ne prendrions pas tant de plaisir à en remarquer dans les autres.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 31. (1665)

<sup>1</sup> We all find in others the faults that are found in ourselves. (Tout le monde trouve à redire en autrui ce qu'on trouve à redire en lui.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées. No. 567. (1665)

A man sooner finds out his own foibles in a stranger than any other foibles.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Of Men and Manners, p. 68. (c. 1760)

Do you wish to find out a person's weak points? Note the failings he has the quickest eye for in others.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth. (1827)

<sup>2</sup> Why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye? Or how wilt thou say to thy brother, Let me pull out the mote out of thine eye; and, behold, a beam is in thine own eye? Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beam out of thine own eye. (ὁποκριτά, ἔκβαλε πρῶτον ἐκ τοῦ ὀφθαλμοῦ σου τὴν δοκόν.)

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 3-5. (c. A. D. 50.)

The Vulgate is, "Hypocrita, eice primum trabem de oculo tuo." See also Luke, vi, 41.

Rarely is anyone sufficiently critical of himself. (Rarum est enim ut satis se quisque vereatur.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. x, ch. vii, sec. 24. (c. 80 A. D.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 38, who, however, gives "vereatur" the meaning of venerate or stand in awe of: "Il est rare qu'on se respecte assez soi-même."

If one said to another, "Remove the splinter from between thine eyes," the reply was, "Remove the beam from between thine own eyes."

Talmud: Baba Bathra, fo. 15b. (c. 450)

To cast out the straw from another's eye. (Festucam ex alterius oculo eicere.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. vi, No. 91. (1508)

Whilst he boasteth that he can discern the least mote in the eye of another, he is not able to see the huge block that puts out the sight of both his eyes. (Se glorifiant veoir vn festu en l'œil d'autrui, ne void vne grosse souche laquelle luy poche les deux œilz.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 25. (1545)

Ye can see a mote in an other mans iye, But ye can not see a balke in your owne.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

We can spie a moate in anothers eye, and not a beam in our own.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 160. (1574) Pettie, tr.

He that sees the mote in another's eye had need to see the beam in his own. (Es menester que el que vee la mota en el ojo ajeno, vea la viga en el suyo.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43. (1615)

Hee will then quickly take occasion to be angry with her, and euery mote (as the prouerbe goeth) is a beame in his eye.

ROBERT TOTT, Blazon of Jealousie, p. 29. (1615)

In other men we faults can spy,
And blame the mote that dims their eye;
Each little speck and blemish find,
To our own stronger errors blind.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. i, fab. 38. (1727) Quoted by FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1740.

<sup>3</sup> When you are on the point of making some ugly fling at your neighbor, think first of your own faults. (ὅταν τι μέλλῃς τὸν πέλας κακηγορεῖν, | αὐτὸς τὰ σαυτοῦ πρῶτον ἐπισκέπτου κακά.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 710K. (c. 300 B. C.) Do you never look at yourself when you abuse another person? (Non soles respicere te, quom dicit iniuste alteri?)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 612. (c. 195 B. C.)

When with sharp eye another's faults you find,
Not seeing your own, you're blamed in turn as blind.

(Cum vitia alterius satis acri lumine cernas, nec tua prospicias, fis verso crimine caecus.)

CATO (?), Collectio Monostichorum, l. 48. (c. 175 B. C.)

Before you accuse another, take a look at your own life. (Cum accusas alium, propriam prius inspicere vitam.)

CATO (?), Collectio Monostichorum, l. 41.

Why do you look so sharp, malignant man,
At others' faults, yet overlook your own?

(τί τὰλλότριον, ἀνθρώπε βασκανώτατε, κακὸν ὀξύδορκεις, τὸ δ' ἴδιον παραβλέπεις;)

PLUTARCH, Moralia, 469B, 515D. (c. A. D. 95)

Quoted as "the remark addressed to a meddlesome man."

<sup>4</sup> He who damns another's faults should be a paragon himself. (Qui alterum incusat probri, sumpse enitere oportet.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus, l. 160. (c. 186 B. C.) Evidently a proverb from the way it is quoted. On the other hand, another proverb says, "Nulli suis peccatis impediuntur quominus alterius peccata demonstrare possint" (No one is prevented by his own faults from pointing out those of another).

Everything you reprove in another, you must carefully avoid in yourself. (Omnia quae vindicaris in altero, tibi ipsi vehementer fugienda sunt.)

CICERO, In Verrem. No ii, ch. 3, sec. 4. (70 B. C.)

If you intend to put a man to rights, put yourself to rights first.

Midrash: Psalms Rabbah, 53. (c. 550)

Who wil say yl of others, first let hym thinke on hym selfe. (Chi vuol dir mal d'altrui, prima si pensi di lui.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578)

The dead woman was frightened at the one with her throat cut. (Espantóse la muerta de la degollada.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43. (1615)

A depraved woman is shocked at the peccadilloes of her neighbor.

He that mocks a cripple ought to be whole.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 567.

(1640) "Who laughs at a crooked man should walk very straight."

For a Drunkard to inveigh against Intemperance, is for the Pot to call the Kettle black.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 446. (1693) See POT AND KETTLE.

Point not at others' Spots with a foul Finger.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3890. (1732)

Clean your Finger before you point at my Spots.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1750.

E'er you remark another's sin,

Bid your own conscience look within.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1741.

He that is conscious of a stink in his Breeches, is jealous of every Wrinkle in another's Nose.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1751.

Do not ridicule the thin-bearded as long as thou thyself art without a beard.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 601. (1817)

1 Refrain from seeing and speaking of the vices of mankind, which you know are in yourself.

MOHAMMED, Sunnah. (c. 630) Sayings of Muhammad, p. 77. "Forget others' faults by remembering your own."

2 The first part of the night, think of your own faults; the latter part [while you are asleep], think of the faults of others.

ARTHUR E. MOULE, Proverbs from Ningpo.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, p. 328. (1872)

3 Every one looks to another, but not to himself.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Newes from the Church. (1613)

4 You see the lice on another, but can't see the ticks on yourself. (In alio peduculum vides, in te ricinum non vides.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 57. (c. A. D. 60)

5 Be sure that they who tell you of others' faults will tell your faults to others.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. ii, Apologue 4. (c. 1258)

6 Men's faults do seldom to themselves appear.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 633. (1594)

7 As the eye seeth all things and cannot see itself; so we can see other men's faults, but not our own.

HENRY SMITH, Sermons, i, 284. (c. 1585)

8 With regard to your own things you are an Argus, with respect to others' you are blind. (Res tua te reperit Argus, res altera caecum.)

UGOBARDUS SULMONENSIS, Fable 58. (c. 1300)

The Italians say, "In casa, Argo; di fuori, talpa" (At home, an Argus; outside, a mole).

(As the Proverb is) . . . at home wee see no more then Moles, but abroad as much as Argus.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 160. (1574) Pettie, tr.

9 We see Time's furrows on another's brow, And Death intrench'd, preparing his assault; How few themselves, in that just mirror, see!

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Nt. v, l. 627. (1742)

FAVOR

See also Benefit, Kindness

10 An ounce of favour is worth more than a pound of justice.

W. G. BENHAM, Proverbs, p. 736. (1907)

11 You had better refuse a favour gracefully than to grant it clumsily.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 18 March, 1751.

12 The greater the favor, the greater the obligation. (Quin maximo cuique plurimum debeat.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 15, sec. 49. (c. 45 B. C.)

13 A denial of a favor is not an invasion of a right.

J. FENIMORE COOPER, The American Democrat. Ch. 11. (1838)

14 Favors ill-placed I adjudge injuries. (Benefacta male locata, malefacta arbitrari.)

ENNIUS, Aphorisms. (c. 175 B. C.) Quoted by CICERO, De Officiis, ii, 18. Paraphrased in an English jingle, "A favour ill-placed is a great waste."

15 I have found favour in the sight of the king. (Inveni in conspectu regis gratiam.)

Old Testament: Esther, v, 8. (c. 250 B. C.)

To bring one in fauour with a man, insinuate aliquem alteri.

JOHN BARET, An Alvearie. Sig. F251. (1580)

[He] found no favour in his Ladies Eyes.

DRYDEN, Theodore and Honoria, l. 19. (1700)

16 The favour of the great is no inheritance.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733.

Great men's favours are uncertain.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Favour. (1736)

17 Most people return small Favours, acknowledge middling ones, and repay great ones with Ingratitude.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1751. The French say, "Trop grande faveur n'est pas bonne" (Too great a favor is not good).

18 All Things are not to be granted at all Times.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 562. (1732)

One Favour qualifies for another.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3751.

19 He who asks for more than he needs merits a refusal.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 575. (c. 1050)

He who seeks a favor of the avaricious is like him who tries to catch fish in the wilderness.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 583. (c. 1050) Ascher, tr. Evidently from the Latin proverb: "In aëre piscari, in mare venari." (To fish in the air, to hunt in the sea.) Mareh Musar (letter

n) has, "He who solicits favors from the avacious resembles one who seeks wisdom from women, chastity from the prostitute, and who attempts to catch fish in the desert."

<sup>1</sup> Favor is a symbol of sovereignty when it is practised by weak men. (Gunst als Symbol der Souveränität, von schwachen Menschen ausgeübt.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. (1819)

<sup>2</sup> As a wise man saith, pleasures and favours are not to be done either to a childe or to an olde man. For the one forgetteth them, the other dyeth before he have occasion to requite them.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 236. (1574) Pettie, tr.

<sup>3</sup> He whom I favor wins. (Cui adhaereo prae-est.)

HENRY VIII of England, Motto, on his tent in the Field of the Cloth of Gold, June, 1520.

Without favour none will know you, and with it you will not know yourself.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 165. (1640) When out of Favour, none know thee; when in, thou dost not know thyself.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1753.

<sup>5</sup> Favour will as surely perish as life.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (2nd ed.) No. 1053. (1650)

<sup>6</sup> Those who have had, and who may yet have, occasion to ask great favors, should never ask small ones.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to General Lafayette, 1786.

<sup>7</sup> You goe about to currey fauour.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and his England (Arber), p. 368. (1580) "To curry favor" is said to refer to a famous horse, Fauvel, in an old French romance.

<sup>8</sup> I easily regain favor with myself. (Mecum facile redeo in gratium.)

PHAE DRUS, Fables. Bk. v, fab. 3. (c. 25 B. C.)

<sup>9</sup> The man is dishonest who knows how to accept a favor but does not know how to return it. (Improbis est homo, qui beneficium scit accipere, et reddere nescit.)

PLAUTUS, Persa, l. 762. (c. 200 B. C.)

He who knows not how to grant a favor has no right to seek one. (Beneficium dare qui nescit iniuste petit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 59. (c. 43 B. C.)

<sup>10</sup> Be not lavish of favors; it leadeth to servility, producing slackness.

PTAH-HOTEP, Instruction. No. 16. (c. 3550 B. C.) Priese Papyrus. Gunn, tr.

<sup>11</sup> He has received a favor who has granted one to a worthy person. (Beneficium dando accipit qui digno dedit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 68. (c. 43 B. C.) He who accords a favor to the good in part receives it. (Probo beneficium qui dat ex parte accipit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 541.

To accept a favour from a friend is to confer one.

CHURTON COLLINS, Aphorisms, p. 98. (c. 1900)

<sup>12</sup> Who claims to have granted a favor asks for one. (Beneficium qui dedisse se dicit petit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 71. (c. 43 B. C.)

To confer repeated favor is to teach how it should be repaid. (Beneficium saepe dare docere est reddere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 73.

You will easily find folk to do favors if you cultivate those who have done them. (Facile invenies qui bene faciant cum qui fecerunt coles.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 225.

Unwelcome are the favors whose attendant is fear. (Ingrata sunt beneficia quibus comes est metus.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 308.

<sup>13</sup> Be forgetful of favors given, and mindful of favors received. (Shih 'hui wu nien, shou ên mo wang.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1908. (1875)

Row with the stream in doing a favor. (Shun shui t'ui chou tso jên ch'ing.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1897. Give wine to one who is fond of it, give books to a student.

<sup>14</sup> The favor of ignoble men can be won only by ignoble means. (Conciliari nisi turpi ratione amor turpium non potest.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xxix, sec. 11. (c. A. D. 65)

<sup>15</sup> One pays a high price for small favors. (Magno parva constare.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxiv, sec. 7. (c. A. D. 64) The Japanese have a proverb, "When you buy a vase cheap, look for the flaw; when a man offers favors, look for the motive."

<sup>16</sup> No gentleman will ask as a favor what is not due him as a reward. (Neutiquam officium liberi esse hominis puto | quom is nil mereat.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 330. (166 B. C.)

Never ask as a favor what you can take by force. (No pidas de grado lo que puedes tomar por fuerza.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 21. (1605)

Never claim as a right what you can ask as a favour.

CHURTON COLLINS, Aphorisms. (c. 1900)

<sup>17</sup> Favor humiliates. (Tsung wéi hsia.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 13. (c. 550 B. C.) Carus, tr.

Of all bitternesses, said the sage, none exceeds that of soliciting favors.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 569. (c. 1050) A paraphrase of Mishlei Shualim, fable 87. ALGAZILI, Ethics (ii, 21, 70), says: "The solicitation of favors is the severest death."

Though riches may be acquired by seeking favor, they can never compensate for the degradation of seeking.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 585. (c. 1050) Paraphrase from ALGAZILI, Ethics, ii, 21, 24.

1 She granted you the last favour (as they call it).

WILLIAM WYCHERLEY, The Plain-Dealer. Act v, sc. 3. (1676) From the French, les dernières faveurs.

You think it more dangerous to be seen in Conversation with me, than to allow some other Men the last favour.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act 3, sc. 14. (1695)

FEAR

See also Hope and Fear

2 It is torture to fear what you cannot overcome. (Crux est, si metuas, vincere quod nequeas.)

ANACHARSIS, Sententiae. (c. 550 B.C.) See AUSONIUS, Septem Sapientum Sententiae. Pt. vii, l. 4.

It is foolish to fear what cannot be avoided. (Stultitia est timere quod vitari non potest.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 682. (c. 43 B.C.) Al fearfulness is folly. (Ogni timidita è vitio.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32. (1578)

3 Fro day to day in armes so he spedde,
That alle the Grekes as the deeth him dredde.
(Divenne in arme si feroce e forte.
(he gli Greci il temean come la morte.)

BOCCACCIO, Il Filostrato. Canto i, st. 46. (c. 1350) CHAUCER, tr., Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. i, l. 482. (c. 1380) Fear him like death.

Timidus Plutus, an old proverb, As fearful as Plutus, . . . trusting no man.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy, i, ii, 3, 13. (1621)

A Latin proverb on the moral cowardice which it is the character of riches to generate, Timidus Plutus.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 5. (1853)

5 Better a fearful end than fear without end.
(Besser ein ende mit Schrecken, als ein Schrecken ohne Ende.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 346. A German proverb.

The fear of one increases the courage of the other. (Il timor dell' uno, aummenta l' ardir dell' altro.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 213. Italian.

6 The first duty for a man is still that of subduing Fear. . . . A man's acts are slavish . . . till he have got Fear under his feet.

THOMAS CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero-Worship. Ch. 1. (1840)

7 Fear is not a lasting teacher of duty. (Timor non est diuturnus magister officii.)

CICERO, Philippicae. No. ii, sec. 36 (44 B.C.)

8 He suffers as punishment the fear of punishment. (Excutitur poenamque luit formidine poenae.)

CLAUDIAN, In Rufinum. Bk. ii, l. 140. (395 A.D.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 19.

9 Fear is so afraid that it fears even that which could help. (Adeo pavor etiam auxilia formidat.)

QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS, De Rebus Gestis Alexandri Magni. Bk. iii, ch. 11. (c. 50 A.D.)

10 Thy soul is smit with coward fear. (L' anima tua è da viltade offesa.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto ii, l. 45. (c. 1300)

11 Those who came were not afraid; those who were afraid did not come.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 684. (1872)

12 Let's fear no storm, before we feel a show'r.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, The Barons' Wars. Bk. iii, l. 55 (1596) See also under TROUBLE.

13 Fear is an instructor of great sagacity, and the herald of all revolutions.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Compensation. (1841) We are afraid of truth, afraid of fortune, afraid of death, and afraid of each other.

EMERSON, Essays: Self-Reliance. (1841)

If I quake, what matters it what I quake at?

EMERSON, Essays: Character. (1844)

He has not learned the lesson of life who does not every day surmount a fear.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude. Courage (1870)

14 It is not death or hardship that is a fearful thing, but the fear of hardship or death. (οὐ γὰρ θάνατος ἢ πόνος φοβερόν, ἀλλὰ τὸ φοβεῖσθαι πόνον ἢ θάνατον.)

EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 1, sec. 13. (c. A.D. 100) The French say, "Qui craint de souffrir, souffre de crainte" (Who fears to suffer, suffers from fear).

Whenever conscience commands anything, there is only one thing to fear, and that is fear.

ST. THERESA OF AVILA, Maxim. (c. 1575) See WALSH, Religion and Health, p. 52.

That of which I stand most in fear is fear. (C'est de quoy j'ay le plus de peur que la peur.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 17. (1580)

Nothing is terrible except fear itself.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum: Fortitudo. (1605)

Nothing is so much to be feared as fear.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal. (c. 1860) See EMERSON, Thoreau.

The only thing to fear is fear.

F. D. ROOSEVELT, First Inaugural Address, 4 March, 1933, and in subsequent addresses.

1 There is no medicine for fear.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 96. (c. 1599)

There is no remedy for fear but cut off the head.

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 319. (1721)
"Panic fear is far beyond all arguments."

2 Al the weapons of London, wyl not arme feare.
(Tutte le arme di Londra, non armerion la paura.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32. (1578)

All the weapons of war will not arm Fear.

JOHN DAVIES, The Scourge of Folly. Ch. 78. (1611)

All the arms of England shall not arm fear.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 724. (1640)

3 He that fears you present, will hate you absent.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2101. (1732)

WHOM THEY FEAR THEY HATE, see under HATE.

4 'Twas Fear that first put on Arms.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5317. (1732)

5 Fear hath a quick ear.

EDMUND GAYTON, Festivious Notes on Don Quixot, p. 65. (1654)

6 Fear not. (Nolite timere.)

Old Testament: Genesis, xliii, 23. (c. 550 B. C.)

Do not fear. (Noli metuere.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 556. (161 B. C.)

Put aside your fear. (Pone metum.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. v, eleg. 2, l. 3. (c. A. D. 9)

7 Fears are divided in the midst.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 641 (1640)

8 Feare may force a man to cast beyond the moone.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 4. (1546)
See also under MOON.

9 Men seyn, who-so of every grace [grass] hath drede,

Let hym beware to walk in any mede.

THOMAS HOCCELEVE, De Regimine Principum, l. 1887. (c. 1412)

He that feareth euery bush, must neuer goe a birding.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 354. (1580) See also under BUSH.

He that is afayrd of euery starting grasse, may not walke in a meddow.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Marginalia, p. 192. (c. 1582)

He that is redd [afraid] for windlestraws should not sleep in lees [unploughed land].

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 40. (c. 1595) Windlestraws are dried stalks of weeds left standing after the seed has fallen.

Let him that is skared by leaves keep from the wood.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Peur. (1611)

GEORGE HERBERT in the second edition of Jacula Prudentum (1651) polishes this to, "He that is afraid of leaves goes not to the wood." RAY, Proverbs, p. 55, says this is a French proverb Englished, the French being, "Qui a peur de feuilles ne doit aller au bois," which Ray renders, "He that's afraid of leaves must not come in a wood."

Let not him that fears feathers come among wild-fowl.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 51. (1640)

He that's afraid of the wagging of feathers, must keep from among wild fowl.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 55. (1670)

He that's afraid of every grass must not sleep in a meadow.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 195. (1710)

10 Pale fear seized everyone. (πάντας ὑπὸ χλωρόν δέος εἶλεν.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. viii, l. 77. (c. 850 B. C.) Repeated frequently, with variations. For instance, Odyssey, xi, 43, has, ἐμὲ δὲ χλωρόν δέος ἤρει (Pale fear seized me).

Eek the pale drede.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knights Tale, l. 1140. (c. 1386)

11 Panic, handmaid of numbing fear. (φύξα. φόβου κρύοντος ἐταίρη.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 2 (c. 850 B. C.) PLUTARCH, Moralia, 356D, says that the first to learn of the dismembering of Osiris were the Pans and Satyrs, and so "even to this day, the sudden confusion and consternation of a crowd is called a panic."

These are called panic fears. (Ils nomment cela terreurs paniques.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 17. (1580) Montaigne is describing the terror which overtook the people of Carthage. ERASMUS, Adagia, Chil. ii, cent. x, No. 19; Chil. iii, cent. vii, No. 3, refers to it as "Panicus casus," a transliteration of the Greek παρικός, belonging to or fit for Pan.

No fear is so ruinous and uncontrollable as panic fear. For other fears are groundless, but this fear is witless. (Nulli itaque tam perniciosi, tam inrevocabiles quam lymphatici metus sunt. Ceteri enim sine ratione, hi sine mente sunt.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xiii, sec. 9. (c. A. D. 65)

12 Fear and Threats climb to the selfsame spot the owner does. (Timor et Minae | scandunt eodem quo dominus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode. 1, l. 37 (23 B. C.)

13 A good scare is worth more to a man than good advice.

E. W. HOWE, Howe's Monthly. (c. 1930)

14 He that fleeth from the fear shall fall into the pit; and he that getteth up out of the pit shall be taken in the snare. (Qui fugerit a facie pavoris, cadet in foveam: et qui conscenderit de fovea, capietur laqueo.)

Old Testament: Jeremiah, xlviii, 44. (c. 700 B. C.)

<sup>1</sup> The less there is of fear the less there is of danger. (Quo timoris minus est, eo minus periculi est.)

LIVY, Ab Urbe Condita. Bk. xxii, ch. 5, sec. 2. (25 B. C.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, iii, 6.

Foolish fear doubleth danger.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1563. (1732)

<sup>2</sup> Men are eager to tread underfoot what once they feared. (Nam cupide conculcatur nimis ante metutum.)

LUCRETIVS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. v, l. 1140. (c. 45 B. C.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 12.

<sup>3</sup> A thing imperious is fear. (Res est inperiosa timor.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xi, No. 58. (A. D. 93) The strongest passion is fear. (La plus forte passion, c'est la peur.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. ix, fab. 15. (1678)

There is no passion so contagious as that of fear. (Il n'est passion contagieuse comme celle de la peur.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 47. (1580)

Fear is stronger than Love.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1513. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> From fear of breaking it, you break the crystal. (Frangere dum metuus, franges crystal-lina.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiv, epig. 111. (C. A. D. 85)

<sup>5</sup> Whom a man fears he wishes to perish. (Quem metuit quisque, perisse cupit.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. ii, eleg. 2, l. 10. (c. 13 B. C.)

<sup>6</sup> Fear itself made her daring. (Audacem fecerat ipse timor.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. iii, l. 644. (c. A. D. 8)

One must have courage even to fear. (Fault il du courage à crainte.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 6. (1595) The French also say, "Le courage est souvent un effet de la peur" (Courage is often a result of fear).

Despair and confidence both banish fear.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Doomesday, lx, 55. (1614)

Fear loves the idea of danger. (La peur aime l'idée du danger.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 63. (1810)

<sup>7</sup> He was sorer frayed than hurt.

JEHAN PALSOGRAVE, L'Éclaircissement de la Langue Françoisse, p. 558. (1530)

You are like the Melun eels, you cry out before you are hurt. (Vous semblez les anguilles de Melun, vous criez d'avant qu'on vous escorche.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 47. (1534)

More afraid than hurt.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 4. (1546)

Certainly thou art more afraid then hurte.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 189. (1579) Thus more afraid than hurt you often are.

JOHN CLAVELL, A Recantation of an Ill Led Life, p. 12. (1628)

He is war fleyit [frightened] nor he is hurt.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 48. (c. 1595)

Ten times more frightened than hurt.

STERNE, Sentimental Journey, p. 34. (1768)

Death, like life, is an affair of being more frightened than hurt.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Erewhon. Ch. 13. (1872)

<sup>8</sup> If you are terrible to many, beware of many. (Multis terribilis, caveto multos.)

PERIANDER, Sententiae. (c. 600 B. C.) See AU-SONTUS, Septem Sapientum Sententiae. Sec. iv, l. 5.

He must fear many whom many fear. (Necesse est multos timeat quem multus timeat.)

DECIMUS LABERIUS, Mime. (50 B. C.) Laberius had been forced by Caesar to appear on the stage and act in his own mimes in competition with Pubilius Syrus. In revenge, he ventured to make several thrusts at Caesar, of which the line given above was one. Every eye in the theatre turned upon Caesar when it was spoken, but he sat unmoved. Quoted by MACROBIUS, i, 7, and by SENECA, De Ira, ii, 11. PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae, No. 379 (43 B. C.), gives the usual proverbial form, "Multos timere debet quem multi timent." This form is quoted by BACON, Ornamenta Rationalia. No. 32.

No one is fearful to the many but fear from the many recoils upon his head. (Neque quemquam multis metuendum esse, quin ad eum ex multis formido reccidat.)

SALLUST, Ad Caesarem Senem. Ch. 3. (c. 46 B. C.) Fear always recoils upon those who inspire it. . . . Whatever terrifies must also tremble. (Semper in auctores redundat timor. . . . Quidquid terret et trepidat.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. ii, ch. 11, sec. 3. (c. A. D. 55) He who causes fear is himself more fearful. (Qui terret, plus ipse timet.)

CLAUDIAN, De Quarto Consulatu Honorii Augusti, l. 290. (c. A. D. 395)

Fear him who fears thee, even though he be a fly and thou an elephant.

SADI, Aphorisms. No. 4. (c. 1250)

Who is feared most, fears most.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Forren Newes: From Spaine. (1613)

Feared men be fearful.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 208. (1639)

<sup>9</sup> It was fear first created gods in the world. (Primus in orbe deos fecit timor.)

PETRONIUS, Fragments. Fr. 3, Loeb. (c. A. D. 60) STATIUS uses the same line in his Thebaid, bk. iii, l. 661 (c. A. D. 90), and it is usually attributed to him, but it seems probable that he took it from Petronius.

'Twas only fear first in the world made gods.

BEN JONSON, Sejanus. Act ii, sc. 2. (1603)

Fear made the gods; audacity has made kings.

PROSPER DE CRÉBILLON, Catiline. (1749)

<sup>1</sup> I fear no man and supplicate no man. (Non metuo nec ego quoquam supplico.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 225. (190 B. C.)
You blush to fear even Caesar. (Erubescis Caesarem timere.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. vi, ch. 1, sec. 15. (C. A. D. 60)

My name's William Dreadnaught. (Je m'appelle Guillaume sans peur.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 35. (1552)

<sup>2</sup> Happy is the man that feareth alway: but he that hardeneth his heart shall fall into mischief. (Beatus homo, qui semper est pavidus.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxviii, 14. (c. 350 B. C.)
The mind which knows how to fear can take the road safely. (Animus vereri qui scit, scit tuto ingredi.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 3. (c. 43 B. C.)
You must always fear when you wish to be safe. (Metuendum est semper, esse cum tutus velis.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 400.
He who fears all snares falls into none. (Qui omnes insidias timet in nullas incidit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 594.

Fear is one part of Prudence.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1412. (1732)
Wise Fear begets Care.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6355. (1732)
Early and provident fear is the mother of safety.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, on the Unitarian petition, 11 May, 1792.

Fear rightly used is the father of courage and the mother of safety.

HENRY H. TWEEDY, Sermon, Princeton chapel, 1 March, 1931.

<sup>3</sup> Endless are the torments of him who fears himself. (Adsidia ei sunt tormenta qui se ipsum timet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 49. (c. 43 B. C.)
Daily is he damned who always fears. (Cotidie damnatur qui semper timet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 112.
Alas, how wretched to be aged by fear. (Eheu quam miserum est fieri metuendo senem.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 187.
When fear comes, sleep has scanty place. (Metus cum venit, rarum habet somnus locum.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 359.
No one is more miserable than he who lives in fear. (Numquam non miser est qui quod timeat cogitat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 458.

<sup>4</sup> Fear, not clemency, restrains the wicked. (Metus improbos compescit non clementia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 398. (c. 43 B. C.)
Fear and shame much sin doth tame.

UNKNOWN, Robin Conscience: Motto, l. 310. (c. 1550) See HAZLITT, Early Popular Poetry, iii, 246.

Fear keeps the garden better than the gardener.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 270.

(1640) Dudley Nichols is credited with the epigram, "The highest fence is fear."

Fear, the Beadle of the Law.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1054.
Fear keeps and looks to the Vineyard, and not the owner.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1070.

<sup>5</sup> What you fear happens sooner than you expect. (Quod timeas citius quam quod speres evenit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 559. (c. 43 B. C.)
Thou fear'st I am in love with thee (my deare), I prythe feare not. It comes with a feare.

EDWARD GUILPIN, Skialetheia, p. 24. (1598)

Fear, instead of avoiding, invites danger.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 21 Sept., 1747.
The proverb . . . says, It comes with a fear. That is, I suppose, what they fear generally happens, because there is generally occasion for the fear.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, vi, 205. (1748)
Dream of that constable, his name is Fear, he'll be at your heels till you die.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws Ch. 4. (1843)

The danger which a man fears, of that will he die. (Del mal que el hombre teme, de aquel se muere.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 282. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

The thing we fear we bring to pass.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine, xxv, 143. (1908)

<sup>6</sup> He who can hurt is dreaded even when not present. (Qui pote nocere timetur cum etiam non adest.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 604. (c. 43 B. C.)
That which is to be feared deceives you, if you heed it not. (Quod est timendum decipit si negligas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 617.
When nothing is feared, something to fear arises. (Ubi nihil timetur, quod timeatur nascitur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 704.
Fear is a hindrance to all virtue. (Virtutis omnis impedimentum est timor.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 728.

<sup>7</sup> If you wish to fear nothing, you should dread all. (Si nihil velis timere, metuas omnia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 657. (c. 43 B. C.)
If you wish to fear nothing, consider that everything is to be feared. (Si velis nihil timere, cogitate omnia esse timenda.)

SENECA, Naturales Questiones. Bk. vi, sec. 2. (C. A. D. 54)

<sup>8</sup> I fear nothing but danger. (Je ne crains rien que les dangers.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 23. (1548)
Repeated in bk. iv, ch. 55.

<sup>9</sup> He feared nothing but his shadow. (Rien ne craignoit que son ombre.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 32.

He returned with more fear of his shadow than true reapeorte of that he had in charge.

GEOFFREY FENTON, tr., Certaine Tragical Discourses of Dandello, ii, 285. (1567)

Shee were afrayed of her owne shadowe.

RICHARD GRAFTON, Chronicle, ii, 659. (1568)

Stand in feare of their owne shadowes.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 20. (1574) Pettie, tr.

As our English prouerbe is, he is afraid of his owne shadowe.

JOHN BARET, An Alvearie, V92. (1580)

At his own shadow let the thief run mad.

SHAKESPEARE, Rape of Lucrece, l. 997. (1594)

Afraid of his own shadow.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 161. (1670)

EACH BUSH AN OFFICER, see under BUSH.

1
Afraid of far enough.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 161. (1670)

Afraid of what is never likely to happen.

Afraid of him that died last year.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 161. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 810, has, "Are you afraid of him that dy'd last year?"

2
Thou who art wise, fear him who feareth thee.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. i, Maxim 8. (c. 1258)

3
Fear closes the ears of the mind. (Timor animi auribus officit.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. 58, sec. 3. (c. 41 B. C.)

4
It is folly to die through fear of dying. (Stulti-tia est timore mortis mori.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx, sec. 8. (c. A. D. 64)

"Fear kills more than the disease," or "Fear kills more than the physician."

Better be killed than frightened to death.

R. S. SURTEES, Mr. Facey Romford's Hounds. Ch. 32. (1892) See also under DEATH.

5
Prone is fear ever to believe the worst. (Prona est timoris semper in peius fides.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 316. (c. A. D. 60)

TO FEAR THE WORST, see under WORST.

6
When our actions do not,

Our fears do make us traitors.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iv, 2, 3. (1606)

7
Fear is more payne, then ys the payne it feares.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, The Arcadia. Bk.v.(a. 1586)

The fear's as bad as falling.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, iii, 3, 49. (1609)

Fear of danger is ten times more terrifying than danger itself.

DANIEL DEFOE, Robinson Crusoe, p. 161.(1719)

The direst foe of courage is the fear itself.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Sir Gibbie. Ch. 20. (1879)

8
Fear, the very worst prophet in misfortune, anticipates many evils. (Plurima versat | pessimus in dubiis augur timor.)

STATIUS, Thebaid. Bk. iii, l. 5. (c. A. D. 92)

9
Distracted and frighted out of his wits.

BISHOP SIMON PATRICK, Commentary: Exodus, ix, 27. (1697)

You frighten me out of my seven senses.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Frightened out of your wits.

JAMES BERESFORD, The Miseries of Human Life. Ch. 21. (1806)

Scared out of his seven senses.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 34. (1818)

Mr. Mulliner . . . had often been frightened, but never out of his wits.

MARGARET KENNEDY, The Midas Touch. (1938)

10
Things seen, or believed through fear. (Visa, sive ex metu.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. ii, sec. 24. (c. A. D. 116)

Even the bravest are frightened by sudden terrors. (Etiam fortes viros subitis terri.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xv, sec. 59

11
Fear argues ignoble minds. (Degenere animos timor arguit.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iv, l. 13. (19 B. C.)

Fear is a slinking cat I find

Beneath the lilacs of my mind.

SOPHIE TUNNELL, Fear. (1930)

12
Affrighted by every breeze, startled by every sound. (Omnes terrent aurae, sonus excitat omnis.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 728. (19 B. C.)

Fearful when all was safe. (Omnia tuta timens.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iv, l. 298.

Why I fear I know not; but yet as one deprived of sense I fear all things. (Quid timeam ignoro: timeo tamen omnia demens.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. i, l. 71. (c. 10 B. C.)

He fears the very flies. (Vel muscas metuit prae-tervolitantes.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, i, v, 66. (1523) Citing Aristotle as the author. The French say, "La peur grossit des objets" (Fear magnifies things), and "La peur est un grand inventeur."

13
Fear lends wings to his feet. (Pedibus timor addidit alas.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. viii, l. 224. (19 B. C.)

See how fear gives him wings.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk.ii,p.195.(1580)

Thereto fear gave her wings.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. iii, canto vii, st. 26. (1590)

Fear hath wings.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 60. (1666)

Fear lent him wings.

SWIFT, On Mr. Pullenay, l. 30. (1731)

14
Fear follows crime and is its punishment. (La crainte suit le crime, et c'est son châtement.)

VOLTAIRE, Semiramis. Act v, sc. 1. (1748)

All infractions of love and equity in our social relations are speedily punished. They are punished by fear.

EMERSON, Essays: Compensation. (1841)

Fear is a tyrant and a despot, more terrible than the rack, more potent than the stake.

EDGAR WALLACE, The Clue of the Twisted Candle, p. 144. (1916)

1 All fear is bondage.

UNKNOWN, Book of Meery Riddles. Prov. 35. (1629)

The slave of fear: the worst of all slaveries.

BERNARD SHAW, Misalliance, p. 64. (1910)

2 Fearlessness burns its bridges behind; fear, the bridges before.

UNKNOWN, Poor Richard Jr's Almanack, p. 28. (1906)

3 Tommy's tears and Mary's fears

Will make them old before their years.

UNKNOWN, Old Nursery "Lyme

II—Fear, Its Manifestations

4 My heart is dancing with fear. (ὀρχεῖται δὲ καρδία φόβῳ.)

AESCHYLUS, Libation-Bearers, l. 166 (458 B. C.)

And make my seated heart knock at my ribs.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, i, 3, 136. (1606)

5 Fear runs away with my tongue. (γλώσσαν ἀπράξει φόβος.)

AESCHYLUS, Seven Against Thebes, l. 259. (467 B. C.)

My voice stuck in my throat. (Vox faucibus haesit.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 774; bk. iii, l. 48. (19 B. C.)

6 It gives me goose flesh.

ELIZABETH DALY, Deadly Nightshade, p. 84. (1940)

7 For which the dread doth me so sore smerte, Right as a sword hit stingeth to myn herte.

CHAUCER, The Legend of Good Women: Lucretia, l. 49. (c. 1385)

And quook for fere, pale and pitously,

Right as the lamb that of the wolf is biten.

CHAUCER, The Legend of Good Women: Philomela, l. 90. (c. 1385)

To quake like an oven.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 207. (1670)

8 And pale as box she wex.

CHAUCER, The Legend of Good Women: Thisbe, l. 161. (c. 1385)

Pale as his shirt, his knees knocking each other.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 1, 81. (1600)

9 Enough to make [them] shake in their shoes.

WILLIAM COBBETT, Political Register. Vol. xxxiii, p. 496. (1818)

10 From all his fear-filled body poured the sweat. (Tunc timido manat ex omni corpore sudor.)

ENNIUS, Annals. Bk. xvi, frag. 424, Loeb. (c. 180 B. C.)

A cold sweat bedewed all my limbs. (Gelidus toto manabat corpore sudor.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iii, l. 175. (19 B. C.)

11 Trembling like a leaf. (Tremblant com une feuille d'arbre.)

GUILLAUME LE NORMAND, De Prestre et d'Alison, l. 428. (c. 1250) MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, vi, 81. This proverbial comparison is repeated twice in the fabliaux. See MONTAIGLON, ii, 191, and vi, 81. "Trembling like hares" (Tout aussi tremble comme lièvres) occurs in ii, 65.

Right as an aspen leaf she gan to quake.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, l. 1200. (c. 1380)

[She] quook as dooth the leaf of aspe grene.

CHAUCER, The Legend of Good Women: Hypermnestra, l. 86. (c. 1385)

She rist her up, and dredfully she quaketh.

As doth the braunche that Zephyrus shaketh.

CHAUCER, Hypermnestra, l. 119.

Lyk an aspen leef he quook.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Somnour's Prologue, l. 3. (c. 1388)

Stoode trembling like an aspen leaf.

ARTHUR GOLDING, tr., Ovid, iii, 46. (1567)

I shake . . . an 'twere an aspen leaf.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, ii, 4, 117. (1598)

She came into bed, but trembled like an aspen-leaf.

RICHARDSON, Pamela, i, 228. (1740) SOUTHEY, The Doctor. Ch. 75. (1812)

I was shaking like an aspen leaf.

A. A. MILNE, Second Plays, p. 186. (1920)

12 The spirits of all men sank down to their feet. (πᾶσιν δὲ παρὰ ποσὶ κάππεσε θυμός.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xv, l. 280. (c. 850 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, viii, 70, with the Latin, "Animus in pedes decidit." See also under HEART

13 He was sore afraid, and up stood the hair on his pliant limbs. (δειδῖε δ' αἰνῶς, | ὀρθαὶ δὲ τρίχες ἦσαν ἐπὶ γυμνοῖσι μέλεσσι.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xiv, l. 358. (c. 850 B. C.)

With thrilling voice that set each hair on end. (τορὸς δὲ φοῖβος ὀρθόθριξ.)

AESCHYLUS, Libation-Bearers, l. 32. (458 B. C.)

My hair stands on end. (ὀρθὰς πλόκαμος ἵσταται.)

AESCHYLUS, Seven Against Thebes, l. 564. (467 B. C.)

With sudden dread the hair of all stood up (ὥστε πάντας ὀρθὰς | στήσαι φόβῳ.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus at Colonus, l. 1624. (c. 408 B. C.)

The hair of my flesh stood up. (Inhorruerunt pili carnis meae.)

Old Testament: Job, iv, 15. (c. 350 B. C.)

My hair stood up. (Steteruntque comae.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 774. (19 B. C.) Repeated in Bk. iii, l. 48, in Bk. iv, l. 280, and in Bk. xii, l. 868.

My hair stood on end. (Mihi pili inhorruerunt.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 63. (c. A. D. 60)

Not a hair on his body but stood on end. (Non avendo pelo adosso che arriciato non fosse.)

BOCCACCIO, Decameron. Day v, tale 8. (1358)
Whan I passed by the churche yarde my heares stode upright for feare.

JEHAN PALSCRAVE, La Langue Françoise, p. 733/2. (1530)

Horror gan the virgins hart to perse,
And her faire locks vp started stiffe on end.
EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. iii, canto xii, st. 36. (1590)

Each particular hair to stand on end,
Like quills upon the fretful porpentine.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 5, 19. (1600)

My fell of hair
Would at a dismal treatise rouse and stir
As life were in't.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, v, 5, 11. (1606)
As for the particulars, I'm sure they'd make your hair stand on end to hear them.

FANNY BURNEY, Evelina. Bk. i, ch. 40. (1778)
The hairs of my head, catching terror from my fancies, erected themselves.

M. P. SHIEL, The S.S. (1895)

1
Personalities who would scare the pants off Lombroso.

OGDEN NASH, I Know You'll Like Them. (1939)
It scares the pants off me.

GEORGE BAGBY, Here Comes the Corpse, p. 80. (1941)

2
You run about, scared and hustled, like a mouse in a pot. (Carris, stupes, satagis, tanquam mus in matella.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 58. (c. A. D. 60)

3
One of the symptoms and accidents of fear is that it often opens the wicket of the cupboard wherein secondhand meat is kept for a time. (Vn des symptomes & accidens de paour est, que par luy ordinairement se ouure le guischet du ferrail on quel est à temps la matiere fecale retenus.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 67. (1548)

My breech makes buttons.

JOHN FLETCHER, Bonduca. Act ii, sc. 3. (1618)

O Soto, I make buttons!

MIDDLETON and ROWLEY, The Spanish Gipsy. Act iv, sc. 3. (1653)

His breech makes buttons. This is said of a man in fear. . . . Vehement fear causes a relaxation of the Sphincter ani.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 165. (1670)

4
A dream . . . That gars my flesh a' creep yet with the fright.

ALLAN RAMSAY, The Gentle Shepherd. Pt. i, st. 1. (1725)

Something in their countenances that made my flesh creep with a horror I cannot express.

SWIFT, Gulliver's Travels, iii, 7, 223. (1727)

"I wants to make your flesh creep," replied the boy.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 8. (1836)

You make my hair stand on end and my flesh creep.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 17. (1840)

He had such an air of saying "Tom's-a-cold," that her skin crept in sympathy.

GEORGE MEREDITH, The Egoist. Ch. 28. (1879)

5
It most gave me the fantods.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 8. (1884)

It most scared the livers and lights out of me.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 29.

6
A cold shudder shakes my limbs, and my chilled blood freezes with terror. (Mihi frigidus horror | membra quatit, gelidusque coit formidine sanguis.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iii, l. 29. (19 B. C.)

A sudden tremor seized his limbs. (Subitus tremor occupat artus.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vii, l. 446.

A cold shudder ran through his inmost marrow. (Gelidusque per ima concurrat ossa tremor.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xii, l. 447.

HEART IN MOUTH, HOSE, SHOES, see under HEART.

FEAST

See also Banquet, Dining, Eating

7
As much valour is to be found in feasting as in fighting.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. i, mem. 2, subs. 2. (1621)

8
The promised feast became a feast of the Lapithae.

THOMAS CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Pt. ii, bk. i, ch. 5. (1837) A feast which ends in a row. The chief of the Lapithae gave a feast to celebrate the wedding of Pirithous and Hippodamia, but the Centaurs, who had been mistakenly invited, offered violence to the bride, and it ended in blows and "very great slaughter." "A feast of Lucullus" is another proverbial phrase, this one indicating a delicious feast. See under DINING.

9
Let your feasts be few. (Convivare raro.)

CATO (?), Disticha: Prologus. No. 18. (c. 175 B. C.)

10
Few men and much meat make a feast.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 74. (1639)

THE FEWER THE BETTER FARE, see under DINNER.

Christmas feastings are the physicians' harvest.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 174.

11
After feasting, fasting.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Banquet. (1611)

After a carnival, Lent ever follows.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The City-Madame. Act iv, sc. 4. (1632)

After a Christmas comes a Lent.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 113. (1678)

12
No feast to a miser's. (Il n'est banquet que d'homme chiche.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Chiche. (1611)

There is no cheare to a miser's feast.

DAVIES, The Scourge of Folly. No. 349. (1611)
No feast to a churl's.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia. p. 192. (1639)
It is an observation that the miser's feast is often the most splendid.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison, iii, 175 (1753)

1 They had a grand blow-out and . . . drank in the forecassle a barrel of gin.

R. H. DANA, Two Years Before the Mast. Ch. 26. (1840) The earlier meaning of "blow-out" was a gust of anger or a quarrel, and Scott used it in that sense in 1826, see LOCKHART, ix, 44. But since Dana's time it has been used exclusively in the slang sense of a feast or festivity. "Blow-up" is now used for a quarrel.

2 I'de make you both make but a Fridayes feast.

ROBERT DAVENPORT, A New Tricke to Cheat the Divell. Act iii, sc. 1. (1639)

3 A Feast is not made of Mushrooms only.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 96. (1732)

'Tis not clean Linen only that makes the Feast.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5093

Feasting makes a Friendship.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1515

4 Dutch feast: where the entertainer gets drunk before his guests.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue. (1785) However a "Dutch treat" is where each one pays for himself

5 He that is angry at a feast, is rude.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 566. (1640)

6 Little difference twixt a feast and a belly-ful.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 13/2. (1659)

RAY, Proverbs, p. 214. (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 3253. (1732) The Scots say, "Little odds between a feast an' a fu' wame."

When hunger is satisfied, even the sight of meat is disgusting. Little difference between a feast and a bellyful.

JOHN TRUSLER, Proverbs Exemplified, p. 169. (1790)

ENOUGH IS AS GOOD AS A FEAST, see under ENOUGH.

7 A feast of fat things. (Convivium pinguium.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxv, 6. (c. 900 B. C.)

8 Where there is a festival the wayfarer will stay. (Lō' 'yü erh 'kwo 'kō' 'chi).

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 35. (c. 550 B. C.) Old, tr.

Fiddlers, dogs and flies come to feasts uncalled.

GEORGE MERTON, Yorkshire Ale, p. 83. (1683)

Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 111, who adds, "Fiddlers for money, the flies for a sip, and the dogs for a scrap."

9 Callicles: To join in a fight or a fray, as the saying is, Socrates, you have chosen your time well enough.

Socrates: Do you mean, according to the proverb, we have come too late for a feast? (πολέμου καὶ μάχης φασὶ χρῆναι. . . ἀλλ' ἢ τὸ λεγόμενον κατόπιον δόρτης ἤκομεν [καὶ ὕστεροῦμεν];)

PLATO, Gorgias. Sec. 447A. (c. 385 B. C.)

One would think you were invited to a fray instead of a feast, you are so slow in coming. (ὅμοις δ' ὥσπερ ἐπὶ μάχην ἢ πόλεμον ἀλλ' οὐκ εὐωχίαν κληθέντες.)

HELIODORUS, Aethiopica. Bk. iii, ch. 10. (c. A. D.

350) There is a Latin proverb, "Post festum venire miserum est" (It is a wretched thing to arrive after the feast).

It is yll comyng, I haue heard say,
To th' end of a shot [feast], and beginnyng of a fray.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

It is better coming to the end of a feast than to the beginning of a fray.

FRANCIS BACON, Promus. No. 977. (c. 1594)

To the latter end of a fray and the beginning of a feast

Fits a dull fighter and a keen guest.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, iv, 2, 85. (1597)

Our grandsires said, Haste to the beginning of a feast, but to the end of a fray.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Bashful Lover. Act iii. (1636)

I arrived just at the conclusion of the ceremony; but the latter end of a feast is better than the beginning of a fray.

GEORGE COLMAN THE ELDER, Man and Wife. Act iii, sc. 2. (1769)

"It is better to come at the far end of a feast than at the fore end of a fray," better late at a feast than early at a fight.

F. K. ROBINSON, Whitby Glossary, p. 54. (1855)

10 Holiday feasting makes everyday fasting.
Unless you save while the money's lasting.
(Festo die si quid prodegeris, Profesto egere liceat, nisi peperceris.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 380. (c. 210 B. C.)

11 There St. John mingles with my friendly bowl
The feast of reason and the flow of soul.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. ii, sat 1, l. 127. (1732)

The feast of reason was undisturbed by an intemperate flow of soul.

EDITH WHARTON, The Mission of Jane. (1904)

12 The feast is good, until the reck'ning come.

FRANCIS QUARLES, A Feast for Wormes. Sec. vi, med. 6. (1620)

After feasts made, the maker scratches his head
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733

13 One should make an early meal and not come fasting to the feast; else all he does is sit and chew, with no time to talk.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 33 (c. 900)

1
Foolles make feastes, and wyse menne enioy them.

JAMES SANFORD, tr., Houres of Recreation, p. 214. (1572)

Foolles make the feasts, and wise men enjoy them. (I matti fanno le feste, e i sanii le godeno.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 30. (1578) The French say, "Les fols font la fête et les sages la mangent," or, "Le sot fait le festin, et l'habile le mange"; the Dutch, "De ezels dragen de haver, en de paarden eten" (Asses fetch the provender and the horses eat it).

Fools make feasts and wise men eat them.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 186. (1639)
Cited by Ray, Fuller, Franklin, and many others.

Set a fool to roast eggs and a wise man to eat them.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 241. (1678)
Fools make feasts and wise men eat them. This was once said to a great man in Scotland, upon his giving an entertainment. Who readily answer'd, Wise men make proverbs, and fools repeat them.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 110. (1721)
The same story is told by D'ISRAËLI, Curiosities of Literature: Philosophy of Proverbs.

FEATHER

2
It is the last feather that breaks the horse's back.

ARCHBISHOP JOHN BRAMHALL, Works, iv, 59. (1677) See under STRAW.

3
You might have knocked me down with a feather.

WILLIAM COBBETT, Rural Rides, 6 Nov., 1821.

You could knock me down with a feather.

GEORGE ADE, Effie Whittlesey. (1903)

You could have knocked me over with a feather.

PHILIP BARRY, You and I. Act i, (1923) FAIR, Double or Quits, p. 184. (1941)

You could have knocked me down with a feather.

AGATHA CHRISTIE, The Tuesday Club Murders. Ch. 8. (1933) The usual form, frequently quoted.

You could have knocked me down with the slipstream of a feather.

JOHN BENTLEY, Mr. Marlow Stops for Brandy, p. 88. (1940)

You could have knocked me down with a potato-parin'.

LEE THAYER, Guilty, p. 44. (1940)

You can take that feather out of your cap and knock me down with it.

BERNARD DOUGALL, I Don't Scare Easy, p. 173. (1941)

4
Todgers's was in high feather.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit, p. 416. (1844)

Our friend . . . was now in good feather.

R. S. SURTEES, Mr. Sponge's Sporting Tour. Ch. 13. (1852)

I'm in wonderful feather.

DICKENS, Little Dorrit. Ch. 32. (1855)

Never was Mr. Rigsby in finer feather.

S. BARING-GOULD, Court Royal. Ch. 24. (1886)

5
Horsefeathers, Doctor! You boys scared them.

ELEANOR EARLY, A New England Sampler, p. 214. (1940) Referring to a statement by Prof. Meigs of Jefferson Medical College, "that American women prefer to suffer the extremity of danger and pain, rather than waive those scruples of delicacy which prevent their maladies from being fully explored."

Horse feathers!

CHRISTOPHER HALE, Exit Screaming, p. 139. (1942)

6
He has a white feather, he is a coward, an allusion to a game cock, where having a white feather is a proof he is not of the true game breed.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: White Feather. (1785)

"He has a white feather in his wing," said Simon, . . . scandalized by his ready surrender.

WALTER SCOTT, The Black Dwarf. Ch. 9. (1816)
He shows the white feather.

WALTER SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 8. (1824)
I've long guessed . . . that we should find a white feather in thy tail.

UNKNOWN, On Bull-Baiting. (1825) Houlston Tracts, i, 27.

He had certainly shown the white feather.

W. M. THACKERAY, Pendennis. Ch. 40. (1850)

He is a screw and a whitefeather.

GEORGE BORROW, The Romany Rye. Ch. 43. (1857)

7
It may rightly be sayde of these costly clad carkases, that the feathers are more worth than the byrde.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 37. (1574) Pettie, tr.

What is the jay more precious than the lark
Because his feathers are more beautiful?

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, iv, 3, 177. (1594)

The faire Feathers still make the faire Fowles.

JOHN DAVIES, Scourge of Folly, p. 162. (1611)

Fair feathers make fair fowles. Fair clothes, ornaments and dresses set off persons.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 87. (1670)

They be fine feathers, that make a fine bird.

BUNYAN, Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i, p. 35. (1678)
Fine feathers make fine birds.

BERNARD MANDEVILLE, The Fable of the Bees, i, 130. (1714) Mandeville seems to have been the first to put the proverb exactly in its modern form. In frequent use since. The French say, "Les belles plumes font les beaux oiseaux"; the Dutch, "De schoone veeren maaken den schoonen vogel." See also under CLOTHES, DRESS.

Fine feathers make fine birds, but they don't make lady-birds.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 57. (1917)

8
It hath been an ancient custom among them [the Hungarians] that none should wear a feather but he who had killed a Turk, to whom only it was lawful to show the number of his slain enemies by the number of feathers in his cap.

RICHARD HANSARD, A Description of Hungary. (1599) See Lansdowne MS., British Museum. Vol. 149, MS. 775.

Hee stickes a feather in his Hat.

JOHN STEPHENS, Satyrical Essays, p. 211. (1615)
He wore a feather in his cap, and wagg'd it too often.

THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain. Vol. v, ch. 4, sec. 17. (1655)

He put a fine feather in my cap.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 342. (1678)

Female ruin a feather in your caps of vanity.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, John Bull. Act i, sc. 1. (1803)

Literary fame, he always said, was a bright feather in the cap.

WALTER SCOTT, in LOCKHART, Life. Ch. 17. (1808)
Their favour in an author's cap's a feather.

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i. st. 199. (1818)
Gresset wrote other poems, . . . but the Parrot is the feather in his cap.

LEIGH HUNT, in Examiner, 28 March, 1824.

1
If your meete mate and you meete together,
Than shall we see two men beare a feather.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)
Of means employed altogether disproportionate to the end. See MEANS AND END.

2
There's aye feathers where the doo [dove] roosts.

ALEXANDER LEIGHTON, Curious Storied Traditions of Scottish Life. Ser. ii, p. 263. (1861)

3
To preen oneself in another's feather.
(ἀλλοτρίους πτεροῖς ἀγάλλεσθαι.)

LUCIAN, Dependent Scholars. Sec. 4. (c. A. D. 170) Borrowed plumage.

4
There is nothing lighter than a feather, yet is it sette a loft in a woemans hatte.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England: To the Ladies, p. 221. (1580)

I am a feather for each wind that blows.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale, ii, 3, 154. (1611)
The lightest feather may show which way the wind blows.

LEE THAYER, Accessory After the Fact, p. 5. (1943)

5
Feather by feather birds build nests.

MIDDLETON AND ROWLEY, The Spanish Gypsy. Act ii, sc. 1. (1653)

Quill by quill is a goose pluck'd. (A penna a [pena] si pela l'oca.)

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 174. (1666)

Feather by Feather the Goose is plucked.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1514. (1732)
The weak man . . . hair by hair got off the whole tail without much labour; for, according to the Italian proverb, Feather by feather the goose is plucked.

JOHN TRUSLER, Proverbs Exemplified, p. 183. (1790)

6
I cast my feather to the wind, as the saying is, and abandon myself to Fortune's mercy. (Je jette la plume au vent, comme on dict, et m'abandonne à la mercy de la fortune.)
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 17. (1580)

7
You shall heare a Cauallier of the first feather.
THOMAS NASHE, Pierce Penilesse. (1592) Works (Grosart) ii, 78.

A man of garniture and feather.

DRYDEN, The Maiden Queen. Act v, sc. 1. (1667)

8
He'd make the feathers fly.

JOHN NEAL, ed., Brother Jonathan, i, 94. (1825)
See also under FUR

9
It matters not a feather. (Pluma haud interest.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 408. (c. 220 B. C.)

10
How I feathered my nest. Lit. made my fat cabbages. (Comment ie fis mes chous gras.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 17. (1532)

Nowe ys the tyme come . . . to make vp my mouth, and to feather my neste.

UNKNOWN, Respublica. Act i, sc. 1. (1553) To feather one's nest is to enrich oneself.

They feather their nests well inough.

PHILIP STUBBES, The Anatomie of Abuses, ii, 38. (1583)

Thou hast fethred thy nest, and hast crowns in thy purse.

ROBERT GREENE, Works, viii, 138. (1590)

All this worke is neglected, that his owne nest may be well feathered.

THOMAS TAYLOR, Commentarie upon Titus, i, 7. (1612)

Mr. Badman had well feathered his Nest with other men's goods and money.

BUNYAN, Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i, p. 195. (1680)

He has feathered his nest, he may fly when he will

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 161. (1721)
He feathered his nest with the spoils of the Loyalists.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Doctor. Ch. 64. (1835)
She ain't going into no nest without a lot of feathers in it.

WALLACE STEGNER, The Big Rock Candy Mountain, p. 37. (1938)

Irene must have been feathering a new nest for herself.

KNIGHT, Rendezvous with the Past, p. 74. (1940)

11
What plume of feathers is he that indited this letter?

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 1, 96. (1595)

12
I am not of that feather.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, i, 1, 100. (1607)
All of a feather.

JOHN DAY, Humour Out of Breath, iv, 3. (1608)

A feather of the same wing.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 14. (1639)

BIRDS OF A FEATHER, see under BIRD.

KILLED BY ONE'S OWN FEATHERS, see under EAGLE.

- <sup>1</sup> He starts at stirring of a feather.
SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 302. (1593)
See also under BUSH.

FEBRUARY

- <sup>2</sup> February rain is the husbandmans gaine.
RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Pluye. (1611)
February's rain fills the barn.
TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 86. (1666)
- <sup>3</sup> February the short, is woorst of al. (Febraio curto, pegior de tutti.)
JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 30. (1578)
- <sup>4</sup> Reckon right, and February hath one and thirty days.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 231. (1640)
- <sup>5</sup> February makes a bridge, and March breaks it.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 741. (1640) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1516. (1732)
February builds a bridge, and March breaks it down.
MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 27. (1846)
- <sup>6</sup> Old bishop Valentine, You ha' brought us nipping weather—Februer doth cut and shear.
BEN JONSON, Tale of a Tub. Act i, sc. 1. (1633)
RAY, Proverbs, p. 44. (1678)
- <sup>7</sup> All the months in the year curse a fair Februer.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 40. (1670)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6151. (1732)
A Welshman had rather see his dam on her bier than see a fair Februer.
MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 31. (1846)
Good weather in February is regarded as an unfavourable symptom of what is to come. A' the months o' the year curse a fair Februar.
CHAMBERS, Popular Rhymes of Scotland, p. 364. (1847) Many other February weather proverbs may be found in INWARDS, Weather Lore.
- <sup>8</sup> Feb, fill the dike With what thou dost like.
THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie. Ch. 34. (1573) Tusser also has, "Feuerell fill dyke, doth good with his snow." A popular proverb, indicating the prevalence of either rain or snow in this month.—O.E.D.
February fill dike, Be it black or be it white.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 40. (1670)

FEEDING, see Eating

FEELING

- <sup>9</sup> I would help others out of a fellow-feeling.
ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader. (1621)
A fellow-feeling makes one wondrous kind.
DAVID GARRICK, Epilogue on Quitting the Theatre, 10 June, 1776.

- <sup>10</sup> It makes you feel like 30 cents.
O. HENRY, A Philistine in Bohemia. (1908)
- <sup>11</sup> The warm, champagne, old-particular, brandy-punchy feeling.
O. W. HOLMES, Nux Postcænatica. (1848)
- <sup>12</sup> I cannot describe it, I only feel it. (Nequeo monstrare, et sentio tantum.)
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vii, l. 56. (c. A. D. 120)
We don't reason where we feel; we just feel.
MARK TWAIN, Connecticut Yankee, p. 88. (1889)
- <sup>13</sup> Feeling hath no fellow.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 138. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1518. (1732)
Seeing's believing, but feeling's the truth.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 130. (1678)
Tho' seeing is believing, feeling hath no fellow.
UNKNOWN, The Matchless Rogue, 56. (1725)
- <sup>14</sup> Has this fellow no feeling of his business, that he sings at grave-making?
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 1, 73. (1600)
- <sup>15</sup> The advantage of the emotions is that they lead us astray.
OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 3. (1891)
- <sup>16</sup> Fire, water, moonbeams, good, and ill—
We know them by the way they feel.
UNKNOWN, The Mahabharata, xii, 293, 39. (c. B. C. 500) Ryder, tr.

FELLOW

- <sup>17</sup> Certain lewd fellows of the baser sort. (τῶν ἀγοραίων τινὲς ἀνδρες πορνικοῦς.)
New Testament: Acts, xvii, 5. (c. A. D. 70) The Vulgate is, "Vulgo viros quosdam malos."
"Jocular for 'coarse, hearty fellows,'" says Eric Partridge.
A fellow of no mark nor likelihood.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, iii, 2, 45. (1597)
A very superficial, ignorant, unweighing fellow.
SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, iii, 2, 147. (1604)
- <sup>18</sup> And, certainly, he was a good felawe.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 395. (c. 1386)
In other respects, the best fellow in the world. (Au demeurant, le meilleur fils du monde.)
CLÉMENT MAROT, Letter to Francis I. (c. 1540)
If he be not fellow with the best king, thou shalt find the best king of good fellows.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, v, 2, 261. (1599)
The king of good fellows is appointed for the queen of beggars.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 333. (1605) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4616. (1732)
I suppose he is playing the good fellow in the town.
SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 14 Oct., 1667.
Longer lives a good fellow than a dear year.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 170. (1678)

A good fellow is a costly name.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 16. (1721)

"Spoken when people urge us to spend, that we may be reckoned good fellows." Very popular in Scotland.

He's a jolly good fellow.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Clarion Call. (1908) Quoting the refrain of a popular song.

1 He made so moche of his servaunt that he waxed hayl felowe with hym.

WILLIAM HORMAN, Vulgaria, fo. 148. (1519)

He was too intimate with him.

Ne cuivis porrigas dextram. [Don't give your hand to everyone.] Be not hail fellow well met with every one.

JOHN WITTHALS, Dictionary, p. 567. (1521)

They would be "hail fellow well met" with him.

THOMAS BECON, New Catechisme, p. 561. (1550)

Hail fellow, well met, All dirty and wet.

SWIFT, My Lady's Lamentation, l. 165. (1728)

[She] is hail fellow, well met, as the saying is, with all her aunt's servants.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, v, 146. (1748)

He himself became hail-fellow-well-met with anybody.

THOMAS HUGHES, Tom Brown's School Days.

Pt. ii, ch. 3. (1857)

2 He was a fine fellow, a friend to his friends, open-handed and kept a good table. (Fortis fuit, amicus amico, manu plena, uncta mensa.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 43. (c. A. D. 60)

3 Alas, poor Yorick! I knew him, Horatio; a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 1, 202. (1600)

4 Nature hath fram'd strange fellows in her time.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, i, 1, 51. (1597)

5 Al friends at footebal, fellowes all in field.

UNKNOWN, Sir John Oldcastle. Act iv, sc. 1. (1600) Shakespeare apocrypha.

If we had stayed but a little while longer, we should have been All fellows at Football.

UNKNOWN, Harleian Miscellany, iii, 228. (1641)

All fellows at football. If gentlemen . . . will mingle themselves with rustics in their rude sports, they must look for usage similar to, or rather coarser than others.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 174. (1670)

All are Fellows at Football.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 498. (1732)

FELLOWSHIP

See also Comradeship

6 In felawship wel coude she laughe and carpe.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 476. (c. 1386)

Have no fellowship with one that is mightier and richer than thyself: for how agree the kettle and the earthen pot together? for if the one be smitten against the other, it shall be broken.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xiii, 2. (c. 190 B. C.)

The loure ought not to hold felauship with the myghty.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Aesop, i, vi. (1484)

Let us associate only with our equals. (Ne nous associions qu'avecque nos égaux.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Pot de Terre et le Pot de Fer. Bk. v, fab. 2. (1668) The fable of the earthen pot which got broken against the iron pot.

Have fellowship with those of his own kind.

JOHN LOCKE, An Essay Concerning Human Understanding, iii, i, sec. 1. (1690)

7 They gave to me and Barnabas the right hands of fellowship. (κοινωνίας.)

New Testament: Galatians, ii, 9. (c. A. D. 60)

The Vulgate is, "Dextras societatis."

[He] holds up hands for fellowship.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, v, 3, 175. (1607)

I will hold forth the right hand of fellowship.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Friend, p. 57. (1809)

He shall receive the right hand of fellowship.

BENJAMIN JOWETT, tr., The Dialogues of Plato, iii, 64. (1875)

8 The fellowship of just men made perfect.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, iii, 190. (c. 622)

9 Fellowship is heaven, and lack of fellowship is hell; fellowship is life, and lack of fellowship is death.

WILLIAM MORRIS, A Dream of John Ball. Ch. 4. (1888)

10 The fellowship of a friendly mind is truest kinship. (Benivoli coniunctio animi maxima est cognatio.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 72. (c. 43 B. C.)

11 Out upon this half-fac'd fellowship!

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, i, 3, 208. (1597)

12 There is a fellowship more quiet even than solitude, and which, rightly understood, is solitude made perfect.

R. L. STEVENSON, Travels With a Donkey: A Night Among the Pines. (1879)

13 What men call social virtues, good fellowship, is commonly but the virtue of pigs in a litter which lie close together to keep each other warm.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 23 Oct., 1852.

The fellow-man to whom you are yoked is a steer that is ever bolting right the other way.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 5 Nov., 1855.

FALSEHOOD IN FELLOWSHIP, see under FALSEHOOD.

FENCE

14 Take your fences one at a time.

FRANCIS BEEDING, The Eight Crooked Trenches, p. 121. (1936)

15 No fence for ill fortune.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 329. (1605)

No fence against a flail. Some evils and calamities assault so violently, that there is no resisting of them.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 89. (1670)
The Proverb says, No Fence against a Flayl.

SWIFT, On Stephen Duck, l. 2. (1730)

1 Good fences make good neighbors.

ROBERT FROST, Mending Wall. (1914) See under NEIGHBOR.

2 Mr. Spratt . . . was "on the fence"; where, like a wise man, he had determined to sit until he had made up his mind on which side to get off.

ROBERT C. SANDS, Writings, ii, 160. (1829)
The practice of "sitting on the fence," or remaining neutral in a political contest until it can be seen "which way the cat is going to jump."

JOHN BARTLETT, Dictionary of Americanisms: Fence-Riding. (1859)

A kin' o' hangin' roun' an' settin' on the fence. Till Prov'dunce pintoed how to jump.

LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. ii, No. 3. (1862)

3 I have come home to look after my fences.

JOHN SHERMAN, Speech, to his neighbors at Mansfield, Ohio, (1879) referring to the fences around his farm; but the newspapers reporting the speech promptly gave the phrase its present political meaning: to endeavor, by personal contacts, to retain the support of one's constituents. See STODDARD, As I Knew Them, p. 161; PEASE, United States, p. 527.

They [the absent members] are at home . . . looking after their fences.

Congressional Record, 16 Aug., 1888, p. 7646/1.
The kid's fences need repairing.

O. HENRY, The Caballero's Way. (1907)

4 It's allers best to stand on missis's side the fence.

H. B. STOWE, Uncle Tom's Cabin. Ch. 6. (1852)
Yes, I suppose it is well to make some sort of exclusion,

Well to put up the bars under whatever pretence:
Only be careful, be very careful, lest in the confusion

You should shut yourself on the wrong side of the fence.

W. D. HOWELLS, Stops of Various Quills. (1894)
Quoted by BROOKS, New England: Indian Summer, p. 383.

FETTERS

See also CHAINS

5 So free we seem, so fettered fast we are!
I feel he laid the fetter: let it lie!

ROBERT BROWNING, Andrea del Sarto, l. 51. (1855)

6 Fetters of gold. (Aureae compedes.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. iv, No. 25. (1508) The Latin proverb is, "Stulti est compedes licet aureas amare" (It is stupid to love fetters, though they be of gold).

For sure a foole I doe him firmly hold,
That loves his fetters, though they were of gold.
EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. iii, canto ix, st. 8. (1590)

Why should a man be in love with his fetters, though of gold?

FRANCIS BACON, An Essay on Death. Sec. 4 (1597)

No man loueth his fetters, be they made of gold.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 8. (1546)

BACON, Promus. No. 475. (c. 1594) CHAPMAN and MARSTON, Eastward Hoe. Act iv, sc. 1. (1605)

Who would weare fetters though they were all of gold?

WEBSTER and DEKKER, The Famous History of Sir Thomas Wyat. (1607)

No man likes his fetters, though of gold.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 89. (1670)
Fetters of Gold are still Fetters, and silken Cords pinch.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1522. (1732)
Fetters of gold are like no other fetters—they are ever the weightier the welcomer.

WALTER SCOTT, Kenilworth. Ch. 7. (1821)
All fetters are bad, even if they be made of gold.
LORD AVEBURY, Use of Life. Ch. 3. (1894)

FEVER

7 Spring fever, the listless feeling caused by the first sudden increase of temperature in spring. It is often said of a lazy fellow. "He has got the spring fever."

J. R. BARTLETT, Americanisms, p. 438. (1859)
I had the "spring fever" and wanted a change.
MARK TWAIN, Roughing It, p. 398. (1872)

It was a touch of spring fever.
GENE STRATTON PORTER, Freckles, p. 41. (1904)

8 In the case of . . . a Cold—"Stuff a cold and starve a fever" has been grievously misconstrued, so as to bring on the fever it was meant to prevent.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, Polonius: Preface. (1852)
The expression is elliptical, for [if you] stuff a cold, [you will have to] starve a fever.

Notes and Queries. Ser. vi, vol. iv, p. 54. (1881)
If you feed a cold, as is often done, you frequently have to starve a fever.

BERNARR MACFADDEN, When a Cold Is Needed. See Physical Culture, Feb., 1934.

I said I better go downstairs and eat a square meal, "feed a cold and starve a fever." Then the man in the next chair pipes up. "You misunderstand that," he says. "It means if you feed a cold you'll have to starve a fever later."

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Kitty Foyle, p. 318. (1939)

9 It is a common saying. It is better to feed a fever than weakness.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 135. (1574) Young, tr.

10 Fever, the eternal reproach to the physicians.
JOHN MILTON, The Reason of Church Government: Preface. (1641)

FICTION

See also Truth and Fiction

1 Great is the poverty of their [novelists'] inventions. She was beautiful and he fell in love.
EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Books. (1870)
The good end happily, the bad unhappily. That is what fiction means.

OSCAR WILDE, The Importance of Being Earnest. Act iii. (1895)

2 Novels (receipts to make a whore).
MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 269. (1737)
Novels are to love as fairy tales to dreams.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Cervantes. (1813)

My scrofulous French novel.

ROBERT BROWNING, Soliloquy in a Spanish Cloister. (1843)

3 Fictions meant to please should be close to the real. (Ficta voluptatis causa sint proxima veris.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 338. (c. 20 B. C.)

Good-bye to the fictions of the poets. (Valeant mendacia vatum.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. vi, l. 253. (c. A. D. 8)

4 The rest of the characters are simply the sweepings out of a Pentonville omnibus.

JOHN RUSKIN, Fiction Fair and Foul, referring to GEORGE ELIOT's Mill on the Floss. (1860)

5 The wicked nobleman of the transpentine melodrama or of penny dreadfuls.

EDMUND YATES. (World, London, 20 Aug., 1884)

6 They [realistic novelists] find life crude and leave it raw.

OSCAR WILDE, The Decay of Lying.

FIDDLE

7 He may be a fool and she a fiddle.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Pasquil's Madcappe, p. 64. (1600) A mirth-maker, a jester.

You would not have your son the fiddle to every jovial company.

JOHN LOCKE, Thoughts Concerning Education. Sec. 165. (1693)

At once the Bear and Fiddle of the town.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. i, l. 224. (1728)

He was . . . the fiddle of the ship's company.

MARRYAT, The Dog-Fiend. Ch. 5. (1837)

8 There's many a good tune played on an old fiddle.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 117. (1917)

9 He did not entirely hang his fiddle up when he came home.

DAVID HANNAY, Captain Marryat. Ch. 9. (1889)
Retire from business.

10 In the house of a fiddler, all fiddle.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 225. (1640)

In a fiddler's House all are Dancers.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2809. (1732)
To FIDDLE WHILE ROME BURNS, see under ROME.

11 I am quite at your service to play second fiddle in all your laudable enterprises.

B. H. MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas, x, 11. (1809) To take a subordinate place.

It was evident that . . . he had been playing second fiddle.

HENRY KINGSLEY, Ravenshoe. Pt. iii, ch. 9. (1862)

It needs more skill than I can tell

To play the second fiddle well.

C. H. SPURGEON, Salt-Cellars. (1885)

12 To hang the fiddle at the door.

SAMUEL PEGGE, Derbicisms, p. 100. (c. 1791)

"Said of a person who is merry and cheerful abroad, but surly and ill-tempered in his family."

To hang up the fiddle at the house-door.

CHARLOTTE BURNE, Shropshire Folk-Lore, p. 597. (1883)

He's hung the fiddle at the door.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 498. (1940)

13 The least boy always carries the greatest fiddle.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 109. (1670)

"All lay load upon those least able to bear it."

14 Let him take a spring [tune] of his own fiddle, and dance to it when he has done. Let him go in his own way and bear the effects of it.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 240. (1721)

You're welcome to a tune on your ain fiddle; but see if I dinna gar ye dance till't afore a's dune.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 29. (1818)

15 You honour's face is made of a fiddle; every one that looks on you loves you.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Sir Launcelot Greaves. Bk. i, ch. 8. (1762)

How could I help it? His face was made of a fiddle.

WALTER SCOTT, Old Mortality. Ch. 37. (1816)

16 He certainly did desire to play first fiddle.

TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers. Ch. 1. (1857)

17 I lent you indeed my Fiddle, but not my Fiddlestick.

IZAACK WALTON, The Compleat Angler, p. 106. (1653)

He hath got the fiddle, but not the stick.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 86. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1871. (1732) "The books, but not the learning to make use of them."

Those who attempted to imitate them, would find that they had got the fiddle, but not the fiddlestick.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. II, No. 231. (1820)

18 You have had more than fidler's fare, for you have meat, money, and cloth.

UNKNOWN, The Dumb Knight. Act iii. (1608)
See HAZLITT, Old Plays.

Meat, drink, and money, a fidler's life.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 161. (1639)
He was dismissed fidler-like, with meat, drink, and money.

JAMES HOWELL, Parly of Beasts, p. 128. (1660)
Fiddler's fare! meat, drink, and money. Spoken often when we have din'd with our friend, and after won some money from him at play.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 111. (1721)
Did your ladyship play?—Yes, and won; so I came off with fiddler's fare, meat, drink, and money.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

1 He . . . gave me fiddler's wages, and dismissed me.

UNKNOWN, The Returne from Parnassus, i, 1. (1597)

Fiddlers-pay, Thanks and wine.

B.E., New Dictionary of the Canting Crew, sig. E4. (1690)

FIDELITY, see Faithfulness

FIELD

2 A field requires three things: fair weather, sound seed, and a good husbandman.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 3. (1846)

3 This tongue . . . may keep the field against a whole army of lawyers.

JOHN DRYDEN, Marriage-à-la-Mode. Act ii, sc. 1. (1673)

[He] kept the field with honour.

TENNYSON, Pelleas and Ettarre, l. 161. (1870)

4 A hard foughten feeld, where no man skaphth unkyld.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

It is a hard-fought Field where none escapes.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2861. (1732)

It's a sair field where all are dung down.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 66. (c. 1595)

5 In the tented field.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, i, 3, 85. (1605)

They died on the field of honor.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Tales of a Traveller, i, 52. (1824)

The Greeks could not stand before the Persians in a field of battle.

E. S. CREASY, Fifteen Decisive Battles of the World, p. 22. (1851)

FIELDS HAVE EYES, see under EAR.

FIG

6 I wouldn't give a fig for the pair. (οὐκ ἄν πάλιν οὐδ' ἂν λυγρόν μῖς.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Peace, l. 1223. (421 B.C.)
Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, viii, 8, with the Latin, "Vitiosa nuce non emam," quoted from PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus. Fig, as a type of anything small or contemptible.

A fig for it. (Luy feist la figue.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 45. (1548)

A figge for his Monarchie.

M. HANMER, Historie of Ireland, p. 115. (1571)

A fig for Peter!

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, ii, 3, 67. (1590)

Fig for thy friendship!

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iii, 6, 60. (1599)

A Spanish figge for the imputation.

JOHN WEBSTER, The Dutchesse of Malfy. Act ii, sc. 3. (1614)

Not to care a figge for one, faire le figue à.

ROBERT SHERWOOD, Dictionary: Figue. (1632)

Fumi umbra non emerim, I will not give a fig's end for it.

JOHN WITHALS, Dictionary, p. 557. (1634)

I'll not give a fig for your wine.

SWIFT, To Thomas Sheridan, l. 30. (1718)

A fig—a dried Smyrna, Dago-stand fig—for your cults.

O. HENRY (W.S. PORTER), Buried Treasure. (1909)

7 The thief raised up his hands with both the figs. (Il ladro | le mani alzò con ambedue le fiche.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxv, l. 1. (c. 1300) To "make the fig" (far le fiche) was an insulting gesture in which the thumb was inserted between the index and middle finger. A very ancient expression, used by Paradin, Rabelais, La Fontaine, and many others. The French (LA FONTAINE, ii, 5) is "faire la figue."

The Fig of Spain.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iii, 6, 62. (1599)

8 They sewed fig leaves together, and made themselves aprons. (Consuerunt folia ficus.)

Old Testament: Genesis, iii, 7. (c. 550 B.C.) In the Geneva Bible—the so-called Breeches Bible—this sentence read, "They sewed fig-leaves together and made themselves breeches."

All the costumes since Adam's, right or wrong, From Eve's fig-leaf down to the petticoat, Almost as scanty, of days less remote.

BYRON, The Vision of Judgment. St. 66. (1822)

9 And Judah and Israel dwelt safely, every man under his vine and under his fig tree. (Sub vite sua, et sub ficu sua.)

Old Testament: I Kings, iv, 25. (c. 600 B.C.)
See also Mirah, iv, 4.

Eat ye every man of his own vine, and every one of his fig tree. (Comedet unusquisque de vinea sua, et de ficu sua.)

Old Testament: II Kings, xviii, 31.

Train up a fig-tree in the way it should go, and when you are old sit under the shade of it.

DICKENS, Dombey and Son. Bk. i, ch. 19. (1848)

10 Only a madman will look for figs in winter. (σύνον χειμῶνος ζητεῖν μαινομένου.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. xi, sec. 33. (c. A.D. 174) Condensing EPICETUS, iii, 24, 86, who says, "The object of your love is mortal; it has been given you for the present, not inseparably nor forever, but like a fig, . . . at a fixed season of the year, and if you hanker for it in winter, you are a fool."

<sup>1</sup> All thy strong holds shall be like fig trees with the first ripe figs: if they be shaken, they shall even fall into the mouth of the eater. (Sicut ficus cum grossis suis: si concussae fuerint, cadent in os comedentis.)

Old Testament, Nahum, iii, 12. (c. 700 B. C.)

<sup>2</sup> In the name of the Prophet—figs!

HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, Johnson's Ghost. (1812)

FIGHTING

See also Strife, War

<sup>3</sup> He that will fight may fight if he will. (ὁ μὲν θέλων μάχεσθαι, | πάρεστι γὰρ, μαχέσθω.)

ANACREON, Fragments. Frag. 106. (c. 500 B. C.)

See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, ii, 193.

A man that will fight may find a cudgel in every hedge.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 324. (1639)

<sup>4</sup> Marathon fighters. (Μαραθωνομάχαι.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Acharnians, l. 181. (c. 410 B. C.) A proverbial phrase used of brave veterans.

<sup>5</sup> Take your spur if you will fight. (αἶψε πλῆκτρον, εἰ μαχεῖ.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Birds, l. 759. (414 B. C.)

Quoting an old proverb.

Tuck up your cape. (Atolle pallium.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 769. (161 B. C.) "Roll up your sleeves," "Take off your coat," and get ready to fight.

<sup>6</sup> Distrust yourself, and sleep before you fight.

JOHN ARMSTRONG, The Art of Preserving Health. Bk. iv, l. 456. (1744)

<sup>7</sup> Biting or gouging, or worse practice, common in what is called rough-and-tumble.

H. H. BRACKENRIDGE, Modern Chivalry, p. 55. (1792)

I understand the question is generally asked, "Will you fight fair, or take it rough and tumble?"

JOHN PALMER, Journal of Travels in the United States, p. 131. (1818)

They were . . . expert at biting, gouging, and other branches of the rough-and-tumble mode of warfare.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Knickerbocker's History of New York. Bk. iv, ch. 9. (1848)

<sup>8</sup> Do not fight against two adversaries. (Noli pugnare duobus.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode lxii, l. 64. (c. 57 B. C.)

NOT EVEN HERCULES AGAINST TWO, see under HERCULES.

<sup>9</sup> This voice did on my spirit fall,
Peschiera, when thy bridge I crost,
" 'Tis better to have fought and lost,
Than never to have fought at all."

ARTHUR H. CLOUGH, Peschiera St 10. (c. 1849)

<sup>10</sup> An Irishman fights before he reasons, a Scotchman reasons before he fights, an Englishman is not particular as to the order of precedence, but will do either to accommodate.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 274. (1820)

<sup>11</sup> It was thinking of what you call consequences . . . that prevented me from . . . making it a real knock-down and drag-out.

J. FENIMORE COOPER, The Prairie. Ch. 4. (1827)

I never saw a prettier knock down and drag out.

W. A. CARUTHERS, The Kentuckians in New York, i, 61. (1834)

A reg'lar knock-down and drag-out fight.

C. E. CRADDOCK (MARY N. MURFREE), In the Tennessee Mountains, p. 255. (1884)

<sup>12</sup> So fight I, not as one that beateth the air. (οὕτως πνικτεύω ὡς οὐκ ἀέρα δέπω.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, ix, 26. (c. A. D. 60) The Vulgate is, "Sic pugno, non quasi aerem verberans."

<sup>13</sup> The combat ceased, for want of combatants. (Le combat cessa, faute de combattants.)

CORNEILLE, Le Cid. Act iv, sc. 3. (1636)

Enfin le combat finit faute de combattants.

MADAME DE SÉVIGNÉ, Letter to Mme de Grignan, 20 Feb., 1671.

<sup>14</sup> That is right good news, for if the Medes hide the sun with their arrows we shall fight them in the shade and not in the sunshine. (ἡ μάχη καὶ οὐκ ἐν ἡλίῳ.)

DIENECEES, one of the 300 Spartans at Thermopylae. (480 B. C.) On being told that the Medes were so many that when they shot with their bows the sun was hidden by the multitude of arrows. See HERODOTUS, vii, 226.

The most shower bullets of livid lead. (Pars maxima glandes liventis plumbi spargit.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vii, l. 686. (19 B. C.)

<sup>15</sup> To descend into the arena. (In herenam descendere.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chl. i, cent. ix, No. 83. (1523) To accept a contest. Conversely, "Harena cedere" (To yield the arena), is to confess defeat.

<sup>16</sup> Men must fight. (ἄνδρῶν γὰρ ἀλκή.)

EURIPIDES, Heracleidae, l. 711. (c. 430 B. C.)

<sup>17</sup> As sair fights wranes [wrens] as cranes.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 10. (c. 1595) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 36, who adds, "Little people (if rightly matched) will fight as bitterly . . . as those who are stronger or bigger."

<sup>18</sup> I propose to fight it out on this line if it takes all summer.

ULYSSES S. GRANT, Dispatch, to General Henry W. Halleck, from field headquarters before Spottsylvania Court House, 11 May, 1864

We'll fight it out on these lines if it takes all dinner.

S.N. BEHRMAN, End of Summer. Act II, sc. 2. (1936)
You'll fight it out on this line if it takes all summer.

MANNING LONG, False Alarm, p. 188. (1943)

<sup>1</sup> We fight to great disadvantage when we fight with those who have nothing to lose. (Con disavvantaggio grande si fa la guerra con chi non ha che perdere.)

GUICCIARDINI, Storia d'Italia. (1564)

<sup>2</sup> On painting and fighting look aloof.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 249. (1640)

<sup>3</sup> They fought like wild boars. (ἀγροπόροι οὐρεσσιν δοικότες.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xii, l. 146. (c. 850 B. C.)

He'll fight with tooth and nail. (Manibus pedibusque.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 161. (166 B. C.)

They fought with nails and fists. (Unguibus et pugnīs.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3, l. 102. (35 B. C.)

I have fought to the last finger. (Ad digitum pugnavi.)

QUINTILLIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. viii, ch. 5, sec. 21. (c. A. D. 80) Quoting a gladiator, the allusion being perhaps to the turning up of the thumb as a sign of defeat.

Fight till the last gasp.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI, i, 2, 127. (1591)

There were two cats at Kilkenny;
Each thought there was one too many;
So they quarreled and they fit,
They scratched and they bit,
Till, excepting their nails
And the tips of their tails,
Instead of two cats, there wasn't any.

UNKNOWN, Old Nursery Rhyme. (c. 1700)

When shall we men leave off fighting, cease to prove . . . the legends of Kilkenny (by leaving only our tails behind us, a legacy for new lawsuits)?

BLACKMORE, Cradock Nowell. Ch. 51. (1866)

The Kilkenny cats, who fought till there was nothing but their tails left of either.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, i, 276. (1902)

To fight like Kilkenny cats.

D. E. MARVIN, Curiosities in Proverbs, p. 72 (1916) The legend of the Kilkenny cats derives perhaps from an ancient boundary contention between Kilkenny and Irishtown, which left them both impoverished.

They fought like cat and dog.

M. V. HEBERDEN, The Lobster Pick Murder, p. 71. (1941) The French say "C'est belle bataille que de chiens et chats," or "C'est belle bataille que de chiens et de chats, chascun a ongles," both proverbs dating from the fifteenth century.

It's Tabby and Rover with them all the time.

O. HENRY, The Hypotheses of Failure. (1910)
See also CAT AND DOG

<sup>4</sup> I have not yet begun to fight.

JOHN PAUL JONES, when summoned to surrender as his ship, the Bonhomme Richard, was sinking under him in his fight with the British forty-four, Serapis, 23 Sept., 1779. See COOPER, History of the Navy of the United States of America. Vol. i, ch. 9, p. 107. Sometimes given, "I have just begun to fight."

<sup>5</sup> He smote them hip and thigh with a great slaughter. (Percussitque eos ingenti plaga, ita ut stupentes suram femori imponent.)

Old Testament: Judges, xv, 8. (c. 700 B. C.)

Abner . . . smote him under the fifth rib. (Percussit ergo eum Abner aversa hasta in inguine.)

Old Testament: II Samuel, ii, 23. (c. 700 B. C.)

<sup>6</sup> Sick is the man who lacks a thing to fight about.

KHATI I, KING OF EGYPT, Teaching. No. xvi. (c. 2500 B. C.) Budge, tr.

<sup>7</sup> A switch against a net-fighter. (Contra retiarium ferula.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ii, preface. (c. A. D. 90)

To fight with feeble weapons against a well-armed adversary. To parry a lance with a bodkin. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, v, 80.

<sup>8</sup> We'll fight it out. (Conlatis signis depugnabimus.)

PLAUTUS, Casina, l. 352. (c. 200 B. C.)

You hurl a javelin at me. (Pilum iniecasti mihi.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 570. (c. 200 B. C.) Proverbial for attacking some one.

<sup>9</sup> As it is not the punishment that makes the martyr, so it is not the fighting that declares the valiant man, but fighting in a good cause. (Sicut non martyrem poena, sic nec fortem pugna, sed causa.)

SIR WALTER RALEGH, History of the World. Bk. v, ch. 3. (1614) Quoted.

What can alone ennoble fight? A noble cause!

CAMPBELL, Hallowed Ground, l. 41. (1825)

<sup>10</sup> Like Teague's cocks, that fought one another, though all were of the same side.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 193. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3234. (1732)

<sup>11</sup> He gathered them together into a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon. ("Ἀρμαγεδών.")

New Testament: Revelation, xvi, 16. (c. A. D. 90) Armageddon, or Har-Magedon, meant Mount Megiddo, possibly Mount Carmel, at whose foot lay the plain of Megiddo, the scene of many battles.

We stand at Armageddon, and we battle for the Lord.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, at Chicago, 17 June, 1912, on the eve of the Republican National Convention which nominated W. H. Taft for the Presidency. Roosevelt was fighting Taft.

1 I fought for my own hand.

WALTER SCOTT, Fair Maid of Perth, ch. 34. (1828) Scott is quoting Hal o' the Wynd, or Henry Gow (1396), and adds that the expression is still proverbial in Scotland.

Adventurers, who were fighting for their own hand.

J. A. FROUDE, Caesar, Ch. 9. (1879)

He fought, like Hal o' the Wynd, for his own hand.

ANDREW LANG, History of Scotland, p. 291. (1900)

2 He which hath no stomach to this fight,
Let him depart.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iv, 3, 35. (1599)

[He] hath his bellyful of fighting.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, ii, 1, 21. (1609)

3 Fight dog, fight beare (say they), the deuill part all!

PHILIP STUBBES, The Anatomie of Abuses, p. 178. (1583)

A match; we'll fight dog, fight bear.

MIDDLETON AND ROWLEY, The Spanish Gipsie. Act iv, sc. 3. (1623)

You must fight according to the old Saying, Fight Dog, fight bear; that is, till one is overcome.

SIR WILLIAM MONSON, Naval Tracts, iii, 350/2. (c. 1640)

Fight dog, fight devil.

THOMAS ADY, A Candle in the Dark, p. 62. (1656)

4 Fight dog, fight bear. Ne depugnes in alieno negotio. Fight not in another person's concerns.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 244. (1678)

A resolution to keep myself free of politics, and let them "fight dog, fight bear."

WALTER SCOTT, Diary, 5 March, 1831.

5 Fight the good fight of faith. (ἀγωνίζου τὸν καλὸν ἀγῶνα τῆς πίστεως.)

New Testament: I Timothy, vi, 12. (c. A. D. 60)

The Vulgate is, "Certa bonum certamen fidei."

I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. (τὸν καλὸν ἀγῶνα ἡγήνησμαι, τὸν δρόμον τετέλεκα, τὴν πίστιν τετήρηκα.)

New Testament: II Timothy, iv, 7. (c. A. D. 60)

The Vulgate is, "Bonum certamen certavi, cursum consummavi, fidem servavi."

6 Eager for the fray. (Avidus pugnae.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xii, l. 430. (19 B. C.)

7 [Writers] taking up the Cudgels on one side or another.

RICHARD WHITLOCK, Zoötomia, p. 233. (1654)

[He] took up the cudgels against him.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, iii, 309. (1662)

I must take up the cudgels for my client.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Sir J. Banks. (1788)

His wife had taken up the cudgels for her friend.

TROLLOPE, He Knew He Was Right. Ch. 1. (1869)

[He] was always ready to take up the Tory cudgels.

TREVELLYAN, Macaulay's Life and Letters. Ch. 3. (1876)

II—Fighting and Running

8 Better throw away your arms than be killed. (κρίπτον ἐστιν ἀποβαλεῖν τὰ ὅπλα ἢ ἀποθανεῖν.)

ARCHILOCHUS, Satires. (c. 700 B. C.) The poet was ejected from Sparta the moment he arrived there because he had written this verse.

See PLUTARCH, Moralia, 239B.

The problem for a soldier is to save himself; there's plentiful provision for dying. (ἀλέθρον δ' εὐτορον.)

MENANDER, The Shield. Frag. 76K. (c. 300 B. C.)

Prone to flight, and therefore more likely to survive. (Fugacissimi ideoque tam diu superstites.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 34. (A. D. 98)

He who retires does not fly. (No huye el que se retira.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 28. (1615)

"There is no wisdom in waiting when danger outweighs hope," Cervantes continues, "and it is the part of wise men to preserve themselves today for tomorrow, and not risk all in one day."

It is better to have wings than horns.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 958. (1640)
Cowardice?

I only know we don't live twice,

Therefore—shun death, is my advice.

ROBERT BROWNING, Arcades Ambo. (1890)

It is better they should say, here he ran away, than here he died.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 106. (1902) A Spanish proverb. The American variant is, "I'd rather hear them say 'There he goes' than 'Here he lies.'" The French say, "Une bonne fuite vaut mieux qu'une mauvaise attente" (A good flight is better than a bad wait).

'Tis better to make a good run than a bad stand.

M. V. HEBERDEN, Murder Goes Astray, p. 119. (1943)

9 The man who runs away may fight again. (ἀνὴρ ὁ φεύγων καὶ πάλιν μαχήσεται.)

DEMOSTHENES, when asked why he fled from the battle of Chaeronea, 338 B. C. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, x, 40, with the Latin, "Vir fugiens, et denuo pugnabit." Referred to as an old proverb, admonishing that as long as the spirit is not conquered, the defeated can become the victor.

Philip defeated the Athenians in the great battle at Chaeronea. [338 B. C.] At that time the orator Demosthenes sought safety in flight from the battlefield, and when he was bitterly taunted with his flight he jestingly replied in the well-known verse: "The man who runs away will fight again."

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae. Bk. xvii, ch. 21. (c. A. D. 150)

He who flees will fight again. (Qui fugiebat, rursus proelabitur.)

TERTULLIAN, De Fuga in Persecutione. Sec. 10. (c. A. D. 195)

That same man, that renneth awaie,
Maie again fight, an other daie.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus Apophthegmes, 372. (1542) The birth of the proverb in nearly its modern form. Like a bear's cub, it still needs licking into shape.

Demosthenes saith, That the man that runs away may fight another time. (Demosthenes dist que l'home fuyant combatra de rechief.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 55. (1548) Quoted by BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, ii, iii, 7, 357. (1621)

He who flees in good time can fight over again. (Celui qui fuit de bonne heure | Peut combattre derechef.)

UNKNOWN, Satyre Menippée. (1595) The Italians say "Un bel fuggir salva la vita ancora" (A good flight saves life again), perhaps burlesquing Petrarch's famous line, "Un bel morir tutta la vita onora."

He can return who flies:

Not so with him who dies.

(Qui fuit peut revenir aussi:

Qui meurt, il n'en est pas ainsi.)

PAUL SCARRON, Epigram. (c. 1651)

For he that fights and runs away

May live to fight another day.

SIR JOHN MENNES AND DR. JAMES SMITH, eds., Musarum Deliciae. (1656) No name was signed to these lines, which marked the first appearance of the proverb in its modern form. They have been ascribed to Sir John Suckling, but no confirmation has ever been discovered.

For those that fly may fight again,
Which he can never do that's slain.

BUTLER, Hudibras, iii, iii, 243. (1678)

The Dragoons . . . thought proper . . . a sudden retreat; as knowing that, He that fights and runs away, May turn and fight another Day; But he that is in Battle slain, Will never rise to fight again.

JAMES RAY, A Compleat History of the Rebellion in 1745, p. 50. (1749) This quatrain, with minor variations, appeared in The Art of Poetry on a New Plan, ii, 147, without ascription, and has been attributed to Oliver Goldsmith.

The one that fought and pulled his freight, to fight 'em on some other date.

O. HENRY, An Afternoon Miracle. (1907)

1 In darkness a runaway beats a pursuer. (ἐν ὀρφνῇ δραπέτης μέγα σέβει.)

EURIPIDES, Rhesus, l. 69. (c. 450 B. C.)

2 There is no defence; to flee is bravest. (οὐδέ τις ἴσ' ἀλκή· φυγεῖν κράτιστον ἀπ' ἀνδρός.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xii, l. 120. (c. 850 B. C.)

We find nothing disgraceful in doing the partridge trick. (ὡς παρ' ἡμῖν οὐδὲν αἰσχρὸν ἐστὶν ἐκπεδικῆσαι.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Birds, l. 768. (414 B. C.)

Nothing disgraceful, that is, in ducking under cover. ZENOBIUS, Adagia, iv, 85, speaks of "The hare running the dinner race" (λαγὼς τὸν πρὸς τῶν κρεῶν), i. e., to save his bacon.

For those that save themselves, and fly
Go halves, at least, i' th' victory.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto iii, l. 269. (1678)

Since 'tis hard to combat, learns to fly.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 102. (1770)

3 There are worsor ills to face
Than foemen in the fray;

And many a man has fought because—
He feared to run away.

RICHARD HOVEY, The Marriage of Guenevere. Act iv, sc. 3. (1891)

4 In warre you be warie, in bataille rather to backward then to bolde, in field rather to flying then to forwarde.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 117. (1576)

5 Who flies in battle risks the life of his fellow-soldier to save his own.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. i, Apologue 3. (c. 1250)

6 Death surely overtakes him who runs from the battle. (ὁ δ' αὖ θάνατος κίχῃ τοι τὸν φηγόμενον.)

SIMONIDES, Victory-Songs. Frag. 68. (c. 475 B. C.)

Death o'ertakes not less the runaway, nor spares the limbs and coward backs of faint-hearted youths. (Mors et fugacem persequitur virum, | nec parcit imbellis iuventae | poplitibus timidove tergo.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode ii, l. 14. (23 B. C.)

He who never fights has been seen to die, while he who engages himself in battle has been seen to escape.

UNKNOWN, The Mahabharata. Sec. 5. (c. 500 B. C.)

He that shrinketh from a bullette in the maine bataille, hath beene stricken with a bil in the rerewarde.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 335. (1580)

Of all the number of men slaine in the warres, not a tenth hath been killed fighting, but flying.

JAMES I OF ENGLAND, Table-Talk. (c. 1610)

See SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Crumms from King James's Table. No. 77.

7 It is not seemly for any man who has weapons in his hands to resort to the help of his unarmed feet. (Nec quemquam decere, qui manus armaverit, ab inermis pedibus auxilium petere.)

SULLA, Aphorism. (106 B. C.) See SALLUST, Bellum Iugurthinum. Ch. 107, sec. 1.

8 "Wel figt that wel fight," seith the wise.

UNKNOWN, The Owl and the Nightingale, 176. (1250)

Wel fytheth that wel flyth, quoth Hendyng.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Hendyng. (c. 1300) In Reliquiae Antiquae, i, 3.

It is an olde sawe, He feghtith wele that fleith faste.

UNKNOWN, Gesta Romanorum: The Wolf and the Hare. Tale 57. (c. 1440)

FIGURES

- 1 You may prove anything by figures.
 THOMAS CARLYLE, Essay on Chartism. (1839)
 Quoted as the saying of "a witty statesman."
 Sometimes given as "Figures can be made to prove anything."
 Figures won't lie, but liars will figure.
 GENERAL CHARLES H. GROSVENOR, Congressman from Ohio, for many years famous for the accuracy of his forecasts of the vote at Presidential elections. (c. 1890)
 Figures often beguile me, particularly when I have the arranging of them myself; in which case the remark attributed to Disraeli would often apply with justice and force: "There are three kinds of lies: lies, damned lies, and statistics."
 MARK TWAIN, Autobiography. Vol. i, p. 246.
 This phrase has also been attributed to Henry Labouchère, Abraham Hewitt and others.
 Statistics are like alienists—they will testify for either side.
 F. H. LA GUARDIA, The Banking Investigation. (Liberty, 13 May, 1933.)
- 2 You . . . must cut a figure behind her coach.
 DAVID HUMPHREYS, A Yankee in England, p. 21. (1815) Make a notable appearance.
 The Declaration of Independence cuts no figure in this question.
Annals of the Sixteenth Congress, 1st session, i, 1074. (1820) Is of no importance.
 A Captain . . . doesn't cut much of a figure among the officers in Washington.
 C. H. HOYT, A Texas Steer. Act iii. (1894)
- 3 Round numbers are always false.
 SAMUEL JOHNSON, Remark. (c. 1776) See HAWKINS, Johnsoniana, p. 235.

FINANCE

- 4 The cohesive power of the vast surplus in the banks.
 JOHN C. CALHOUN, Speech, U.S. Senate, 27 May, 1836. See 2048:8.
 Cohesive power of public plunder.
 GROVER CLEVELAND, paraphrasing Calhoun.
- 5 They throw cats and dogs together and call them elephants.
 ANDREW CARNEGIE, Interview, Referring to industrial promoters. (c. 1890)
 What are fantastically termed securities.
 S. WEIR MITCHELL, Characteristics. Ch. 2. (1891)
- 6 Inflation is repudiation.
 CALVIN COOLIDGE, Speech, before the Hamilton Club, Chicago, 11 Jan., 1922.
- 7 Undigested securities.
 J. PIERPONT MORGAN, Interview, N.Y. Times, 30 March, 1903, referring to a mass of securities issued to inflate the capitalization of various trusts and combinations, promoted and floated in 1901; undigested because the public refused to buy them.

- 8 Too often in recent history liberal governments have been wrecked on rocks of loose fiscal policy.
 F. D. ROOSEVELT, Speech, 10 March, 1933.
- 9 It's the straphanger that pays the dividends.
 CHARLES T. YERKES, The "Traction King," answering complaints of the crowded condition of the Chicago Loop, which he had built. (c. 1900) Straphangers were persons who could find no seats, but were compelled to stand up, supporting themselves by hanging onto an overhead strap or loop of leather provided for the purpose.

FINDING

- 10 I have found it! I have found it. (εβρηκα, εβρηκα.)
 ARCHIMEDES, when a method of testing the purity of the gold in Hieron's crown occurred to him. (c. 200 B.C.) See VITRUVIUS, De Architectura, ix, 215. Vitruvius says that the idea of making the test by specific gravity occurred to Archimedes as he got into his bath and noticed how his body displaced the water, and "he sprang out of the bath exclaiming 'Heureka! heureka!' and without pausing to put on his clothes, ran home to make the experiment."
- 11 Set downe your minde whereunto you will stand, that we may know once where we may finde you.
 JAMES BELL, tr., Haddon Against Osorius, p. 153. (1581)
 Neuer any man living can tell where to find them.
 WILLIAM WATSON, A Decacordon, p. 147. (1602)
 He did not understand his nephew, or (to use a common phrase) know where to find him.
 J. H. NEWMAN, Callista, p. 61. (1856)
- 12 Who that wel byndeth wel can he vnbynd.
 WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Aesop. Bk. v, fab. 4. (1484)
 As the sayinge is, he fyndeth that surely byndeth.
 JOHN BALE, Kynge Johan, l. 1897. (c. 1540)
 Than cathe and holde while I may, fast bind, fast find.
 JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 3. (1546)
 Drie sunne, drie winde, safe binde, safe finde.
 THOMAS TUSSER, Fiue Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie: Washing. (1573)
 Fast bind, fast find;
 A proverb never stale in thrifty mind.
 SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, ii, 5, 53. (1597)
 Because "sure bind, sure find," he [Richard III] is said, and his queen, to be crowned again in York with great solemnity.
 THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain. Vol. iv, ch. 4. (1655)
 "Fast bind, fast find" is an excellent proverb. I'll e'en lock her up with the rest.
 ISAAC BICKERSTAFFE, The Padlock. Act i, sc. 3. (1768)

[He] muttered something about fast bind, fast find, turned the key, and put it into his pocket.

WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Ch. 13. (1824)

See also St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 36. DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. iii, ch. 14. (1865)

"Safe bind, safe find," said Uncle Robert, locking the door and pocketing the key.

D. C. MURRAY, John Vale's Guardian. Ch. 6. (1890)

<sup>1</sup> Where something is found, there look again.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5658. (1732)

<sup>2</sup> A man must have found a thing before he knows where it is. (Man muss eine Sache gefunden haben, wenn man wissen will, wo sie liegt.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. (1819)

They who hide know where to find.

JOHN RHODE, In the Face of the Verdict, p. 122. (1940)

<sup>3</sup> But whan she seemed to be fixed in Mynde, Rather to seeke for that she was lothe to fynde.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

If a man had no light to work, yet he would feel, to seek that he would not find, for fear lest they should find that they did not seek.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, The Metamorphosis of Ajax, p. 122. (1596)

Take heed you find not that you do not seek.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1670) An Italian proverb. FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4309. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> This, to pray for dead folks, this is not found, for it was never lost. How can that be found that was not lost?

HUGH LATIMER, Sermons: Second Sermon before the Convocation. (1536)

If ye seeke to fynde thynges er they be lost, Ye shall fynde one daie you come to your cost.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

How can ye find the glove was never lost?

ROBERT ARMIN, Two Maids of More-Clacke. (1609)

He findeth things before they are lost.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 203. (1633)

To find it where the Highlandman found the tongs.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 383. (1721)

"A Highlandman being challenged for stealing a pair of tongs said he found them; and being asked where? He said, 'Hard by the fire.'"

You have found what was never lost.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5918. (1732)

He who finds a thing before it is lost, dies before he is sick. (Wer findet ehe verloren wird, der stirbt ehe er krank wird.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 312. (1856) That is, a thief is hanged.

<sup>5</sup> What you find, keep. (Ut nanctu's, habe.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 871. (c. 200 B.C.)

He keeps that finds. (Habeas ut nanctu's.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 63. (c. 194 B.C.)

According to the auld Scotch proverb of "he that finds keeps, and he that loses seeks."

D. M. MOIR, Mansie Wauch. Ch. 11. (1824)

We have a proverb,—“Losers seekers, finders keepers.”

CHARLES READE, It Is Never too Late to Mend.

Ch. 65. (1856) A more usual form is, “Finders keepers, losers weepers.” “Findings keepings, losings weepings” is another form. The French say, “Ce que tombe dans le fossé est pour le soldat” (What falls into the trench is for the soldier).

<sup>6</sup> You must just take us as you find us, as the saying is.

CHARLES RUSHTON, Murder in Bavaria. (1937)

FINE

<sup>7</sup> All is fine that is fit.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 523. (1732)

<sup>8</sup> That's all fine and dandy.

NGAIO MARSH, Vintage Murder, p. 35. (1940)

<sup>9</sup> The finest metals soonest break.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 148. (1576)

He that makes a thing too fine, breaks it.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 442. (1640)

<sup>10</sup> Fine folks, fine ways. (ἐν ὀλίῳ ὀλῖα πάντα.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. Idyl xv, l. 24. (c. 270 B.C.)

To fine folks a little ill finely wrapt.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

II—Fine: Proverbial Comparisons

<sup>11</sup> As fine as a horse.

ANN BRAY, Traditions of Devon, i, 328. (1838)

As fine (or proud) as a horse in bells.

BURNE, Shropshire Folk-Lore, p. 595. (1883)

<sup>12</sup> As fine as fippence.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, A Dialogue Against the Fever Pestilence, p. 62. (1564)

As a man would say, finer than fivence, or more proud than a peacock.

UNKNOWN, Grim the Collier. Act ii. (c. 1600)

All finer than fippence, they dazzl'd my eye.

SAMUEL WESLEY, Maggots, p. 109. (1685)

As fine as fippence, as neat as ninepence.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1659)

She was as fine as f'pence.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

<sup>13</sup> Finer than frog hair.

JAKE FALSTAFF, Jacoby's Corners, p. 75. (1938)

<sup>14</sup> "That's fine," say I. "Fine as silk."

DAVID CROCKETT, Exploits and Adventures in Texas, p. 64. (1836)

As fine as silk.

GEORGE W. HARRIS, The Knob Dance. (1845)

<sup>15</sup> As fine as a new scraped carrot.

HOLLAND, Cheshire Glossary, p. 445. (1886)

<sup>1</sup> As fine as Dick's hatband.

D. E. MARVIN, Curiosities in Proverbs, p. 373. (1916) There are many variants: "As queer as Dick's hatband, made of pea straw, that went nine times around and would not meet at last," "As queer as Dick's hatband which was made of sand," "As tight as Dick's hatband." They are all jeers, and the "Dick" referred to is said to be Richard Cromwell, son of Oliver, who was Lord Protector from 1658 to 1659.

<sup>2</sup> As fine as a lord's bastard.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 284. (1678)

<sup>3</sup> As fine as a fiddle.

UNKNOWN, The Dialect of Leeds, p. 407. (1862)

FINGER

<sup>4</sup> Quivering from her tender finger-tips. (ἐκ ἀπαλῶν κινυμένην δυνύχων.)

AUTOMEDON, Epigram. (c. 50 B. C.) See Greek Anthology, v, 129.

According to the proverb, to their finger-tips. (τὸ δὲ λεγόμενον ἐκ δυνύχων ἀγαπᾶσαι τὰ τέκνα.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia. Sec. 3C. (c. A. D. 95)

This man was always alive to his fingertips.

S. V. BENÉT, Western Star, p. 74. (1943)

<sup>5</sup> Why are the fingers tapered like pegs? So that when one hears improper language he may insert them in his ears.

Babylonian Talmud: Kethuboth, fo. 5b. (c. A. D. 450)

<sup>6</sup> If he snapped his fingers. (Si digitis concrepuit.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. iii, ch. xix, sec. 75. (c. 45 B. C.) At a snap of the fingers, with no effort at all.

<sup>7</sup> Some men have green fingers. Plants like them. They can make things grow because they love them.

STUART CLOETE, Congo Song. Ch. 16. (1943) "Green fingers" is a proverbial phrase in the South for a good gardener.

Plants don't grow for me, but my wife's got a green thumb.

CARSON, The Bride Saw Red, p. 213. (1943)

<sup>8</sup> To stand with our fingers in our mouths.

OLIVER CROMWELL, Letters, 14 Nov., 1649. To stand foolishly inactive.

If I am a Fool, put you your Finger in my Mouth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2682. (1732)

<sup>9</sup> And he gave unto Moses . . . two tables of testimony, tables of stone, written with the finger of God. (Scriptas digito Dei.)

Old Testament: Exodus, xxxi, 18. (c. 550 B. C.)

With the finger of God cast out devils. (ἐν δακτύλῳ θεοῦ ἐκβάλλω τὰ δαιμόνια.)

New Testament: Luke, xi, 20. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "In digito Dei elicio daemonia."

To see the finger of God in. To see the working or interposition of God in an accident, a piece of good fortune, etc.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

<sup>10</sup> The Moving Finger writes; and, having writ, Moves on: nor all your Piety nor Wit

Shall lure it back to cancel half a Line

Nor all your Tears wash out a Word of it.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, tr., Omar Khayyám. St. 71. (1859)

<sup>11</sup> Finger in dish, finger in pouch.

EDMUND GAYTON, Pleasant Notes upon Don Quixot, p. 83. (1654) He who eats must pay.

<sup>12</sup> A certain gentleman that had his fingers made of lime-twigs, stole a piece of plate.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, The Metamorphosis of Ajax, p. 65. (1596)

Come, put some lime upon your fingers.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, iv, 1, 246. (1611)

His fingers are lime-twigs. Spoken of a thievish person.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 175. (1670)

Probably something still stuck by my fingers.

MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas. Bk. vii, ch. 15. (1809)

One-third of the money sent by the Queen for the soldiers stuck in his fingers.

J. L. MOTLEY, History of the United Netherlands. Ch. 10. (1860)

<sup>13</sup> At my fyngers ende.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 6. (1546)

I sucke not this out of my owne fingers ends.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Cited by Ray and Fuller.

He forgetteth them not, but hath them at hys finger's ende (as they say),

HUGH LATIMER, Sermons, iii, 181. (1553)

Ye are so good a courtier that you have at your fingers ends that belongeth thereto.

THOMAS HOBY, tr., The Courtier, p. 42. (1561)

I have them at my fingers' ends.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, i, 3, 83. (1599)

Every schoolboy hath that . . . at his fingers' ends.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. i, mem. i, subs. 1. (1621)

Who is more expert in any quality than he that hath it at his fingers ends?

Dicke of Devonshire. Act iii, sc. 1. (c. 1630)

Names which a Man of his Learning has at his Fingers-Ends.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 156. (1711)

An hundred more wise adages, which I have always at my fingers end.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, viii, 57. (1748)

I already have all these authors completely at my fingers' ends.

EARL OF DUDLEY, Letters, p. 143. (1816) The French say, "Savoir une chose sur le bout du doigt."

<sup>14</sup> It were a folly for mee . . . To put my finger to far in the fyre.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1546)

I'll ne'er put my finger in the fire.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, i, 4, 91. (1601)

Let him put his finger into the fire that needeth.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 29. (1633)

To put one's finger in the fire. Prudens in flammam ne manum iniicit [The prudent man doesn't put his hand in the fire]—HIERON. Put not your finger needlessly into the fire. Meddle not with a quarrel voluntarily, wherein you need not be concerned.—Prov., xxvi, 17.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 175. (1670)
Put your finger in the fire, and say it was your fortune.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 280. (1721)
"Spoken to them who lay the blame of their crimes, and mismanagements, on their hard fortune."

Put your Finger into the Fire, and say, 'twas your ill Fortune.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3986. (1732)
TO PUT THE FINGER BETWEEN BARK AND TREE, see under HUSBAND AND WIFE.

<sup>1</sup>
Gain is deade, and layde in tumber,
When he should get ought, eche fynger is a thumb.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)
See under THUMB.

<sup>2</sup>
Every finger points me out, of the Roman race.
(Monstror digito praetereuntium | Romanae fidicen lyrae.)

HORACE, Odes, Bk. iv, ode 3, l. 22. (23 B.C.)
It's fine thing to have a finger pointed at one, and to hear people say, "That's the man." (At pulchrum est digito monstrari et dici, "Hic est.")

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. i, l. 28. (c. A.D. 58)
He became the pointed-at by men's fingers.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. i, Apologue 16. (c. 1258)
<sup>3</sup>
I wyll helpe all this besines with a wete fynger.

WILLIAM HORMAN, Vulgaria, fo. 195. (1519)
With the utmost ease, as easily as a wetted finger turns a page.

Readie waie and recourse maie with a weate finger easily be found out.

NICOLAS UDALL, Apophthegms: To the Reader. (1542)

I hate brawles with my hart: and can turne-ouer a volume of wronges with a wet finger.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works (Grosart), ii, 32. (1593)
Trust not a woman when she cries,
For she'll pump water from her eyes
With a wet finger.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Honest Whore. Pt. i, act v, sc. 1. (1602)

If Dame Winifred were here she'd make them all out with a wet finger.

SAMUEL FOOTE, The Knights. Act i. (1754)
He thinks to win them to his turn with a wet finger.

<sup>4</sup>
WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Ch. 15. (1824)

As God made hands before knives,
So God send a good lot to the cutler's wives.
A. J. KEMPE, ed., Loseley MSS., p. 212. (c. 1567)

They say fingers were made before forks, and hands before knives.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)
Let the ballance use thar paws—they was invented afore nives.

GEORGE W. HARRIS, The Knob Dance. (1848)
Certain crusted scraps of nursery wisdom were in Sarah's repertory, such as . . . "Fingers were made before forks."

E. V. LUCAS, Landmarks, p. 19. (1914)

<sup>5</sup>
[They] will dip their owne fingers in the Suits.

WILLIAM LAMBARDE, Archion, p. 83. (1591)
The High Priest had a finger both in the Trumpet and the Fast.

ARCHBISHOP GEORGE ABBOT, Exposition of Jonah, p. 416. (1600)

No man's pie is freed From his ambitious finger.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, i, 1, 52. (1612)
[She] must needs, forsooth, have her Finger in the Pye.

BARTHOLOMEW HARRIS, tr., Parival's Historie of the Iron Age, p. 75. (1659)

He had a finger in the pie when he burnt his nail off.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 244. (1678)
You would have a finger in every bodies pie.

THOMAS SOUTHERNE, The Fatal Marriage. Act i. sc. 3. (1694)

You had a finger in the pie.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
Their law thrusteth its nose into every platter, and its finger into every pie.

CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth. Ch. 56. (1860)

[She] liked to have a finger in every pie.

SARAH TYTLER, Buried Diamonds. Ch. 12. (1886)

He never could keep his fingers out of any pie.
GEORGETTE HEVER, Envious Casca, p. 187. (1941)

<sup>6</sup>
In yat thou crauest my aide, assure thy selfe I will be the finger next thy thombe.

JOHN LYL, Euphuus (Arber), p. 68. (1579)
You two are finger and thumb.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1659)
RAY, Proverbs, p. 215. (1670)

They are Finger and Thumb, that is, they are so great together, there is no parting them.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Thumb. (1736)

<sup>7</sup>
[She] had already turned that functionary round her finger.

J. L. MOTLEY, Rise of the Dutch Republic. Vol. iii. ch. 3, p. 698. (1855) The phrase is sometimes given as "To wind him around your finger."

To twist round one's little finger. A cliché variant of twist round one's finger. To have completely in one's control.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

<sup>8</sup>
To burn one's fingers. To come to harm. Probably from the proverb, "Never burn your fingers to snuff another man's candle."

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Burn. See also CAT'S PAW, under CAT.

1 A man whose little finger was worth more than your whole body. (Homo, cuius pluris erat unguis, quam tu totus es.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Ch. 57. (c. A. D. 50)
H'as more loue in's little finger, then both they in their whole bodies.

BARTEN HOLYDAY, Technogamia, i. 4. (1618)
He hath more in's little finger, then thou in thy whole body.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 175. (1670)
She has more goodness in her little finger, than he has in his whole body.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

2 We each took a first mate's drink—i. e. three fingers.

W. T. PORTER, Spirit of the Times, 4 Oct., 1856, p. 73/1. A "finger" is a portion of liquor which fills the glass to a depth equal to the width of one finger.

Tom mixed the beverage full and f'ar,
And slammed it, smoking, on the bar.
Some says three fingers, some says two,—
I'll leave the choice to you.

JOHN HAY, The Mystery of Gilgal. (1871)
There is a legend that Hay coined the last two lines in Jack's Bar in Paris, during the exposition of 1867. A variant is, "Some say two fingers, some say three, It's all the same to me."

3 He puts his fingers to his lips. (Cum manus ad os apposit.)

M. CAECILIUS RUFUS, to Cicero. (51 B. C.)
CICERO, Ad Familiares, viii, 1. As a sign of secrecy.

Put your finger to your lip. (Digito compesce labellum.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. i, l. 160. (c. A. D. 120)

4 Don't put your finger in the scorpion's hole if you can't endure his sting.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. i, Apologue 16. (c. 1258)
Me thinkth your counsel weith in the whole,
To make me put my fynger in a hole.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. A variant is, "Don't put your finger in too tight a ring."

5 Betere a finker offe then he eke euer.

UNKNOWN, Ancrene Riwe, p. 360. (c. 1200)
Better finger off nor ay warkin [aching].

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 22. (c. 1595)

Better a finger aff than wagging.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 231. (1678)
Better finger off as ay wagging. Better put an end to a troublesome business, than to be always vex'd with it.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 56. (1721)
Better soon as syne; better a finger aff as aye wagging.

SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 18. (1818)

I'D SET MY TEN COMMANDMENTS IN YOUR FACE, see under COMMANDMENTS.

FIRE

6 If you light your fire at both ends, the middle will shift for itself.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 265. (1712) Referred to as "the old kitchen proverb."

7 For men sais, that fire, na pryd,
But discoueryng, may no man hyd.

JOHN BARBOUR, The Bruce. Bk. iv, l. 119. (c. 1375) The proverb is, "Fire and pride cannot be hid."

8 Then better is small fire one easily to warme
Then is a great fire to do one hurt or harme.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Egloges, p. 9. (1515)
Better a little fire to warm us, than a great one to burn us.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 232. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 865. (1732)
Better a wee fire to warm us, than a mickle fire to burn us.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 61. (1721)
As the old byeword says, "better a wee ingle to warm ye, than a muckle fire to burn you."

SUSAN FERRIER, The Inheritance. Bk. ii, ch. 27. (1824)

9 Of a spark of fire a heap of coals is kindled.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xi, 32. (c. 190 B. C.)

Neglected fires are wont to gather strength. (Neglecta solent incendia sumere vires.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, No. xviii, l. 85. (20 B. C.)
Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth!
(ἰδοὺ ἥλικον πῦρ ἥλικην ὅλην ἀνάπτει.)

New Testament: James, iii, 5. (A. D. 44) The Vulgate is, "Ecce quantus ignis quam magnam silvam incendit!")

A small spark neglected has often kindled a mighty conflagration. (Parva saepe scintilla contemptu magnum excitavit incendium.)

QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS, De Rebus Gestis Alexandri Magni. Bk. vi, sec. 3, l. 11. (c. A. D. 50) The Germans have the same proverb,

"Aus einen Fünklein unbedeckt, | Wird oft sehr grosse Brunst erweckt." The French say, "D'humble scintille s'enflamme une ville" (By a humble spark a town is set on fire). The Scots put it more briefly, "A little spark makes muckle wark."

A fire, when it is kindled, burns many sheaves.
UNKNOWN, Alphabet of Ben Sira. No. 14. (c. 1000)

And of sparkys that ben of syghte smale,
Is fire engendered that devoureth al.

JOHN LYDGATE, Troy Book. Bk. i, l. 785. (c. 1415)
For of a litle sparkle a grete fyre cometh.

GEORGE ASHBY, Poems, p. 61. (c. 1465)

The least sparke if it be not quenched will burst into a flame, the least Moath in time eateth the thickest cloath.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 109. (1579)
A little fire is quickly trodden out;

Which, being suffer'd, rivers cannot quench.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, iv, 8, 7. (1591)

'Tis a small sparke giues fire to a beautiful woman's discredit.

DEKKER AND WEBSTER, North-ward Hoe. Act ii. (1607)

I rose, and shook my clothes, as knowing well That from small fires comes oft no small mishap.

GEORGE HERBERT, Artillerie. (c. 1630)

What a great fire doth a small spark kindle!

THOMAS FULLER, Church History. Bk. iii, sec. 2. (1655)

How soon a little spark kindles into a flame.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, vii, 306. (1748)

According to its fuel so doth a fire burn.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxviii, 10. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

As though adding fuel to the fire. (Velut materiam igni praebeantes.)

LIVY, Ab Urbe Condita. Bk. xxi, sec. 10. (c. 25 B. C.)

You add flames to flame, and waters to the sea. (In flammam flammās, in mare fundis aquas.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 2, l. 34. (c. 13 B. C.)

He who gives no fuel to the fire puts it out. (τὸ πῦρ ὃ μὴ παρασχὼν ὕλην ἔσβεσσε.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On the Control of Anger. Sec. 454F. (c. A. D. 95)

Through more wode or col, the more fyr.

CHAUCEER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 1332. (c. 1380)

All adding fewel to the fire.

WILLIAM WARNER, Albion's England. Ch. 59, st. 27. (1592)

My blandishments were Fuell to that fire.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Legends, iii, 147. (1596)

Take away fuel, take away flame.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 192. (1639)

Cited by RAY, English Proverbs, p. 95 (1670), with the addition, "Remove the tale-bearer, and contention ceaseth."

He's gone, and who knows how he may report Thy words by adding fuel to the flame?

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 1350. (1671)

Every one adds fuel to my flame.

APHRA BEHN, The Amorous Prince. Act i, sc. 4. (1671)

Take away Fuel, and you take away Fire.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4305. (1732)

Do not add mud to the mobella.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 724. (1817)

The mobella is the tank in which flax is wetted.

Each look is fuel added to my fire.

J. R. PLANCHÉ, Extravaganzas, ii, 248. (1843)

The more fuel, the more fire. (P'ëng ch'ai 'huo yen kao.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 7. (1875)

2 Blow the spark and it will flame; spit upon it and it will be quenched. (ἐὰν φυσήσῃς σπινθήρα ἐκκαθήσεται, καὶ ἐὰν πτύσῃς ἐν' αὐτὸν σβεσθήσεται.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxviii, 12. (c. 190 B. C.) Quoted M. Rabbah, Leviticus, fo. 153; and anonymously in Yalkut, Levit., sec. 460; Psalms, sec. 767; Job, sec. 501.

3 A little fire burns up a great deal of corn.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus). (c. 190 B. C.) Quoted by JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 280.

Little fire burns up much corn.

LORD LYTTON, What Will He Do with It? Bk. viii, ch. 1. (1858)

4 The fire that does not warm me shall never scorch me.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 504. (1855)

5 Thou seest stykkes that are smale, They brenne fyrst feyre.

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, Handlyng Synne, l. 12438. (c. 1300)

Little sticks kindle the fire; great ones put it out.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3261. (1732) The Portuguese say, "Little chips kindle the fire, great logs sustain it." "Little chips light great fires" is a variant.

6 But of wymmen hyt ys grete wundyr,

Hyt fareth wyth hem as fyre and tundryr.

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, Handlyng Synne, l. 7924. (c. 1303)

For peril is bothe fyr and tow t'assemble.

CHAUCEER, Canterbury Tales: The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 89. (c. 1388) Pope renders the line, "There's danger in assembling fire and tow."

Adde fyre to towe and you shal sone have a flame.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoyse, p. 417. (1630)

By sufrance to be so lyther,

In my house to lay fyre and tow together.

But if they fyre me, some of them shall wyn

More towe on their distaves than they can well spyn.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

Like fire amongst flaxe.

GEORGE PETTIE, tr., Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 194. (1574)

Fire and flaxe agree not. (Foco e stoppa non s'accorda.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 30. (1578)

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 97. (1666)

The fire quickly burneth the flaxe.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 62. (1579)

There is no quenching of fire with towe.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 141. (1633)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 153. (1678)

He is fire and flax; and so have at him.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Elder Brother. Act i, sc. 2.

All fire and tow.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 175. (1670)

Fire in flax will smoke.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1541. (1732)

There is an old proverb about fire and flax.

SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 30. (1822)

7 There is certainly some hidden fire beneath these ashes. (ἔστι τι καὶ πῦρ ὑπὸ τῇ σποδιῇ.)

CALLIMACHUS, Epigrams. No. xlv, l. 2. (c. 250 B. C.)

Thou art walking, as it were, over fires hidden beneath treacherous ashes. (Tractus et incedis per ignes | suppositos cineri doloso.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode. i, l. 7. (c. 23 B. C.)
Yet in our asshen old is fyr y-reke [raked together].

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Reeve's Prologue, l. 28. (c. 1386)

The fire which seems extinguished often slumbers beneath the ashes. (Le feu qui semble étient souvent dort sous la cendre.)

CORNEILLE, Rodogune. Act iii, sc. 4. (1644)

Ev'n in our Ashes live our wonted Fires.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard. St. 23. (1760)

Every fire has its ashes.

STEELE MACKAYE, Paul Kauvar. Act i. (1888)

1 O perilous fyr, that in the bedstraw bredeth!

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale, l. 539. (c. 1388)

Those that with haste will make a mighty fire,
Begin it with weak straws.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, i, 3, 107. (1599)

It is a dangerous fire begins in the bed straw.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1068. (1640)

2 So thryve I, this night shal I make it wel,
Or casten al the gruwel in the fyre.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, l. 710. (c. 1380)

THE FAT IS IN THE FIRE, see under FAT.

3 Be we comen hider

To fecchen fyr, and rennen hoom ayeyn?

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. v, l. 484. (c. 1380)

Coming to Naples but to fetch fire, as the by word is, not to make my place of abode.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 72. (1579)

To come to fetch fire.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 175. (1670)

You are come to fetch fire. Spoken to them who make short visits.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 374. (1721)

Where are you going so soon? I hope you did not come to fetch fire.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

4 To take fire from fire. (Ab igne ignem capere.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 16, sec. 52. (c. 45 B. C.) Quoted as a proverb.

You kindle the flame and then cry "fire!"

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 160. (1817)

5 To pour fire on fire. (πῦρ ἐπὶ πῦρ ἐκχεῖν.)

CRATINUS, Fragment. (c. 450 B. C.)

Don't add fire to fire. (μὴ πῦρ ἐπὶ πῦρ.)

PLATO, Laws. Sec. 666A. (c. 348 B. C.) Cited by DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, vi, 71 (c. A. D. 125); by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 123F, who refers to it as a proverb; and by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ii, 8, with the Latin, "Ignem igni ne addas," and the comment, "Don't add calamity to calamity, or commotion to commotion." TAVERNER includes it in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 51, with the rendering, "Put not fyre to fyre."

The only way I know how to fight fire is with fire.
STEWART STERLING, Down Among the Dead Men, p. 224. (1943)

6 The fire is never without heat.

DAVIES, Scourge of Folly. Prov. 220. (1611)

7 In paper, how can you wrap up fire?

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 683. (1872)

8 Fire isn't quenched by fire. (πῦρ οὐ σβέννυται πῦρ.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iii, cent. iii, No. 48.

(1508) The Latin is, "Ignis non extinguitur igni." The Italians have the same proverb, "Il fuoco non s'estingue con fuoco."

Fire is put out by fire. (Incendium ignibus extinguitur.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1594)

One fire burns out another's burning.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 2, 46. (1595)
Whose desire

Was all this while, by fire, to draw out fire;

And by a well advised course to smother

The fury of one passion with another.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Works, iii, 267. (1629)

The fire that burneth, taketh away the heate of the burn.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 356.

(1580) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4523. (1732)

Fire will fetch out fire.

SIR JOHN VANBRUGH, The Mistake. Act iii, sc. 1. (1706)

9 Who makes a fire of straw, hath much smoke,
& nought els. (Chi di paglia suoco fa, molto fumo, e altro non ha.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 28. (1578)

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 97. (1666)

A fire of straw yields naught but smoke.

UNKNOWN, Book of Meery Riddles. Prov. 71. (1629)

He that maketh a Fire of Straw, hath much Smoke and but little Warmth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2236. (1732)

10 He is like a brand af fyre, kyndealeth others, and burneth hym selfe. (Lui è come un stizon di fuoco, alluma altri, & sibrucia se stesso.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 34. (1578)

11 Thou shalt brenne as any fyr.

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose. (c. 1240) CHAUCER (?), tr., l. 2548. (c. 1365)

As the fyr he brende For sharp desyr.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, l. 425. (c. 1380)

In his herte brende as any fyr.

CHAUCER, The Legend of Good Women: Lucretia, l. 72. (c. 1385)

12 Well may he smell fire, whose gown burns.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 144. (1640)

13 A gentleman's greyhound and a salt box, seek them at the fire.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 207. (1640)

1 Working and making a fire doth discretion require.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 227. (1640)
Well to work and make a fire,
Doth both care and skill require.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 28. (1670)

2 He that can make a fire well can end a quarrel.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 559. (1640)

To play at Chess when the house is on fire.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1134. (1650)

3 A softe fire makith swete malte.

RICHARD HILLS, Commonplace-Book, p. 128.

(c. 1530) TAVERNER, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, fo. 29. (1550) UDALL, Roister Doister, i, 3. (1550) BULLEIN, Dialogue. (1564) PORTER, Two Angrie Women of Abington, li, 1. (1599)

Whan time hath tournd white suger to white salte,

Than suche folke see, soft fire maketh sweete malte.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 2. (1546)

The mault is never swete onlesse the fier bee softe.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 192. (1576)

The malt is ever sweetest where the fire is softest.

ROBERT GREENE, Alcida. (1588) Works (Grosart), ix, 66.

Extreames have still their fault;

The softest Fire makes the sweetest Mault.

ROBERT HERRICK, Connubii Flores. (1648)

Soft fire, They say, does make sweet malt.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, i, iii, 1251. (1663)

Slow fire makes sweet malt.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, (1670) D'URFEY, Don Quixote. Pt. i, act iv. (1694) SCOTT, Quentin Durward. Ch. 7. (1823)

4 First of all let a fire be kindled for me in the hall. (πῦρ οὖν μοι πρῶτιστον ἐν μεγάροις γείσθω.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xxii, l. 491. (c. 850 B.C.)

The first words of Odysseus when he reached home from his wanderings.

The laughter of the hearth. (ἡ Ἑστία γελᾷ.)

ARISTOTLE, Meteorology. Sec. 2. (c. 340 B.C.)

Of fire crackling. Browning's line, Paracelsus, pt. iii, l. 1, "Heap logs and let the blaze laugh out," has the same idea.

A blazing fire makes a house look more pleasant upon a winter's day. (αἰδομένου δὲ πυρὸς γεραιώτερος οἶκος ἰδέσθαι | ἡματι χειμερίῳ.)

HOMER (?), Epigrams of Homer. No. 13. (c. 400 B.C.) Repeated in The Contest of Homer and Hesiod, sec. 324.

Este bueth oune brondes. (Pleasant is one's own fireside.)

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Hendyng. (c. 1300)

See Reliquiae Antiquae, i, 111.

Hit is merry a man to syt by his owne fyre.

FÖRSTER, ed., Douce MS., 52. (c. 1350)

House without fire, body without soul. (Maison sans flamme, corps sans âme.)

BOUVELLES, Proverbes. (c. 1550) See DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, li, 172.

The fire which the Chaldeans worshipped for a god is crept into every man's chimney.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, History of the World: Preface. (1614)

A fair fire makes a room flet [gay].

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 288. (1678)

Our ain reek's better than other folks' fire.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 38. (1818)

Ane's ain hearth is gowd's worth.

HISLOP, Proverbs of Scotland, p. 34. (1862)

Fire is the most tolerable third party.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal. (a. 1862) See EMERSON, Thoreau.

Man is the animal that has made friends with the fire.

VAN DYKE, Fisherman's Luck. Ch. 11. (1899)

5 Fire is half bread.

C. M. DOUGHTY, Wanderings in Arabia. Bk. i, ch. 10. (1908) Referred to as "a winter proverb of the poor in Europe." A similar Cornish one is, "Good fire and clean grate, Just as good as half your meat."

6 Keep the Home Fires Burning.

MRS. LENA GUILBERT FORD, title of song published in 1915, and popular during the first World War. The theme was suggested by Ivor Novello, who wrote the music.

Blow on it. Keep the home fires burning.

REX STOUT, Alphabet Hicks, p. 34. (1941)

7 You may poke a man's fire after you've known him seven years, but not before.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 204. (1902)

8 Split a stake that you may bake. (Scinde calam ut caleas.)

LUCILIUS, Satires. Bk. xxvi, frag. 981, Loeb. (c. 131 B.C.) A soldier's proverb: "Frangere fustus et fac focum" (Break some sticks and make up a fire).

9 Fyre commeth out of the hardest flynte wyth the steele.

JOHN LYLly, Euphues (Arber), p. 64. (1579)

In the coldest flint there is hot fire.

JOHN LYLly, Euphues, p. 79. (1579) MERES, Palladis, fo. 321. (1598) DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 193. (1616) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2822. (1732)

It lies as coldly in him as fire in a flint, which will not show without knocking.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus, iii, 3. 256. (1601)

The fire i' the flint Shows not till it be struck.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, i, 1, 22. (1608)

10 Doth not the fire (an element so necessary that without it man cannot liue) as well burne the house as burne in the house, if it be abused?

JOHN LYLly, Euphues (Arber), p. 100. (1579)
The fire gives light, and the flames brightness, and yet they may both destroy us. (Luz da el fuego, y claridad las hogueras, y bien podria ser que nos abrasasen.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 34. (1615)

Fire is a good servant, says the humanitarian in me. But a bad master, says the insurance agent.

R. A. J. WALLING, The Spider and the Fly, p. 308. (1940)

1 A smoldering fire makes bitter smoke.

HELEN T. MILLER, Sheridan Road, p. 72. (1942)

2 The more the fire is covered up, the more it burns. (Quoque magis tegitur, tectus magis aestuat ignis.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. iv, l. 64. (A. D. 7)

Wry [cover] the gleed [glowing coal], and hotter is the fyr.

CHAUCER, Legend of Good Women, l. 735. (c. 1380)

Wel the hotter been the gledes rede,
That men hem wryen with asshen pale and dede.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde, ii, 538. (c. 1380)

The more closely that you kepe fyre, no doubt,
The more feruent it is when it breaketh out.

LEWIS WAGER, Marie Magdalene, sig. C2. (1566)

Fire, the more it is kept downe, the more it flameth up.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 62. (1576)

He that stoppeth the streame, forceth it to swell higher; . . . he that casteth water on the fire in the Smithes forge, maketh it to flame fiercer.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 61. (1579)

An oven that is stopp'd, or river stay'd,
Burneth more hotly, swelleth more with rage.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 331. (1593)

Fire that's closest kept burns most of all.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, i, 2, 30. (1594)

The more thou damm'st it up, the more it burns.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, ii, 7, 26. (1594)

The more the fire's kept downe the more it burns.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Feu. (1611)

3 No metal so course but fire will purifie it.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 188. (1576)

4 Using oil to put out fire. (ἐλαίῳ πῦρ σβεννύειν.)

PLATO, Laws. (c. 348 B. C.) As quoted by DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, vi, 71.

Throw oil on the fire. (Oleum adde camino.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 321. (30 B. C.)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, 1, 9, together with a similar one, "Oleo incendium restinguere" (To put out fire with oil). A proverb in many languages. The French say, "Jetter de l'huile sur le feu," the Germans, "Du güssest Oel in's Feuer."

If I see anyone perishing in a fire and begging to have it put out, I am to put it out with pitch and oil. (πίττῃ καὶ ἐλαίῳ κατασβεννύται.)

LUCAN, Timon. Sec. 44. (C. A. D. 190)

You thinke (saide Ladie Lelia) to quench fire with oyle.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 149. (1574) Young, tr.

Don't pour oil on the flames. ('Huo shank t'ien yu.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2064. (1875)

5 Fire is given, even though you ask it from enemies. (Datur ignis, tametsi ab inimico petas.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 679. (c. 194 B. C.) Referring to the old superstition that it is unlucky to refuse fire to anyone.

6 Fire keeps its own heat even in steel. (Ignis calorem suum etiam in ferro tenet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 305. (c. 43 B. C.)

For fire to glare far and wide and burn nothing is impossible. (Late ignis lucere, ut nihil urat, non potest.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 347.

7 Don't stir fire with a sword. (πῦρ σιδήρῳ μὴ σκαλεῖν.)

PYTHAGORAS, Maxim. (c. 525 B. C.) As cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 2, with the Latin, "Ignem ne gladio fodito." Erasmus explains that the meaning is, "Don't wrangle with an angry man," and JOHN LYLY also so interprets it (Euphues and His Ephoebus, p. 148); quoting Pythagoras as saying, "Not to bring fire to a slaughter: that is, we must not prouoke any that is furious with words."

Add blood to folly, and stir the fire with a sword. (Adde cruorum | stultitiae, atque ignem gladio scrutare.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 275. (30 B. C.)

According to the Proverbe, Cut not the fire with the yron.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 94. (1574) Pettie, tr.

8 I will kindle no moe coales then I may well quenche.

B. R., Euterpe, p. 136. (1584)

Kindle not a fire that you cannot extinguish.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 437. (1855)

9 Fire is the great Master of Arts, as Tully writes. (Le feu soit le grand maistre des arts, comme escript Ciceron.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 57. (1548)

10 Since the wind blows your fire,

No need yourself to tire.

(Yin fêng ch'ui huo, yung li pu to.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 735. (1875)

11 Be stirring as the time; be fire with fire.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, v, 1, 48. (1596)

12 Though little fire grows great with little wind,
Yet extreme gusts will blow out fire and all.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, ii, 1, 135. (1594) See under WIND.

13 Lemnian fire. (τῷ Ἀημνίῳ πυρ.)

SOPHOCLES, Philoctetes, l. 800. (c. 410 B. C.)

There was volcanic fire on Lemnos, an island in the Aegean.

1
Go near this fire, and you'll soon be too hot.
(Accede ad ignem hunc, iam calesces plus satis.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 85. (161 B. C.)
The nearer the fire, the hotter. (Tanto plus calidum, quanto vicinias igni.)

EGBERT OF LIÈGE, Fecunda Ratis. (c. 1050)
Wher-so [thou] comest in any cost,
Who is next fyr, he brenneth most.
(Ce seivent tuit sage e musart:
Qui plus est près dou feu plus art.)

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose, l. 2357. (c. 1240) Chaucer (?), tr., l. 2477. (c. 1365)

And ay the neer he was, the more he brende.
For ay the neer the fyr, the hotter is.
CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, Bk. i, l. 448. (c. 1380)

Fire giueh lyght to things farre off, and burneth that which is next to it.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 351. (1580)

The love of kings is like . . . fire, which warmeth afar off, and burneth near hand.

JOHN LYL, Campaspe. Act iv, sc. 4. (1584)
He warms too near that burns.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 816. (1640)
The fire which lighteth us at a distance will burn us when near.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 504. (1855)

2
The piece is slower in going off, or, as sportsmen term it, is apt to hang fire.

THOMPSON, in Philosophical Transactions of the Royal Society, lxxi, 278. (1781)

Leyden's Indian journey . . . seems to hang fire.

WALTER SCOTT, Letter to G. Ellis, 7 Dec., 1801.
MISS FIRE, see under MISS.

3
One is not cold among his brothers and sisters.
What if there is less fire on the hearth, if there is more in the heart.

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 8 Feb., 1852.

4
Bright-flaming, heat-full fire, The source of motion.

JOSHUA SYLVESTER, tr., Devine Weekes and Workes. Week i, day 2. (1591)

Heat, Considered as a Mode of Motion.

JOHN TYNDALL. Title of treatise. (1863)

5
I played with fire, did counsell spurn, . . .
But never thought that fire would burn,
Or that a soul could ake.

HENRY VAUGHAN, The Garland. (1655)

To play with fire. To trifle with danger, 'especially at the risk of moral disaster' (O.E.D.); especially applied to men and women in their sentimental attachments.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Play. (1941)

6
In the stubble a great fire rages in vain. (In stipulis magnus sine viribus ignis, | incassum furit.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iii, l. 99. (29 B. C.)

Soon kindled and soon burnt.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, iii, 2, 61. (1597)
Which like a bavin [bundle of brushwood] giveth goodly blaze, . . . but is soone out.

HENRY CROSSE, Virtues Common-wealth, p. 133. (1603)

The fire of reeds is of rapid extinction.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 637. (1817)

7
Nothing kindleth soner than fire.

THOMAS WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique, p. 133. (1560) Cited as "a common saying."

8
I'd go through fire. (διὰ πύρρος τοῖνον.)

XENOPHON, Symposium. Ch. iv, sec. 16. (c. 375 B. C.)

9
Is not this a brand plucked out of the fire?
(Numquid non iste torris est erutus de igne?)
Old Testament: Zechariah, iii, 2. (c. 500 B. C.)
Usually quoted, "a brand plucked from the burning."

COALS OF FIRE, see under COAL.

II—Fire and Smoke

10
And thair may no man fire sa covir,
[Bot] low or reek sall it discovir.

JOHN BARBOUR, The Bruce. Bk. iv, l. 123. (c. 1375)
You can not make a fire so low, but it will get out.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 963. (1640)
Youk'n hide de fier, but w'at you gwine do wid de smoke?

J. C. HARRIS, Plantation Proverbs. (1860)

11
The flame, according to the Proverb, is next to the smoake.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 146. (1574) Young, tr.

12
Wher no fyr maad is may no smoke aryse.
THOMAS HOCLEVE, Minor Poems (E.E.T.S.), p. 134. (c. 1440) LYDGATE, Works, i, 134.

Where no fyr is no smoke.

UNKNOWN, Douce MS., 52, 1f., 20. (c. 1450)

Where there is no smoke there is no fire.

KAUFMAN AND RYSKIND, Of Thee I Sing. Act ii, sc. 5. (1931)

Where there is no fire there is no smoke.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 440. (1938) A Japanese proverb.

13
Where the least smoake is, there be the greatest fire.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 287. (1580)

14
Flame is close to smoke. (Flamma fumo est proxima.)

PLAUTUS, Curculio, l. 53. (c. 200 B. C.) Phaedromus protests he hasn't done anything to the girl except kiss her a few times. "Always keep this in mind," Palinurus admonishes him, "flame is close to smoke. The man that wants the kernel cracks the shell, and the man that wants the girl, clears the way with kisses." Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, v, 20.

1 Never, where there has been fire for any length of time, is smoke lacking. (Numquam ubi diu fuit ignis defecit vapor.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 434. (c. 43 B.C.) CHAUCER, The Tale of Melibeus, sec. 23, attributes the saying to Seneca.

There is no fyre without some smoke.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

There is no smoake but where there is some fire.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 30. (1576)

There is no smoke, without some fyre. (Non ci è mai fumo, senza fuogo.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 31. (1578)

"Non ci è fumo senza fuoco" is the modern Italian form. The French say, "Nul feu sans fumée"; the Germans, "Kein Rauch ohne Feuer." The Spanish form is, "Cerca le anda el humo, tras la llama."

There can no great smoake arise, but ther must be some fire, no great reporte without great suspicion.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 153. (1579)

No fire of wood but hath smoake.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 328.

There's no smoake without some fire.

FRANCIS QUARLES, The Virgin Widow. Act i. (1649)

There is no fire but there will be some smoak.

THOMAS HUBBERT, A Pill to Purge Formality, p. 133. (1650)

There is seldom anie smoak, but where there is some fire.

THOMAS GATAKER, A Discours Apologetical, p. 11. (1654)

There must be some fire under all this smoke.

THOMAS SHADWELL, A True Widow. Act v, sc. 1. (1679)

No smoke without some fire, i.e., There is no strong rumour without some ground for it.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 143. (1670)

Frequently quoted, recently by AGATHA CHRISTIE, The Moving Finger, p. 13. (1942)

Mrs. McHugh said that there was never fire without smoke.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, He Knew He Was Right. Ch. 15. (1869) Repeated in ch. 52.

Where there is smoke there must be fire.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 23. (1850)

Where so much smoke is, there must be some fire.

J. R. PLANCHÉ, Extravaganzas, v, 102. (1871)

III—Fire and Water

2 She carried water in one hand, the wily one, and fire in the other. (τῇ μὲν ὀδῳ ἐφόρει δολοφρονέουσα χεὶρ, τῇ δ' ἐτέρῃ πῦρ.)

ARCHILOCHUS, Apothegm. (c. 650 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Demetrius. Sec. 35.

On swiche folke, platly, is no trist [trust], That fire and water holden in her fist.

LYDGATE, Troy Book. Bk. iv, l. 4988. (c. 1412)

Two faces in a hand covertly I bear, Water in the one hand and fire in the other.

JOHN SKELTON, Magnysfycence. Works (1843), i, 248. (1526)

Fire in the tone hand, and water in the tother, The makebate beareth between brother and brother.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546) Whatsoever I speake to men, the same also I speake to women, I meane not . . . to carye fire in the one hand, and water in the other.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 107. (1579) Hee beareth fire in the one hand, and water in the other.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 46. (1616)

BUNYAN, The Strait Gate. (1676)

You carry fire in one Hand, and Water in the other.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5886. (1732)

3 Water is a very good seruant, but it is a cruell maister.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, Bulwarke of Defence Against All Sicknesse, fo. 12. (1562)

We say of water, it is a good seruant, though an ill master.

THOMAS ADAMS, Works, p. 178. (1630)

Philosophy being in divinity as fire and water in a family—a good servant, but bad master.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: Cornwall, i, 314. (1662)

Fire and Water, they cannot be so good Servants, but that they are worse Masters.

ROBERT BOYLE, Occasional Reflections upon Several Subjects. Pt. iv, ch. 8. (1665)

Fire and water are good servants, but bad masters.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 98. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1539. (1732) The Germans have the same proverb, "Feuer und Wasser sind gute Diener, aber schlimme Herren."

It is with our passions, as it is with Fire and Water, they are good Servants, but Bad Masters.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Fables. No. 38. (1692)

Fire and water are good servants, but they are very bad masters.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

Fire, as the saying is, is a good servant but a bad master.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 53. (1841)

4 The proverbial fire and water. (Aqua et igni, ut aiunt.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. vi, sec. 22. (44 B.C.) Proverbial, that is, as representing the prime necessities of life. Hence to deny fire and water to anyone (Aqua et igni interdicere), was to banish, to exclude from civil society. Conversely, a bride, on the day of the marriage, received from the bridegroom fire and water, as a symbol of their union.

You mate fire and water. (Ignibus lunge aquas.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 568. (c. A.D. 60)

Mixing fire and water. (πῦρ ὁδᾶνι μίγνῃναι.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia. (c. A.D. 95) The attribution is by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, iii, 94, who gives the Latin, "Aquam igni miscere."

5 Sooner will fire mingle with water. (Prius undis flamma miscebitur.)

CICERO, Philippics, xiii, 21, 49. (44 B.C.)

Water shall produce fire and fire water. (Unda dabit flammas, et dabit ignis aquas.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, No. viii, l. 4. (c. A. D. 9)

1 If th' old saw did not borrow,
Fier is loue, and water sorrow.

ROBERT GREENE, Works, viii, 51. (1590)

2 Water a farre of doth not quench fier that is nigh.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 145. (1574) Young, tr.

Water afar off quencheth not fire.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 400. (1640)

Water afar off quencheth not a neighbouring fire.
(Acqua lontana non spegne fuoco vicino.)

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 1. (1666)

TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 80.

(1853) CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 175.

(1856) The French say, "L'eau éloignée n'est pas le feu qui nous menace" (Distant water won't put out the fire that threatens us).

3 Foule water as soon as fayre, will quench hot fyre.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1546)

Foule water will quench hot fire as soone as faire.

JOHN LYLY, Mother Bombie. Act iii, sc. 4. (1594)

Foule water quencheth fire well enough.

UNKNOWN, Jack Drum. Act i. (1616)

Foul water will quench fire.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 154. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1607. (1732)

4 He that casteth water on the fire in a smith's forge, maketh it to flame fiercer.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 61. (1579)

CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 158. (1639)

Al fire is not quenched by water.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 319.

5 A new-kindled flame dies down when sprinkled with a little water. (Flamma recens parva sparsa resedit aqua.)

OVID, Heroides. No. xvii, l. 190. (c. 10 B. C.)

The Germans have turned this line into a rhymed proverb, "Die neu entstand'ne Feuerglut | Dämpft eine schlechte Wasserfluth" (A small flow of water quenches the new-kindled flame).

There is no fire so hotte but it is quenched with water, neither affection so strong but it is weakened with reason.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 95. (1579)

Fire is to be quenched in ye spark, weedes are to be rooted in ye bud, follyes in ye blossome.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 360.

6 He shall passe thorowe fyre and water ere he get it.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoise, p. 653. (1530)

They wolde gladly folowe theym through fire and water.

GENTIAN HERVET, tr., Xenophon's Household, fo. 61b. (1534)

A woman would run through fire and water for such a kind heart.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, iii, 4, 107. (1601)

I will be thrown into Etna, as I have been into Thames, ere I will leave her thus.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, iii, 5, 131. (1601)

That common saying may expound it; I will go thro' fire and water to serve you.

The British Apollo, i, No. 113. (1708)

I'll go through fire and water.

STEVENSON AND HENLEY, Admiral Guinea. Act ii, sc. 6. (1884)

IV—Out of the Frying-Pan

7 Asking for a pig in place of a bad dog. (ἀντι κάκω κύνος ὅν ἀπαίτεῖς.)

ALCAEUS, Fragments. Frag. 154. (c. 595 B. C.)

Quoted by ZENOBIUS, Adagia, i, 31. A saying used of those who ask for a bad thing to replace a bad thing. See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, i, 413.

Fleeing men, I encountered a lion. (ἀνθρώπους φεύγουσα, λέοντι περιέπεσον.)

AESOP, Fables: The Deer and the Lion. (c. 570 B. C.)

A deer, fleeing from some hunters, enters a cave, but discovers too late that it is the den of a lion. The Russians say, "He ran from the wolf and fell in with the bear," while the Spanish form is, "He fled from the bull and fell into the river."

You bid me look in misfortune for the cross. (Quaerere in malo iubeas crucem.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 544. (161 B. C.)

In escaping from one fault, we are led into some other sin. (In vitium ducit culpa fuga.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 31. (c. 20 B. C.)

Like [a fish] from the sea into the frying-pan.

Babylonian Talmud: Kiddushin, fo. 44a. (c. 450)

Out of the water thou leapest into the fyre.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Egloges, p. 10. (1514)

He is gotten out of the myre and is fallen into the riuier.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 54. (1633)

HALLIWELL, Popular Rhymes, p. 183, cites this in jingle form, "He got out of the muxe [dunghill], And fell into the pucksy [quagmire]."

I escaped the thunder and fell into the lightning.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1651)

Out of the peat-pot into the mire.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 268. (1721)

A peat-pot is the hole out of which peat has been dug. The Irish say, "Out of the briars into the thorns."

The Thrush, avoiding the Trap, fell into the Bird-lime.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4792. (1732)

To escape the Rocks, and perish in the Sands.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5160.

Out of the wolf's den into the tiger's mouth.

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 790. (1875)

Do not seek to escape from a flood by clinging to the tail of a tiger.

S. G. CHAMPTION, Racial Proverbs, p. 380. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>1</sup> They lepe lyke a flounder out of the fryenge panne into the fyre.

SIR THOMAS MORE, A Dyaloge Concerning Heresy. (1528) Works (1557), p. 179/2.

From suspicion to knowlage of yll, forsoothe, Could make ye dooe, but as the flounder doothe, Leape out of the fryng pan into the fyre, And chaunge from yll peyn to wurs is worth small hyre.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

But I was sav'd as is the flounder, when He leap-eth from the dish into the fire.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, tr., Orlando Furioso. Bk. xiii, st. 28. (1591)

You shal finde your selfe to be fallen (as the common proverbe is) Out of the frying pan into the fire, or out of a fever into the hot evil.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 45. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Though, many times, as Aesop's fishes, they leap from the frying pan into the fire itself.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy, i, iv, 1, 286. (1621)

Some of the ditch shy are, yet can

Lie tumbling in the mire:

Some, though they shun the frying-pan,

Do leap into the fire.

BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. ii. (1684)

It is a sad choice, Frying or Fire.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2874. (1732)

Out of the pan into the fire! there's no putting him off.

DAVID GARRICK, The Irish Widow. Act ii. (1772)

He falls from the frying-pan into the fire. (È caduto dalla padella sulla bragie.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 201. (1856) The Italian version of the old proverb. Another Italian form is, "Ceder della padella nelle bragie" (To fall from the frying pan into the burning coals). A proverb in many languages. The Spanish form is, "Saltar de la sarten, y dar en las brasas"; the French, "Sauter de la poêle et se jeter dans les braises." Sometimes the Spanish is given as "Huir del fuego, y dar en las brasas," and the French as "Tomber de la poêle dans la braise."

The man in debt tries a money-lender; and, if he succeeds, he is only out of the frying-pan into the fire.

SAMUEL SMILES, Thrift, p. 275. (1875)

From the frying-pan into the fire!

STEELE MACKAYE, Paul Kavar. Act ii. (1888)

We shall fall out of the frying-pan of the football club into the fire of the Sunday School.

BERNARD SHAW, The Revolutionist's Handbook. Sec. 1. (1903)

I fell from the fire into the frying-pan.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Cupid à la Carte. (1907)

A lady who is anxious to flop out of the Court-pan into the Prince-fire.

O. HENRY, Strictly Business. (1910)

He jumped from the frying-pan into the fire and back again.

J. G. COZZENS, Ask Me Tomorrow, p. 214. (1940)

You'd be out of the frying-pan into the fire.

RICHARD SHATTUCK, The Snark Was a Boojum, p. 211. (1941) See also LODWICK, Running to Paradise, p. 236. (1943) McDERMID, Ghost Wanted, p. 200. (1943) etc., etc.

<sup>2</sup> As the saying goes, the people trying to escape the smoke of submission to the free, would have plunged into the fire of tyranny. (τὸ λεγόμενον ὁ ὄμιλος φεύγων ἀν καπνὸν δουλείας ἐλευθέρων εἰς πῦρ δοῦλων δεσποτίας.)

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. viii, sec. 569B. (c. 375 B.C.) HERODOTUS, iii, 81, has: "To save ourselves from the insolence of a despot by changing it for the insolence of the mob, that were unbearable indeed."

Trying to escape the smoke, I fell into the fire. (καπνὸν γε φεύγων εἰς τὸ πῦρ περιέπεσον.)

LUCIAN, Necymantia. (c. A.D. 170) Quoting a Greek proverb, cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, v, 6, with the Latin, "Fumum fugiens, in ignem incidi." LUCIAN, Menippus, sec. 4, gives another form, φάσι, τὸ πῦρ ἐκ τοῦ καπνοῦ βιαζόμενος (As they say, I was struggling into the fire out of the smoke). For other variants see Palatine Anthology, ix, 17, 5, and THEODRET, Therap., iii, 773.

To jump from the smoke into the flame. (Tendere de fumo ad flammam.)

AMMIANUS MARCELLINUS, History. Bk. xiv, ch. 11; bk. xxviii, ch. 1. (c. A.D. 390)

There is an olde sayd saw, that a man entyndyng to auoide the smoke, falleth into the fyre.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, p. 210. (1548)

Thus must I from the smoke into the smother.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, i, 2, 299. (1600)

Shunning the smoake he fell into the fire.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 250. (1639)

<sup>3</sup> He hides himself in the water for fear of the rain. (Se cachoyt en l'eau pour le pluye.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 11. (1534)

There are many variants of this form of the proverb. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs, No. 474, has, "He fled from the rain and sat down under the water-spout"; HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 9, gives the French form as, "Il se jette à l'eau, peur de la pluie" (He throws himself into the river for fear of the rain). FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 1963, has, "He leaps into a deep River, to avoid a shallow Brook." The Germans say, "Aus dem Regen in die Traufe" (Out of the rain into the drip). The Arabian form, as given above, illustrates the difference between Eastern, especially Levantine, proverbs, and those of Western Europe, the former being often in the shape of an anecdote, and the latter of a maxim.

<sup>1</sup> Thus have I shunn'd the fire for fear of burning,

And drench'd me in the sea, where I am drown'd.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, ii, 1, 78. (1594)

<sup>2</sup> From the lime-kiln into the coals. (De calcaria in carbonarium.)

TERTULLIAN, De Carne Christi. Ch. 6. (c. A. D. 150) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iv, 96. (1508)

Take care that in avoiding the ashes you don't fall into the coals. (μη τέφραν φεύγων εἰς τὴν ἀνθρακίαν πέσῃς.)

DIAGENIANUS, Adagia, vi, 68. (c. A. D. 125) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, iii, 72, with the Latin, "Ne cinerem vitans, in prunas incidas."

See also SCYLLA AND CHARYBDIS.

FIRST

<sup>3</sup> I would rather be first here than second at Rome. (ἐγὼ μὲν ἐβουλόμην παρὰ τούτοις εἶναι μᾶλλον πρῶτος ἢ παρὰ Ῥωμαίοις δεύτερος.)

JULIUS CAESAR, referring to a mean little town which he passed while crossing the Alps on his way to Spain, 61 B. C. See PLUTARCH, Lives: Caesar. Ch. 11, sec. 2.

Caesar, when he went first into Gaul, made no scruple to profess That he had rather be first in a village than second at Rome.

FRANCIS BACON, Of the Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii, sec. 23. (1605)

I should be like Caesar . . . and choose rather to be the first man of the village, than second at Rome.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Essays (1904), vi, 78. (1668) Just contrary to the other, I should like much better to be second or third at Périgueux than first at Paris. (Tout à l'opposite de l'autre, m'aimerois à l'aventure mieux deuxième ou troisième à Périgueux que premier à Paris.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 7. (1595)

He that plots to be the only Figure among Ciphers, is the Decay of a whole Age.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Ambition. (1597) Some men prefer to be first in things of minor importance than to be second in greater exploits. (Quiéren algunos más ser primeros en segunda categoria, que ser segundos en la primera.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 63. (1647)

<sup>4</sup> Who-so that first to mille comth, first grint.

CHAUCEUR, Canterbury Tales: The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 389. (c. 1388)

Who comyth fyrst to the mylle, fyrst must grind.

GAIRDNER, ed., The Paston Letters, iii, 133. (c. 1475) The French have the same proverb, "Qui premier arrive au moulin, premier doit moudre." They also say, "Les premiers vont devant" (The first go in front). There is a proverbial rule of Roman Law, "Qui prior est tempore potior est jure" (Who is first in point of time is stronger in right).

First come, first served.

HENRY BRINKLOW, Complaynt of Roderick Mors. Ch. 17. (c. 1545) Brinklow seems to have been the first to use the proverb in this exact form. In frequent use thereafter.

I was first come, and therefore ought to be first serv'd.

SHADWELL, Irish Hospitality. Act ii. (1720)

Who comes first shall be prince. (Hsien tao wei chün.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2709. (1875)

<sup>5</sup> Of soups and loves the first are the best. (Las sopas y los amores, los primeros son los mejores.)

CORREAS, Spanish Vocabulary, p. 192. (c. 1627)

Of Soop and Love, the first is the best.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3699. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> He that comes first to the hill may sit where he will.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 42. (c. 1595)

He that comes first to the ha' may sit whar he will.

JAMES RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 239. (1678)

He that is first on the midding [dunghill], may sit where he will.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 142. (1721)

<sup>7</sup> I am the first, I also am the last. (Ego primus, et ego novissimus.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xlviii, 12. (c. 725 B. C.) That which was first has turned and now is last (τὰ γὰρ δὴ πρῶτ' ἀνέστραπται πάλιν.)

EURIPIDES, Hippolytus, l. 982. (c. 428 B. C.)

Many that are first shall be last; and the last shall be first. (πολλοὶ δὲ ἔσονται πρῶτοι ἔσχατοι καὶ ἔσχατοι πρῶτοι.)

New Testament: Matthew, xix, 30; Mark, x, 31; Luke, xiii, 30. (c. A. D. 70) The Vulgate is, "Multi autem erunt primi novissimi, et novissimi primi."

Undoubtedly you have not been the first, and you will not be, as I suppose, the last. (Vous n'avez pas été sans doute la première, | Et vous ne serez pas, que je crois, la dernière.)

MOLIÈRE, Dépit Amoureux. Act iii, sc. 9, l. 57 (1654)

The first pig, but the last whelp of the litter, is the best. (Primo porco, ultimo cane.)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 53. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4530. (1732)

I am not the first, and shall not be the last.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 54. (1670)

From the Latin proverb, "Primus non sum nec imus." See also BEGINNING AND ENDING <sup>8</sup> Eclipse first, the rest nowhere.

DENNIS O'KELLY, owner of Eclipse, at Epsom. 3 May, 1769. See Annals of Sporting. Vol. ii. p. 271.

Eclipse first and the rest nowhere. Applied to a person easily first or by far the best. Originally a race-course phrase, applied to horses, Eclipse being the most famous C. 18 race-horse.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clickés. (1941)

<sup>1</sup> Who, like the hindmost chariot wheels, art curst

Still to be near, but ne'er to reach the first.
(Cum rota posterior curras et in axe secundo.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. v, l. 72. (c. A. D. 58)

Never mind;

If some of us were not so far behind,

The rest of us were not so far ahead.

E. A. ROBINSON, Inferential. (c. 1910)

<sup>2</sup> To the first discoverer belongs all the fame.
(ἀπὸρ δ' εὐρόντος ἔργον.)

PINDAR, Olympian Odes. No. xiii, l. 17. (464 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> First in the fight, and ev'ry graceful deed.

POPE, tr., Iliad. Bk. iv, l. 295. (1715)

FIRST IN WAR, see under WASHINGTON.

<sup>4</sup> There is a sort of men who wish to be first in all things. (Est genus hominum qui esse primos se omnium rerum volunt.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 248. (161 B. C.)

It is the true cry of nature; wherever we are we wish to be first.

J. B. H. LACORDAIRE, Conférences. (1840)

Every child of the Saxon race is educated to wish to be first. It is our system.

EMERSON, Representative Men. Ch. 1. (1850)

<sup>5</sup> First, last, and in the middle. (ἐν πρώτοις καὶ ὑπόμας καὶ μέσος.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xvii, l. 3. (c. 270 B. C.)

FISH

<sup>6</sup> Rotten fish need strong seasoning. (σαπρὸς τὰριχος τὴν ὀρίανον φιλεῖ.)

ATHENAEUS, Deipnosophistai. Bk. iii, sec. 116E.
(c. A. D. 200)

<sup>7</sup> Fish begins to stink at the head. (ἰχθὺς ἐκ τῆς κεφαλῆς ὀρεῖν ἀρχεται.)

H. G. BOHN, Dictionary of Quotations, p. 538.

(1860) "The corruption of a state," Bohn explains, "is first discernible in the higher classes."

<sup>8</sup> The greatest sort of fish keep the bottom.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Crossing of Proverbs. (1616)

The best fish swim near the bottom.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 212. (1639)

In the deepest water is the best fishing.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1670)

The best Fish swim deep.

The best is at the Bottom.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 4412-13. (1732)

<sup>9</sup> They kan nought construe . . . whi this fish, and naught that, comth to were [weir].

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, l. 35. (c. 1374)

The sea hath fish for every man.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 27. (1576)

Cited by CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 334. (1605)

Be content: the Sea hath Fish enough.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 850. (1732)

There is as good fish in the sea as ever came out of it.

WALTER SCOTT, Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 35. (1822)
There were still as good fish in the sea as had ever yet been caught out of it.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, Three Clerks. Ch. 16. (1857)

There's fish in the sea, no doubt of it,

As good as ever came out of it.

W. S. GILBERT, Patience. Act i. (1881) See also OGDEN NASH, Look for the Silver Lining.

(1933) CHEYNEY, A Trap for Bellamy, p. 67.

(1941)

There are as bad fish in the sea as ever came out of it.

HOUSMAN, ed., Juvenalis Saturae: Preface.

(1905)

<sup>10</sup> The most fishy thing I ever saw.

DISRAELI, Coningsby. Bk. i, ch. 9. (1844)

Doosed fishy about the eyes.

J. C. WILCOCKS, Sea Fishermen, p. 117. (1865)

Fish is good, but fishy is always bad.

J. G. HOLLAND, Everyday Topics. (1876)

[His] French is very fishy.

JAMES PAYN, Confidential Agent, iii, 151. (1880)

It is not difficult to detect the odor of the humble cod.

ELLIOT PAUL, Mayhem in B-Flat, p. 301. (1940)

I find your frankness a bit like that smell out there—it's on the fishy side.

E. X. FERRARS, Neck in a Noose, p. 133. (1943)

THAT STORY IS TOO FISHY, see under STORY.

<sup>11</sup> Had I fish, was never good with garlic.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 38. (c. 1595)

Had I fish is good without butter.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 271. (1605)

Had I fish is good without mustard.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 114. (1639)

Had I fish was never good to eat with mustard.

An answer to them that say, had I such a thing, I would do so, or so.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 145. (1721)

<sup>12</sup> Oh, you who've been a-fishing will indorse me when I say

That it always is the biggest fish you catch that gets away!

EUGENE FIELD, Our Biggest Fish. (1892)

Lord, suffer me to catch a fish so large that even I in talking of it afterward shall have no need to lie.

UNKNOWN, Motto for Fishermen. See Game Breeder, July, 1930, p. 221, where it is suggested as a motto for President Hoover's fishing lodge.

The fish that escaped is the big one.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 206. (1937)

A fish is larger for being lost.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 440.

(1938) A Japanese proverb. Champion cites a similar Chinese one (p. 282), "The whip that's lost always had a gold handle."

FISH STORY, see under STORY.

<sup>1</sup> "Here's a pretty kettle of fish," cries Mrs. Tow-wouse.

FIELDING, Joseph Andrews. Bk. i, ch. 12. (1742)
If matters come to this pass, I shall have made a fine kettle of fish on't.

HENRY BROOKE, Fool of Quality, ii, 249. (1767)
There'll be a pretty kettle of fish.

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 19. (1850)
Here's another pretty kettle of fish for thee.

THOMAS HARDY, Under the Greenwood Tree. Pt. ii, ch. 8. (1872)

There's a pretty kettle of fish.

BERNARD SHAW, Captain Brassbound's Conversion. Act ii. (1899) Man and Superman. Act iii. (1903)

That would be a pretty kettle of gefüllte fish!

CLARE BOOTHE, Margin for Error. Act ii. (1939)
We're in a pretty kettle of fish this time.

HILEA BAILEY, Smiling Corpse, p. 209 (1941)
A pretty kettle of fish. A disagreeable state of things, a predicament, a muddle, "a lovely mess."

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Pretty. (1941) Starred as particularly offensive.

<sup>2</sup> The greate fishe eateth the little.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578) See GREATNESS: GREAT AND SMALL.

<sup>3</sup> Little fish are sweet.

ROBERT FORBY, The Vocabulary of East Anglia, p. 434. (1830) Meaning, Forby explains, that small gifts are always acceptable.

<sup>4</sup> After Fish, Milk do not wish.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742.

<sup>5</sup> Fish make no Broth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1546. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> In a great River great fish are found, but take heed lest you be drowned.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 173. (1640) The Germans say, "Grosse Fische fängt in grossen Wassern" (Great fish are caught in great waters).

From a little river don't hope for a large fish. (De petite rivière De grand poisson n'espère.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français. Vol. i, p. 193. (1859)

<sup>7</sup> Good fish, but all the craft is in the catching.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 12. (1659)
It's good fish, if it were but caught.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 71. (1678)
"Spoken of any considerable good that one hath not, but talks much of, sues for, or endeavours after."

<sup>8</sup> Salmon and sermons have their seasons in Lent.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Fr.-Eng., p. 21. (1659)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 23. (1670)

A sammon and a sermon come much of a season.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 246. (1666)

'Tis not for every one to catch a Salmon.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5095. (1732)

<sup>9</sup> Canst thou draw out leviathan with an hook?
(An extrahere poteris leviathan hamo?)

Old Testament: Job, xli, 1. (c. 400 B. C.)

<sup>10</sup> They that seeke to poyson the Fish, will neuer eate the spawme.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England: To the Gentlemen Readers, p. 224. (1580)

<sup>11</sup> It is a salt fish yat water cannot make fresh.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 325. (1580)

Like Fish that live in Salt-water, and yet are fresh.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3228. (1732)

<sup>12</sup> Those unfortunate loose fish who are game for every sportsman.

B. H. MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas. Bk. vii, ch. 7. (1809)
The loose fish who frequent races.

EGAN, Anecdotes of the Turf, p. 72. (1827)

<sup>13</sup> It is not fish, it is man; you are devouring man, Callidorus. (Non est pisces; homo est; hominem, Calliodore, comes.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, epig. 31, l. 6. (A. D. 93) An allusion to the extravagant price paid for fish by Roman epicures.

It's no fish ye're buying; it's men's lives.

WALTER SCOTT, The Antiquary. Ch. 11. (1816)

Wha'll buy my caller herrin? . . .

Wives and mithers, maist despairin',

Ca' them lives o' men.

CAROLINA NAIRNE, Caller Herrin'. (c. 1820)

<sup>14</sup> And he saith unto them, Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men. (ἀλείψις ἀνθρώπων.)

New Testament: Matthew, iv, 19. (c. A. D. 65)
The Vulgate is, "Piscatores hominum."

<sup>15</sup> Fish ought to swim. (Pisces natare oportet)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 39. (c. A. D. 60) A reason for drinking wine with fish. The French have a proverb, "Poisson sans boisson est poison" (Fish without drink is poison). They also say, "Chair fait chair, et poisson, poison" (Meat makes flesh and fish makes poison). See LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, ii, 205.

We say, fish must ever swimme twice.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Poisson. (1611)
Once in water and once in wine.

Fish . . . never doth digest well . . . except it swimme twice after it comes forth the water: that is, first in butter, so to be eaten: then in wine or beere after it is eaten.

UNKNOWN, Westward for Smelts, p. 6. (1620)

With carouses I did trimme me,

That my fish might swim within me.

BRAITHWAIT, Barnabees Journal, iii. (1638)

Fish must swim thrice. Once in the water, a second time in the sauce, and a third time in wine in the stomach.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 38. (1670) Ray goes on to quote a French proverb, "Poisson, goret et cochon vit en l'eau, et meurt en vin" (Fish and young swine Live in water and die in wine).

They say fish should swim thrice. First it should swim in the sea, then it should swim in butter; and at last, sirrah, it should swim in good claret.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)
Fish should swim three times; water, sauce, and wine.

JOHN O'KEEFE, The Little Hunchback. Act ii, sc. 2. (1787)

1
Fish is worthless unless fresh. (Pisces nequam, nisi recens.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 162. (1778)

2
We have here something else to do. (Nous aurons bien icy autre chose à faire.)

RARELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v. ch. 12. (1552)

Motteux renders the phrase, "We have other fish to fry"; i. e. other business to attend to.

I have other eggs to fry.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 12. (1659)

I feare he hath other fish to fry.

JOHN EVELYN, Memoirs, iii, 132. (1660)

I have other fish to fry.

SWIFT, Journal to Stella, 3 Nov., 1710.

Your uncle . . . has other fish to fry.

CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Shirley. Ch. 20. (1849)

I have other fish to fry than snigs [eels] without butter.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 78. (1917)

Or, "I have other fish to fry and their tails to butter." The French say, "Avoir d'autres chiens à fouetter" (To have other dogs to whip).

3
When there are no fish in the river, shrimps are dear. ('Ho li wu yü, hsia yeh kuei.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 195. (1875) Sometimes applied to children, meaning that daughters are precious when there are no sons.

Who cannot catch fish must catch shrimps. (Pu tē yü yeh tē hsia.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 204.

4
I will henceforth eat no fish of fortune's buttering.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, v, 2, 9. (1600)

I do profess . . . to fear judgement . . . and to eat no fish.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, i, 4, 17. (1605)

I trust I am none of the wicked that eat fish a Fryday.

JOHN MARSTON, The Dutch Courtesan. (1605)

I did not like him when he called for fish.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Woman Hater, iv, 3. (1607) According to Warburton, "He's an honest man and eats no fish" was a popular proverbial phrase in Queen Elizabeth's time, signifying that a man was not a Roman Catholic.

5
For a fish without a fin, there's a fowl without a feather.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, iii, 1, 82. (1593)

6
Here comes the trout that must be caught with tickling.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, ii, 5, 24. (1599)

Groping for trouts in a peculiar river.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, i, 2, 92. (1604)

7
It was thought she was a woman and was turned into a cold fish.

SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale, iv, 4, 284. (1610)

A strange fish!

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, ii, 2, 28. (1611)

You are an odd fish.

LANGDON MITCHELL, The New York Idea. Act i. (1906)

He's a cold fish.

WENTWORTH, In the Balance, p. 165. (1941)

8
Does ever any man cry stinking fish to be sold?

JEREMY TAYLOR, Ductor Dubitantium, p. 805. (1660)

Did you ever hear a fishwife cry stinking mackarel?

JOHN WILSON, The Cheats. Act iv, sc. 2. (1664)

No man cries stinking fish.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 59. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3596. (1732)

Yet people will in answer say, "'Tis the world's way—

We never hear a man cry 'Stinking fish!'

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Works (1801), v, 302. (1801) Wolcot repeats the line in Tristia, "But no one, to be sure, cries 'Stinking fish!'"

I replied that I was a young gentleman of large fortune (this was not true; but what is the use of crying bad fish?).

THACKERAY, Barry Lyndon. Ch. 3. (1844)

9
He that hath Breems in his pond, is able to bid his friend welcome.

ISAAC WALTON, The Compleat Angler, i, 10, 165. (1653) Quoted as a French proverb.

GUT NO FISH TILL YOU GET THEM, see under CHICKEN.

TO TEACH A FISH TO SWIM, see under LABOR LOST.

II—Fish and Bait

10
I fish't for a herring and catcht a sprat.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 2. (1639)

To fish for a herring and catch a sprat.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 180. (1670)

To fish with a Herring, and catch a Sprat.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5165. (1732)

It is but "giving a Sprat to catch a Herring," as a body might say.

WILLIAM HONE, Every-Day Book. Vol. ii, col. 1410. (1827)

That's his plan, a sprat to catch a mackerel.

MARRYAT, Newton Forster. Ch. 44. (1832)

It was their custom . . . never to throw away sprats, but as bait for whales.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 8. (1850)

Set a herring to catch a whale.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 331. (1869)
[It] is only sent out as a sprat to catch whales.

R. L. STEVENSON, Letters, v, 87. (1893)
It's a sprat thrown out to catch a herring.

J. J. CONNINGTON, The Twenty-One Clues, p. 158. (1941)

1 Venture a small fish to catch a great one.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 41. (1639)
You must lose a fly to catch a trout.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 828. (1640)
One must risk a little fish to catch a great one.
(Il faut hazarder un petit poisson pour prendre un grand.)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 152. (1670)
The French also say, "Il faut perdre un veron pour pêcher un saumon" (You must lose a minnow to catch a salmon), and "Il donne un pois pour avoir une fève" (He gives a pea to get a bean). The Italians say, "Butta una fardola per pigliar un luccio," and the Germans, "Die Wurst nach der Speckseite werfen" (To throw the sausage to catch a flitch of bacon).

Venture a small Fish to catch a Gudgeon.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5348. (1732)
You must have a couple of grains of rice in order to catch fowls. (Ch'a chi yeh yao liang k'o mi.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 239. (1875) Meaning that one must have some capital in order to do business. There is another to the same effect: "No one can sew without a needle" (Fei chên pu yin hsien). Still a third says, "A dry finger cannot lick up salt" (Kan chih chia t'ien pu ch'u yen lai).

2 This bait has taken no fish. (Hic funis nihil attraxit.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ix, 45. (1508)
The tender nibbler would not touch the bait.
SHAKESPEARE (?), The Passionate Pilgrim, l. 53. (1599)

'Tis rare to find a Fish that will not some Time or other bite.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5114.
The fishes won't bite. . . . The amount of it is, he has had "fisherman's luck."

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 22 Dec., 1859.

3 The fish long playing with the baited hook, At last is caught: thus many a Nymph is took.

PHINEAS FLETCHER, Piscatorie Eclogs, v. (1633)
Nibbling at the bait, you may justly expect the hook to take you.

SECKER, Nonesuch Professor, ii, 241. (1660)
That Fish will soon be caught that nibbles at every Bait.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4342. (1732)
In short the sap was rising—to the bait.

JONATHAN STAGG, Stars Spell Death, p. 86. (1939)

4 He that would catch Fish must venture his Bait.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1757. See also under GAMBLING.

5 It is a silly Fish that is caught twice with the same Bait.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2879. (1732)

6 I was taken by a morsel, says the fish.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 629. (1640)

7 You catch your next fish with a piece of the last.

O. W. HOLMES, Verses for After-Dinner. (1844)

8 All fyshe are not caught with flies.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 350. (1580)

9 Fish is not caught without bait. (χωρίς πλάνον ὄψάριον δὲν πιάνεται.)

ALEXANDER NEGRIS, Greek Proverbs, p. 143. (c. A. D. 100)

It is ill catching of fish when the hook is bare.

ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart), ii, 63. (1583)
In vain one fishes if the hook isn't baited. (In vano si pesca, se l' amo non ha esca.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 204. (1856)

10 Under intinsing baytes intanglyng hookes.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 148. (1576)
Is it not the pleasaunt bayte that causeth the fleetest fish to byte?

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 63. (1579)
Beauty—a deceitful bayte with a deadly hooke.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 77.

The Bait hides the Hook.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4403. (1732)
Bait. A preparation that renders the hook more palatable. The best kind is beauty.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

11 Your hook is so longe that the bayt can not hide it.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 198. (1576)
Shal I greedely devoure the baite, whiche I knowe hath a hooke hidden in it to hurt mee?

PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 269.
Although I see the bayte you laye to catch mee, yet I am content to swallowe the hooke.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 87. (1579)

12 But fish not, with this melancholy bait, For this fool gudgeon, this opinion.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, i, 1, 101. (1597)

13 Bait the hook well; this fish will bite.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, ii, 3, 114. (1598)

The fish adores the bait.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 609. (1640)

The fish follow the bait.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1670)

14 To swallow the hook. (Vorare hamum.)

PLAUTUS, Curculio. (c. 200 B. C.) As quoted by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, v, 74. The Greek proverb is ἀγκιστρὸν μετὰ τῆς καπίδος καταπίνειν (He swallowed the hook along with the bait); the French, "Avaler l'amorce et l'hameçon."

III—Fish and Net

<sup>1</sup> You may perceive the fish is caught, by their hanging aside their nets.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, ii, 112. (1629)

"Why, Father, is the net removed?" "Son, it hath caught the fish."

ROBERT BROWNING, The Pope and the Net.

(1890) The story of the fisherman, who became Deacon, Priest, Bishop, Cardinal, always with his old net prominently displayed, but who threw it away the day he was made Pope.

<sup>2</sup> The Fish by struggling in the Net, hampers its self the more.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4534. (1732)

The Fish may be caught in a Net, that will not come to a Hook.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4535.

<sup>3</sup> He is a fole afore the nett that fysshes.

JOHN LYDGATE, Order of Fools, l. 131. (1460)

It is yll fyshyng before the net.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

He that fishes afore the net, lang or he fish get.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 44. (c. 1595)

It is not good fishing before the net.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 665. (1640)

<sup>4</sup> Little fishes slip through nets, but great fishes are taken.

FRANCIS MERES, Palladis Tamia, fo. 246. (1598)

<sup>5</sup> It were as soone done to weue a newe web of clothe as to soue up euery hole in a net.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Works (1557), p. 224.

(1528) A West Cornwall saying is, "It is like a fishing-net—the more you mend it, the more holes there are in it."

<sup>6</sup> A man whose ploughshares are his nets. (τὰ δὲ δίκρυα κελύ ἀπορρα.)

THEOCRITUS, Berenice. Frag. 284a. (c. 270 B. C.)

There is another Greek proverb, εὐδοντι κύπρος αἰπεῖ (While the fisher sleeps the net takes fish).

<sup>7</sup> Fish will not enter the net, but rather turn back.

JOHN WODROEPHE, Spared Houres, p. 508. (1623)

<sup>8</sup> Alle ys fysshe that commyth to the nett.

UNKNOWN, Ballads from MSS, i, 95. (c. 1520)

All was fysshe that came to net.

LORD BERNERS, tr., Froissart, i, 416. (1523)

All is fishe that comth to net.

JOHN SKELTON, Colin Cloute, l. 935. (a. 1529)

HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

All's fish they get that commeth to net.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie: February Abstract. (1573)

Taking up every commodity, refusing nothing: all is fish that cometh to the net.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, A Dialogue Against the Fever Pestilence, p. 90. (1578)

I perceive all sorts of fish come to your net.

THOMAS DEKKER, I The Honest Whore. Act v, sc. 2. (1604)

What was his father's could not escape his fingers, all was fish that came to his net.

JOHN BUNYAN, Mr. Badman. Ch. 1. (1680)

Black, brown, fair, or tawny, 'tis all fish that comes in your net.

RICHARD CUMBERLAND, The Brothers. Act i.

(1769) The Spanish form is, "Salga pez, ó salga rana, á la capacha" (Come fish, come frog, all to the basket).

IV—Fish and Flesh

<sup>9</sup> Old fish and yong flesh wolde I have ful fayn.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale, l. 174. (c. 1388)

Olde fish and yong flesh (quoth he) doth men best feede.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

Young flesh and old fish are daintiest.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Chair. (1611)

Young flesh and old fish are best. (Jeune chair et vieil poisson.)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 39. (1670)

There goes a saying, and 'twas shrewdly said, Old fish at table, but young flesh in bed.

POPE, January and May, l. 101. (1717)

<sup>10</sup> I will not make fleshe of one, and fish of the other.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 182. (1639)

To show partiality, or make an invidious distinction.

I'll not make fish of one and flesh of another.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1670)

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 220. (1721)

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

The father proves such a partial fool . . . as to make fish of one [child] and flesh of another.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 137. (1709)

The complaints alleged against the maids are . . . very applicable to our gentlemen's gentlemen; I . . . would not make fish of one and flesh of the other.

DANIEL DEFOE, Everybody's Business. (1725)

<sup>11</sup> The fish marreth the water, and flesh doth dresse it. (El pesce guasta l'aqua, & la carne la concia.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578)

Fish spoils water, but flesh mends it.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 41. (1678)

<sup>12</sup> Wone that is nether flesshe nor fissue.

UNKNOWN, Rede Me and Be Nott Wrotke, i, iii b. (1528)

She is nother fyshe, nor fleshe, nor good red hearyng.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

Judge whether thou be fish or flesh.

JOHN LVLV, Euphues (Arber), p. 98. (1579)

She's neither fish nor flesh; a man knows not where to have her.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, iii, 3, 144. (1597)

One neither fish nor flesh, a man of no credit.

PHILEMON HOLLAND, tr., Livy. Bk. xxiv, ch. 45. (1600)

Damn'd Neuters, in their middle way of steering,
Are neither Fish nor Flesh nor good Red-Herring.

JOHN DRYDEN, The Duke of Guise: Epilogue. (1682)

They . . . marry their wives, before they know whether they are fish, flesh, or good red herring.

THOMAS BROWN, Works (1760), iii, 240. (c. 1695)

It was neither fish, nor flesh, nor salt herring of mine.

WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Ch. 12. (1824)

A brat that's neither fish, flesh, nor fowl, nor good red herring.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 53. (1850)
Behold an hermaphrodite, neither "fish, flesh, fowl, nor good red herring," . . . ridiculed as "our friend from Middle Sex."

DEAN HOLE, Then and Now. Ch. 6. (1902)

Look at me—am I fish, flesh, or fowl?

O. HENRY, Blind Man's Holiday. (1910)

V—Fish Out of Water

1

How sholde a fish with-oute water dure?

CHAUCEUR (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iv, l. 765. (c. 1380)

Right as fishes in flod whenne hem faileth water,
Deyen for drouth whenne thei drye ligen.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text c, passus vi, l. 149. (1390)

2

I was like a fish out of water.

DEFOE, Roxana. (1724) Works (1903), xiii, 37.

As a fish out of water. (Ju yü shih shui.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1066. (1875) The Chinese meaning is, without sustenance.

I feel like a fish out of water here.

B. DUFFY, The Old Lady, p. 17. (1916) WALLACE, The India-Rubber Men. Ch. 26. (1920)

3

He is as much out of his Element, as an Eel in a Sand-bag.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1912. (1732)

4

Fishe is caste awaie that is cast in drie pooles.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

CHAPMAN, Eastward Hoe, v, 1. (1605)

Fishes are cast away that are cast into dry ponds.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 90. (1670)

5

[Monks] out of ther cloistre as fishis with-oute water.

JOHN WYCLIF, Gospel Sermons. (c. 1380) See under MONK.

The Arabians out of their deserts are as Fishes out of the Water.

SAMUEL PURCHAS, Pilgrimage, vi, xii, 636. (1613)

A tradesman out of his shop . . . is as a fish out of the water.

WILLIAM GURNALL, The Christian in Compleat Armour, p. 117. (1655)

A navy drops into a church by accident, and there he has to sit like a fish out of water.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Yeast. Ch. 11. (1851)

A diplomatist in a land where he cannot read the newspapers . . . is rather like a fish out of water.

F. G. BURNABY, A Ride to Khiva. Ch. 2. (1876)

The lawyer . . . was as a fish out of water there.

S. BARING-GOULD, Court Royal. Ch. 6. (1886)

A bit of a fish out of water in this neighbourhood.

CONNINGTON, Twenty-One Clues, p. 65. (1941)

FISHING

6

Fishing for eels. (τὰς ἐγγέλεις θηράμενοι.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Knights, l. 864. (424 B. C.)

Fishing in troubled waters. The proverbial Latin phrase is, "Piscatur in aqua turbida."

A fisher in troubled water gains triple or double. (Pescher en eau trouble Est gain triple ou double.)

GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences. (c. 1550) The French also say, "On pêche bien en eau troublé." The Spanish form is, "A río revuelto, ganancia de pescadores" (In the troubled stream, gain for the fishermen).

[They] always desyre your unquietnesse, whereby they may the better fishe in the water when it is troubled.

RICHARD GRAFTON, Chronicles, i, 283. (1568)

Best fishing in troubled waters.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, tr., Orlando Furioso. St. 41. (1591)

It is good fishing in muddy waters.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 64. (c. 1595) Cited by RAY, English Proverbs, p. 90 (1670), with the comment, "Il n'y a pesche qu'en eau troublé; In troubled waters; that is, in a time of public calamity, when all things are in confusion." A proverb in many languages.

Jeroboam had secretly troubled these waters, that he might fish more gainfully.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Contemplations, xviii, 1. (1612)

There is no fishing so good as in troubled waters.

HALL, Recollection of Treatises, p. 695. (1614)

They fare full and fatt by Fishing in troubled waters.

BISHOP RICHARD MONTAGU, Appello Caesarem, v, 43. (1625)

She loves to fish in troubled waters.

ALEXANDER LEIGHTON, An Appeal to the Parliament, p. 19. (1628)

It is good fishing in troubled waters.

JOHN TATHAM, The Rump. Act iii. (1660)

Trouts are tickled best in muddy water.

SAMUEL BUTLER, On a Hypocritical Nonconformist. St. 4. (1670)

Who rich and great by past Rebellions grew,
And long to fish the troubled Waves anew.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel, ii, 314. (1682)

We had better get away from this house; all fishing in troubled waters here.

MURPHY, The Apprentice. Act i, sc. 2. (1756)

7

To fish with a golden hook. (Aureo piscari hamo.)

AUGUSTUS CAESAR, Apothegm. (c. 50 B. C.)

SUETONIUS, The Deified Augustus, xxv, 4. says that Caesar "likened those who grasped at slight gains with possible heavy loss to those who fished with a golden hook, the loss of which, if a fish carried it off, could not possibly be made good by the catch," and the phrase became proverbial for taking risks not justified by the possible gain. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, ii, 60.

You fishe with golden hookes.

THOMAS CHURCHYARD, Churchyardes Charge, p. 28. (1580)

To fish for honour with a silver hooke.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Honour of Valour, p. 5. (1605)

To exchange one's freedome for a little gain . . .

I count it fishing with a golden hooke.

RICHARD FLECKNOE, Miscellanies, p. 126. (1652)

To angle with a silver hook. (Pescar col hamo d'argento.)

JOHN RAY, Proverbs, p. 226. (1678) "The Italians," Ray comments, "by this phrase mean, to buy fish in the market. Money is the best bait to take all sorts of persons with." It will be noted that Ray differs from Suetonius as to the meaning of the phrase.

1 This . . . taught them the way to fish for themselves.

NATHANIEL BACON, Government of England. Vol. i, ch. 3, p. 8. (1647) To rely on one's own efforts, or seek one's own profit exclusively.

Men fish most for themselves.

RICHARD BAXTER, Christian Concord, p. 117. (1653)

He leaves you to fish for yourself.

MARY E. HERBERT, Cradle Lands, ii, 48. (1867)

2 Fish, if you want fish. (Angel, willst du Fische haben.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 312. (1856) A German proverb.

3 Than have ye fisshed faire.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus. Bk. ii, l. 328. (c. 1380)

4 He hath well fysht and caught a frog.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

As the common saying is, "Well have I fished and caught a frog"; brought little to pass with much ado.

HUGH LATIMER, Works (P.S.), ii, 419. (c. 1550)

FOX, Book of Martyrs (1684), iii, 413.

We angle in the reeds And catch a frog.

THOMAS CHURCHYARD, Charitie, p. 9. (1595)

Your ladyship hath "fished fair, and caught a frog," as the saying is.

CHAPMAN AND MARSTON, Eastward Hoe. Act iv, sc. 1. (1605)

He is a fond fisher that angles for a frog.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Crossing of Proverbs. (1616)

Angle all day and catch a Gudgeon at night.

BRETON, Court and Country. See GUDGEON.

The man that wedds for greedy wealth, he goes a fishing faire,

But often times he gets a frog, or very little share.

PEPYSIAN GARLAND (Rollins), p. 318. (1629)

You fish fair and catch a frog.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 245. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5903. (1732)

5 To fisshen hir, he leyde out hook and lyne.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, Bk. v, l. 777. (c. 1380)

6 Some say there is no fishing to the seas.

THOMAS CHURCHYARD, Chippes, p. 41. (1575)

CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 334. (1605)

Now may I say, as many often sing,

"No fishing to the sea, no service to the King."

ROBERT GREENE, Historie of James IV. Act i, sc. 2. (1598)

Oh, sir, nothing venture nothing have, there is no fishing to the sea, the gain of one voyage will bear the loss of many.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Wonders Worth the Hearing. (1602) Works (Grosart), ii, 9.

There is no fishing to the sea, and no country so strong by sea as that which findeth most employment in this kind.

SAMUEL PURCHAS, Purchas His Pilgrim, xix, 251. (1625)

There is no fishing to the Sea, nor service to the King's.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 18. (1659)

PHILLIPS, Regale Necessarium, p. 432. (1671)

No fishing to fishing in the sea. Il fait beau pescher en eau large. It's good fishing in large waters.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 90. (1670)

7 Yet he fishes who catcheth one. (Tousjours pesche qui en prend un.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, La Langue Françoise: Pescher. (1611)

Still he fisheth that catches one

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 294. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 91. (1670)

Still fisheth he that catcheth one.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1093. (1640)

8 They both did come but to fish for some things which might make a show.

JOHN FOXE, Book of Martyrs, iii, 239. (c. 1575)

To use artifice to obtain a thing.

I could not fish from him . . . what was the matter.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 7 Sept., 1663.

An admirable knack of fishing out the secrets of his customers.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Guardian. No. 71. (1713)

The Half Guinea, for which he had been fishing.

FIELDING, Amelia. Bk. viii, ch. 10. (1752)

He courts me a good deal, and fishes. I fish in return; and I think that neither of us meets with much luck.

THOMAS HUTCHINSON, Diary, 10 Oct., 1774. The O.E.D. characterizes this use of the phrase as "Harvard College Slang," and quotes B. H. HALL, College Words and Customs: Fish: "At Harvard College, . . . students speak of fishing for parts, appointments, ranks, marks, &c." It is, of course, universally used. "To fish for a compliment" is, perhaps, the commonest form.

- 1 It is no sure rule to fish with a cross-bow.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 295. (1640)
Fish are not to be caught with a Bird-call.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1545. (1732)
- 2 Simon Peter saith unto them, I go a fishing.
They say unto him, We also go with thee.
(λέγει αὐτοῖς Σίμων Πέτρος Ὅτι πάγω ἀλιεῦν λέγουσιν αὐτῷ.)
New Testament: John, xxi, 3. (c. A. D. 100) The Vulgate is, "Vado piscari. Dicunt ei: Venimus et nos tecum." The English version was used as a motto on the title page of the first edition of Walton's Compleat Angler.
I therefore strive to follow those Whom he to follow him hath chose.
ISAAC WALTON, The Compleat Angler: The Angler's Song. Ch. 3. (1653)
What shall we do—or go fishing?
H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches,
p. 504. (1940)
- 3 A fishing-rod is a stick with a hook at one end and a fool at the other.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Remark. (c. 1776) As quoted by HAZLITT, Table Talk: On Egotism. Also ascribed to Dean Swift. A 17th century French poet named Guyet is alleged to have written the following jingle on the same subject: "La ligne avec sa canne est un long instrument, | Dont le plus mince bout tient
un petit reptile, | Et donc l'autre est tenu par un grand imbecile" (The line with its rod is a long instrument whose lesser end holds a small reptile, while the other is held by a great fool).
The good old joke . . . that angling is "A stick and a string with a fly at one end and a fool at the other."
LEIGH HUNT, Angling, in The Indicator, 17
Nov., 1819.
- 4 The fishermen could perhaps be bought for less than the fish. (Potuit fortasse minoris | piscator quam piscis emi.)
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iv, l. 26. (c. A. D. 120)
An Angler eats more than he gets.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 579. (1732)
The fisherman with a rod eats more than he earns.
Applied to persons who, to avoid work, seek employments of little advantage.
J. COLLINS, Spanish Proverbs, p. 259. (1823)
- 5 The end of fishing is catching.
JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 396. (1580)
The End of Fishing is not angling but catching.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4497. (1732)
The business of fishing is to catch fish if possible.
The Spectator, 5 Nov., 1910, p. 723.
Sportsmen who love sport for the sport's sake:
"Catching fish is not the whole of fishing."
Times Literary Suppl. 28 Nov., 1913, p. 570.
Looks like we're catchin' 'em faster'n we can string 'em.
MARY LASSWELL, Suds in Your Eye, p. 165. (1942)
- 6 He who holds the hook is aware in what waters many fish are swimming. (Qui sustinet hamos, | novit, quae multo pisce natentur aquae.)
OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 47. (c. 1 B. C.)
Ever let your hook be hanging; where you least believe it, there will be a fish in the stream. (Sem-per tibi pendeat hamus: | quo minime credas gurgite, piscis erit.)
OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 425.
When there is no fish in one spot, cast your hook in another. (Tz'u ch'u wu yü pieh hsia kou.)
WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No.
232. (1875)
- 7 Strike, or give me the bill.
WILLIAM WALKER, *Paroemiologia Anglo-
Latina*, p. 37. (1672)
Hold or cut cod-piece point.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 73. (1678)
Do like the cricket, which jumps or keeps still.
(Far come il grillo, che o salta o sta fermo.)
CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes,
p. 194. (1856) An Italian proverb.
I want you gentlemen on the other side of the House to "fish or cut bait."
JOSEPH G. CANNON, Debate, House of Representatives, 5 Aug., 1876. See Congressional Record, p. 5226/1. To decide one way or the other.
This company should be made either to fish or cut bait.
JOHN A. ANDERSON, Speech, House of Representatives, 3 Feb., 1882. See Congressional Record: Appendix, p. 6/1.
- 8 We may say of angling, as Dr. Boteler said of strawberries: "Doubtless God could have made a better berry, but doubtless God never did"; and so (if I might be judge), God never did make a more calm, quiet, innocent recreation than angling.
ISAAC WALTON, The Compleat Angler. Pt. i,
ch. 5. (1653)
- 9 I shall stay him no longer than to wish . . .
that the east wind may never blow when thou goest a fishing.
ISAAC WALTON, The Compleat Angler: To the Reader. (1653)
When the wind is south,
It blows your bait into a fish's mouth.
WALTON, The Compleat Angler. Pt. i, ch. 5.
When the wind is in the east,
Then the fishes bite the least;
When the wind is in the west,
Then the fishes bite the best;
When the wind is in the north,
Then the fishes do come forth;
When the wind is in the south,
It blows the bait in the fish's mouth.
J. O. HALLIWELL, Popular Rhymes. (1849)
- 10 I am a Brother of the Angle.
ISAAC WALTON, Compleat Angler. Ch. 1. (1653)
Angling too, that solitary vice.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, st. 106. (1820)

FIST

<sup>1</sup> You hadn't ought to tax anything . . . seeing you made such a fist of it.

ASA GREENE, Life and Adventures of Dr. Dodimus Duckworth, ii, 8. (1833) Made a bad showing.

Mrs. Burton is really making a very pretty fist at a salon.

W. D. HOWELLS, The Undiscovered Country, p. 87. (1880) A good showing.

You never was meant for a liar, old man; you make a mighty poor fist at it.

JOSEPH C. LINCOLN, Shavings, p. 311. (1918)

<sup>2</sup> This is valid. (ἀβρα κνία.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: The Greek Questions. Sec. 301C. (c. A. D. 95) Quoted as a proverb, of which Plutarch explores the source. He cites a story concerning Deinon of Tarentum, who, when a certain proposal of his was rejected by his fellow-citizens, held up his clenched right hand, and cried, "But this is stronger." THEOPHRASTUS, frag. 133. Wimmer, is his authority.

His fist be ever ready for a knock-down blow,

W. S. GILBERT, H.M.S. Pinafore. Act i. (1878)

If any man dares impugn our right, smite him with your mailed fist! (Fahre darein mit gepanzerter Faust.)

WILHELM II OF GERMANY, to his brother, Prince Henry of Prussia, at Kiel, on the eve of the latter's departure in 1897, in command of the German expedition against China. See Wilhelm II, vol. ii, p. 80, p. 121 in American edition.

<sup>3</sup> Show yourself a handy man with your fists. (Pugno bene uteris.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. vi, ch. iii, sec. 90. Quoting a saying of Gaius Cassius, to a soldier whom he saw hurrying into battle without his sword.

GET YOUR FIST IN FUST, see under JUSTICE.

<sup>4</sup> By a sudden and adroit movement I placed my left eye agin the Secesher's fist. . . . The ground flew up and hit me in the hed.

ARTEMUS WARD, Thrilling Scenes in Dixie. (1865)

FITNESS

<sup>5</sup> They [the Hobbists] have no way to show how Compacts themselves come to be obligatory, but by inconsistently owning an eternal Fitness in the thing itself.

SAMUEL CLARKE, A Discourse Concerning the Being and Attributes of God, p. 52. (1705)

[God's] commands are to be measured by the antecedent Fitness of Things.

MATTHEW TINDAL, Christianity Old as Creation, p. 357. (1730)

The rule of right and the eternal fitness of things.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. iv, ch. 4. (1749)

My writing a postscript after so long a letter is not according to the fitness of things. Note.

Be it known, these words thus applied are fashionable.

LADY LUXBOROUGH, Letter to William Shennstone, 29 Nov., 1749.

The (eternal) fitness of things: a phrase extensively used in the 18th c. with reference to the ethical theory of Clarke, in which the quality of moral rightness is defined as consisting in a 'fitness' to the relations inherent in the nature of things. . . . Clarke's own usual phrase is 'the eternal reason of things'; but the words fit and fitness are constantly used by him as synonyms of 'reasonable' and 'reason.'

Oxford English Dictionary: Fitness. Vol. iv, p. 265/2.

<sup>6</sup> All is fine that is fit.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 523. (1732)

Nothing is fine but what is fit.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3667.

<sup>7</sup> He that is fitte for the chappell, is meete for the field.

G. GATES, Defence of the Military Profession, p. 37. (1579) Quoted as a proverb, "no less wise than it is old."

<sup>8</sup> Not fit for starving dogs to eat. (κυσὶν πεινῶσιν οὐχὶ βρώσιμα.)

LIDDELL AND SCOTT, Greek-English Lexicon. A Greek proverb. (c. 200 B. C.)

I am not fit to give crumbs to a cat. (Yo no estoy para dar migas a un gato.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 66. (1615)

Others aver that he to Handel, Is hardly fit to hold a candle.

JOHN BYROM, On the Feud Between Handel and Bononcini. (1725)

There is not one among my gentlewomen Were fit to wear your slipper for a glove.

TENNYSON, Geraint and Enid, l. 621. (1886)

<sup>9</sup> All things have alike for their crown the fitting season. (ὁ δὲ καιρὸς ὁμοῖός | παντὸς ἔχει κορυφάν.)

PINDAR, Pythian Odes. No. ix, l. 78. (474 B. C.)

What is fitting is honorable, and what is honorable is fitting. (Quod decet honestum est, et quod honestum est, decet.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 27, sec. 94. (c. 45 B. C.)

<sup>10</sup> Fit for a coffin. (Capuli decus.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 892. (c. 200 B. C.) The French say, "Être entre quatre planches" (To be between four planks).

<sup>11</sup> He that is suffered to do more than is fitting, will do more than is lawful.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1670)

II—Fitness: Proverbial Comparisons

<sup>12</sup> Fit as a fan for a forehorse.

CHAPMAN, Two Wise Men. Act iv, sc. 3. (1619)

<sup>13</sup> Fit as a pancake for Shrove Tuesday.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 27. (1846)

1
I will find one as fit for you as a pudding for a friar's mouth.

ULPIAN FULWELL, Like Will to Like, p.13. (1568)
Your answere then in sooth, Fyts me as iumpe as a pudding a friars mouth.

GEORGE WHETSTONE, Promos and Cassandra, sig. D3. (1578)

Looke where Prisius' boy comes, as fit as a pudding for a dogges mouth.

JOHN LYLY, Mother Bombie. Act ii, sc. 1. (1592)
As fit as a pudding.

DEKKER, Shoemaker's Holiday, iv, 5. (1600)

As fit as . . . the pudding to his skin.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, ii, 2, 29. (1602)

Thou com'st as fit for the purpose as a Pudding for a Fryers mouth.

JOHN DAY, The Blind-Beggar of Bednai-Green. Act iv. (1659)

As fit as a pudding for a friar's mouth.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 204. (1670)

As fit as a Fritter for a Friar's Mouth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 678. (1732)

2
This is excellent, i' faith; as fit as a fiddle

WILLIAM HAUGHTON, English-Men for My Money. Act iv, sc. 1. (1616) BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Women Pleased. Act iv, sc. 3. (1625) RAY, Proverbs, p. 185. (1678) MISS BRADDON, Mount Royal. Pt. iii, ch. 11. (1882)

Looking fit and taut as a fiddle.

R. L. STEVENSON, Treasure Island. Ch.30. (1883)

I arrived feeling as fit as a fiddle.

O'REILLY, Fifty Years on the Trail. Ch.2. (1889)

He hasn't been really sober for years and he's as fit as a fiddle.

E. V. LUCAS, Genevra's Money, p. 86. (1922)

3
An host that shalbe as mete for him as a rope for a thefe.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, Acolastus, sig. M2. (1540)

A paterne, as meete as a rope for a theefe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

As fit for him as a thief for a halter.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Women Pleased. Act iii, sc. 4. (c. 1613)

4
As fit as a shoulder of mutton for a sick horse.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 204. (1670)

FITS

5
He doth not thinges by fittes as Creatures doe but he continueth alwayes in one will.

ARTHUR GOLDING, tr., The Sermons of John Calvin on Deuteronomie, vii, 39. (1583)

A lazy people, that worke but by fits.

GEORGE SANDYS, A Relation of a Journey Begun 1610, p. 72. (1615)

Thou hast these things only by fits and starts.

ROBERT SANDERSON, Sermons, i, 145. (1620)

That froward people worshipped Him by fits and girds.

THOMAS FULLER, A Pisgah-Sight of Palestine. Bk. i, ch. 2. (1650)

By Fits and Girds, as an Ague takes a Goose.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 160. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1039. (1732)

The non-payment . . . is only by fits and spasms.

BURKE, Thoughts on French Affairs. (1791)

6
The corporal cried out to him to give him fits if he caught him.

G. W. KENDALL, The Texas Santa Fé Expedition. (1844)

He mustn't come foolin' round my gal, or I'll give him fits.

B. A. BAKER, A Glance at New York, p.22. (1848)

We gin 'em pertickler fits.

G. H. DERBY, Phoenixiana, iii, 48. (1856)

Suppose you feel like giving the ducks particular fits to-day?

JOSEPH W. LONG, American Wild-Fowl Shooting, p. 131. (1874)

FLAG

7
My red flag is hung out.

THOMAS DEKKER, Satiro-matrix. (1602) Works (1873), i, 233.

The red flag is a signal of defiance and battle.

EPHRAIM CHAMBERS, Cyclopaedia: Flag. (1728)

Red flags, symbols of revolution and bloodshed.

HULME, Heraldry, p. 271. (1891)

8
There it is—Old Glory!

CAPTAIN WILLIAM DRIVER, Remark, as an American flag was run up to the masthead of a new ship of which he had just been appointed master at Salem, Mass., Dec., 1831. The most probable of the legends accounting for the origin of the name.

I carried my flag, "Old Glory," as we used to call it, to the Capitol.

W. DRIVER, in Salem, Mass., Register, 10 March, 1862.

She's up there—Old Glory—where lightnings are sped, . . . The flag of our country forever!

FRANK L. STANTON, Our Flag Forever. (1898)

9
A ship . . . garnished with white flags of peace.

PHILEMON HOLLAND, tr., Livy, xxx, 765. (1600)

The Enemy hung out a White Flag.

London Gazette. No. 3101/2. (1695)

The white rose meant surrender.

JOHN HAY, The White Flag. (1890)

10
The flag protects the cargo. (Le pavillon couvre la marchandise.)

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 122. (1904)

11
A banner need not do much thinking.

WEIGAND VON MILTENBURG, (Living Age, March, 1931, p. 15.) Referring to Adolf Hitler. An expression once applied to General Boulanger.

12
The black flag was set up, which signified there was no mercy to be looked for.

THOMAS NASHE, Christ's Tears, p. 7. (1593)

I would hoist the black flag.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Poor Jack. Ch. 44. (1840)

Every normal man must be tempted, at times, to spit on his hands, hoist the black flag, and begin slitting throats.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. i, p. 90. (1919)

<sup>1</sup> He attached to the ship the stars and stripes.

ELKANAH WATSON, Men and Times of the Revolution, p. 203. (1782)

And the star-spangled banner in triumph shall wave

O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.

FRANCIS SCOTT KEY, The Star-Spangled Banner. Originally entitled Defence of Fort M'-Henry, and first printed in The Baltimore Patriot, 20 Sept., 1814. Designated the American national anthem by Congress in 1931. The flag itself was described in a resolution of the Continental Congress adopted in 1777: "Resolved, That the flag of the [thirteen] United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white, that the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field." See Journals of the Continental Congress, viii, 464.

The flag, called proudly by Americans The Star Spangled Banner.

WILLIAM DUNLAP, A History of the American Theatre, p. 58. (1832)

Let us keep our eyes and our hearts steadily fixed upon the old flag of our fathers. . . . It has a star for every State. Let us resolve that there shall be a State for every star!

ROBERT C. WINTHROP, Speech, at mass meeting on Boston Common, 22 Aug., 1862.

FLAT

<sup>2</sup> The best written defence must have fallen flat.
T. B. MACAULAY, Warren Hastings, p. 654. (1841)

All my news falls flat.

CHARLES DICKENS, Letters, ii, 125. (1860)

<sup>3</sup> The boy hath sold him a bargain, . . . that's flat.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iii, 1, 102. (1595) "That's flat" has two meanings, the one used here, expressing a truth that cannot be denied; the other, as used in the quotations that follow, a defiant expression of a determination to do or not to do something.

Nay, I will; that's flat.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, i, 3, 218. (1597) And again in the same play (iv, 2, 43), "I'll not march through Coventry with them, that's flat."

I'll give Madam warning, that's flat.

ADDISON, The Drummer. Act i, sc. 1. (1716)

"I won't then, that's flat," exclaimed Rachel.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Lewis Arundel, i, 15. (1852)

II—Flat: Proverbial Comparisons

<sup>4</sup> "As flat," or, "as dead as ditchwater," said of anything tasteless and insipid.

ANNE E. BAKER, Northamptonshire Glossary: Ditchwater. (1854) See also under DULLNESS.

FLATTERY

<sup>5</sup> Flat as a flounder.

JOHN FLETCHER, Women Pleased. Act ii, sc. 4. (c. 1625) HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 5. (1659) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 355. (1678)

[They] lay as flat as flounders.

EDWARD HOWARD, The Six Days Adventure. Act i. (1671)

Flat as a flounder when I lie.

JOHN GAY, New Similes. (1720)

Down you go as flat as a fluke [flounder].

JOHN O'KEEFFE, Highland Reel. Act iii, sc. 1. (1788)

<sup>6</sup> As flat as a flaun [a custard].

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 355. (1678)

<sup>7</sup> His nose as flat as a cake.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Adagia of Erasmus, p. 250. (1542) BARET, An Alvarie, F649. (1573)

Sit at table pancakewise, flat. flat.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington, ii, 3, 133. (1599)

Beat all your feathers as flat as pancakes.

MIDDLETON, The Roaring Girl, ii, 1. (1611)

Beaten as flat as a cake.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina, p. 209. (1631)

He has crushed his nose as flat as a pancake.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy, iii, 27. (1758)

The Gatinois . . . is as flat as a pancake.

R. TWINING, Twining Family Papers, p. 139. (1786) See also MARRYAT, The King's Own Ch. 17. (1830) O. HENRY, The Marquis and Miss Sally. (1903)

As flat as a flannel-cake.

O. HENRY, The Ransom of Red Chief. (1910)

<sup>8</sup> He could see the country as flat as a plate.

PATRICIA WENTWORTH, Pursuit of a Parcel, p. 47. (1942)

FLATTERY

See also Compliment, Praise

<sup>9</sup> To look after another's crib. (θεραπεύειν τὴν φάτνην τινός.)

ÆLIAN, Historical Miscellanies. (c. A.D. 200) As quoted by SUIDAS, Lexicon. To court by flattery.

<sup>10</sup> It is better to fall in with crows than with flatterers, for in the one case you are devoured when dead, in the other case while alive. (κρείττον ἐὶς κόρακας ἢ ἐὶς κόλακας ἐμπεσεῖν οἱ μὲν γὰρ νεκρούς, οἱ δὲ ζῶντας ἐσθίουσιν.)

ANTISTHENES, Apolhegm. (c. 375 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Antisthenes, vi, 4.

<sup>11</sup> There is no remedy for the flatterer's bite. (ἀλλ' οὐκ ἔνεστι συκοφάντου δῆγματος.)

ARISTOPHANES, Plutus, i. 885. (388 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, vi, 29, with the Latin, "Non inest remedium adversus sycophantæ morsum."

There is no remedy against the tongue of the sycophant. "Halagar con la cola, y morder con la boca," while they wag with the tail they bite with the mouth.

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. ii, p. 33. (1814)

1

You're asking me for figs. (οὐ δὲ σῶκά μ' αἰτεῖς.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Wasps, l. 303. (422 B.C.)

Asking, in other words, for flattery.

You want to stifle me under the roses. (Vous voulez m'étouffer sous les roses.)

VOLTAIRE, c. 1778, when at the height of his popularity. The French also say, "Passer le pommade à quelqu'un" (to pass the pomade, to throw bouquets).

2

They were puffed up with the fulsome flatteries of their Philosophers and Sophists.

RICHARD BENTLEY, Boyle Lectures, vi, 189. (1692)

3

A man that flattereth his neighbour spreadeth a net for his feet.

BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i. (1678)

4

Flatereres been the develes chapelleyens, that singen ever Placebo.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Persones Tale, Sec. 40. (c. 1389) "Placebo" (I shall be pleasing or acceptable) is the name commonly given to Vespers in the Office for the Dead, from the first word of the first antiphon, "Placebo Domino in regione vivorum"; "to sing placebo" is to play the flatterer.

Singeth Placebo, and I shal, if I can.

CHAUCER, The Somnours Tale, l. 367.

Flatereres been the develes enchauntours.

CHAUCER, The Persones Tale. Sec. 40.

5

Salomon seith, that "flaterie is wors then detraccioun."

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Persones Tale. Sec. 40. (c. 1389)

Salomon seith, that "the wordes of a flaterere is a snare to cacche with innocents."

CHAUCER, The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 23.

Tullius seith: "amonges alle the pestilences that been in frendshipec, the gretteste is flaterye."

CHAUCER, The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 23.

6

Flattery, the handmaid of the vices. (Assentatio vitiorum adiutrix.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. 24, sec. 89. (44 B.C.)

Flattery, formerly a vice, is now a fashion. (Vitium fuit, nunc mos est, assentatio.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 723. (c. 43 B.C.)

Flatterie at this day is more in fashion than picked beards, or great ruffles.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 79. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Flattery is the bellows blows up sin.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles, i, 2, 39. (1608)

Flattery's the nurse of crimes.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. i, No. 1. (1727)

7

We must beware of giving ear to flatterers. (Cavendum est ne assentatoribus patefaciamus auris.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, sec. 26. (c. 45 B.C.)

Remember to beware of soft and flattering sayings. (Sermones blandos blaesosque cavere memento.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. iii, No. 6. (c. 175 B.C.)

Tullius seith: "encylyne nat thyne eres to flatereres."

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 23. (c. 1387)

Flattery is like Kolone water, tew be smelt of, not swallowed.

JOSH BILLINGS (H.W. SHAW), Philosophy. (1858)

8

Flattering as a spaniel.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 285. (1639)

RAY, Proverbs, p. 204. (1670)

9

Of those that are wild, a slanderer's; of those that are tame, a flatterer's. (τῶν μὲν ἀγρίων συκοφάντης, τῶν δὲ ἡμέρων κόλαξ.)

DIOGENES, when asked what creature's bite is the worst. (c. 350 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Bk. vi, sec. 51.

A certaine Philosopher, being asked what beast in the world he thought to be worst, answered, of wilde ones, the evill tounge, of tame ones, the flatterer.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 76. (1574) Pettie, tr.

There is no kinde of beast so noysome as the flatterer.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His Euphoebus (Arber), p. 149. (1579) Quoted as a saying of Pythagoras.

Of all wild beasts preserve me from a tyrant; And of all tame, a flatterer.

BEN JONSON, Sejanus. Act i, sc. 2. (1603)

10

Sweet reader! you know what a Toady is?—that agreeable animal which you meet every day in civilized society.

DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Bk. ii, ch. 15. (1826)

11

Flatery and folowyng of mens myndes getteth frendes, where speakynge of trouthe gendreth hatred. (Obsequium amicos, veritas odium parit.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. ix, No. 53. (1508) TAVERNER, tr., fo. 47. (1550) Taverner adds: "Our Englyshe prouerbe agreeth with the same. He that wyll in courte dwell, must nedes currye fauel."

Flatterie is the way to make friends, and winne preferment.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 78.

As trueth getteth hatred, so flatterie winneth love.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 80.

Flattery sits in the Parlour, when plain-Dealing is kick'd out of Doors.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1552. (1732)

Flattery's the turnpike road to Fortune's door.

JOHN WOLCOT, Lyric Odes. Ode ix. (1782)

12

Approve not of him who commends all you say.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735.

If a man flatters me, I'll flatter him again, though he were my best friend.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1738.

A flatterer never seems absurd:

The flatter'd always takes his word.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1740.

1 He that rewards Flattery, begs it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2269. (1732)

2 I know the value of a kindly chorus.

W. S. GILBERT, Pinafore. Act i. (1878)

3 Flattery is more dangerous than hatred, for it covers the stains which hatred wipes out. (Más fiera es la lisonja que el odio, pues remedia éste eficazmente las tachas que aquélla disimula.)

GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 84. (1647)

4 As the Woolfe is like to the Dogge, so is the flatterer to the friend.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 83. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Flatterers look like friends, as wolves, like dogs.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Byron's Conspiracy. Act iii, sc. 1. (1608)

A flatterer is said to be a beast that biteth smiling. As a wolf resembles a dog, so doth a flatterer a friend.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, Instructions to His Son. Sec. 3. (1616) The Italians say, "Chi dinanzi mi pingé, di dietro mi tinge" (Who paints me before, blackens me behind), or "Who flatters me to my face will speak ill of me behind my back." The Arabs say, "Beware of one who flatters unduly; he will also censure unjustly."

As a Wolf is like a Dog, so is a Flatterer like a Friend.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 665. (1732)

5 Flatterie is never without fawning. . . . Hee which flattereth, faigneth.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 86. (1574) Pettie, tr.

It is better to be beaten of ones friende, then kissed of his enimie, to wit, a flatterer.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 88.

6 What should we (quoth I) grease the fat sow.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. I, ch. 11. (1546)

7 He dupes the gaping raven. (Corvum deludet hiantem.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 5, l. 56. (30 B. C.) A reference to Aesop's fable of The Raven and the Fox, in which the raven opened its beak to sing and let fall the piece of cheese it was carrying, when the fox begged to hear its voice. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 15. The Germans say, "Er hat ihm des Maul wässerig gemacht" (He makes his mouth water).

Every flatterer lives at the expense of his listener. (Tout flatteur vit aux dépens de celui qui l'écoute.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Corbeau et le Renard.

Bk. i, fab. 2. (1668) La Fontaine's rendering of Aesop's fable.

The Fox praiseth the Meat out of the Crow's Mouth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4546.

8 Bring no more vain oblations; incense is an abomination unto me. (Ne offeratis ultra sacrificium frustra: incensum abominatio est mihi.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, i, 13. (c. 725 B. C.)

The wicked wind of adulation.

ROBERT HENRYSON, Fables of Aesop. (1570)

No adulation; 'tis the death of virtue.

HANNAH MORE, Daniel. (1782)

9 A flatterer is a smooth-spoken enemy. (Adulator quippe blandus inimicus est.)

ST. JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Letters. No. xxii, sec. 2. (A. D. 384) "Blandae mendacia linguae" (The lies of a flattering tongue) is a Latin proverbial phrase.

10 Just praise is only a debt, but flattery is a present.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 155. (1750)

11 Skilful flatterers praise the discourse of an ignorant friend and the face of a deformed one. (Adulandi gens prudentissima laudat sermonem indocti, faciem deformis amici.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 86. (c. A. D. 120)

12 Gallantry of mind consists in saying flattering things in an agreeable manner. (La galanterie de l'esprit est de dire des choses flatteuses d'une manière agréable.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 100. (1665)

It is happy for you that you possess the talent of flattering with delicacy.

JANE AUSTEN, Mansfield Park. Ch. 14. (1811)

13 Flattery is counterfeit coinage to which our vanity alone gives currency. (La flatterie est une fausse monnaie qui n'a de cours que par notre vanité.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 158. (1665)

MADAME WOILLEZ (c. 1840) varies this: "La flatterie est comme la fausse monnaie: elle apauvrit celui qui la reçoit" (Flattery is like counterfeit money: it impoverishes him who receives it).

The Coin, that is most current among us, is Flattery.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4452. (1732)

14 We sometimes think that we hate flattery, but we hate only the manner in which it is done. (On croit quelquefois haïr la flatterie, mais on ne hait que la manière de flatter.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 329. (1665)

15 A flatterer can risk everything with great personages. (Un flatteur peut tout risquer avec les grands.)

LE SAGE, Gil Blas. Bk. iv, ch. 7. (1715)

<sup>1</sup> While each of us flatters himself, we are a believing crew. (Dum sibi quisque placet, credula turba sumus.)

OVID, Remedium Amoris, l. 686. (c. 1 B. C.) Everybody is himself his own foremost and greatest flatterer. (αὐτοῦ κόλαξ ἕκαστος ὢν πρῶτος καὶ μέγιστος.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: How to Tell a Flatterer from a Friend. Sec. 49. (c. A. D. 95) Quoted by BACON, Essays: Of Love.

Men for the most part, are Flatterers of themselves.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 81. (1574) Pettie, tr.

We should have but little pleasure were we never to flatter ourselves. (On n'aurait guère de plaisir si on ne se flattait jamais.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 123. (1665) If we did not flatter ourselves, the flattery of others would do us no harm. (Si nous ne nous flattions pas nous-mêmes, la flatterie des autres ne nous pourrait nuire.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 152. (1665) If we did not flatter our selves, no Body else could.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2730. (1732) There is no such Flatterer, as a Man's self.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4922. (1732)

<sup>2</sup> They who delight to be flattered, pay for their folly by a late repentance. (Qui se laudari gaudent verbis subdolis, Sera dant poenas turpes poenitentia.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 13, l. 1. (c. 25 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> I believe no one who is profuse with flattery. (Nemini credo qui large blandus est.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 196. (c. 210 B. C.)

<sup>4</sup> Your flattery is so much birdlime. (Viscus merus vostrat blanditia.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 50. (c. 190 B. C.)

The flatteries of a bad man cover treachery (Habet insidias hominis blanditiae mali.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 19, l. 1. (c. 25 B. C.) Flattery is birdlime—so Plautus said, didn't he?

R. A. J. WALLING, A Corpse by Any Other Name, p. 205. (1943)

<sup>5</sup> He's soft-soaping you. (Bellus blanditur tibi.)

PLAUTUS, Menachmi, l. 626. (c. 200 B. C.)

You're patting my back. (Palpo percutis.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 153. (c. 200 B. C.)

Nothing but pure piffle. (οὐδὲ κολλῶσαι λύραι.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 137. (c. 194 B. C.)

You can't pass off any such pap on me. (Mi optrudere non potes palpum.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 945. (c. 195 B. C.) "To deceive with soft speeches" (Obtrudere palpum) is cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, vi, 27.

"To cajole me with honied speeches, who am used to deceive others with them." The word palpum means a gentle stroking or patting with the hand, which we use to horses and other animals to put them in good humor.

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. II, p. 100. (1814)

To see them flattering and soft soaping me all over.

JOHN NEAL, John Beedle's Sleigh Ride, p. 23. (c. 1840)

The faculty of judiciously applying soft soap.

P. T. BARNUM, Life, p. 286. (1855)

We aren't handing out any soft soap.

MERWIN AND WEBSTER, Calumet K, p. 345. (1901)

A knowledge of soft sawder and human natur.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), The Clock-maker. (1837) "Soft sawder" i. e., flattery.

There's all sorts of ways of soft sawderin'.

T. C. Haliburton, Wise Saws. Ch. 3. (1843)

No soft sawder, Master Frank, if you please.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 13. (1850)

Don't let any Tom, Dick or Harriet soft sawder you like that.

F. W. CROFTS, Circumstantial Evidence, p. 44. (1941)

<sup>6</sup> To tickle the ears. (Auribus blandiri.)

PLINY, Letters. Bk. i, epis. 2. (c. A. D. 98) A proverbial expression for flattery.

<sup>7</sup> The flattery of the fool is always pungent and delicious.

W. M. PRAED, On True Friendship. (c. 1830)

<sup>8</sup> A flattering mouth worketh ruin. (Os lubricum operatur ruinas.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvi, 28. (c. 350 B. C.)

A man that flattereth his neighbour spreadeth a net for his feet. (Homo qui blandis, fictisque sermonibus loquitur amico suo, rete expandit gressibus eius.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxix, 5

<sup>9</sup> Their throat is an open sepulchre; they flatter with their tongue. (Sepulchrum patens est guttur eorum, linguis suis dolose agebant.)

Old Testament: Psalms, v, 9. (c. 450 B. C.)

A flatterer's throat is an open sepulchre.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 590. (1640)

<sup>10</sup> The flattering speech contains its special poison. (Habet suum venenum blanda oratio.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 251. (c. 43 B. C.) Another form is, "Mellitum venenum blanda oratio" (A flattering speech is honeyed poison).

What drink'st thou oft, instead of homage sweet. But poison'd flattery?

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iv, 1, 267. (1599)

All panegyrics are mingled with an infusion of poppy.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1714)

<sup>11</sup> What valor cannot win flattery may. (Virtute quod non possis blanditia auferas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 718. (c. 43 B. C.)

<sup>12</sup> When flatterers meet, the Devil goes to dinner.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 139. (1678)

JOHN WOLCOT, Works (1801), v, 196. (1799)

When the Flatterer pipes, then the Devil dances.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5584. (1732)

1 It is easier and handier for men to flatter than to praise. (Es ist dem menschen leichter und geläufiger, zu schmeicheln als zu loben.)

JOHANN PAUL RICHTER, Titan. Zykel 34. (1803)

2 The fool is puffed up with flattery, like a corpse whose inflated heels appear plump.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 28. (c. 1258)

A flatterer is the shadow of a fool.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Characters: A Flatterer. (1613)

'Tis an old maxim in the schools,
That flattery's the food of fools;
Yet now and then your men of wit
Will condescend to take a bit.

SWIFT, Cadenus and Vanessa, l. 769. (1713)

Prithee, seek the Courtier's school
And learn to manufacture oil of fool.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Ninth Ode to the R.A.'s. (1785)

Laid on with a trowel, see under TROWEL.

3 If you flatter everyone, who will be your enemy? (Fêng jên shuo 'hao 'hua, na yu pu tui.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1032. (1875)

4 How closely flattery resembles friendship! (Adulatio quam similis est amicitiae!)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xlv, sec. 7. (a. A. D. 64)

Flattery is monstrous in a true friend.

FORD, Lovers Melancholy. Act i, sc. 1. (1628)
The same man cannot be both Friend and Flatterer.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack. (1744)

5 Why should the poor be flatter'd?
No, let the candied tongue lick absurd pomp,
And crook the pregnant hinges of the knee
Where thrift may follow fawning.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 2, 64. (1600)

Flatterers haunt not Cottages.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1550. (1732)

SPURGEON, John Ploughman, ch. 14. (1869)

6 Lay not that flattering unction to your soul.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 4, 145. (1600)

7 What really flatters a man is that you think him worth flattering.

SHAW, John Bull's Other Island. Act iv. (1904)

8 Those worst of enemies, flatterers. (Pessimum inimicorum genus, laudantes.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 41. (A. D. 98)

No foe to a flatterer.

WILLIAM HUNNIS, Title, in Paradyse of Daynty Devices, p. 97. (1578)

Plus nocet lingua adulatoris quam manus persecutoris. [More hurtful is the tongue of the flatterer than the hand of the persecutor.] There is no foe [equal] to the flatterer.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, i, 188. (1629) The Latin is a quotation from St. Augustine, in Psalms lxxvi.

9 They who laugh in a flattering way toil harder than the laborer in the fields.

TSANG, Epigram. Quoted by MENCIUS, iii, ii, 7. (c. 300 B. C.)

CLAW ME AND I'LL CLAW THEE, see under CLAW.

FLEA

10 She jumps about like a flea on a blanket. (ὥσπερ ψύλλοι κατὰ τὸ κῶδιον.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Thesmophoriasusae, l. 1180. (410 B. C.)

11 We shall have raine, the fleas bite.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 263. (1639)

When eager bites the thirsty flea,
Clouds and rain you sure shall see.

RICHARD INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 148. (1893)

12 The Flea, though hee kill none, hee does all the harme hee can.

JOHN DONNE, Devotions. No. xii. (1624)

13 He invokes heaven if a flea bites him. (In pulicis morsu deum invocat.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, iv, 4. (1523)

14 Doth a flea's exceed a giant's might,
Because the former can the latter bite?

(Dirai-je qu'un géant

Est moins fort qu'un puce? Elle le mord pourtant.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. ix, fab. 7. (1678)

15 A blockhead, bit by fleas, put out the light,
And chuckling cried, "Now you can't see to bite!"

(ἔσβεσε τὸν λύχρον μῶρος, ψυλλῶν ὑπὸ πολλῶν δακνόμενος, λέξας: οὐκέτι με βλέπετε.)

LUCIAN, Epigram. (c. A. D. 180) See Greek Anthology. Bk. xi, epig. 432.

16 No more important than the skip of a flea. (Le sault d'une pulce.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580)

17 Let that flee stick to the wa'.

SCOTT, Rob Roy, Ch. 23. (1818) See under FLY.

18 That's a valiant flea that dare eat his breakfast on the lip of a lion.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iii, 7, 154. (1599)

19 Elephants are always drawn smaller than life, but a flea always larger.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1714)

20 The vermin only teaze and pinch
Their Foes superior by an inch.

So, Nat'ralists observe, a Flea
Hath smaller Fleas that on him prey,
And these have smaller Fleas to bite 'em,
And so proceed ad infinitum.

SWIFT, On Poetry, l. 335. (1733)

Great fleas have little fleas upon their backs to bite 'em,
And little fleas have lesser fleas, and so ad infinitum.

And the great fleas themselves, in turn, have greater fleas to go on;
While these again have greater still, and greater still, and so on.

AUGUSTUS DE MORGAN, A Budget of Paradoxes, p. 377. (c. 1865)

Big fleas have little fleas to plague, perplex and bite 'em.

Little fleas have lesser fleas, and so ad infinitum.
R. R. FIELDER, Pulex Irritans. (c. 1920)

1 I swear that I haven't a flea in my ear. (Je vous jure que je n'ay pas la puce à l'oreille.)
UNKNOWN, Comédie de Provence. Act i, sc. 7. (c. 1400) Originally, "A flea in one's ear" meant anything that surprises or alarms, more recently it is said of a stinging reproof, rebuff, or repulse, which sends one away discomfited. (O.E.D.)

And manye oother grete wundres . . . whiche ben fleen in myne eres [Fr. puces en oreilles].

G. DE GUILLEVILLE, Pilgrimage of the Lyf of the Manhode. Pt. ii, ch. 39. (c. 1430)

How Panurge Had a Flea in the Ear. (Comment Panurge auoyt la Pusse en l'Oreille.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 7. Title. (1545)

"I'ay la pusse en l'aureille."—Ibid. "Ceste pusse que i'ay en l'aureille."—Ibid., ch. 31.

He standth now as he had a flea in his eare.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Gone away with a flea in her eare.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 26. (1576)

Sending them away with fleas in their eares.

F. DE LISLE, Legendarie of Charles of Lorraine, B vi. (1577)

Some of the company departed with a dogge in their sleeve.

JOHN GRANGE, Golden Aphroditis, sig.L1. (1577)

He had a flea in his eare.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 85. (1579) In frequent use thereafter.

FLESH

See also Fish and Flesh

2 The world, the flesh, and the devil.

Book of Common Prayer: Litany. (1548)

3 In wounds, proud-flesh . . . is as well produced . . . as the true and genuine flesh.

ROBERT BOYLE, a Free Enquiry into the Vulgarly Receiv'd Notion of Nature, vii, 323. (1685) Proud flesh arises from excessive granulation upon or around the edges of a wound.

Don't be proud and turn up your nose

At poorer people in plainer clothes;

But learn for the sake of your soul's repose,

That all proud flesh, wherever it grows,

Is subject to irritation.

S. S. COX, Because You Flourish in Worldly Affairs. (a. 1889)

4 Flesh is so newefangel, with meschaunce,
That we ne conne in no-thing han plesaunce
That souneth in-to vertu any whyle.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Maunciple's Tale, l. 89. (c. 1389)

The fraile flesch, whose nature is

Ay ready for the sporne and fall,

The firste foeman is of all.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. v. (1390)

Hit is bote frelete of flesch.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text

C, passus iv, l. 59. (1393)

Flesh is soft And yields itself.

UNKNOWN, A Myrroure for Magistrates: Jack Cade, iv. (1559)

The fleshe is frayle.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 230. (1576)

Frail as flesh is.

LAMAN BLANCHARD, Nell Gwynne's Looking-Glass. (1830)

5 All flesh is not the same flesh: but there is one kind of flesh of men, another flesh of beasts, another of fishes, and another of birds. (οὐ πᾶσα σὰρξ ἡ αὐτὴ σὰρξ.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, xv, 39. (A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Non omnis caro, eadem caro."

And what then?—nothing. A cook could have said as much.

THOMAS PAINE, The Age of Reason. Ch.2. (1794)

6 The woorst flesh in the world, is the flesh of man. (La peggior carne che sia al mondo, è quella de l'huomo.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 31. (1578)

7 They shall be one flesh. (Erunt duo in carne una.)

Old Testament: Genesis, ii, 24. (c. 550 B. C.) Of husband and wife.

And they twain shall be one flesh. (καὶ ἔσονται οἱ δύο εἰς σάρκα μίαν.)

New Testament: Matthew, xix, 5. (c. A. D. 50)

Repeated in Mark, x, 8. The Vulgate is,

"Et erunt duo in carne una." "And they two shall be one flesh" occurs in Ephesians, v, 31.

Know ye not that he which is joined to an harlot is one body? for two, saith he, shall be one flesh (ἔσονται γάρ, φησὶν, οἱ δύο εἰς σάρκα μίαν.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, vi, 16. (A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Erunt enim (inquit) duo in carne una."

Our State cannot be sever'd, we are one,
One Flesh; to loose thee were to loose my self.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 958. (1667)

Marriage makes man and wife one flesh.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Double Dealer. Act ii, sc. 3. (1694) See also under MARRIAGE.

8 Hir flesh [as] tendre as is a chike.

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose. (c. 1240) Chaucer (?) tr., l. 541. (c. 1365)

My flesh is soft and plump, my marrow burning.
SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 142. (1593)

I am a pretty piece of flesh.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 1, 36. (1595)

As pretty a piece of flesh as any is in Messina.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, iv, 2, 85. (1598)

As witty a piece of Eve's flesh as any in Illyria.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, i, 5, 30. (1599)

Miss has not an inch of nun's flesh about her.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>1</sup> All flesh is not venison.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1094.

(1640) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 91, with the French, "Toute chair n'est pas venaison."

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 515. (1732)

<sup>2</sup> I haue heard saie, it is a deere colup
That is cut out of thowne fleshe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

God knows thou art a collop of my flesh.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI, v, 4, 18. (1591)

It is a neir collop is cut of thy owin flesh.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 69. (c. 1595)

It's a deare collop that's taken out of the flesh.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia. p. 240. (1639)

<sup>3</sup> The more flesh the more worms.

RABBI HILLEL, Apothegm. (c. 50 B.C.) See
Mishnah: Pirke Aboth, ii, 8.

<sup>4</sup> All flesh is grass. (Omnis caro foenum.)
Old Testament: Isaiah, xl, 6. (c. 900 B.C.)

All flesh is as grass. (πάσα σὰρξ ὡς χόπος.)

New Testament: I Peter, i, 24. (C. A. D. 60) The

Vulgate is, "Omnis caro ut foenum."

The horse bit the parson! How came it to pass?
The horse heard the parson say, "All flesh is grass."

F. W. LORING, Epitaphs. (1871)

<sup>5</sup> All flesh shall perish together, and man shall turn again into dust. (Deficiet omnis caro simul, et homo in cinerem revertetur.)

Old Testament: Job, xxxiv, 15. (c. 350 B.C.)

The end of all flesh.

JOHN LYL, Euphuus (Arber), p. 458. (1580)

WAY OF ALL FLESH, see DEATH: EUPHEMISMS.

<sup>6</sup> Going after strange flesh. (Abeuntes post carnem alteram.)

New Testament: Jude, 7. (c. A. D. 80)

On the Alps,

It is reported thou didst eat strange flesh.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, i, 4, 67.
(1606) i. e. human flesh.

Starves her there, Till she will eat strange flesh.

SHELLEY, The Cenci, iii, 1, 48. (1819)

<sup>7</sup> I care not what become of this fraile barke of my flesh, so I save the passenger.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, *Newes from Any
Whence: Newes from Sea*. (1613)

<sup>8</sup> The useless and fleeting flesh, fitted only for the reception of food. (Inutilis caro et fluida, receptandis tantum cibis habilis.)

POSIDONIUS, Remark. (c. 75 B.C.) Quoted by SENECA, Ad Lucilium, epis. xcii, sec. 10

<sup>9</sup> Flesh never stands so high but a dog will venture his legs.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 139. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1553. (1732)

<sup>10</sup> No man is free who is a slave to the flesh.
(Nemo liber est, qui corpori servit.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xcii, 33. (A. D. 64)

<sup>11</sup> O, that this too too solid flesh would melt,
Thaw and resolve itself into a dew!

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 2, 129. (1600)

<sup>12</sup> The pound of flesh, which I demand of him,
Is dearly bought; 'tis mine and I will have it.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, iv, 1, 99. (1597) The pound of flesh is referred to several times during the scene. The origin of the proverbial phrase, "To exact one's pound of flesh," i. e. to demand one's exact dues.

<sup>13</sup> The nigher the bone, the flesh is much sweeter.
UNKNOWN, Ballads from MSS. (Percy Soc.), i,
21. (1559)

The fleash that is about the bones is sweeter and better to digest than other.

THOMAS NEWTON, tr., Directions for the Health of Magistrates and Students. (1574)

The nearer the bone the sweeter the flesh.

JOHN COOKE, The City Gallant. (1614) In HAZLITT, Old Plays, xi, 207. The earliest known printed use of the proverb in its exact modern form, sometimes given as, "The nearer the bone the sweeter the meat." A proverb in many languages. The French say,
"La chair la plus près des os est la plus tendre"; the Germans, "Je näher dem Bein, je süsser das Fleisch."

The nearer the bone the sweeter is the flesh.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 163. (1639)

The sweetest flesh is said to be nearest the bones.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, iii, 480. (1662)

The sweetest flesh is next the bone.

THOMAS HUNT, Abeced. Scholast., p. 79. (1671)

The flesh is ay fairest that is farthest from the bone.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 325. (1721)

"Spoken to them who are plump and look well."

The nearer the bane the sweeter.

WALTER SCOTT, The Bride of Lammermoor.
Ch. 6. (1819)

The nearer the bone the sweeter the meat. Only the superfluous has been swept away.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 8 Nov., 1858.

SPIRIT WILLING BUT FLESH WEAK, see under SPIRIT.

FLIGHT

<sup>14</sup> As for me, I fled her like a cuckoo. (ἐγὼ δ' ἀπ' αὐτῆς φύγον ὥστε κόκκυξ.)

ANACREON. Frag. 29. (c. 500 B.C.) The cuckoo was supposed to be a great coward. See
EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, ii, 153.

On the third day I flew the coop.

O. HENRY, The Enchanted Profile. (1909)

I did a bunk.

BERNARD SHAW, Fanny's First Play. Act i. (1911)

Mrs. B. Has flown the coop.

FRANK GRUBER, Simon Lash, p. 243. (1941)

I TOOK TO MY HEELS, see under HEEL.

1 He flees before he knows from whom he is fleeing, or where to flee. (Ante fugit, quam scit, aut quem fugiat aut quo.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. viii, epis. 7. (49 B. C.)

Referring to Pompey.

Man gives little thought to his destination, so long as he can remain out of reach of his pursuer.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams. (1905)

2 Let us look for our winged sandals. (Quare talaria videamus.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. xiv, epis. 21. (44 B. C.)

The winged shoes of Mercury. Let us think of flight. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ii, 42, who gives the proverb as "Talaria induere" (To put on the winged shoes).

It gave wings to our heels. (Elle nous donne des ailes aux talons.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 17. (1580)

3 He is gone, he has fled, he has eluded our vigilance, he has broken through our guards. (Abiit, excessit, evasit, erupit.)

CICERO, In Catilinam. No. ii, sec. 1. (63 B. C.)

And brave men fled who never fled before.

GEORGE H. CALVERT, Bunker Hill. (1847)

4 Of the thirty-six plans, flight is the best plan. (San shih liu chi tsou wei shang chi.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 191. (1872)

There is a Latin proverb, "Fugere est triumphans" (To flee is to triumph).

TO FIGHT AND RUN AWAY, see under FIGHTING.

5 He would fayne flee, but he wanteth fethers.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

6 He girded up his loins, and ran. (Accinctisque lumbis currebat.)

Old Testament: I Kings, xviii, 46. (c. 600 B. C.)

Gird up thy loins, and take my staff in thine hand, and go thy way. (Accinge lumbos tuos, et tolle baculum meum in manu tua, et vade.)

Old Testament: II Kings, iv, 29. (c. 600 B. C.)

Gird up thy loins and arise. (Accinge lumbos tuos, et surge.)

Old Testament: Jeremiah, i, 17. (c. 590 B. C.)

Gird up now thy loins like a man. (Accinge sicut vir lumbos tuos.)

Old Testament: Job, xxxviii, 3. (c. 400 B. C.)

Repeated in xl, 7.

I girdid up the loins of your mind. (διὸ δρασώμενοι τὰς σφύρας τῆς διανοίας ὑμῶν.)

New Testament: I Peter, i, 13. (c. A. D. 63) The Vulgate is, "Succincti lumbos mentis vestrae."

I girdid up my Lions & fled the Seen.

ARTEMUS WARD, A Visit to Brigham Young. (c. 1862)

To gird up one's loins. To adjust one's figurative belt for freer and vigorous action.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

7 By flight we often rush into the thick of our fate. (Fugiendo in media saepe ruitur fata.)

LIVY, History. Bk. viii, sec. 24. (c. 10 B. C.)

8 What follows I flee; what flees I ever pursue. (Quod sequitur, fugio; quod fugit, ipse sequor.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. ii, eleg. 19, l. 36. (c. 13 B. C.)

See also under WOOLING.

9 Flee: by flight the Parthian is still safe from his foe. (Fuge: tutus adhuc Parthus ab hoste fuga est.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 224. (c. 1 B. C.)

10 He who flees from trial confesses his guilt. (Fatetur facinus is, qui iudicium fugit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 204. (c. 43 B. C.)

Running away from justice must always be considered as evidence of guilt.

JOHN CLERK, Muir's Case. (1793) (23 How St. Tr. 230.)

Flight is an acknowledgment of guilt.

J. C. DAY, Johnson's Case. (29 How. St. Tr. 192.)

Flight is usually a confession of guilt.

DOROTHY DISNEY, Crimson Friday, p. 80. (1943)

11 What you suppose to be in flight often runs to meet you. (Quod fugae credas saepe solet occurrere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 619. (c. 43 B. C.)

12 The rogue fled from me like quicksilver.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, ii, 4, 248. (1597)

[They] fled as fast as their legs would carry them.

G. P. R. JAMES, The Life and Adventures of John Marston Hall. Ch. 9. (1834)

13 So flee as not to pass your hut, as the saying is. (Ita fugias ne praeter casam.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 768. (161 B. C.) Cited by

ERASMUS, Adagia, i, v, 4, and included by

TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, who renders it, "So flee that thou runne not passe thy cottage," and adds, "By this we be taughte, that we shulde not so flee one vice that we runne into an other." Don't overshoot the mark.

14 Wilt not flee hence in haste, while to flee is possible? (Non fugis hinc praeceptis dum praecipitare potestas?)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iv, l. 565. (19 B. C.) "Go, while the going is good." See under Go.

15 Intending to shoot and flee. (βαλὼν φεύγεσθαι ολεῖ.)

ZENOBIUS, Adagia, ii, 71. (c. A. D. 130)

FLIMFLAM

16 She maketh earnest matters of every flymflam.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, p. 19. (1546)

The Dictatour commanded him to leave off these foolish flimflams and trifling shifts.

PHILEMON HOLLAND, tr., Livy, vi, 14, 227. (1600)

This is a pretty flimflam.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Little French Lawyer. Act iii, sc. 3. (1620)

A flam, or a flimflam tale, riotte.

ROBERT SHERWOOD, Dictionary: Riotte. (1632)
Flamms and Arch-Flamms, even notorious Falsehoods.

THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain. Bk. i, ch. 2, sec. 9. (1655)

'Twas a most notorious flam.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, ii, iii, 887. (1663)

All that comes after a flim and a flam.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianae. (1826)
Works, (1855), i, 5.

All these habitual flim-flams are, in general, the airy creatures of inaccuracy and exaggeration.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 91. (1880)

[He] wasn't nothing but a flim-flammer.

R. A. WASON, Happy Hawkins, p. 169. (1909)

FLING

1
I'll have a fling.

JOHN FLETCHER, Rule a Wife and Have a Wife. Act iii, sc. 5. (1624)

They took care previously to have their fling.

SIR JONAH BARRINGTON, Personal Sketches, ii, 435. (1827)

I should like to have my fling before I marry.

THACKERAY, Pendennis. Ch. 39. (1849)

Give me my fling, and let me say my say.

TENNYSON, Aylmer's Field, l. 399. (1864)

FLIRTATION

2
And so she flirted, like a true
Good woman, till we bade adieu.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Lines on My New Child Sweetheart. (1841)

She had . . . a taste for sidewalk flirtation.

HARRIET B. STOWE, Dred, i, 24. (1856)

Every man likes to flirt with a pretty girl, and every pretty girl likes to be flirted with.

GEORGE ELIOT, Adam Bede, p. 238. (1859)

3
You know I always loved a little flirtation.

COLLEY CIBBER, The Non-Juror. Act ii. (1718)

I assisted at the birth of that most significant word "flirtation," which dropped from the most beautiful mouth in the world, and which has since received the sanction of our most accurate Laureate in one of his comedies. . . . Flirtation is short of coquetry, and indicates only the first hints of approximation.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, The World. No. 101. (1754)
"The most beautiful mouth in the world" was that of Lady Frances Shirley, and Colley Cibber was the Laureate.

The great art of flirtation.

BESANT AND RICE, The Golden Butterfly. Ch. 6. (1876)

I never was up on the flirtation business, either handkerchief, automobile, postage-stamp, or doorstep.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Best-Seller. (1909)

FLITTING

4
He has taken a moon light flitting. . . . To signify that a man has run away for fear of his creditors.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 145. (1721)
He was fain to make a moonlight flitting, leaving his wife for a time to manage his affairs.

JOHN GALT, Annals of the Parish. Ch. 31. (1821)
The whole covey of them, no better than a set of swindlers, . . . made that very night a moonlight flitting.

D. M. MOIR, Mansie Wauch. Ch. 17. (1824)
He having just "shot the moon" [made a moonlight flitting], I had to follow him to a cockloft in St. Giles's.

COL. PETER HAWKER, Diary, ii, 123. (1837)
I warned him when shooting of moons seemed likely.

WALTER BESANT, All Sorts and Conditions of Men. Ch. 4. (1882)

5
Fast for to sitte and not oft to flitte.

NICOLAS UDALL, Ralph Roister Doister. Act ii, sc. 3. (c. 1550)

They say, Munday flitte, Neaver sitte.

HENRY BEST, Rural Economy in Yorkshire, p. 135. (1641) Best is explaining that farm laborers never want to go to a new position on a Monday, because of this proverb.

Fools are fain of flitting, and wise Men of sitting.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 105. (1721)

FLOOR

6
I am going to get in on the ground floor.

OGDEN NASH, The Strange Case of the Baffled Hermit. (1935) That is, at the beginning of a speculation or business enterprise; with the insiders.

I was in on the ground floor.

GYPSY ROSE LEE, Mother Finds a Body, p. 147. (1942)

I'm letting you in on the ground floor again.

HUGH ADDIS, Night Over the Wood, p. 160. (1943)

You shall come in right on the ground floor.

ANNE HOCKING, Death Loves a Shining Mark, p. 189. (1943)

FLOTSAM

7
Flotsam and leave 'em—that's me from now on.

DOROTHY PARKER, The Little Hours. (1940)

8
The goods and chattels of the inhabitants are all said to savour of Flotsome and Jetsome.

WALTER SCOTT, Diary, 11 Aug., 1814. Flotsam: wreckage from a ship or its cargo found floating on the surface of the sea; jetsam: goods thrown overboard from a ship in distress in order to lighten it.

A mania for buying all sorts of flotsam and jetsam.
ROBERT BUCHANAN, in Harper's Magazine, Sept., 1884, p. 603/1. Odds and ends.

- 1
Does anybody want any flotsam?
I've got sam.
Does anybody want any jetsam?
I'll get sam.
OGDEN NASH, No Doctors To-day, Thank You. (1942)

FLOWER

- 2
No flowers, by request.
ALFRED AINGER, summarizing their editor's instructions, at a dinner given to the contributors to The Dictionary of National Biography, 8 July, 1897.
Say it with flowers.
P. F. O'KEEFE (attr.), Slogan of the Society of American Florists, adopted 1917.
Say it with flowers from love's sweetest bowers,
And you'll find her waiting, waiting for you.
NEVILLE FLEESON, Say It with Flowers. (1919)
As the florists' advertisements would have it, I have "said it with flowers."
NGAIO MARSH, Death and the Dancing Footman, p. 24. (1941)
- 3
To create a little flower is the labour of ages.
WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)
- 4
A broken flower soon withers. (Fiore caduto è tosto bruno.)
BOCCACCIO, Il Filostrato. Canto vii, st. 93. (c. 1250) The Germans say, "Schöne Blumen stehen nicht lange am Wege" (Fair flowers do not remain long by the wayside).
- 5
The handsomest flower is not the sweetest.
H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 507. (1855)
- 6
Where are the flowers, the fair young flowers,
That lately sprang and stood
In brighter light and softer airs, a beauteous sisterhood?
W.C. BRYANT, The Death of the Flowers. (1825)
- 7
The forced flower has no perfume. (Gewalt's blumen riechen nicht.)
CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 318. (1856) A German proverb.
- 8
Embrouded was he, as it were a mede
Al ful of fresshe floures, whyte and rede.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 89. (c. 1386)
- 9
He was called "the choice flower of the people." (Flos delibatus populi.)
ENNIVS, Annals. Bk. ix, frag. 301, Loeb. (c. 180 B.C.) Quoted by CICERO, Brutus, xv, 58, who calls it the finest stroke in praise of the eloquence of Marcus Cornelius Cethegus.
SYRE WAWAIN ys neuue, flour of corteysye.
ROBERT OF GLOUCESTER, Chronicle, 213. (1297)
He was of chevalrye the floure.
UNKNOWN, Robert of Cisyle, 50. (c. 1370)
Prynce of freedom, and flour of gentilnes.
WILLIAM DUNBAR, Poems, vii, 81. (1508)

- Noblemen, which be the flowre of gentilitie.
RICHARD MULCASTER, Positions. Ch. 39. (1581)
He is not the flower of courtesy.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 5.44. (1595)
You are the flower of civility.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
Roland, the flower of chivalry.
THOMAS CAMPBELL, The Brave Roland. (1820)
I take her for the flower of womankind.
TENNYSON, The Princess, v, 277. (1847)
Lancelot, the flower of bravery.
TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 113. (1859)
Wearing the white flower of a blameless life.
TENNYSON, Idylls of the King: Dedication, l. 24. (1859)
- 10
The flowres that growe in the Spring, in Haruest are ripened. (I fiori che crescono nela prima vera ne l'Autuno si maturano.)
JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 69. (1578)
The flowers that bloom in the spring, tra la, Breathe promise of merry sunshine.
W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act ii. (1885)
- 11
It is a bad Soil, where no Flowers will grow.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2844. (1732)
- 12
One flower makes no garland.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)
- 13
She is . . . Not onely the fairest floure in your garland, But also she is all the faire flowers thereof.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 8. (1546)
[He] was my garlands sweetest flower.
THOMAS KYD, The Spanish Tragedie. Act i, sc. 4, l. 4. (1592)
'Tis the fairest flower in your garden.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 15. (1659)
'Tis the fairest flower in his crown or garden.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 176. (1670)
It is the finest Flower in his Garden.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3023. (1732)
- 14
Men seize the flower, but when the bloom is fled fling it far from them. (ὡν ἀφαρπάζειν φιλεῖ | ὀφθαλμοὺς ἀνθρώπων δ' ὑπεκτρέπει πόδα.)
SOPHOCLES, Trachiniae, l. 548. (c. 409 B.C.)
No Body is fond of fading Flowers.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3550. (1732)

FLY

- 15
The fly knows the face of the milk-seller
J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 66. (1817) The dancing-girls soon discover who is interested in them.
- 16
To apply any more elaborate criticism to them, would be 'to break a fly upon the wheel.'
DE QUINCY, Incognito. (c. 1850) Works, xi, 2.
See also under BUTTERFLY.
- 17
Dead flies cause the ointment of the apothecary to send forth a stinking savour. (Muscae morientes perdunt suavitatem unguenti.)
Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, x, 1. (c. 900 B.C.)

Major Bing was the ointment around the fly.

O. HENRY, He Also Serves. (1909)

Name the fly in the ointment.

J. B. PRIESTLEY, The Old Dark House. Ch. 5. (1928)

That plainly is the flea in your ointment.

H. S. KEELER, The Man with the Wooden Spectacles, p. 191. (1941) The French say, "C'est une ombre au tableau" (It's a shadow on the picture). FLY IN AMBER, see AMBER.

<sup>1</sup> Most all the time, the whole year round, there ain't no flies on me.

EUGENE FIELD, Jest 'fore Christmas. (1892)

There may be flies on you and me,

But there are no flies on Jesus.

UNKNOWN, There Are No Flies on Jesus. A Salvation Army song of 1900.

There aren't any flies on me, thanks!

GEORGETTE HEYER, No Wind of Blame, p. 75. (1939)

There were no flies on Miss Betony.

DOROTHY BOWERS, Fear and Miss Betony, p. 261. (1942)

There are no flies on you, are there?

LUCY CORES, Painted for the Kill, p. 192. (1943)

<sup>2</sup> The Flies goe to leane horses.

JAMES SANFORD, tr., Hours of Recreation, p. 205. (1572)

Vnto the leane horses, alwayes resort the flies

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 25. (1578)

The flies haunt leane horses.

DAVIES, The Scourge of Folly. Prov. 45. (1611)

Flies bite none but leane and feeble oxen.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina, p. 214. (1631)

Flies are busiest about lean horses.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 78. (1640)

Flies do rest upon lean horses.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 43. (1666)

God sends flies to plague old asses.

ELIZABETH DELEHANTY, Arise from Sleep, p. 47. (1942)

<sup>3</sup> 'Twould make even a Fly laugh.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5340. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> Flies, which will not become tame amongst us, though they dayly dwell with us, and eate of our cates when wee doe.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 167. (1574) Pettie, tr.

<sup>5</sup> To a boiling pot flies come not.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 128. (1640)

Flees come to a feast unca'd.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 235. (1678)

The English form is, "Flies come to feasts unasked."

<sup>6</sup> Hungry flies byte sore.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

Cited by JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 107, with the comment, "The horse in the fable with the gall'd back desired the flies that were full might not be driven away, because hungry ones would then take their place."

<sup>7</sup>

A flye folowethe the hony.

THOMAS HOCCEVE, De Regimine Principum, p. 110. (c. 1400) See under HONEY.

<sup>8</sup>

In his breast she set the daring of the fly, which, though it be driven away never so often from the skin of man, ever persisteth in biting.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvii, l. 570. (c. 850 B. C.)

A fly on your nose, you slap, and it goes;

If it comes back again, it will bring a good rain.

RICHARD INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 148. (1893)

<sup>9</sup>

Put cream and sugar on a fly and it tastes very much like a black raspberry.

E. W. HOWE, Country Town Sayings. (1911)

<sup>10</sup>

One cannot catch a fly when he will.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1659)

<sup>11</sup>

A fly, sir, may sting a stately horse, and make him wince; but one is an insect, and the other is a horse still.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 1754.

<sup>12</sup>

The flie playeth so long with the flame, that hee is scoured therewith.

GEORGE PETTIE, Pettie Pallace: Pigmations Freinde, p. 237. (1576) A rendering perhaps of one of the Similia of Erasmus, "Uti pyralis ultro advolans lucernis, adustis alis collabitur ac perit."

The Flye which playeth with the fire, is singed in the flame.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 66. (1579)

As the fly, by often dallying with the candle, at last scorseth her wings with the flame; so taking, he [Noah] was taken, and at last was drunk.

HENRY SMITH, Sermons, i, 279. (c. 1585)

Thus hath the candle sing'd the moth.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, ii, 9, 79. (1606)

<sup>13</sup>

Not only the bull strikes at its foe with curved horn; even the ewe, when hurt, resists its assailant. (Non solum taurus ferit uncis cornibus hostem, | verum etiam instanti laesa repugnat ovis.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 5, l. 19. (c. 26 B. C.)

You'll find that even an ant and a gnat bear anger. (ἔνεστι καὶ μύρμηκι καὶ σέρφῳ χολή.)

ZENOBIUS, Adagia, iii, 70. (c. 950) Two other proverbs of the same sort cited by Diogenianus are, "Even a goat will bite a bad man," and "Even a mouse will bite."

A fly has its spleen. (Habet et musca splenem.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iii, cent. v, No. 7.

(1508) CAMDEN, Remains, p. 265. (1605)

Low trees haue their tops, . . . a flye his spleene.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 316. (1580)

Sparkes have their heate, ants their gall, flies their spleene.

JOHN LYLY, Alexander and Campaspe. Act v, sc. 4. (1584)

I tell thee, flies have their spleene.

THOMAS LODGE, Rosalynde, p. 70. (1590)

So it is proverbially said Formicae sua bilis inest, habet et musca splenem [Even the ant has its gall, the fly its spleen].

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Pseudodoxia Epidemica. Bk. iii, ch. 3. (1646) Cited by HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 176, with the addition, "Tread on a worm and it will turn; no viper so small but hath its venom." PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, adds another, "A baited cat may grow as fierce as a lion."

[Jeffrey] shewed to all, that habet musca suum splenem; and they must be little indeed that cannot do mischief.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, iii, 41. (1662)

Even a Fly hath its Spleen.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1388. (1732)
See also under ENEMY.

1 Shoo fly, don't bother me, I belong to Company G.

BILLY REEVES, Shoo Fly, Don't Bother Me. (1866)

2 Let that fly stick on the wall; when the dirt's dry it will rub out.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, The Reprisal. Act ii. (1757)
Say nothing more on that subject.

O whist, Colonel, for the love o' God! let that flea stick i' the wa'.

WALTER SCOTT, Waverley. Ch. 71. (1814)

Let that flea stick in the wa'; . . . when the dirt's dry it will rub out.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 23. (1818)

Let that flea stick to the wa'; it's a' ye ken about it.

DAVID MOIR, Mansie Wauch. Ch. 26. (1824)

"Let that flea stick to the wall," said Betty contemptuously.

CHARLES READE, Griffith Gaunt. Ch. 16. (1866)

3 King James said to the fly, Have I three kingdoms, and thou must needs fly into my eye?

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Religion. (c. 1650)

4 He looks as though he would not hurt a fly. (Non posse videtur muscam excitare.)

SENECA (?), Ludus de Morte Claudii. Sec. 10. (C. A. D. 50)

5 Some men are more vexed with a fly than with a wound.

JEREMY TAYLOR, The Mysteriousness of Marriage. (1651) Recalling the remark of a French innkeeper during the first World War: "The Americans are good soldiers, but they are all mad. Whenever a fly enters the dining-room you'd think it was a Boche, for they go into a rage and chase it around until it is killed."

6 One fly makes a summer.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar. (1893)

II—The Fly on the Wheel

7 According to the example of the Flye, whiche sitting uppon a Carte that was driven on the way, saide, hee had rayseed a verie great dust: or like the Emote, who sitting on the horne of an Oxe that was tilling the grounde, beeing askte what hee did there, answered, that hee went to plough.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 153. (1574) Pettie, tr.

It was pretily devised of Aesop, The Flie sate upon the Axletree of the Chariot wheele, and said, What a dust doe I raise!

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Vain-Glory. (1597)

Yet these are no more than the flie on the wheel.

WILLIAM GURNALL, The Christian in Compleat Armour, p. 299. (1661)

Did ever any mortal Fly

Raise such a cloud of dust as I!

MATTHEW PRIOR, The Flies. (c. 1715)

What a Dust have I rais'd! quoth the Fly upon the Coach.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5476. (1732)
The French say, "Faire la mouche du coche"
(To play the fly on the coach).

Like the fly in the fable, I seem to have got upon a wheel which makes much dust.

LORD BYRON, Letters and Journals, ii, 401. (1814)

And so we plough along, as the fly said to the ox.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act iii, sc. 5. (1840) There is a Lettish variant,

"Now we have rowed well!" said the flea, when the fisher drew the boat on land," and

RAY, English Proverbs, cites still another,

"We hounds killed the hare," quoth the lap-dog. "After dusk the glowworms think, 'We are giving light to the world,'" says SRI RA-

MAKRISHNA, Money and Riches.

Fly on the coach wheel, one who fancies himself of mighty importance, but who is in reality of none at all.

E. C. BREWER, Dictionary of Phrase and Fable: Fly. (1870)

8 A fly that sat upon the beam

Rated the mule: "Why, sure you dream?

Pray get on faster with the cart

Or I shall sting you till you smart!"

(Musca in temone sedit et mulam increpans:

Quam tarda es! inquit, non vis citius progredi?

Vide, ne dolone collum compungam tibi.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables: The Fly and the Mule Bk iii, fab. 6. (c. 25 B. C.) Francis, tr

A fly buzzes about the horses, stings one, stings the other, and thinks all the time that it makes the coach go (Une mouche des chevaux s'approche, . . . Pique l'un, pique l'autre, et pense à tout moment Qu'elle fait aller la machine.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Coche et le Mouche. Bk. vii, fable 9. (1671)

"Let us breathe, now," said the fly at once. "I have worked so hard that our passengers are at last on level ground." ("Respirons maintenant!" dit la mouche aussitôt. "J'ai tant fait que nos gens sont enfin dans la plaine.")

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. vii, fab. 9. After the coach had reached the top of the hill.

The fly drives the horses. (ἡ μύια διώκει τ' ἄλογα.)

NEGRIS, Modern Greek Proverbs, p. 53. (1831)

FLYING

- <sup>1</sup>
I fly like a hawk.
ANI, Papyrus: Book of the Dead. Ch. 82, l. 2. (c. 4000 B. C.)
- <sup>2</sup>
You old fly-by-night; an ancient term of reproach to an old woman, signifying that she was a witch.
FRANCIS GROSE, ed., Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Fly. (1796)
Would you have her married to a wild fly-by-night?
T. L. PEACOCK, Maid Marian, iii, 191. (1822)
See also under FLITTING.
- <sup>3</sup>
Men haue great desire to be compted high fliers.
RICHARD HARVEY, Plaine Percevall, p. 15. (1589)
I met with my cozen Roger Pepys, and he tells me that . . . he thinks it fit to marry again. . . . A woman sober, and no high-flyer, as he calls it.
SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 27 May, 1663.
These highfliers, when they are in their altitudes, suddenly their waxen wings melt, and down they fall headlong.
WILLIAM CHILCOT, Evil Thoughts, vi, 61. (1698) A reference to Icarus, who fell into the sea when he flew too high and the sun melted the wax with which his wings were fastened on. This is the meaning too, of the proverb cited by FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5167 (1732), "To fly with waxed Wings."
They fly High in their high-flown Divinity.
EDMUND HICKERINGILL, Priest-craft. Bk. ii, ch. 4, p. 41. (1705)
She flies too high! she flies too high!
TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. v, l. 271. (1847)
Fly and you will catch the swallow.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1659)
- <sup>5</sup>
Flying without feathers is not easy; my wings have no feathers. (Sine pennis volare haud facile est; meae alae pennas non habent.)
PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 871. (c. 194 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, v, 84. The Spanish form is, "Non si puo volar senza ale" (One can't fly without wings), of persons attempting to do what is much beyond their power; the French say, "Il ne faut pas voler avant que d'avoir des ailes" (Don't try to fly before you have wings), or "Oiseau ne peut voler sans ailes" (A bird can't fly without wings).
He would fain flee, but he wanteth fethers.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)
Another would fly swift, but wanteth wings.
SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry VI. Act i, sc. 1, l. 75. (1591)
We cannot stand without legs, nor fly without feathers.
CHAPMAN AND MARSTON, Eastward Hoe. Act ii, sc. 1. (1605)
Some would faine fle but feathers they want.
DAVIES, The Scourge of Folly, p. 344. (1611)
- No flying without wings.
THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 124. (1633)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 91. (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3569. (1732) KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 267, adds, "A man cannot thrive and prosper in the world, that has no stock or support."
He would fain fly, but he wants feathers. Nothing of moment can be done without necessary helps, or convenient means.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 91. (1670)
- <sup>6</sup>
He who can fly, let him not creep. (Volare qui potest, ne serpat.)
PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 227. (1778)
- <sup>7</sup>
To fly at all game.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 176. (1670)
FLY UPON WINGS OF THE WIND, see under WIND.
- FOE, see Enemy
- FOG
- <sup>8</sup>
A fog cannot be dispelled with a fan.
MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 1. (1846)
- <sup>9</sup>
This is a London particular—a fog, miss
DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 3. (1852)
- <sup>10</sup>
To lose itself in a fog.
SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, ii, 3, 34. (1607)
- <sup>11</sup>
The yellow fog comes creeping down.
OSCAR WILDE, Impression du Matin. (1881)
The fog comes on little cat feet.
CARL SANDBURG, Fog. (1916) For weather proverbs connected with fog see INWARDS, Weather Lore.
- FOLLY
- See also Wisdom and Folly
- <sup>12</sup>
To think no folly is Heaven's best gift. (τὸ μὴ κακῶς φρονεῖν | θεοῦ μέγιστον δῶρον.)
AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 927. (458 B. C.)
- <sup>13</sup>
Folly without faults is as a reddish [radish] without salt.
ROBERT ARMIN, Nest of Ninnies, p. 40. (1608)
- <sup>14</sup>
The Folly of one Man is the Fortune of Another.
FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Fortune. (1597)
- <sup>15</sup>
If others had not been foolish, we should be so.
WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)
- <sup>16</sup>
Better to leue folie thenne to mayntene folie.
WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Jason, p. 116. (c. 1477)
- <sup>17</sup>
Folly is wont to have more followers and comrades than discretion. (Más acompañados y paniaguados debe tener la locura que la discreción.)
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 13. (1615)

<sup>1</sup> Folly in youth is sin, in age 'tis madness.
SAMUEL DANIEL, The Tragedie of Cleopatra.
Act iii, sc. 2. (1594)

Happy is he who knows his follies in his youth.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 3. (1659)

Happy is he who has sowed his wild oats betimes.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 100. (1678)

Happy the man who knows his follies in his youth.
SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, iv, 121. (1747)

<sup>2</sup> Folly may hinder a man of many a good turn.
THOMAS D'URFEY, The Comical History of Don Quixote. Pt. ii, act ii, sc. 2. (1694)

<sup>3</sup> Each age has its own follies, as its majority is made up of foolish young people.
EMERSON, Carlyle's Past and Present. (1843)

<sup>4</sup> Folly is the language of a fool. (μωπὰ γὰρ μωπὸς λέγει.)
EURIPIDES, The Bacchanals. (c. 410 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 98, "Stultus stulta loquitur."

Folly consists not in committing folly, but in not hiding it when committed. (No es necio el que hace la necedad, sino el que, hecha, no le sabe encubrir.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 126. (1647) See also COMMANDMENT: ELEVENTH.

Folly is the onely thing that keeps Youth at a stay, and Old age far off.

JOHN WILSON, tr., The Praise of Folly. Sec. 11. (1668) Referred to as a proverb.

Folly is the cloak of knavery.
WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

Folly is the poverty of the mind.
H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 356. (1855)

<sup>5</sup> Follie is a bonny dog.
FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 32. (c. 1595)

Folly is a bonny dog. Meaning, I suppose, that many are imposed upon by the false appearances and attractions of vicious pleasures.

DEAN RAMSAY, Reminiscences, v, 200. (1857)

<sup>6</sup> Folly and Learning (such as it is) often dwell in the same Person.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1557. (1732)

Folly and learning often dwell together.
H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 356. (1855)

<sup>7</sup> Folly as well as Wisdom is justify'd by its Children.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1558. (1732)

The most exquisite Folly is made of Wisdom spun too fine.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1746.

See also WISDOM AND FOLLY.

<sup>8</sup> Folly is the Queen Regent of the World.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1562. (1732)

<sup>9</sup> All is laughter, all is dust, all is nothing, for all that is cometh from folly. (πάντα γέλασ, καὶ πάντα κόνις, καὶ πάντα τὸ μηδέν· πάντα γὰρ ἐξ ἀλόγων ἐστὶ τὰ γινόμενα.)

GLYCON, Epigram. (c. 50 B. C.) See Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 124.

<sup>10</sup> If folly were grief, every house would weep.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 372. (1640)

If folly were a pain, there would be crying in every house.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 67. (1853) A Spanish proverb.

<sup>11</sup> The first degree of folly is to hold one's self wise, the second to profess it, the third to despise counsel.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 462. (1640) FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1754.

<sup>12</sup> Folke show much folly, when things should be sped,

To ren to the foote, that maie go to the hed.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

<sup>13</sup> The foolishness of fools is folly. (Fatuitas stultorum, imprudentia.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xiv, 24. (c. 350 B. C.) The shame is not in having once been foolish, but in not cutting the folly short. (Nec luisse pudet, sed non incidere ludum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 14, l. 36. (20 B. C.) The shortest follies are the best. (Les plus courtes folies sont les meilleures.)

PIERRE CHARON, Traité de la Sagesse. Bk. i, ch. 34. (1601)

<sup>14</sup> Follies past are sooner remembered then redressed.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 297. (1580)

Follies past, shall be worne out with faith to come.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 353.

<sup>15</sup> Folly is for mortals a self-chosen misfortune. (ἄρτια θνητοῖς δυστυχίη· αὐθαίρετον.)

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 618. (c. 300 B. C.)

Follies are miscalled the crimes of Fate.

POPE, tr., Homer's Odyssey, i, 44. (1725)

<sup>16</sup> How much folly there is in human affairs. (Quantum est in rebus inane!)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. i, l. 1. (c. A. D. 58)

I enjoy vast delight in the folly of mankind; and, God be praised, that is an inexhaustible source of entertainment.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Letter to the Countess of Mar, 1725.

<sup>17</sup> Together let us beat this ample field,
Try what the open, what the covert yield; . . .

Eye Nature's walks, shoot folly as it flies,

And catch the manners living as they rise.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 9. (1732)

Serious folly is a butt for all

To shoot their wits at.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Love's Cure. Act iii, sc. 1. (1647)

Shoot Folly as she gallops.

O. HENRY, A Double-Dyed Deceiver. (1909)

<sup>1</sup> In Folly's cup still laughs the bubble joy.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 288. (1732)

<sup>2</sup> Whether the charmer sinner it, or saint it,
If folly grow romantic, I must paint it. . . .
Choose a firm cloud before it fall, and in it
Catch, ere she change, the Cynthia of this minute.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 15. (1735)

<sup>3</sup> Good nature leads rapidly to folly. (Facilitas animi ad partem stultitiae rapit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 210. (c. 43 B. C.)

To warn, not to punish, is proper to folly. (Monere non punire stultitiam decet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 419.

By excessive yielding, folly sometimes grows more foolish still. (Nimiam concedendo interdum fit stultitia [stultior].)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 437.

<sup>4</sup> Every man's folly ought to be his greatest secret.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, Instructions to His Son.
Sec. 1. (1616)

A Man's Folly ought to be his greatest Secret.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 307. (1732)

<sup>5</sup> Folly is the product of all countries and ages.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 94. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1561. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> Folly ruins most things, even itself. (Imprudencia pleraque et se praecipitat.)

SALLUST, Ad Caesarem Senem. Ch. 8. (c. 46 B. C.)

Many for folye hem self for-doothe.

UNKNOWN, How the Good Wüf Taugte Hir Doughtir, l. 140. (c. 1430)

<sup>7</sup> Folly always loathes itself. (Omnis stultitia laborat fastidio sui.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. ix, sec. 22. (c. A. D. 64)

Folly is often sick of itself.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1559. (1732)

No. 1560 is, "Folly is never long pleased with itself."

<sup>8</sup> The word Folly is, perhaps, the prettiest word in the language.

SHENSTONE, On Men and Manners, p. 5. (c. 1760)

Folly is the direct pursuit of Happiness and Beauty.

SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

<sup>9</sup> Folly, I think, is the worst of ills. (δωρεπ, οἶμα, μὴ φρονεῖν πλείστη βλάβη.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 1051. (c. 441 B. C.)

There is no remedy for folly, for it is an incurable disease.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 430. (c. 1050) Ascher, tr. The Spanish form is, "El mal que no tiene cura es locura" (The disease for which there is no cure is folly)

The chief disease that reigns this year is folly.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 767. (1640)

Some follies are catching, like contagious diseases. (Il y a des folies qui se prennent comme les maladies contagieuses.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 300. (1665)

It is idle to cure men of folly, unless one could cure them of being foolish.

WALPOLE, Letter to Horace Mann, 9 Sept., 1773.

<sup>10</sup> 'Tis well not to fall by folly. (καλόν γε μέντοι μὴ 'ξ ἀβουλίας πεσεῖν.)

SOPHOCLES, Electra, l. 398. (c. 409 B. C.)

<sup>11</sup> Is folly then so old? Why, let me see,—
About what time of life may folly be?

Oh! she was born, by nicest calculation,
One moment after woman's first creation.

W. R. SPENCER, Fashionable Friends: Prologue. (1811)

<sup>12</sup> I receive the reward of my folly. (Ego pretium ob stultitiam fero.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 610. (166 B. C.)

The ultimate effect of shielding men from the effects of folly is to fill the world with fools.

HERBERT SPENCER, State Tamperings with Money Banks. (1860)

<sup>13</sup> The great six feet of folly. (ἀνὴρ τρισκαίδεκά-παχυσ.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xv, l. 17. (c. 270 B. C.)

Praxinoa is referring to her lover, Dinon.

FOOD

See also Grub, Meat, Victuals

<sup>14</sup> The best food is that which fills the belly.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 228. (1817)

Whatever will fill your belly is good food. (Wu k'o ch'ung ch'ang chieh mei shih.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 362. (1875)

<sup>15</sup> I prayed him to bestow on me the food, for which he had bestowed the appetite. (Per che il pregai che mi largisse il pasto | di cui largito m'aveva il disio.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xiv, l. 92. (c. 1300)

That heavenly food which gives new appetite. (Quel cibo, | che, . . . di sè asseta.)

DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto xxxi, l. 128.

<sup>16</sup> The only problem in Ar-rchey Road is how many times does round steak go into twelve at wan dollar-an-a-half a day.

F. P. DUNNE, The Servant Girl Problem. (1901)

<sup>17</sup> A Lark is better than a Kite.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 57. (1709)

"'Tis not the Quantity, but the Quality, that makes the Feast," Dykes comments. "He that understands good eating, will readily grant me, that the Wing, or the Leg of a Lark, is worth the whole Body of a Crow"

1 Our daily food is a trifling matter,
For each man, rich or poor can be but filled
When hunger's satisfied. (τῆς δ' ἐφ' ἡμέραν βορᾶς εἰς μικρὸν ἔκει· πᾶς γὰρ ἐμπλησθεὶς ἀνὴρ ὁ πλούσιός τε ὡς πένης ἴσον φέρει.)

EURIPIDES, Electra, l. 429. (c. 413 B. C.)

2 Where no food nor receptacle is, even the Furies abandon the places. (Che doue non han pasco ne ricetto, insin le Furie abandonana i luoghi.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 34. (1578)
If the pigeon-house doesn't lack food, it won't lack pigeons. (Si al palomar no le falta cebo, no le faltarán palomas.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1615)
"Ubi mel ibi apes" (Where the honey, there the bees). See under HONEY.

3 Every moving thing that liveth shall be meat for you. (Omne, quod movetur et vivit, erit vobis in cibum.)

Old Testament: Genesis, ix, 3. (c. 550 B. C.)
Which thing gave him (whosoever he was) good occasion to say, That one woode was enough to feede manie Elephants, but onelic man could scarcelie content himselfe with that, which the wide worlde and deepe Ocean doth bring forth.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv,
p. 137. (1574) Young, tr.

4 Satisfy your hearts with food and wine, for therein is courage and strength. (σίου καὶ δινείου, τὸ γὰρ μένος ἐστὶ καὶ ἀλκή.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 706. (c. 850 B. C.) Repeated in xix, 160, and elsewhere.

EAT, DRINK, AND BE MERRY, see under EATING.

5 Meat of barley and of wheat, the marrow of men. (ἀλφίτα τεύχουσai καὶ ἀλέατα, μυελὸν ἀνδρῶν.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xx, l. 108. (c. 850 B. C.)

6 Doth the wild ass bray when he hath grass?
or loweth the ox over his fodder? (Numquid rugiet onager cum habuerit herbam? aut mugiet bos cum ante praecepe plenum steterit?)

Old Testament: Job, vi, 5. (c. 350 B. C.)

7 What is food to one man may be fierce poison to others. (Ut quod ali cibus est aliis fuit acre venenum.)

LUCRETIVS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iv, l. 637.
(c. 45 B. C.) ONE MAN'S MEAT ANOTHER MAN'S POISON, see under POISON.

I found the pith of allergy
In Bromides tried and true;
For instance, you like lobster,
But lobster don't like you.

OGDEN NASH, Allergy Met a Bear. (1939)

8 A proverb sayde in ful old langage,
That tendre browyce made with a marry-boon
For fieble stomakes is holsum in potage.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems, p. 165. (c. 1430)

Weake food best fits weake stomachs—as is sayd.
HENRY LOK, Poems, p. 302. (1597)

9 The food of the gods. (βρῶμα θεῶν.)

EMPEROR NERO. (C. A. D. 54) Referring to mushrooms, with which his mother, Agrippina, had killed his predecessor, Claudius. See SUTONIUS, Nero, ch. 33, who refers to the phrase as a proverb. Cited by ERASMUS,
Adagia, i, viii, 88, in the form θεῶν τροφή, with the Latin, "Deorum cibus," and the comment that it is what Homer calls nectar or ambrosia. There are other Greek proverbial phrases for it, Διὸς γάλα (Zeus's milk), τῆς Ἀφροδίτης γάλα (Aphrodite's milk), νέκταρος ἄνθος (The flower of nectar), and τῆς Ἑλένης βρώματα (Helen's food).

Nero praised mushrooms, and in a Greek proverb called them the food of the Gods, because with them he had poisoned his predecessor Claudius, Emperor of Rome. (Neron louoit les champeignons, & en proverbe Grec les appelloit viande des Dieux: pource que en iceulx il auoit empoisonné son praedecesseur Claudius empereur Romain.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 50. (1548)

A dish fit for the gods.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, ii, 1, 173. (1599)

There's food for gods!

There's nectar! there's ambrosium!

There's food for Roman Emperors to eat!

THOMAS HOOD, The Turtles. (c. 1827)

Food for the gods! Ambrosia for Apiculus!

W. A. CROFFUT, Clam Soup. (1880)

Cornwall squab-pie, and Devon white-pot brings,
And Leicester beans and bacon, food of kings!

WILLIAM KING, Art of Cookery, l. 165. (1708)
When I demanded of my friend what viands he preferred,

He quoth: "A large cold bottle, and a small hot bird!"

EUGENE FIELD, The Bottle and the Bird. (1892)
Once taste porpoise and all other food will seem insipid.

GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 373.
(1938) A Chinese proverb.

10 After delicious fare I take no common food.
(Post asellum diaria non sumo.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 24. (C. A. D. 60) The asellus, perhaps a cod or haddock, was a sea-fish much prized by the Romans. Petronius makes a proverb of it and applies it to love.

11 You boast too much of belly-matters. (λίγη αὐχεῖς ἐπὶ γαστέρι.)

FIGRES (?), Battle of the Frogs and Mice, l. 57.
(c. 480 B. C.) The attribution to Figres, a Carian, is by Suidas. This is the retort of the frog, Puff-jaw, to the mouse, Crumbsnatcher, who is boasting that he eats only such food as men eat.

12 Attic dainties. (πέμματα Ἀττικά.)

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. iii, sec. 404D. (c.
375 B. C.) In the same section, Plato uses another proverbial phrase, "A Syracusan table."

- 1
Food for Acheron. (Acheruntis pabulum.)
PLAUTUS, Casina, l. 157. (c. 200 B. C.) Acheron, the "River of Sorrows," which flows through Hades.
Ne schalt tu beon wurmes fode?
UNKNOWN, Ancren Riwe, 276. (c. 1220)
No, Percy, thou art dust | And food for— For worms, brave Percy.
SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry IV, v, 4, 86. (1597)
Food for powder, food for powder: they'll fill a pit as well as better.
SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry IV, iv, 2, 71. (1597)
He was food for fishes now, poor fellow.
RIDER HAGGARD, Mr. Meeson's Will. Ch. 22. (1894)
Dear to friends and food for powder,
Soldiers marching, all to die.
A. E. HOUSMAN, A Shropshire Lad. No. 35. (1896)
- 2
Like mice, we always eat the food of other people. (Quasi mures semper edere alienum cibum.)
PLAUTUS, Persa, l. 58. (c. 200 B. C.)
A given bite is soon put out of sight.
F. K. ROBINSON, Whitby Glossary, p. 71. (1855)
- 3
Don't store food in a chamber pot. (σὺ τὸν εἰς ἀμίδα μὴ ἐμβάλλειν.)
PLUTARCH, as cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 2, who adds, "Nor try to put courteous conversation into the minds of impudent men, for speech is the food of thought." The Latin is "Cibum in matellam ne immittas."
There was food for thought there.
MARK TWAIN, A Connecticut Yankee, p. 11. (1889)
- 4
Who satisfieth thy mouth with good things; so that thy youth is renewed like the eagle's. (Qui replet in bonis desiderium tuum: renouabitur ut aquilae iuventus tua.)
Old Testament: Psalms, ciii, 5. (c. 250 B. C.)
- 5
There is no love sincerer than the love of food.
SHAW, Man and Superman. Act i. (1903)
- 6
To snatch food from the flames. (E flamma petere cibum.)
TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 492. (161 B. C.) Or to snatch food from a funeral pyre, to rob the dead.
- FOOL
- 7
Our every bolt is shot. (πᾶν τετόξευται βέλος.)
AESCHYLUS, Eumenides, l. 676. (458 B. C.)
Youre bolte is sone ischote.
UNKNOWN, Legend of St. Katherine, 54. (c. 1225)
Sottis bolt is sone iscoten.
UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Alfred, l. 456. (c. 1275)
Proverbs of Hendyng, xi. (c. 1300)
A fooles belle is sone runge.
CHAUCER (?), Romaunt of Rose, l. 5266. (c. 1365)

- Fole bolt es sone shot.
UNKNOWN, Ywain and Gawain. Pt. i, l. 2168. (1375)
A fooles bolt soone shot.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 3. (1546)
In common use thereafter. There is a mediæval Latin jingle, "Ut dicunt multi, Cito transit lancea stulti" (As everyone says, quickly passes the lance of a fool).
How soon a fool's bolt's shot without distinction.
GEORGE DIGBY, Earl of Bristol. Act v. (1663)
"Your bolt is soon shot, according to the old proverb," said she.
SMOLLETT, Roderick Random. Ch. 53. (1748)
The implement shot from the cross-bow is called . . . by the English a bolt. Hence the saying, . . . "the fool's bolt is soonest shot."
BRADY, Varieties of Literature, p. 21. (1826)
The French say, "Le pain au fol est premier mangé" (A fool's loaf is eaten first).
Fools bolts (men say) are soonest shot yet oft they hit the mark.
ULPIAN FULWELL, Ars Adulandi. Dial. vii. (1580)
A Fool's Bolt may sometimes hit the White.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 107. (1732)
A fool's bolt may sometimes hit the mark.
H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 286. (1855)
- 8
A prosperous fool is truly a heavy load. (ἡ βαρὺ φόρημ' ἀνθρώπος εὐτυχῶν ἀφρων.)
AESCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 220, Smyth. (c. 458 B. C.)
STOBAEUS, Florilegium, iii, 4, 18.
A poor fool indeed is a very scandalous thing.
SUSANNAH CENTLIVRE, The Wonder. Act i, sc. 1. (1714)
- 9
Who is called a pious fool? He who saw a woman drowning and made no effort to save her, saying: "It is not proper to look upon a woman."
Babylonian Talmud: Sotah, fo. 21a. (c. 450)
- 10
It is sayd of men both yonge and olde
A foole wyll nat gyue his babyll for any golde.
ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Shyp of Follys, i, 256. (1509)
Fools . . . who would hardly forgoe their bable for the Tower of London.
JOHN GRANGE, Golden Aphroditis: Dedication. (1577)
A fool will not give his bable for the Tower of London.
FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 12. (c. 1595)
The Foole will not giue his bable for the King's Exchequer.
THOMAS ADAMS, Works, p. 774. (1630)
Fools will not part with their bauble for all Lombard Street.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 94. (1670)
To dote more on it than a fool on his bauble.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 172. (1670)
- 11
It is lucky for one fool to meet another. (La fortuna de un loco es encontrarse con otro.)
FRANCIS BEEDING, Heads Off at Midnight. Ch. 9. (1938) Quoting a Spanish proverb.

<sup>1</sup> Consult not with a fool; for he cannot keep counsel. (Cum fatuis consilium non habeas.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), viii, 17. (c. 190 B.C.)

Ye shul eschewe the conselling of foles.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibeus, Sec. 22. (c. 1387)

Worthless is the advice of fools. (Inanium inania consilia.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, Chil. iii, cent.v, No.29. (1508)
To the counsel of fools a wooden bell.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 537. (1640)

<sup>2</sup> Seven days are the days of mourning for the dead, but for a fool all the days of his life. (Luctus mortui septem dies: fatui autem et impii omnes dies vitae illorum.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxii, 13. (c. 190 B.C.)

What is heavier than lead and what is its name but "Fool"? (Super plumbum quid gravabitur? et quod illi aliud nomen quam fatuus?)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xxii, 14.

The mind of a fool is like a cart-wheel, and his thoughts like a rolling axle-tree. (Praecordia fatui quasi rota carri: et quasi axis versatilis cogitatus illius.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xxxiii, 5.
Like a saddled horse is the love of a fool; he neigheth under everyone that sitteth upon him. (Sub omni suprasedente hinnit.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xxxiii, 6.

<sup>3</sup> A cure has been ordained for everything, but there is no medicine for the cure of a fool.

BIHARTRIHARI, Niti Sataka. No. 11. (c. A. D. 100)

See also under FOLLY.

Foolles will be foolles still.

JOHN STILL (?), Gammer Gurton's Needle. Act i, sc. 4. (1575)

To be a fool born is a disease incurable.

BEN JONSON, Volpone. Act ii, sc. 1. (1605)

No precepts will profit a fool.

JONSON, Explorata: Praeciendi Modi. (1636)

Fools will still be fools.

ROBERT HEATH, Satyrs, p. 9. (1650)

He who is born a Fool, is never cured.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2391. (1732)

Fools will be fools, say what you will.

New Foundling Hospital for Wit, ii, 201. (1784)

Once a chump, always a chump.

DASHIELL HAMMETT, The Maltese Falcon. Ch. 20. (1930) "It is difficult," said Voltaire, "to free fools from the chains they revere."

<sup>4</sup> Listen to the fool's reproach! It is a kingly title!

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

The praise of fools is censure in disguise.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 513. (1855)

<sup>5</sup> A fool always finds a bigger fool to admire him. (Un sot trouve toujours un plus sot qui l'admire.)

BOILEAU, L'Art Poétique. Canto i, l. 232. (1674)

The French quoted by Sherlock Holmes in

A Study in Scarlet, ch. 6. (1887). In The Sign of the Four, ch. 6, Conan Doyle has Holmes quoting another French proverb relating to fools, "Il n'y a pas des sots si incommodes que ceux qui ont de l'esprit" (There are no fools so annoying as those who are energetic). In these early stories Holmes frequently drops into French, which may be explained by the fact that in The Greek Interpreter it is stated that one of his grandmothers was French, and he also apparently studied at the University of Montpellier, in southern France. But he also quotes Goethe, Darwin, and even has a fling at Latin, as does Watson. Obviously Doyle was trying to give the stories a literary flavor, but he soon got over it!

The noisy fool who perseveres.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. i, fab. 44. (1727)

<sup>6</sup> Fools and madmen ought not to be left in their own company.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 356. (1855)

Fools laugh at their own sport.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 356.

Fools live poor to die rich.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 356.

See under MISER.

He's a fool that is wiser abroad than at home.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 403.

<sup>7</sup> Fools and madmen tell commonly truth.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy, ii, iii, 8. (1621)

Fools, they say, will tell truth.

PHILIP MASSINGER, A Very Woman. Act iii, sc. 1. (1634)

Madmen, drunkards, and fools tell truth, they say.

HESTER LYNCH PIOZZI. (1791) See HAYWARD, Mrs. Piozzi, i, 342.

CHILDREN AND FOOLS SPEAK TRUE, see under CHILD.

<sup>8</sup> Fools . . . have the wit to keep themselves out of the rain.

HENRY BUTTES, Dyets Drie Dinner, B iv. (1599)

I am not such an ass but I can keep my hand dry.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, i, 3, 78. (1600)

<sup>9</sup> Moche abydeþ behynde that a fole thynketh. WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Blanchardyn and Eglantine, p. 181. (c. 1489) Quoted as "sayd often in a comyn langage."

<sup>10</sup> Al-day fayleth thing that foles wenden [imagine].

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde, Bk. i, l. 217. (c. 1374)

Thus alday fayleth thinges that fooles wende.

USK, The Testament of Love, ii, 8, 122. (c. 1387)

It is a comune sayng that many thingis lackethe of folysshe thoughtis.

LORD BERNERS, Huon of Burdeux, p. 502. (c. 1534)

A' fails that fools think.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 229. (1678)

Mickle fails that fools think.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 243. (1721)

<sup>1</sup> Fools never perceive where they are either ill-timed or ill-placed.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 20 July, 1749.

<sup>2</sup> A man who knows he is a fool is not such a great fool.

CHUANG-TSZE, Philosophy. Ch. 11. (c. 400 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> A hood, a hood, for such a foole.

COLLMAN, ed., Ballads and Broad-sides, p. 93. (c. 1566)

And, as the prouerbe doth show very playne,
A hood for this foole, to kepe him from the rayne.
HUTCH, ed. Ancient Ballads, p. 128. (1570)

A Fool wants [lacks] his Cloke in a rainy Day.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 110. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> One of love's April fools.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Old Batchelor. Act i, sc. 1. (1693) See under APRIL.

<sup>5</sup> If fooles went not to markets bad wares would not be sold.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Marché. (1611)
Cited as a Spanish proverb by RAY, Proverbs, p. 10. (1670) The Italians say, "E' va più d'un asino al mercato" (More than one ass goes to market).

Were there no fools, bad ware would not pass.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 70. (1640)

<sup>6</sup> A foole on a bridge is a drum in a river.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Pont. (1611)

A fool on a bridge soundeth like a drum.

JOHN WOODROEPHE, Spared Houres, p. 485. (1623)

<sup>7</sup> He who at fifty is a fool,

Is far too stubborn grown for school.

CHARLES COTTON, Visions. No. 1. (c. 1670)

Be wise with speed;

A fool at forty is a fool indeed.

EDWARD YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. ii, l. 281.

(1725) LANGDON MITCHELL, The New York Idea. Act iii. (1906) See under AGE.

<sup>8</sup> As foolish as Ibycus. (ἀνοητότερος Ἰβύκου.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, i, 207. (c. A. D. 125)

Ibycus (c. 535 B. C.), when he might have reigned as a despot over his fellow-citizens, went away to live humbly in Ionia and write verses. There is another proverb, αὐτὸ Ἰβύκου γέραροι (The cranes of Ibycus). Falling one day among robbers in a deserted spot, Ibycus was killed, exclaiming as he died that the very cranes which flew over the spot at the moment would prove his avengers. Some time later, two of the robbers were watching some games in the city, when a flock of cranes flew over the arena. "Look," one of the robbers said, nudging his companion, "the avengers of Ibycus" (αὐτὸ Ἰβύκου ἐκδικοί), and they both laughed. But the remark was overheard, an inquiry was started, the crime admitted, and the robbers hanged. See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, ii, 81, 83, for the full story. THUCYDIDES, Fragment 3, has a similar saying, ἀεισηρότερον ἀνοητότερος (As foolish as the Leibethrans). The Leibethrans were the inhabitants of a mountain district in Thrace, and were proverbial for dullness.

A greater fool than Bacchus. (Morycho stultior.)

ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 12. (1511)

Who was the biggest fool the Bible told of? Noah, for he'd get tite.

GEORGE W. HARRIS, The Knob Dance. (1845)

<sup>9</sup> That sillye foole . . . His harte is euer in his tounge.

THOMAS DRANT, tr., Horace's Satires. Sat. ii. (1566)

The wise man's tongue is ever in his heart;

The fooles heart's in his tongue.

PATRICK HANNAY, Poetical Works, p. 184. (1622)

QUARLES, Enchyridion. Cent. iii, ch. 55. (1641)

The heart of a fool is in his mouth.

NICHOLAS LING, comp., Polyteuphuia, p. 37. (1669)

A fool's heart dances on his lips.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 286. (1855)

<sup>10</sup> Remember, Every man is a fool, or physician to himself at least.

JOHN DUNTON, Athenian Sport, p. 13. (1707)
See under DOCTOR.

<sup>11</sup> Not if I had a hundred tongues, a hundred mouths, a voice of iron, could I describe all the sorts of fools, or all the names of folly. (Non mihi sit centum linguae sint, oraque centum, ferrea vox, omnes fatuorum evolvere formas, omnia stultitiae percurrere nomina possim.)

ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 64. (1511)

<sup>12</sup> A fool speaks foolish things. (μῶρα μῶρος λέγει.)

EURIPIDES, Bacchae, l. 368. (c. 410 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium, sec. 41, and Adagia, i, i, 98, with the Latin, "Stultus stulta loquitur."

A fool's mouth is his destruction, and his lips are the snare of his soul. (Os stulti contritio eius: et labia ipsius, ruina animae eius.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xviii, 7. (c. 350 B. C.)

A fool's voice is known by multitude of words (In multis sermonibus invenietur stultitia.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, v, 3. (c. 250 B. C.)

The discourse of a fool is like a burden on a journey.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xx, 16. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

By folly wurdys mow men a foyle kenne.

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, Handlyng Synne, l. 2970. (1303)

Fooles can not holde hir tunge.

CHAUCER (?), tr., Romaunt of the Rose, l. 5265. (c. 1365)

But sooth is seyð "a fool can noght be stille."

CHAUCER, Parlement of Foules, l. 574. (c. 1380)

For by his tonge a fole is ofte knowe.

JOHN LYDGATE, Troy Book. Bk. ii, l. 7022. (c. 1412)

A man may knowe a fole by his moche clatering.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophers, fo. 57. (1477)

A foole is knowen by speche negligent.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, The Mirrour of Good Manners, p. 73. (1570)

By their words we know fools, and asses by their ears.

LEWIS EVANS, Withal's Dictionary Revised, sig. C4. (1586)

Foolles if they once begin, can never end.

HENRY LOK, Ecclesiastes, 98. (1597)

Too much talking is ever the indice of a fool.

BEN JONSON, Timber: Homeri Ulysses. (a. 1637)

Foolles are known by their babblings.

UNKNOWN, Country-mans New Commonwealth, p. 10. (1647)

A fool's tongue is long enough to cut his own throat.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 94. (1678)

A fool's voice is known by the multitude of words.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 220. (1678)

But fools, to talking ever prone,

Are sure to make their follies known.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. i, No. 44. (1727) See also under SILENCE.

A Fool's Speech is a Bubble of Air.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 109. (1732)

A Fool, when he hath spoke, hath done all.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 111.

<sup>1</sup> Fools are fain of right nought.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 32. (c. 1595)

Fools are fain of nothing.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 111. (1721)

<sup>2</sup> Foolles set far trystes.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 32. (c. 1595) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 235. (1678)

Fools set long trysts.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 102. (1721)

"Spoken when people promise to do a thing a good while hence."

<sup>3</sup> Foolles should have no chappin sticks [dangerous tools or weapons].

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 32. (c. 1595)

It is the simplest of all tricks

To suffer fools have chopping sticks.

SAMUEL COLVIL, Whiggs Supplication, i, 68. (1681)

Deil tak him . . . that gies women either secret to keep or power to abuse—fooles shouldna hae chapping sticks.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 34. (1818)

<sup>4</sup> He that seekes to know other mens affayres, of all wise men is counted a fool.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 9. (1578)

Three sortes of men that are to be counted foolles, A faythful louer of maydens, a mercyful soldier, & a fayre gamester.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 25.

<sup>5</sup> A fole sholde neuer haue a babulle in hands.

FÖRSTER, ed., Douce MS., p. 52. (c. 1350)

If all that foolles are bables were,

Of wood we should have but small store.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Marotte. (1611)

If all fools had bables, we should want fuel.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 67. (1640)

If all fools ware bables fewel would be dear.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 10. (1670)

If every Fool were to wear a Bauble, they would grow dear.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2676. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> Ever since follies have pleased, fools have been able to divert.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735.

The family of fools is ancient.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735.

Who knows a fool, must know his brother;

For one will recommend another.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1740.

Most fools think they are only ignorant.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1748.

It is ill-manners to silence a Fool, and Cruelty to let him go on.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1757.

<sup>7</sup> Fools are always resolute, to make good their own Folly.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1568.

Fools are not to be convinced.

Fools are pleased with their own Blunders.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 1569-70.

The French say, "À chaque fou plaît sa marotte" (Every fool is pleased with his own bauble, or folly).

If a Fool have Success, it ruins him

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2660.

It is the property of Fools to be always judging.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3027.

The Fool is busy in every one's Business but his own.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4537

The Fool runs away, while his House is burning.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4538.

The more Riches a Fool hath, the greater Fool he is.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4666.

When a Fool hath bethought himself, the Market's over.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5530 All of these quotations from Fuller appear also in H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs (1855)

<sup>8</sup> A fool is more endurable than half a fool

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninum (Choice of Pearls). No. 236. (c. 1050) Ascher, tr. Both ancient and modern authors agree as regards this maxim. Algazili in his Ethics, p. 190, says, "The Lord protect me from a half-learned man." See under LEARNING Fools and modest persons are alike innocuous. It is only your half-fools who are dangerous.

GOETHE, Elective Affinities Pt. ii. ch. 5. (1808)

<sup>9</sup> Ofttimes even a fool expresses himself to the purpose. (πολλάκι τοι καὶ μωρὸς ἀνὴρ μάλα καιρὸν εἶπεν.)

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae. Bk. ii, ch. 6, sec. 9. (c. A. D. 150) Referred to as "this very ancient line which has become a proverb." Sometimes translated, "Even a fool sometimes gives good counsel."

A fool often speaks wisely.

(Car um puet oyr sovent

Un fol parler sagement.)

UNKNOWN, Le Roi d'Angleterre et le Jongleur d'Ely, l. 440. (c. 1250) MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, ii, 256.

A fool may eek a wys man ofte gyde.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, Bk. i, l. 630. (c. 1380)

Thus ofte wyse men ben war by folis.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, i, 635.

Yet an old proverbe sayd ys all day:

Of a foole a wyse man may Take wytt.

UNKNOWN, Partonope of Blois, l. 7982. (c. 1450)
Oft a folys counsel

Tourneth a wyse man to confort and auayle.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, The Skyp of Folsys, i, 58. (1509)

Sometimes a fool may speak a word in season.
(πολλὰκι τοι καὶ μὲνός ἀνὴρ κατακαίριον εἶπεν.)

ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 131. (1511)
Quoted as a proverb.

Oftentimes even a fool speaks to the purpose.
(Saepe etiam stultus fuit opportuna locutus.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. vi, No. 1. (1508)

A Latin rendering of the Greek proverb given above. Erasmus quotes the Greek as from Aeschylus' tragedy, Phryges, but of this play no identified fragment now exists. The proverb is included by TAVERNER, Translations from Erasmus, with the rendering, "Oftentimes even the fool hytteth the nayle on the head and speaketh in thynges place." Another Latin form is, "Interdum stultus bene loquitur" (Sometimes a fool speaks well).

I have often heard it said in a vulgar proverb, that a fool may well instruct a wise man. (I'ay souuent ouy en prouerbe vulgaire, Qu'vn fol enseigne bien vn sage.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 37. (1543)

Urquhart renders it, "The wise may be instructed by a fool." The French sometimes use the form, "Un fou avise bien un sage." The Germans say, "Gäb es keine Narren, so gäb es keine Weisen" (If there were no fools, there would be no wise men).

Fools sometimes give wise men counsel.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 94. (1678)

A fool may put somewhat in a wise bodies head.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 140. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 105 (1732), and BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 286 (1855), have, "A Fool may chance to put something into a wise Man's Head."

Yet fooles (as the prouerbe is) sometimes speake to the purpose.

WILLIAM STAFFORD, Examination of Certayne Complaints. (1581)

A fool to purpose speaks some time you know.

GEORGE WITHER, Abuses Stript and Whipt: Title-Page. (1613)

Remembering meantime that Greek proverb . . . Sometimes a fool may speak a word in season.

JOHN WILSON, tr., Moriae Encomium, p. 160. (1668)

A fool may give a wise man counsel by a time. An apology of those who offer their advice to them who may be supposed to excel them in parts or sense.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 25. (1721)

Fools may invent Fashions, that wise Men will wear.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1579. (1732)

A fule may gie a wise man counsel.

WALTER SCOTT, The Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 45. (1818)

From a fool comes sometimes good advice. (Del hombre necio, a veces buen consejo.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 237. (1856)

The biggest fool may come out with a bit of sense when you least expect it.

EDEN PHILLPOTTS, Marylebone Miser. Ch. 1. (1926)

Even a fool sometimes gives good advice.

E. P. OPPENHEIM, The Man Who Changed His Plea, p. 185. (1942)

1 Natural Folly is bad enough; but learned Folly is intolerable.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3510. (1732)

The learned Fool writes his Nonsense in better Language than the unlearned; but still 'tis Nonsense.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1754.

A fool, unless he knows Latin, is never a great fool. (Tonto, sin saber Latin, nunca es gran tonto.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 67. (1853) A Spanish proverb: a jibe at "learned folly as the most intolerable of all follies," summed up in the English proverb, "Learned fools are the greatest fools." The French say, "Un sot savant est sot plus qu'un sot ignorant" (A learned fool is a greater fool than an ignorant fool); the Germans, "Die gelehrte Narren sind über alle Narren" (Learned fools are above all fools). See also under LEARNING.

2 Fortune fauours Fooles as old men saye.

BARNABY GOOGE, Epitaph of Grimaold. (1563)

They say that fooles are fortunate.

WILLIAM WAGER, The Longer Thou Liuest, sig. E2. (c. 1568)

I am fortune's fool.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iii, 1, 141. (1595)

Call me not fool till heaven hath sent me fortune.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 7, 19. (1600)

They say, a fool's handsel is lucky.

JONSON, Bartholomew Fayre. Act ii. (1614)

The old proverb of fools have fortune.

HENRY GLAPTHORNE, Wit in a Constable. Act ii, sc. 7. (1640)

A fool's plot may be as lucky as a fool's handsel.

DRYDEN, Sir Martin Mar-all. Act v, sc. 3. (1668)

Dick . . . fulfills the proverb which says, Fools have fortune.

Vade Mecum for Maltworms. Pt. ii, p. 22. (1720)

Fools have Fortune.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1576. (1732)

GARRICK, Lying Valet. Act ii. (c. 1760) See also under FORTUNE.

<sup>1</sup>
For as it seemeth that a bell
Like to the wordes that men tell
Answereth right so.

GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. i, l. 75. (c. 1390)
So the fool thinketh, so the bell clinketh.

THOMAS TOMKIS, Lingua. Pt. iii, ch. 7. (1607)
He that hears bells, will make them sound what he list. "As the fool thinketh, so the bell clinketh."

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy,
i, iii, 3. (1621)

I understand, sir, what you mean; "as the fool thinks, so the conscience tinketh."

ANDREW MARVELL, The Rehearsal Transposed.
Pt. ii. (1673)

As the bell tinketh, so the fool thinks;

As the fool thinks, so the bell tinketh.

WILLIAM HONE, Year-Book, col. 455. (1831)
It's a true adage, "As the fool thinks, the bell clinks."

CARLYLE, Latter-Day Pamphlets, viii. (1850)
The French say, "Quoi que le fol se tarde, le jour ne se tarde" (However the fool delays, the day does not delay).

<sup>2</sup>
The names of fools are always written on walls. (Nomina stultorum semper parietibus haerent.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 272. A medieval proverb, of which TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 139, cites another form, "Stultorum calami carbones, moenia chartae" (Of fools charcoal is the pen, walls
the paper).

A white wall is a fool's paper. (Muraglia bianca, carta di matto.)

JAMES SANFORD, tr., Hours of Recreation, p.
218. (1572) FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32.
(1578) An Italian proverb. The French say,
"Muraille blanche, papier des sots"; the Spanish form is, "Una pared blanca sirve al loco de carta" (A white wall serves a fool for paper).

A fool's paper is a white wall.

JOHN DAVIES, Scourge of Folly, lxxvii. (1611)
A white wall is the paper of a fool.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 838. (1640)

White Walls are Fools' Writing-Paper.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5692. (1732)
Doors and walls are fools' paper.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733.

If you lodge the fool with you, he'll leave his name upon the walls. (Si tu loges le sot chez toi, il laissera son nom sur les parois.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes,
p. 377. (1856) Similarly, "On ne voit sur les murailles que les noms de la canaille" (One never sees upon the walls any names but those of blackguards).

Their names decorate the walls of public toilets.

HULBERT FOOTNER, Murderer's Vanity, p. 21.
(1940) There are two jingles whose authors are unknown; the older one, sometimes ascribed to John Ray, "He is a fool and ever shall | Who writes his name upon a wall."
The other, more modern, "Fools' names, like fools' faces, | Are often seen in public places."

<sup>3</sup>
We have all been fools once in our lives.
(Semel insanivimus omnes.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 402. A medieval proverb.

None is a fool always, every one sometimes.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 169.
(1640) A rendering of the French proverb,
"Nul qui soit fou toujours, nul qui ne le soit parfois." Another French form is, "Il n'est si sage qui ne foloye aucune fois" (None so wise but he is foolish sometimes). The Germans say, "Keiner ist so klug, dass er nicht ein wenig Narrheit übrig hätte" (No man is so wise but that he has a little folly remaining), or "Weise sein ist nicht allzeit gut" (It is not always good to be wise).

None are fools always, tho every one sometimes.

THOMAS D'URFEY, *The Comical History of
Don Quixote*. Pt. i, act i, sc. 1. (1694)

Every man is a fool sometimes, and none at all times.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 99. (1721)
Every man is a damn fool for at least five minutes every day. Wisdom consists in not exceeding the limit.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Roycroft Dictionary. (c. 1910)

<sup>4</sup>
A fool is astonished at every word. (βλάξ ἀνθρώπος ἐπὶ παντὶ λόγῳ φιλεῖ ἐπτοῆσθαι.)

HERACLEITUS, Fragment. (c. 500 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 28D, 41A.

<sup>5</sup>
He that sends a fool, means to follow him.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 54. (1640)
Who sendeth a fool upon an errand, must goe himself after.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 3. (1659)

<sup>6</sup>
Play with a fool at home, and he will play with you in the market.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 152.
(1640) RAY, Proverbs, p. 10. (1670) FULLER,
Gnomologia. No. 2763. (1732)

SET A FOOL ON A STOOL, see under BEGGAR.

<sup>7</sup>
The fool asks much, but he is more fool that grants it.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 284. (1640)
A fool demands much, but he's a greater that gives it.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 10. (1670)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 100. (1732)

<sup>8</sup>
Folly grows without watering.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 583.
(1640) From the Italian, "Pazzi crescono senza inaffiargli."

Fools grow without watering.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1574. (1732)
The Russians say, "Fools are not planted or sowed; they grow of themselves." Also,
"Praise a fool and you water his folly."

<sup>9</sup>
If fools should not fool it, they shall lose their season.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 705. (1640)

Fools give to please all but their own.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 737.

<sup>1</sup>
There is no foole to the olde foole, folke say.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1546)
CAMDEN, Remains, p. 313. (1605)
In faith I perceive an olde sawe and a rustic, no foole to the olde foole.
JOHN LYLY, Mother Bombie. Act iv, sc. 2. (1594)
These tedious old fools!
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 2, 223. (1600)
Old fools are greater fools than young ones.
(Les vieux fous sont plus fous que les jeunes.)
LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 444. (1665)
An old fool of all fools is the worst.
JOHN GAY, The Mohawks. Sc. 2. (1712)
The older a Fool is, the worse he is.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4693. (1732)
In love there's no fool, madam, like an old fool.
J. R. PLANCHÉ, Extravaganzas, v, 157. (1856)
There's no fool like the old one.
TENNYSON, The Grandmother, l. 44. (1859)
Old fools is the biggest fools there is.
MARK TWAIN, Tom Sawyer. Ch. 1. (1876)
There's no fool like an old fool.
OWEN DAVIS, Icebound. Act i. (1923) WREN,
The Uniform of Glory, p. 177. (1941) CHRIS-
TIE, The Body in the Library, p. 106. (1942)

<sup>2</sup>
Any fool knows that. (ἄνθρωπος ἔγνω.)
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvii, l. 32. (c. 850 B.C.)
Quoted as a proverb by HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 218; by PLATO, Symposium, 222B;
by PHILO, De Decalogo, 69; and many others.

<sup>3</sup>
Almost all men are fools. (Stultique prope omnes.)
HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 32. (35 B.C.)
In this same Satire Horace asks, "Qui non stultus?" (Who is not a fool?)
All things are full of fools. (Stultorum plena sunt omnia.)
ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 112. (1511)
Of fools the number is endless. (Stultorum infinitus est numerus.)
Vulgate: Ecclesiastes, i, 15. (1592) This phrase does not appear in the King James Version;
there the rendering is, "That which is wanting cannot be numbered." Another form of the proverb is "Stulti sunt innumerabiles" (Fools are not to be numbered). It has been credited to Erasmus.
If all fools wore white Caps, we should seem a flock of geese.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 515. (1640)
Every one hath a fool in his sleeve.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 880.
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 94. (1678) FULLER,
Gnomologia. No. 1424. (1732) The French say, "Chacun a un fou dans sa manche," the Italians, "Ciascuno ha un matto nella man-ica."
The world is full of fools and asses.
UNKNOWN, Discovery of Divers Sorts of Asses,
sig. A4. (1642)
All men are fools, and spite of all their pother,
They differ very little, each from any other.

(Tous les hommes sont fous, et malgré tous leurs soins,
Ne diffèrent entr' eux que du plus ou du moins.)
NICOLAS BOILEAU, Epigram. (c. 1674)
Now I see the old saying is true, Every man is a fool when he is out of his own way.
ANDREW YARRANTON, *England's Improvement
by Sea and Land*, p. 105. (1677) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 84 (1678) condenses this to,
"Every man in his way," and RICHARDSON,
Sir Charles Grandison, iii, 72 (1753), refers to it, "You need not speak out—every one in their way."
Fools are all the World over; as he said that shod
the Goose.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1567. (1732)
SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p.
141. (1880)
Fools, since Adam's time, have been in the majority. (Les sots, depuis Adam, sont en majorité.)
CASIMIR DELAVIGNE, Épître à l'Académie Française: L'Étude Fait-elle le Bonheur? (1817)
The world is as full of fools as a tree is full of leaves.
SHAW, John Bull's Other Island. Act i. (1904)

<sup>4</sup>
A fool is fulsome.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 10. (1659)
RAY, Proverbs, p. 10. (1670)
Prating like a fool is fulsome.
UNKNOWN. Roxburghe Ballads, viii, 60, 4. (1686)

<sup>5</sup>
Fools refuse favours.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 22. (1659)
RAY, Proverbs, p. 268. (1678)
All cry, fie on the fool.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 30.

<sup>6</sup>
Fools should not see half done work.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 108. (1721)
Bairns and fools . . . according to our old canny proverb, should never see half-done work.
WALTER SCOTT, in LOCKHART, Life, xliii, 386.
(1818)
Show not fools nor bairns unfinished work.
CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth.
Ch. 55. (1860)
To the lay eye improvement is yet barely perceptible. "Fools and bairns," however, they tell us, "should never see half-done work."
A. AND J. LANG, Highways and Byways in the Border. Ch. 9. (1913)

<sup>7</sup>
When a fool finds a horseshoe, he thinks ay
the like to do.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 348. (1721)
"Spoken when they, who have had some fortune, think always to be successful."
When the Fool finds a Horse-Shoe,
He thinks always so to do.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6415. (1732)

<sup>8</sup>
A fool there was and he made his prayer
(Even as you and I!)
To a rag and a bone and a hank of hair
(We called her the woman who did not care)

But the fool he called her his lady fair—
(Even as you and I!)

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Vampire. St. 1. Written to accompany the description of Burne-Jones's picture, "The Vampire," in the catalogue of the 1897 summer exhibition of the New Gallery, London.

<sup>1</sup> A fool is one whom simpletons believe to be a man of merit. (Un fat est celui que les sots croient un homme de mérite.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Pt. xii. (1688)

<sup>2</sup> Fools have not brains enough to be good. (Un sot n'a pas assez d'étoffe pour être bon.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 387. (1665)

<sup>3</sup> Nothing is enough for a fool, though all the world is his. (Stulto nil sit satis, omnia cum sint.)

LUCILIUS, Satires. Bk. xix, frag. 591, Loeb. (c. 123 B. C.) A shorter form is "The fool is never satisfied."

He is a foolle that can nat holde hym selfe content whan he is well at ease.

WILLIAM HORMAN, Vulgaria, fo. 67. (1519)

Fools never know when they are well.

JOHN WOLCOT, Works (1795), ii, 528. (1794)

Fools and children never know when they are well.

WALTER SCOTT, Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 21. (1822)

<sup>4</sup> Two foolles in one bed are too many.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 283. (1580)

Twa foolles in ane house is over many.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 96. (c. 1595)

Two Fools in a House are too many by a Couple.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5328. (1732)

<sup>5</sup> Fools and little dogs are ladies' play-fellows.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. T3. (1583)

Fools please women best.

JOHN LYLY, Song of Accius and Silena. (c. 1584)

<sup>6</sup> The fool will laugh though there be naught to laugh at.

MENANDER, Monostikoi. No. 108. (c. 300 B. C.)

As the crackling of thorns under a pot, so is the laughter of a fool.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vii, 6. (c. 250 B. C.)

A foolle in laughture puttethe all his pleasure.

UNKNOWN, Misogonus. Act i, sc. 2. (1577)

A foolle is euer laughing.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works (Grosart), ii, 6. (1616) There is a medieval Latin jingle which says, "Per risum multum Possis cognoscere stultum" (By his much laughing you may know the fool).

A fool will laugh when he is drowning.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 2. (1659)

THE LOUD LAUGH THAT SPOKE THE EMPTY MIND,
see under LAUGHTER.

<sup>7</sup> Fools look upon all mankind as fools.

Midrash: Ecclesiastes Rabbah, 10. (c. 700)

We are fools one to another.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 383. (1640)

<sup>8</sup> You are a fool in three letters, my son. (Vous êtes un sot en trois lettres, mon fils.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Tartuffe. Act i, sc. 1. (1664) See also under THIEF.

<sup>9</sup> A little thing pleaseth a foole.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Curiatius and Horatia, p. 171. (1576) A harking back to OVID: (Artis Amatoriae, i, 159). "Parva leves capiunt animos" (Little things win frivolous minds). See under TRIFLES.

<sup>10</sup> Not to be himself on guard, and to give advice to others, is the part of a fool. (Sibi non cavere, et aliis consilium dare, | stultum est.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 9, l. 1. (c. 25 B. C.)

See also WISDOM: WISE FOR OTHERS.

<sup>11</sup> A multitude of fools makes folly worse. (νικᾷ, σὺν πολλῷ δ' ἀμαθία μείζον κακόν.)

PHILO, De Specialibus Legibus. Bk. iv, sec. 47. (c. A. D. 40) Philo is quoting a fragment from a lost tragedy of Euripides, said to be Antiope, which became proverbial.

Fools multiply folly.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

There is no place in the world that protects a fool from his folly.

JAKE FALSTAFF, Jacoby's Corners, p. 44. (1938)

<sup>12</sup> He is the greatest fool who asks for what he can't have. (Moult est ore fors qui demande | Chose que l'en ne peut avoir.)

HUGUES PIAUCELE, De Sire Hain et de Dame Anieuse, l. 62. (c. 1225) See MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, i, 99.

He is a fool who chides himself for the mistakes of another. (Et cil ne fet mie folie | Qui d'autrui mesfet se chastie.)

MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux: Du Vilain au Buffet, l. 5. (c. 1250) Montaignon cites two other proverbs, of about the same date, one, from De Guillaume au Faucon, l. 393, "Fols est qui chace la folie" (He is a fool who chases folly); the other from De Flabel d'Aloul, l. 882, "Fols est qui fol conseil demande" (He is a fool who asks for foolish advice).

Sot is that is other mannes freond more than his owe.

UNKNOWN, Old English Miscellanies, p. 59. (c. 1270) He is a fool that is another man's friend more than his own. "To deal fool's dole" (RAY, Proverbs, p. 171), is to deal all to others and leave nothing for oneself.

Fole es that with foles delys.

UNKNOWN, Parlement of Three Ages, l. 264. (c. 1350) He is a fool that deals with fools.

I have herd seyde, eek tymes twyes twelve,
"He is a fool that wol for-yete hymselfe."

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. v, l. 98. (c. 1374) That is, who doesn't think about himself first.

I am not mad; I would to heaven I were!
For then, 'tis like I should forget myself.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, iii, 4, 48. (1596)

Hee is a right foole that forgets himselfe.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Fol. (1611)

He is a fool that makes a wedge of his fist.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Poing. (1611)

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640) TOR-

RIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 221. (1666) The French say, "C'est folie de faire un maillet de son poing" (It is folly to make a mallet of one's fist).

He is a fool that thinks not that another thinks.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 289.

(1640) From the Spanish, "Necio es quien piensa que otros no piensan" (He is a fool that thinks that others think not). There is an older Latin proverb, "Stultus nisi quod ipse facit nil rectum putat" (The fool thinks nothing is done right unless he has done it himself).

He's a fool that marries his wife at Yule,

For when the corn's to sheer, the bairn's to bear.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 167. (1721)

"If a woman be got with child in Christmas, it is like that she may lye in harvest, the throngest time of the year."

He is a fool that is not melancholy once a day.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 346. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2434. (1732)

He's a Fool that is wiser abroad than at Home.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2435. (1732)

I'm the perfect fall guy.

ELIZABETH DALY, Murders in Volume Two, p. 269. (1941)

<sup>1</sup>
You are a bigger fool than you look. (Praeter speciem stultus es.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 965. (c. 220 B.C.)

I am not such a fool as I look.

MRS. OLIPHANT, The Second Son. Ch. 9. (1888)

SHAW, Heartbreak House. Act ii. (1913)

You're not half such a fool as you look.

H. A. VACHELL, The Hill, p. 70. (1905)

<sup>2</sup>
The treasure of a fool is always in his tongue; he makes his profits by abusing his betters. (Istic est thesaurus stultis in lingua situs, | ut quaestui habeant male loqui melioribus.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 625. (c. 194 B.C.) Quoted by BEN JONSON, Explorata: Acutius Cernantur, who credits the saying to Apuleius.

<sup>3</sup>
You think me cruel? take it for a rule,
No creature smarts so little as a fool.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 83. (1733)

<sup>4</sup>
Folly rushes in through the door, for fools are always bold. (La necedad siempre entra de rondon, que todos los necios son audaces.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 78. (1647)

No place so sacred from such fops is barr'd,
Nor is Paul's church more safe than Paul's church-yard:

Nay, fly to altars; there they'll talk you dead;
For fools rush in where angels fear to tread.

POPE, An Essay on Criticism. Pt. iii, l.63. (1709)

A fool always rushes to the fore.

R. C. TRENCH, Proverbs, iii, 59. (1853)

Fools rush in where angels fear to wed.

UNKNOWN, Poor Richard Jr's Almanack. (1906)

A kind of mixture of fools and angels—they rush in and fear to tread at the same time.

O. HENRY, The Moment of Victory. (1909)

You're no angel and I sometimes lost my head,
But fools step in where angels fear to tread.

NGATO MARSH, Death in Ecstasy, p. 247. (1941)

Quoted as the theme song from Fools Step In.

The folly of the officious is proverbial: don't rush in where angels fear to tread. Let well enough alone. Let sleeping dogs lie. Do not monkey with the buzz-saw. Do not disturb!

HELEN MCCLOY, Do Not Disturb, p. 19. (1943)

<sup>5</sup>
A rod is for the back of him that is void of understanding. (Et virga in dorso eius qui indiget corde.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, x, 13. (c. 350 B.C.)

Judgments are prepared for scorners, and stripes for the back of fools. (Parata sunt derisoribus iudicia: et mallei percutientes stultorum corporibus.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xix, 29. (c. 400 B.C.)

A whip for the horse, a bridle for the ass, and a rod for the fool's back. (Flagellum equo, et camus asino, et virga in dorso imprudentium.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvi, 3. Many are the varieties of punishment promised fools, based upon these passages. For example, "One should de-louse fools with clubs" (Narren soll man mit Kolben lausen.)

<sup>6</sup>
The lips of the righteous feed many: but fools die for want of wisdom. (Labia iusti erudiunt plurimos: qui autem indocti sunt, in cordis egestate moriuntur.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, x, 21. (c. 350 B.C.)

<sup>7</sup>
Let a bear robbed of her whelps meet a man, rather than a fool in his folly. (Expedit magis ursae occurrere raptis foetibus, quam fatuo confidenti in stultitia sua.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvii, 12. (c. 350 B.C.)

